

HAKLVTVS POSTHVMVS OR PVRCHAS HIS PILGRIMES.
Contayning a His tory of the World, in Sea voyages, & lande-Trauells, by Englishmen & others.
Wherein Gods Wonders in Nature & Providence, The Actes, Arts, Varieties, & Vanities of Men, wth a world of the Worlds Rarities, are by a world of Eynwitnesse-Authors, Related to the World.
Some left written by M. Hakluyt at his death More since added. His also perused, & perfected. All examined, abreviated, Illustrated wth Notes. Enlarged wth Discourses. Adorned wth pictures, and Expressed in Mapps. In fower Bookes.
By SAMVEL PVRCHAS B.D.

5

PVRCHAS

HIS

PILGRIMES.

IN FIVE BOOKES.

The first, Contayning the Voyages and Peregrinations made by ancient Kings, Patriarkes, Apostles, Philosophers, and others, to and thorow the remoter parts of the knowne World:

Enquiries also of Languages and Religions, especially of the moderne diuersified Professions of CHRISTIANITIE.

The second, A Description of all the Circum-Nauigations
of the GLOBE.

The third, Nauigations and Voyages of English-men, alongst the Coasts of Africa, to the Cape of Good Hope, and from thence to the Red Sea,
the Abassine, Arabian, Persian, Indian, Shoares, Continents, and Ilands.

The fourth, English Voyages beyond the East Indies, to the Ilands of Japan, China, Cauchinchina, the Philippine with others, and the Indian Nauigations further prosecuted: Their iust Commerce, nobly vindicated against Turkish Treacherie; victoriously defended against Portugall Hostilitie; gloriously aduanced against Moorish and Ethniike Perfidie;
hopefully recouering from Dutch Malignitie; iustly maintayned against ignorant and malicious Calumnie.

The fifth, Nauigations, Voyages, Traffiques, Discoueries, of the English Nation in the Easterne parts of the World: continuing the English-Indian occurrents, and contayning the English Affaires with the Great Samorine, in the Persian and Arabian Gulfes, and in other places of the Continent, and Ilands of and beyond the Indies: the Portugall Attempts, and Dutch Disasters, diuers Sea-fights with both; and many other remarkable RELATIONS.

---

The First Part.

---

Unus Deus, Una Veritas.

---

LONDON

Printed by William Stansby for Henrie Fetherstone, and are to be sold at his shop in Pauls Church-yard at the signe of the Rose.

1625.

2A1091A

PILGRIMS

... ..
... ..
... ..
... ..

... ..

... ..

... ..

... ..

... ..

... ..

... ..

... ..

... ..

... ..

TO THE MOST HIGH AND EX CELLENT
PRINCE, CHARLES,
PRINCE OF WALES.

Most Excellent Prince,

*As a poore Pilgrime salute Your High-nesse in the words of a better SAMUEL 1. Sam. 9. 26. and SEER, On whom is the desire of all Israel: is it not on Thee and all thy Fathers House? In this House we admire the innumerable Royall Ancestrie, wee triumph in His Maiesties present light, wee praise God and pray for the two hopesfull Columnes, that they may be Pillars of Stabilitie and Strength in the 1. Kin. 7. 21.
Lords House, firmer then SALOMONS IACHIN and Apoc. 3. 12.
BOAZ.*

*SIR, hauing out of a Chaos of confused intelligences framed this Historicall World, by a New way of Eye-evidence;
Your Princely pietie, innate clemency, and the Time it selfe (festiuall both in the ordinarie season and extraordinarie preparation) emboldned my obtrusion on Your Highnesse. The Magnificence of Your Princely Court hath entertayned Men of*

---

THE EPISTLE DEDICATORIE.

---

many Nations, yea bath admitted (in Parkes and Places fitting) Beasts, Fowles, Plants of remoter Regions: and now much more, in a World of acclamations to Your ioyfull designes, a world of Pilgrimes seemed sutable; each of which presents one or other Countrey; and all, the rarities and varieties of all. Here also Your Highnesse may refresh Your wearinesse from State-affaires (if any of these Lines may at any time be ambitious of such lustre) in seeing at leisure and pleasure Your English Inheritance dispersed thorow the World, whereof these Twentie Bookes are the Euidence and Records: the English Martialist euery where following armes, whiles his Countrey is blessed at home with BEATI PACIFICI; the Merchant coasting more Shoares and Flands for commerce, then his Progenitors haue heard off, or himselfe can number; the Mariner making other Seas a Ferry, and the widest Ocean a Strait, to his discovering attempts; wherein wee ioy to see Your Highnesse to succeed Your Heroike Brother, in making the furthest Indies by a New Passage neerer to Great Britaine. Englands out of England are here presented, yea Royall Scotland, Ireland, and Princely Wales, multiplying new Scepters to His Maiestie and His Heires in a New World. In all, the glorie of His Maiesties happy Raigne, and thereby of the English Name and Nation, by a poore Zelote of both, is truly and amply related, beyond the coniectures of the passed Ages, to the admiration of the present, and amusing (if not amazing) of the future. In which so long a Worke humbly craveth pardon for other errors, for this presumption.

Your Highnesse

most humbly

deuoted

SAMVEL PURCHAS.

To the Reader.

WHERE is said to be the Science of things Divine and humane. Divine things are either naturall or supernaturall: these such as the naturall machines not, nor can know, because they are spirakally (with a spirituall Eye) discerned; called inspiration to salvation, the proper subiect of Theologie; and not the peculiar argument of this Worke; which notwithstanding being the labour of a professed Divine, doth not abhorre from the same; but occasionally every where by Annotations, and in some parts professedly by speciall Discourses, insinuateth both the Historie and Mystery of Godlinesse, the right vse of History, and all other Learning. Naturall things are the more proper Obiect, namely the ordinary Workes of God in the Creatures, preserving and, disposing by Providence that which his Goodnesse and Power had created, and dispersed in the diuers parts of the World, as so many members of this great Bodie. Such is the History of Men in their diuersified hewes and colours, quantities and proportions; of Beasts, Fishes, Bowles, Trees, Shrubs, Herbs, Minerals, Seas, Lands, Meteors, Heauens, Starres, with their naturall affections: in which many both of the Antient and Moderne haue done worthily; but if heere-nesse of the Obiect deceiue me not, this surmounteth them all in two Priuiledges, the veritie and varietie, especially of things in this kind remotest and rarest.

It is true, that as euery member of the bodie hath somewhat eminent, whereby it is seruiceable to the whole; so euery Region excelleth all others in some peculiar Raritie, which may be termed extraordinary respectiue, though otherwise most common and ordinary in its owne place. So Our England in the naturall temper, accidentall want of Wolues, artificiall Rings of Bels, Sheepe not at all or seldome drinking, Lands and Waters turning Wood in some parts to Stone, Wonders of the Pike and other parts, doth not degenerate from nature, but hath a peculiar nature, almost miraculous to other Countries, as the naturall Wonders of their Regions are to vs: so also Ireland want of venome in Creatures, fulnesse of it, and barbarousnesse in many of her wilder Natiues, after so long trayning in Ciuitie, and so ancient Renowme for Sanctitie: and so each part is to other part in some or other part, and particular respect admirable.

What a World of Trauellers haue by their owne eyes obserued in this kinde, is here (for the most part in their owne words transcribed or translated) deliuered, not by one professing Methodically to deliuer the Historie of Nature according to rules of Art, nor Philosophically to discusse and dispute; but as in way of Discourse, by each Traueller relating what in that kind he hath seene. And as Dauid prepared materials for Salomons Temple; or (if that be too arrogant) as Alex. furnished Aristotle with Huntsmen and Obseruers of Creatures, to acquaint him with their diuersified kinds and natures; or (if that also seeme too ambitious) as Sense by Induction of particulars yeeldeth the premisses to Reasons Syllogisticall arguing; or if we shall be yet more homely, as Pioners are employed by Enginers, and Labourers serue Masons, and Bricklayers, and these the best Surueyers and Architects: so here Purshas and

his

The profit to be reaped by this Worke.
1. Cor. 2. 14.
2. Tim. 3. 15.

See of the Wonders of England Harrison's Description of Brit. l. 2. c. 18. before Hol. Chron.

T O T H E R E A D E R.

his Pilgrimes minister indiuiduall and sensible materials (as it were with Stones, Bricks and Mortar) to those vniuersall Speculators for their Theoricall structures. And well may the Author be ranked with such Labourers (howsoever here a Master-builder also) for that he hath bene forced as much to the Hod, Barrow and Trowel, as to contemplatiue suruaying: neither in so many Labyrinthian Perambulations thorow, and Circumnaugations about the World in this and his other Workes, was euer enabled to maintaine a Vicarian or Subordinate Scribe, but his own hands to worke, as well as his head to contriue these voluminous Buildings, except in some few Transcriptions or Translations, the most also of them by his sonne S. P. that one and the same name might both father and further the whole.

As for Master Hakluyts many yeeres Collections, and what stocke I receiued from him in written Papers, in the Table of Authours you shall find: whom I will thus farre honour, that though it be but Materials, and that many Bookes haue not one Chapter in that kind) yet that stocke encouraged me to vse my endeouours in and for the rest. I was therein a Labourer also, both to get them (not without hard conditions) and to forme and frame those Materials to their due place and order in this Aedifice, the whole Artifice (such as it is) being mine owne. Traduce mee not, nor let any impute to boasting what I haue said of my sole working (I know there is a ua soli) but I am compelled to doe it to preuent an Obiection of my promised Europaean supply to my Pilgrimage. I confesse, I was too forward to promise, because others haue bene so backward to assist: which I haue in former Editions signified, but to blind Eyes and deafe Eares. Whose Librarie, whose Purse hath bene opened to me, let his mouth be opened against me also: Europe otherwise could not, nor now vpon any price (it is too late) can be Purchased. I would not be misconstrued to vngratitude. Many haue applauded my endeouours, but probitas laudatur & alget. If I had not liued in great part vpon Exhibition of charitable friends, and on extraordinary labours of Lecturing (as the terme is) the Pilgrime had bene a more agreeing name to me, then Purchas. Yet let my name be for euer forgotten, if I remember not his, which the Aduersaries haue (seeking to steale him from vs after his death) by their calumnie made more memorable; I meane, my decessed Patron Doctor King, late Lord Bishop of London, to whose bountie vnder God, I willingly ascribe my life, deliuered from a sickly Habitation, and consequently (as also by opportunities of a London Benefice) whatsoeuer additions in my later Editions of my Pilgrimage; these present Pilgrimes also with their peregrinations. Yet such is ordinarily the greatnesse of the Ephra, and smalnesse of the Shekel, in London Cures (especially within the wals) that wee are inabled thereby to disablings for workes of that kinde, whiles we must preach in season and out of season, (I say not out of reason) that wee may liue.

One wing that Reuerend and bountifull hand gaue in hope that some blessed hand would adde the other, to fit me for an Europaean flight, wherein not finding his hopes seconded, he promised to right me himselfe (these were his syllables) but death righted him, and I am forced to wrong the World. I speake not to accuse any, for of whom, to whom can I complaine, but to plaine and excuse my selfe, and withall to dedicate my thankfulnesse with the continuance of this Monument to that worthy Name.

Acts 17.21.

But to returne to our Philosopher; I also haue bene an Athenian with these Athenians, one delighting to tell, the others to beare some new thing. I haue therefore either wholly omitted or passed dry foot things neere and common; Far fetched and deare bought are the Lettice sutable to our lips. Common and ordinarie plants I remit to the Herbarists. Europaean Rarities (except in the remoter Regions both from our habitation and knowledge, as Island, Norway, Sueden, Constantinople, the Mediterranean Ilands, &c.) to the Historians peculiar to each Countrey therein. My Genius delights rather in by-ways then high-ways, and hath therein by Tracts and Tractates of Trauellers made Causes and High-ways, euery where disposing these Pilgrime-Guides, that men without feare may trauell to and ouer the most vncouth Countries of the World: and there be shewed with others Eyes, the Rarities of Nature, and of such things also as are not against Nature, but either about it, as Miracles,

TO THE READER.

cles, or beside the ordinarie course of it, in the extraordinary Wonders, which Gods Prouidence hath therein effected according to his good and iust pleasure. And thus much for the workes of God.

Things humane, are such as Men are, or haue, or haue done or suffered in the World. Here therefore the various Nations, Persons, Shapes, Colours, Habits, Rites, Religions, Complexions, Conditions, Politike and Oeconomike Customes, Languages, Letters, Arts, Merchandises, Wares, and other remarkable Varieties of Men and humane Affaires are by Eye-witnesses related more amply and certainly then any Collector euer hath done, or perhaps without these helps could doe. And thus we haue shewed the scope of the Author, and profitable vse of the Worke: which could not but be voluminous; hauing a World for the subiect, and a World of Witnesses for the Euidence: and yet (except where the Author or Worke it selfe permitted not) these vast Volumes are contracted, and Epitomised, that the nicer Reader might not be cloyed. Here also both Elephants may swimme in deepe voluminous Seas, and such as want either lust or leisure, may single out, as in a Library of Bookes, what Author or Voyage shall best fit to his profit or pleasure. I might adde that such a Worke may seeme necessarie to these times, wherein not many Scholers are so studious of Geographic, and of Naturall and Vniuersall knowledge in the diuersified varieties which the various Seas and Lands in the World produce, seeming as exceptions to Generall Rules, which Aristotle the best Scholer in Natures Schoole and her principall Secretarie could not so punctually and indiuidually see in the Ocean, the Remoter Lands and New Worlds, none of which he euer saw, nor till this last Age were knowne. And for the most part, those which are studious know not either to get, or to read the Authors of this kinde, of which so few speake Latine.

As for Gentlemen, Trauell is accounted an excellent Ornament to them; and therefore many of them comming to their Lands sooner then to their Wits, aduventure themselues to see the Fashions of other Countries, where their soules and bodies find temptations to a twofold Whoredom, whence they see the World as Adam had knowledge of good and euill, with the losse or lessening of their estate in this English (and perhaps also in the heavenly Paradise) & bring home a few smattering termes, flattering garbes, Apish crings, foppish fancies, foolish guises and disguises, the vanities of Neighbour Nations (I name not Naples) without furthering of their knowledge of God, the World, or themselues. I speake not against Trauell, so vsefull to vsefull men, I honour the industrious of the liberall and ingenuous in arts, bloud, education: and to preuent exorbitancies of the other, which cannot trauell farre, or are in danger to trauell from God and themselues, at no great charge I offer a World of Trauellers to their domestike entertainment, easie to be spared from their Smoke, Cup, or Butter-flie vanities and superfluities, and fit mutually to entertaine them in a better Schoole to better purposes. And for the price, as I cannot set it, so I must acknowledge the aduenturous courage of the Stationer Master Henry Fetherstone (like Hercules helping Atlas) so long to beare this my heauy World at such expenses.

NOW for the METHOD, I confesse, I could not be therein exact: first because I had such a confused Chaos of printed and written Bookes, which could not easily be ordered: partly because this Method by way of Voyages often repeates the same Countries and (though I haue often pruned repetitions) yet, sometimes admitted for more full testimonie) the same things, by diuers of our Authors trauelling the same parts, obserued, in which my Method brings in ordinarily the Authours whole Voyage there, where that part or Countrey, in which and for which we entertaine him, principally occasioneth his memorie; and partly because in this long space of imprinting (from August 1621.) many things haue comne to my hand by diligent enquiry, which were not enrolled, nor in possession to be mustered in their due file and ranke; yea, diuers things haue beene done since our other passages of like nature were printed off: And thus diuers Dutch quarrels are related, which yet since the Impression of that part haue beene composed. Yet are we not altogether without Order.

The Method and order of this Worke.

First,

TO THE READER.

The first Part.

First, we haue diuided the World in our Method into the Old and New, allotting to each his owne Tome, the first Ten Books to the former, the later to the other. But the Worke growing more voluminous then was expected, we are forced to cut each of them asunder in the midst, the figures in the top and Alphabets in the bottome, and some marginall references and annotations intimating but two Tomes, which only the quantitie hath made Foure. Againe in the Elder World, that is, Asia, Africa, and Europe, we obserue Antiquities and Generalities in the First Booke, one of the last printed, though first placed: vniuersall Circumnauigations (all knowne in that kind) in the Second; which though they containe many things of America and the South Continent, yet being from and for Europe, and spending most of their time on the Asian and African Coasts, are thither referred: in the Third, Fourth, and Fifth, are Indian Voyages and Affaires of the English, with Portugall and Dutch intercourse; in which is obserued a tolerable order of time from Queene Elizabeths Times to the present.

The Second Part.

In the Second Part you haue first Africa in Two Bookes (the East Indie ships but touched on the Coasts) the Sixth Booke handling the Northerne parts, whatsoever of Africa is not termed Ethiopia, and the Seuenth the Ethiopian part. The Eighth Booke enters into the Continent of Asia; in the first Chapters relating the History of the Franks (as all Asia since calls the Western Christians) in the Holy Land Wars; in the later, some Pilgrimages thither and the parts adioyning, with diuers Turkish Obseruations. The Ninth proceedeth thorow the mayne Land of Asia into Persia, Arabia, India, taking large view of those and other Asian Regions, returning by Africa with later and larger intelligence of the Easterne, Western and Northerne shores thereof; New view of the Turkish Dominion and Seraglio, as also of the Maldine Ilands: which and the whole Tenth Booke came later to hand, and therefore is rather a Supply to all, then any well ordered part of the Worke, being therefore printed after the rest.

Now for the New World, we begin it at China, which the Ancients knew not, and take all the East and North parts of Asia from the Caspian Sea, the Arctoan Regions, all America and Terra Australis, comprehending all in that New Title. The First of those Bookes beginning our Third Part, deliuereth especially the Authors of Tartaria in the succession of about three hundred yeeres, wherein the Second succeedeth, adding also Iapan, Corea and China, with the first Discoueries of the Northerne and Caspian Seas by the English. This Arctoan Region containning Russia, Noua Zembla, the Samoyeds, Siberia, Island, Frisland, Norway, with the Neighbour Regions, Cherry Island, Greenland, Groenland, &c. the Third Booke relateth; continued in the Fourth with further Discoueries intended for a North or North-west Passage. The Fifth Booke giueth generall Relations of America, in her Mexican or Northerly, and Peruan or Southerly Moyties (with what we could find of the South Continent) their Antiquities and state before, and since the Spanish Conquest. The Sixth (which begins the Fourth Part) containeth English Voyages to America, the Great Bay especially and the Southerne Moytie to the Magellan Straits; which in the Seuenth Booke are more amplified, and further enlarged with the Creatures, and Countries within Land, the Peruan Antiquities related by one of the Inca Linage, the Spanish Conquest, and other occurrents of the Peruan America, and Terra Australis. The Eighth Booke comes homeward thorow the Mexican America and Florida vnto Canada, relating the French Acts and English beginnings in those parts, touching in the way homeward at the Azores. Virginia is the Argument of the Ninth Booke, in the succession and successe thereof from the Plantation 1606. to 1624. whereto Summers Islands are added. The English Plantations in New England and New-foundland follow in the Tenth, with diuers Fleets set forth by Queene Elizabeth of famous memory, with whose blessing continued and confirmed by His Maiestie, wee commit you to God, and giue you leaue to rest at home in peace, under the shadow of your owne Vine and Fig-tree, which God for his Christs sake continue and confirme to vs and our posteritie. Amen.

You haue here a long Preface to a long Work, and yet you haue a longer touching the

---

TO THE READER.

---

the vtilitie thereof in the first Paragraphs of Salomons Ophir. It had not beene possible for me in London distractions to haue accomplished so great a Designe, but for the opportunities of His Maiesties Colledge at Chelsie, where these foure last Summers I haue retired my selfe (without Pulpit Non-residence) to this Worke: which as it one way furthered, so another way it occasioned many Errata, by my absence from the Presse, as in the Bodie of the Worke, so especially in the Titles ouer each page; halfe of which I thinke, are mine owne, the other such as pleased the Corrector, needing correction enough, and sometimes not giuing sufficient direction to the Reader; whom I intreat to accept of his Day and Night, Summer and Winter together, pardoning the one for the others sake. A Table had beene necessary, if Time and assistance to a wearie hand had permitted; I adde, if some had not committed contrary to promise. It is time to make an end of Prefacing. The Authors follow; such as haue no letter annexed are Mine; such as haue H. added, I borrowed from Master Hakluyts papers, and such as haue H. and P. pertaine to both, beeing otherwise printed or in my possession written, wherein yet I made vse of some labour of his. Let the name and glory be to any other, so as aboue all and in all it bee to God the Father of our Lord Iesus Christ (who hath enabled my weake bodie beyond hopes; to so great a Worke) and the profit to Thee Reader, whom in the Lord, I bid farewell.

---

A Note touching the Dutch.

THE necessitie of a Historie is, as of a sworne Witnesse, to say the truth, all the truth (in iust discretion) and nothing but the truth. This I haue indeuoured in the whole Worke. But, veritas odium parit. Some perhaps will blame me for relating some Truths, specially the Dutch Zelots, in that I haue related such abuses of some of that Nation in the East Indies and Greenland to the English there, as if I sought like an vnseasonable and vncharitable Tale-bearer to raise discord betwixt Neighbours. I answer that no Nation is in this World so pure, but hath both officious members, and some bad members also as Diseases thereof, which to impute to the whole, were as if a man should kill himselfe for a felon in his Thumbe, or Corne in his Toe: or as if he should therefore find fault with his own body because it hath not only a head, heart and hands, but excrements also, & a fundament, and other parts for euacuation; with a Palace for houses of Office, with a Crie for common Sewers, with the World which hath Devils and Hell in it. I question not, but that the English haue also such, and such wee haue occasionally noted, Fugitiues, Apostataes, Theeues, Murtherers, &c. which yet are not Nationall faults, but personall, except the Nation doth iustifie such vniustice, as Troie, the Rape of Helena, and the Beniamites those Beasts of Gibeah, either by impunitie or defence. Nor needed wee good Lawes, but for bad Subiects. If the Dutch haue such also, in the History of both I must mention both, and yet protest before God (to whom I shall answer it with the burning of bodie and soule, not these Bookes alone, if I bee perfidious) that I am not guiltie to my selfe of hatred to that Nation, yea in these Discourses I haue honoured it with and before others, following them round about the World to that purpose. And for this cause I haue omitted some odious Greenland Relations, haue altered and reprinted some more offensive generall speeches disgorged by the passionate loosers, with Titles on the tops of pages, intended to Offenders, but in such vnwarie termes as might by ill willers be extended to the whole Nation: yea, I had purposed to omit many things printed alreadie, rather leauing a χάος, then causing a Chaos, but that since the sore hath broken out by that terrible Tragedie at Amboyna. I could haue wished that such things had neuer beene told in Gath, nor published in the streets of Askalon, lest any enemy of our State and Religion should reioyce. But seeing the

---

TO THE READER.

---

the necessities of the English East Indian Societie haue forced such a publication, my sparing purpose had beene in vaine to conceale the Shilling where the Pound was made manifest. I might also haue beene accounted partiall against mine owne Nation. This I haue done; I for the most part, doe but publish others Relations, (and Losers perhaps will speake the most) and by Annotations dispersed intimate that these are personall faults of that East Indie Company, or some Commanders there, not of the whole Nation; and if any Marginall Notes with Dutch Epithetes seeme to speake more, yet are they but directions to the Reader to shew what in that page or place is handled without further intent; so with my Prayers for Peace on both sides I commend both to the God of Peace.

A M E N.

---

THE CONTENTS OF THE CHAPTERS AND PARAGRAPHS IN THE FIRST BOOKE OF THE FIRST PART OF PURCHAS HIS PILGRIMS.

CHAP. I.

A Large Treatise of King Salomons Nauie sent from Eziongeber to Ophir: Wherein besides the Typicall Mysteries briefly vnuailed, and many Morall speculations obserued; the Voyage is largely discussed ont of Diuine, Ecclesiasticall and Humane Testimonies: Intended as an historicall Preface to the Histories following. pag. 1.

¶ 1. The Allegoricall and Anagogicall sense or application of Salomons Ophirian Nauigation. pag. 3.

¶ 2. The Tropologicall vse of the Story; and of Discoveries and negotiations by Sea. pag. 4.

¶ 3. The Tropologicall or Morall vse enlarged and amplified; and a view taken of Mans di-uersified Dominion in Microcosmicall, Cosmopoliticall, and that Spirituall or Heauenly right, ouer himselfe and all things, which the Christian hath in and by Christ. pag. 6.

¶ 4. The Christian and Philosopher compared in that challenge to be rich, free, a King; that this hinders not but furthers Politicall subiection: and of the happie combination of wisdom and roy-altie in Salomon, as likewise in our dayes. pag. 10.

¶ 5. Of the propriety which Infidels haue in their lands and goods: of propriety in the Sea, and of Salomons propriety of the Sea and Shoare at Ezion Geber. pag. 14.

¶ 6. The commendations of Nauigation, as an Art worthie the care of the most Worthie; the Necessitie, Commoditie, Dignitie thereof. pag. 17.

¶ 8. Of Ezion Geber, Eloth, and the Red Sea: that of Edom it receiued that name, and communicated it to the Indian Ocean, by the Phœnician Nauigations frequent in those times to India. pag. 21.

¶ 8. Of Ophir, diuers opinions weighed and censured; whether the Compas was knowne to the old World; that the remote parts were lately inhabited, the new World but newly, and a great part thereof not yet. pag. 25.

¶ 9. Ioctans posteritie seated in the East, parts of Asia, amongst them; Ophir in India vltra Gangem, where Chryse was of old; and now is the Kingdome of Pegu, and the Regions adioyning. pag. 31.

¶ 10. Of the Gold, Siluer, Gemmes, Iuorie, Almug trees, Apes and Peacockes, which Salo-mons Fleet brought from Ophir, with diuers other profitable obseruations inserted. pag. 35.

¶ 11. Probable coniectures of the course taken in the Ophirian Voyage, and accounts giuen of the three yeeres time spent there: also of the course taken in like Voyages by the Romans: and the di-uers Ports where to the Spices and riches of India haue in diuers Ages beene brought, and thence dipersed to the seuerall parts of Europe. pag. 39.

¶ 12. Of Tharsis or Tharshih, whether it be the same with Ophir; and both, some indefinite remoter Countreie; whether it be the Sea, or Tartessus, or any place in Spaine. Of the ancient Na-uigations about Africa, and of the Phœnician Antiquities. pag. 44.

CHAP. II.

Mans life a Pilgrimage. The Peregrinations of Christ, and the first Encompassing the habitable or then inhabited World by the holy Apostles and first Planters of the Gospell. pag. 49.

¶ 1. Man by sinne become a Worldly Pilgrime; Christs Pilgrimage in the Flesh to recouer him: Mans Spirituall Pilgrimage in and from the World. ibid.

¶ 2. How Apostles differed from Bishops: their preaching the Gospell to all Nations. pag. 50.

¶ 3. The Peregrination of S. Peter. pag. 51.

¶ 4.

The Contents of the first Booke

¶. 4. Of Saint Andrew, Iohn, the two Iacobi, Philip and Simon Zelotes. pag. 53.

¶. 5. Of S. Thomas, Bartholomew, Matthew, Iude, Matthias: and of counterfeited Writings in the Apostles names. pag. 55.

¶. 6. Of Saint Paul: Of Apostolicall Assistsants: some doubts discussed. pag. 56.

¶. 7. Of America, whether it were then peopled. pag. 58.

¶. 8. The glorie of Apostolicall Conquests: the hopes of enlarging the Church in this last Age, by knowledge of Arts and Languages through the benefit of Printing and Nauigation. pag. 61.

CHAP. III.

Of diuers other principall Voyages, and Peregrinations mentioned in holy Scripture. Of the trauels and dispersions of the Iewes; and of Nationall transmigrations. pag. 66.

CHAP. IIII.

Fabulous Antiquities of the Peregrinations and Navigations of Bacchus, Osiris, Hercules, the Argonauts, Cadmus, the Græcian Nauie to Troy, Menelaus, Vlysses, Æneas, and others. pag. 68.

CHAP. V.

A briefe recitall of the famous expeditions mentioned in ancient Histories, of the Assyrians, Egyptians, Scythians, Ethiopians, Persians, and others. pag. 72.

CHAP. VI.

The trauels of the ancient Philosophers and learned men briefly mentioned. pag. 74.

CHAP. VII.

Phœnician Voyages, and especially that of Hanno, a Carthaginian Captaine. pag. 77.

CHAP. VIII.

Iambulus his Nauigation to Arabia, and Ethiopia, and thence to a strange Island, from whence he sayled to Palimbothra in India. pag. 79.

CHAP. IX.

Great Alexanders Life, Acts, Peregrinations and Conquests briefly related. pag. 81.

CHAP. X.

The trauels of Musæus, Thebæus, and others mentioned by Saint Ambrose; of others also mentioned in the Ecclesiasticall Histories of Eusebius, Ruffinus, Socrates, and Sozomen. pag. 89.

CHAP. XI.

A briefe and generall consideration of Europe. pag. 90.

¶. 1. Of Europe compared with the other parts of the World. ibid.

¶. 2. The names of Europe. pag. 91.

¶. 3. The Quantitie and Bounds. pag. 92.

¶. 4. The Qualitie and Excellencies. ibid.

¶. 5. Of the Languages of Europe. pag. 93.

CHAP. XII.

Enquiries of Languages by Edw. Brerewood, lately professor of Astronomie in Gresham Colledge. pag. 95.

CHAP. XIII.

Master Brerewoods Enquiries of the Religions professed in the World: Of Christians, Mahumetans, Iewes, and Idolaters; with other Philosophicall speculations, and diuers Annotations added. pag. 112.

CHAP. XIII.

Relations of diuers Travellers, touching the diuersities of Christian Rites and Tenents in diuers parts of the World. pag. 147.

¶. 1. Tecla Maria an Abassine, his answeres to questions touching the Religion of the Abassines and Cophiti. ibid.

¶. 2. Relations of the Iacobites and Armenians, written by Leonard Bishop of Sidon, Pope Gregorie the 13. his Nuncio to the Easterne parts. pag. 150.

¶. 3. Of Simon Sulaka a Papall Easterne Patriarke amongst the Chaldæans: and of diuers others thither sent. Of Abdesu, Aatalla, Donha his successors. pag. 151.

¶. 4. Of the Cophiti, their Synode at Cairo, the Iesuites being the Popes Agents, and of Stephen Colinzas message to the Georgians, and two Iesuites sent to the Maronites. ibid.

Errores ex libris Maronitarum excerpti 1580 sunt autem huiusmodi. pag. 152.

¶. 5. Of the condition of life in which the Greeks now liue, and of their Rites of Fasts, Feasts, and other obseruations, gathered out of the booke of Christopheros Angelos, a Greekish Monke and Priest. pag. 154.

CHAP. XV.

Collections out of Peter Stroza, Secretarie to Pope Paul the Fifth, his Treatise of the Opinions of the Chaldæans, touching the Patriarke of Babylon, and the Nestorians in Asia. pag. 163.

From the Patriarchall Chamber, Prayers and Blessings be giuen to you. pag. 164.

CHAP. XVI.

A briefe Suruey of the Ecclesiasticall Politie ancient and moderne, or of the seuerall Patriarchs, Archbishops and Bishops Sees thorow the Christian world: also of the Iesuites Colledges and numbers, and of other Monasticall Orders. pag. 166.

CHAP. XVII.

A Discourse of the diuersitie of Letters vsed by diuers Nations of the world: the Antiquitie, manifold vse and varietie thereof: with exemplarie descriptions of very many strange Alphabets. pag.

The

The Contents of the Chapters and Paragraphs in the second Booke of the First part of Purchas his PILGRIMS.

CHAP. I.

OF the improvement of Navigation in later Times, and the meanes whereby the world in her old Age hath been more then ever discovered. pag. 1.

¶ 1. Of Magneticall and Astronomicall Instruments, first applyed to Navigation. ibid.

¶ 2. Of Henrie, third sonne to Iohn the first King of Portugall by an English woman, the Prince of later Discoveries: and of the helps both against the Moores, and in their Discoveries which the Portugals haue receiued of our Nation. pag. 4.

¶ 3. Of King Iohn the second his Discoveries, and aduancement of the Art of Navigation. pag. 7.

¶ 4. Of the coniectures touching a new World by Christopher Colon or Columbus, and his manifold difficulties therein. pag. 8.

¶ 5. Columbus his first Voyage, and improvement therein of the Mariners Art. pag. 10.

¶ 6. The Popes Bull made to Castile, touching the New World. pag. 13.

Animaduersion on the said Bull of Pope Alexander. pag. 18.

¶ 7. Of the Portugals discontent and compromise with the Spaniard, and their first Discoveries of the East Indies. pag. 26.

¶ 8. Of Gamas Acts at Calicut, and his returne. pag. 28.

¶ 9. The second Fleet sent to the East Indies: Their discoverie of Brasil, and other Acts. pag. 30.

¶ 10. Albuquerque's exploits, and the first knowledge of the Molucca's. pag. 32.

CHAP. II.

Of Fernandus Magalians: The occasion of his Voyage, and the particulars of the same, with the compassing of the World by the ship called San Victoria; gathered out of Antonio Pigafetta, an Italian of Vicenza, who was one in the said Circum-Navigation, as also from diuers other Authors. pag. 33.

CHAP. III.

The second Circum-Navigation of the Earth: Or the renowned voyage of Sir Francis Drake, the first Generall which ever sayled about the whole Globe, begun in the yeere of our Lord 1577. heretofore published by Master R. Hackluyt, and now reviewed and corrected. pag. 46.

CHAP. IIII.

The third Circum-Navigation of the Globe: Or the admirable and prosperous voyage of Master Thomas Candish of Trimley in the Countie of Suffolke Esquire, into the South Sea, and from thence round about the circumference of the whole Earth, begun in the yeere of our Lord 1586. and finished 1588. Written by Master Francis Pretty lately of Ey in Suffolke, a Gentleman employed in the same action, published by Master Hakluyt, and now corrected and abbreviated. pag. 57.

A Letter of Master Thomas Candish to the Right Honorable the Lord Hunsdon, Lord Chamberlaine, one of her Maiesties most Honorable Priuie Counsell, touching the successe of his Voyage about the World. pag. 70.

CHAP. V.

The Voyage of Oliuet Noort round about the Globe, being the fourth Circum-Navigation of the same, extracted out of the Latine Diarie. pag. 71.

Of Sebald de Wert his voyage to the South Sea, and miserie in the Streights nine Moneths, wherein William Adams Englishman was chiefe Pilot. pag. 78.

CHAP. VI.

The voyage of George Spilbergen, Generall of a Dutch Fleet of sixe ships, which passed by the Magellane Streights, and South Sea, unto the East Indies, and thence (hauing encompassed the whole Circumference of the Earth) home: gathered out of the Latine Iournall, being the fift Circum-Navigation. pag. 80.

A discourse of the present state of the Molucco's, annexed to the former Iournall, extracted out of Apollonius Schot of Middleborough. p. 86.

A briefe description of the Forts, Souldiers, and Militarie provision, as also of their Trade and Shipping in the East Indies, under the seruice of the Generall States of the vniued Prouinces, and his Excellencie, as it was in Iuly, 1616. extracted out of the Author of the Iournall. pag. 87.

CHAP. VII.

The sixth Circum-Navigation, by William Cornelison Schouten of Horne: Who Southwards from the Streights of Magellan in Terra Del-fuogo, found and discovered a new passage through the great South Sea, and that way sayled round about the World: Describing what Ilands, Countries, People, and strange aduentures he found in his said passage. pag. 88.

The Contents of the third Booke

The Contents of the Chapters and Paragraphs in the third Booke of the First part of Purchas his PILGRIMS

CHAP. I.

Of the first English Voyages to the East Indies, before the establishment of the East Indian Company. pag. 109.

¶ 1. Jan. Of Sigheimus, Mandeuile, Steuens, Fitch, and diuers other English men, their Indian Voyages. Ibid.

¶ 2. The Voyage of Master Benjamin Wood into the East Indies, and the miserable disasters success thereof. Ibid. pag. 110.

¶ 3. The Trauailes of Iohn Mildenhall into the Indies, and in the Countries of Persia, and of the Great Mogor or Mogul (where he is reported afterwards to haue died of payson) written by himselfe in two Letters following. H. pag. 114.

The second Letter of Iohn Mildenhall to Master Richard Staper, written from Casbin in Persia, the third day of October, 1606. H. Ibid.

¶ 4. The Voyage of Captaine Iohn Davis, to the Easterne India, Pilot in a Dutch ship; written by himselfe. H. pag. 116.

¶ 5. William Adams his Voyage by the Magellan Streights to Iapon, written in two Letters by himselfe, as followeth. H. pag. 125.

A Letter of William Adams to his wife from Iapon. Ibid. pag. 129.

¶ 6. The third Voyage of Iohn Davis with Sir Edward Michelborne Knight, into the East Indies, in the Tigre, a ship of two hundred and fortie Tunnes, with a Pinnasse called the Tigres whelpe; which though in time it be later then the first of the East Indian Societie, yet because it was not set forth by them, here placed. H. pag. 132.

CHAP. II.

A priuiledge for fiftene yeeres granted by her Maiestie to certaine Adventurers, for the discouerie of the Trade for the East Indies, the one and thirtieth of December, 1600. H. pag. 139.

CHAP. III.

The first Voyage made to East India by Master James Lancaster, now Knight, for the Merchants of London, Anno 1600. With foure tall ships, (to wit) the Dragon, the Hector, the Ascension and Susan, & the Guest a Victualler. H. p. 147.

¶ 1. The preparation to this Voyage, and what befell: hem in the way till they departed from Saldania. Ibid.

¶ 2. Their departure from Saldania, and proceeding in their voyage to Achen in Sumatra, with their trading at Saint Maries, Antongill, Nicubar: the strange plant of Sombrero, and other occurrents. Ibid. pag. 150.

¶ 3. Their entertainment and trade at Achen, and Queene Elizabeth her Letter to that King. Ibid. pag. 152.

¶ 4. Portugall wiles discovered, a Prize taken neere Malacca. Ibid. pag. 156.

¶ 5. Their Present to and from the King: his Letters to Queene Elizabeth: Their departure for Priaman and Bantam, and setting a Trade there. Ibid. pag. 159.

¶ 6. Their departure for England, and occurrents in the way. Ibid. pag. 162.

CHAP. IIII.

A Discourse of Iaua, and of the first English Factorie there, with diuers Indian, English, and Dutch occurrents, written by Master Edmund Scot, containng a Historie of things done from the eleuenth of Februarie, 1602. till the sixt of October, 1605. abbreviated. H. P. pag. 164.

¶ 1. The description of Iaua maior, with the manners and fashions of the people, both Iauans and Chynesses, which doe there inhabit. Ibid.

¶ 2. A true and brieue discourse of many dangers by fire, and other perfidious treacheries of the Iauans. Ibid. pag. 167.

¶ 3. Differences betwixt the Hollanders (stiling themselves English) the Iauans, and other things remarkable. Ibid. pag. 171.

¶ 4. Treacherous underminings, with other occurrents. Ibid. pag. 173.

¶ 5. Generall Middletons arriuall, the sicknesse and death of many. Quarrels twixt Ours and the Hollanders, begun by Captaine Severson, a Dutch man, and the King of Bantams circumcision, and pompous triumphs. Ibid. pag. 179.

¶ 6. Further quarrels betwixt the English and Dutch, with other accidents. Ibid. pag. 183.

CHAP. V.

The second Voyage set forth by the Companie into the East Indies, Sir Henrie Middleton being Generall: wherein were employed foure ships; the Red Dragon, Admirall; the Hector, Vice-Admirall; the Ascension with the Susan: written by Thomas Clayborne in a larger Discourse, a brieue whereof is here deliuered. H. pag. 185.

CHAP. VI.

A Iournall of the third Voyage to the East India, set out by the Companie of the Merchants, trading in those parts: in which Voyage were employed three ships, viz. the Dragon, the Hector, and the Consent, and in them the number of three hundred of the first Part.

hundred and ten persons, or thereabouts: written by William Keeling chiefe Commander thereof. H. pag. 188.

Q. 1. Their disasters and putting backe for Sierra Leona, and what happened till they departed from Saldania. ibid.

Q. 2. Their departure from Saldania, and what happened after till the shippes parted company. pag. 190.

Q. 3. Instructions learned at Delisa of the Moores and Gufarates touching the Monsons, and while they rode there. Their comming to Priaman and Bantam. pag. 193.

Q. 4. Their Voyage to Banda, Observations by the way, Actions there. pag. 196.

CHAP. VII.

Captaine William Hawkins his Relations, of the occurrents which happened in the time of his residence in India, in the Countie of the Great Mogoll, and of his departure from thence; written to the Companie. H. P. pag. 206.

Q. 1. His barbarous vsage at Surat by Morebchan: The Portugals and Iesuities treacheries against him. ibid.

Q. 2. His Iourney to the Mogoll at Agra, and entertainment at Court. pag. 209.

Q. 3. The Mogols inconstancy, and Captaine Hawkins departure with Sir Henrie Middleton to the Red Sea: Thence to Bantam, and after for England. pag. 212.

Q. 4. A briefe Discourse of the strength, wealth and gouernment, with some Customes of the Great Mogoll: which I haue both seene, and gathered by his chiefe Officers, and Ouerseers of all his estate. pag. 216.

CHAP. VIII.

The Voyage of Master Dauid Middleton in the Consent, a ship of an hundred and fiftene tunnes, which set forth from Tilburie Hope, on the twelfth of March, 1606. H. pag. 226.

CHAP. IX.

A briefe Narration of the fourth Voyage to the East Indies, with the two good ships, the Ascension being Admirall, and the Vnion Vice-Admirall, under the command of Alexander Sharpey Generall, and Richard Rowles Lieutenant Generall, with the Discoverie of the Red Sea in the Ascension. H. pag. 228.

Q. 1. Relations of the said Voyage, written by Thomas Iones. ibid.

Q. 2. The report of William Nicols a Mariner the Ascension which trauelled from Bramport by land to Masulipatan, written from his mouth at Bantam by Henry Moris, the twelfth of September, 1612. The former and greater part is the same in substance with that of Thomas Iones, and therefore omitted.

pag. 232.

Q. 3. The unhappie Voyage of the Vice-admirall, the Vnion outward bound, till shee arrived at Priaman, reported by a Letter which Master Samuel Bradshaw sent from Priaman, by Humfrey Bidulphe, the eleuenth day of March, 1609. written by the said Henrie Moris at Bantam, the fourteenth of September, 1610. ibid.

Q. 4. The Voyage of Master Ioseph Salbanke through India, Persia, part of Turkie, the Persian Gulfe, and Arabia, 1609. Written unto Sir Thomas Smith. pag. 235.

CHAP. X.

The Voyage of Master Dauid Middleton to Iaua, and Banda, extracted out of a Letter written by himsele to the Companie, this being the fifth Voyage set forth by them. H. pag. 238.

Q. 1. Their affaires at Bantam, Botun, Bengaia. ibid.

Q. 2. Occurrents at Banda; Contesting with the Dutch: Trade at Puloway, and many perils. pag. 240.

Q. 3. His departure for Bantam, escape from the Hollanders, and returne home. pag. 245.

CHAP. XI.

The sixth Voyage, set forth by the East Indian Companie in three ships; the Trades Increase, of one thousand Tunnes, and in her the Generall Sir Henrie Middleton, Admirall; the Pepper-corne of two hundred and fiftie, Vice-admirall, the Captaine Nicholas Dounton: and the Darling of ninetie. The Barke Samuel followed as a Victual-ler, of burthen one hundred and eightie: written by Sir H. Middleton. H. pag. 247.

Q. 1. The proceeding of his Voyage till hee came to Moha in the Red Sea. ibid.

Q. 2. Turkish treacherie at Moha and Aden with the English. pag. 251.

Q. 3. Sir Henrie Middleton, and foure and thirtie others, sent to the Basha at Zenan. Description of the Countrie, and occurrents till their returne. pag. 254.

Q. 4. Indian shipping at Moha; Sir Henrie Middletons escape from the Turkes, and enforcing satisfaction. pag. 261.

Q. 5. Their departure from Surat, and what happened there with the Cambayans and Portugals. pag. 266.

Q. 6. His going to Dabul, & thence to the Red Sea, and enforced trade with the Guzerates. p. 271.

CHAP. XII.

Nicholas Dounton Captaine of the Pepper-corne, a ship of two hundred and fifty tunnes, and Lieutenant in the sixth Voyage to the East Indies, set forth by the said Companie, his Iournall, or certaine Extracts thereof. H. pag. 274.

Q. 1. Their

The Contents of the fourth Booke

- ¶ 1. Their comming to Saldania, and thence to Socatora. ibid.
- ¶ 2. Of Abbadel Curia, Arabia Felix, Aden and Moha, and the trecherous dealing of both places. pag. 280.
- ¶ 3. Their departure from Moha to Assab, and after that, higher into the Red Sea, thence to the Socatora, and after to Surat. pag. 292.
- ¶ 4. Many proud affronts of the Portugals. Disgusts from the Indians. pag. 294.
- ¶ 5. Their departure to Dabul, Socatora, the Red Sea, and Acts there. pag. 302.
- ¶ 6. Their barter with the Indian ships, and departure to Sumatra. pag. 308.

CHAP. XIII.

The seventh Voyage; made in the Globe into East India, set out under the command of Captain Anthonic Hippon, observed and written by Nathaniel Marten, Masters Mate in the said ship. pag. 314.

CHAP. XIII.

Extracts of Peter Williamson Floris his Journall, for the seventh Voyage, (in which he went Cape Merchant) translated out of Dutch. Hee arrived in England, 1615. and died two moneths after in London. pag. 319.

- ¶ 1. The Voyage to Paleacatte, Petapoli, Masulipatan, Bantam, Patania, and Siam. ibid.
- ¶ 2. Relations of strange occurents in Pegu, Siam, Ioor, Patane, and the Kingdomes adjacent. pag. 322.
- ¶ 3. Their Voyage to Masulipatan; accidents during their long stay there, and their returne. pag. 325.

CHAP. XV.

A Journall of a Voyage made by the Pearle to the East India, wherein went as Captaine, Master Samuel Castleton of London, and Captaine George Bathurst as Lieutenant: written by John Tatton, Master. pag. 328.

The Contents of the Chapters and Paragraphs in the fourth Booke of the First part of Purchas his PILGRIMS.

CHAP. I.

The eighth Voyage set forth by the East Indian Societie, wherein were employed three ships, the Cloue, the Hector, and the Thomas, under the command of Captaine John Saris: His Course and Acts to and in the Red Sea, Iaua, Moluccas, and Iapan (by the Inhabitants called Neffoon, where also he first began and settled an English Trade and Factorie) with other remarkable Rarities, collected out of his own Journall. pag. 334.

- ¶ 1. Their sayling about Africa, visiting diuers Islands thereof, and comming to Socatora. ib.
- ¶ 2. Occurrents at Socatora, and in the Red Sea, with diuers Easterne Letters, and the Great Turkes Patent and Seale. pag. 339.
- ¶ 3. Their Aduentures with Sir Henry Middleton, with other obseruations of those parts, and arrivall at Bantam. pag. 348.
- ¶ 4. The Voyage of Captaine Saris in the Cloue, to the Ile of Iapan, what befell in the way, Obseruations of the Dutch and Spaniards in the Moluccas. pag. 354.
- ¶ 5. Further obseruations touching the Molucca Islands, and their proceeding on their Voyage to Iapan. pag. 361.
- ¶ 6. Their arrivall at Firando: the Habite, Rites, and Customes of the Iaponians. pag. 366.
- ¶ 7. Captaine Saris his Iourney to the Court of the Iaponian Emperour, and obseruations there, and by the way. His Letter to the King, and Iaponian Priuiledges to the English Company. pag. 370.

¶ 8. Accidents after his returne to Firando, the setting of a Factorie there, departure for Bantam, and thence for England. King of Firandos Letter to His Maiestie. pag. 378.

¶ 9. Intelligence concerning Yedzo, deliuered in the Citie of Edoo in Iapan, by a Iapanner who had bene there twice. pag. 384.

CHAP. II.

Obseruations of the said Captaine John Saris, of occurrents which happened in the East Indies during his abode at Bantam from October 1605. till October 1609. As likewise touching the Marts and Merchandises of those parts; obserued by his owne experience, or relation of others, extracted out of his larger Booke, and here added as an Appendix to his former greater Voyage; and may serue as a continuation of Master Scots premised Relations. To which are added certaine Obseruations of the said Authour, touching the Townes and Merchandise of principall Trade in those parts of the World. pag. 384.

Certaine Rules for the choice of sundry Drugs, as also from whence they may bee had, as followeth. pag. 389.

Of all the chiefe and principall Towns for Trade in

of the first Part.

in these parts, with their severall names and situations, and also what commodities they doe affoord, and what is there desired. pag. 390.

A note of requestable Commodities vendible in Iapan, together with their prices there current, being Masses, and Canderines, each Canderine containing the  $\frac{1}{4}$  of a Masse: viz. pag. 394.

A memorill of such merchandize as are to bee bought in Iapan, and the prices as they are there worth. pag. 395.

CHAP. III.

Relation of Master Richard Cockes Cape Merchant, Of what past in the Generals absence going to the Emperours Court. Whereunto are added diuers Letters of his and others, for the better knowledge of Iaponian affaires, and later Occurrents in those parts. ibid.

¶ 1. The Kings care, unreadinesse of ours, Iaponian superstitions, strange tempest. ibid.

¶ 2. Lies of or on the Devil, and uproares about fire. Deceit of Nangasack. Suspensions, Feasts, Spanish occurrents. pag. 399.

¶ 3. A strange Comedie acted by Kings and Nobles: Preventions for Night-cries and fires; Returne of the Generall from Court. pag. 403.

The Copie of a Letter sent by the Emperour of Iapan, unto the King of Holland, by the ship called the Red Lion, with Arrowes, which arriued in the Texel, the two and twentieth of Iuly, 1610. And diuers Letters written from the English in Iapan to their friends in England. pag. 406.

Firando in Iapan, the tenth of December, 1614. ibid.

A piece of another letter of M. Cockes. p. 410.

CHAP. IIII.

Observations of William Finch, Merchant, taken out of his large Iournall. pag. 414.

¶ 1. Remembrances touching Sierra Leona, in August 1607. the Bay, Countrey, Inhabitants, Rites, Fruits and Commodities. ibid.

¶ 2. Of Saint Augustine and Socotora, like observations, with other notes taken out of his Iournall. pag. 417.

¶ 3. Occurrents in India touching the English, Dutch, Portugals, and the Mogols dealing with the English. pag. 420.

¶ 4. His Iourney to Agra: Observations by the way, and there; and of the Decan warres there. pag. 424.

¶ 5. Description of Fetipore, Byana; the way thither; of the Nil or Indico, and of diuers Mogoll affaires, Cities, and Castles. pag. 428.

¶ 6. Description of Lahor, and of the Kings house there: how the Mogolls entred India: Of diuers strong holds, strange Beasts, and Plants; fond superstitions: Of the Wayes, Thecues, Out-lawes, Ci- ties, Buildings, adioyned and intermixed: Princes not subiect: Agra and Echebars Sepulchre described. pag. 432.

Of diuers wayes in the Mogols Kingdome, to and from Lahor and Agra, and places of note in them. pag. 434.

Lands lying Easterly from Lahor with their Lords. pag. 437.

CHAP. V.

The ninth Voyage of the Indian Companie to the East Indies, in the Iames, whereof was Captaine, Master Edmund Marlowe of Bristoll, and the Master, Iohn Dauy, which wrote this Iournall. pag. 440.

CHAP. VI.

A Ruter, or brieve direction for readie sayling into the East India, digested into a plaine methode by Master Iohn Dauis of Lime house, upon experience of his five voyages thither, and home againe. pag. 444.

¶ 1. Nauticall obseruation of places betwixt the Lizard and Saint Augustine, in the Ile of Saint Laurence. ibid.

¶ 2. A note for finding out of the Riuer of Saint Augustine in Saint Laurence, of diuers small Iles in the way thence to Achen, and of many Ports and passages in and about Sumatra. pag. 448.

¶ 3. The way from Bantam to the Straight of Palimbon, upon the East-side of Sumatra, of Banca, Bintam, Straights of Sincapura, and Sunda, with other places. pag. 452.

Certaine principall Notes, gathered by mine owne experience, in my three voyages into these parts: wherein the true course, and distances, with shoalds and rocks is shewed: and on which side you may leaue them: as hereafter followeth. pag. 453.

Certaine Notes from Bantam Roade to the Ilands of the Maluccaes, with the course and distances: as hereafter followeth. pag. 454.

Notes of Botun. pag. 455.

CHAP. VII.

A Iournall of the tenth Voyage to the East India, with two ships, the Dragon, and the Hosiander (accompanied with the Iames and Salomon, but those for other voyages) and in them three hundred and eightie persons, or thereabout: Written by Master Thomas Best, chiefe Commander thereof. pag. 456.

¶ 1. Observations in their way to Surat. ibid.

¶ 2. Their Acts with the Mogols Subjects, and fights against the Portugals: setting a Factorie, and departure to Achen. pag. 458.

Captaine Best his entertainment at Achen. pag. 462.

¶ 3. Trade at Tecoo and Passaman: their going to Bantam, and thence home. pag. 464.

CHAP.

The Contents of the third Booke

CHAP. VIII.

Certaine obseruations written by others employed in the same voyage, Master Copland Minister, Robert Boner Master, Nicholas Withington Merchant. pag. 466.

¶ 1. Remembrances taken out of a Tractate written by Master Patrike Copland, Minister in the former voyage. King of Achens letter to His Maieslie; and notes of N. Salmons Iournall. ibid.

¶ 2. Notes taken out of Master Robert Boners Iournall, who was then Master in the Dragon. H. pag. 479.

¶ 3. Extracts of a Tractate, written by Nicholas Withington, which was left in the Mogols Countrey by Captaine Best, a Factor, his adventures and trauels therein. pag. 482.

CHAP. IX.

The eleuenth Voyage to the East India in the Salomon, begun in the yeere of our Lord 1611. after the accompt of the Church of England, and ended in the yeere 1613. Written by Ralph Wilson, one of the Mates in the said ship. H. pag. 486.

CHAP. X.

A Iournall of all principall matters passed in the twelfth Voyage to the East India, obserued by mee Walter Payton, in the good ship the Expedition: the Captaine whereof was M. Christopher Newport, being set out, Anno 1612. Written by Walter Payton. H. pag. 488.

¶ 1. Their comming to Saint Augustine, Mohelia, and diuers parts of Arabia. ibid.

¶ 2. Their comming on the Persian Coast: the treacherie of the Baluches. pag. 491.

¶ 3. Their comming to Diuulginde landing the Embassadour, seeking Trade, and crossed by the slanderous Portugals, going to Sumatra and Bantam; and returne. pag. 495.

CHAP. XI.

Extracts of the Iournall of Captaine Nicholas Downton, who was employed chiefe Commander in the second Voyage set forth for the toynd Stockes in the East Indies, by the Gouvernour, Deputie, and Committees of that Societie. Wherein is related their happy successe against the Vice-Roy, and all the Indian Sea forces of the Portugals, by force and cunning attempting their destruction. pag. 500.

¶ 1. Their comming to Soldania, Socatora, Swally: Disagreements betwene the Mogoll and Portugals, and the Nabob and vs. ibid.

¶ 2. The Portugals Forces, Acts, Attempts, Fight with the English, and disgracefull Repulse. pag. 505.

¶ 3. Portugall supplies, Fire-boates frustrated, seeke peace and refused, their departure: Entertainment of the Nabob and Generall: departure of the English. pag. 509.

CHAP. XII.

Relations of Master Elkington and Master Dodsworth, touching the former voyage. p. 514.

¶ 1. Collections taken out of the Iournall of Thomas Elkington, successour to Captaine Nicholas Downton in the voyage aforesaid, written by himselfe. ibid.

¶ 2. A Briefe of Memorials obserued and written by Master Edward Dodsworth, Merchant in the former voyage, which returned in the Hope. pag. 516.

The examination of Domingo Francisco, taken in Swally Roade, aboard the Gift. Februarie 20. 1614. pag. 518.

CHAP. XIII.

A Iournall of the Iourney of Richard Steel, and Iohn Crowther, from Azmere in India, the place of the Great Mogols residence, to Spahan the Royall Seat of the King of Persia, in the affaires of the East Indian Societie. Anno 1615. 1616. pag. 519.

CHAP. XIII.

Memorials of a voyage, wherein were employed three ships, the Samaritan, Thomas and Thomasine, 1614. written by Iohn Milward Merchant, who went in the Thomas. pag. 524.

CHAP. XV.

The second voyage of Captaine Walter Peyton into the East Indies, in the Expedition, which was set forth by the East India Companie, together with the Dragon, Lion, and Peppercorne, in Ianuarie 1614. gathered out of his large Iournall. pag. 528.

¶ 1. Occurrents at Soldania, Mohelia, Socatora, Surat, with diuers other Intelligences. ibid.

¶ 2. Prizes taken, Factorie at Callicut, Obseruations of diuers places of Sumatra: the English ships miscarrie. Dutch Abuses, Factories in India. pag. 531.

¶ 3. A briefe Declaration of the Ports, Cities, and Townes, inhabited and traded vnto by the Portugall, betwixt the Cape of Good Hope and Iapan, as I could learne by diligent enquirie. pag. 534.

CHAP. XVI.

Observations collected out of the Iournall of Sir Thomas Roe, Knight, Lord Embassadour from His Maieslie of Great Britaine, to the Great Mogol: Of matters occurring worthy memorie in the way, and in the Mogols Court. His Customes, Cities, Countries, Subiects, and other Indian affaires. pag. 535.

¶ 1. Occurrents and obseruations, in, and touching the voyage to Surat. ibid.

¶ 2. His iourney to the Court, and entertainment there, and customes thereof. pag. 540.

¶ 3. Occurrents happening in Iune, Iuly, August 1616. and diuers passages of speech and action, whence the Nature, Arts, and disposition of the King and of the first Part.

and his Subjects may be observed. pag. 546.

¶ 4. The Kings birth day, and manner of the observation, with other accidents in September. pag. 550.

¶ 5. The broiles about Abdala Chan, and Chan Channa; Sultan Caroones ambition, his policies to subuert his elder brother: fight with a Portugall Carricke: distaste about the Prince: Persian Embassage, Presents and entertainment. pag. 552.

¶ 6. The Princes brauerie; the Persian Ambassadors behauiour, the manner and effects of Drinking, of the King and his Nobles; the Kings remoue, his super-exceeding pompe, wealth, magnificence therein: Portugall fray: relations of Sultan Corforoone: Persian newes. pag. 556.

¶ 7. Sir Thomas Roes following the Court in this Progresse, description of the Kings Lescar, and some places which they passed: the Kings superstition, drinke, and dealing about the Present. pag. 561.

¶ 8. The New-yeeres Feast: Suspitions of the English: Trade of Dabul, distaste of the Persian, English men of warre in the Indian Seas. pag. 566.

¶ 9. Afaph Chan seeketh to further vs for hope of gaine, so also Normahal: Master Steeles arrivall: Danger to the publike, by private trade: Stirres about a Fort. pag. 572.

¶ 10. The Map and description of the severall Kingdomes and Prouinces subiect to the Great Mogoll Sha Selim Gehangier, with the principall Cities and Rivers, the situation and borders, and extent in length and breadth. Letters of the Mogoll to His Maiestie, and of S. T. Roe to diners his honorable friends in England. pag. 578.

CHAP. XVII.

A Letter of Master Thomas Coryat, which travelled by Land from Ierusalem to the Court of the Great Mogoll, written to Master L. Whitaker. To which are added pieces of two other. pag. 592.

Certaine observations written by Thomas Coryat. pag. 600.

The Contents of the Chapters and Paragraphs in the fift Booke of the First part of Purchas his PILGRIMS.

CHAP. I.

Memorials taken out of the Iournall of Roger Hawes, touching the proceedings of the Factorie at Cranganor under the Great Samorine. pag. 603.

CHAP. II.

Notes taken out of the Iournall of Alexander Childe, from England to Surat, and thence to Iasques in Persia, and of the fight by the way with the Portugals, in which Generall Ioseph was slaine. pag. 606.

The Voyage to Iasques. pag. 607.

CHAP. III.

A Letter of Master Thomas Spurway Merchant, touching the wrongs done at Banda to the English by the Hollanders. Written in a Letter to the Companie. pag. 608.

CHAP. IIII.

Relations and Remembrances, taken out of a large Iournall of a Voyage, set forth by the East Indian Societie, wherein were employed, the Iames, the Anne, the New-yeeres Gift, the Bull, & the Bee; written by Iohn Hatch, Master of the Bee, and after in the New-yeeres Gift; and lastly, came home in the Iames. pag. 618.

CHAP. V.

The Voyage of the Anne Royall from Surat to Moha, in the Red Sea, for setting an English Trade in those parts: Anno Dom. 1618. extracted out of Master Edward Heynes his Iournall, written thereof. The Copies of diuers Firmans. pag. 622.

CHAP. VI.

Briefe Notes of two Voyages of Master Martin Pring into the East Indies; the first with Captaine Nicholas Downton, Generall of foure ships, in which he went Master in the New-yeeres Gift Admirall. pag. 629.

CHAP. VII.

The second Voyage of Captaine Pring into the East Indies. Or a Relation of the fifth Voyage for the Ioynt Stock, set forth by the Honorable and Worshipfull of the East Indie Societie: consisting of five ships, viz. the Iames Royall, of burthen a thousand Tunnes, Rowland Coytmore Master: the Anne Royall, nine hundred Tunnes; Andrew Shilling Master: the Gift, eight hundred Tunnes; Nathaniel Salmon Master: the Bull, foure hundred Tuns; Robert Adams Master: the Bee, one hundred and fiftie Tunnes; Iohn Hatch Master. All under the gouernment of Martin Pring. pag. 631.

¶ 1. Occurrents in the way, at Surat, Bantam, and Iacatra. ibid.

¶ 2. Dutch wrongs, and the fights betwixt Sir Thomas Dale and them. pag. 634.

¶ 3. Their departure for Coromandell: Occurrents there: Sir Thomas Dales death. English ships taken by the Dutch. Consultation and propositions at Teco, and departure thence. pag. 637.

¶ 4. And

The Contents of the fift Booke

¶ 4. Newes of the peace betwixt English and Dutch: the mutuall congratulation: Voyage to Iapan, retorne thence and home. pag. 640.

¶ 5. The Voyage from Bantam to Patania, and thence to Iapan, with his retorne to Iacatra; set by it selfe for the use of Mariners. pag. 645.
Their retorne. pag. 653.

CHAP. VIII.

William Hores discourse of his voyage in the Dragon and Expedition, from Surat to Achen, Teco and Bantam; and of the surprising the Dragon, Beare, Expedition, &c. in a Letter to the Companie. pag. 656.

CHAP. IX.

The Iournall of Master Nathaniel Courthop, his voyage from Bantam to the Ilands of Banda, being chiefe Commander of the two ships, the Swan, Admirall; Master Dauis, Master: and the Defence, Vice-Admirall; Master Hinchley, Master: together with his residence in Banda, and occurrences there; containyng the differences in those parts betwixt the English and Hollanders contracted. pag. 664.

¶ 1. English kindneses to the Dutch: the surrender of Poolarooone to His Maiestie, and the fortifying there by the English: Dutch hostilitie, their taking the Swan, Salomon, and Attendance, and keeping the Defence betrayed by Fugitiues. ibid.

¶ 2. The manner of taking the Salomon and Attendance, in diuers Letters described, Dutch abusive deuices by lyes to delude and dishearten our men: diuers Extracts of Letters of M. Courthop, with other occurrences. pag. 667.

¶ 3. Other Acts of the Hollanders in diuers places of the Indies: Encouragements from Sir Thomas Dale, Master Iordan and others, and various euent in those parts till his death. pag. 675.

Sir Thomas Dales Letter. ibid.

The Presidents Letters. pag. 676.

CHAP. X.

The continuation of the former Iournall by Master Robert Hayes, containyng the death of Captaine Courthop, succession of Robert Hayes, surrender of Lantore to His Maiestie, newes of the peace, and after the peace Lantore and Poolarooone seized by the Dutch. pag. 679.

CHAP. XI.

A Letter written to the East India Companie in England, from their Factors. pag. 684.

CHAP. XII.

The Hollanders declaration of the affaires of the East Indies: faithfully translated according to the Dutch Copie, printed at Amsterdam, 1622. written in answer to the former reports, touching wrongs done to the English. And an answer written by certaine Mariners lately published: with Depositions further opening the iniquitie and crueltie of the Dutch. pag. 687.

¶ 1. A true Relation of that which passed in the Ilands of Banda, in the East Indies, in the yeere of our Lord God 1621. And before printed at Amsterdam, 1622. ibid.

¶ 2. An answer to the Hollanders declaration concerning the occurrences of the East India, contracted somewhat briefer then in the former Impression. pag. 690.

¶ 3. Relations and Depositions touching the Hollanders brutish and cruell vsage of the English. pag. 693.

CHAP. XIII.

A pitby Description of the chiefe Ilands of Banda and Moluccas, by Captaine Humphrey Fitz-Herbert, in a Letter to the Companie. pag. 697.

CHAP. XIII.

Three severall Surrenders of certaine of the Banda Ilands made to the Kings Maiestie of England, faithfully translated out of Malahan into English; with a voyage also annexed of Sir Henric Middleton. pag. 701.

The Contents of the Surrender of the Ilands of Pooloway, and Poolarooone, in Banda, to His Maiestie. ibid.

The Surrender of Rosinging and Wayre to his Maiestie. pag. 702.

Translation of the Surrender of Lantore, Cont. in the paper N. D. pag. 703.

The voyage of Master Henric Middleton to the Moluccas, (having sent Captaine Colthrust in the Ascension to Banda) with Letters of the Kings of those parts to his Maiestie. ibid.

The King of Tarnatas Letter to the King. p. 704.

The King of Tydores Letter to the Kings Maiestie of England. pag. 705.

The King of Bantam to the King of England. ibid.

CHAP. XV.

The Dutch Navigations to the East Indies, out of their owne Iournals and other Histories. pag. 706.

The games which the Hollanders had gotten by the East India trade, taken out of a Booke translated out of the Dutch, perswading to a West India Trade. pag. 718.

The Relation of the Priest of Poolarooone, touching the beginnings and occasions of quarrels betwixt the Dutch and Bandanefes, written in the Malayan language with his owne hand, in a very faire Arabick letter. pag. 719.

A discourse of those warres by the Author. ibid.

CHAP. XVI.

Extracts of a Iournall of a voyage to Surat and to Iasques in the Persian Gulfe, set forth by the East India Societie of Merchants: wherein were employed foure four new ships; the London, of eight hundred Tunnes, and therein Andrew Shilling chiefe Commander of the whole Fleet; William Baffin Master; the Hart, of five hundred Tunnes, Richard Blithe Master; the Roe Bucke, of three hundred, Richard Swan Master; the Eagle, of two hundred and eightie, Christopher Browne Master. Written by Richard Swan. pag. 723.

Relation of the fight of foure English ships with foure Portugall ships, two Gallies, and ten Frigats in the Gulfe of Persia, in the moneths of December and Ianuarie, 1620. pag. 728.

Part of a Letter written from Maister Robert Smith to his brother Henrie Smith, relating of a rare attempt and exploit of a small English Pinnasse, in taking a Portugall ship. pag. 729.

Giles Hobbs his trauaile from Musco to Spahan, written in a Letter by himselfe to the East Indian Companie. ibid.

CHAP. XVII.

A discourse of Trade from England vnto the East Indies: Answering to diuers objections which are usually made against the same. Written by T. Mun. pag. 732.

The Contents of the Chapters and Paragraphs in the sixt Booke of the First part of Purchas his PILGRIMS.

CHAP. I.

Observations of Africa, taken out of Iohn Leo his nine Bookes, translated by Maister Pory, and the most remarkable things hither transcribed. pag. 749.

¶ 1. Collections out of the first Booke of Iohn Leo, touching the People, Tribes, Languages, Seasons, Vertues, Vices, and other more generall considerations of Africa. ibid.

¶ 2. Collections of things most remarkable in Iohn Leo his second Booke of the Historie of Africa. pag. 768.

¶ 3. Collections of things most remarkable in Iohn Leo his third Booke of the Historie of Africa. pag. 781.

¶ 4. The most remarkable things of Iohn Leo, in his fourth Booke of the Historie of Africa. pag. 810.

¶ 5. The most remarkable things in Iohn Leo his fifth Booke of the Historie of Africa, and a description of the Kingdomes of Bugia and Tunis. pag. 815.

¶ 6. Collections taken out of Iohn Leo his sixt Booke of the Historie of Africa. pag. 822.

¶ 7. Extracts taken out of Iohn Leo his seventh Booke of the Historie of Africa, wherein hee intreateth of the Land of Negros, and of the Confines of Egypt. pag. 826.

¶ 8. Notes of principall things in Iohn Leo his eight Booke of the Historie of Africa. pag. 831.

¶ 9. Principall occurrents in Iohn Leo his ninth Booke of the Historie of Africa. pag. 844.

CHAP. II.

Collections of things most remarkable in the Historie of Barbarie, written by Ro. C. pag. 851.

¶ 1. How the Kingdome of Barbarie came to Muley Hamet Xarif, the late deceased King, and the course of his gouernment; of his sonnes and their behaviour: Shecks misgouernment and imprisonment: Hamets death. ibid.

¶ 2. Muley Sidan proclaimeth himself king in Fez. Muley Boferes in Moruecos. Muley Nassar would haue done the like in Taradant, but is hindred. The death of Nassar. Warre betweene Sidan and Boferes. Sheck set free. Fokers employed. The battell. Sidans flight. Fewds and robberies. pag. 855.

¶ 3. Muley Sheck proclaimeth himself king in Fez. Sidan goeth to Tafilet, from thence into Sus. Peace concluded betweene Muley Boferes, and Muley Sidan. Abdela Shecks sonne escapeth. Sir Anthonie Sherleys Embassage, Bountie and State. pag. 861.

¶ 4. Muley Abdela goeth in person against Muley Boferes; driueth him out of Moruecos; putteth to death Bascha Sidar, and other Noblemen; Sidan expelleth him, and killeth three thousand Fezans perfidiously; requited by Abdela. Shracies treacherie vniustly punished. Sidans flight. Many Englishmen employed in these wars, and slaine. pag. 864.

¶ 5. Muley Hamet Bosonne commeth against Abdela, and causeth him flie to his Father. Boferes like to bee taken, flieth to Salie. Muley Sidan commeth against Muley Hamet Bosonne; who flyeth, and is paysoned by old Azus. Muley Sheck sendeth into Spaine. Some observations of their Policie, and Trade to Gago. pag. 868.

The Policie of Barbarie. pag. 870.

The trading of the Moores into Guinee and Gago for gold Ore, or sandie Gold. pag. 872.

CHAP. III.

The African possessions of the King of Spaine, and the Turke. pag. 873.

¶ 1. The

The Contents of the seventh Booke

¶. I. The Dominions and Fortresses which the King of Spaine hath upon the Iles and maine Lands of Africa, and of the Great Turkes. ibid.

CHAP. III.

The Description of the Citie of Alger, written by Nicholas Nicholay, and how it came into the possession of Barbarossa, and also of Malta and Tripolie. pag. 874.

CHAP. V.

A large Voyage in a Journall or brieve Repertory of all occurrents, hapning in the fleet of Ships sent out by the King his most excellent Maiestie, as well against the Pirats of Algiers, as others; the whole body of the Fleet consisting of eightene saile. Sixe of his Maiesties ships, ten Merchants ships, two Pinnaces. Under the command of Sir Robert Mansel Knight, Vice-Admirall of England, and Admirall of that Fleet: and a Counsellor of warre appointed by his Maiestie. Written by one employed in that Voyage, formerly published, and here contracted. pag. 881.

The names of the Captaines, Ships, their burdens, number of men, and Ordnance in his Maiesties sixe Ships. ibid.

In the Merchants ships. pag. 882.

CHAP. VI.

The Relation of the Iacob, a ship of Brisholl, of one hundred and twenty Tunnes, which was about the end of October 1621. taken by the Turkish Pirats of Argier: and within five dayes after, foure English youths did valiantly overcome thirteene of the said Turkes, where they sold nine of the Turkes for Gallie-slaves: with mention of some other like English adventures. pag. 887.

CHAP. VII.

The wonderfull recovery of the Exchange of Bristow, from the Turkish Pirats of Argier, published by Iohn Rawlins, here abbreviated. pag. 889.

CHAP. VIII.

Relations of Africa, taken out of George Sandys his larger discourse observed in his Iourney, begunne Ann. 1610. Lib. 2 pag. 896.

¶. 1. His Voyage from Rhodes to Alexandria, observations there, of Egypt in generall, and of Nilus. ibid.

¶. 2. His iourney to Cairo, the things remarkable there, and by the way. pag. 902.

¶. 3. The Pyramides viewed, Sphynx and other Antiquities. Iourney from Cairo to Gaza. pag. 907.

¶. 4. Arriuall at Malta, and obseruations there. pag. 905.

The Contents of the Chapters and Paragraphs in the seventh Booke of the First part of Purchas his PILGRIMS.

CHAP. I.

A True Relation of Master Richard Iobsons Voyage, employed by Sir William Saint Iohn, Knight, and others; for the Discouery of Gambia, in the Sion, a shippe of two hundred tunnes, Admirall; and the Saint Iohn of fiftie, Vice-Admirall. In which they passed nine hundred and sixtie miles up the Riuer into the Continent. Extracted out of his large Journall. pag. 921.

CHAP. II.

A description and historicall declaration of the golden Kingdome of Guinea, otherwise called the golden Coast of Myna, lying in a part of Africa, shewing their beliefe, opinions, traffiquing, bartering, and manner of speech; together with the situation of the Countrey, Townes, Cottages, and Houses of the same; with their Persons and Properties, Hauens and Riuers, as they are now found out and discovered: all perfectly viewed and curiously discovered, and written by one that hath oftentimes bene there. Translated out of Dutch, conferred also with the Latine Edition, and contracted. H.P. pag. 926.

¶. 1. What course the ships hold which seek to goe to the Gold Coast of Guinea. Of Cape Verde, and the course from thence. ibid.

¶. 2. How they marrie each with other, and what goods their Fathers giue with their Children; their House-keeping together; the womans lying in; education of their Children: Their proportions, industry, and conditions. pag. 929.

¶. 3. Of their Apparell, Customes within doores, manner of diet, Merchandising, the vse of Dache; Wares carried thither. pag. 933.

¶. 4. What Custome the Merchants pay to their Kings. Their Measures, Weights, Scales, Markets: Also their Sabbath, Fetissos, and superstition. pag. 939.

¶. 5. Of their houses, townes, countrey wayes, warres, armes, state of their Kings, iudgements, lawes, iustice, thefts, promises, oathes, and other rites. pag. 944.

¶. 6. Of their Summer and Winter; And of their manner of Tilling and Sowing the Land; Their Corne, Rents, Raines; Beasts and hunting: Fowles, Trees, and Fruits. pag. 952.

¶. 7. Of their Gentlemen, and how they are made;

made; Their Dancings, Sports, Diseases, Cures, Visitations, Mournings, Funerals: and of their Gold. pag. 958.

¶ 8. The passage from the golden Coast to the Kingdome of Benni, or Rio de Benni, and Rio Floreado: The Citie, Court, Gentry, Apparell: also other places adioyning described. pag. 964.

CHAP. III.

The strange adventures of Andrew Battell of Leigh in Essex, sent by the Portugals prisoner to Angola, who lived there, and in the adioyning Regions, neere eightene yeeres. pag. 970.

¶ 1. Andrew Battell, his Voyage to the Riuer of Plate, who being taken on the Coast of Brasil, was sent to Angola. ibid.

¶ 2. His trading on the Coast, offer to escape, imprisonment, exile; escape, and new imprisonment: his sending to Elambo, and Bahia Das Vaccas; Many strange occurrents. pag. 971.

¶ 3. Discovery of the Gagas; Their Warres, Man-eating: Ouerunning Countries: His Trade with them, betraying, escape to them, and living with them, with many strange adventures. And also the Rites and manner of life obserued by the Iaggas or Gagas, which no Christian could euer know well but this Author. pag. 974.

¶ 4. His returne to the Portugals: inuasions of diuers Countries, abuse, flight from them, and living in the Woods diuers moneths: His strange Boate, and coming to Loango. pag. 978.

¶ 5. Of the Prouince of Engoy, and other Regions of Loango, with the Customes there obserued by the King and people. pag. 979.

¶ 6. Of the Prouinces of Bongo, Calongo, Mayombe, Manikesocke, Motimbas: of the Ape-monster Pongo, their hunting, Idolatries, and diuers other observations. pag. 981.

¶ 7. Of the Zebra and Hippopotamus: The Portugals Warres in those parts: The Fishing, Graine, and other things remarkable. pag. 983.

CHAP. IIII.

A report of the Kingdome of Congo, a Region of Affrica, gathered by Philippo Pigafetta, out of the Discourses of Master Edward Lopes a Portugall, translated out of Italian into English, by Master Abraham Hartwell, and here abbreviated. pag. 986.

¶ 1. The iourney by Sea from Lisbone to the Kingdome of Congo: Of the Ayre, Winds, Raines, Temperature thereof. pag. 986.

¶ 2. Of the circuit of the Kingdome of Congo, and of the borders and confines thereof; As also of diuers bordering Nations, and remarkable rarities therein. pag. 989.

¶ 3. Of Angola, the Warres betweene Congo and Angola: their manner of warfare. The present Kingdome of Congo bounded. Of Banba, one of the six Prouinces of Congo, and the Creatures therein. pag. 994.

¶ 4. Of the five other Prouinces of Congo, to wit, Sogno, Sundi, Pango, Batta, and Pemba. pag. 1003.

¶ 5. Of the situation of the Royall Citie of the Kingdome of Congo: of their first conuersion and Warre, thence arising betwixt the Kings two Sonnes. pag. 1006.

¶ 6. The death of the King Don Alfonso, and the succession of Don Piedro. How the Island of S. Thomas was first inhabited, and of the Bishoppe that was sent thither: The Kings lineage extinct: Inuasion of the Iaggas: Their sauage conditions. pag. 1013.

¶ 7. Of the Court of the King of Congo. Of the apparell of that people before they became Christians and after. Of the Kings Table, and manner of his Court. pag. 1018.

¶ 8. Of the Countries that are beyond the Kingdomes of Congo, towards the Cape of Good-Hope: of the Riuer Nilus, and of Sofala, Monomotapa, the Amazones, Saint Laurence, and other Æthiopian Countries. pag. 1021.

CHAP. V.

The Voyage of Sir Francis Aluarez, a Portugall Priest, made vnto the Court of Prete Ianni, the great Christian Emperour of Ethiopia. pag. 1026.

¶ 1. Matthew the Ambassadour of Prete Ianni, is conducted by the Portugals vnto the Hauens of Maczua in the Red Sea, and what hapned to his death. pag. 1027.

¶ 2. Of the manner and scituation of the Monasteries, and of their holy Rites, Times, Places, and Things: And first of this of Saint Michael. pag. 1031.

¶ 3. Of the Husbandry of this Countrey, and how they preserve themselves from wilde beasts, and of the Reuenues of the Monasterie. Their departure, strange Riuers, Mountaines, Apes: Barnagalloes entertainment. Barua. Polygamie, Marriages, Divorces, Baptisme, and Circumcision. Their Branding, and Burying. pag. 1036.

¶ 4. Of the scituation of Barua, the chiefe Towne of the Kingdome of Barnagallo, and of their Houses, and of the wilde Beasts, and Fowles. Of his Dominion and Gouvernement; of their two Winters, Churches, Church-yards, and Priests marriages:

The Contents of the eight Booke.

ages: Their departure to Timci, and qualitie of that place. pag. 1041.

¶ 5. Of the infinite number of Locusts, and of the harme which they doe, and how wee made a Procession, and the Locusts died. The incredible hurts done by them. Of Tigremahon, Marabon, and of Charuma, the Queene of Sheba, and the Eunuch. The rare Buildings and Pillars at Caxumo. pag. 1046.

¶ 6. Departure from Saint Michael, to a place called Bacinete: Their visiting Tigremahon. Of diuers Monasteries and other places in the way which they passed. pag. 1053.

¶ 7. Departure from Corcora, the pleasant Countrey which wee passed through, and of another Forrest: how the Tygres set upon vs. Dofarso, the Moores of Dobas: Ancona, Angote; Salt, and Iron money. Other Monasteries and Churches. pag. 1056.

¶ 8. Of the stately buildings of the Churches which are in the Countries of Abugana, which King Lulibella made, and of his Tombe in the Church of Golgota. Angoteraz his entertainment. pag. 1061.

¶ 9. Of the exceeding huge Mountaine, whereupon the Sonne of Prete Ianni are kept, where wee were almost stoned to death: The greatnesse, guard, manner of sending, punishments: Of the Pretes Kinared. pag. 1064.

¶ 10. Of the end of the Kingdome of Angote, and of the beginning of the Kingdome of Amara, and of diuers Lakes; the Church Machan Celacen; Endowments of Churches: of Abraham. Strange trenches and gates in the entrance to Xoa: and what happened before the Prete called for them. pag. 1067.

¶ 11. How the Embassadour and wee were called for by the commandement of Prete Ianni, and of the order which wee found, and of the State and Maiestie of Prete Ianni. His conference, allowance, remoue. The Embassadors Audience. pag. 1070.

¶ 12. Of the Questions moued to the Ambassadour, by the appointment of Prete Ianni, at severall times by Interlocutors, and lastly, in presence wherein many points of their Religion are opened. pag. 1066.

¶ 13. Of the Progresse of Prete Ianni. Their wrestling, Baptisme, Masse passage: of the dangerous Straits comming to Saint Georges Church. Many other Questions. The Pretes preparations in his Trauell. pag. 1081.

¶ 14. How the Prete came to the Church of Machan Celacem, and of the Procession wherewith they receiued him: Diuers Messages: Their twelfth Baptisme of the Abunas Circumcision, Orders, Consecration of the Church and Translation of Nahu. Diuers Questions and Discourses. pag. 1084.

¶ 15. A Discourse of Peter Couillan: of the Pretes gifts and presents; and the Portugals quarrels, and their licence to depart out of the Countrey. pag. 1091.

¶ 16. Of the time and day when their Lent beginneth in the Countrey of Prete Ianni; and strange abstinences, and other bodily exercises, with other their holies. Of the Troglodites, and Goraises. pag. 1094.

¶ 17. Don Lewis de Meneses Letters: King Emanuels death: Their Rites of mourning, Fatigar and Xoa. Mafudi his many mischiefs and death in battell. pag. 1099.

¶ 18. Death of Queene Helena. Tributes of Goiame, and other Prouinces. Succours giuen to the Queene of Adea. Apprehension of the two Betudetes and Tigremahon: their sentence, and the execution. Expedition of the Negus to Adea. Strange Oxen. The Pretes Tent-court, and manner thereof; Places, Courts, and courses of Iustice, with other parts thereof described. His Treasuries. pag. 1103.

¶ 19. Pilgrimage to Ierusalem. Of the Countries which border on Prester Iohn, Moores, Gentiles, Amazones, Cafates, Damute, Goiame, Bagamidri, Nubia. Of Salomons Officers. pag. 1110.

¶ 20. The Frier. Ambassadors Signiories. Their departure and arriuall at Ormuz, & after at Goa; at Lisbon. Briefe Notes of Ethiopia. p. 1113.

A Copie of the Letter which Prete Ianni writ to Don Diego Lopez de Sequiera, which was deliuered to Lopez Vaz of Saint Paul, his successor in the gouernment of the Indies. pag. 1114.

The Letters of Dauid, the mightie Emperour of Æthiopia, vnto Emanuel King of Portugall, &c. Written in the yeere 1521. as also to King Iohn and Pope Clement. pag. 1118.

CHAP. VI.

A Rutter of Don Iohn of Castro, of the Voyage which the Portugals made from India to Zoz, Dedicated to the most Illustrious Prince, the Infant Don Luis, and here abbreviated: shewing the state of Socatora, and the parts on both sides the red Sea, as they were aboue eightie yeeres since, with the Harbors, Ilands, Depths, Shelues, & other things pertaining to the Historie of the Sea, Land, and People. The originall of which is reported to haue beene bought by Sir Walter Raleigh, at sixtie pounds, and by him caused to be done into English out of the Portugall. pag. 1122.

¶ 1. The

of the first Part.

¶ 1. The sailing from Goa to Socatara, and into the red Sea, as farre as Mazua. pag. 1122.

¶ 2. Relations of Ethiopia sub Ægypto, and Prester Iohn : of Nilus, and the Abassine Customs and Neighbours. The cause and meanes of the decay of that great Empire, neuer since recovered. Of Marate and Suaquen. pag. 1127.

¶ 3. Mountaines of Sand on the Coasts of Drake, Doroo, Fuxaa, Arequea, Farate, Quilfit, and Igidid. 1132.

¶ 4. A description of the Coast, that is contained from the Port of Igidid unto Comol; Raselnaxef, Xuarif, Gadenauhi, Xermeelquiman, Gualibo, Tuna, Alcocer, and Toro. pag. 1135.

¶ 5. A Description of the Nooke or Bay beyond Toro, and how by it is understood the Gulfe Elaniticus. Of Soez, and of their returne homewards. Of the Badois, and of their customes, and why this Sea is called Red. pag. 1142.

CHAP. VII.

A briefe Relation of the Embassage which the Patriarch Don Iohn Bermudez brought from the Emperour of Ethiopia, vulgarly called Presbyter Iohn, to the most Christian and zealous of the Faith of Christ, Don Iohn, the third of this Name, King of Portugall : Dedicated to the most High and Mightie King of Portugall, Don Sebastian of most blessed hope, the first of this Name. In the which hee reciteth also the death of Don Christopher of Gama : and the successes which happened to the Portugals that went in his Companie. H. pag. 1149.

¶ 1. Don Iohn Bermudez elected Patriarch of the Presbyter, and sent to Rome : His returne into Ethiopia : Arriuall at Maczua ; the death of the Negus, entertainment of him and Christopher of Gama, with the Portugall Forces by the Queene Regent. ibid.

¶ 2. Don Christopher and the Portugals Warre on the King of Zeila, and hauing in two Battels preuailed, in the third are ouerthrowne. A new Captaine appointed. Don Christophers resolution and death. Mountaine of the Iewes. pag. 1152.

¶ 3. Comming of Gradeus the yong Negus, his reiecting the Patriarch and Pope : their reconciliation and battale with the Moores, in which Gorania was slaine, and after him the King of Aden. pag. 1157.

¶ 4. Disgusts betwixt the Negus, and the Portugals : Arias Diz his trecherie. Battell betwixt the Abassines and Portugals. Their exile ; Arias his death. pag. 1162.

¶ 5. The comming of another Patriarch. The Calide killed. Of the Gallas and other Prouinces, subiect and bordering on the Negus, and rarities there obserued. The escape and returne of the Author. pag. 1165.

CHAP. VIII.

Late changes of State and Religion in Ethiopia, with other remarkable Obseruations. pag. 1174.

¶ 1. Relations of Iohn Nunnez (or Nonius) Baretus sent for Patriarch of Ethiopia, and Andrea Ouiedo his Successor. ibid.

¶ 2. Description of the Countries, and the severall Regions, Religions, and Abassine Opinions. pag. 1181.

An Armenian his report of Suffinus, the Emperour of the Abaxins, by vs vulgarly called Prester Iohn, who came from the said Emperours Court twelue daies since. H. pag. 1187.

The Contents of the eight Booke.

The Contents of the Chapters and Paragraphs in the eight Booke of the First part of Purchas his PILGRIMS.

CHAP. I.

The Historie of the first Expedition to Ierusalem, by Godfrey of Bullen, Robert of Normandie, and other Christian Princes: written by Robert, whom some call the Englishman, a Monke of Saint Remigius, which was present both at the Councell of Claremont, and in the said Expedition: translated and abbreviated. pag. 1189.

CHAP. II.

The Acts of the Pilgrimes in their Expedition to Ierusalem, before and after the taking thereof, extracted out of Fulcherius Carnotensis, which went thither with Robert, Earle of Normandie. pag. 1201.

CHAP. III.

A supplement of the Holy Land Storie, gleaned out of the large Historie of William Archbishop of Tyrus. pag. 1210.

CHAP. IIII.

The Continuation of the Ierusalem Expedition and other Additions, gathered out of Matthew Paris, chiefly relating the Acts of English Pilgrimes in that Employment. pag. 1215.

¶ 1. Templers beginning and degeneration. Huge slaughters of Christians. Saladines taking Ierusalem and the Holy Land. ibid.

¶ 2. The Emperour and two Kings take the Crosse. King Richard the First his Expedition, his Noble Exploits in Sicil, Cyprus, and the Holy Land. His imprisonment: and the great miseries which happened to England, generally by that Expedition. pag. 1218.

¶ 3. Prosecution of the Holy Land warres: English Nobles crossed: Richard Earle of Cornwall his Acts there: William de longa Spata. and other English men. King or Saint Lewis of France his doings and sufferings: Prince Edward. pag. 1224.

CHAP. V.

Pilgrimage to Ierusalem, written in very old English Rime. pag. 1230.

CHAP. VI.

The Churches Peregrination by this H. Land way, and warre into mysticall Babylon: or a Myserie of Papall iniquitie reuealed, how the Papall Monarchie in and ouer Christendome, was aduanced in that Age and the following, and principally by this Expedition into the H. Land. pag. 1245.

¶ 1. The Historie of the Normans, and their proceedings. Of Vrban and Boamunds policie, abusing the zeale of Christendome in these warres: and of Satans loosing after one thousands yeeres. ibid.

¶ 2. Of the foure meanes which Popes haue to get monies: Of the two first, their Temporalities and Collations of Benefices. pag. 1254.

¶ 3. Of Dispensations. pag. 1256.

¶ 4. Of Indulgences. pag. 1261.

¶ 5. Superstition aduanced in and by the Holy Land Expeditions, and the Christians Christianitie in those parts worse then in other. Diners Sects of Christians in the East. pag. 1269.

CHAP. VII.

Monuments of Antiquitie, taken out of ancient Records, to testifie the quondam commerce betwixt our Kings and their Subjects, and those Eastern Princes. pag. 1271.

CHAP. VIII.

A Relation of a Iourney begun, Anno Dom. 1610. written by Master George Sandys, and here contracted. pag. 1274.

¶ 1. His iourney from Venice to Constantinople, and obseruations by the way. ibid.

¶ 2. Constantinople described, the Turkes Seraglio, Pera; the Turkish Empire and Government: Some obseruations of the Turkish Religion. pag. 1282.

¶ 3. The Mustie, Cadileschiars, Diuans: Manners and attire of the Turkes. The Sultan described, and his Customes and Court. The Customes of the Greekes. Sir Tho. Glouer. p. 1293.

¶ 4. The Holy Land described, the Countrie, Cities, Inhabitants, holy Places, and memorable rarities of Ierusalem. pag. 1306.

¶ 5. Visiting of Emaus and Bethlechem, and other places: Also other obseruations of the Ierosolymitan Holies. pag. 1317.

¶ 6. His returne. Obseruations of memorable places by the way. Of Mount, Carmel, Acon, Sidon, Tyrus; of Facardin, Emer of Sidon his Greatnesse. pag. 1327.

CHAP. IX.

Part of a Letter of Master William Biddulph from Aleppo. pag. 1334.

Part of another Letter of Master William Biddulph, from Ierusalem. pag. 1343.

CHAP. X.

The iourney of Edward Barton Esquire, her Maiesties Ambassadour with the Grand Signior, otherwise called the Great Turke, in Constantinople,

of the first Part.

nople, Sultan Mahumet Chan. Written by Sir Thomas Glouer then Secretarie to the Ambassadour, and since employed in that Honourable Function by his Maiestie, to Sultan Achmet. Two Letters are also inserted, written from Agria, by the said Ambassadour Barton. pag. 1354.

A Letter written by Master Edward Barton Ambassadour, to Master Sanderfon; inscribed Al Molto Mag. Sig. Gio. Sanderfon, &c. p. 1358

Part of another Letter written likewise by the said Ambassadour from Agria, to Master Sandy the English Consull at Aleppo. ibid.

CHAP. XI.

The Trauels and Aduentures of Captaine Iohn Smith, in diuers parts of the World, begun about the yeere 1596. pag. 1361.

¶ 1. His trauels thorow France, Italie, and on the Sea coasts of Europe, Africa, and Asia: His entertainment and exploits in the Emperours warres against the Turke: his subtile stratagems, valerous combats, applause, aduancement, honour. ibid.

Extracts of Captaine Smiths Transylvanian Acts, out of Fr. Fer. his storie. pag. 1364.

¶ 2. Diuers valiant English men in this battell. Captaine Smith taken, sold, sent into Turkie, and over the Black Sea to Tartaria. His admirable escape and other trauels in diuers parts of Christendome. pag. 1356.

CHAP. XII.

The death of Sultan Osman, and the setting up of Mustafa his Vncle, according to the Relation presented to His Maiestie. pag. 1370.

CHAP. XIII.

Mount Sinai, Oreb, and the adioyning parts of Arabia, described out of the foure Iournals of Breidenbach, Baumgarten, Bellonius, and Christopher Furer of Haimendorf. pag. 1376.

The Contents of the Chapters and Paragraphs in the ninth Booke of the First part of Purchas his PILGRIMS.

CHAP. I.

A Briefe Compendium of the Historie of Sir Anthonie Sherleys trauels into Persia: And employed thence Ambassadour to the Christian Princes; penned by himselfe, and recommended to his brother Sir Robert Sherley, since that sent on like Ambassage by the King of Persia. pag. 1383.

¶ 1. The Causes of his going to Persia, and strange accidents in the way. ibid.

¶ 2. Of Abas King of Persia, his Person, vertues, perils, escapes, aduancement, gouernment, and conquests. pag. 1389.

¶ 3. The Kings triumphant entrie into Casbin, entertainment of the Anthour and his companie. Other remarkable obseruations of the Kings iustice, bountie, treatie of warre, and Mustaphas embassage. pag. 1397.

¶ 4. The Kings condescending to Sir Anthonies motion, employing and furnishing him in Ambassage to Christian Princes. Two Friers. p. 1404.

CHAP. II.

Sir Anthonie Sherley his Voyage ouer the Caspian Sea and thorow Ruffia: taken out of W. Parry his discourse of the whole voyage of Sir Anthonie, in which he accompanied him; published 1601. pag. 1407.

CHAP. III.

Two voyages of Master Iohn Newberie, One, into the Holy Land, The other to Balsara, Ormus, Persia, and backe thorow Turkie. pag. 1410.

CHAP. IIII.

Obseruations of Master Iohn Cartwright in his voyage from Aleppo to Hispaan, and backe againe: published by himselfe, and here contracted. pag. 1422.

¶ 1. Of Euphrates, Orpha, Caracemit, the Curdi, Armenians, Bithlis, Van, and Arraret. ibid.

¶ 2. Of Araxis, Chiulfal, Sumachia, Derbent, Sechieres, Aras, Tauris, Soltania, Casbin, Argouil, and Gilan. pag. 1427.

¶ 3. Of Cassan and Hispaan. Of the Persian King and gouernement. Of Sir Anthonie Sherley. pag. 1432.

¶ 4. The returne of the Anthour by the way of Persia, Susiana, Chaldaea, Assyria, and Arabia. pag. 1434.

CHAP. V.

The Peregrination of Benjamin, the sonne of Ionas, a Iew, written in Hebrew, translated into Latin by B. Arias Montanus, discovering both the state of the Iewes, and of the World, about foure hundred and sixtie yeeres since. pag. 1437.

¶ 1. Of the Iewes and their Synagogues, Schooles, or Vniuersities, and other his obseruations in Europe. pag. 1438.

¶ 2. The estate of the Iewes, and relations of the

The Contents of the ninth Booke

the World in the higher parts of Asia, Syria, Palæstina, Damascus, and the parts adjoining. pag. 1442.

¶ 3. Of Mesopotamia, Mosul, Bagdat; the Calipha; the numbers, Synagogues, and Priviledges of the Iewes in it, and the places adjoining. pag. 1449.

¶ 4. Strange reports, if true, of the Aliman Iewes. Of Persia, and Dauid Elroi. Of the Nisbor Iewes, and some places of India. p. 1453.

¶ 5. Of India, Ethiopia, Egypt, his returne into Europe: Sicilia, Germanie, Prussia, Russia, France. pag. 1458.

CHAP. VI.

A Relation of a Voyage to the Easterne India. Obserued by Edward Terry, Master of Arts and Student of Christ-Church in Oxford. p. 1464.

¶ 1. Things remarkable obserued in his Voyage to the Indies. Sea fight with the Portugals. ibid.

¶ 2. Description of the Mogols Empire, and the most remarkable things of Nature and Art therein. pag. 1467.

¶ 3. Of the people of Indostan, their stature, colour, habit, dyet, women, language, learning, arts, riding, games, markets, armes, valour, Mahumetan Mesquits, burials, opinions, and rites of Religion. pag. 1473.

¶ 4. Of the Gentiles Sects, Opinions, Rites; Priests, and other obseruations of Religion and State in those parts. pag. 1478.

Sultan Achmet Chan, Sonne unto the Sultan Mehemet Chan most inuincible, his Letter to King Iames. H. pag. 1482.

CHAP. VII.

The trauels of Lewis Bartheima or Vertoman into Egypt, Syria, Arabia, Persia, and India, heretofore published in English by R. Eden, and here corrected according to Ramusios Copie, and contracted. pag. 1483.

¶ 1. His trauell thorow the Desart of Medina and Mecha, and their profane holies. ibid.

¶ 2. Two Vnicornes. His passage by the Red Sea to Aden. Imprisonment and counterfeiting himselfe mad. Escape and visiting other parts of Arabia, Zeila, Cambaia. pag. 1489.

CHAP. VIII.

Collections of Asia, especially of Arabia, gathered out of an Arabike booke of Geographie, written by a Nubian, foure hundred and seuentie yeeres agoe, and translated into Latin by Gabriel Sionita, and Iohannes Hesronita, Maronites of Mount Libanus, the one Professor, and both Interpreters to the French King, of the Arabike and Syriake Tongues. pag. 1495.

CHAP. IX.

Collections of diuers Mahumetan Authors in their Arabicke Bookes, by the said Maronites, Gabriel and Iohn, touching the most remarkable things in the East, especially of the Mosleman superstitions and rites, and the places of chiefe note. pag. 1499.

CHAP. X.

Don Duart de Meneses the Vice-roy, his tractate of the Portugall Indies, containing the Lawes, Customes, Reuenues, Expenses, and other matters remarkable therein: here abbreviated. H. pag. 1536.

¶ 1. A Register or Collection of the Vses, Lawes, and Customes of the Canarins, or Inhabitants of this Island of Goa, and of the Towns thereunto belonging. ibid.

¶ 2. A Copie of the Order that the Vice-roy of the Estate of India shall hold in matters of Iustice, as also of the other Magistrates, in the diuers places holden by the Portugals in India. pag. 1512.

¶ 3. The Receipt of the Reuenues of the State of India: as also the Expenses publike therein. pag. 1521.

The inclosing of all the Rent of the Estate of India. pag. 1523.

A Copie of all the ordinarie expences that are made in the Citie of Goa, at His Maiesties charges. ibid.

Officers belonging to Iustice. pag. 1524.

Officers belonging to the Citie of Goa; her Fortresses and Pases, or Ports. pag. 1525.

The Galleon of the Trafficke and Voyage of Ceilaon, hath the Officers and Men as followeth. pag. 1527.

Parishes within the Citie of Goa. pag. 1528.

Parishes that are in this Island of Goa. ibid.

Officers belonging to the H. Inquisition. p. 1531.

Expences made with the Fortresses of Sofala, Mosambique, and Sena. ibid.

Ordinarie expences that are made in the Fortresse of Ormus. pag. 1532.

CHAP. XI.

A Letter from Don Garcia Silua Figueroa Ambassadour from Philip the third King of Spaine to the Persian, written at Spahan, or Hispahan, Anno 1619. to the Marquesse of Bedmar, touching matters of Persia. pag. 1533.

CHAP. XII.

Collections out of the Voyage and Historie of Friar Ioão dos Sanctos his Æthiopia Orientalis,

of the first Part.

lis, & Varia Historia, and out of other Portugals, for the better knowledge of Africa and the Christianitie therein. pag. 1535.

¶ 1. The Authors Voyage and Acts in those parts; Sea accidents; Moorish fooleries, English Ships: Of Sofala, the Fort; the Fruits and Plants of those parts. ibid.

¶ 2. Of Quiteue King of that Countrey, with the strange customes obserued in those parts, in Court, Citie, and Countrey. pag. 1537.

¶ 3. Of the Riuer Cuama, and the adiacent Countrey; the Beasts, Fowles, Fishes of those parts: the Hills of Lupata; of the Mongas, Rufumba, Sena, Tete, Massapa, and of the Kingdome of Manamotapa; Also of Ophir, and of the Golden Mines of Fura. pag. 1543.

¶ 4. Of the Manamopata his customes and of his Vassalls; and of the adioyning Kingdomes, (wherein other Authours haue erred) of Mosambique, Quiloa, Mombaza, Melinde, Magadoxo: of the Mombos, and Zimbabue, cruelties. Of Quilimane, the Islands on the Coast; the Macuas, and other African obseruations. pag. 1550.

¶ 5. The Iesuites gleanings in Africa to Christian Religion, gathered out of their owne writings. pag. 1556.

¶ 6. Relations of the Christianitie of Africa, and especially of Barbarie, and Algier; written by I. B. Gramaye. pag. 1561.

CHAP. XIII.

Larger obseruations of Master Richard Iobson, touching the Riuer Gambia, with the people, merchandise, and creatures of those parts, then in his Iournall is containd, gathered out of his larger Notes. pag. 1567.

¶ 1. Of the Riuer Gambia, the raines, and land-floods, the cause and time of their contagion: the Beasts, Fish, and Fowle of the Riuer; of the Portugals, Mandingos, and Fulbies there liuing. ibid.

¶ 2. Of their Marybucks, and religion: Merchandize; Fiddlers, Instruments, Trades, Husbandrie, with a further Historie of the Creatures in those parts. pag. 1572.

CHAP. XIII.

A Letter containning the admirable escape and glorious victorie of Nicholas Roberts Master, Tristram Steuens his Mate, and Robert Sucksbich Boatson of a ship of Douer, taken by Algier Pyrates: which three men being carried as slanes by eleuen Turkes in the same ship, partly killed, and partly sold them all, and returned free and safe home into England. pag. 1577.

CHAP. XV.

The Grand Signiors Seraglio: written by Master Robert Withers. pag. 1580.

¶ 1. Description of the place, partitions, and manifold conueniences. ibid.

¶ 2. Of the Diuan Dayes, Iudges, Session, Indicature, Dyet, Accounts. pag. 1583.

¶ 3. Of Ambassadors entertainment and audience. pag. 1585.

¶ 4. Of the persons which line in the Seraglio: and first of the Women and Virgins, their manner of life there. pag. 1586.

¶ 5. Of the Agiamoglans, how taken, distributed and employed. pag. 1590.

¶ 6. The choise Agiamoglans, seuere discipline and education in foure Subordinate Schooles, and their after-advancements. p. 1592.

¶ 7. Of inferior persons, as Buffons, Mutes, Musicians; of white Eunuchs, and of the grand Officers of the Seraglio. pag. 1595.

¶ 8. Of blacke Eunuchs and Black-Moore Girles and Women: Of Physitians, and of the Kings Children. pag. 1597.

¶ 9. Provisions of Victuals, Cookes, Kitchen, Dyet of the King, Queene, and others, and of their manner of Seruice. pag. 1599.

¶ 10. Apparell, Bedding, Sicknesse, Hospitals. Inheritance; Kings expences, Recreations, receiuing Petitions, Stables; Ramazan Solemnities. pag. 1602.

¶ 11. The old Seraglio, and Womens liues therein: Of their marriages and children, slaue-selling, Witnesses. pag. 1605.

¶ 12. Of their religion, opinions, persons, times, places, and rites sacred. pag. 1607.

A Letter sent by Sultan Osman the late murdered Emperour, to His Maiestie, by Hussein Chiaus. pag. 1612.

A Letter written by Halil Bashaw, chiefe Vizir and Generall in the Persian Expedition, at his returne, in April, 1618. to Sir Paul Pindar, Ambassador for His Maiestie. ibid.

CHAP. XVI.

Sundrie the personall Voyages performed by Iohn Sanderson of London Merchant, begun in October, 1584. ended in October, 1602. With

The Contents of the ninth Booke

With an historicall description of Constantinople. pag. 1614.

¶ 1. His first Voyage to Constantinople, and thence to Cairo, and to Tripoli. ibid.

¶ 2. His second Voyage to Constantinople, with other his Trauels. pag. 1618.

¶ 3. The third Voyage of Master Iohn Sanderson to Constantinople. pag. 1622.

¶ 4. A Discourse of the most notable things of the famous Citie Constantinople: both in ancient and late time. pag. 1624.

¶ 5. The Pilgrimage of Iohn Sanderson from Constantinople, to the Holy Land, and so to Tripolie in Syria, begun the fourteenth day of May, 1601. ended the fourteenth of August, with diuers Certificates and Letters. pag. 1629.

CHAP. XVII.

A Report of the Voyage of Master Henric Timberley from Cairo in Egypt, to Ierusalem, in fiftie dayes, 1601. pag. 1640.

CHAP. XVIII.

Two Letters of Master Iohn Nuberie, relating his third and last Voyage into the Easterne parts of the World: with three other Letters from Master Eldred, &c. concerning the same affaires; found amongst the Papers of Master William Hareborne, Her Maiesties Ambassadour to the Grand Signior at Constantinople, communicated to mee by Master Iohn Sanderson. pag. 1642.

Letters of Master Iohn Eldred and William Shales. pag. 1644.

In Bassara the two and twentieth of Ianna- rie, 1583.

pag. 1645.

Commands of the G. S. to the Cadilesquire of Egypt. ibid.

To the Beglerbie of Cairo. ibid.

To the Cadilesquire of Egypt. pag. 1646.

CHAP. XIX.

The Voyage of Francois Pyrard de Laual, to the East Indies (an English man being Pilot) and especially his obseruations of the Maldiuces, where being ship-wracked hee liued fve yeeres. Translated out of French, and abbreviated. pag. 1646.

¶ 2. Description of the Maldiuces, their thirteene Cantons, twelue thousand Iles, Sea-changes, strange Currents, Monsons, Maine-Inlets, blacke boyling Sea, Heate, Seasons, ciuilitie, and haire ceremoniousnesse. pag. 1648.

¶ 3. Their Cocos and other fruits and food, their Trades and trading, creatures profitable and hurtfull. Of Male the principall Iland. Their Houses, Candou, Languages, Apparell. pag. 1652.

¶ 4. Rites of Meate and Drinke, Bathing, superstitious obseruations: Diseases, Education of children. Fishing, Fashions, Lusts. pag. 1657.

¶ 5. Their gouernment described. The Iudges, Officers, Gentrie, Communalitie. The King his Palace, Guard, Nobilitie, Robes, Attire, Attendance, Exercises, Riches; slaine by the Bengalans. pag. 1661.

¶ 6. A larger discourse of their religion, manifold ceremonies, and absurd opinions. The Authors departure and returne. pag. 1667.

The Contents of the Chapters and Paragraphs in the tenth Booke of the first part of Purchas his.

PILGRIMS.

CHAP. I.

Briefe Collections of Voyages, chiefly of Spaniards and Portugals, taken out of Antonie Galuanos Book of the Discoveries of the world. pag. 1671.

CHAP. II.

The summe of a Letter of Nicholas Trigautius a Iesuite, touching his Voyage to India, and of the state of Christianitie in China and Iapan. A Letter also of Captaine R. Cocke, and Relations of Master Roberts wracke on the Coast of China in the Vnicorne. pag. 1693.

Extracts out of Trigautius his Martyrologe, or five Bookes of Christian Triumphs among the Iaponians, before mentioned. pag. 1694.

A Letter concerning later Occurrents in Iapon from Master R. Cocke to Captaine Saris, written at Firando in Iapon, the thirteenth of December 1622. pag. 1695.

A note of the Vnicornes company in China. pag. 1696.

CHAP. III.

Letter touching Iapon with the Gouvernement, Affaires and later Occurrents there; written to mee by Master Arthur Hatch Minister, lately returned thence. pag. 1696.

CHAP. IIII.

Extracts of Master Caesar Frederike his eightene yeeres Indian Observations. pag. 1702.

CHAP. V.

Gasparo Balbi his Voyage to Pegu, and observations there, gathered out of his owne Italian Relation. pag. 1722.

CHAP. VI.

The Voyage of Master Ralph Fitch, Merchant of London to Ormus, and so to Goa in the East India, to Cambaia, Ganges, Bengala; to Bacola, and Chonderi, to Pegu, to Iamahay in the Kingdome of Siam, and backe to Pegu, and from thence to Malacca, Zeilan, Cochin, and all the Coast of the East India: begun in the yeere of our Lord 1583. and ended 1591. pag. 1730.

CHAP. VII.

Indian Observations gathered out of the Letters of Nicholas Pimenta, Visiter of the Iesuites in India, and of many others of that Societie, written from diuers Indian Regions; principally relating the Countries and accidents of the Coast of Coromandel, and of Pegu. pag. 1744.

CHAP. VIII.

John Huighen van Linschoten his Voyage to Goa, and observations of the East Indies, abbreviated. pag. 1750.

Of the Towne and Iland of Goa, chiefe Citie of India. pag. 1751.

CHAP. IX.

Relation of Ormuz, and of the late taking thereof by the English and Persians. pag. 1785.

¶ 1. A Relation of the Kings of Ormuz, and of the foundation of the Citie of Ormuz, taken out of a Chronicle which a King of the same Kingdome composed, called Pacaturunxa, written in Arabicke. H. ibid.

¶ 2. Relation of Ormuz businesse by Master W. Pinder. pag. 1787.

¶ 3. Part of a Letter written to Sir Iohn Wostenholme by T. Wilson Chyrurgion; containing many particulars of the Ormus warre, and cause thereof; as also of the most most admirable taking of a great Portugall Ship well manned, by a small English Pinnesse. pag. 1790.

¶ 4. Relation of the late Ormuz businesse, gathered out of the Iournall of Master Edward Monoxe the Agent of the East Indian Merchants trading in Persia. pag. 1793.

A Certificate from the Portugals, of their kind usage, wherein was performed more then was promised them. p. 1803.

The Vice-Admirall his second Letter. ibid.

A Certificate made by sundrie Portugals, how the Treasure, Jewels, &c. belonging to the King and his Vizeer of Ormus, which were secretly conveyed out of the Castle of Ormus by the Persians. ibid.

A Letter written from Ruy Frera Dandrada, and sent aboard the Ionas, by one of his Captaines, named Alfonso Borgea, at our first arriuall neare the Castle of Keshme. pag. 1804.

Another Certificate of the kinde usage of the Portugals. ibid.

A third Certificate. ibid.

CHAP. X.

A briefe memoriall of the trauels of the Right honorable

The Contents of the tenth Booke

honorable Sir Robert Sherley Knight, Count and Knight of the Sacred Empire, now Ambassadour from the Persian King to His Maiestie and other Christian Kings.

pag. 1805.

CHAP. XI.

The Epitaphs on the Tombe of Iacob Almanfor the Saracenicall Emperour, under whose reigne Spaine was subdued to the Moores, written by Mahomet Algazeli a learned Arabian, and grauen in the foure stones of his sumptuous Monument.

pag. 1809.

CHAP. XII.

Master Thomas Coryates Trauels to, and Obseruations in Constantinople, and other places in the way thither, and his Iourney thence to Aleppo, Damasco and Ierusalem.

pag. 1811.

Master Coryates Oration. Purus, putus Coriatus, Quintessence of Coryat.

pag. 1817.

Master Coryats Constantinopolitan Obseruations abridged.

pag. 1820.

CHAP. XIII.

Relations of the Trauels of W. Lithgow Scot in Candie, Greece, the Holy Land, Egypt, and other parts of the East.

pag. 1831.

CHAP. XIII.

Later Intelligence out of Turkie, touching the resignation of Mustapha, and the aduancing of Amurath a yonger brother of the lately murdered Osman; with other later occurrents.

p. 1848.

CHAP. XV.

Briefe Extracts of a Iournall of Arnold Brown his Indian Voyage, sayling diuers times and courses in five yeeres space to Bantam, Patanie, Iapan, the Manillas, Macau, and the coast of China, with other Indian Ports.

pag. 1851.

CHAP. XVI.

The Dutch late proceedings at Amboyna in cruell torturing and executing of diuers English men; with other their like Acts to the Natives in Banda; published lately by the English-East-Indian Societie; here much abbreviated.

p. 1853.

CHAP. XVII.

A true Description of the Bay Todos los Santos in Brasil, and taking the Towne Salvador by the Admirall Master Iacob Wilkins, 1624.

pag. 1859.

Maps and Peeces cut in Brasse or VVood in the former ten Bookes.

Æ Neas his nauigation. p. 71.	Germanie	p. 1244
Africa. p. 768	Guinea	p. 1558
Alexanders expedition. p. 85	Hungarie	p. 1355
Alphabets and hieroglyphicals cut in many pieces, Lib. 1. cap. 17.	Japonian Charter	p. 357
Map of Asia p. 1188	Map of Iapan	p. 413
Asia minor p. 1192	Italye	p. 1235
Barbary, Egypt, and Carthage 817	Great Mogols Seale	591, 592
Candie and Mediter. Ilands 1384	Great Mogol, &c. pictured	1474
Ceilan Insula p. 712	Kingdome of Morocco	p. 768
Cyprus p. 1221	King of Moyelas Letter	p. 337
Historicall Columne at Constanti- nople p. 1285	S. Pauls Peregrination	p. 57
East Indian writing & seales 343, 351, 352.	Paradise	p. 1436
Sir Tho. Roes Map of East In- dia p. 579	Israelites Peregrination in the De- sarts	p. 24, 1378
Ilands of the East Indies p. 700	Persia	p. 732
Hondius his Map of East In- dia p. 732	Roman Empire	p. 74
Egypt p. 831	Sicilia	p. 1220
Egyptian Pyramides and Colof- sus p. 908, 909	Spaine	p. 1231
Egyptian Hieroglyphicks p. 911	Terra Sancta	p. 1204
Europe p. 1369	Transylvania	p. 1363
The Kingdome of Fez p. 781	Great Turkes Seale and Pa- tent	p. 344
France p. 1362	Turkish Empire	p. 1288
	Turkish Woman pictur.	p. 1298
	Map of the World	p. 65
	Christian World	p. 115
	Zebra described in picture	p. 984

A Table of the other Cuts and Maps you shall finde after the Contents of the second Part.

C

Maps and Records of the District of Columbia

1870

Published by the District of Columbia
Department of the Interior
Washington, D.C.

Price, 50 Cents

THE VOYAGES AND PEREGRINATIONS
MADE BY ANTIENT KINGS, PATRIARKES, APOSTLES, PHILOSO-PHERS, AND OTHERS, TO AND THOROW THE REMOTER PARTS of the knowne World:

Enquiries also of Languages and Religions, especially of the moderne diuersified Professions of CHRISTIANITIE.

THE FIRST BOOKE.

CHAP. I.

A large Treatise of King SALOMONS Nauie sent from Eziongeber to Ophir: Wherein, besides the Typicall Mysteries briefly vnuailed, and many Morall Speculations obserued; the voyage is largely discussed out of Diuine, Ecclesiasticall and Humane Testimonies: Intended as an historicall Preface to the Histories following.

Intending to present the World to the World in the most certaine view, I thought a world of Authors fitter for that purpose, then any One Author writing of the World: whose discourse might haply bee more euen, facile, methodicall, and contracted to a more compendious forme; but could not auoid to be dispendious (if I may so speake) in the matter, and to suspend the Readers iudgement for the authori-tie. Oculus testis unus præstat auritis decem. I had Plaut.
rather heare the meanest of Vlysses his followers relating his wanderings, then wander from the certaintie with Homer after all his readings and coniectures. Lo here then 60 (after my Pilgrimage of the former Nature, for such as better like that course) in open Theatre presented a Shew of Discoveries on an English Stage, wherein the World is both the Spectacle and Spectator; the Actors are the Authors themselves, each presensing

Terent.

ting his owne actions and passions in that kind, kindly (in generous and genuine History) acting their acts; not affectedly straining, or scenic-all-ly playing their part; the Arts indeed of the Poet, Maker, or Composer, aiming at delight more then truth (Populo vt placerent, quas fecisset Fabulas) seeking to please the vulgar with fabulous wonders, and wonder-foole fables.

And for a Prologue, behold Salomons Ophirian Nauigation, that Worthy of Men, being most worthy to bee Our Choragus, whose ayme is in this long Worke to fetch from Ophir Materialls for the Temples structure, and to edifie Christs Church, with more full and euident knowledge of Gods Workes in the World, both of Creati- 10 on and Providence, then any one Naturall or Humane Historian, yea (absit inuidia verbo) then all hitherto in this (perhaps in any) course haue done. I compare not with Aristotle, Plinie, and others in philosophicall and learned speculation of Reason, but in euident demonstration of Sense, and herein (not to vs Lord, not to vs, but to thy Name be giuen the glory) it exceedeth not modesty to speake thus much in behalfe of this cloud of witnesses which we bring, testifying what they haue seen, that these exceed the former in certainty (relating what they haue scene) and in fulnesse (by aduantage of New Worlds found in, and besides the World knowne to them) no lesse then they are exceeded in Anti-quitie and learning.

Prov. 30. 1.
2. King. 6. 5.

Gen. 24. 2.
Gen. 30. 11.

* See M. Sel'en
Synag. 1. De D.
Syrus.

For mee, I say with Agur, surely I am more foolish then any man, and haue not the vnderstanding of a man in mee; Alas Master (I may proclaime to each Reader) all is borrowed: I neuer trauelled out of this Kingdome (ingenuously I confesse, it is the totall summe of all my Trauell-readings) the Centre of the Worlds good things, and Heart of her happinesse; and yet (yea thereby) haue, as thou seest, conceiued (where Dinahs gadding gained onely losse) and trauelled of a Gad, a Troup of Trauellers; So said Leah, A troupe commeth, and shee called his name Gad. And seeing we haue stumbled on that Word, let it be ominous, so others read it Foelicitur, Bagad, being by the Hebrewes resolved into * Ba Mazal tob, that is; Good fortune commeth. I am not Leah, I take no such authority 30 on mee, but when shee hath left bearing (when better leisures, quicker wits, sounder health, profounder learning, and all abler meanes looke on) let not Jacobs Bed, for the propagation and edification of the Church, be enuid to Zilpah, Leahs mayd; And let this my Seruice in conceiuing and nursing up this Gad be accepted of all Jacobs Friends. And that it might bee accepted, I haue begun (Dimidium facti qui bene cepit habet) with the most acceptable Voyages mentioned in the Old and New Testaments; the one a Type of the other; those of Solomon to Ophir, and of the Apostles about the World.

Matth. 6. 29.

Apoc. 3.

Apoc. 21. 30, 31, 18, 22, 23.

Ac. 27.

Salomon was first in time, and shall bee first here; the first in all things which vsual- 40 ly are accounted first, Royaltie, Sanctitie, Wisdome, Wealth, Magnificence, Munificence, Politie, Exploits, Renowme: Salomon in all his glory, is prouerbiall, and He first in these by the first and greatest of testimonies; the particulars of Salomons voyage are recorded in the first, best, and more then humane Histories; Yea the things recorded, are first indeed, before other things, yea before and greater then themselves, and that which the First and Last hath said, is true of them all in typicall relation, A greater then Salomon is here. Let Salomon then, as elsewhere, so here also haue the preeminence; let Salomons name as the Character of peace and happinesse, boad holy, happy, and peaceable successe to this Work; and let Thy Name, O thou Greater then Salomon, grant protection, assistance, & some part of Salomons wisdome and prosperity to our Ophirian voyage, that 50 we may buy of thee Gold tried in the fire to make vs rich in grace, so to prepare vs to that holy Ierusalem, descending out of Heauen from God, having the Glory of God; a Citie of pure Gold like vnto cleere glasse, where the Lord God Almighty and the Lambe are the Temple, and the Glory of God doth lighten it, and the Lambe is the light thereof. Be thou, O Christ, in this our Nauigation both Load-starre and Sunne, for direction of our course, and knowledge of our true height and latitude: Let our Sayles hoisted up in thy Name, be filled with inspiration of thy Spirit, and aspiration of thy fauour, till they arriue in the Fair-hauens of humane Pleasure and Profit, thy Churches seruice and 60 edifying, Diuine acceptance and glory. Amen, O Amen.

O Salomon the holy Scriptures haue thus recorded. 1. Kings 9. 26, 27, 28. And King Solomon made a Name of Ships in Ezion Geber, which is beside Eloth, on the shoare of the Red Sea in the Land of Edom. And Hiram sent in the Name his seruants, Shipmen that had knowledge of the Sea with the 60 seruants servants of Solomon. And they came to Ophir and fet from thence Gold 250 Talents, and brought it to King Solomon. And Cap. 10. 11. The Naue also of Hiram, that brought Gold from Ophir brought in from Ophir great plenty of Almug trees and precious stones; 12. And the King made of the Almug trees, Pillars for the house of the Lord, &c. for the Kings House; Harps also and Psalteries for Singers: there came no such Almug Trees, nor were seene vnto this day. 13. Now the weight of Gold that came to Solomon in one yeere was 666. Talents of Gold. 15. Besides that he had of the Merchant-men, and of the trafficke of the Spice-Merchants, and of all the Kings of Arabia, and of the Gouernours of the Countrey. V. 21. And all King Solomons drinking Vessells were of Gold, and all the Vessells of the House of the Forrest of Lebanon were of pure Gold: none were of Siluer, it was nothing accounted of in the dayes of Solomon. For the Kings Ships (the cause is added, 2. Chro. 9. 21.) went to Tarshish with the servants of Hiram: euery three yeeres once came the Ships of Tarshish, bringing Gold and Siluer; Iuory, and Apes, and Peacockes. 22. And King Solomon passed all the Kings of the Earth in Riches and Wisdome. 26. And hee reigned ouer all the Kings, from the Riner, euen vnto the Land of the Philistines, and to the border of Egypt. 27. And the King made Siluer in Ierusalem as Stones, and Cedar Trees made hee as the Sycomore Trees, that are in the Low Plaines in abundance.

§. I.

20 The Allegoricall and Anagogicall sense or application of SOLOMONS Ophirian Navigation.

His is an extract of Solomons Story, so much as concernes our present purpose, the authoritie whereof is Sacred, a Diuine, infallible, inuiolable, and vndenyable veritie; the fitter ground for many high and worthy consequences hereafter to be deliuered. I shall here leaue to the Diuinitie Schooles, in more leisurely contemplation to behold the Allegoricall sense (shall I say, or application?) wherein Solomon seemes to signifie Christ, his Nauy the Church, (long before liuely represented in that first of Ships, the Ark of Noah) which in the Sea of this variable World seekes for the golden Treasures of Wildome and Knowledge, with (that plentiful riches) the rich plentie of good Workes. The Seruants of Hiram, the Doctors 30 chosen out of the Gentiles, with the learned Christian Iewes (the seruants of Solomon) imployed ioyntly in this Ophirian Discouery, thence bring the rich materials (as the Israelites the Egyptian spoyle for the Tabernacle, so these) for building and adorning the Temple (the true sense of Scripture) after long absence by a troublesome Nauigation (in the search of Authors Diuine, Ecclesiasticall and Humane, an Ocean of toyle) from their homes. For the naturall man, that abides at home in himselfe, and hath not trauelled from his owne Wisdome and Selfe-conceit, knowes not the things of God, nor the great Mysteries of Godlinesse; he must leaue the Land, his Earthly Wisdome (Terraq; vrbesq; recedant) and launch into the deepe, there hauing his sayles filled with the winde, the illumination of that Spirit, which leads into all truth; the Scriptures being their Card, the faithful heart the Load-stone, Christ himselfe the Load-starre and Sunne of Truth, as before is intimated.
40 Thus shall the Temple, and Church of God be edified, enriched, adorned, after wee haue arrived at Ophir, and haue leene our owne weaknesse, and taken paines in myning Gods Treasures, and vndermining our owne hearts, searching and trying our owne and Gods wayes; casting off, and purging from vs all superfluous Earth, and detaining the Gold and richer Mettall, which wee may carry and present, as the Talents gained by our Talents, in the best improuement of Gods graces, when wee shall returne to our Solomon, the Iudge of quicke and dead, after our Nauigation and earthly Pilgrimage ended. But alas how many make shipwracke of Faith by the way, and either are split on the Rockes of enormous crying Sinnes, or sinke in the smaller innumerable sands of habituall Lusts, couered with the shallowes (meere shadowes) of ciuill Righteousnesse.

Or if you had rather adioyne to the Allegory, the Anagogicall sense and vse; this History 50 will appeare also a Mystery and Type of Eternitie. Euery Christian man is a ship, a weake vessel, in this Naue of Solomon, and dwelling in a mortall body, is within lesse then foure inches, then one inch of death. From Ierusalem the Word and Law of our Solomon first proceeded, by preaching of Solomons and Hirams seruants; the Pastors and Elect vessels to carry his Name, gathered out of Iewes and Gentiles, which guide these Ships through a stormy Sea, beginning at the Red Sea, Christs bloody Crosse, which yeelded Water and Bloud, till they arrive at Ophir, the communion of Saints in the holy Catholike Church. Thither by the water of Baptisme first, and by the waters of Repentance, drawn out of our hearts and eyes in manifold Mortifications after; (the feare of God beginning this Wisdome, the windy lusts of concupiscence, and vnstable waues of the world in vaine assailing) they attaine in the certaintie of Faith and assurance: where seeking 60 for Knowledge as for Siluer, and searching for her as for hidden Treasures, they doe as it were labour in the Mynes for Gold, which they further purifie by experimentall practise and studie of good Workes: yet not in such perfection, but that to this foundation, Gold, Siluer, precious Stones, some Almug trees are added for the Temples Pillars, oftentimes also of our owne, Hay and Stubble, as worle and more combustible matter ioyned; the Iuory, being a dead Bone may serue for a Whitak. descrip. 9.5.

Hieron. Ep. 84. August. de doc. Christi. l. 1. c. 40. Basil. hom. 24. de legend. lib. Gen. til. Greg. Nyssens in vit. Moys. 1. Co. 2. 14. 1. T. 3. 16.

Col. 2. Prou. 2.

1. Co. 3. 12.

secular Throne and worldly wife; but here death is dead; the Apes and Peacocks lively expresse Hypocrisie and worldly pompe, which in the best of Saints vially leaue some tincture in their voyage for Heauen. In the returne to Solomon, these shall be burnt (as those were by Nabuzardan) but he himselfe shall be saved; and the former admitted by that Prince of Peace, the Heauenly Solomon to the building of that Temple in the new Ierusalem, for charitie neuer falleth away. This is that holy Citie figured by that of Palestina, where all is brought to Solomon, that God may bee all in all, as the Alpha which set them forth, so the Omega, who hath made all things for himselfe, for whose will and glories sake, all things are and were created: And the Kings of the Earth bring their glory and honour vnto this Citie. Not that hee needs any thing, but that wee need the same, who in seeing him as hee is, doe all partake of his glory. Happy are thy men (may more truly be said of this Solomons seruants) happy are these thy seruants which may stand in thy presence and heare thy wisdom: which may enioy eternitie, signified by Gold, which alone of mettalls neither fire, nor rust, nor age consumeth (and this Citie is pure Gold) and that Inheritance of the Saints in light, figured by Silver, the most lightsome and delightfome of mettalls to the eye. As for precious Stones, the foundations of the Wall of the Citie are garnished with all manner of them. And touching the Almuggim Trees, whereof Solomon made Pillars for the Temple and Psalteries, euery Tree which here beareth good fruit, and euery one that ouercometh, will this Solomon there make a Pillar in the Temple of his God, and hee shall goe no more out. And they shall serue him Day and Night in his Temple, and hee that sitteth on the Throne shall dwell among them. These haue also the Harps of God, And they sing the Song of Moses, and the Song of the Lamb, nay these are the Psalteries and Harpes, which filled with all fulnesse of God, alway resound praises & thanks vnto the King of Saints, and with euerlasting harmony in that Angellicall Quire, are tuned with Alleluiah, and Te Deum, and Holy, holy, holy, in fulnesse of ioy at his right hand, and pleasures for euermore. Thus in diuers respects are they both the Citie, and Temple, and Kings and Priests, and Instruments, and all these, and none of these: For I saw no Temple therein, saith that Seer, for the Lord God Almighty, and the Lambe are the Temple of it. Euen God himselfe shall bee with them, and God shall bee all in all: and as hee is incomprehensible, so Eye hath not scene, nor eare hath heard, nor can the heart of man conceiue what God hath prepared for them that loue him: Cœli cœlorum Domino, terram dedit Filijs Hominem. And vnmeet is it for me to attempt so high climbing.

Not so the Tropologie or Morall vse, not so the History, for our learning wherein the same is written. And although the History in Nature should precede, yet because wee intend the Tropologicall sense or application of this History, as a kind of Preface or preamble to the many Histories ensuing, wee haue here giuen it the first place.

Q. II.

The Tropologicall vse of the Story; and of the lawfulnessse of Discoveries and Negotiation by Sea.

Philo de vita
Mol. l. i. Aug.
quest. 39. in Exod deo iubenti ministerium præbuerunt.
Tho. 2. 2. q. 104.
ar. 4.

* Aug. de Ciu.
D. l. 4. c. 4.
* Cyp. Ep. ad
Donat. l. 2. Ep. 2.
Ac. 17. 26.

Herein therefore Solomon may become a wise guide vnto vs, and first by his example teach vs the lawfulnessse of Nauigation to remote Regions. His particular Dominion is Palestina, his subiect Prouinces added, extend not beyond Egypt and the Riuer Euphrates, as is before deliuered. But God which had enlarged Solomons heart with Wisdom, did not enlarge it to iniustice by an ouerlarge conscience: and hee which renounced the price of a Dog and a Whore in his offerings, would not permit the Temple, which sanctifieth the offerings, to bee built and adorned with robbery and spoyle. It remains then that Solomon had a right, not extraordinary as the Israelites to spoyle the Egyptians, by Diuine especiall Precept; but such a right wherein Hiram was interested also. The Ebreaues might both at Gods command, who is Lord of all, and in Equitie demand wages of the Egyptians for so long and tedious seruice; which had not Diuine Precept and power interposed, the same tyranny which had imposed the one, would haue denied the other. But what had the Ophirians wronged Solomon, of whom and whose Countrey they had not heard, that thus by a numerous and strong Fleet hee should enter on their Coasts? We must not thinke godly Solomon to be Alexanders predecessor, whom the Poet calls Terrarum fatale malum & fidus iniquum Gentibus: whom the Pirat accused as the greater, finding no other difference betwixt them, but a smal Ship and a great Fleet. Remota iustitia, quid sunt regna saith Augustine, nisi magna latrocinia, quia & ipsa latrocinia quid sunt, nisi parua regna? And before him Cyprian, * Homicidium cum admittunt singuli, crimen est, vritus vocatur cum publice geritur. Impunitatem acquirit sauitia magnitudo. Surely Solomons right was his being a Man, which as a wise & a mightie King of Men, hee might the better exercise and execute. For howsoeuer God hath giuen to euery man & to euery Nation, a kind of proprietie in their peculiar possessions; yet there is an vniuersall tenure in the Vniuerse, by the Lawes of God and Nature, still remaining to each man as hee is a Man, and κοινωτομία, as the common or Royall right of the King or State is neither confounded nor taken away by the priuate proprietie of the Subiect.

True

True it is that God, which hath made of one blood all Nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth, and hath determined the times appointed, hath also determined the bounds of their habitation. But not so straitly of Negotiation. In Habitation proprietie is requisite, that every man may sit under his owne Vine, and under his owne Fig-tree, and drinke the waters out of his owne Cisterne and running waters out of his owne Well, and that they bee onely his owne, and not the strangers with him. But hee that hath made all Nations of one blood, would still they should bee as fellow members one of another; (a shadow of which was in the Law, permitting to eat in the neighbours Vineyard, but not to carry forth;) and that there should still remaine mutuall Necessitie, the Mother of mutuall Commerce, that one should not bee hungry, and another drunken, but the superfluitie of one Countrey, should supply the necessities of another, in exchange for such things, which are here also necessary, and there abound; that thus the whole World might bee as one Body of mankind, the Nations as so many members, the superabundance in each, concocted, distributed, retained or expelled by merchandising (as by the Naturall bodily Offices and Faculties in nourishment) whereby not without mutuall gaine One may releue others Wants. Non omnia possumus omnes may bee said of Arts; Nec vero terra ferre omnes omnia possunt, may bee added of Regions, each Countrey hauing her owne, both Artificiall and Naturall Commodities, whereby to enrich themselves with enriching of others. Thus in old times, Tyrus chief Staple of the worlds Merchandise, and consequently chiefe Store-houle of the worlds Treasures; (see the same elegantly & particularly disciphered by the holy Ghost) as it receiued from all parts, so when her wares went forth out of the Seas, shee filled many people, and did enrich the Kings of the Earth, with the multitude of her riches and merchandise.

Prou. 5. 15, 17.

Deut. 23.

Virg.

Ex. 27. &amp; 28.

Ex. 27. 33.

And because no one National Law could prescribe in that wherein all are interestted, God himself is the Law giuer, and hath written by the stile of Nature this Law in the hearts of men, called in regard of the efficient, the Law of Nature, in respect of the object, the Law of Nations, whereto all Men, Nations, Commonwealths, Kingdomes and Kings are subiect. And as he hath written this Equity in mans heart by Nature, so hath he therfore encompassed the Earth with the Sea, adding so many inlets, bayes, hauens and other naturall inducements and opportunities to inuite men to this mutuall commerce. Therefore hath he also diuersified the Windes, which in their shifting quarrels conspire to humane trafficke. Therefore hath hee diuided the Earth with so many Riuer, and made the shoares conspicuous by Capes and promontories; yea, hath admitted the Sunne and Starres in their direction and assistance vnto this Generall Councell, wherein Nature within vs and without vs, by euerlasting Canons hath decreed Communitie of Trade the world thorow. And thus hath she taught them who had no other instructor, with dislike and disdain to admire at such immanity & inhumanity; Quod genus hoc hominum, quene hunc tam barbaram morem, Permittit patria? hospitio prohibemur arena! yea whereas by Nature the Earth was common Mother, and in equall community to be enioyed of all hers.

Virg. En.

Sunt autem priuata nulla natura. Cic.

Horat.

Nam propria telluris herum Natura nec illum,

Nec me, nec quenquam statuit: and howsoeuer this case is since altered in this element, lest the idle should liue on the sweate of others browes: yet the other and nobler elements still remaine in greatest part in their originall communitie, and cannot so fully bee appropriated to priuate possession, since the supposed Golden age is vanished, and this Iron (or golden in another sense) hath succeeded. Yea, then also the house, wife, children, and such things as are wasted or growne worse in the vse, as meate, drinke, apparell, were appropriate and priuate chattels to the possessor, howsoeuer things immoueable continued the freehold of euery man in the common tenure of common humanity, as still in the life of Brasilians and other Sauages in the following relations is to be seene. By humane consent and diuine dispensation the Earth was diuided among the Sonnes of Noah.

Auenus.

Omnia verum vsurpantur erant Auenus.

Communemque prius cœlum lumina solis & aura.Cautus humum longo signauit limite messor.

Ov. Met. l. 1.

Ov. Met. l. 6.

Thus some things became publike, that is, proper to the Kingdome, State, or Nation: other things priuate, as each mans possession, and that also in differing degrees, as the Commons, and Champaine Countries with vs in their differing tenure from grounds inclosed, doe manifestly enough argue. But since that diuision of Languages and Lands; the Poet still proclaimes Natures right,

Quid prohibetis aquas? usus communis aquarum est.Nec solem proprium Natura nec Aera fecit,Nec tennes undas. In publica munera veni. and another:Cunctis undamque antramque patentem.

Virg. En. 7.

These so farre as they haue not by possession of other men before, or otherwise by their own Nature cannot be appropriated, are Natures Commons, which both Free-holders as Men, and Coppie-holders, as other liuing creatures, Beasts, Fishes, Fowles, and creeping things according to their seuerall kinds do communicate in. If any quarrell this poeticall Proofoe; I answer that they were Natures Secretaries in the cases of Reason, and the Common Law of Humanitie, which hauing not the Law, were a Law to themselves, and in like cases therefore produced as good euidence

Rom. 2.

Rom. 2.
Acts 17.
1. Cor. 15.
Tit. 2.

by the Planter of the Gospel, and Doctor of the Gentiles. And if we will surmount Reason, and appeale to diuine censure, what need we other testimonie then this of Salomon in his best times; and for his best act, imitated herein (though with vnlike successe) by godly Iehoshaphat? These things are also written for our learning to the ends of the World, that wise, magnanimous, fortunate, peaceable and godly Kings might propound this patterne to their industries. Yea, more then in Salomons time is this lawfull to Christian Kings, in regard that the Iewish Pale is downe, and the Church is Catholike, not appropriated to One people, or circumscribed in a circumscribed corner, or swaddled in a small Cradle, as in that infancie of the Circumcision; but open and common to the Communitie of Mankind, to which in this last Age no better meane is left then Nauigation and commerce; wherein though the most aime at gaine, yet God that can raise of stones children to Abraham, and made Dauids Conquests and Salomons Discoveries seruiceable to the Temple, can no lesse conuay the Gospel then other Wares into those parts, to whome hee hath giuen such rich attractiues in the East and West, perhaps that this negotiation might further another, in barter and exchange of richer treasures for their temporall.

He which brought the Northerne people being then Pagans, into the Roman Empire, to make them Lords of it and Subiects to him, can of Merchants allured with Gold, make, or at least send with them, Preachers of his Sonne. And if the Deuill hath sent the Moors with damnable Mahumetisme in their merchandizing quite thorow the East, to peruert so many Nations with thraldome of their states and persons, out of the frying panne of Pagani Rites, into the fire of Mahumetrie: Shall not God be good to Israel, and gracious to the ends of the earth, so long since giuen in inheritance to his Sonne?

§. III.

The Tropologicall or Morall vse enlarged and amplified; and a view taken of Mans diuersified Dominion in Microcosmicall, Cosmopoliticall, and that spirituall or heauenly right, ouer himselfe and all things, which the Christian hath in and by Christ.

Enerall Rules haue exceptions. Salomon was iust and wise, well knowing the difference of Ezion-Geber and Ophir, and that difference of Dominion which God (that made Man after his Image) hath giuen vs ouer the Creatures, diuersified both in the subiect and obiect. E Cælo descendit γυνὴ σαυτοῦ, was written in Adam by Creation, in Salomon by Reuelation, before Nature suggested that sentence to Chilo, or the Delphian Deuill (the Ape of Diuinitie) had caused it to be written in Golden Letters on the Frontispice of that Temple. To know a mans selfe aright is annexed to the knowledge of God (in whom wee live, mooue, and are, of whom and for whom are all things) not his essence, but his exprest Image thereof in his workes, of which, Man is in this World the principall; what hee hath receiued, what he hath lost, what he retaineth by Nature, and what he recouereth, and more then recouereth by grace, in and of that diuine resemblance. In the first state all men had a naturall right in common ouer the creatures. But the Deuill (the greatest Incloser) by sinne inclosed these Commons of Humanitie, and altered their tenure from Fee Simple, to meere Villanage: yet so (God in iustice remembring mercie) that some ruines remaine since the fall, not only in the faculties and substance of bodie and soule, but in the personall rights also ouer torpid, vegetatiue, and all vnreasonable creatures, continued to him by that Charter of Reason, which in so well ordered furniture, and so well furnished order as the name κοσμος and mundus import, could not but haue beene confounded, if both the immortall and spirituall part in himselfe, should not haue exercised dominion in some kind ouer the mortall and bodily; and if in the greater World, the reasonable should not haue disposed of the vnreasonable. As for the conformitie of mans will and actions to God and right, vsing of that right ouer the creature, to the sole glory of the Creator (to whom man is subordinate, as the creature to him) this was by the cracke of our earthen Vessell in Mans Fall lost, and as a more subtile and spirituall liquor, ranne out. Yet still remaine in this defaced Image some obscure lineaments, and some embers raked vp in the ashes of Mans consumption, which being by naturall diligence quickned, giue liuely expressions of God; and where supernaturall worke recouereth, are more then recouered, internally and inchoatiuely in the state of grace, externally also and eternally in that perfection of glorie.

Hence ariseth to a man a threesfold tenure, more and more excellent then any which Littleton hath related; a Microcosmicall in respect of our selues; a Cosmopoliticall in regard of the World; a Catholike, Spirituall, and Heauenly in relation to Christ the Head, his Bodie the Church, and that euerlasting inheritance; besides that (which is the last and least of all) in reference to Politick

Law

Man in his fall was robbed of supernaturall, wounded in his naturall gifts. Supernaturall we call those gifts which now are not obtained but by Gods free gift, and called the new man in righteousness & holinesse, Eph. 4. Naturall, those which remaine to and in decayed nature.

Four kinds of right and dominion.

Law and Societie. The first originall of all dominion and right is GOD, who is Lord of all, whole Image as is said is imprinted on and in Man, as otherwise so in this Lordship or right, which he hath first in and on himselfe Microcosmically in the members of his bodie, as the Regions of this Selfe-kingdome; where the continuall Court of Conscience, the large iurisdiction of Reason (without which a man is, as suspended from the power of himselfe, termed impos sui, besides himselfe, as in drunkenness and madness) the freedom of the Will (which is no longer will, then willing and cannot be constrained) the Naturall, and Vitall actions wrought within vs, (and yet without vs, without our owne knowledge or direction, and much lesse subiect to the correction of others) the Animall also in externall and internall senses, which cannot but exercise their faculties vpon their due objects: these all proclaime that the poorest Slaue is Lord by diuine grant, euen since the fall, of no lesse then this little-World; yea, while he obeyeth others, he commands himselfe to that obedience, in which selfe-commands is the true exercise of vertue or vice. This Inheritance and Dominion is so naturall that it cannot be alienated, without confiscation of the whole to the eternall giuer of whom he holds it. For euen in and by his eternall Law, is this made the rule of all righteousness, to doe as we would be done to, to loue our Neighbours as our selues; and if there were no power in and of our selues, there could neither be vertue nor vice in louing or hating our Neighbour: if no freedom of will and affections, no reward with God or man; if no gouernment of mans selfe reserved, Martyrs of all men were the most monstrous, which for obeying God rather then man, are the most honoured and admired. Once; subiection to God is absolute; to Princes as they are called Gods, and yet die like men, with reseruatiō; for conscience of Gods Commandement, where his reuealed will to the contrary frees not; and yet euen then we must by suffering doe the will of Superiours, thereby to shew our fidelitie in keeping Gods Promise, though with losse, of our Wils where we loue, and our liues where wee feare; shewing that we loue & feare him most of all, which yet were neither loue, nor feare, nor vertue, without this liberty of wil and power in our selues. He that ruleth his owne mind is better then hee that winneth a Citie. This is the greatest conquest, the greatest possession to be master of thy selfe. Nor is this power absolute to our selues ouer our selues: Wee are not our owne, wee are Gods who hath created vs; our Parents which haue procreated vs, our Countries which sustayneth vs, our Kings which maintayneth vs; our Neighbours in common humanity: to neglect a Mans fame or life, (much more prodigally to reiect them) is to robbe all these of their due in vs.

See my Microcosme or Pilgrimage.

Pro. 16. 33.

1 Cor. 6. 20. & 7. 23.

Lu. 11.

Ps. 2.

Christian Liberty.

Gal. 5.

1 Cor. 7.

The Pope denies his baptismall name, the other is re-baptised.

* As is the vse of some Parish churches after Lamas, &c.

Sen Epist. 9.

Ad viuendum multis rebus opus est, ad bene viuendum minimo sane & vix deo & despicere te fortunam.

But in Christians it were a deeper Sacriledge: they are not their owne, they are bought with a price (the greatest of prices, the blood of God) they are gained by conquest, Christ hauing bound the strong man and spoiled his goods; they are given by the Father for the Sonnes Inheritance, and in Baptisme haue by mutuall Covenant, giuen ouer themselves to his seruice. The freedom which Christ hath purchased for vs, doth yeeld Libertie, not Licentiousnesse; frees not from duties, to doe what wee lust, but makes vs haue a lust to doe our duties; sweetly inclining the Wil, and renewing the Minde to esteeme the Service of God, and of men for his sake, the greatest freedom. Hee then that is Christs, is a new Creature, to which, bondage or freedom and other worldly respects, are meere respects and circumstances. For hee that is bond, is the Lords freeman, and hee that is free, is the Lords Seruant. It is the Devils Sophistry, as to separate what hee hath ioyned, so to confound what hee hath distinguished; and it is obseruable, that the Pope and the Anabaptist, which are brethren in this Iniquity, haue first denied their Baptisme, the Seale of their Christianitie. For these many rights doe not subiect vs to many Masters, but subordinate our subiection in the beautie of order. Euen in Politicall or Ciuill right One may be Lord of the Fee; another of the Soile; a third of the way by ingresse, egress, regresse; a fourth, hath right in the same ground, in time of Faire or Market; the whole Vicinity in Commoning times; and others other wayes: all whose Rights, are subiect to the Right Royall, and Soueraigne.

And if in proprietie of strictest Nature, there may bee such communitie of subordinate rights without tumultuous crossing or pernicious confusion, how much more in things more spirituall, and more easily communicable? In which respect, the Philosophers, held themselves of themselves compleate; and (in whatsoever state) sapientem seipso contentum esse, not dependant (where he is properly a man) of other men of the World: not contracting him intra cutem suam (to vse Senecaes words) in this Microcosmicall happinesse, but needing the Cosmopoliticall helpe ad viuendum, not ad beate viuendum; to liue at least, howsoever to liue well, a sound heart and good conscience are sufficient; to the other food and raiment are necessary, to this ex te nascentia bona; the best societie is of vertuous thoughts which make men, as Scipio said, nunquam minus solos quam cum soli, nec minus otiosos quam cum otiosi sint, but vicious company (as the company of Vices) are the most horrid and desolate Wildernesse. No exile can deprive a man of this Citie, no Prison of this Societie, no Pillage of these Riches, no bondage of this Libertie.

In this fence Socrates said he was κοινοπολίτης all places his Countrie, all men his Countermen; in this, Bias, when he had lost all by fortune or warre, carried all his away with him: in this, Zeno, Laert. in Zen.

Zeno, maruelled at nothing neither in Nature, whose depths cannot be searched, nor in Fortune, whose possibilitie of most licentious effects must be the glaile to view our owne fortune, and to make that light by long premeditation, which others doe by long suffering: in this, Seneca, Colo tegitur qui non habet urnam; in this, another Seneca teacherh, Cum Orientem Occidentemq; illustraueris animo, cum tot animalia, tantam copiam rerum quas Natura beatissime fundit, aspexeris; emitte hanc Dei voce in omnia mea sunt; in this, Diogenes when Pirats exposed him to sale, professed his art was to rule men, and bad them sell him to Xeniades, for he needed a Master; from whom when his friends would haue redeemed him, he retuled, saying, Lions were Masters, and not seruants of them which fed them; in this, the Stoicks called their poorest Wiseman, rich, free, a King, in this sense Socrates with whom we began, said if his fortune would not sute and sert to him, he would make himselfe sutable to his fortune.

Laert. in Diog.

Tertul.

Ioh. 8.

Tertul. de Pat. saith of the Philosopher,
cæca viuunt.
Mat. 4.
Col. 1.
1. Thes. 5.

So long as life lasteth and humanitie continueth, they are vniuersall possessors of the Vniuerse, in which kind, Aristotle hath left more memorable Monuments of Contemplation, then Alexander of Conquest: Natures commons, the Sun, Stars, Heauens, Aire, are common, at least to their mindes in vtmost of miseries, and with internall plentie they supply all externall defects. In this Miscroscopical and Cosmopolitical Wealth, consisted all the Philosophers estate and reuenue, which they called Vertue and Moralitie: which made them Masters of themselves, and thereby of the World, the iust Circle of the Centre of Humanitie, for which it was created. These things (me thinkes) I see not without pittie, nor can resemble Them more fitly then to Horses of excellent courage; but hood-winked so, that some little transperence of light makes them more importunate to others mischietes, and their owne precipice (whence Philosophers haue been called Patriarchs of Heretikes) or elie like Mil-horses to compasse with this Worlds Wheele the immouable Centre of Natures corruption, to which they are subiect, no lesse then others which worke at a Querne, and stand still at their Hand-mill, by a larger circumference alway moouing, promouendo nihil, proceeding in true freedome nothing at all. If the Sonne make you free, you shall be free indeed. These, to make the noblest comparison may seeme starres, children of the night, which in their Moralitie gaue rayes of light that to the World made them eminent Ornaments, and may make many of vs ashamed, which in the Daies Sun-shine of the Gospell lono and liue darknesse, and like Owles, Bats, and wild Beasts, hide our selues studiously from the Sun, flie abroad and prey in the darke, fashioning our selues to this World, haue our cogitations and conuerlations darkened. CHRIST is neuertheless to all that haue eyes to see, the Sunne of Righteousnesse, by whome wee are by R-generation translated from the power of darknesse, and made the children of the day; that wee may know what wee worship, and whom we haue beloued, not so much talking as walking, euen in this bodily prison, these liberties of the Gospell, being truly (though yet in the imperfect growth of infancie) restored to our selues, to the World, yea to a more glorious state, whereof Nature could not so much as dreame; that whereas Man had lost both the former by suggestion of Euill, Deuil-Angels, Christ hath exalted farre aboue all Heauens visible, to supply these Thrones of Dominion, which those rebellious Thrones and Dominions lost. The euidence whereof we haue by Faith and Hope, our Head already hauing taken Liuerie and Seisin, and from thence liuing in vs, actuating and moouing vs by his Spirit, preparing vs in this fight of militant grace to that light of triumphant glorie.

Ph. 4. 11, 12, 13.
Disciplina, Scientia, Mysterium, Imperium est ars ista, Regina artium, quod ex verbis
Paulinis apparet
1. Cor. 2. 14.

Ioh. 15.
1. Cor. 15.

Luk. 22.
2. Cor. 6. 10.
1. Cor. 9. 4.
Verse 19.
1. Cor. 9. 26, 27.

Euen these first fruits are sweet and solid; I haue learned (saith our Apostle) in what soeuer state I am, therewith to be content. And I know both how to be abased, and I know how to abound, euerie where and in all things, I am instructed both to be full and to be hungrie, and to abound and haue need. I am able to all things through Christ strengthening me. This was the true riches not in the Chist, but in the heart, which therefore neither men nor Deuils could take away. And see his Degrees in this Schoole; first μαθησιν, I haue learned this Discipline, not in the Schoole of Nature but of Grace, for we are all taught of God: secondly, ᾤδα this Science, I know: whereas the wisest of Philosophers professed to know but this one thing that hee knew nothing: thirdly μεμύημαι, and without all controuersie this is a great mysterie of godlinesse, in which the naturall man is not initiated, hee knowes not the things of God, nor can know them, for they are foolishnesse to him; but the vntion of the Spirit only enters men in these mysteries (which the word signifieth) after which followes in due order, Πάρτα ἰσχύω. I am able to all things, to doe, to suffer all things, (and therefore Lord of himselfe and of the World) but ἐν τῷ ἐσθραμῆντι με χριστῷ in Christ enabling; without me saith Christ, ye can doe nothing; and not I, saith Paul but the grace of God in me: whereas those Philosophers hauing no stocke, but their owne, were poore Pedlers, not Royall Merchants, which would seeme to flie but wanted wings, yea life.

And as for this CHRISTIAN selfe and World, and Heauen-interest, it troubles not, intermeddles not, disturbs not Earthly possessions and powers, for the greatest is a servant of all, and hee is often poore in secular sense which makes many rich, as hauing nothing, euen then when he possesseth all things. Am I not free? haue we not power? saith Paul, Who when he was free from all, made himselfe the servant of all that he might gaine the more; not (as they) running quasi in incertum, and fighting quasi aerem verberans, but in this freedome and rule of the Spirit, beating downe and subduing the bodie of flesh and mortifying his earthly members, not seeking his owne but the good of others:

As

CHAP. I. S. 3. Christians grace and glorie. Vanity of other things compared.

As I please all men in all things (lawfull, for of other things he saith, if it should please men, I should not be the servant of Christ) not seeking mine owne profit, but of many, that they may be saved. The contempt of riches and greatnesse is the most compendious way to bee rich and great (the contempt I meane, which proceeds from content, not that of the vnthankfull prodigall, nor of the desperate begger) and he can neuer be poore that hath Christ, himselfe, and all things in present possession; God and Heauen in reuerſion. This, this is that which lifts vp his thoughts, and so fills them with the fulnesse of God, that he neglects these baser and truly inferior matters; and, that which others are vitiously, hee is (and it is his vertue to bee) courteous, voluptuous, ambitious, but the objects are righteousness, ioy in the Holy Ghost, and the Kingdome of Heauen.

This whole Globe of Earth and Waters, seemes great to them that are little, but to thoughts truly great and like to God, it holds its true place, price, quantitie, that is, the lowest, basest, least. Quid est potest videri magnum in rebus humanis, cui aternitas omnis, totiusque Mundi nota sit magnitudo? said the Orator. Hoc est pauculum, quod in tot gentes ferro & igni diuiditur. O quam ridiculi sunt mortalium termini? said Seneca. Scipio was ashamed of the Roman Empires point of this point: and another (hec est materia gloria nostra, hic tumultuatur humanum genus, &c.) is ashamed of this stirre for earth by foolish man, not considering quanta terrarum parte gaudeat, vel cum ad mensuram auaritie sua propagauerit, quam tandem portionem eius defunctus obtineat. Horum agrorum possessione te effers, qui nulla pars sunt terra? said Socrates to Alcibiades bragging of his lands, which yet in an vniuersall Map hee could not shew: whereas the Vniuerse it selfe is not large enough to bee the Mappe of the Christians inheritance, whose are the world, and life, and death, and things present and things to come, all are theirs; the third Heauen and Paradise of God their Patrimonie; the Angels their Gard (are they not all ministering spirits sent forth for their sakes that are heires of saluation?) the Devils, the World, Sinne, Death and Hell their triumph; Paul, Apollo, Cephas, all the Worthies, Elders, Senators & Patres Conscripti of the celestiall Ierusalem, those first-borne, whose names are written in Heauen, their Kindred, Brethren, fellow Citizens, fellow-members; Christ himselfe their head, their life; and God their portion, their exceeding great reward, their owne God amongst them, in a tenure like himselfe, eternall and vnſpeakably glorious. The degrees of this Scala Celi, are mentioned by Paul, b All are yours, and you Christs and Christ Gods, and this the descent of our right, God, Christ, all things; God gaue all to his Sonne, his Sonne with all to vs. Christ with his bodie is the Centre, and God the Circumference of this mysticall Corporation.

Rowze vp then thy thoughts, O my Soule, let these worldly Pismires toile about their Hills, and busie Bees about their Hiue; and let them in Courts and Suits, where Forum c litibus mugit insanum, contest about the shadow of the Asse. Shadowes; obscure & darke shadowes are Time or Eternitie, Motion of immutabilitie, Earth, or Heauen; and in a vaine shew or shadow walks he, disquieting himselfe in vaine, that heaps vp riches and knows not who shall gather them. All that I see is mine, said the Philosopher: Foolosopher! that I see not is mine, things seen are temporall, things not seen are eternall; my faith is the euidence of things not scene, my hope were not hope if scene, and my Charitie mind the things above, & out of sight, where Christ my loue (so Ignatius called him) sits at the right hand of the God of loue, which is loue. And yet if I affect shadowes, this Sunne yeelds so farre to my yet weaker and grosser bodily affects, and whiles it thus shines on my soule, by grace it makes the shadowes as moouing indices of time attend my bodie, this being the prerogative of Christian godlinesse, to haue the promises of this life, and that which is to come. Sure if I were in the starrie Heauen, with mortall eyes I could not thence in such distance be able to see this small Globe, whence I see so small the greatest starres, whence the light of the World and King of starres (so much neerer in place, greater in quantitie, more visible in qualitie) seemes as little, as the head that viewes it. And should this Earth which cannot there be scene, so Eclipse my lower Moon-like borrowed beames by interposition, that all should be shadow in a double night and twofold darknesse? No, No, I will get vp thither, euen farre above my selfe, farre above all Heauens, (say not in thine heart, who shall ascend into Heauen? that is to bring Christ from above) and thence with a spirituall and heavenly eye looke on earth, and not here and hence with a carnall and sensuall eye looke on Heauen (this makes the heavenly bodies little, the great light of Heauen eclipsed, not in it selfe, but to me by every interposed Moone, and the Heauen of Heauens wholly, inuisible) so shall it not annoy my sense; so shall not my sense of earth annoy my reason; so shall not my reason perplexe my faith, but I shall use it as not using, as not abusing it, to helpe and not to hinder my present Pilgrimage.

And thinke not that we speake impossibilities: of euery Christian it is said, conuersus est & confedere fecit in celestibus in Christo Iesu; and we are συνυμωτοι, planted together into the similitude of his resurrection by Baptisme, both in regard of the imputation and infusion. If this high Myſterie be hid, yet, as when thou hast viewed the Sunne, it makes thee vncapeable of seeing the earth, either at that time or for a space afterwards: so the soule that often by deuout contemplation is accustomed to view this Sunne, neither can then equally, nor cares much to fixe his eyes on earthly delights after, but hauing drunke of these heavenly waters, is not very thirstie of these muddie Springs, and of troubled Ale after such generous Wines. These things are indeed effected

10:4,33: Gal.1.10.

Ephes.3.

Rom.14.17.

Som.Scip: Plin.1.2.

1.Co.3.22: Heb.12.

Heb.12.

Apoc.21.

b 1.Cor.3: 1.P.39.20.4.vll.

c Cyprian.

Heb.11.1. Rom.8. Col.3.1.

D. Dec in a M.S. d The Sun is, if Art hath rightly measured, above 106. times; the greatest stars, above 100. greater then the earth. Rom.10.

1.Cor.7. Ephes.2.6. Rom.6.5.

effected by degrees, nor can we at once leape from the Cradle to the Saddle, and I suspect the forward Herculean hands that can so soone with new-borne gripes strangle old Serpents: yet is not the Christian alway a Dwarf, but still grows up in grace, and is ever growing into him which is the head, CHRIST. He is the Alpha and Omega, hee is Lord of all as the Son and Heire, of Man, the World and Heauen; and he withall this right is giuen vnto vs, inhabiting, purifying, quickning Mans heart by faith; whence he also is Microcosmically Master of himselfe, Cosmopolitically of the World, in Catholike Christianitie heire of Heauen; All, of, in, by and for Christ, to whom be glory for euer. Amen.

III.

The Christian and Philosopher compared in that challenge to be rich, free, a King, that this hinders not but furthers Politicall subiection: and of the happy combination of wisdom and royaltie in SALOMON, as likewise in our dayes.

L L Arts are but the supply of Natures defects, to patch vp her ragged and worne rents, to couer rather then to cure or recouer Mans fall; euen that King of Arts, the Politicall Art of Kings, is not heire by whole blood; but the gift of God, begotten since the fall, and abundantly argues our vnruinesse otherwise, which must haue Lords and Lawes to rule vs. By like fauour of God, least mans dissolution should bring a desolation, came in Politicall tenure and Ciuill state and Right amongst men. The least possession is this, which wee call our proper, as being no part of our selues, and a small part of the smallest part of the Vniuerse: greater is the Vniuerse it selfe, and the greatest right thereto is that which is most vniuersall, whereof the soule is only capable; greater then the greater World is this Little, for whom that was made, yea, for whom the Word, the maker of both was made flesh; and as in it selfe, so also to vs, whom little it aduantageeth to winne the whole world and loose our owne soules: greatest of all and Greatnesse it selfe is God, the lot of the Christians inheritance and the portion of his cup, to whom the Father hath giuen the Sonne, and with him all things. These things may concur and did in Salomon, without confusion; that the three last may also be separated from the first, and that subsist without the least knowledge of these last, is a true conclusion. And how many haue much in Politicall and Ciuill possession, which are had and held of the things they haue and hold, as the price of their freedom, not so much as dreaming of any other tenure but propriety, laughing at the Philosopher, and raging at the Christians farther challenge, which yet disturbs not (as not a worldly tenure) Propriety but that positue sicut erat in principio, (in the fruit of mans incorrupted nature) is now comparatively more certaine, more ample by faith, and shall be in secula seculorum a superlatiue of fullest happinesse. Euen still proprietie in strictest sence, is the Subiects state and that with many subdiuisions and diuersifications; a higher and vniuersall right appertaineth in each mans proprietie to the King, as Lord of all. That naked Cynike, that neither had house nor dish, not only compared himselfe with Alexander, (in emulation of his great Titles, proclayming I am Diogenes the Dogge) but euen great Alexander, had he not benee Alexander, professed hee would wish to bee Diogenes. Neither feare nor desire could any whit dazzle him in that Royall lustre, but heeing questioned by Alexander, if hee feared him not, asked if hee were good or bad; beeing answered, good; and who (saith he) is afraid of good? being bid den aske, hee desired no-thing but the restitution of the Sunne which his interposition had taken from him; insinuating a greater riches in Natures inheritance, then in the greatest Kings beneficence; and in his owne mind, then in the Others spacious Empire. Plus erat quod hic nollot accipere, (saith Seneca) quam quod ille posset dare. Nor had Greece alone such spirits: Calanus in India was more admired of Alexander, then the King of him. Corpora, saith he in his Epistle to Alexander, transfere de loco ad locum, animas non coges facere, quod nolunt, non magis quam saxa, & ligna vocem emittere. I speake not, as approouing these men in all their speeches and actions: but if they could doe so much in that twilight of Nature, how much more may Christians aspire vnto, on whom, as is said before, the Sun of righteousness is risen? These indeed are Children of the day, which know how to honour the King, in that feare of God, which is the beginning of wisdom; which the Cynikes, Gymnosophists and Stoikes, not hauing attained, dreamed in their night, and did those things rather as men talking and walking in their sleepe, then as men truly knowing what they said and did. Like these Ophyrians wee write of, which possessed much Gold, but Salomon alone knew how to bestow it on the Temple, which sanctifieth the Gold. And yet how farre did these Philosophers Dreames exceed the seeming waking and watchfull cares of Craesus and Crassus (which rather in troubled, fenerous, phrenzie, or Opium sleepes were more fatally perplexed) esteeming Vertue the truest treasure; and Riches rather to consist in needing little, then holding much, and a contented mind to bee a surer Coffer, then the Ephe 4.

2/ah. 16:

Sen. de benef. l. 7
c. 4. ad reges potestas pertinet,
ad singulos dominium. Laert.
αλλως μὲν τῆς πόλεως, αλλως δὲ τῶν χωρμῶ-ν.
See Laert. in vit. Diag. &
Amb. Ep. 7.
where you may read Calanus whole Epistle, and in the end of this Booke.

Cuncta cupit Craesus, Dio enes nihilum.
Eum maximè diuitijs frui qui minimè diuitijs
indiget.
Animus oportet se indicet diuitem, non hominum sermo, &c.
Cic. Ca'o regitur qui non habet vitae.

the bottomlesse Bags of insatiate Avarice; and Natures commons of the Heavens and Elements to be greater possessions, then a few handfuls of inclosed dust; more admiring the Physicians skill, then the Druggists shop full of simples, or the Apothecaries of medicines; more ioying in, more enioying (as the members of the body) the publike then the priuate wealth, more the contemplation, whereby the minde reasonably vieth all things, even those of others, without further cares; then that proprietie whereby the sense distinguisheth the owner, and addes to this little owne, the great cares of getting, keeping, spending, and no lesse feares of loosing, yea (in many a Tantalus) of vsing, as if he were the Gaoler rather then Owner of that wealth which hee lades with Irons and strangles in his Iron Chest, for no other fault, but calling such a Miser, Matter. Quibus hoc for- dibus emit ut fulgeat? vigilat in pluma; Nec intelligit miser speciosa esse sibi supplicia, & possideri ma-
gis quam possidere diuitias. The wise man is like Isaac in whom Abraham seede is called, whom he makes his heire: but these which are called rich, are sometimes like Ismael, thrust out of all; at the best, like the Sonnes of the Concubines, to whom Abraham gaue gifts and sent them away: the Minde, as that which alone is immortall, hath state of perpetuity and inheritance, the Sense in her propriety is capable onely of gifts and mouables.

From this glimpse of reason did those Philosophers the sonnes of Nature (how much more should we the Sons of the free women?) attribute libertie and a Kingdome to their Wise man, Saint Paul more fully, Iusto non est lex posita. Saint Ambrose laden with the spoiles of these Egyptians, therewith adorne the Christian Tabernacle. He is a free man saith he, which doth what he will, and liues as he pleaseth, nor can be forced to any thing: now the wise man wils that which is good, hates the euill; not for feare but for loue, obeieth the commandement; seekes not to please the vncertaine vulgar, but his minde hangs euently in the ballance poized with the shackle of the sanctuary; not forced by Law, but he is law to himselfe, and hath the same written not in tables of stone, but in fleshie tables of the heart; not fearing the Law, because his debts are acquitted, and can- not therefore be arrested; not seruant to any, yet making himselfe the seruant of all, for their good; whose seruice to God doth not consume but consummate his libertie, for Gods seruice is perfect freedome; to whom when all things are lawfull, yet nothing is lawfull that is not expedient, that edifies not; who abides founded and grounded on Christ the rocke, and therefore feares not the swelling waves, nor raging windes, fluctuates not with euery blast of doctrine: is not puffed with prof- perity, dejected with aduersity, but like Ioseph (which bought those that bought him, euén all the land of Egypt besides, for Pharao, after himselfe had bin sold for a slave) abides himself in whatsoever changes of fate and state. He hath subordinated his will to Gods will; and if hee will haue him doe or suffer any thing, possesse or loose either himselfe or ought he hath, it shall be his will also. This made Iob abide himselfe, when he was shaken, and as it were thunderstricken out of all at once: yea, by a sacred antiperistasis he gathered his spirits together and not onely not blasphemed, but blessed; then and theretore blessed God, who is no lesse good in taking then in giuing, who bath loued vs and giuen himselfe for vs, before he takes ought from vs, yea therefore takes this that he might giue that (both himselfe and our selfe) to vs. He that loseth his life findes it, and hee that denieth himselfe and his owne will, puts off the chains of his bondage, the slavery to innumerable tyrants, impious lusts, and is thus a free man in deede, freed from the diuell, the world, himselfe breathing the free ayre of heauen in the lowest and darkest dungeon, yea in the closest of prisons (his owne body) closely by contemplation conueies himselfe forth to fetch often walks in the Paradise of God. Once, he loues Christ, hee liues Christ, and therefore cannot be compelled by another, will not be compelled and mastered by Himselfe, longs to be more and more impelled by that Spirit (which sweetly forceth into the desired haue) and to be drawne by the Father that he may be enabled to follow the Sonne, with whom he is vnable to hold pace; and fearing because he loues, thus desires helpe, that (be it by stripes, or threatens, or other tentations) his feete may be made more sure, more swift. He feares God, and therefore feares nothing. And whereas hee that committeth sinne is the seruant of sinne, he is thus not onely set free by Christ, but more high- ly dignified and made a King and Priest to God. He daily sacrificeth praiers, praises, good workes, his owne lining body in reasonable seruice, not the bodies of dead and vnreasonable beasts; hath al- way the doore of the heavenly pallace, the eare of the heavenly King open to his intercessions. He is also a King ouer himselfe (a little world, a great conquest) ouer Fortune the magnified Lady of the greater World (which he frames to his owne manners; and if he cannot bend it to his will, knowes how to bend his will to it) ouer the Diuell, the God of the World; ouer Death, which hee makes (as Sapores did the Roman tyrant Valerian, and Tamerlane the Turkish Basazerb) his foot- stoole, or stirrop to mount vp to a higher and better life, and like Dauid cuts off the head of this Gyant (which hath defied all the armie of Mankinde) with his owne sword: hee is (a King) ouer the world, which he neither loues (for his heart and treasure is in heauen) nor feares (for what can it doe at the worst, but further his heavenly happinesse) nor fashions himselfe to it, but it to him- selfe, vsing it as not vsing it, not setting his heart on it, for the fashion of this world passeth away, as a Scene, where he but acts a while his part; and a strange Country thorow which he trauelleth to his true home; where his King is gone before to prepare a place for him, and leauing the earnest of his spirit with vs, hath taken our earnest, our flesh, there to take possession, to make intercessi-

Omnia eius sunt
non occupatione sed animo: & vniuersalitas illi, non hec singu-la mancipantur.
Tuetur hoc ipso
quod inuictur:
Vid. Lap. Ma-
nud. ad Stoic.
Phil. 1.3. diff. 11.
& seq.
Cyp. Ep. ad Don. 1.1.2. Ep. 2.
Gen. 25.6.
Cic. Parad. 5.
1. Tim. 1.8.
Amb. Ep. 7. han-dies this Theme lagely, learnedly,
g. dly. Eius
γὰρ τὴν ἐλευθερίαν ἐξουσίαν αὐτοπραγίας
τὴν δὲ δούλειαν σέρποντι αὐτοπραγίας: La-
ert. in Zenone.
a. Epictetus.
ἐλευθερός ἐστιν
ὁ ζῶν ὡς βέλεις ταὶ δὲ ἄνθρωποι γὰρ ἀνέστιν, ταχέως ἐστιν,
&c. it may be said of a good man, and his affections as Virgil of Augustus, Vultusque volentes, Per po-pulos dat iura viamque affectat Olympo.
Ep. 6. ἀποσκα-τάτιστα χαρὸν τὴν ὀφελὴν τῶ
θεῷ, &c.
Subducit se custodie in quatenetur & celo rescitur. Sen.
Iob. 14. 23.
Gal. 2. 2. 20.
Iob. 6.
Cant. 1.
Bern. in Cant. 21
Satis est ut me
trabas ut vim qualiter comque mibi aut terrendo, &c. trabe quedammodo in vitam ut facias voluntariam;
trabe, torpentem
ut reddas currentem, &c.
Pro. 16. 32.
Suis ea cuique
fingunt moribus
Cic. par. 5.
1. Cor. 7. 31.
P. 62.
Iob. 14.

Eph. 1. ult.
Pro. 14. 17.
Lips. Manduc. 1.
li. 2. d. 12.
The βασιλιάς
ἐστὶν ἀρχὴ ἀνυπεύδωτος. Laert.
in Zen. regnum
potestas nulli obnoxia.

Senec.

Apoc. 2. & 3.
Act. 3.

Tim. 6.

How good a good and wise
King.

Sir F. Bacon Aduanc. of Learn. 1. 1.

on in the presence of God for vs. Our Head is there already which cannot so farre degenerate as to neglect his body, the reall and liuing parts of Himselfe, the fulnesse of him that fills all in all things: This Kingdome is not meate and drinke, pompe and splendor, and much lesse intruding into the secrets, obtruding on the scepters of their soueraignes, but righteousnesse, peace, and joy in the holy Ghost, which the Philosophers knew not, and whatsoeuer they haue challenged (as à Ratione Reges) yet in comparison of true Christians they were but as Kings in a Play (as Plutarch said of the Stoickes) which talked, stalked, walked on their Stage, and acted that part which in deede and in spirituall right is our reall part and inheritance. And if a Kingdome be a power subiect to none, then euery true Christian is a King (not in Anabaptistickall phrensie to cast off all yokes of loyalty, to cast out all States and Royaltie, and like their John of Leyden to make himselfe a licentious Monarch, pressed downe meane while with so many enuies, vices, miseries, but) in this, that pectore magno, Spemque metumque domat, victo sublimior omni, Exemptus fatis: in that he obeith his soueraigne not so much of his slauiish feare, as because he loues him, and loues that God which hath giuen him soueraignty, and therefore as to the liuing image of God yeeldes obedience to him, not grudgingly or of necessitie but cheerefully, and with a willing heart, making his superiours will to be his owne (because it is Gods) will. And if he commands that which he findes countermanded by the highest Law, he rebels not, reuiles not, Rex est qui posuit metus, Et diri mala pectoris, where he cannot be willing to doe, he will yet be willing to suffer the will of his soueraigne, Occurritque suo libens Fato, nec queritur mori. Thus is this man spirituall a King and Infra se videt omnia, beholds all things beneath him, by suffering, ouercomming; by obeying, ruling, himselfe if not others. In this sence Christ saith of the Church of Smyrna, I know thy pouerty, but thou art rich: and of the Laodiceans which esteemed themselues rich, encreased with goods, and needing nothing, that they were wretched, and miserable, and poore, and blinde, and naked. Siluer and Gold haue I none, said that rich Apostle, whose pretended successours, out of a will to be rich, haue fallen into temptation, and a snare, and many foolish and noisome lusts: For the lone of money is the roote of all euill, which while these couet after, they haue erred from the faith: and instead of Apostolical, haue proued Apostaticall, with Babylonickall mysteries confounding things spirituall and externall, enclosing all the commons of the Church and the Spirit, to the onely vie of the Vatican; and then with the spoile of all Christians This spirituall man must iudge all, and be iudged of none, vsurping the rights of, and right ouer Kings, not considering the diuerstie of these tenures.

But yet (to retorne to our Salomon; if a man by this Christian wisdom becomes free, rich, a King; what shall a King of men be (with addition of this wisdom) but heroicall, and if not more then a man, yet a worthy of men, and neere to God? This appeares in Dauid and Salomon, two learned, no lesse then potent Kings, the one gaining greatnesse at home, the other dispersing those rates beyond their owne Orbe, to remotest Ophir. This we see in Philip and Alexander, in Cæsar and Augustus. Learning is the best iewell in a Kings Crowne, and Christian wisdom like the verticall crosse vpon it; which both in Bookes (by King Alphonfus called his faithfullest Counsellours) and in their bosomes, speakes that without feare or flattery, which seruants cannot or dare not; makes them to see with their owne eyes, and not onely by experience of others; yea with the eyes of the Worthies of former times, and to conuerse with the Auncients of all ages: and searching into the causes of things to penetrate seasonably into affaires which suddenly assault others. But especially in Marine discoveries, we are not so much indebted to the power as the learning of Kings, and both together make a blessed match, and haue produced to the world the best knowledge of it selfe. Salomon is example, who in the writings of Moses, being instructed of Ophyr, attempts the discovery. How little knowledge had the Greekes of Asia till Alexander employed both Aristotle with great costs, and Himselfe also in discovery of the Lands and Seas, besides Nearchus and other his Captaines, Julius and Augustus opened the first lights in manner to the Romans, the one in discovery of the world and the parts adioyning, the other also vnto the Indies. How little of the world hath bene discovered for want of learning by the Turke, Mogoll, Persian, Chinois, and Abassine, howsoeuer called great? how little are most of them all? But what neede I forraime examples? How little in comparison hath our Nation (the Oceans darling, hugged continually in her bosome) discovered and made use of (yea they were the prey of the Easterlings and Lumbards, scarcely knowing their neighbour Seas) before the late eruption of captined learning in the former age, and more especially in the glorious Sunshine of Queene Elizabeth, and (after that Sunset, Sol occubuit nox nulla sequuta est) in the succeeding, that I say not in Ophyrian regions, exceeding times of King Iames? I dare not presume to speake of his Maiesties learning which requires a more learned pen, and where to speake the truth would seeme flattery; nor yet of that learned Queene, who sometime brake in peeces the artlesse pictures made to represent her (for Apelles is onely fit to paint Alexander, Homer to sing Achilles, and Virgil his Augustus.) Thus a more learned witnesse hath said, and I will recite: that to the last yeare of her life duely and daily shee obserued her set houres for reading; that this part of the Island neuer had 45. yeares of better times, and yet not through the calmenesse of the season, but through the wisdom of her regiment: the truth of religion established, the constant peace and security, the good administration of iustice, the temperate vie of the prerogative not slackt nor much strained, the flourishing state of learning, the conuenient state of wealth and meanes both of Cowne and Subiect, the habit of obedience, and moderation of discontents, notwithstanding the differences of Religion, gion, her single life, Romes alarmes, and the neighbour Countries on fire. Hence that felicity of the State, of Religion, and especially of Navigation, now in threescore yeeres continuance, growne, almost out of the cradle and swaddling clothes, to the present ripenesse amongst vs. That our Virgin-mother, in her preparation to the Crowne by the Crosse and in happy exploits, another Dauid; in care of iust Iudges and Ludice Iehosaphat, in reformation H. zekiah, in restoring the Law that was lost Iosiah, in peace, plenty, successe, magnificence, and (the pillar of all this) Navigation, another Salomon, and (with greater hap-pinesse then his) leaving her Name without Salomons imputation of falling to Idolatry, to furnishing her person, and to become her heire and successor in them all: dying in a good age (as is said of Dauid) full of daies, riches, and honour. In these times Britaine hath recovered her eyes and spirits, and hath discovered the Westerne Babylon and her labyrinthian mazes and gyres of superstition, first of all Europæ.

an Kingdome: and in manerest order casting off that yoke, which ignorance (caused by irruption of barbarians into all parts of the Roman Empire had brought in as a myst, whereby that Romish mistery of iniquitie might worke vnespied) had put on the neckes and veiled hearts of our forefathers, which by the light of learning was now espied and exiled: and this freedome maintained manre all the gates and there was not forces of Rome and Hell. Yea, he that commanded Honour thy Mother, made her sexe honorable, and one Priest caused that a Woman had the honour ouer that Sifera, that Abimelech, that Holofernes; the sword of a woman preuailed, not by close advantages but in the sight of the Sun, in the worlds amphitheatre, all Europe looking on and wondring (yea the most still gaddie with that cup, enterpossing against her.) This Christian Amazon overthrew those Romish both gladiatores & sicarios (as they write of the Rhinoceros) tossed those Bulls (which had thought to haue pushed her by their hornes of deprivation and inuasi-on, and the close fights of treason and insurrection, out of England and Ireland) to the admiration of men, the ioy of Angels, and acknowledgement in all of the sword of the Lord and of Gedeon, the power of the highest perfected in her weakenesse. And (which more fits our Navigation treatise) this virago (not loosing her owne virgin-zone) by her Generall* first loosed the virgin zone of the earth, and like another Sunne twice encircled the Globe. Learning had edged her sword then, but the successor of this our Dehora, like Achilles in the Poets, hath a Panoplie, a whole armor of learned deuise; and like Apollo in the mids of the Musæ, so haue we seene him in the learned disputations of both Vniuersities; such an Apollo whose Oracle discovered the Dinels Master peece and Papall monster peece of powder treason, and brought it to poulder, by the light of his wisdom preventing those infernall lightnings and sulphurous bellish thunders: whose learned writings as the arrowes of Pythius haue giuen the deepest* and most fatall wounds to this mystic mytticall Python: whose birth hath made him a great King, whose great learning hath purchased another Kingdome, and made the Schooles to admire him in Dininitie; the Tribunnall in Law, the Senate and Counsell table as the table of Counsaile and Map of humane wise-dome: whose armes! but blessed are we that his learning and wisdom keepe vs from their drery noise and dissembl experiments; that we in the tragedies of so many Nations are spectators, that the God of peace hath with the Gospell of peace giuen vs a Salomon, truest type of the Prince of peace, whose daies are daies of peace at home, whose treaties propound wayes of peace abroad, whose sun-like raies haue shined not by bare discoveries, but by rich negotiations to this our Salomons Ophir in what part of the world soeuer the quarelsome wits of men haue placed it. If you looke neere hand, Scotland is added, and Ireland now at last made English, dispersing seares by English Cities, and plantations: If you looke further, with those which seeke for Ophir in the West Indies, there may you see English Plantations and Colonies in Virginia and other parts of both those supposed Perus, the Northerne and Southerne America: if to Sofal on the South of Afrike, or to the East of Asia, there also haue the English fleetes passed, traded (and if you thinke nothing compleate without armes) surpassed, the most aduantageous assalants: that euen the Indians (which yeelde com nonly in martall, alway in Neptunian affayres to the Moores) haue a proverb, three Moores to a Portugall, three Portugals to an Englishman: whose happy times haue exceeded Salomon and H. rams discoveries; euen where no writing hath mentioned any name of Noahs Sonnes, where none of Noahs Sons euer yet inhabited, where the Sun it selfe seemes affraid of uncouth Seas, horrid lands, and marine monsters, hiding himselfe diuers moneths in the yeere together, and but peeping when he doth appeare, as it were fearfully prying and compassing about with obliquer beames, there haue the beames of our Brittish Sunne descied, named, and exhaled profits from those portentous c Dragons of the Sea (lo these the happiest warres against the beasts by Sea and Land, not like Nimrods hunting of men) and sought new d discoveries, notwithstanding the Oceans armies of icie llands affronting, till the Sea it selfe (fearing totall subiection) hath embayed it selfe and locked vp all passages by unknowne lands.
And (not to mention the New Wales there discovered) England hath her Virginia, Bermuda, west discovery
New England; Scotland, a New Daughter of her owne Name; yea, Ireland by the care of the present Deputie is now multiplying also in America, and his Maiestie hath sowne the seedes of New Kingdomes in that New World.

Let not the seuerer sort censure me of presumption, if I thus embellish my ruder lines with these glorious names, wherein I communicating in the publike benefit, at once testifie my feare of God the Author, with mine honour to these two great lights of heauen to our Britaine-World, as actors, autors, instruments, mortall images of the immortall. He alone it is qui tempus ab xuo ire iubet, and makes our King a defender of the faith by which eternitie flowes from time well husbanded, & to resemble herein also, Itaque manens cuncta moueri. In this tranquillitie we may employ our industry in painfull and gainfull

c The Saxons expelled the Britains with their learning. The Danes (after learning had blessed the Christian Saxons) drowned all learned men, books, schools, arts, with a flood, that in K. Alfreds time himselfe writes there was not one Priest could vnderstand his Latin Seruices, and till this conquest this mist continued in great part, that Priest then being a wonder that knew his Grammar. Al-fredi epist ap. As-
ser. Men. Mat.
Paris, An. 1067
Clerici adeo lit.
carabant ut ce-teris sapori effec-tiss.
* Sir F. Drake was the first Generall that swam about the Globe, candidly the next.
* In the question of Anichrist in his Maiesties
Monit. Preface
* In the Mogols Country (whof Seas were the stage of this war) as I had by relation of Sir Tho. Roe Em-bassador there:
b King James his Newland.
c The Whale fishing.
d In the Northwest discovery
by Hudson, Ent-ton, Baffin &c.
Bat.
Mari magno, &c
See Bests voyage.

gainfull labours. I also in this peace, vnder Israels Salomon, can from the shore behold with safety, with delight, & in this glasse let others see, the dangerous Navigations and Ophyrian expeditions of our Countre men, & view their warlike fights in the waterie plaine as from a fortified tower (so the Mogols did the battell of the English and Portugals) not only free from perill, but enioying some the gaines of their paines, others the sweete contemplations of their laborious actions, all of vs the frutes of our labours and negociations at home and abroad, which grow from that Iacobæan tree: whose blossomes are inscribed Beati pacifici. This Worke is the frute of that Peace, and my Song may be, Deus nobis hæc otia fecit, that I may write with Inke at leisure, and (vnder the shadow of this tree) you read with pleasure, what these Pilgrimes haue written with hazard, if not with blond in remote Seas and Lands.

Psa. 144. ult.
Psa. 118.

Col. 1. & 2.

I flatter not the present, I denote to future posterity, this monument of praise to the Almighty, who hath given vs this Salomon, if not in all dimensions, (newer was there, or shall be such) yet herein like, 10 that wee enioy vnder his wings (in the combustions of neighbour Countries) this our peace, plenty, learning, iustice, religion, the land, the sea voyages to Ophir, the world, new worlds, and (if wee haue new hearts) the communton of Saints, guard of Angels, saluation of Christ, and God himselfe the portion of our Cup, and lot of our inheritance. Blessed are the people that be in such a case, yea blessed are the people that haue the Lord for their God, This is the day that the Lord hath made, let vs reioyce and be glad in it. And if our times yeelde some exceptions also, and the Traducer impute it to flattery that I bring not euils on the stage: I say that blessed and loyall Shem and Iapheth bid from themselves & others that which cursed Cham and Canaan quarrelled: Salomons times yeelded grienances, and we liue on earth, not in heauen; there is the perfection of wisdom, holinesse, happinesse, whereof Salomons times were a compleate type: we haue the truth in part, but all fulnesse is in him, in whom dwelleth all 20 the fulnesse of the Godhead bodily, which to expect here were Epicurisme and state-Puritanisme. Quis me constituit vel iudicem vel indicem? Malecontent, I am no Lord of times, nor Prince of Princes (they are both Gods peculiar) I indenuour to keepe me in the offices of my calling, to choose the good part, and in conscience towards God to acknowledge Gods workes in all, and specially in those of whom he hath said, Yee are Gods: To be an accuser is the Devils office, and they which be euill themselves will onely see euill in others.

¶ V.

30

Of the proprieti which Infidels haue in their Lands and Goods: of proprietic in the Sea, and of Salomons proprietic of the Sea and Shoare at Ezion Geber.

Tit. 1. ult.

1 Tim. 4.

1 Cor. 7.

1 Tim. 6.

Psa. 62.

Mat. 6.

Luk. 12.

Ind. Ep.

2 Pet. 2.

Hus haue wee discoursed of the prerogatiue of Gods peculiar, the right which the true Children of the Church haue in Christ and by him in all things: but what shall we say of propriety? of propriety of Infidels? Christs Kingdome is not of this world, and properly neither giues nor takes away worldly proprieties, ciuill and politicall interests; but addes to his subiects in these things a more sanctified vse, all things being pure to the pure, 40 pure to the impure; for they are sanctified by the word and prayer, which Infidels know not. In that interior court of conscience (which in the wicked is defiled) the iust haue before God a iuster vse, vsing the world as not abusing it, not being high minded, nor trusting in uncertaine riches: not setting their heart on them, though they increase, nor looting their hearts with them in their decrease or losse: not laying up to themselves treasures on earth where rust and moth and theeft haue power: not singing a requiem, soule take thine ease, thou hast laid up treasure for many yeeres, when this foolles soule it selfe is the worst thing it hath, and may be turned this night out of that secure body and secured state. But in the outward ciuill Court, and before Men, the Gospell alters not, remoues not the land marke of the law, but as well bids Gino to Cesar that which is Casars, as to God that which 50 is Gods. And therefore the rights of men by the royall or common lawes established (all deriued from that, of Nature, and consequently from God, who is Natura naturans, the creator of Nature) are in conscience of Gods commandement to be permitted to them. Neither without Gods speciall command might the Israelites spoile (as they did) the Egyptians, or inuade the Canaanites. It is Saint Iudes note of filthy Sodomites, sleepers, ignorant, beasts, disciples of Cham, Balaam, and Core, rocks, clouds without water, corrupt trees twise dead, raging waues, wandring starres, to despise gouernment: naturall bruite beasts (saith Saint Peter prophesying of his pretended successors) spots and blots, wels without water, clouds carried about with a tempest, to whom the blacke darknesse is reserved for euer: promising to others liberty, and are themselves the seruants of corruption (in this lence the seruants of seruants.) Neither could the Diuell deuise a greater scandall to the Gospell, then 60 that it should rob Kings of their supremacy and preheminece, subiects of their lands and state, as if to conuert to Christ were to euert out of their possessions, and subuert states: which is the cause of so few Iewes conuerted, and so peruerse conuersions in America, as I haue elsewhere shewed. The Gospell is not a sword to take away earth, but to destroy hell, and addes the Keyes of the Kingdome

dome of beauen, not a hammer to breake in peeces the doores of earthly Kingdomes : and least of all making instead of Keyes, Picklockes (the note of a theefe, euen though he should enter at the doore and lawfully succede lawfull Bishops) which open and shut all at pleasure ; against which there is but one word of force, and that is, force it selfe and power which their faction cannot o- uerthrow, the Romish conscience being Lesbian and leaden, or Iron and running compasse and va- riation, as the Needle of that See hath touched it to obserue the Pope as the magneticall Pole, which Philosophers say is not that of heauen but of the earth. God hath made vs men, his Sonne hath called vs to be Christians, and this opinion doth turne men into Beasts, yea Christian men into wilde Beasts without all propriety, or any thing proper to humanity, which with the rights thereof extends to Infidels.

10 These hold not Christ, nor hold of him, as ioynt heires : yet are they not without all right, yea of him also they hold in another tenure, not as sonnes, but as seruants (and the seruant abideth not in the house for euer, but the Sonne abideth euer : but if the Sonne make them free they are free indeede?) These hold, in a tenure of villenage not in state of spirituall inheritance, which yet warrants a iust title for the time, contra omnes gentes, against all men (as seruants vse their Masters goods) but be- ing called by death to giue accompt to their Lord, are dispossessed of all and themselves also for e- uer : whereas the children here seeme in wardship, and to receiue some short allowance in the nonage of this life, but in the day of death (the birth day of true and eternall life) as at full age, enter into full possession of heauen and earth for euer. That tenure yet of godlesse men (which are without hope, 20 without Christ, without God in the world) is a tenure from God, though as is said in a kinde of vil- lenage ; and warrants against all men, as holden of and at the will of the Lord Christ, by whom and for whom all things were created, and hee is before all things, and in him all things consist. And hee is the Head of the Body the Church. This tenure in capite is the Churches ioynture ; that of humane nature, from him whole all things are inre creationis, remains to forreiners, which are strangers from the Common-wealth of Israel, and from the priuiledges of the Holy Citie the New Ierusalem. For af- ter the Image of God, by this Image of the inuisible God were all Men created ; which though it bee in part by sinne defaced, yet through the mercy of God in part remaineth in the worke of men, which still retaines an immortall reasonable spirit indued with vnderstanding, will, and memory (resembling the vnity and Trinity) animating and ruling (how imperfectly soeuer) the organically 30 body, and with it the inferiour creatures : which dominion ouer the creatures is by God him- selfe reckoned to the image of God ; infected with sinne, and infected with a curse ; but God euen in the sentencing that iudgement remembring mercy, added thornes, and thistles, and sorrow, and sweate, but tooke not away the vse ; yea he renewed the blessing to all the Sonnes of Noah, and enlarged their commission, indenting in mans heart this naturall right, and in the Beasts this na- turall awe and subiection, by Natures owne hand writing.

Infidels pro- priety. Ich. 8. 35. 36.

Eph. 2. 10. Col. 1. 16. 17. 1

Eph. 2. Col. 1.

Gen. 1. 26. & 30. 17. 18. 19.

Gen. 1. 7. 8. Act. 17. 26.

Deut. 2. 19. 20. 21. 22. 1. 22. 9.

Gen. 47. 20. Dan. 4.

Ioh. 19. 11.

* Reges preest non a rebus. se l ab iustitia. et Cath. l. de docto- res p. 1. 1. 1. 1.

quoniam a rep. constituitur. non pot. placem sed. iust. in cu- lationem in regem transferre. & c. Fr. a. v. d.

Relect. de par. Ci- uili Omne Do- minium a deo est : domini est terra & plen.

eius Dom. totius creature & om- nis potestas a deo. Rom. 1. 1. of. Angles. Val. nt. part. 1. q. de dam.

R. m. 13. 1 Pet. 2. 13.

Hee that then blessed them with, Replenish the earth, did confound their Babel building, and scatter them abroad from thence upon the face of all the earth, to put it in execution, and hath made of one blond all Nations of men (as is said before) to dwell on all the face of the earth, and hath deter- mined the times and bounds of their habitation. Thus hee that gaue Canaan to the Israelites is said 40 (in a proper sense though differing manner) to haue giuen Ara unto the children of Lot for a pos- session, the land of the Emims, and the land of the Zamzummims which hee destroyed be- fore them : as he did that of the Horims to the children of Esau, that as the former generations entered by the Law of Nature, as first finders, so these by the law of Warre, as confounders of the former, and founders of a second state and succession, both guided by the hand of diuine pro- uidence. Salomon gaue Hiram twenty Cities in recompence of Cedars, and Firre-trees and Gold : and innumerable are the compacts and contracts mentioned in Histories, whereby the rule of Countries and States haue beene made ouer to new Masters, or to the old in a new tenure, as Ioseph bought all Egypt, their lands and persons to Pharaoh. But in all these workes of Men, God is a coworker ; the most high ruleth in the Kingdomes of Men, and giueth it to whomsoeuer hee 50 will, was verified both actiuelly and passiuelly in Nebuchadnezzar : Cyrus is called his seruant Pilates power is acknowledged by the Lord of power to be giuen from above, and to that Ro- man soueraignty (how vniust soener their conquest was) hee submitted himselfe in his birth (oc- cationed at Bethlehem by the decree and taxation of Augustus) in his life by payment of tribute, and in his death by a Roman both kinde and sentence. Per me reges regnant is his Proclamation, whether * by diuine immediate vocation as in Moses, or mixed with Lot, or meere, or free choise, or inheritance, or conquest of warre, or exchange, or gift, or cession, or marriage, or pur- chase ; or titles begun in vniust force, or fraud at first, yet afterward acknowledged by those whom it concerned, and approued by time, which in temporall things proscribeth, and prescribeth : by this King of Kings doe Kings reigne, and the powers that be are ordained of God, to which eue- 60 ry soule must be subiect, euen for conscience sake, & propter Deum ; Who soeuer therefore resisteth the power, resisteth the ordenance of God, and they that resist shall receiue to themselves dam- nation.

This was written whenall Kings were Idolaters and Infidels, nor had the World many Ages after euer heard, that Infidelitie, Heresie, or Idolatry were causes sufficient for rebellion in Sub-

* Hence came the Lawvers Fee. vid. S. T.
Smiths common wealth.
l. 2. c. 10.
See this question handled more largely in baiting P.
Alex his bull.
l. 2. c. 1. Read also a Spanish diuine Fr. à Vi-gloria in his Relect. de pot. Ec-
c. de Indis. He with many arguments confutech this pretended power of the Pope.
Caietan also 2.
2. q. 65. a. 8.
T. Aq. 2. 2. q. 10.
ar. 1. vid. vi. de Ind. n. 31. & per totam yel. in which he proueth the Popes gift, &c. could not giue iust title to the Indies, and confutech 7 titles
as vniust.
1 King. 2. 35.
Vid. ubi sup. Barbary sunt veri domini & publicè & priuati.
Ius autem gentium ut quod in nullius bonis est,
occupanti cedat.
d. 5. fere best.
1 Chro. 18. 13.
2 Cro. 21.
Rom. 5. & 6 & 7
Gen. 4.
Gen. 10.
Ab. 4. 32. 34.
& 45.
Luk. 12. 14.
* Thou shalt not steale: this some borderers are reported to hold first put into the decalogue by King Hen. 8. They sure are bordevers, that is,
theeues in di-uinitie which will take it out of the decalogu

ieets or inuasion of Neighbours, as in the many examples of the Israelitish and Jewish Kings, which neither inuaded others for Infidelitie, nor were at home deprived for Heresie, though all the neighbours were Infidells, and most of those Kings Idolaters. To vs her Religion by the Sword is scarcely approued amongst Mahumetans, which permit men liberty of soule, though not of body: but to turne all the World into Timars, and Knights or Souldiers fees, is more intolerable. It was barbarous Latine to turne fides into feodum, the title of all free lands of Subiects holden in fide, in * trust of performing rents, seruices, and other conditions annexed to the first Donation by the superior Lord: but this more barbarous Diuinitie, to dipossesse Barbarians of their Inheritance, and by their want of Faith to increase our fees of Inheritance, as if all the world were holden of the Pope in Catholike fee, obtruded on vs for Catholike Faith: Christ came not to destroy the Law but to fulfill it; and therefore did not disanull by the Gospel, that naturall Commandement of Alleageance and Obedience to Princes, the Honor due to the Parents of our Coun-trei. Neither doth Religion make a Father or Mother, but Nature; and it is said, Honour thy Father and Mother, without annexion of qualitie good or bad. Nor could Jonathan deny filiall ob-seruance, or loyall subiection to Saul with such excuse; nor could the Keyes that came later ex-pell Scepters, which were of more ancient foundation; nor heauenly Keyes open or shut earthly Doores: nor can Infidelitie which concerneth Diuine Law, yea in matters supernaturall, take away that right which Positive or Naturall Law hath giuen; nor exclude from iust title on Earth, which some hold pœna, rather then peccatum, in such as haue not heard: nor can a pretended Vicar challenge iustly, what his Lord neuer claimed, what hee also disclaimed: nor did hee send Souldiers but Preachers, to conuert the World to the Faith truly Catholike, and therein shewed himselfe a true Salomon, a Prince of Peace, figured by this our Salomon who sent Ships of Merchandise and not of Warre to Ophir. And as for any High Priests Bull (whose roaring might coniuere the spirits of Princes, within the circle of Pontificall censure) those dayes knew no such brutish dialect, yea wise and iust Salomon was so farre from fearing or desiring the Bulls of Abiathar, that hee put him out of the High Priests place for intermeddling with the Crowne-succession, and set Zadok in his roome. And for Ophir, long before inhabited (as appeareth, Gen. 10.) he did not for the discouery thereof, then new, challenge iurisdiction or Soueraignie, as Lord of that Sea or Region by him discouered (no more then the Ophirians had beene Lords of Israel, if they had then discouered it) but left things as hee found them, the Countrey appropriate to the Inhabitants, the Sea open to such as would and could in like manner aduenture. Otherwise it was with him and his right in Ezion Geber, on the shoare of the Red Sea in the land of Edom. For this was peculiar (both the shoare and sea adioyning) vnto Salomon, chiefe Lord of Edom: which Dauid had before conquered, and so it continued vnder the Kings of Juda till the euill dayes of Iehoram the sonne of good Iehoshaphat, who made like vse of this Hauen, but with vnlike effect.

True it is that if Man had continued in his first integritie, Meum & Tuum had neuer proued such quarrelling Pronounes, to make warre more then Grammaticall, in setting all the Parts of Speech together by the eares. But sinne entring into the world, yea as an inuading tyrant ruling, it was necessary that proprietie should preuent rapine of the idler and mightier, and encourage the industry of the iust laborer, which for the sweat of his browes might earne and eate his owne bread.
Thus had Cain and Abel their proper goods, he the fruits of the earth, this of his cattell, the proper Obiects of their labour. And when the whole earth was filled with crueltie, God clenfed the confusion of those Fence-breakers by a generall deluge. After the Floud, Noahs Posteritie had the earth diuided amongst them. And in that renouation of the world, in the Golden Age of the Church, when they had all things common; the reason was, as many as were possessours of lands sold them and brought the price: so that they had a iust proprietie of those their owne possessions, and conferred the same to others, and after it was sold the money was their owne, and remained in their owne power. Hee that refused to diuide the inheritance to brethren, would not dissolue and diffipate it to strangers, and abolish one of the precepts * of the Decalogue; for stealing in properest sense cannot bee, if there be no proprietie. Wickedly therefore doe the Anabaptists in generall, the Papists for their owne aduantage; the one by confusion, the other by combustions, depriuations, and deprauations of estates, remoue the Land-marke. Nor doe others well to take away all Sea-markes and right of Marine proprietie.

The contrary wee see in Salomons Ezion Geber. Thorow other Seas hee sailed by vniuersall and naturall right, in this as his owne proprietie, he builded his Fleet, prepared, victualled, manned his Nauie, and altogether vsed the Sea and Shoares, and Port, as is his proper and iust Inheritance.

§. VI.

The commendations of Nauigation, as an Art worthy the care of the most Worthy; the Necessitie, Commoditie, Dignitie thereof.

10 MAN that hath the Earth for his Mother, Nurse, and Graue, cannot find any fitter obie<sup>ct</sup> in this World, to busie and exercise his heavenly and better parts then in the knowledge of this Earthly Globe, except in his God, and that his heavenly good and Inheritance; vnto both which this is also subordinate, to the one as a Booke set forth by himselfe, and written of his Wisdome, Goodnesse, Power and Mercy; to the other as a way and passage, in which Man himselfe is a Pilgrim. Now, though I might borrow much from Ptole-mey, Strabo, and others in Geographies prayse, yet will I rather fixe my selfe on Salomon and his Ophir.

20 If wee should respect persons, and be moued by authoritie, wee haue in this Ophirian Navigation, the patterne of two most worthy Kings, as two witnesses beyond exception, Iewes and Gentiles conspiring; wee haue Reuerend Antiquitie of Time, Sanctitie of Sociall leagues, Holi-nesse of sacred Designes, Greatnesse of highest Maiesty, Magnificence of brightest Splendour, 30 Munificence of rarest Bountie, Wisdome of iustest Temper, Prouisions of maturest Prudence; all these in this Expedition of Salomon proclayming, that there is no way by Land alone to the top, of humane Felicity (wherin Salomon also was a type of a Greater) but as God hath combined the Sea and Land into one Globe, so their ioynt combination and mutuall assistance is necessary to Secular happinesse and glory. The Sea couereth one halfe of this Patrimony of Man, whereof God set him in possession when he said, replenish the earth and subdue it, and haue dominion ouer Gen. 7. 22 the fish of the Sea, and ouer the fowle of the Aire, and ouer euery lining thing that mooueth vpon the Earth. And when the Sea had, as it were, rebelled against rebellious Man, so that all in whose nose-breath was the breath of life, and all that was in the dry Land died, yet then did it all that time in-dure the yoke of Man, in that first of ships the Arke of Noab; and soone after the Goad also, 30 when God renewed the former Couenant, and imposed the fear and dread of Man vpon euery Gen. 9. 2.
beast of the Earth, and vpon euery soule of the Aire, vpon all that mooueth vpon the Earth, and vpon all the fishes of the Sea.

Thus should Man at once loose halfe his Inheritance; if the Art of Nauigation did not inable him to manage this vntamed Beast, and with the Bridle of the Winds, and Saddle of his Shipping to make him seruiceable. Now for the seruices of the Sea, they are innumerable; it is the great Purueyor of the Worlds Commodities to our vse, Conueyor of the Excesse of Riuer, Vniter by Traffique of all Nations; it presents the eye with diuersified Colours and Motions, and is as it were with rich Brooches, adorned with various Ilands; it is an open field for Merchandize in Peace, a pitched Field for the most dreadfull fights of Warre; yeelds diuersitie of Fish and Fowle for diet, 40 Materials for Wealth, Medicine for Health, Simples for Medicines, Pearles and other Jewels for Ornament, Amber and Ambergrise for delight, the wonders of the Lord in the Deepe for instruction, variety of Creatures for vse, multiplicity of Natures for Contemplation, diuersity of accidents for admiration, compendiousnesse to the way, to full bodies healthfull euacuation, to the thirsty earth fertile moysture, to distant friends pleasant meeting, to weary persons delightfull refreshing; to studious and religious minds (a Map of Knowledge, Mystery of Temperance, Exercise of Con-tinence, Schoole of Prayer, Meditation, Deuotion, and Sobrietie: refuge to the distressed, Portage to the Merchant, passage to the Traueller, Customes to the Prince, Springs, Lakes, Riuer, to the Earth; it hath on it Tempests and Calmes to chastise the Sinnes, to exercise the faith of Sea-men; manifold affections in it selfe, to affect and stupifie the subtillest Philosopher; su-staineth moueable Fortresses for the Souldier, mayntayneth (as in our Iland) a Wall of defence 50 and waterie Garrison to guard the State; entertaines the Sunne with vapours, the Moone with obsequiousnesse, the Starres also with a naturall Looking-glasse, the Skie with Clouds, the Aire with temperatenesse, the Soyle with suppleness, the Riuer with Tydes, the Hills with moysture, the Valleys with fertilitie; containeth most diuersified matter for Meteors, most multi-forme shapes, most various, numerous kindes, most imment, diffomed, deformed, vnformed Monsters: Once (for why should I longer detain you?) the Sea yeelds Action to the bodie, Meditation to the Minde, the World to the World, all parts thereof to each part, by this Art of Arts, Nauigation.

60 Neither should we alone loose this halfe of Natures dowrie, without the benefit of this Art;
but euen the Earth it selfe would be vnknowne to the Earth; here immured by high impassable Mountaynes, there inaccessible by barren way-lesse Deserts; here diuided and rent in sunder with violent Riuer, there ingirt with a strait siege of Sea; heere possessed with wild deuouring beasts, there inhabited with wilder man-deuouring men; here couered with huge Worlds of Wood, there buried in huger spacious Lakes; here loosing it selfe in the mids of it selfe, by showres of Sand,

* This is effected by such as saile about the World, as is knowne of all such as know the Sunnes course.

Sand, there remoued, as other Worlds out of the World, in remoter Ilands; here hiding her richest Mynes and Treasures in sterill Wildernesles, which cannot bee fed but from those fertile Soyles, which there are planted, & as it were remoued hither by helpe of Nauigation. Yea, whereas otherwise we reape but the fruits of one Land, or the little little part thereof which we call our owne lands, hereby wee are enriched with the commodities of all Lands, the whole Globe is epitomised, and yeelds an Abridgement and Summarie of it selfe in each Countrey, to each man. Nor should we alone loose the full moytie of our Demesnes by Sea, and a great part of that other moytie the Land, but the Heauens also would shew vs fewer starres, nor should we grow familiar with the Sunnes perambulation, to ouertake him, to disapoint him of shadow, to runne beyond him, to imitate his daily iourney, and make all the World an Iland, to beguile this Time-measurer in exact reckonings of Time, by adding * or loosing a day to the Sunnes account. Nor could wee know the various Climates, with their differing seasons, and diuersified affects and effects of the Heauens and Elements. Nor could we measure the Earths true Dimensions and Longitudes, nor know many creatures both vegetable and sentitue therein (which are our Chattels) nor her high prized Minerals and Gemmes; nor yet could wee know and vse the varietie of Fowle, or (like inferiour Gods) dispose of the winds in the Ayre, bringing constant effects, out of their varietie, and obserue their Seasons to flie with them about the World, had we not these Sayle-wings of shipping; whereby we out-runne the wildest beasts, out-swimme the swiftest fish, out-flie the lightest Fowles, out-stretch the fiercest Windes, but-set the strongest Currents, out-passe most spaciuous Seas, and tame all Nature to the nature of Man, and make him capable of his Natural Patrimony. 10

2. Chron. 8.

What shal I say of other men? The holiest, the wisest, the Greatest of Men, of Kings, of Kings of Kings (Salomons example speaks all this) hereby honour God, hereby haue made themselues to all Posterities honorable. Wil you haue al commendations at once? Salomon the Epitome of al human worth and excellence, promised by Prophecie before his birth, named by speciall appointment of God when he was borne, founder of (that Miracle of Earth, and mysticall Mirrour of Heauen) the Temple; glorious in his other Erections, Customes, Tributes, Riches, Government, and in (that Soule of happinesse) the happy endowments of the Soule in Visions, Wisdome and Holinesse, in his Fame exceeding Fame it selfe, his Renowme attracting all the Kings of the Earth to seeke his presence, in his Writings elected a Secretary of God to record wisdome to saluation, to all Ages and places of the World, in these things passing others, yea surpassing himselfe (euen here may we say, as before is said, is a greater then Salomon) typing the Great Creatour and Sauour of the World; This first, and most eminent of men, is by the first, and best of Stories, set forth as the first Founder of Long and Farre Nauigations, and Discoueries. As for Noahs Arke, it was intended rather to couer and secure from that tempestuous Deluge, and to recouer that handfull, the Seed of a New World, from the common destruction, then to discouer New Worlds, or to make Voyages into any parts of the old: though if we should yeeld This the beginning of Nauigation (as indeed it was, though not of Discouery) wee haue hereof a greater then Salomon, God himselfe the Institutor and Author, Christs Crosse typed in the matter, Mans Baptisme in the speciall, and Saluation in the generall scope and euent. But for Heathens, Iosephus hath shewed that Salomon was ancients then their Gods, not their Nauigations alone; and that Carthage was conceived many yeares after Salomons death: and for Greece, Plato hath recorded that Egyptian testimony, that they in all things were children, which yet doted with age, when the Romanes were in the vigor of their youth. The Tyrians indeed were supposed Authours of this Art, but neither could they make this Voyage, but passing ouer Land through the Countries of others, there to build a Nauie, (as in this case they did with Salomon) nor is there record or likelihood of any farre Nauigation of theirs till this, yea, it is likely, that heere and hence beganne the greatnesse and supereminent lustre of their Name; the Art which they exercised at, and neere home before, being thus brought out of the Nest, and by Salomons wisdome taught such remote flights. 30

Ecc. 4.
Iob 40.

Thus the Author, and thus Antiquity commends Nauigation: and no lesse the ends which moued Salomon thereto, which were to get Gold, Siluer, Iu. y, precious Wood and Stones, and other Rarities, which gaue such lustre to his State, tewel to his Magnificence, glory to his Name, Ornament to the Temple, splendour to Religion, Materials to the exercise of his Bodie and Minde, that I mention not the Customes increased, others by the Kings example, aduenturing the Seas, and Merchandise quickened. This also he makes the fit Obiect of his Royall thoughts and vnmatchable wisdome; not trusting others care, he went himselfe to Ezion-Geber, to make prouisions for his Nauie; yea, and not leaning to his sole Wisdome, Power, and Successe, entred into league with Hiram, and employed his Ships and Mariners, as he, which hath proclaimed to the World, va Soli, and esteemed two better then one, and to haue better wages for their labour, and a three-fold coard not easily broken. Hee was not like Behemoth, to trust that hee could draw up Iordan into his mouth, much lesse to make a Monopoly of the Ocean, as if the whole East had been created for Ezion-geber: but amidst his incomparable Delignes, framed of Greatnesse, clothed with Wealth, enliued with Wisdome, attended with Successe and Glory, disdaines not, yea, seekes assistants, 60 assistants, and admits a Heathen Kings Society in this, in the Temples Negotiation; inferring that they neither mind the good of the true Temple, or the Catholike Church, which will not endure Christian compartners in the Voyage to Ophir, which impound the World in a corner, and entile a corner to the World.

And as he sought not to prejudice Egypt, or any of his Neighbours, if out of their owne Ports they intended to seek the World abroad, no more did he prooue iniurious to the Ophirians, with whom he dealt, eyther in their Wealth, hindred, by prohibiting all others to trade with them; or (among his many cares of building) by erecting Forts against their wils, as Prisons of their Libertie, and Fetters of their Captiuitie.

10 For if to doe as we would be done to, be the Law and Prophets, this Prophet of the Law would not seeke his owne profit, by inuading the publike of whole Nations remote and to him innocent, and force vpon them so vnwelcome knowledge of God and his people Israel, that through their iniuries his Name might be blasphemed amongst the Heathen: but as he might vse his owne right where were no people, so in places inhabited, not to neglect the security of his own, nor to vsurpe the Souereignty of the Natiues, or preuent and interuert the Rights of common humanity. God that would not (as before is intimated) the price of a Dogge or a Whore, nor the Patrociny of a lie, would not by publike Latrociny haue his Temple adorned, nor suffer his House to bee built with blond, nor the holy Citie with iniquity. Righteousnesse and Peace kisse each other in Gods Kingdome, and acts of Warre though iust, excluded Dauid from the honour of building the Lords Houle. It follows then that Salomon was in this Ophirian businesse, a man of peace, and thereot an example to all following Discouersers, according to that Christian Rule, as much as is possible to haue peace with all men. Rom. 12.

20 As SALOMONS Iustice, so his Wisdome and Prudence is exemplary, which though in him supereminent, yet found (as is already obserued) no meanes at home to maintaine the glory of Salomon, no meanes by Land correspondent to such Magnificence and Munificence, but addresseth himselfe by Sea and long Voyages to seek it: nor doth he esteeme others eyes enough, nor others assistance too much, but surueyes his Nauie himselfe, & is glad of *Hiram*s helpe? Nay, this was not only the subiect of his wisdome, but the furtherer and Purueyor, by new experiments in Minerals, Gems, Beasts, Fowles, Fishes, Serpents, Wormes, Trees, Fruits, Gums, Plants, Men; Climates, Winds, Seasons, Seas, Lands, Soyles, Riuers, Fountaynes, Heauens, and Stars; and a World of the Worlds Varieties; of all which how soeuer he had receiued the mayne stocke of Wisdome by immediate Gift of God, yet did he frugally employ his Talent, and thriftily improoue that Reuenue, labouring to be more wise, and travelling in Wisdome and Knowledge, and Equitie; and * gaue his heart to search and find out wisdome by all things that are done vnder the Heauen, God humbling him with this sore travell, although he excelled in wisdome, all that were before him in Ierusalem. Thus *Homer*s Vlysses in the Schooles of diuers Nations & Navigations is trained to that peerlesse wisdom, & thus Aristotle the chiefe of Natures Schollers, trauelled with Alexanders Purse and Experience to furnish himselfe, and succeeding Ages with Naturall Science and Wisdome. And our Age which God hath blessed beyond many former, produced as Twinnes Navigation and Learning, which had beene buried together in the same Graue with the Roman Greatnesse, and now are as it were rayfed againe from the dead.

30 Hence it is that barbarous Empires haue neuer growne to such glory, though of more Giant-like stature, and larger Land-extension, because Learning had not fitted them for Sea attempts, nor wisdome furnished them with Nauigation. Thus the Persian, the Mogoll, the Abassine, the Chinois, the Tartarian, the Turke, are called GREAT, but their greatnesse is like Polyphemus with one eye, they see at home like purblind men neere to them, not farre off with those eyes of Heauen, and lights of the World, the Learned knowledge, whereof is requisite to Nauigation. The Chinois at home, is hereby stronger, and so is the Turke: but the other are braued by euery petty Pirat on their owne shores: the rest like Ostriches spread faire plumes, but are wattle to rayse themselves from the Land: yea, their Lands also (as hath happened to the Abassine) and Seatownes taken from them to the downfall of their estate. One Salomon left greater testimonies of greatnesse, by this his wisdome and helpe of Nauigation, then many of the later Ottomans, which possessed all Salomons Territories, and perhaps a hundred times so much added. But as God giues huge strength and vast bodies to beasts, yet makes Man by art and reason secure from them, if not wholly their Masters; so to the good of Christendome, hath hee denied Learning to those Barbarians, and skill or care of remote Navigations, which how otherwise they might infest the World, appears by their Christian Slaues and vnchristian Pirats, whereof they make vse against vs, and whereby their Mediterranean is guarded. But on the Arabian, the Portugals before, the English since haue put a bridle into the mouth of the Ottoman Horse, and shewed how easie it is to intercept his Maritime incomes, and if not to smother him (as the Floridans serue the Whale by stopping the two holes, whereby he breath's) yet to impouerish him by diuerting the riches of the Persian and Arabian Gulphes.

40 And hereby is euident that as we haue obserued in Salomons Iustice, and wisdome, so Fortitude it selfe here is exercised, hence increased: nor did Alexander thinke it enough to haue overcome men,

Rom. 12.

Ab. 2.

Rom. 12.

Ecc. 2. 13. 21.

* Ecc. 1. 13. 16.

Acof. hist. Ind. 3. 3. 6. 15.

men, but would also encounter the vnknowne Ocean. Salomons riches made him eminent and secure, his Navigations rich. But besides the necessary exercife of Fortitude in the Mariner expoted and oppoling himselfe to Step-dame Elements, to Shelues and Rockes from the Earth, Whirle-pooles, Currents, Billowes and Bellowes of the Sea, Tempests, Huricanos, Tufons, Water-spouts, and dreadfull Meteors from the Aire: by Sea-fights is the safest defence of our owne (as the Oracle instructed the Gracians by Wooden-castles, to fortifie against that World of men in Xerxes his Armie) and surest offence to the Enemy. What reputation of courage, what increafe of State, did the Portugals hereby attaine in Africa and Asia? cooping vp the Natiues within their shoares, possessing themselves of diuers petty Kingdomes, enriching themselves with the richest Trade in the World, and that maugre the force of the Moors, of the Egyptian and Turkish Sultans? The Sea was the Work-houfe, and Naigation the Anuile, whereon the fortitude of a Woman, wrought the safetie of her Subiects, and hammered the terrours of that enemy, which was called, Omnium etatum & totius orbis amplissimi Imperij Monarcha. Nor need I name the Belgian Vnited Prouinces, whose Free estate like another Venus arose out of the Sea, and hath forced Mars to woo this Ladies loue and amitie, when force could not rauish her; which seemes since not only to contemne that force, to neglect this loue, but almost wantonly in many of hers, remembers to forget herselfe in some respects to her quondam best friends, by whose helpe this Neptunian Amazon was secured at home, by whose ayde and example, that I adde not their Name, her Fortune and Fortitude hath attempted both East and West, yea, hath taken away the name of East and West out of the World, and three times compassed the Com-passe. Thus hath a little remnant of Land by Sea-assistance, swelled to this present greatnesse, and filled the remotest Indies with her Martiall and Mercuriall Designes. 10 20

Now for Temperance, Salomon himselfe stumbled and fell at that stone; neither are Sea-men vsually on Land the most temperate: Vlysses had not heard of Cyrce or the Syrenes, had hee not aduentured the Sea. Yet let this be a commendation of the Marine art, how euer the Mariner be to blame. It is the excellency of the thing that makes it a strong temptation; strong and sweet wines are commended, though weake branes and distempered heads bee iustly blamed for their intemperance; in the good gifts of God, beautie, wealth, and honor (as the wormes breede in best fruits) are the lists of the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes and pride of life, which are not of the Father but of the world. Nor was Heauen to blame for the fall of Angels, or Paradise for that of Men; nor the Sea if her riches make mens mindes sea-sicke, wauering, inconstant, distempered, and like the Sea, subiect to tempestuous temptations. Yea, if you looke neerer, you shall see, as men blame and feare death for the last fatall paines, which yet are not properly of death (which is not in possession till paine and sente be quite dispossessed) but of the remainders of life; so deale they with Naigation in this case, whereas the Sea holds them in good temper, and is a correction house to the most dissolute; but the Land makes them forget the Sea and temperance together. Salomons vxorifousnesse and idolatries were Land beaults, not Sea-fishes: nor could his Apes and Peacocks, the vainest of his Sea wares, teach him that vanitie. The wonders of the Lord in the Deepe teach many, no doubt, deepest Diuinitie and profoundest Temperance, though some froth swims on the top of the Sea, and beates on euery shore where the winde driues it, carried about with euery blast of tentation, to the death of more in the wrongly-accused voyage of the East Indies by Bacchus and Venus, then Neptune and Mars, and all such other supposed Deities, and perhaps (I will not speake Dutch) that scurvy Sea-deuill too. Cælum non animum mutant qui trans mare currunt. They carry their vices with them, which because the Sea, a Schoole of sobrietie and temperance, permits not to practise, breake out on them aland in greater furie. And as Ouedo tels of Lice, hat they leaue men a litle past the Acores, as they saile to the West Indies, and die and vanish by degrees, nor trouble them in the countrie, but at their returne about the same height (as if they had waited all that while for them) breede afresh; so is it with vices, which being practised on Land, doe finde men on euery shore, where people and plentie offer opportunitie. Once, Earth is predominant as in our complexions, so in our conditions. 30 40 50

Now for the vertues called Theologicall, Faith, Hope, and Charitie, the Sea is a great Temple not to contemplate their theorie, but really to practise them. Faith hath her greatest eclipse by interpolation of Earth, as we see in the Moone; but at Sea, Cælum undiq, & undiq, pontus, no Earth is seene, only the Heauen (the walls of our fathers Palace) and the inconstant shifting Elements, which constantly put vs in minde of our Pilgrimage, and how neere in a thin ship, and thinner, weaker, tenderer body we dwell to death, teaching vs daily to number our dayes, and apply our hearts to wiseāme. And what can more liuely traine vs in Hope then Sea-naigation, where the life we liue is hope, where as Dauids former deliuerance confirmed him against the vncircumcised Philistine, so daily deliuerances from death in so few inches distance by windes and waues, which like the Beare and the Lion alway assault vs, may the better traine vs to the fight with Goliab himselfe, and as I haue said (by death escaping death) to cut off Goliabs head with his owne sword. But the chiefest of these is Charitie, and the chiefest charitie is that which is most common; nor is there any more common then this of Naigation, where one man is not good to another man, but so many Nations as so many persons hold commerce and intercoure of amitie withall; 60

Salo-

2. Job. 2.

Psal. 107.

1. Sam. 17.

Salomon and Hiram together, and both with Ophir; the West with the East, and the remotest parts of the world are ioyned in one band of humanitie; and why not also of Christianitie? Sidon and Sion, Jew and Gentile, Christian and Ebnike, as in this typical storie? that as there is one Lord, one Faith, one Baptisme, one Body, one Spirit, one Inheritance, one God and Father, so there may thus be one Church truly Catholike, One Pastor and one Sheepfold? And this also wee hope shall one day be the true Ophirian Navigation, when Ophir shall come into Ierusalem, as Ierusalem then went vnto Ophir. Meane while, wee see a harmonie in this Sea-trade, and as it were the consent of other Creatures to this consent of the Reasonable, vnited by Navigation, howsoever by Rites, Languages, Customes and Countries separated. Heauen conspires with the inferior Elements, and yeelds, as it were, a Sea Card in the Sun and Stars. The Elements which euery where else are at open warres, herein agree in sweetest symphonie; the Earth yeeding Shores, Capes, Bayes and Ports, as netts; the Aire windes as wings to these artificiall Sea-fowles (so esteemed at their first sight by the Americans, and by the Negros) and the Sea admitting strange Children into her Familie, and becoming a Nurse against her Nature, to the Earths generation. What shall I say more? Omne tulit punctum qui miscuit utile dulci. To the many profitable effects of Navigation, many pleasures may be added both of Reason in speculation, and of Sense in more then sensuall delight. Salomon in his Ophirian voyage furnished himselfe with Gold and Siluer, and other solid commodities: with Almuggins trees also, yea with Apes and Peacocks, the one for the muscicall delights of the Temple, the other domesticall and naturall. But I am plunged in an Ocean, when I goe about the Oceans praise, which goes about all things: I shall sooner drowne my selfe in these Deepes, then measure the true depth of the Seas commendations, or Nauiate thorow the commodities of Navigation by commerce abroad by his owne, or by Customes at home by others employments. The Text it selfe is a Sea, and needes a better Steerel man to instruct in these Points of Salomons Compasse, which saith more for Navigation then I can, who yet to shew my loue and honour of that Noble Science haue aduentured to say this, to pay this as Custom for the whole Worke, wherein are returned so many returns from Sea. And now it is high time we come to the History it selfe, and historicall or litterall sense; the first in our intention, howsoever last in execution.

§. VII.

Of Ezion Geber, Eloth, and the Red Sea: that of Edom it receiued that name, and communicated it to the Indian Ocean, by the Phoenician Navigations frequent in those times to India.

And King Salomon made a Nauie of Ships in Ezion Geber, which is beside Eloth, on the shoare of the Red Sea in the Land of Edom, &c. 1. Reg. 9. 26.

This is the first and best testimonie of a holy Nauie. Noah had by Diuine Wisdome and Precept built a Ship, which preserved the remainders of the Old, and beginnings of the New World, a figure of that Baptisme which now saueth vs by the resurrection of Iesus Christ. The Temple, a later and liuelier figure of Heauen and Saluation it selfe, must bee furnished with due materials by a whole Fleet of Ships, which shall not saue alone from dangers, but crowne with fulnesse of ioy and glory; this typically then renewed by Salomon for new supplies euery Trinitie of yeares; but there the Eternall Trinitie shall at once bee the Temple, the Sunne, the exceeding great reward, and all in all for euer. No passage was found for Israel out of Egypt to the Wildernesse (a type of the life by Faith) nor for abundance of the Temples riches the shadow of glory, but by the Red Sea; so meritorious is the blood of our Redeemer, which, by bloody sweat, whippings, and a thorny Crowne, welled Springs of the water of life out of all parts of his body; out of his hands and feet yeelded the foure Riuers which watered the Paradise of God; out of his pierced side and heart flowed a sea, a Red Sea of water and blood to saue, to enrich vs, to purchase our Iustification by Grace, and beginnings of Sanctification growing vnto perfect Glory. 1. Pet. 3. 21.
Apoc. 21. 2, 3.
Gen. 15. 1.
1. Cor. 15.

But as all faire things are farre from easie possession, so is it with Heauen, and all her mysteries, so is it with vs in this Voyage of Salomon, to know where this Ezion-geber was, from whence he set sayle, and to come to that Ophir, where he made his Voyage: touching both which, things otherwise enough difficult are made the harder by those mysts, which disagreeing opinions haue raised in our way. The Text giueth three markes to know the first, that it was beside Eloth, on the shoare of the Red Sea, and in the Land of Edom. This third marke of Ezion-geber is delineated by Moses, Deut. 2. 8. and before in Num. 33. 35. made the two and thirtieth Station of the Israelites remouing, or march in the Wildernesse. And heerein our Maps of that Chapiter, were in the former Bibles much to blame, which are in that and other respects much amended, in the Map of the Holy Land added to the last Translation. Now that it was on the shoare of the Red Sea, and not on the Mediterranean, this Text proueth: and the conceite of Goropius in this kinde that denieth Idumaea to extend to the Red Sea, and auereth that this Fleet was set forth from the Idumean. 1. Gorop Becan.
Hispanic. l. 5.

- dumæan Mediterraneæ* shoare, it is as many other disputations of his, more full of industry then wit, of wit then learning, of learning then iudgement. Strange are his conceptions, and strong his dilceptions, bat hauing weake foundations (grounded commonly on names and wordes buried vnder succession of rubbilhes) they proue in the end (as Ioseph Scaliger speaketh) but Docta nugæ, more wordy then worthy guides, which doe but verba dare. Againe, that Iosephus placeth Esiongeber at Berenice, is either a marginall note of some nouice Geographer crept into the Text, or else an old error; for Berenice is on the Egyptian shore, Esiongeber on the Arabian. Iosephus placeth it neere Elana: and in the Text Eloth is set a guide to Esiongeber. Now Eloth being written in the holy tongue עֶלְוֶת and עֶלְוֶת was by transmigration shifted and remoued to diuers pronuntiations, a thing vnuall in Ebrow names; both of places and persons. Hee that seeth how John or Iames are transported in such vnlike sounds from the Originall, in Greeke, Latine, French, Dutch, Spanish, Italian, Englisb, and other languages, in all so vnlike and diuerfied, would scarcely acknowledge them brothers, or to haue any kindred either to the mother tongue, or in those many sifter languages: and so is it commonly with other names.
- Strabo* calls it Αἶλα, Iosephus Εἰλαν, the Latins Elana, and the Gulfe or Bay neere to it is termed Elaniticus. Of this place how it lieth, and how the Ancients were deceiued, you haue the Relations of Don Iohn Di Castro, from his owne eyes and learned iudgement, supposed to bee the same which is now called El Tor, or Toro. Yea the Red Sea is likeliest to haue receiued that name from Edom, as the Pamphiliæ, Ionian, Tyrrhene, British, and other Seas are ordinarily so named of the Principall shoares they wash. Castro hath better examined the rednesse then any man, and compared the Moderne and Ancient opinions with his owne eyes. And for a Booke-traueller, I must needs applaud Maister Fuller, Our Country-man, who in the last Chapter of the fourth Book of his Miscellanea Sacra, hath mustered the testimonies of the Ancients together, and ascribeth the name of Red-sea to Edom, of whom Idumæa tooke name, and of him and it, this Sea. For Ptolemy's Idumæa is farre short of the Ancient, which contained also Nabathæa and their Citie Petra, whence Arabia Petrea receiued the name; Esaus Sword, (of which his Father had prophesied) conquering to both Seas.
- This Edom or Esaus was that Erythras, which the Grecians mention to haue giuen name to that Sea, by translating Edom into Erythras or Erythraus, as Cephas into Petrus. Postellus had stumbled on this Note, which Fuller more fully and learnedly hath opened, as other things also pertaining to our purpose. That there is a rednesse in some parts of that Sea, by reason of the cleerenesse of the water, and abundance of a kind of red Corall, branching it selfe on the transparant bottoms, Castro hath made euident, but that in a small part of that Sea; the like whereof happneth in other Seas of cleerest waters, which show white from sands, Greene from weeds, particoloured with pleasant diuerfied hue, as Pineda citeth the testimony of Fernandez obserued neere to Carthagena in America, euery Stone, Shell, or whatsoeuer else was in the bottom, in those liquid waues yeelding so pleasant and various a tincture, as his many Nauigations had no where else obserued; and Captaine Saris in this Sea, called anciently Erythraean (which name, besides the Arabike and Persian Gulfs, contained the Indian Ocean, so named as it seemeth, from the frequent Nauigations out of Eloth and Esion Geber in Edom vnto India) was one night almost terrified with a glare yeelding light to discerne Letters, suspected to bee some breach, and proued nothing but Cuttle Fish in the bottome.
- But to returne to our Red Sea, Agatharchides in Photius his Bibliotheca, saith it is not called Red of the colour, but ἑρὶς τῆς δυνάμεως of some man which there ruled. The Scriptures call it Siph, Suph, or Souph, translated algosum, caricosum, iuncosum, (to which accordeth Martialis Verse; Quicquid Erythraa niger inuenit Indus in alga) it seemes of the abundance of Rushes and Weeds there growing. The Moors, Turkes, and Traders thereof in later times call it the Sea of Mecca. Mela mentioneth the colour, and the King Erythras there reigning; Plinie addes for the name, The Sunnes repercussion from the Sand and Land; Strabo cites the same out of Eratosthenes, with a tale of Ctesias of a Fountaine emptying his red-okerie waters thereinto, and the Relation of Boxus a Persian, that Erythras a Persian planted a Persian Colonie in an Island thereof. Ouranus in Stephanus tells of the red adioyning Mountaines: the Poets haue their Perseus, and others their other conceits and deceits, which I leaue to their Authors, as also Pineda's later deuce. The nature of that Sea is better deliuered in the voyages of Castro, Middleton, Saris, Downton, Haines, and others in these our Nauigations. But for Eloth and Esiongeber, Maister Fuller is of opinion that Salomon in his great Wisdome, wanting fit Mariners, sent to Hiram for Tyrians and Phenicians, and that a large Colonie was sent by Hiram to inhabit those parts, then subiect to King Salomon, by which meanes Solomon and Hiram enter into societie for the Indian traffick by that Sea of Edom, so to get the riches of the East in possession. This Colonie numerous and strong he placeth at Esiongeber the Arsenal, or fittest place of building Ships, and at Eloth the fittest Port, Mart, and Staple for the Indian merchandise. Thus hee, and very probably: adding that the Hebrew Elath in the singular, and Eloth in the plurall number, was by the Phenicians turned into Ailath, whose singular is Aila, and plurall Ailan: thence the Greekes Aila, Ailana, Eilane, Elana, and the Latins Elana, and by inuersion Laana. This Phenician Colonie hee obserueth to haue bene of most name of all other the Inhabitants thereof. For the Jewish yoke was soone shaken off by the Edomites themselves, after Iehoshaphats death, Iehoram rebelling against God, and the Edomites against him. After that Azariah recovered Elath and built it. It continued not long, but Rezin King of Syria recovered Elath to Syria, and drove the Jewes from Elath, and the Syrians came to Elath, and dwelt there to this day. Thus the Jewes which were the Lords, and received the Customes, were expelled; but the Idumean Natives and Phœnicians, which might bee usefull to the conquerours remained, the Tyrians being Syrophœnicians, and speaking the Syrian language, and by their merchandising so profitable to their Kings.

This Elath was after called Albus Pagus, by Strabo called the chiefe Mart of the Nabateans, whence the Indian and Arabian Merchandise was carried to Petra, thence to Rhinaculura in Phœnicia neere Egypt, and thence dispersed to other places. Thus in the times before the Ptolemys. But in Salomons time, and whiles the Jewes ruled there, they were brought to Ierusalem and to Tyrus; and after that to Myos Hormos and Berenice, Egyptian Ports on the other side of the Red Sea, to be thence conveyed to Alexandria. Avrianus in his time mentioneth the Garrison at Albus Pagus and Custome there taken, the transporting of wares thence to Petra, notwithstanding the Egyptian flourishing. Saint Ierom also placeth Ailat in extremis finibus Palestine, adjoining to the Wildernesse and the Red Sea: Unde ex Egypto in Indiam & inde ad Egyptum navigatur. Sedet autem ibi legio Romana cognomento Decima; Et olim quidem Ailat à veteribus dicebatur, nunc vero appellatur Aila.

Ptolemy placeth Phanicum oppidum, not far from Elana; the Ile Astarte is a Phœnician memorial also; Plinie mentioneth Gens Tyra, and Herodotus the Syrians on the Red Sea shoare; that I pursue no other Antiquities. These Tyrians it seemeth first began the sailing of the Indian Seas, and Habitation on the Arabian shoares, instructed by the Wisdome, and procured by the Friendship of Salomon with Hiram: which they continued vnder many State-changes, till the Mahometan times, the Staple of those Indian Merchandises being altered after the Jewish times, with the chiefe Monarchies, Assyrian, Babylonian, Persian, Ptolemaean, Roman. And this is the onely Phœnix-neast made of sweet Spices, in Nature false (for God made all Fowles at first, and after brought to, and out of the Arke, in both sexes, male and female) but true in this Alegory, the Phœnicians of all the Nations known, being the only skilful Mariners in the Arabian and Indian seas, and from the one, by the other, bringing the Spices and Riches of the East into the West, that skill being euer communicated not by Generation, but by Industry; which made Tyrus (as Ezekiel describeth it) the Phœnix indeed of all Cities of Trade in the World. Master Fuller learnedly addeth the Fables of Bacchus and Hercules their Indian Expeditions, to this of Salomon and Hiram, Hercules being adored of the one, and Iehona of the other, which name by Heathens was perverted to ioβαρος and ioβάρης names of Bacchus in Hesychius; which agreeth to Plutarchs conceit, that the Jewes worshipped Bacchus on their Sabbaths, and deriue the name Sabbatum from σαββα, and σαββα a name of Bacchus, as his Priests were termed σαββα. Now for that Gulte in which Strabo placeth Elana, and calls it therefore Elaniticus, and another towards Egypt, I referre you to Castros following relations, which better knew those parts then Strabo could; Gaza by Strabo and Plinie reckoning seemeth to bee about one hundred and fiftie of our miles or more from thence. Salomon went in Progresse to take care of this his Ophirian Fleet from Ierusalem to Esi-on-geber, almost as farre as from London to Torke.

Ason Geber in Saint Ieroms interpretation signifieth ligna viri, aut lignationes viri, aut dolationes hominis, ἐυλακισμὸς; whence some gather that much Timber grew there usefull for building of Ships: perhaps, and I rather beleue, for the Timbers brought thither as to an arsenall or store-yard for that purpose. For as Woods agree not with Moses his Wildernesse, so I find little mention of Wood in all the Arabike shoare; at lest, later times haue knowne none there. And Solimau the Great Turke, A. 1538. is said to haue brought the materialls of the great Fleet which hee built at Sues in the Red Sea, to invade Dium and expell the Portugalls out of India, from remote Regions, Materia ex longinquis colligi iussit (Damianus à Goes is our Author) illamq; sumptu inestimabili ad mare rubrum vebis curauit. Comito Venetiano, who with other Venetians were forced to that seruice out of their Ships at Alexandria to goe to Cairo and Sues, more particularly relateth that Sues is in a Desert place where no Hearb of any sort groweth, where the Armad for India was made, and all the Timbers, Ironworkes, Tackling, Munitions were brought from Satalia and Constantinople by Sea to Alexandria, and thence carried on the Nile by Zerne (Boats, or Rafts) to Cairo, and thence on Camells to Sues. This Voyage is eightie miles, in which is neither habitation, nor water, nor any thing for life: they carry Nilus water on Camells when the Carouans goe thither. In the Pagans times, it was a great Citie and full of Cisternes, and had a trench from Nilus which filled all their Cisternes, destroyed by the Mahometans, so that now they fetch their water fixe miles off from brackish Wells. There the Turke built a Fleet of seuentie six Vessells of all sorts, &c.

Don Iohn de Castro speakes of this Fleet of Salomon, and sayth, the Timber whereof it was made was brought from Libanon and Antilibanon (so little signe saw hee, or heard of any Trees or Wood in these parts) and saith, that from Toro all the Coast is West, and without any Port

2. Chron. 21.8.

2 Re. 14.22.

2 Reg. 16.6.

The Editio of Avrianus hath

Idumæi & Syri

venerunt, &c.

to which a Manuscript of

M. Fuller agrecali.

Sir. l. 16.

Avriani Periplus

Hier. de loc. Heb.

HONDIVS his Map of the Deserts and Israels Peregrination therein

but Sues, and that therefore Cleopatras Fleet was brought by Land from Nilus, to Sues over the Isthmos. This is in 29. degrees 45. minutes, supposed Arfinos of the Ancients, Some say, Civitas Heronum; and said to be the Turkes Arsenale for his Armada, for those Seas, the Materials being brought from Caramania: which at Castros being there, consisted of one and forty great Gallies and nine great Ships. It seemeth by Sir Henry Middletons Story following, that their strength in those Seas is weake in later times. As that whole Wildernesse yeelded nothing for mans life, but their food was Manna from Heauen, and their apparell was by heavenly power preserved, so here Salomons wisdome is freely giuen, and his Materials for an Ophirian Fleet, and Temple structure must be not naturally there growing. His Mariners also must be borrowed, to shew that the inst line by faith, and in matters of grace, wee have nothing which wee have not received, not growing out of the naturall powers of free will, but framed out of the will freed by diuine grace, agreeing to which Mystery nothing of the Temple was framed in Moriab, nor the noyse of a Hammer once heard; the Tabernacle before built also of Egyptian spoyles; and Israel inherited Cities which they builded not, and Vineyards planted by them: and lastly, Christ himselfe was crucified without the gate, that neither Iew nor Ierusalem may challenge either Monopoly or Merit, but all may bee ascribed to meere mercie and free grace, Non nobis domine, not to vs Lord, not to vs but to thy Name be giuen the glory.

1. Cor. 7. 4.

§. VIII.

of Ophir, diuers opinions weighed and censured; whether the Compasse was knowne to the old World; that the remote parts were lately inhabited, the New World but newly, and a great part thereof not yet.

10 His Golden Countrey is like Gold, hard to find and much quarrelled, and needes a wise Myner to bring it out of the Labyrinths of darknesse, and to try and purifie the Myners themselves and their reports. And here our best Athenians seeme Owles indeed, which dozed with Salomons splendour hide themselves affarre off, and seeke for Easterne Ophir in Peru, and the West Indies. Such conceits haue transported Postellus, Goropius Becanus, Arias Montanus, Vatablus, Possennius, Genebrard, Marinus Brixianus, Sa, Engubinus, Auenarius, Garcia, Noble Morney, and many others by their authority. Their reason is spelled out of the Letters of Ophir and Peru, so neere of Kinne. Arias Montanus in his Phaleg is both large and little in this point, saying, both much and nothing; for from the Scriptures stiling the Ophirian Gold פֶּרֶץ Parauaim, he gathereth that it was brought from the two Perues, one of which he maketh new Spain, and the other that which now is called Peru; or the Northerne and Southerne moyties of America; and that those parts were commonly traded in ancient times. He maketh the rowe of hills which runne from Panama, to the Magellau Straits to be Mount Sepbir: for so it is said Gen. 10. Gen. 10. 26, 27, 28, 29, 30: speaking of Ioktan Sonnes, the brother of Peleg or Phaleg; And Ioktan begat Almodad, and Sheleph, and Hazarmaneth, and Ierah And Hadoram, and Uzal and Diklah, and Obal and Abimael and Sheba. And Ophir and Hauilah and Iobab: all these were the sonnes of Ioktan. And their dwelling was from Mesha, as thou goest unto Sephar, a Mount of the East; or as Tremellius, ad montes orientis usq.

30 If learned Montanus had viewed his owne Map only, hee should haue seene his Ophir in the West, and not in the East: and if it be said Salomons fleet went by the East to the Westerne parts of the World, as the Philippina and Moluccan shippes of the Spaniards vse to doe, yet Moses speakes of the dwelling and habitations (not of Iourneyings and Nauigations) which God after the Babylonian conspiracy had allotted to the generations of men; their dwelling must then bee in regard of Moses when he wrote this in the Desert, or of the scattering from Babylon, whereof he wrote. But these parts of America, are more than halfe the Globe distant from those places Eastward, and much neerer by the West.

40 Againe, the name Peru or Piru is a vaine foundation, for diuers places (see Ortelius his Thesaurus Geograph.) haue like, or the same names, neyther is any part of America by the Inhabitants called Peru, but this name was accidentally by the Spaniards ascribed to those beginnings of their Discoueries on the South Sea, and continued to that great Kingdome of the Incas found by Pizarro. Garcilasso de la Vega of the Inca bloud Royall by his mother, sonne to one of the Spanish Conquerors, borne and brought vp at Cozco, chiefe City of Peru, sayth that they had no generall name for the Kingdome, but Tauantinsuyu, that is, the foure parts of the World; nor acknowledge the appellation of Peru: but the first Discouerers seising on a fisherman in a Riuer, asked him of the Countrey, and he amazed and not vnderstanding them, answered Beru, and anon added Pelu, as if he should say, my name (if you aske me thereof) is Beru, and I was fishing in the Riuer, Pelu being the common name of a Riuer. The Spaniards, as if he had answered directly, corrupted a name of both those words, which they vnderstood not, and called the Region Peru, a name which the Natiues had neuer heard. The like they did in another Prouince, where asking a Natiue what was the name of the Countrey, he answered, Tectetan, Tectetan, that is, I vnderstand you not, which they corruptly called Iucatan and Tucatan, as if the Indian had affirmed that to be the name of the Region. The like casuall names he obserueth of other American places.

50 The Iesuite Blas Valera, in his History of Peru affirmeth the same, that Peru is not the proper name but accidentall, which the Natiues know not. Acosta acknowledgeth it vnkowne to the Naturals, and an occasioned name from a small Riuer, which Vega saith was called so first by those Spaniards, which there tooke the fisherman. Thus the name which they would make as old as Salomon, began but Anno 1515. at the most, and that which is extended to New Spaine, and Peru, was knowne in neither, nor in any place else of the World.

Thirdly, I answered that Peru was not inhabited, nor yet New Spaine, one thousand yeares after Salomons time; of which I shall speake more anon, and in my following Discourse of the Apostolicall peregrinations.

60 Fourthly, neither could so long a Voyage then haue beene performed in three yeeres, beeing farre more then to haue compassed the Globe, which hath cost Drake and others three yeeres worke: where their worke was not in Mynes but in quicke fights.

Fifthly, this could not then be done without the Compasse. Pineda may conceit himselfe that those times knew it, but the Phenicians haue in no Story left any such memoriall; nor others of Sepharuaim.

2. Reg. 17. is a name as like, and true, adding but a Sa mech to Parua im a name of a place subdued by the Assyrians.
Vega.com. reales l. 1. c. 4. 5. See his story Tom. 2. l. 7. c. 13.

Lopez de Gomara Gen. hist. c. 52.

Blas Val. hist.
Peru.
Acost. hist. l. 1. cap. 13.

Lem. de Occultis
Nat. mirac. l. 3. c.
4.
Full. Miscel. l.
4. c. 19.
Ec. l. 10.

them, yet these were Salomons Sea men. Leuius Lemnius, and Master Fuller would haue vs beleeue that the Ancients had the Compasse within the compasse of their art, by reason of the Phanicians Marine skill and experience, which we say might be as much as it was, by the Starres, the Monsoons, the Soundings, and Shores. Another reason is, the Learning and skill of those times, whereof Salomon saith, Is there any thing whereof it may be said, this is new? it hath beene alreadie of old time which was before vs. It might therefore be knowne in those times, and by barbarous inuasions be after lost, and by better times restored: I answer that the times were learned before and after Salomon, but when that learning should by Barbarian incursions be lost, I know not. The Egyptian, Affyrian, Chaldean inuasions might rather increase and disperse, then eclipse and abolish learning, being then more learned then the Greekes, who borrowed their very Letters from the Phanicians. The Persian times are knowne, and the Greeke Learning then grew to the highest pitch, when their Empire succeeded, and in loue of Learning exceeded the other. Hippocrates, Socrates, Plato, Xenophon, Aristotle, and before them Pythagoras and other Philosophers flourished before the Persian ruines, and trauelled into the East for that Learning, which they brought into Greece and Italse.

Ioseph cont. Ap-
pionem.

See Voss. de hist.
græcis in foure
Bookes.

Salomon had all knowledge necessary to Morall, Politike and sauing wisdom, and to the ends for which God gaue him so large a heart. But the Sea hath bounds, & so had Salomons wisdom. Somewhat was left for Iohn Baptist to be greater then he, or any borne of women. Neither was the knowledge of the Compasse necessary to Salomon, who without it could and did compasse the Gold of Ophir. * About 13000 miles space. Perhaps the Whale constellation took vp this Sea Whale into his Chariot, some part of the way.

The Romans borrowed their Arts from the Greekes, neither doe we read of Learning euaporated in Barbarian flames, till the Deluges of those Sauages in the Romane Empire, which yet continued both Empire and Learning in the East, till the West had in good measure recovered it selfe out of those Myths, and the Barbarous Saracens had growne louers of Learning, and our Teachers. And yet, had there beene such Barbarians which had rooted that skill out of the World (which is vnlikely, that Marine skill beeing the best meanes to encrease their Empire, to enrich their Cofters, to doe them other seruices in Warre and Peace, the ancient Conquerors vsing Fleets also to their purposes) yet some of the Bookes and Monuments of all Ages, from Salomons time being left to that of the Romans, as appeareth by Iosephus so well acquainted in the Tyrian Libraries, and other Authors of diuers Nations, and by the fragments which are come to our hands, and by whole Bookes of Voyages in the Indian and Mediterranean Seas, as this Booke will declare; it cannot be but some mention of the act, if no description of the Art, would haue remained to Posteritie.

Now for Salomons testimony, it confuteth those which make him the author and first founder of the Loadstone (which to M. Fuller and others seemeth probable) if nothing were then new; it may aswell be alleaged for many Generations before, that they also made ships at Ezion-geber, to goe to Ophir for like Rarities; and against all new Inuentions in any Age: which sense is also contradicted by Salomon in the same Chapter, Verse 16. Where hee saith, that bee had more wisdom then all they that had beene before him in Ierusalem: and 1. Reg. 3. 12. There was none like be-fore thee, nor after thee shall arise any like vnto thee. This was then a new thing vnder the Sunne, this his wildome, which brands vs for Fooles, if wee make him contradict himselfe and diuine Veritie.

The Scripture would goe one mile with them and shew the vanitie both of men and other creatures, and they post and force it two, applying what Salomon spake of kindes, to indiuiduall acts and euents; which might aswell enforce Platoes great yeere, and a personall reuolution of each man withall his conceits, words and acts. The Magnete is no new thing, but this vse of the Magnete was newly knowne two thousand yeares after Salomons death. The Argument to mee seemeth a merrie one, rather then serious, and I will answer it accordingly with a iest. The Iesuite Pineda (which out of Lemnius citeth these Arguments to proue that the Compasse is ancient) is no new thing as a Man; but as a person, as a Iesuite (a new order which beganne 1540.) as an Author which conceiteth that that great fish which tooke vp Ionas carried him in three dayes quite thorow the Mediterranean, and round about the African vault * Circumference (statim atq; deglutitur Ionas, reuertitur cætus velocitate incredibili ad mare Indicum & Sinum Arabicum, per Mediterraneum & Gaditanum fretum, immans totius Africa circuitu, these are his owne words) these are new things vnder the Sunne, and this a new interpretation, which himselfe prefaceth with Papa! nouam & inauditam exponendi rationem! These particulars are new, and yet that text is true. I wil not adde (that were too serious and seuer) that all Iesuitisme is new, and their Expositions of Scriptures, Councils, Fathers for the Roman Monarchie, are all new, New-gay-nothings, Vanitie of vanities and vexation of spirit; yet to lye (the genus generalissimum of Iesuiticall tenents, as they are Iesuites; CHRISTIANS is a name too old for them) is as old as the old Serpent.

But lest I be ouer-bold with our Author, and may seeme to passe from a new argument to an old quarrell, and from ieausting to ierking; I contayne my selfe, lest any Veterator take mee for a Nouelist; and with reuerence and thanks for his better paines, craue pardon for this ioco-serium, and come to his third Argument out of Plautus, where in speech of sayling, hee hath these words,

Plauti Mercat.

Huc secundus ventus nunc est, cape modo versoriam,
Hic Fauonius serenus est, isthic Auster imbricus.

Here Lemnius, Giraldus de Nauighs, and Calcagninus with others mentioned by him, doe interpret Verforia of the Compasse: whom Pineda beleueth not, and yet saith, hee hath quod nostro Acofta reddere possimus requirenti aliquod idoneum ex antiquitate huius acicula testimonium: notwithstanding, hee coniectureth it to bee some pole to thrust the Veffell (if any Instrument) and acknowledgeth that the Oares and Rudder might bee Verforia, in regard of turning the ship, and lastly concludeth it to be spoken without respect to any Nautike Instrument, interpreting Cape Verforiam to returne: and that Plantus his actor did point to the Heauens, not to any Instrument, when he said, hic secundus ventus est, hic Faunius, &c. which seemeth to bee the Poets true sense.

- 10 Pineda addes, that we ought not to doubt but that Salomon knew this of the Loadstone aswel as other Stones and Herbs. I answer we haue a better Loadstone and Leadstone for one then for the other; the Scripture speaking of him more as a Herbarist, then as a Lapidarie and Mariner. He alleageth, that the attractiue facultie would reueale that Polare. I answer, that experience hath produced many Ages to testifie the contrarie; which knew the one, not the other. His Argument from the store of Load-stones in those Easterne parts, concludes nothing for the skill, any more then that the naked artlesse Indians in Hispaniola were better Gold-smiths then the Europeans, because they had more Gold. His last Argument is least, from the Diuine Prouidence which would not permit men so many Ages to be ignorant hereof. For heere we come to an, O altitudo! O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God, how unsearchable are his iudgements, and his wayes past finding out? For who hath knowne the minde of the Lord, or who hath bene his Counsellor?

Rom. 11. 33, 34.

I like much better that which Pineda addes of the Ancients abilitie to sayle without kenne of the shoare, without Magneticall helpe, which Strabo, Arianus and Plinie acknowledge: and Aratus saith, that the Phanicians followed the Load-starre (not the Load-stone) which Tully citeth also out of him.

Arrianus mentioneth the helpe of the Monsoons (as now they terme them) or seasons of the Windes, obseruing a constant course in the Indian Ocean, which with experience of the frequented Coast, might easily teach Hippalus a compendious passage thorow the Mayne, or at least further from kenne of Land. Whereupon Plinie hauing related the former course, addes

- 30 Secuta etas propiorems cursum tutioremq. &c. Compendia inuenit Mercator, Lib. 6. cap. 23. They also obserued the flying of certain Birds which they caried with them. But al these could nothing helpe to a Peruan Voyage from the Red Sea, where the knowne Starres were laid asleepe in Telbys lap; where neither Birds carried with them, could instruct to any neere shoare, nor any Birds in the mayne Ocean were to be seene, where the Monsoons and Seasons of the winde are so diuersified; where without the Compasse all things are out of compasse, and nothing but miracle or chance (which neuer produce Arts) could saue or serue them. I haue spoken of the Load-stone in another place to which I referre the Reader, least that makes mee wander and drowne, which directeth and saueeth others.

Cic. Acad. 1. Ego meas cognitio- nes sic dirigo, non ad illam paruulam Cynosuram, Qua fidunt duce nocturna Phenices in altum. ut ait Aratus &c. Certior est Cynosura tamen sulcantibus aequor, &c. Arat.
In the beginning of the second books. The sixth section.

- 40 Lastly, Peru could not be Ophir, if wee conceiue that SALOMON brought thence Iuorie; and Peacocks. For Peacocks they read Parrots, and for Iuorie they are forced to take it vpb by the way in some place of Africa or India, which distraction must needs prolong the Voyage, which without such lets could not (as before is obserued) in three yeares bee performed. As for such (Asse for such, I might haue said) which thinke so huge and vast a tract of Land as that New World, might bee now emptie of Elephants which then it had (for it is confessed by all Classike Authors, that America neuer saw Elephant) as England is ridde of Wolues, wherewith it hath sometimes abounded; Why should not other kinds of Creatures bee vterly destroyed aswell as these, being more hurtfull to the Inhabitants? I meane, Tigres, Leopards, and other rauenous beasts whereof America hath more then a good many. And if they should destroy Elephants for their Iuorie, what piece of Iuorie was euer found in Peru or all America, before 50 our men came there? If Salomons men had destroyed all, it were inhumane to interuert after-ages. The hunting of Wolues in the North of Scotland at this day, and the huntings vsed by many Nations, Tartars, Cafres, &c. easily tell vs how England was cleered of Wolues; Armies, or Multitudes in a large Ring, encircling the beasts, & with Fire, Waters, Dogs, Armes, &c. bringing all into a narrow Compasse, and there killing them. But in the New World that would haue required another World to haue done it. I adde that no Elephant could come into Peru but by Miracle, the cold and high Hilles euery way encompassing, beeing impassable to that Creature, as wee shall see in our Spanish entrance with Horses. Yea, I auerre further, that an Elephant could not liue in Peru, but by Miracle. For the Hilles are cold in extremitie, and the Valleyes, till the Incas made artificiall Riuers were without water, it neuer rayning there, whereas the Elephant delights in places very hote and very moist. But I deferue blame to fight with Elephants in America, which is with lesse then a shadow, and to lay siege to Castles in the Aire.

60 These arguments haue no lesse force against Columbus and Vatablus their Ophir in Hispaniola: which from the Red Sea makes a farther fetch with like or greater improbabilities. This error

A second opinion for Hispaniola.

Colon a happier Discoverer of the new World then the old. was more fortunate then learned. For out of a right rule that the World is round, and that therefore men might sayle to the East by the West, Columbus first, and presently after him Sir Sebastian Cabot made their Discoveries, and stumbled on a New World by the way, whereof they had not dreamed.

Cabots Voyage was to seeke Cathay or China. Columbus his intent was for the East Indies, and finding much Gold in Hispaniola, without examining other difficulties, and falsly supposing himselfe to haue attayned the East Indies, he called that Iland Ophir; which conceit Francis Vatablus receiued.

Third opinion for Sophala.

See infl. 9. c. 12

Barros Dec. 1. l. 10.

T. Lopez ap. Ramusium Tom. 1.

* Infra Tom. 1. pag. 1549.

A fourth and fifth opinions.

A sixth opinion.

Ios. Acoft. l. 1. 14.

Inf. l. 4. c. 16.

See §. 12. for Acoft. opinion. Other opinions.

Gen. 10. 31. 32.

Now for Sofala or Cefala, many arguments are alleaged by Ortelius (who here placeth Salomons Ophir) and others. And indeed the abundance of Gold, and the excellencie thereof, as likewise of Siluer, there taken out of the Mynes; Peacocks, or Parrots, whether you choose to interpret; Elephants, Apes, (Monkeyes and Baboones) excellent Woods for such vses as the Almuggim Trees were applied; all these, together with the easie Nauigation from the Red Sea thither alongst the African shoare; and lastly the name it selfe may seeme to plead for a Sofalan Ophira, or Sophira (as Iosephus calls it) in this place. Ioan dos Santos liued eight yeares in those parts, and alleageth many things to this purpose. He saith that neere to Massapa, is a great high Hill called Fura, in the Kingdome of Monomotapa, to which hee will not suffer the Portugals to passe lest the rich Mynes should cause their too potent Neighbour-hood. On the top of that Hill are old ruinous wals of lime and stone. Barrus saith, there are also vnknowne Letters ouer the gate: the people ignorant of such workes, say they were built by Devils, thinking them impossible to men, iudging others by themselves. They are five hundred and ten miles from Sofala, in one and twentie degrees of Southerly latitude. He coniectureth it to bee Ptolemys Agysimba, the buildings being still called Simbaoni. Thomas Lopez addes, that the Moors affirmed, that their Bookes and ancient Writings contayned, that King Salomon fetched his Gold in his three yeares Voyage from thence.

At that time 1502. there were warres, but formerly the Moors of Mecca and Zidem, vsed to carrie two Millions of Mitigals (which are about eight shillings a piece) yeerely from thence. But to returne to Santos, hee alleageth a Tradition of the Natiues, that these Mynes and Buildings belonged to the Queene of Saba, and that others ascribe them to Salomon, making this Fura or Afura to be Ophir, See the place, * and his pleading of this point, wherein I could be persuaded to be of his minde, if that Moses did not place Ophir Eastward, Gen. 10. 30. Who (it is likely) gaue name to this golden Region.

There are that seeke for Tarshish at Carthage, and some I haue knowne which place Ophir neere Gambra. Of this minde was Captaine Iobson, which trauelled vp that Riuer, nine hundred and sixtie miles, and heard such golden reports of the In-land Countreyes, as this Worke will from him deliuer to you. And indeed I doe easily perswade my selfe, that the richest Mynes of Gold in the World are in Africa; especially in the heart of the Land from the Line to the Tropike of Capricorne. (See our Relations out of Bermudez, Iobson, Battell and others) and I cannot but wonder, that so many haue sent so many, and spent so much in remoter Voyages to the East and West, and neglected Africa in the midst; which perhaps might prooue as much rich as neerer, then both the Indies. But Rectum est index sui & obliqui: if wee shew Ophir to bee in the East Indies, it cannot be in America or Africa, vnlesse we be of Acoftas opinion, who howsoeuer he thinketh that Salomons Gold, &c. came from the East Indies, yet coniectureth that Ophir and Tharshis signifie no certayne Regions, but are taken in a generall sense, as the word India is with vs, applied to all remoter Countreyes. Ophir might be any of the former, remote farre from the Red Sea.

But I can tell that India receiued his name from the Riuer Indus, still called Sinde, (which hath also foiled all our Geographers hitherto, making it to passe thorow Cambaya, which Sir Thomas Roes Voyage will confute, that it is lesse maruell if Ophir trouble vs so much) and because the Countreyes beyond India, were so meanly knowne by their true names, and Indus came from so remote Regions, they continued and extended that name to them: and (as euen now you heard) Colon by misprision called America, India, not dreaming of a Westerne, but supposing that by the West, he had arriued in the Eastern India. Now, why Ophir should be so dilated, I see no such reason. Tarshish we shall better examine after. And for others opinions of Ophir to be an Iland in the Red Sea called Vrphe, or Ormuz in the Persian, they are not worth examining: beeing not able to yeeld Gold, and the other Commodities which Salomon sought.

The truth of Ophir must as from a deepe Myne bee drawne out of Moses, Gen. 10. Wherein although wee cannot approue the opinion of those which conceiue Moses in that Chapter, to haue set downe the iust number of Languages and Nations, as if there were seuentie two of each, and neither more nor fewer; yet it must needs be granted, and the Text plainly auereth, These are the Families of the sonnes of Noah after their generations, in their Nations, and by these were the Nations diuided in the Earth after the Flood: and particularly of the Sonnes of Shem (here questioned) These are the sonnes of Shem, after their families, after their tongues, in their lands, after their Nations. So that wee gather that the first originalls of Nations are there mentioned, such especially ally as concerned his Ecclesiasticall story, or was necessary for the Church to take knowledge of. For neither were they all differing Nations and Languages which hee mentioneth, nor are all Nations or Languages there mentioned. For eleuen of them are the sons of Canaan, which all peopled that little region, which Israel after by Ioshuas conduct possessed: al which also spake one language, or else Abraham & the Patriarks must haue learned many tongues in their frequent perambulations; which some thinke the same which the Israelites spake, & iudge it euident in the History of the first Spies, and of Rahabs entertaining of the later Spies; and that it is called by the Prophet, The language of Canaan, Es. 19. 18; and carried thence into Egypt before by the Patriarks, to whom Ioseph spake first by an Interpreter, but in reuealing himselfe, hee with his owne mouth (that is, in their tongue) spake vnto them, when the Interpreter and all others were excluded. And in the whole story of the Old Testament, no difference of language is notified in all the commerce and cohabitations of all sorts of both Nations. * Priscian saith, Lingua Pœnorum Chaldaea vel Hebraea similis: and Saint Ierom, Pœni quasi Phœni, quorum lingua Hebraea magna ex parte confinis est. Saint Augustine often saith as much; and diuers wordes of the language confirme it. As for a Shiboleth, and Siboleth, or some difference of Dialect (which wee see with vs almost in euery Shire) wee make not that a difference of, but in the Language. And so it seemeth it was in the first Ages, before Conquest and Commerce brought in so many new wordes to the Punick language. The Punick Scene in Plautus his Pœnulus, by * Scaliger, M. Selden and others is found a kind of Hebrew, after all those ages and changes. I will not herein contend with M. Fuller and others which haue written contrary. But either they were the same, or not much differing: and (which I principally ayme at) all these eleuen Nations had the same language at lest in the Patriarkes times, and not vnlike the Hebrew, which was so little altered, after such alterations of time and place.

* Prisc. l. 5.
Hier. on. ad Ier. 5.
Arnob. in Ps.
104. Aug. de
verb. Dom. l. 3. cont. lit. P. l. 13.
De C. D. l. 6.
Or. c. Ber. Aid. c. 16.
Anteg. l. 2. c. 2.
\ Scalig. in 170.*
legom. vlt. edit.
Emend. Temp.
Selden. de D. S. prolegom. c. 2.
 The Spies ha-
 uing such terrible education in Egypt had no meanes to learn tongues;
Gen. 45. 12.

Now because that Countrey was giuen to Abrahams posteritie, Moses is more exact in bounding the places, & intimating the peoples, then in all Ioktans posterity (which it seemeth peopled one hundred times so much Countrey) as not pertaining to Israels Inheritance, and not much to their neighborhood or knowledge. And if Salomon imployed aboue eight score thousands in continuall workes so many yeeres for the Temple, how many shall we thinke imployed themselves in that Babylonian structure, which occasioned that diuersifying of languages; and which is therefore likely to haue happened long after Pelegs birth, by which time the world could not likely be so peopled? Neither may wee deny more then ordinary multiplication in those first Ages after the Floud: though we grant a good space after Pelegs birth, for how else could such a multitude haue assembled so soone to such a purpose? Wee see the like admirable increase of the Israelites in Egypt, in despite of bloody butchery and slavery, which yet asked aboue two hundred yeeres, from seuentie persons. And can any man thinke that where a World was multiplied, that the Fathers had no more Sonnes then are there mentioned? especially seeing of Sems line, Gen. 11. it is said they begat other sonnes: and of them are expressed fve generations, of the other but two or three, and most of them omitted, except such as most concerned Israel in neighbourhood or other affaires. How could Ioktan yeeld thirteene Nations then, when Peleg giues name to none, till of Abraham, six generations after, some were deriued? I suppose therefore that Moses there names not all Nations, as writing not a Story of the World, but those principally which by vicinitie or Inheritance, or future commerce (as this Ophir and his brethren) it behooued the Israelites to take notice of; especially Him, who was to alter Moses his Tabernacle into so glorious a Temple, and to bee so liuely a figure of a greater then Moses and Salomon both. Nor is it likely but that there was a greater confusion of languages, then into so many as can bee gathered in the tenth of Genesis; or that all there mentioned differed in tongue from each other; for so Shem, Cham, and Japheth should neuer haue vnderstood each other, nor their posteritie. It is probable therefore, that God multiplying the World in so short a space (which, as I said, I rather thinke to haue hapned some good while after Pelegs birth, then at that very time) almost to a miracle, most men of most families were there, and their languages also miraculously multiplied; (The Jewish tradition is that it hapned a little before Pelegs death, as Genebrard obserueth out of them) but being a conspiracy against God, many others were not there and retained their ancient Ebrew; especially the pious and religious Patriarkes. Such perhaps was Peleg himselfe, then a man of yeeres, and therefore his name giuen him of that diuision in others. For if any thinke that Pelegs name intimates the building of Babel at his birth, we see that Abraham, Sarah, and Iacob had their names changed in their riper yeeres.

This diuision of languages caused that dispersion, Therefore is the name of it called Babel (or Confusion) because the Lord did there confound the language of all the Earth; and from thence did the Lord scatter them abroad vpon the face of all the Earth. Yet cannot we say that presently this was wholly executed; but euen then so many as spake one language, dwelt together in one Region: Other Persons and Families in other Regions, which then were thinly planted, and in proceesse of time more fully peopled, and Colonies also deriued to people remoter Regions. For although Man, (that is Mankind) hath a right to all the Earth, yet heere there was a very great part of the Earth vnpeopled in Moses time, yea to these dayes of Ours. And if we marke all the Heads of Families mentioned by Moses, wee shall see none, which at that time had inhabited so farre as this our Britaine: but how much neerer the Regions were to the Arkes resting, and Babels confusion, so much sooner were they peopled. Sure it is that some Ages after, the best and most frequent Habitations, and neereft those parts were but meanly peopled, as appeareth by Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, Lot, Laban, and their children wandring and remoouing from place to place with their great Flockes and Herds, as if Grounds and Pastures had then euen in the Regions of Syria and Canaan beene of small value. Compare Abrahams time with Ioshua, and you shall see a great difference, more Cities and Villages seeming then builded, then before were Families of note, and that in foure hundred yeeres space. Ammon, Moab, Ishmael, all the Families of the sonnes of Keturah, and that of Edom, with innumerable other were not in rerum natura, neither the language (which it seemes by mixture with others was altered) nor the Nation.

America newly inhabited.

Chaldea, Syria

See Acosta, and the Picture story To. 2. l. 5. c. 7. & Vega his Inca story, l. 7. c. 13.

Yea how poore a thing was our Britaine in Cæsars time, either for the numbers or ciuilitie? How thinly is all the Northerne America, from thirtie degrees vpwards towards the Pole inhabited? a world of Continent by no probabilitie, containing in the whole so many people as some one small Region in Asia or Europe. All Virginia, New-England, and New-foundland, cannot haue (notwithstanding such commodious habitations and innumerable commodities) so many Inhabitants, so farre as my industry can search, as this one Citie with the Suburbs containeth, though we adde all euen to the Pole, and take one hundred miles within Land alongst the Coast all the way; which easily argueth the later peopling thereof. Neither is there any thing in all America which doth not indeed proclaime it a New World. For as in the Old World, first there was simplicitie of Herdmen, Shepherds, and Husbandmen; and after that Trades, Merchandise, Riches, Cities, Kingdomes, more curious Rites Ciuill and Religious, and some Monuments of them (which those which had, esteemed others for the want therof Barbarians & Sauages, as a wilder kind of men) and this Ciuilitie, Cities, Populations and Kingdomes began in Assyria, Egypt, and other places neerer the first confusion, and after proceeded to Greece (whom the Egyptians called children, as is before said, for their later Ciuilitie, Arts, and Histories) and thence to Italy, which was long swaddled in Roman rusticitie, and later attained to politer Sciences; and thence into France (as wee now call it) and after that into Britaine, and later into Germany, all by Roman Conquests and imparting Arts with their Armes: so may wee iudge of the New World, wherein two Empires were growne great, ciuill, rich, and potent, after their manner, as our Mexican and Inca stories will shew in due place. This their greatnesse produced stories of their Acts by Quippos, Pictures and other Monuments, which deriued to posteritie the knowledge of former times and acts. By which we may gather that the Northerne America was first peopled, and that probably from the Easterne or Northerne parts of Asia; and communicated people to the Southerne parts, the Northerne Antiquities of Mexico, being ancients then those of Peru. Those first stories also (see them in the Picture-Booke, and in Vega and Acosta following) how raw and infantly beginnings and proceedings doe they shew? What barbarisme? Yet neither containing memorialls of one thousand yeeres: So that allow sixe hundreth yeeres to meere breedings and barbarous infancy, with creeping in dispersions, as out of the cradle of American humanity amongst them, till they were fuller of People and Townes, where one wit whetts another to new deuices, yet we scarcely come to the times of Christ and his Apostles. I may adde, that till about one thousand two hundred yeeres after Christ, neither of those Empires were worthy the names of pettie Kingdomes, and euen then had scarcely crept out of the shell.

Now for Ilands in the Seas betwixt Asia and them, as also along the North Sea, as they call it, on the Easterne shoare of America, in the North and South parts thereof also, these Relations will shew you Worlds of them not yet peopled. The Southerne Continent is yet but saluted on the Shoares and Ilands, of which we may no lesse coniecture much emptinesse. For the fulnesse of the Continent disburthens it selfe into Ilands; and fulnesse of the first peopled parts, Asia, Africa, and Europe, made them seeke to root out one another by the Sword, or to possesse vacant places by Sea or Land, which either chance or industry had found. But except Deucalion and Pyrrha had sowne stones to procreate Men, or Cadmus his sowne teeth had procreated Armies, or the Clouds had rained Peoples, as they are said to doe Frogs, I know not how wise and learned men (by their leaues inconsiderately enough) fill China and America with people in those dayes before Moses and Abraham, and find great commerce and knowledge of the New World, when the Old was but yesterday begun. So necessary to Humane and Diuine knowledge is Geographic and History, the two Eyes with which wee see the World, without which our greatest Clerkes are not the wisest men, but in this part blind and not able to see farre off. If any deride this as paradoxicall and new, I say againe, that in America alone, so much as hath beene discovered, and whereof knowledge from ey-witnesses hath comne to my hand, partly in the Continent, partly in Ilands, as much (and in great part as commodious for mans vſe) as all Europe, is either wholly vnhabited, or so thinly inhabited, that men roague rather then dwell there, and so as it would feed and sustaine a hundreth, perhaps a thousand times as much people by due husbandry.

§. IX.

IOCTANS Posteritie seated in the East parts of Asia, amongst them, Ophir in India ultra Gangem, where CHRYSE was of old, and now is the Kingdome of Pegu, and the Regions adioyning.

Africa fell to Chams part, with some adioyning Regions of Asia; Asia it selfe in greatest part to Shem, and Europe with Asia Minor, and the Northerne parts of Asia to Iapheth. Their very names haue left memorialls of them, as Armenianus, Iunius, Broughton, and others haue obserued, to whose Commentaries I referre the Reader.

10 But for Ioctans ionnes, we find in and neere to India, the prints of all their names. Elmodad hath left his name in the Hill Emodus, whence the Indian Riuer flow, and Comedus, the greatest Hills of Asia, elsewhere called Taurus, and by diuers names as it runneth thow diuers Countreys, from the one end of Asia to the other: also in the Themosea, or Thetmontia in Sarmatia. Of Sbeleph are the Mountaines Seriphi, whence Oxus floweth. Seiloris is a famous Iland in these dayes. Of Hazarmaneth, Sarmatia; of Ierah, Aria and Arachosia; of Hadoram the Oriz, Oxus, Oxindrac; also the Adraista, Andreisti, Adreste; Of Uzal, Muziris, Musopalle, Ozoana, Oxus, Udia, or Odia; a Citie, and Udezza a Kingdome, in India; Anzacia, a Citie extra Imaum, and Auxacitis. Of Diklah, Delly, Dankalee, Tacola and Tagola; also Dela, Dekaka, the Laos, Bacola, Bengala, and (by conuersion of D into R, not vnusuall) Rhacan and Arracan; Oriza; Dandagula and Dadala. 20 Of Obal, the Bolita and Cabolita neere Paraponisus; of Abimacl the Mount Imaus, and the Malli in India mentioned by Curtius.

Now for Sheba and Hauilah; Cush had Seba and Hauilah, and his sonne Raamah had also Sheba; all mentioned in the same Chapter: and Iokshan Abraham's sonne by Keturah, begat Sheba; Chush his two sonnes, were Authors of the Sabeans in Arabia, so famous for the Merchandise of Myrrite and Frankincense; some distinguish the Sabai in Arabia deserta (whose posteritie robbed Iob) from the richer Sabeans of Sheba in Arabia Felix, whence that rich Queene called of sheba (that Countrey is called Alicman, that is, the South, to this day) came to visit Salomon. Abraham's Sheba had his habitation Eastward in the Northerly parts of Arabia deserta; as if his kindred by the flesh, the sonnes of Keturah and Hagar (the carnall Israelites, and such which insist on Iustification by their owne Workes of the Law) should neuer haue to doe with Canaan's fertilitye and felicitie, the type of Heauen, Righteousnesse, Peace and Ioy in the Holy Ghost; but distract themselves in wandring errors, & a disconsolate miserable estate, as those Arabians doe to this day. Ioktan's Sheba was Author of the Sabe beyond Ganges; of Sabana, Sabara, Sobanus; and now Siam, Champa, Camboia, are famous in these parts.

Hauila of Chus is hee which planted that Countrey, at the entrance of Susiana in Persia, commended, Gen. 2. for the Gold. And of him also might Abila in Syria, and Analites, a Bay and Port on the Red Sea, and the Analita populi, which thence remoued into Ethiopia, and the Chalybes among the Tragodyte beate names.

40 Ioctans Hauila might giue name to the Ile Surdina, the Gulfe Tanai, to Ana, Martanan, Canelan also, and Cublan all Kingdomes lately subiect to the King of Pegu. The Anares in the Northerne parts might bee a deduction from him, Chaberis also and the Auasian a Bactrian Nation, by some called Sauadij, and the Auchata, where Hispanis springeth; the Abij and Indian Abali, and Zeba; Abarimon also in Scythia, and Iesual, a Kingdome in these daies. Of Iobab came the Iabadij, the Ibi, or 'Icol (an Indian Nation) the Sobi, and Sarmatian Ibiones; Iacubel also in the Kingdome of Pegu, the Ile Iaua, Iamba, and in old times Barebe and Bepinga.

Some impression of the name of Ophir is left in Ophar, a Sarmatian Riuer, and the Opharite, and in those names of the Hil Taurus, Paropamisus, Pharphariades, otherwise Pariades, Parithenasis, Paritao, Chaboras, Oscobar, Pariedrus, Para; Choatra, Parthaus, Tapurins, Opurocarra, Bepyrus, Parfuetus, Paryadres. I might adde the renowned Indian Iland Taprobane, the Prasij, Hippuros, the Citie Paraca, Palibothra, Perimula, Doperura, Sobura, Cottobora, Sippara, Mapura, Caspira, Brachme, Brachmana, Opotura, Pharistras, and other names in Ptolomey, and the Pharasiy in Curtius. Also the Hippuri in Plinie, to omit Porus the great King of India, whom Alexander subdued. And many places of principall note in India in these dayes haue such a termination, as Fetipore, Iounpore, Sinapore, Merepore, and the like, of more certaintie then the occasionall and yesterday name of Perru.

Thus haue wee brought arguments of names, to find all Ioctans posterity in the way to India, or the Inland Indian Countreys, where it is likely they first seated themselves, and afterwarde spread themselves both to the Northerne Sarmatians, and Sythians, and to the Sea Coast Southerly after the Floud, some feare whereof did not a little terrifie the first Ages. At this day Tippara, Serepore on Ganges, Caplan, the place where they find the Rubies, Saphires, and Spinells, fixe dayes iourney from Ana, Pegu it selfe, and the Bramas, which founded the New Citie, and which still people the Kingdomes of Prom, Melintay, Calam, Bacam, Miriam; and Pardabin, Purbola at the Spring, and Benpurbat at the entrance of Ganges to the Sea; the Straits of Cingopura, with diuers other places in those Regions where wee place Ophir, haue some foot-prints left of of that name after so many Ages. Their Brachmanes, Probar their chiefe God, Talipoies their Priests might be added for sound. But words are windie, sounding and not sound, wordy not worthy arguments, except things agreeing make the truth euident. For accidentally names are the same in diuers Countries, as if any man lust to obserue in a Geographickall Dictionary, hee shall easily see.

These are onely probabilities which are to be weighed with the words of Moses, And their dwelling was from Melha, as thou goest vnto Sephar, a Mount of the East; ad montes Orientis usque, Tremelius reads it: Iosephus interpreteth from Assyria to a Riuer of India called Cophene. Sephar is, if ye receiue Montanus, the Persian Andes, the Mountaines of the West in the Worlds situation from Babylon, and the place where Moses wrote; Ptolemie mentions Sippbara not farre from Euphrates: Postellius makes it Imans, Saint Hierom placeth it in India: Sepharuaim of the Assyrians (which is perhaps Ptolemies Sippbara, is often mentioned, and confirmeth well that opinion of Iosephus. From Mesa therefore which taketh his beginning East from those parts where Moses wrote, being also part of that hill Taurus whereto we haue found all Iokans Sonnes neighbouring (afterwards called Mount Mafius, in Mesopotamia) to Sephar, another part of that great hill Taurus, both Eastward, and thence also in proceffe of time to further Easterly Mountaines, the remotest Easterne parts of Taurus, did Iokans Posterity spread and disperse themselves; one of the most Easterly whereof we finde this questioned Ophir. Or if any like rather to finde them more Easterly, Plinie mentions the Mafua and Mesa in India, and there also is Ptolemies Sappara and Sippara, agreeing with Sephar: Sarpedon also and Sariph are hills so called, parts of Taurus.

Ptol. l. 7. Tab. 4. Asia.

2 Reg. 17. 22. & 19. 13. E. 36. & c.

Hee nameth Mesa and Sephar as better knowne, & but the entry of their further population, ad montes orientis usque, as Tremellius translates.

Tab. Asia 11. India ext. Gan.

* ἐν δὲ τῇ ἐκτῷ γὰρ ἐν δὲ τῇ ἑκτῇ ἡ χρυσὴ καλεῖται ἐν χερσονήσῳ ἐστὶ.

Herod. Thal. Pro. 6. & 30.

Fab. de reb. Met. Pl. l. 6. c. 19.

Plut. Alexand.

x Erannoboa perhaps is now Lemni. Strab. l. 15.

y Sanbal stands where Lemni fals into Gallia. D. S. l. 3. c. 10.

It remaines then to see whether the Commodities of those parts, and the Voyage thither be correspondent to the Scriptures description. For the Commodities, we will giue both auncient, middle, and moderne testimonies (with this difference, that the auncient and middle are not so particular nor directly expressing and notifying places and things as the last) the rather because this hath beene the stumbling stone to Ortelius, and others, to make them seeke for Ophir elsewhere. The Ophirian Voyage (it is probable) comprehended all the gulfe of Bengala from Zeylan to Sumatra, on both sides: but the Region of Ophir we make to be all from Ganges to Melan, and most properly the large Kingdome of Pegu, from whence it is likely in proceffe of time, the Southerly parts; euen to Sumatra inclusiuely was peopled before Salomons time.

In India beyond Ganges, Ptolemie placeth both Argentea and Aurea Regio. Super Argenteam autem regionem, in qua multa dicuntur esse metalla non signata, superiacet Aurea Regio, Belyngitis appropinquans, qua & ipsa metalla auri quam plurima habet. Arrianus in his Periplus, or Treatise of the sailing about the Erythraean Sea (which as is said before contained the Indian) speaking of Ganges and the rising and falling thereof like Nilus, placeth χρυσή, or the Golden Region, neere to it, and addes the reports of golden Mines in thole parts. λεγεται δὲ χρυσόρυχα καὶ τὰ τοῦ αὐτοῦ.

Marcianus mentions this golden Chersonesus also. * Long before them Herodotus in his Thalia relating the Tributes paid to the Persian Monarch, saith, The Indians as they are more in number then other men, so their tribute is greater, 360. talents of Gold: and then addeth the reports of Ants, not so bigge as Dogges, but bigger then Foxes, which cast vp antheaps full of golden sands. Arrianus cites Nearchus and Megasthenes (whom Strabo produceth also) for these Ants, which I thinke rather to be an Embleme then a Story. For as Salomon sends the Sluggard to schoole to the Pismire, to learne of that little creature great industry and prouidence, so Salomons and other Princes Mines could not be better expressed then in such an alegory; liuing in darkenesse, and as it were buried aliue, and bearing excessiue burthens, yet baited with poore diet and wages. And thus Georgius Fabritius, Indi suos Metallicos μυρμηγκας appellauit, unde fabulis locus, & c. The like fable they had of monstrous Griffons, thereby expressing the miserable monstrosity of couetousnesse.

Plinie hath (speaking of the Indian Nations) Fertilissimi sunt auri Darde, Seta vero argenti. Sed omnium in India prope, non modo in hoc tractu, potentiam claritatemque antecedit Prasij, amplissima urbe ditissimaque Palibotra: unde quidem ipsam gentem Palibotras vocant, imo vero tractum vniuersum a Gange. Regi eorum peditum sexcenta M. equitum triginta M. elephantorum nonem M. per omnes dies stipendiantur, & c. These Prasij placed neere Ganges, Plutarch calls Prasij, Curtius Pharasij, Diodorus Tabrasij, all which names they which know any thing in Ebrew, can tell how easily they may be deriued from Ophir, passing the Greeke termination after other changes:

And Palabothra, or Palimbothra is by Arrianus placed at the confluence of the Riuer x Erannoboa and Ganges, Strabo speakes of the sailing vp Ganges to Palibothra against the streame, and saith that Ganges descends from the Mountaines and from the plaines takes an Eastward course; then passing by Palibothra a very great Citie, enters the Sea with one channell, although it be the greatest of the Indian Riuer. Master Fitch our Country man spent five moneths in passing downe Ganges (he might haue done it sooner) and mentions Serrepore, which (as Sanbal y by the first syllable) may seeme to be the same by the situation, trafficke, and last syllable; and tels of the Gold Mines in the way. Diodorus Siculus, speaking of India saith, Nascitur in ea ingens argenti aurique vis, non parum quoque aris, ferrique & orichalci. Another Diodorus in his Geographickall

Verbes saith of the Indians Gold-mining:

Τῶν δ' οἰκὸς χρυσοῖο μαλακίδουσι φρέθλων
Ψάμμου ἐὺγναμπήσοι λαχαινοῖτες μακίλῃσιν. and after χρυσοῖο φρέθλων Δαυδαλέλῃ Τῆς τῆς φέρει, δειδὸς τῆς Μεγάρο Λαζρότατος ποταμῶν; ἀπὸ δ' οὐραοῖς Ἡμυδοῖο Ὀρνύμανοι περὶ τῶν ἐπὶ Γαγγηπιδῶν χερσῶν.

Pomponius Mela mentions those Ants, More Gryphorum keeping the Gold, cum summa pen- nicie attingentium. He, Solinus, and Plinie mention Chryse and Argyre so plentiful of Mettals, that men reported the soyle was Gold and Siluer: so hyperbolicall reports were raised of their store.

But as the ancients knew not these parts of India so well as later times, wee will produce later testimonies. And generally it is esteemed in the remotest East parts, that Gold by reason of the plenty hath not his true and naturall preeminence about Siluer (which ordinarily is twelue to one) but lower by much, in some places more, in some lesse, as the following Relations will better acquaint you. So Marco Polo saith that in the Prouince of Cardandan, they giue one ounce of Gold for five of Siluer: Gold being exceeding plentifull, which many brought tho-row the Desarts to change as aforesaid, the wayes being vnpassible for others: I omit the golden Monument he mentions in Mien. In Tboloman hee saith, is great quantity of Gold. The former place is somewhat Northerly, this Easterly from the necke of the Chersonessus. Nicolo de Conti mentions Bels of Gold commonly sold in those parts, still in vse in Pegu to put in mens yards. Odoardo Barbosa mentions store of Gold at Queda, and in the Kingdome of Pam, in this Chersonessus. But I am too suddenly slipt into later times: Long before these, Saint Isidore mentio-neth Chryse and Argyre plentifull of Gold and Siluer, and those golden Mountaines quos adire propter Dracones & Gryphas, & immensarum hominum monstra, impossibile est. Alian hath a long discourse of those Gryphons out of Ctesias, keeping the Gold in vast Deserts; of which I noted before, as of the Phenix and the Ants, that a Myserie rather then Historie is intended, either shewing the barrenesse of Misers producing no good fruites in the mids of golden abundance, but rather ready to deuoure all which came in their clutches; or else intimating the difficulty to get Gold, and manifold dangers in respect of the neighbouring inhabitants, & of famine in those Deserts. Rabanus Maurus, and long after him Nicolas Lyra relate these Beasts perillous to such as seeke the Gold in these parts. And indeede for wilde Beasts, both Lizards, Tygres, and others, I thinke no places more infested then those in and neere Pegu: for which cause the Country and people are forced to build their houses about ground, that they may goe vp to them on Ladders. Barros tels of one Tygre which in Malacca seised on a peece of wood to which three slaues were chained, and carried all away, leaping therewith ouer a high wall also. Neither are the Tygres of other Countries comparable to these in these parts, being another kinde, called Thoes, or some other kinde, rather then true Tygres, of which are many in A-frike and America. But leauing the testimonies of auncient and midle times, wee will come to later dayes.

Mela. l. 4. c. 3.
Plin. l. 6. c. 11.
Solin. cap. 54.

See T. 2. l. 1. c. 4.
S. 6. l. 4. c. 2.
pag. 394.
Cardandan about the head of Ganges.

Id. l. 14. c. 33

Alian de ani.
mal. l. 4. c. 27.

See the Gloss & Lyran. in
l. 2. c. 9.

See my Pilgrimage Lincolne, Fitch, Balbi, all which haue written of these parts.
Alian de anim.

Barthema.

Frederik.
Sec. l. 10.

Fitch.

Ganza is a mixture of Brasse and Tim.
Balbi began his journey 1579.
he came to Pegu A. 1583. and staid till 1586.
in which space was a comba-berwixt the Kings of Aua and Pegu on Elephants, and the King of Aua slaine.

Ludouico Barthema in his third Booke of India, c. 16. much extolleth Pegu for riches (he wrote fixe score yeeres agoe) especially for Iewels, and he saith the King had a Million of Gold in reuenue: and note that the Bramas Empire or Monarchy was not then begun. Barthema also mentions the Gold in Somatra. Barbosa testimony is before. Cesar Fredericke which was at Pegu, neere sixty yeeres since in the Bramas reigne in Pegu, saith that the King had diuers Magazines full of Gold and Siluer, euery day increased without diminishing. He is Lord also of the Mines of Ru-bies, Saphires and Spinels. He mentions also Colosses, or prodigious and more then Gyantly statues of Gold and Siluer, the foote as bigge as a mans body: innumerable Varelles or Idoll Temples couered with leafe Gold, with other things which I omit. Master Fitch, besides the Gold Mines at Patenaw as he descended the Ganges, relates the like golden stories of Pegu (where hee was 1586.) as Fredericke hath related, of houses of the King full of Gold, of gilded Idoll houses and statues. The Merchandise in Pegu, saith he, is Gold, Siluer, Rubies, Saphires, Spinels, Muske, &c. neither is their money of those mettals, but of a kinde of Brasse called Ganza, wherewith Gold and Siluer are bought, somtimes dearer, sometimes cheaper, no lesse then other wares. So also saith Fredericke, saying that euery man may stampe that money at his pleasure, and therewith buy Gold and Siluer, as aforesaid. Gasparo Balbi a Venetian Jeweller was there a little before Fitch, and relateth likewise of the statues, Magazens of Gold, Siluer, Ganza, Iewels, Cloathes, Muske, &c.
vnder severall Treasurers, and concludeth, that this King, for Gold, Siluer, and Iewels, is the richest King in the world, except the King of China.

But the Iesuites Letters haue best opened these Mines of the King of Pegu. N. Pimenta writes; Fernandus also from Syrupore 1599. 16. Kal. Feb. of the state of Pegu; that the Kings Father a Braman had subiected twelue Kingdomes to his scepter, viz. the Kingdome of Cauelan, whence come the best Rubies and Saphires: Aua, which hath Mines of Cyprian Brasse, Lead, and Siluer: the Kingdome of Bacan which hath many Mines of Gold: the Kingdome of Iangoma, abounding with Copper, Muske, Pepper, Silke, Gold, Siluer, (all which are also had, saith he, in the rest of the Kingdomes of the Peguan Empire) Cablan abounding with Gemmes, &c. Hee proceeds to relate

relate the miserable ruine & destruction of that Kingdome, which then had lately happened, not yet recovered, as you may read at large in him, and in my Pilgrimage. The former King of Pegu is reported to have cast 366. combalengas of Gold, each containing 180. pound weight, which none knowes what is become of them. This King had 67. Idoll-statues of Gold, adorned with all kinde of Gemmes. He killed 200. Eunuches lest they might disclose his treasures. Andreas Bonos, another Iesuite, relateth the miserable death of the King (in his Letters from Sirtan in Pegu, March 28. 1000.) slaine by the King of Tangu, to whom he had yeelded himselfe, who neglecting Siluer, and things of smaller value, onely with Gold and Gemmes laded sixe or seven hundred* Elephants, and as many Horses. The King of Arracan tooke his leauings, gleaming so much Siluer as was valued at three Millions besides Ordnance 3300. Peeeces.

P.P. 1.5.c.3

* One Copy
hath 600. lat-ric hath 700.

He placeth Calaminhan twixt Pegu and China
neere to Prom.

Now for trade of Gold out of the adioyning parts, I could adde hither out of Fernand Mendez Pinto which trauelled from Timplan in Calaminhan (the Emperour whereof, he saith, hath seven and twenty Kingdomes subiect to him) to Pegu, An. 1546. then possessed by the Braman Conquerour. He reporteth that the Bramans Monarchy had anciently contained thirteene Kingdomes; and that abundance of Gemmes, Gold, Siluer, and innumerable riches are in the Calaminhan Empire; in which is no money of Gold, or Siluer, but they trade by weight of Cates, Tadis, Maazes, and Conderins. He also reporteth that the Lake Chiama containeth in circuit sixty Iaons, each of which is three leagues, alongst which are many Mines of Siluer, Copper, Tin, and Leade, which they carry in Cafilas of Elephants, and Badas (I thinke hee meaneth Rhinoceroses) to the Kingdomes of Sornan, to wit, Siam, Passiloco, Sauady, Tangu, Prom, Calaminhan, and returne therefore much Gold, and Diamonds, and Rubies. As for the Mines of Gold neere the Lake Pinator whence the Riuer of Camboia runneth, yeelding yeerely two and twenty Millions of Gold, and a rocke of Diamants there also, I referre you to the Author, which placeth them further then our limits.

Peregrin. F.M.

Pinto c. 39.

Peguan tradition.

The cause why Ortelius reiect-ed the opinion of Iosephus.

But if we adde Sumatra (which the most thinke to be Taprobane, in which Ophir's name is evidently scene still) we haue the tradition of the people, the Gold also (Bonferrius a Franciscan hath related that the Peguans are descended of Salomons seruants sent to these Mynes; but I knowe not whether the Natiues haue any such tradition, perhaps it is the Friars coniecture) as appeareth by the following testimonies. And if wee adde the next Neighbour on the West, which now possesseth the Easterne parts of Ganges, and the Kingdome of Bengala, I thinke wee shall vnterly take away Ortelius his scruple (Sed hanc Chersonesum auri diuitem olim fuisse, nemo veterum, quod sciam auctor est) neq; nunc etiam esse, ex recentioribus palam est: ) Onely remember that in the Ophirian Voyage, we take not onely the Chersonesus, but all the Countrey from Ganges, and thence to Sumatra, placing Pegu in the centre as the Ophir of Ophir, or Ophir in most proper sence; annexing the rest, with all the Choremadell coast also, as being subiect to one and the same trade and Nauigation, all on the shoares of the gulf of Bengala. I like Master Deer similitude, which sets the feete of his Ophirian compasse, one in Zeilan, the other in Samatra, the head I place in Pegu. This head is caput cana, the true Ophir, the other parts of the compasse, the parts compassed and traded in, in this Ophirian Voyage. From Ganges to Menan are diuers Chersonesi, or rather Ilands, in regard of the Riuer which come from the Lake Chiamay; and from Bengala to Menan is the Peguan Chersonesus, which perhaps is the true Chryse and Aurea (for that Malaccan Chersonesus hath neuer beene renowned in latter times for any great quantity of Gold that I haue read or learnd, not yet altogether destitute, as we haue shewed; but not sufficient for Salomons Ophir) from which as first peopled, the Inhabitants of Samatra might (as is said) be a Colony.

Whether it were so or no, I dispute not; nor whether it or Zeilan be the true Taprobant; nor whether it were anciently an Iland, and since separated by the Seas irruption: that it is well stored with Golden Mines needes no question, and therefore fit to be saluted by Salomons Naui, then in their Ophirian Voyage, and by vs here in our Ophirian Discouery. Of Sumatra, Odoardo Barbosa witnesseth that there are many Gold Mines, vi son molte minere d'Oro: and speaking of Menancabo one of the Kingdomes in the South part of that great Iland saith, Et qui e il principal fonte dell'oro, &c. there is the principall originall of the Gold of that Iland, as well of the Minerals, as of that which is gathered neere the brinkes of Riuer. He wrote An. 1516. and was one of Magelans companions in his Voyage about the World. Long before him Nicolo de Conti testified of Sumatra, that in it is abundance of Gold. Andrew Thenet mentions the gold Mines: but wee haue later and better testimonies from our owne men. Captaine Davis was in that Iland, Anno 1599. and mentions not onely the King of Achens store, but the Mines of Gold and other commodities of that Iland: and the Brasse Mines to be also rich in Gold; and (which maketh most to our purpose) a tradition of the Natiues that Salomons Ophirian voyage for Gold was to that Countrey. Sir James Lancaster's Voyage, and diuers other English Voyages will ratifie Sumatras Gold. But what neede we better testimony then the Letter of that King to our King, which this story yeeldeth to your view, and worth your reading. To that, and to Walter Paytons testimony of the Gold of Passaman in this Iland I referre you. Likewise for the next adioyning parts on this side, I will trouble you onely with two testimonies, one of Master Fitch, who traueiling

See Inf. p. 121.

See Inf. pa.
468. & 532.

downe

downe the Riuer Ganges, at Patenaw obserued the golden Mines, where saith he, they digge deepe pits and wath the earth thence taken in great boles, and so finde the Gold: the other of Captaine Hawkins, who bare the name of the English Embassadour in the Mogols Court, and speaking of fixe seuerall treasuries of that King, relates the particulars of that one of Agra, which stands on Iemni or Gemini, a Riuer tributary to Ganges, where his Gold, Siluer, and Iewels may seeme to our poorer World, beyond credit. But I had rather point you to the place, then here trouble you with transcribing. And thus haue we vsed a threethold argument, one of names, a second of situation, a third of the principall commodities returned, to proue that Ophir was in these parts, and haue before shewed that it could be in none other alleaged. But Gold and Gemmes haue such a lustre, and Salomons other rarities were so precious, that wee may I hope be pardoned to take longer view on them, both for our better knowledge in such things, and for better confirmation of the Ophirian Pegu, and the Regions adiacent.

Inf. 217 &amp; seq.

§. X.

Of the Gold, Siluer, Gemmes, Iuory, Almug-trees, Apes and Peacockes, which SALOMONS Fleet brought from Ophir, with diuers other profitable obseruations inserted.

Metals are our Mothers hidden treasures; by mens couetousnesse often occasions of her violent rauishments, and no better to her then a Viperous Issue, or as Wormes, or Co-like passions in her entrals. In themselves, and in diuine Ordinance, they are many wayes profitable for medicine against diseases, armour against enemies, ornaments for peace, engines for Warre, Instruments for daily labour, vtensils for daily food, and in money-employment, they are All things. Of all Metals Gold hath preeminence, as likest the Sun in purity of substance, glory of splendour, powerfull attraction, longest endurance (in despite of Age and Fire) most operative influence, and of base Idolaters most adored. How it is found in Grains, Pippins, or Powder, this Booke elsewhere sheweth. And although Siluer bee a durable metall, and well induring both times and flames, yet herein is it short of Gold; and notwithstanding the colour is more lightsome, and the sound more delightsome, yet Gold hath in great proportion alway beene preferred. Iullius Pollux citeth Menander, and Hesychius, Polemarchus, which make this proportion ten fold, which the Romans also obserued in their agreement with the Ætolians, that if they paid in Gold, one peece should counteruaile ten of Siluer. The old Greekes and Perians seeme to haue obserued the like rate. Plinie mentions at the first coyning, the proportions of fifteene; and neere that, to wit, fourteene and a halfe, is obserued in the Constitutions of Aradius and Honorius. Herodotus makes one Talent of Gold equall to thirteene of Siluer. In Galbas time it was twelue and a halfe. But China and some parts of the East Indies, by reason of plenty of Gold, and small store of Siluer, haue diuersly vnderualued the Gold. The most generall, which Plato also approued, and in Plinies time was currant, and is most vsuall in these parts, is ordinarily twelue for one, as an ounce of Siluer five shillings, of Gold three pounds.

The purest Gold, and which is as much as may be, purified from all other mixture, is called Obrizum, a word procreated in the Mints, & not of Ophirian parentage (Obrizum quasi Ophirizum) and such are (as they say) the Darike coines and our Edward Nobles; not about the nintie sixth part being of other mixture. They say (saith Master Brerewood) that it may be so farre refined that onely the three hundred eighty fourth part shall be of other mettall. The Greeke coines of Philip and Alexander admitted a fiftieth part of Siluer, the Romans forty eight, now obserued in Turkish, Hungarian, Spanish, and Venetian coines: those of Rome, Luques, Millaine haue alloy thirty two, French Crownes sixteene, Italian nine, &c. The Talmudists mention seuen kindes of Gold, or obserue seuen names by which Gold is named in Scripture: Saint Ierom also intimateth the same, and Pineda hath long discourses of them, which I omit. The Scripture seemeth to ascribe a prerogative to the Gold of Ophir, before Salomons time, in Iob, and in Dauids daies, wherby it may seeme that the Voyage to Ophir for Gold was in vie long before Salomon, and some thinke that a great part of Dauids Gold consecrated to the Temple, was by his care fetched thence. For about his other preparations, mentioned 1. Chron. 22. 14. which were a hundred thousand talents of Gold, and a thousand thousand talents of Siluer, in the nine and twentieth chapter, he out of his proper goods giueth 3000. other talents of Gold, of the Gold of Ophir, and 7000. talents of refined Siluer: the Princes offered also 5000. talents of Gold, and 10000. drams, and of Siluer 10000. talents, &c.

This is diuersly summed by diuers Expositors differing in their computation of a Talent. Master Dee and Master Brerewood haue seemed to haue given the best construction, deriued from Moses himselfe, Exod. 38. 25, 26. which Rabbi Salomon and Lyra, had obserued before them; that a Talent containeth 3000. Shekles, which is 375 li. a Talent of Siluer, and a Talent of Gold, allowing

* To. 1. li. 9. c. 12.
§ 3. To. 2. li. 5. c. 1.
§ 3. c. 3. c. 6.
See Brerewood
de Nummis c. 20
22. Pollux in voce
Talentum
Hesychius χρυσός & σπᾶρμι.
Lin. 1. 38. Pl. 1. 3
c. 3. Hero. Thalia.

Geop. Pine. &amp; c.

Tal Ioma fol. 44
Hier. in 1er. 10.
Iob 22. 24 & 28
16.
1 Chr. 29. 4

a 6003550. 22
halfe a shekel
a man pay 100.
talents and 3550. shekels: so that 600000
pay 300 talents & consequen-ly a talent is 6000. halfe
shekels.

1. Reg. 10. 10.
E. 38. 24, 25

allowing tweluefold proportion, is 4500. li. According to which iust reckoning Salomons foure hundredth twenty Talents of Gold brought from Ophir, came to one million eight hundred ninety thousand pounds. Davids 3000. Talents of Gold of Ophir, 1. Chron. 29. 4. aforesaid, was thirteene millions and five hundredth thousand in English money. His Siluer then offered (7000. Talents) is two millions 625000. li. The offering of the Princes (5000. Talents of Gold) was two and twenty millions five hundredth and seven thousand & 500. pounds: and their ten thousand Talents of Siluer came to three millions and seven hundred fiftie thousand pounds. Salomon had also giuen him by the Queene of Sheba 120. Talents, that is five hundredth and fortie thousand pounds. As much was lent him by Hiram. Now the whole Furniture of the Tabernacle was twentie nine Talents of Gold, and 730. Shekles; in our money, one hundredth thirtie and one thousand, five hundredth ninety and five pounds; the siluer was 100. talents, and 1775. shekles, that is, thirtie seven thousand, seven hundredth and twentie one pounds seuentene shillings six pence. Thus hath Master Brerewood cast vp these summes. Now for this Ophirian Gold, Salomon is said, 2. Chron. 8. 18. to haue had from Ophir foure hundred and fiftie talents, thirtie more then 1. Reg. 9. are mentioned, which thirtie Talents, it seemeth were spent in wages or other charges, and came not to the Kings Coffers.

* 1. Chron. 1. 12.

But a great scruple remaineth about the 100000. talents of Gold, mentioned before out of 1. Chron. 22. 14. which amount to foure hundredth and fiftie millions of English pounds; and the million of Siluer talents to three hundredth seuentie five millions of pounds: summes stupendious and prodigious beyond all that the Persian, Greeke, or Roman Empires euer saw at one time, after greater and longer conquests then Davids; and such, as euen Salomons wealth had beene by much ouertopped by Davids; which agreeth not either to the History*, or to the Mystery, that Heauens peace & glory should be surmounted by militant Faith and Grace. Alexander the richest Conquerour, left but eightene millions and seven hundredth and 50000. pound of money at his death: and in conquest of Darius, had gotten but thirtie two millions 750000. pounds: and Cyrus out of the conquest of Asia gathered but 125. millions, which yet is the greatest sum (except that of Sardonapalus mentioned by Ctesias, an Author not much to be credited) which any Ethnick story mentioneth. Wee must therefore find another acceptation of the word there translated Talent, which is taken sometimes for a lumpe of mettall in forme of a Cake, or else that name Talent is sometimes taken for a small summe, as out of Pollux and Homer, M. Brerewoods paines haue obserued; who also hauing cast vp the particulars, findeth that such summes could not haue beene spent on the Temple, had the Walls and Pauements beene of massie Siluer, the Roofe and all the Linings of the Walls and the Furniture of solid Gold.

* Villal. To. 2.
Explan. p. 2. 6. 44
Or. seqq.
Siluer brought home much more then Gold.
1. Chron. 9. 27.
Or 1. Reg. 10. 21
1. Chron. 9. 23, 24
* Villal. ubi sup.
raiseth the tributes of Israel to 120. talents each Tribe, & as much of Hiram (of whose subiection I dispute not, it agreeth with Canaan curse, and the promise of all Canaan to Israel) which together make 1560. talents, 26254800.
Roman ducats: besides Siluer and all other profits which he brought together about Affuerus, Alexander, the Roman Empire with faire probabilities.

Salomons yeerely reuenue (as some interpret, 2. Chron. 9. 13.) was sixe hundredth sixty sixe talents of Gold, besides his Customes, and the rich Presents of Gold and Siluer sent him from the Kings of Arabia and the Gouvernours: that lackes but three pounds of three millions in our reckoning. Some would make vp this great summe of the Ophirian Gold, and Hirams, and the Queene of Shebas gifts, which all lacke but six talents; as if it were not an Annuall, but Casuall Reuenue, which I cannot approue. Some interpret it of ordinary tributes leuied of his Subiects; some of the posteritie of the Chanaanites (a thing vnlikely) and some of forraigne voyages, making him to send euery yeere a Fleet, though none of those Fleets returned till the third yeere. Villalpan- du* makes it but one returne from Ophir, the first, of foure hundredth and twenty Talents, the second, of foure hundredth and fiftie, the third, of sixe hundredth sixty sixe of Gold, besides Siluer and other goods. And, as for Salomons entire Reuenues, hee with great paines in the auditing, raiseth them higher then the Persians, then Alexanders, then those of the Roman Empire: arising from his Customes, his Gifts and Presents, Taxations, Tributes, prouisions of Corne, &c. That of the King of Tyrus he reckoneth a tribute, and out of Eupolemus alleageth that the Tyrians were tributaries. Wee may here also remember, that there is no mention of the summe of the Siluer which they brought from Ophir, which is likely was farre more then the Gold, insomuch that it was reputed as Stones, and was of none account in the dayes of Salomon.

To mee it seemeth that the sixe hundredth sixtie sixe Talents of Gold is spoken onely of forraigne Gold, partly by Ophirian and other merchandising Trades, and partly by Presents; of which the two principall, Hiram, and the Queene of the South are expressed: but it is added of others, That all the Kings of the Earth sought the presence of Salomon, and brought euery man his Present, vessells of Siluer, and vessells of Gold, and Raiment, Harnesse and Spices, Horses and Mules, a rare yeere by yeere. Grant then a Fleet yeerely set forth, which came not home till the third yeere, one succeeding another (as in the Spanish Fleets to Peru, and ours to the Indies, of which is a yeerely returne, yet not of the same) and these yeerely Presents, there could not be lesse then six hundredth sixty six Talents: besides perhaps, tenne or twelue times as much in Siluer, and all the Spices, Horses, Mules, Customes of Merchants, Tributes of the Edomites, Moabites, and Vassalls, Taxes on his Israelitish* Subiects, Reuenues out of his Pastures and innumerable Cattell and husbandry of Crowne Lands (wee will not adde, with some, Chimistry; that might haue saued his Ophirian paines) and all the riches left him by Inheritance from his Father. Now that the six hundredth sixtie six Talents is to be vnderstood of Strangers, appeareth in that exception, Vers. 14. where none but forraine Incombes are mentioned. And hereby most lively is both the calling of the Gentiles figured, of which the 72. Psalm was by the Spirit of God purposely indited in correspondence of this type, and the Christian Truth; as also the glory of the heavenly Ierusalem, which ariseth not out of the workes of righteousness which we have done, but of free gifts, of which it is said, They shall bring the glory and honour of the Nations into it. Rev. 21. where in vision that glorious Citie is represented, and correspondent to Salomons type, The Citie was of pure Gold, and the foundations and gates of precious stones, but there is no mention at all of Silver.

none

Another question ariseth out of Davids 3000. Talents of Gold of Ophir, whether hee practised the Ophirian Voyage also: and some suppose that hee had made seven voyages thither, which reckoning 420. Talents a time, makes much about that summe of three thousand Talents. For my part, I thinke David a greater Warrior then Merchant, allowing the greatest summes before questioned to be reserved and consecrated out of the spoiles, as himselfe confesseth, In my trouble I have prepared for the house of the Lord 100000. Talents of Gold, &c. and more plainly; 1. Chronicles 18. 11. considering also that it was long before his State could be settled at home, and fitted abroad to attend such Navigations; which likewise have neither ground in the Sacred Story (for the Gold of Ophir is proverbiall, usually in Scripture for fine and pure Gold) nor agree with the type, David one way, Salomon another resembling Christ, and their times the state of the Church; likewise that David had much care of husbanding his estate to the best, thrift being the fewell of Magnificence, as appeareth in the particular enumeration of the Officers for his Rents, Store-houses, Husbandmen in the Field, Vineyards, Olive-trees, Sycamores and Oyle, Herds in Sharon, and in the Vallies, Camells, Asses, Flockes; it is no marvell if such industry acquired such substance in such continuance of time, and that hee said I have of mine own proper goods of Gold and Silver which I have given to the house of my God, over and above all that I have prepared (to wit, in consecrated spoiles) for the holy House three thousand Talents of Gold of Ophir, &c. This example of David sheweth that it is no impeachment, yea the true advancement of Honour for Princes to use all frugall husbandry and meanes of thriving at home; as that other of Salomon, to adde helpe of Discoveries and Trade abroad (both in a Royall manner by their iust Officers) that Magnificence may stand firme on both legs: the want whereof hath denied that wealth (not to speake of power) these many Ages to many Kings out of farre farre greater meanes (besides other inconveniences to themselves and their Subjects) which David, Salomon, and other Kings in the old World had. Once these examples so moved that good King Ieboshaphat, that hee built Cities of store at home, and had many Flockes, and made Ships also to goe to Tarshish, and they made the Ships in Ezion-Geber, the same Port where Salomon made his Nauall provisions; but sojning therein with Ahaziah King of Israel, who did very wickedly (So much worse before God is an Ahaziah then a Hiram, the one an honest minded Gentile, the other a schismaticall Idolatrous Israelite) that the Lord broke the workes, and the Ships were not able to goe to Tarshish.

We haue bene very long in this metall Discourse: yet how much longer was Salomon in his three yeeres Voyage, and how much longer the most of men, which make their whole life a voyage to Ophir for Gold and Silver, thorow so many diuersified Seas of Arts, force, frauds to get those metalls which procreated neereff Hell, carry these eager seekers thither altogether? That the Silver was more by farre then the Gold, was before proued; but the quantitie is not expressed, as not agreeing with Salomons either Litterall Story, or Mysticall Glory. Some thinke that there was in euery voyage 24. times as much Silver as Gold; both because they conceiue that Nature hath giuen so much more thereof in quantitie, as the qualitie and price is vnderualued; and because all Stories Ancient and Moderne magnifie India for store of Silver; and so prodigious prodigality, to giue Silver in Ierusalem as stones, must haue a deep fountain for such a flowing streame, besides those other Silver Hooks and Brooks mentioned in Salomons History. But we will leaue these precious, specious objects to take view of Gemmes.

And herein American Pern, and Sofala are beggarly in comparison of those parts of India, where we haue placed Ophir, as the former testimonies well weighed with whatsoeuer can be brought for the other, will easily and superabundantly conuince. In Northerne America are some Turkesses, in the Southerne are saide to bee (which others question) Emeralds, in both Pearles, but not comparable to the Orientall: these Bezars are twice so good; in Spices to make comparison hath no spice of knowledge. And first for the first of gemmes, Diamants, Pliny saith, Maximum in rebus humanis non solum inter gemmas, pretium habet Adamas, unus modo in metallis reperiuntur. Some haue conceited it to dull the Loadstones attraction, and to resist all force of Hammer, which experience hath found contrary. The Kingdomes of Narsinga, Biznagar, Orissa, Masulipatan, and all the Countreies on the Choromandel Coast, are the most famous for Rockes of Diamants, and now also Socodanna (where they diue for them as for Pearles) Decan, Delli, and Agra, Tarriam also in the Tract of Malacca, and Iana. Here then is the Worlds Centre of Diamants, both for the most and best. Garcias ab Horto writes, that he hath seene one of one hundreth and forty Mangels (that is seven hundreth Graines) another of one hundreth and Whether David sent Fleets to Ophir.

1. Chron. 22. 14
& 18. 11.
D. Dec.

1. Chron. 27. 25,
26, 27, 28, 29,
30, 31.

Two remarkable pillars of Royall Magnificence, Husbandry on Land, and Navigation by sea

1. Chron. 17. 11,
12. & 20. 35,
36. 37.

D. Dec.

1. Kings 10. 27.

Gemmes.

Plin. l. 37. c. 4.

* See C. Sari.
l. 4. c. 2. 5
Tanapura.

Garcab Horto
l.1.c.47.

Exod.24.10.
Epiphan.libel.de 12.gemmis.
Od.Barbosa.

Linschot.cap.86

Garc.cap.49.

Linsch.37.

Pineda de Reb.
Salom.1.4.c.18.
Of Indian store of Jewells and their richnesse see inf. 217.
550.558.559.
1.Reg.10.12.
"Terrises or Raues are added, 2.Chron.9.11
Iof.1.8.c.2.
It seemes to haue bin written by M.Hakl. hand, amongst whole papers I had it; & haue here made much vse of it, although much later and better intelligence be here also cited.

twentie, and hath heard of one of two hundreth and fiftie, and a credible man told him that hee saw one as big as a small Hens Egge in Bisnager. This soyle is so diamantine, that where you haue digged and taken them now, in two yeeres space you may dig and find others. Neither is it poyson, as some affirm, but he hath knowne the whole stone, and the powder, taken without hurt.
The Heauen-coloured Sapphire, with some obtaineth the second place, because of the likenesse thereof vnder the feet of the Almighty when hee spake to Moses; of which are store in Zeilan, and the most true, hard & fine as Barbosa testifieth. But M. Fitch and M. Fredericke haue before told you of Mynes of them in Pegu; and these saith Garcias and Linschoten, are esteemed the finest, and are in great plenty. So is there also of the Rubie, a stone of greater value, none in the world exceeding that King in excellencie and varietie of Gems, as appeareth by generall voyce. Of Ru- 10 bies, the Carbuncle is esteemed the best, the Ballas next, the Spinell in the third place, of fiery colour: there are besides, White, Carnation, halfe White, halfe Red Rubies, others halfe Sapphires, halfe Rubies, and one thousand other sorts, if wee beleue Linschoten. Garcias ascribeth this to the generation of the Ruby, which at first is whitish, and groweth vnto rednesse in proceffe of time: and because the Sapphire and Rubie grow in one Rocke, they are found sometimes such participles as is deliuered, Sapphire-rubies, called Nilacandi. The Granado and Hyacinth are also reckoned by some amongst the Rubies, calling the yellowish Rubie the Hyacinth, and the blackish a Granado.
These are plentiful in Cananor, Calecut and Cambaia (neerer Westward, and in the way to the Gulfe of Bengala) in Zeilan also, as Nicolo di Conti and Andrea Corsali affirme; Pimenta his testimony of Cancian and Cablan, two gemme Kingdomes you had before. The Iaspas is found in 20 much plenty in Cambaia; Chrysolites, and Amatis, there and in Zeilan and in Balagate (the Apen- nine of the Great Indian Chersonesus) where they haue also the Alaquera or Quequi, which stay-eth the issue of bloud presently. Pegu, Brama, Zeilan, yeeld the Cats-eye and Agat, of which the Indians conceiue the owner shall increase in wealth; and Garcias saith, Hee hath tried that no fire can burne a linnen Cloth pressed to the eye of it. The Armenian Stones are found also in Ba- lagate, the Loadstone in Zeilan, neere to which is the fishing for Pearles, but the best of the world are in the Persian Gulfe neere Ormuz: the Alambie in Cambaia. The Bezar Stones are at Pahan neere Malaca, and Cambaia, taken out of the maw of a Sheepe or Goat. The Berills are in Pegu and Zeilan. The Topaz is almost like a Diamant, and is digged out of the Earth in many places of India. There are White Sapphires and Rubies hardly knowne from Dia- 30 *man*s. In Cambaia also is found plentie of the Stone Alambre. There are found in Ze- ilan also the Topaz, Iagongas and Marucha, whose names I can better giue you then the vnderstanding. There are also many sorts of Stones (you reade Linschoten) as well Precious Stones, as against poyson and other diseases of many properties and vertues: but I haue onely mentioned those that are daily bought and sold, and are commonly knowne. The Emeralds I mention not, though said to bee in these parts, because some doubt of them, and in other parts are found better, wherewith the Venetians haue made good gaine at Pegu in exchange for Ru- bies: those also of Pegu are suspected. For gemmes (wee now conclude) no part of the world but India, could fit Salomons turne; wherein, if Aarons breastplate were so glorious in the 40 Tabernacle, to how precious height will Salomons Temple eleuate our thoughts? and consequently both manifest and magnifie the Indian-Ophirian Voyage, these being found either naturall in the Peguan Ophir, or by trade there or in the way from Ophir by the Western parts of India, part of the Persian Gulfe, and the shores of Arabia and Ethiopia. Of which, Arabia is said to yeeld the Hemathite, Topaz, Sardonyx, Onyx, Molochite, Myrrhite, Corall, Andromade, Iris; Ethiopia, the Chrysolite, Chrysolamp, Heliotrope, Hyacinth, Hemathite, Chrysoprase; the Persian gulfe from Babylonia the Sagda, & Sardy, and the best Pearles: Egypt in ordinary trade, the Galac- tite, Emerald, and Egyptilla: some of which you had before particularly mentioned in India, and likely enough should there find most of the rest with many other vnkowne, if India were as much frequented with Philosophers from hence as Merchants.
Wee are next to consider the Almug Trees, whereof were made Pillars for the House of the 50
Lord, and for the Kings House; Harper also and Psalteries for Singers: there came no such Almug Trees, nor were seene vnto this day. Iosephus Interprets Pine Trees, but saith, they differed from the vnuall, resembling the Timber of the Figge Tree to the eye, but that they were whiter and brighter. There is mention of Almug Trees in Lebanon, 2. Chron. 2.8. which some thinke to bee the same with the former, and the word onely altered by transposition of letters; others, that that transposition intimates no lesse specificall difference in the wood then in the word, though otherwise hauing some likenesse to those of Lebanon, but of greater excellency. D. Dee hath written a laborious Treatise almost wholly of this Ophirian argument (the same yeere in which I was borne, A. 1577. of seuentie sheets of paper) howsoeuer intituled, Of Famous and Rich Discu- veries; of which I haue a written Copie, and could willingly but for the length haue published it; 60 which may appeare in this, that he hath ten sheets of paper about these Almug trees, more profitable to the leasurely Scholler, then commodious to be inserted to so voluminous a Worke, as this Library of ours. Hee there, as Commissioner for Salomons Timbers, like a learned, both Ar- chitect and Planter, hath summoned a Iury of twelue sorts of Trees (mentioned by diuers Inter- preters)

preters) to examine or to bee examined rather, which of them were the Almugs here mentioned. I should bring you into a Wood to relate his labours in this kind; the kinds are, the Deale, Boxe, Cedar, Cypress, Ebonie, Ash, Iuniper, Larch, Oliue, Pine, Oke and Sandall Trees: all which with their severall qualities and fitnessse for Royall and Sacred buildings hee examineth by best testimonies, and concludeth nothing absolutely, but inclineth to Iosephus, who either by some Monuments in writing might haue learned, or in some remainders to his time in Instruments Musicall, or other profane or sacred memorialls, might probably bee thought to haue scene thereof. I easily beleue that these Pines or Thynes (Thyina) or whatsoever other Trees, were both odoriferous to the Sent, of beauteous aspect to the Eye, of fittest temper to refract sounds to the Eare, smooth to the Touch, and of long continuance and strong substance for building, therein to bee seruiceable to all senses. Of which sorts it is euident out of Ancient and Moderne Writers, and out of the following Relations, that India hath the best in the World.

The Spanish Bible reads Brafilwood.

Plin. l. 13. c. 26.

The living Creatures remaine to our learth, Elephants, Apes, Peacocks; of which I need say little, saying so much in our following Histories, and hauing said so much already. Elephants come neerest Men in vnderstanding, Apes in forme (Simia quam similis turpissima bestia nobis said Ennius) and Peacocks for their beauty, as Parrots also, Birds of Paradise, and many other Indian Fowles might be desired. The greatest Elephants are found in all this our Ophirian Tract, from Zeilin to Pegu; those esteemed to haue a naturall preeminence, and these had of late a Politicall, the King of Pegu stiling himselfe, The King of White Elephants, and keeping them Royally attended, his Subjects and Tributary Kings also, it is Gasper Balby his report) kneeling to them. Once all India is plentifull of them, and therefore of Iuory; this Countrey also neere Ganges is stored with the Abada or Rhinocerate, whose Horne is (in Bengala, by reason of certaine Hearbs hee there feeds on) a good Counter-poyson. Indian Ass-horne in these parts is also vsed for Bucklers, and drinking Cups, and esteemed a great Iewell, as Master Finch affirmeth, infra Pag. 436.

Of their Treed and of Elephants, see M. Terry l. 9. c. 6. §. 2. of their Apes as big as Grey-hounds ib. §. 3. See also Santos, l. 6. c. 10. Leo, and many others in this worke.

For Peacocks or Parrats, translate which you will, heere are not onely so many of both, that they flie wild, as the following Relations shew, but for excellency beyond those of other parts; as the Apes also are for their beauty and strength. See Sir T. Roe, Master Finch, and others Iournalls, or rather talke with our Indian Merchants, which vsually trade and trauell those parts, some of which in the Mogolls Countrey, carrying with them an English Grey-hound, one of the company shot at a great white shee Ape on a Tree, and wounded her, whereby shee with her Cub fell downe: they set on the Grey-hound, and this Ape before seeking shifts for her Cub, seeing the Grey-hound come, layd it aside and encountred the Grey-hound so fiercely about the necke, that hee dyed within a few houres, the company with their weapons comming in, and killing the Ape (as themselves related to mee) and carrying away the young one. The Countrey people, in I know not what superstition forbear to kill them, whereby they multiply exceedingly. Heere by the way may bee obserued, that it appertaineth to Royall Magnificencie, and disagreeeth not to humane Excellency, to procure rarities of liuing Creatures, and to keepe them as testimonies of our admiration of Gods various Workes, and exercise of the Minds Contemplation, the Bodies pleasure, with the right Humane ouer Sensitiue Creatures: which Nature taught Alexander; yea Motexuma and the Incas, in that wilder World; and Diuine Grace our Salomon, as these Scriptures manifest. The imitation of whose Wisdome hath whetted my Studies almost to curiositie, to giue to the World a world of Rarities in that kind, as any occasion offered it selfe in these voluminous Voyages.

Peacocks wild; Parrots, Apes, great & white, see 436, &c.

These Apes are tamed.

§. XI.

Probable coniectures of the Course taken in the Ophirian Voyage, and accounts given of the three yeeres time spent therein: also of the Course taken in like Voyages by the Romans: and the diuers Ports whereto the Spices and riches of India haue in diuers Ages beene brought, and thence dispersed to the severall parts of EUROPE.

We haue now vndertaken a hard taske, where we tell not but spell a Voyage, and from reasonable coniectures grounded on other experiments, gather what is most likely in this of Salomons. D. Dee hath written 23. sheets of paper in examining the miles, the dayes, the way, the employments of the time, and mustering of Men and Ships employed in this seruice. I cannot presume either of so much learning in my Selfe, or so much patience in the Reader. Yet I shall bee bold both to follow him, and to adde somewhat for further light. Pliny writes, that in his time this Voyage from Egypt to India was made euery yeer. Euery yeer India consumed H. S. 500. (which Iacobus Delachampius in his notes summeib to 1200000. Crownes) of the Roman Empires Treasure yeerely, yeelding merchandises therefore in returne sold at Plin. l. 6. cap. 23. As covetous rich men are euery needy & greedy, so India hath euery swallowed in Trade the worlds Treasure, and yet is the Treasury of the World.

Muziris is by some thought to be Chaul, by Arrianus in his Periplus it is placed more Southerly, on that which we call the Malabar Coast. D. Dec thinks it Surat. Voyage of Onesicritus and Nearchus. Plin. l. 6. c. 22. Voyage to Taprobana. * Liberius. * That is 1250. miles which cannot agree to Zeilan but Sumatra: the Easterly situation also ultra montes Emodos and commerce with Seres agree to Sumatra. Arrian l. 8.

a hundreth times so much. Their course, hee saith, was from Alexandria twelve dayes by Nilus to Coptus, thence by Camells ouer Land to Berenice two hundreth fiftie eight miles (travelling most part by night by reason of the heate) in twelve dayes more. From Berenice on the Red Sea, they beginne to set forth at Midsummer, or about the beginning of Dogge-dayes, and in thirtie dayes come to Ocelis in Arabia, (or to Canaan or Muza, if they goe not to India, but for Arabian Frankincense and Odours) and from Ocelis in fortie dayes they arrived at the first Indian Port Muziris. Remember that in this Course they both tooke benefit of the Monsoon, and went the neere way: for so a little before hee mentioneth another Course by the Shoare, Secuta atas propiore cursum, &c. donec compendia inuenit Mercator, Lucroque India admoti est. Quippe omnibus annis nauigatur. Hce mentions the Voyage of Onesicritus and Nearchus from India to Tigris, in the bottome of the Persian Gulfe, which helde them till the seuenth moneth. So much was Nauigation improued in Plinie's time. Their Pepper they tooke in on the Malabar Coast, and returned in December the same yeere. The names which then they gaue to places were quite differing from the Antients; and the like Indian mutations haue continued to our times.

The course to Taprobane had accidentally come to their knowledge a little before, found in Alexanders time to be an Iland by Onesicritus, mentioned by Megasthenes. The Antients deemed it another World. The Sea is full of shoalds, the North-starre is not seene there, and they obserued their course, by sending out Birds which they carry with them and followed their flight. But in the Empire of Claudius, Annius Plocianus hauing farmed the Customes of the Red Sea, one of his Retainers or Free-men * sayling on the Arabian Coast, was by a Northerne storme carried alongst the Carmanian shoare to Hippuros a Port therein, and was kindly vsed by the King, who admiring his Roman Relations, sent foure Embassadors backe with him. These related amongst other things, that the side of the Iland which lieth toward India, is 10000. furlongs*, and that they had trade with the Seres. I will not recite Nearchus out of Arrianus nor Ptolemy and Marianus, which can little aduantage vs in regard of the lesse knowledge of the former, and lesse certainty of the later passing the ignorance of Transcribers, and about one thousand yeares darknesse. Yet herein is Ptolemy profitable, where his Longitudes and Latitudes are false, that by his order of position and successiue setting downe of places some knowledge may arise. But the length of the way is better knowne by later Writers.

Iohn di Barros hath set downe the coasting distances, from the Bab or Mouth of the Red Sea to Cape Nigraes, the Southerly part of Our Peguan Ophir, whose Portugall leagues (allowing for each three English miles, and a fifth part of a mile) come to 5769 $\frac{1}{2}$  and from that Cape to Singapura is 1008. miles more. From the Bab or Mouth of the Red Sea to the bottom, is by Comito Venetiano, in Ramusio reckoned 1441. miles, and in his returne 1514. the breadth in some places two hundreth, the way full of shoalds, so that it cannot be sailed neere the shoare but by day. So troublesome is this Sea, and so difficult to be sayled, that Don Iohn di Castro (whose voyage followeth at large) spent no lesse then three moneths in the way from the Straits to Sues, from the nine and twentieth of Ianuary, 1541. to the seuen and twentieth of April; and returning the eight and twentieth of April, arrived at the Bab the eighteenth of July; So that here the way is to be weighed by the qualitie as well as the quantitie. Hieronimo da Santo Stephano in Ramusio, spent from Cosir to Aden fiftie dayes, almost three hundreth miles Southward from Sues, and therefore so much lesse way.

We must here note also that neither the ships, nor their furniture; the shipmen also nor their furniture of skill, could in Salomons dayes, be any way comparable to these later times: and that if three moneths were spent by the Portugall Naue from Sues to the Bab, we may at least allow somuch time to these Ophirians. For if these had more haste, the other had more skill and better ships. Neither may we thinke that they durst there saile but by day in Salomons fleete, and therefore were likely to make it longer. The lesse vessels and many men, would require also oftner staies for water and refreshing, besides the seuenth dayes rest, which Salomons seruants according to the law, and especially in a Voyage for adorning the Temple, built in honor of the legall worship, must not breake. Being out of the Straits into the Ocean, they were neither willing nor able (as appeares by the mentioned Voyage of Onesicritus and Nearchus) to aduenture the sailing beyond ken of Land. And therefore also Ptolemy in his longitudes and latitudes, abates of Marinus and the Mariners reckonings one third part, because of the crooking in their coasting, as euery Bay and point enforced them. And that compendious way mentioned by Plinie was then new in his time, when shipping and the Mariners art had beene by frequent experience much improued, and from the swadling bands in Salomons time growne to some virility. So that except forced by distresse of weather we cannot make the Ophirian course but within ken of shoare all the way. Now then if it were the seuenth moneth, as we haue read in Plinie, before Alexanders fleet could arrive in Tigris from India, in which Arrianus reporteth that there were Phenician, Egyptian and Cyprian, besides his best Gracian Mariners, they all being then his subjects; we can allow no lesse to Salomons fleete before it could touch the neere Indian Port, being no lesse way. And howsoeuer it may be objected that triumphall deuotions, and tempests, and and fights, and reparations of the Fleete, tooke vp much of Nearchus's time: I answered, that this Ophirian fleet was neither warranted from enemies nor tempests, & was likely also to spend time in reparations, and in provisions, and in deuotions, specially that which was peculiar to them, the Sabbath.

And although single ships in the Arabike gulf, and in the Ocean might euen then make quicker way then this mentioned, yet in that of Castro, of Nearchus, and this of Salomon, where care was to keepe a whole fleet together for mutuall helpe and common security, the greater body must needs haue slower motion. Thus then allowing three moneths to the Red Sea, and fixe moneths from thence to India, we shall follow Comito Venetiano, who reckons the one 1514. miles from the Straits to Suez inward, and thence outward to Diu 2023. to which adde the coasting about to the Ormuzian strait, and coming to any Port in India, as namely Muziris, or any in the Malabar coast, it could not much lesse then double the length of the way, and therefore the time. By this proportion we should spend the three yeeres in going and returning, if we adde that spacious way from Muziris to our nearest Port in Ophir: and so should both their labour and ours be vaine, and nothing should be done. Barros himselfe (to make this more eident) hath reckoned short of the way which Salomon's Fleet must make in bouts and windings by the shoare, for which he makes no allowance. D. Dee is sparing in this calculation, and yet makes it from Ezion Geber to Cape Negraes 9155. miles; of which we deduct for the Arabike gulf but 1514. and leaue 7641. remaining. We therefore in regard of the manifold dangers and shelves of that Gulf, allow to it eighty dayes, of which deducting eleuen Sabbaths, there remaine fixtie nine, to which (one with another) we allow one and twenty miles a day, somewhat more, as much as can conveniently in that Sea be allowed to a Fleet sailing together. And this allowance is so large, that Castro was eighty eight dayes (and that in the daies of better Navigation) in the way which we allow to fixtie nine. Now in the Ocean, where they might make better vse of the Monsoon and Tides, as freed from the dangers which attend the Gulf, wee will allow thirty two miles a day one with another (the Sabbath deduced) which by the yeeres end will bring vs to our Port at Peg, or some other the nearest to Cape Negraes, where we may harbour our Fleete. For to Cape Negraes it selfe (deducting the one and forty Sabbaths remaining of the yeere) 7641. miles are proportioned in each daies equall sailing, in requisite and direct way, one and thirty miles and  $\frac{1}{4}$ , which being very far from any safe Port, must needs make it two & thirty miles the day to bring vs thither, allowing nothing for New Moone, or any other sunsh solemnities, or other occasional stay whatsoeuer: nor for those bords, gibes and fetching tunces (which Mariners) and specially coast-winders must make) and consequently much superfluous way, which alone (besides force of stormes) would make this thirty two to be above forty miles a day ordinary way, broken and whole, one with another.

And if this seeme to any man a small thing, let him consider the weakenesse of Navigation then, both in skill and shipping: the Phenicians before this time not acquainted with those Indian Seas, but onely with the Mediterranean, as probably may be thought; their vsing the Oile more then the saile, and not daring to saile by night when they could not see shoare, their necessary occasions of stay sometimes for watering and provisions, sometimes by foule weather detained, sometimes for reparations of some of the Fleet occasionally needing helpe, that all the Fleet may keepe together, sometimes for trade by the way, sometimes for healthfull disport, recreation and ioy: and (which is of principall obseruation in those Seas) for expectation of the Monsoon, or season of the winds, which there keepe an euen course, as out of the following Voyages you shall see. All which laid together, it will not seeme miserably and vniustly done to haue allowed the proportion before mentioned. If you read the first Discoveries on the coast of Africa by the Portugals, and see how litle they discovered in a whole Summer, when their skill was not inferior to these Phenicians, and experience more, you will thinke me liberal if not prodigall in this allowance. Capitaine Hawkins in the Heclor (a ship not the worst of sail, and which before had beene twice at the Indies) was from the first of April 1607. till August 24. 1608. ere he could arrive at the Barre of Suez, in the nearest part of the Indes, almost sixteen moneths space, where no Sabbath, nor shore-creeper enforced their stay: The Dragon at the same time was longer in her way to Sumatra, and I believe many of our later Voyages doe not much exceede this proportion. It seemeth therefore to me probable in a round reckoning to allow but one yeere litle more of Rest on the Voyage, a second in the stay at their severall ports; and in the mines of Gold and Silver, and for further provisions of Amber, Iuory, Apes and Peacocks; and a third yeere in their returne.

Doctor Dee allowes fiftie miles a day of requisite way, that is 1500. miles every foure weekes, resting the Sabbath, and forty miles a day within the Gulf or Red Sea: the miles he computeth 9155. and the whole Voyage to be performed in seven moneths and six and twenty dayes outward, and as much homeward; one fortnight of rest after their landing before they fell to their Mine-workes, to be spent in mind-workes of deuout thankfulness, prayers and festiuall reioicing; as much before their shipping for returne, the rest in their workes and purueying of commodities. So that for what I allow a yeere, to each of these he alloweth the space of eight moneths

Thirty two miles a day allowed for the whole Voyage one day with another: for what that fraction lacks must be allowed in going from Cape Negraes either to the mouth of Ganges or Ara, or some other Port.

b. Sec. 1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6. 7. 8. 9. 10. 11. 12. 13. 14. 15. 16. 17. 18. 19. 20. 21. 22. 23. 24. 25. 26. 27. 28. 29. 30. 31. 32. 33. 34. 35. 36. 37. 38. 39. 40. 41. 42. 43. 44. 45. 46. 47. 48. 49. 50. 51. 52. 53. 54. 55. 56. 57. 58. 59. 60. 61. 62. 63. 64. 65. 66. 67. 68. 69. 70. 71. 72. 73. 74. 75. 76. 77. 78. 79. 80. 81. 82. 83. 84. 85. 86. 87. 88. 89. 90. 91. 92. 93. 94. 95. 96. 97. 98. 99. 100. 101. 102. 103. 104. 105. 106. 107. 108. 109. 110. 111. 112. 113. 114. 115. 116. 117. 118. 119. 120. 121. 122. 123. 124. 125. 126. 127. 128. 129. 130. 131. 132. 133. 134. 135. 136. 137. 138. 139. 140. 141. 142. 143. 144. 145. 146. 147. 148. 149. 150. 151. 152. 153. 154. 155. 156. 157. 158. 159. 160. 161. 162. 163. 164. 165. 166. 167. 168. 169. 170. 171. 172. 173. 174. 175. 176. 177. 178. 179. 180. 181. 182. 183. 184. 185. 186. 187. 188. 189. 190. 191. 192. 193. 194. 195. 196. 197. 198. 199. 200. 201. 202. 203. 204. 205. 206. 207. 208. 209. 210. 211. 212. 213. 214. 215. 216. 217. 218. 219. 220. 221. 222. 223. 224. 225. 226. 227. 228. 229. 230. 231. 232. 233. 234. 235. 236. 237. 238. 239. 240. 241. 242. 243. 244. 245. 246. 247. 248. 249. 250. 251. 252. 253. 254. 255. 256. 257. 258. 259. 260. 261. 262. 263. 264. 265. 266. 267. 268. 269. 270. 271. 272. 273. 274. 275. 276. 277. 278. 279. 280. 281. 282. 283. 284. 285. 286. 287. 288. 289. 290. 291. 292. 293. 294. 295. 296. 297. 298. 299. 300. 301. 302. 303. 304. 305. 306. 307. 308. 309. 310. 311. 312. 313. 314. 315. 316. 317. 318. 319. 320. 321. 322. 323. 324. 325. 326. 327. 328. 329. 330. 331. 332. 333. 334. 335. 336. 337. 338. 339. 340. 341. 342. 343. 344. 345. 346. 347. 348. 349. 350. 351. 352. 353. 354. 355. 356. 357. 358. 359. 360. 361. 362. 363. 364. 365. 366. 367. 368. 369. 370. 371. 372. 373. 374. 375. 376. 377. 378. 379. 380. 381. 382. 383. 384. 385. 386. 387. 388. 389. 390. 391. 392. 393. 394. 395. 396. 397. 398. 399. 400. 401. 402. 403. 404. 405. 406. 407. 408. 409. 410. 411. 412. 413. 414. 415. 416. 417. 418. 419. 420. 421. 422. 423. 424. 425. 426. 427. 428. 429. 430. 431. 432. 433. 434. 435. 436. 437. 438. 439. 440. 441. 442. 443. 444. 445. 446. 447. 448. 449. 450. 451. 452. 453. 454. 455. 456. 457. 458. 459. 460. 461. 462. 463. 464. 465. 466. 467. 468. 469. 470. 471. 472. 473. 474. 475. 476. 477. 478. 479. 480. 481. 482. 483. 484. 485. 486. 487. 488. 489. 490. 491. 492. 493. 494. 495. 496. 497. 498. 499. 500. 501. 502. 503. 504. 505. 506. 507. 508. 509. 510. 511. 512. 513. 514. 515. 516. 517. 518. 519. 520. 521. 522. 523. 524. 525. 526. 527. 528. 529. 530. 531. 532. 533. 534. 535. 536. 537. 538. 539. 540. 541. 542. 543. 544. 545. 546. 547. 548. 549. 550. 551. 552. 553. 554. 555. 556. 557. 558. 559. 560. 561. 562. 563. 564. 565. 566. 567. 568. 569. 570. 571. 572. 573. 574. 575. 576. 577. 578. 579. 580. 581. 582. 583. 584. 585. 586. 587. 588. 589. 590. 591. 592. 593. 594. 595. 596. 597. 598. 599. 600. 601. 602. 603. 604. 605. 606. 607. 608. 609. 610. 611. 612. 613. 614. 615. 616. 617. 618. 619. 620. 621. 622. 623. 624. 625. 626. 627. 628. 629. 630. 631. 632. 633. 634. 635. 636. 637. 638. 639. 640. 641. 642. 643. 644. 645. 646. 647. 648. 649. 650. 651. 652. 653. 654. 655. 656. 657. 658. 659. 660. 661. 662. 663. 664. 665. 666. 667. 668. 669. 670. 671. 672. 673. 674. 675. 676. 677. 678. 679. 680. 681. 682. 683. 684. 685. 686. 687. 688. 689. 690. 691. 692. 693. 694. 695. 696. 697. 698. 699. 700. 701. 702. 703. 704. 705. 706. 707. 708. 709. 710. 711. 712. 713. 714. 715. 716. 717. 718. 719. 720. 721. 722. 723. 724. 725. 726. 727. 728. 729. 730. 731. 732. 733. 734. 735. 736. 737. 738. 739. 740. 741. 742. 743. 744. 745. 746. 747. 748. 749. 750. 751. 752. 753. 754. 755. 756. 757. 758. 759. 760. 761. 762. 763. 764. 765. 766. 767. 768. 769. 770. 771. 772. 773. 774. 775. 776. 777. 778. 779. 780. 781. 782. 783. 784. 785. 786. 787. 788. 789. 790. 791. 792. 793. 794. 795. 796. 797. 798. 799. 800. 801. 802. 803. 804. 805. 806. 807. 808. 809. 810. 811. 812. 813. 814. 815. 816. 817. 818. 819. 820. 821. 822. 823. 824. 825. 826. 827. 828. 829. 830. 831. 832. 833. 834. 835. 836. 837. 838. 839. 840. 841. 842. 843. 844. 845. 846. 847. 848. 849. 850. 851. 852. 853. 854. 855. 856. 857. 858. 859. 860. 861. 862. 863. 864. 865. 866. 867. 868. 869. 870. 871. 872. 873. 874. 875. 876. 877. 878. 879. 880. 881. 882. 883. 884. 885. 886. 887. 888. 889. 890. 891. 892. 893. 894. 895. 896. 897. 898. 899. 900. 901. 902. 903. 904. 905. 906. 907. 908. 909. 910. 911. 912. 913. 914. 915. 916. 917. 918. 919. 920. 921. 922. 923. 924. 925. 926. 927. 928. 929. 930. 931. 932. 933. 934. 935. 936. 937. 938. 939. 940. 941. 942. 943. 944. 945. 946. 947. 948. 949. 950. 951. 952. 953. 954. 955. 956. 957. 958. 959. 960. 961. 962. 963. 964. 965. 966. 967. 968. 969. 970. 971. 972. 973. 974. 975. 976. 977. 978. 979. 980. 981. 982. 983. 984. 985. 986. 987. 988. 989. 990. 991. 992. 993. 994. 995. 996. 997. 998. 999. 1000.

D. Dees reckoning.

or there abouts: the third yeere he bestoweth on their businesse, rest, and triumph at home, care of their family and state preparations for the next returne, as trimming the ships (in these times the wormes which in those Seas, breede in ships, and eate them, compell vs to sheath them) and other prouisions. He alloweth 4500, workemen for the mines, not all at once working, but in courses, some resting by turnes, others working, and then those succeeding to their workes whiles they againe rested (the workes and yeeldings whereof hee diligently examineth) three hundred for the Almug trees, for Elephants teeth twenty, for Apes and Peacockes ten: one hundred Officers: in all 5040. To this businesse he holdeth requisite fiftie tall ships, to each ship thirty Mariners, in all 1500. which with the former number make vp 6540. men. Thus he and more then thus with much curiolitie of minerall and nauall learning, which cannot here be expressed without that libertie of long discourse, which neither the vulgar reader could vnderstand, nor others perhaps (except some few) finde leisure to reade. Otherwise I would haue inserted it.

Salomons seruants sent to Ophir were not Israelites.

1 Reg. 9. 20. 21. 22

1 Reg. 5. 14.

I honour his great industry, but cannot conceiue that that age yeelded such great ships to carrie so manie, nor that they could one day with another make so much way, nor that Salomon would permit so long a stay as a whole yeere, but rather presse new men. As for the Phenician Mariners, vpon this occasion it is likely that they settled their dwelling at or neere Ezion Geber, as all antiquitie mentioning Phenicians in the Red Sea, seemeth to argue. And for the seruants of Salomon, they were the posteritie of the people that were left of the Amorites, Hittites, Perizzites, Hivites, and Jebusites, which were not of the children of Israel. Their children that were left after them in the land, whom the children of Israel also were not able vnterly to destroy; vpon those did Salomon leaue a tribute of bond seruice vnto this day. But of the children of Israel did Salomon make no bondmen. Thus the holy writ but a few verses before the mention of this Ophirian Nauie. Of these it is said 2 Chro. 2. 17. And Salomon numbred all the strangers that were in the land of Israel after the numbring wherewith Dauid his father had numbred them, and they were found an hundred and fiftie thousand and three thousand and sixe hundred. And hee set 70000. of them to be bearers of burthens, and 80000. to be hewers in the Mountaines, and 3600. ouerscers to set the people a worke. If Salomon would not ease them by courses neerer home (for they were the Israelites which serued by those courses, not these strangers) I cannot here ease them; and if he would not employ the Israelites in the neerer quarries and Forrests, neither would he send them to remoter Mines, a more dangerous and difficult worke. Now some of those hewers in the Mountaines were fittest for this hewing and mining in the Mountains for Mettals, to which that place may also be intended and extended. Officers to Ophir and men of command he might haue out of Israel, but for the Oare by Sea and Ore at land, these were likely to be the seruants of Salomon mentioned in the text: the rather because that name euer after continued to them, as you may read euen after the return from the captiuitie in Ezra 2. 55. Nehem. 7. 60. This hath beene omitted by others handling this argument, and therefore I am the fuller in it.

Villalpand. Pineda, &c.

Besides, it is as likely (which others also obserue, and before is mentioned, & agreeth to the 666. talents of Gold yeerely) that Salomon after the Temple buildings were ended, employed Fleetes yeerely to Ophir, one vnder another, that each should make their voiage in three yeers, but of them euery yeere one should returne: which agrees not with D. Dees speculation of a yeers stay. Neither is it probable that in seuen or eight moneths so much Gold and Siluer could be gotten by so vnexpert miners. Nor doth D. Dees consider the Monsoons of those Seas which are by six moneths regulated, and not by eight. Nor may we thinke but that many of Salomons seruants settled some abode in the Countrey, so long (at least if we will permit courses, which I will not much quarrell amongst them) as Salomon vied the voiage; by whom the Iuorie, Apes, and Peacockes might be procured, and Gems also without any speciall allowance of men each third yeere to that purpose; except as the Fleet in coming or going might touch by the way at each good mart, for which Doctor Dees time of eight moneths seemes also too short. Yet if any approue, and lust to follow him, I haue no Empire ouer opinions.

First Merchants and the diuers Marts for Spices. Gen. 37. 23. 28.

1er. 8. 22. & 12. 6

Suidas,

See Fulk. Miscel.

This Ophirian voiage which brought the riches of the East to Ezion Geber, occasioneth a quere of the voiajes of Spices, and the manifold shiftings of the Marts & Ports thereof in former times, is a worke of voiajes not vnfit for consideration. The first mention of Merchants is of Ishmaelites and Midianites, which trauelled in a Carauan together with Camels carrying spicerie, & balm, and Mirrhe to Egypt. These inhabited not far from Ezion Geber, or the shores of the red Sea. Whither their Spicerie came out of the Southerne parts of Arabia, or further out of India brought into some Arabian port, is not easie to determine. Their Balme they might haue at Gilead by the way, though Arabia yeelds of that also, as the Myrrhe likewise; what Spicerie the first mentioned is, is not so easie to decide. Ioh. mentioning the gold of Ophir, and other passages in that Booke may cause coniecture of an Indian trade in his daies. But this is easily gathered out of Histories that the great Monarchs endeouored to make themselves Lords of India for the riches aforesaid. Semiramis is said to haue invaded India, & to haue beene repelled by Saurabates, which I can beleue, though not so prodigal of faith as to accept the report of three Millions of foot, and five hundred thousand horse in her army; no more then that she was the founder of Babylon. But both Nimus or Ninus (which her husband Nimus had made the seate of the Assyrian Empire) standing vpon Lycus which floweth

floweth into Tigris; and Babylon seat of the Chaldean Empire on Euphrates, Seleucia also & Bagdes of later building not farre from thence, haue in their times beene fitting seats to receiue either by land or sea; or both, the Indian riches, thence to be disperfed to other Marts and thorow the world. The Persians were Lords of India, as both the Scripture & Herodotus affirme, & Alexander aduanced the Macedonian Empire thither also; whose Empire after his death being rent into foure parts, Seleucus possessed Babylonia, and Ptolemus Egypt, which by the red Sea made most aduantage of the Spicerie.

Eff. 8. 9.
Herod. Thalid.
Egyptians.

Sesostris (whom Iosephus esteemeth to be Shishak, 2 Chro. 12. the King of Egypt which tooke away great part of the Ophirian treasures) is by Strabo reported the first which subdued Ethiopia and Troglodytica: at the straits of Dira (where the red Sea is but fixtie furlongs or seuen miles and a halfe broad) left Monuments of his exploits, a pillar engrauen with hieroglyphikes: he passed thence into Arabia and thorow all Asia. His westerne expedition I omit (Lucan singeth, Venit ad occasum mundi, extrema Sesostris) but it is like that being in the time of Salomon and his enormous memie, that the glory of Salomons Ophirian arts had whetted him to this Asian and Indian expedition. Pliny mentions the Tyrians in this coast, and the port Daneon whence Sesostris first of all thought to bring a Nauigable River to Delta of Nilus 62. miles. Necho long after (hee which saw King Iosias) is said to haue sought to make a marriage betwixt the Red Sea and Nilus (the cause is euident, the Arabian, Ethiopian and Indian commerce to be ioyned, with the Mediterranean) and to haue sent Phanecians from that Sea vpon discouerie round about Africa; in which voyage they spent two yeeres. Cambyses conquered Egypt, and built Cambisa a Citle on the red Sea Darius the Persian pursued Nechos proiect, thinking to perfect a trench from the River to the Sea but was deterred by those which said that Sea was higher then Egypt, and therefore would drown it. Yet did this proiect outliue the Persian Empire in Egypt, for Ptolemie made a trench 100. foot broad and 30. deepe, 37. miles and 400. paces, as far as the Butter fountains, and then brake off fearing in inundation; the red Sea being found three cubits higher then the land of Egypt. Some (saith Finie) say the feare was, lest Nilus should be corrupted by the Sea water. Yet by three waies did the then passe to Arfinos built by Ptolemus Philadelphus. The Trench still continues, as Farrus a German (which saw it in his way to Mount Sinai from Cairo) testifieth.

Ios. Antiq. 1. 8. c. 4
Strab. 1. 16.

2 Chro. 35.
Herod. 1. 4.

Pl. 1. 6. c. 29.
Diod. Sic. 1. 1. c. 3
Plin. 1. 6. c. 29.

Some make
P. ammeticus a worker also in this Trench.

Copts way was found by King Ptolemie, and the Egyptian Exchequer thereby so aduanced, that in Aules time, a King nothing frugall, the prodigall Father of prodigious Cleopatra (Strabo cites it out of an Oration of Cicero) the royal reuenues came to 12500. talents, which is of English coine by M. Ferrewoods reckoning two millions, three hundredth forty three thousand & seuen hundredth & fifty pounds. And if that he, saith Strabo, which carelesly and negligently administred his Kingdom, had so much reuenue, what may we thinke of the present Roman gouernmōr, the Indian and Troglotical Merchandises being added? For whereas afore scarcely 20. ships aduentured out of the Strius, now very great fleets are set forth to India and Ethiopia; whence precious Merchandise are brought to Egypt and thence transported to other places, with the benefit of double custome for importation and exportation. But those precious wares haue heauie imposts, because of the Monopolies, onely Alexandria receiuing and dispersing them. Thus Strabo, who calleth Alexandria imporio maximo & maxime the greatest Mart in the World. How gainfull this trade was, and what coile they held in this voyage in Plinies time, you haue heard out of him already.

Arfinos or Sues Furcr. voyage
inf. 1. 8. c. 13.
Strab. 1. 17.

Alexandria.

Alexandria being orewhelmed with a Saracen Deluge, by Schismaticall Chaliphae beganne at last to hol vp head againe, and whiles the Mamelukes Empire lasted, was the chiefe Mart for the Spices brought to Mecca, and thence carried to Alexandria, the Trade whereof was in the Venetians Ind, and enriched their Signiorie very much, till the Portugals in our Grandfathers dayes found the way by Sea into the Indies, whereby both the Moores and Venetians were impouerished. This Trade set Henrie that Noble Prince of Portugall on worke to begin that, which was so long before it produced any fruit. Yea, this Indian Trade set Columbus, and after him Cabot on worke to find the way to the Indies by the West; which their industrious simplicitie God rewarded with a New World by them discouered. But to returne to our Romans; Abamasio cites out of the Iuan Law, the Customes for the Indian goods set downe in the Reigne of Marcus and Comodus; viz. Cinamon, Pepper long, and white, Cloues, Cassia, Cancamo, Spikenard, Cassia, Frankincense, Xilocassia, Myrrhe, Amomum, Ginger, Malababrum, Ammoniac, Galbanum, Laser, Agoloum, Gumme Arabike, Cardamome, Carpesium, Silkes, Parthian and Babylonian Workes, Inorie, Eboni all sorts of precious Stones, Peables, Sardonix, Ceraunia, Hiacinth, Emerald, Diamond, Saphire, Callio, Berill, Cilindre, Indian and Sarmatian Clothes, &c. which I haue mentioned that we may see the Trade then, and now are much alike.

See Leo & Sand
dys.

See inf. 1. 2. d. 27
S. 2.

Pham vol. 1.
fol. 371.

Dioscurus.
Strab. 1. 17.
Plin. 1. 6. c. 29.

Strabo and Linie (before this greatness of Alexandria, as it may seeme) extoll Dioscurias in the bottome of the Euxine or Blacke Sea, where people of seuentie Languages, or as Timosthones affirmed, three hundred seuerall Nations resorted; and after that the Romans used one hundred and thirtie Interpreters in their businesses. In Plinies time this Babylon was waste, I imagine; that when the Persian Empire possessed India and Asia minor, this Dioscurias was the Staple of Indian Commodities: brought partly by the Persian Golfe as farre as Tigris would permit, & the rest by Land, which is the way. Or, as some thinke, and not without cause, those Seas being so much scattered

fested with Pirats, as appeares in Plinie, and the Arabs being alway Robbers; they carried their goods vp the Indus (as many still doe from Tatta to Labor) and thence by Carauan ouer the Cau-dabar and other Hills, the Riuer Oxus, and ouer the Caspian Sea to the Riuer Cyrus, and so to Dioscuria.

When the Seleucide succeeded in those parts, it is like that the Trade continued, though weaker; till the Romans drew all to Alexandria: especially the Parthian Empire not permitting such Commerce to their Roman Enemies, as neither the Persians after.

That Barbarous myst of so many Nations which ouercame the Roman Empire, buried this Trade in darknesse, till the Saracens grew to some height, and Bagdet was made the chiefe Seate of their Caliph, builded on Tigris, and commodious to attract the Trade of the East; and disperse it to the West. A great part of this Trade after the declination of Bagdet, the East beeing infected with Mahumetan follies, honoured also with colour of Religion, was conueyed by the Arabian Moors, and Moorish Indians to Mecca (the sinke of that Superstition) by the Red Sea, Indda, and Ziden being their Ports, and thence was much of it carried to Damasco, and thence to Aleppo, which Trade hath continued to our dayes; and another part to Cairo, hereby flourishing, and thence to Alexandria as aforesaid: which is still vsed also, but much empard, and almost forsaken by the European Navigations into India.

Whiles the Tartarian Empire flourished, these Indian Wares were carried much (as you may reade in Polo) to Mangi or China; to Cathay, many also carried to Boghar in Bactria, and to Samarcand, and thence to other parts. Also in those troublesome times when the Tartars had runne all, and when Boghar was in esteeme for Trade, the Indian Merchandises were shipped on the Caspian Sea by Oxus, and thence conueyed to Astracan, on the Riuer Rha, or Volga, and so to Novogrode, and thence partly ouer-land, partly by water to Cassa, or Theodosia, wherethe Genowayes fetched it (who then were of great power in these parts) and dispersed it in Christian Ports; the Venetians and Genowayes being Corriuals in this Trade, as in other things, and in those dayes very great. Much also passed to Trapezond, that Citie so flourishing that it became an Empire, a Title too heauie for it, and the ruine both of Constantinople the Mother thus weakened, and of it selfe.

Ormuz was famous by this Trade, and Moba in the Red Sea, but both haue their course to Aleppo; of which our Trauellers shall in due time tell you in the following Discourses. and now we see London an Indian Mart, and Turkie it selfe from hence serued with Pepper, and other Indian Commodities, as Master Mun Deputie of that Company in his following Tractate will shew you.

Thus much of the Ports made famous by Indian Spicerie and Merchandize, Anastasis Sinaita affirmeth, that Salomons Fleet made a returne every yeere, which of the same Fleet cannot be vnderstood. Pineda yeelds to this, but he makes vs more labour about Tharsis, to wch; trow wee are returned from Ophir; he enforceth vs to a new Voyage; and to finde Tharsis in Spain. Iosephus Acoſta also hath made a scruple both of Ophir and Tharsis, and makes them to signify no particular place, but generall and remote, as India doth now with vs, signifie all the Easterne World in vulgar appellation. Yet doth he acknowledge the substance of that wee haue spoken, and professeth to agree with Iosephus, so that with him wee shall haue but a Gramme quatrell. We will adde a word of the Phanicians which here are expressed to haue bene Solomons Mariners; and of their ancient Navigation, and so shall we make an end of our Ophirian Voage, which to some Readers will perhaps seeme much longer then three yeeres.

§. XII.

Of Tharsis or Tharshish; whether it bee the same with Ophir, and both some in definite remoter Countrey; whether it be the Sea, or Tartessus, any place in Spain. Of the ancient Navigations about Africa, and of the Phenician Antiquities.

Earned Acoſta hauing alleaged Reasons sufficient for confuting that Opinion of Pero to be Ophir, an ystert name, vnknowne to the Natiues; and when neither Turie nor such precious Gemmes could be brought, and whither Solomon Naue in those times ignorant of the Load-stone, could not come to fetch them; all Easterne India being fitter then the West for Solomons purposes he concludeth, Ego ſane Ophir & Tharshish diuina literis ſapientia non certum aliquem definitumq; locum ſignare ſuſpicor, ſed genera potius eſſe uocabula, idemq; efficere apud Hebraeos, quod apud nos vulgo Indiarum uocem. He ſignifieth, that as India is a name given to any remote, rich, and ſtrange Region very much differing from ours; as Bagdet.

Mecca.

b This caused so much wars to the Portu-gals from the Moors, the Mamelukes, and the Turkes; and since from them to Ours
and the Dutch.
Ant. Galuano &
Ramus.
Boghar.
Astracan.
Novogrode.
Cassa.
Trapezond.
Ormuz.
Moba.
London.
Lib. 5. cap. ult.
Anast. Sinaita
lib. 12. Hexam.
Pined. de reb.
Salom.
Acoſta de Nat.
Orb. lib. 1. c. 13.
13, 14.

Acoſta de Nat. N.
Orb. lib. 1. c. 13.
14.

Mexico, Brasl, Malaca, &c. So likewise Ophir and Tharshis; and as for Tharshis, it signifieth either the maine Sea, or most remote and strange Regions. Thus he coniectureth.

For Ophir we haue before found it, the proper name of a man and of a Region denominated of him; but withall haue acknowledged the Ophirian voyage to comprehend more then the Region of Ophir, including the other Indian Ports wherat they touched and traded in that voyage, especially the two Ilands now called Seilan and Sumatra, and all places on the Coast within the Gulfe of Bengala, which might fit their purpose. It is vsuall now to call an Indian Voyage, not only to Iacatra, Bantam, or Banda, but thereto also they reckon their touching at Soldanha, on the maine of Afrike, or at the Riuer of Saint Augustine in the great Iland of Saint Laurence, and the Ilands of Comoro, or Socatra, or wheresoeuer they arriue on the Abab or Mohan shoare in the Red Sea, or in any Arabike Port, or in the Persian Gulfe before they come to India: and there also Surat, Dial, Calcut, or wheresoeuer they touch besides on this side or beyond that principal Port where they make their Voyage; as they terme it, that is, where they take in their chiefe loadings. Of which, the following Relations will giue you many instances. So the Straits Voyages, intimate not the meere sayling to or thorow the Straits of Gibraltar, in vulgar appellation, but all Voyages within those Straits whether to Venice, or Ligorue, or Zant, or Constantinople, or Scanderone, or Alexandria, or in one Voyage to visit many or all of these Ports, is yet called but a Straits Voyage. We may yeeld thus much therefore to Acoſta, that Ophir, was a proper Countrey (as India also is) extending from Ganges to Menan, and betwixt the Lake Chiamay, and the Gulfe or Sea of Bengala; but as it happened, that India being the remotest knowne Region, gaue name in old times to all later Discoveries beyond it, and in after times accidentally to the New World, which the first finders mistooke for Easterne India, so also the Voyage to Ophir, accidentally might giue name to all those Remote parts, and comprehend all the farre Ports, which by occasion of the Voyage to Ophir they visited, lying in the way thither, or somewhat wide or beyond. And as there is a Region truly and properly called India, euen al that which extends from Indus (whence it is so named) to Ganges; which name by others ignorance of the proper names of Regions, was extended further both beyond Ganges, and to all remote Regions; so was there a true Ophir, named of Ophir the sonne of Ioktan, which occasioned other remote Countreyes to beare that appellation, at least in this Voyage thither.

The bounds of Ophir.

But for Tharshis or Tarshish, or Tharshish; we see Acoſta himſelfe in his finall vpsot, to make an aut of it, Aut immensum mare, aut regiones semotissimas & valde peregrinas accipi solere. So that his former Proposition admits now another, that either it is the maine Ocean (which I take to be the true sense) or some remote Region. Some are of opinion that the Voyage to Ophir, and that to Tharshis differed, because the Scripture saith, according to our Translation, For the King had at Sea a Nauie of Tharshish, with the Nauie of Hiram once in three yeeres, came the Nauie of Tharshish, bringing Gold and Silver, Iuorie, and Apes and Peacocks.

Ribera, Pineda,
 &c.
 1. Reg. 10. 22.
 2. Chron. 9. 21.
 The Kings ships went to Tharshish &c. euery three yeeres once came the ships from Tharshish.

Tremellius hath it. Nam classis Oceani pro rege cum classe Chirami erat: semel ternis annis veniebat classis ex Oceano afferens aurum, &c. The Vulgar, Latine and Septuagint, Nauis Tharshis erat regi Salomoni in mari cum nauibus Chiram.

Saint Ierome in many places examineth this Tharshish, as in Es. 2. Melius est Tharshis vel mare vel pelagus absoluiè ponere, and alledgeth Ionas his fleeing to Tharshis, who from Ioppe could not come to India by Sea,

Ribera in Ion 1.
 Cornel. Corn. in
 Es. 1.
 Forerius in Es. 2.
 Em. Saa in Ps. 47
 Marin. in Arca.
 Leo Iud. 3.
 Reg. 10.
 Villalpand. in
 Ez. 27.
 R. Mos. Had. in
 Ps. 71.

Most of the late Writers agree with Tremellius, that Tharshis is the Ocean; and make that a difference betwixt Tharshish and Tharshis which signifies the Sea, as the Red Sea, or Mediterranean, and withall those lesse collections of waters as the Dead Sea, the Sea of Galilee, and that Brazen Vessell for the largenesse, called a Sea, 2. King. 25. 16. whereas Tharshish is only the Main or large Sea. R. Mose Hadarsan citeth foure significations, Tarsus a Citie of Cilicia, Carthage, India, and the Sea. This place cannot admit Tarsus nor Carthage, beeing in another Sea, to which Esiongeber, on the Red Sea had not bene the Port to haue sailed from, but Ioppe or Tyros, or some other Hauen in the Mediterranean. Now if any thinke them two Voyages from two severall Ports, the Scripture is plaine, where it is said, Iehoshaphat made ships of Tharshish to goe to Ophir for Gold; but they went not, for the ships were broken at Esiongeber. And lest any might thinke that they were called ships of Tharshish, because the materials came from Cilicia, it is more full,
 2. Chron. 20. 25. And after this did Iehoshaphat King of Iudah, ioyne himſelfe with Ahaziah King of Israel, who did very wickedly. And he ioynd himſelfe with him to make ships to goe to Tarshish, and they made the ships in Esiongeber. Then Eliezer prophesied, &c. and the ships were broken that they could not goe to Tarshish. Note also that the vulgar translateth in one place Sea, in the other Tharshis.

1. Reg. 22. 48.

Some hence gather it to be a Region in India, as that Rabbi, and Ierome also doth in some sort auerre, with Iosephus, and many late Writers. But because no such Region in India can be found, hence so many opinions. Postellus placeth Ophir in the Golden Region where Malaca standeth, but makes Tharshis to extend further, euen to the South Sea; or the Peruan Coast, so that Ophir and Peru are diuorced for a marriage with Tharshis. The Chaldee will haue it Africa, and Emanuel Saa in Angola; Acoſta no certaine place; Ribera will haue them two Voyages, and not the same

Post. de Orig. n.

Chal. 2. Parap. 9.
 Sam. ib.
 Rib. in Jon 1.

Gen. 10. 4.

* 10f. 15. 12.

same to Ophir and Tharshis; Pineda and Goropius bring vs to Tartessus in Spaine. But I embrace the opinion of Cornelius Cornelij, Villalpandus (and heerein Ribera also agreeth) which say that of Tarshish the Sonne of Ianan, Cilicia tooke name at first, still continued to Tarsus (where Saint Paul was borne, famous in old times by Straboes report for the Vniuersitie and other Antiquities) and the Inhabitants therof, and the adioyning Regions being famous at Sea, might cause that great Sea (as the Scripture calls it, in comparison of the lesser Seas in Iudea) to be called Tarshish, a name then easily by the Jewes deriued to all great Seas, whether Mediterranean or Ocean.

Now that which makes Interpreters to question some place in India, or elsewhere, is the phrase of going to and coming from Tarshish, and bringing goods from thence, a kind of speech which to Pineda seemeth ridiculous, if thereby be not meant some certaine place on Land. Wee see at this day the Hill Atlas in Afrike, hath giuen name to that huge huge Ocean, extending euen to the New Worlds of the South and West. The Straits betwixt Spaine and Afrike, giue name with our Mariners to all the Midland Sea within and beyond them. Indus gaue name to India, and all the Ocean adioyning; and the South Sea (the greatest of knowne Seas) is so termed, because Vasques Balboa first saw it lying to the South from him; neither can the Westerne Scite, take away that name Del Sur to this day. Is it then any maruell, that Tarshish the Cilician Sea next adioyning to Iudea, should giue name to all the deeper and larger parts of the Mediterranean, which they had occasion after to take notice of, and to other Seas from the Red Sea forward more wide and spacious. Pineda himselfe confesseth, that Tartessus which hee would haue to be Tharshis, gaue name not only to Bætica, but to all Spaine. And is it any more ridiculous or absurd to say, the King had a Nauie of Tharshish at Sea, then that which our vulgar Mariners say, the Straits fleet is now at Sea, or the Straits fleet is come from Sea, speaking of our Merchants ships, which keep company together in the Seas for feare of Algier Pirats? Do not they cal them Straits Merchandise? and say, that such & such goods are brought out of the Straits, or caried to the Straits, that are sent thorow those Seas, and brought by those Seas to or from any Port therein? And as vsuall a Phrase it is, which Pineda iudgeth so absurde, that a Mariner being asked whither he goeth, should answer to Sea, or that Gold, Siluer, Iuorie, Peacockes and Apes should be said to be brought from Sea: For our Mariners (which learne not their Idiome of Scholers) vse to say, when all their money is spent, they will goe to Sea and get more; that they brought this or that from Sea, that shortly they are to goe to Sea, or haue lately come from Sea, without naming any Port; that such a man hath got all his goods by Sea, great wealth hath come to him by Sea; hee hath had great losse by Sea, and other like phrases of Sea-men (for so also are they called, in opposition to Land-men, in regard of their Trade and course of life, though the habitation of both be on Land.) This then may be the sense: SALOMON had at Sea a Nauie at Tharshish, that is, ships built for long voyages at Sea: as we call men of Warre, or ships of Warre; which are built for that purpose. And how ealie is the construction, Iehoshaphat made ships of Tharshish to goe to Ophir, in these words, a Sea-nauie, or ship of the Sea, to goe to Ophir; that is, not such Fisher-boates, as they saw in the Sea of Galilee, or such small Barkes as they vsed in Palastina to trade from Port to Port, but a Nauie Royall of strong ships able to brooke long Voyages in the Ocean.

Jonas 1.

Hieron. in Ion. 1.

Pf. 72. 11.

By some vnderstanddiscreet and vaine Cutters or Printers flatterie, or ignorance insensible of diuine mysteries, in the forefront of a great Booke, some words of this Psalm proper to Christ are applied to his Majesties picture; Omnes gentes seruiunt ei, &c. which I mention to vindicate both that Scripture and his Maie-stie from calumnies.
* See Tom. 2.
eng. 19.

I also thinke that in regard of the length of those Voyages, in which they were two thirds of the time at Sea (after our account) and three whole yeeres in each Voyage from their Land-home, in a kind of eminence, they were in these Voyages said to goe to Tharshish or to Sea. And so Jonas likewise minding to flee from that Land whither he was sent, was hurried in the strength of temptation, a quite contrarie way, whether that ship intended Tarsus in Cilicia, or whither-soeuer it went, he chusing rather a certaintie of flight then of scite, or settling himselfe any where, as Saint Ierome saith of him, Non ad certum fugere cupiebat locum, sed mare ingreduens, quocunque pergere festinabat. Et magis hoc conuenit fugituo & timido, non locum fuga otiose eligere, sed primam occasionem arripere nauigandi. Likewise in that Psalm which mystically and fully is true of Christ in the calling of the Gentiles; typically and in part verified in Solomon (wickedly and Antichristianly since applied to the Pope in many passages of the last Councell of Lateran vnder In-50
lius the Second, and Leo the Tenth) it is said, The Kings of Tharshish and of the Isles shall bring presents, the Kings of Sheba and Seba shall offer gifts; it is plaine by the Historie of Solomon in Scripture, and by ioyning of Tharshish and Sheba together, that no Tartessus, nor Angola, nor Pern, are intended; and that Maritime Kings are meant (Tremellius reads Reges Oceani accolae) which ruled in Ilands (which is also added) or Coasts and Ports neere the Sea (sure as Hiram then was, and all remote Maritime Prouinces the Scripture calls Ilands) which vsed also (as in those parts of the East Indies, almost all the Kings are at this day Merchants) trade by Sea, and perhaps enioyed the Title of the adioyning Seas (as his Maiestie is King of the British Ocean, and another Pacificus his Predecessor added it to his Royall Title, Ego Edgarus Anglorum Basileus, omniumq. Regnum, Insularum, Oceaniq. Britanniam circumiacentis, cunctarumq. Nationum, que infra 60
eam includuntur, Imperator & Dominus. Such were the Kings of Tharshish, whose Customes from the Sea, and Trade by it, made them haue their ships of Tharshish, & wealth from Tharshish: as in later dayes, the Kings of Aden, Ormuz and Malacca; and still of Fartaque, Socatra, Calicut, Cochin, Zeilan, Achen, and many others included in the circuit of our Ophirian Voyage are; and might there.

therefore iustly be called Kings of Tharshish: from all which no doubt either in the course of this Ophirian Voyage and Trade, or otherwise sent by speciall Messengers, Solomon had presents, as in 1. Reg. 10. 24. 25. is exprest.

Pineda himselfe citeth out of Straboes third Booke of the Gaditans (which is Tartessus, or with him Tharshish) pleriq; mare incolunt, pauci domi desident: and in this respect Tyrus may by the Prophet be called filia Tharsis, daughter of the Sea, as seated in it, ruling on it, and living of it. The Chaldee Paraphrase hath the Kings of Tharsis, and the Islands of the great Ocean Sea; which may bee understood of the Indian Sea: and not as Goropius and Pineda would vrge vs, of Spaine. Pineda citeth Anastafius Sinaita; that Tharsis is Hesperia Regionis Occidentalis; and Forerius & Engubinus to assist Goropius: whose authoritie shall so farrè mooue as their reason is weightie.

As for Goropius, his fifth, sixth and seventh Bookes of his Hispanica are principally spent on Tharshish the Sonne of Iawan, which he writes Tarsees, as signifying in that which he makes the first of Languages (the Dutch Tongue mother of ours) one that dares aduenture the Seas, or one which tarties in the Seas: therefore also firnamed Atlas or Atlant, quasi Hat-lant, or Hate-land. Him he makes with his brother Elisba the peoplers of Spaine, and saith, that of his skill in Astronomie and inuention of the Sphere, he was fabled to beare the Heavens; and to haue named his daughters with names of starres; to haue sailed also to Ophir, so called as ouer the widest Sea, as Peru of a peere there built; and other like collections hee hath very wittie, learned and pleasant, not solid enough to conuince, nor so contemptible as very easie to be confuted. Pineda hath written many sheets of paper to honour his Spanish home with Salomons Voyages for the Temples structure, wherein his error amoris and not amor erroris may plead his excuse, according to that of the Poet, Nescio qua natale solum dulcedine cunctos Ducit, & immemores non sinit esse sui. I cannot but maruell, that two so learned men are so strongly carried by so weake reasons as the likenesse of words in Tharsis and Tartessus, when Geographers tell vs of, and themselues confesse, Tarsus in Cilicia, Tarsis in Syria, Tarsius in Pannonia, and a Riuer of that name in Troas, with I know not how many others; and besides, Tartessus being a Phanicean Colonie might of Tharshish or the Ocean receiue the name (whether we intend Gades or Cadix thereby, or the whole Beitike Prouince as seated in, or on the Sea or Coast, and living by Maritime Arts.

But of names of places wee haue before spoken how casuall and accidentall they are. Euen Tartarus the name of Hell is neere the former, & Strabo ghesseeth that Homer called it so of this Tartessus in the remotest West; which Hellish kindred of termes, me thinks, should not be very gratefull to Spanish eares. Etimologists may easily runne mad if they bee permitted libertie; neither is any argument found from the sound of syllables without other credible Witnesses. Therefore Pineda addeth the frequent Circumnavigation of Africa in those dayes; of which he citeth one out of Herodotus, of the Phanicians long after this sent by Neco, which makes against him; for Herodotus both doubted of it, as a matter seeming to him incredible, that they should saile beyond the Sunnes course, and therefore could not be frequent; for that Navigation would haue made both Tropikes familiar: he also saith in hunc modum Africa primum est agnita: if that were the first Voyage, Salomons were none, or at least his Title is false, De frequentis & celebri mari Arabico in Hispaniam navigatione.

They wintered also by the way, and stayed the growing and ripening of Corne, which argueth no people, at least no Trade in those parts. His next testimony is of Setaspes, who hauing deuoured the Daughter of Egyptus should therefore haue bene crucified, but by his mothers intreatie Xerxes pardoned him vpon condition of this African Circumnavigation; which argueth the rarenesse of the attempt, as did the sequell also: for hauing sailed out of the Straits, and coasted some parts of Africa, he returned (in despaire) and said he could saile no further, his ship beeing detained that it could not goe forwards. As for Darius sending to Indus, it is not to this purpose. The fragments of Spanish ships in the Arabike Gulfe is mentioned by Plinie, as a wonder in Cains Cæsars time; and that of Hanno agreeth not with the Historie which is extant of his Voyage, and more credible: and for Eudoxus fleeing the tyranny of Lathyrus, and comming to Gades by that Circumnavigation it was not for Trade, but at a dead lift, to saue his life. Another is said by Antipater to haue sailed from Spaine to Ethiopia, which might be to the neere Blackes before he came to that which now is called Guinee.

And these are all which are brought for this frequentis & celebri navigatione, that of Neco and of Eudoxus, and a Spanish wracke, being all that all Ages could yeeld vnto Plinies time; and all also long after Salomon: and of these that of Eudoxus which is the most likely is farre otherwise told by Strabo, and at large refuted. As for the long tale of Semiramis out of Snidas, it was to India by the Indian Ocean (if it were at all) and not to Spaine. And out of Silius his Verse, Et celebre Oceanus, aliernis estibus Hispal, to gather the Beitike Navigations to India, round about Africa, or to Mexico & Peru, argueth the Author to be Hispalensis; a Beitike wit, rauished with I know not what beitike fancies: as that also that Salomons raigning from Sea to Sea, must be from the Red Sea to the Gaditan, as if from Ezion-geber to Ioppe, were not from Sea to Sea.

From hence he turneth to the Phanician Navigations, which to mention here is more to our pur-

Strab. l. 3.

Circumnavigations of Africa rare

Herod. l. 4.

Plin. l. 2. c. 67.

Strab. l. 2.

Psal. 72.

purpose (they being Salomons Mariners to Ophir) then to his of Tartessus. Plinie and Mela applaud the Phœnicians for inuention of Letters, Astronomie, nauall and militarie Sciences. Cams posteritie first in the old World, & Chams in this, florished in Arts and humane Sciences. Ioshuabs conquest caused many of them, as Procopius and others affirme, to flee into remoter Regions, specially the Maritime parts of Africa. Commerce added Spaine, and whatsoever was fitting to that purpose of trade, Nauigation and riches, especially to the Phœnicians, both before and after Carthage. Their comming in and thorow Spaine is acknowledged by Varro also (in Vniuersam Hispaniam peruenisse) and they were the first discoverers of the Fortunate Islands in Straboes opinion, and before Homers age held the best places in Africke and Spaine, till the Romans dispossessed them. Carthage in Africa is knowne a Phœnician Colonie to schoole boies, and Plinie saith, that all the Betike coast was of Phœnician originall, or of the Pani, which in authors are often confounded with the former, of whom they proceeded, and as Saint Ierom obserueth, are called Pœni quasi Phœni, still in great part retaining that language; as is also the name Carthaginian, of whom Polybius testifieth that they possessed all Spaine, from the Strait to the Pyrenean hills. But he that will view a Map of the Tyrian greatnesse and the auncient Phœnician Nauigations, Traffiques and Discoveries, let him read the 27. of Ezekiel, with some good commentarie; and from the best euidence it shall appeare that all the best parts and Ports in Asia, Africke and Europe were then familiar to this Daughter of Tharsish. The Betike by Strabo are reputed the most learned of the Spaniards, vsing Grammer, Poesie, Antiquities, and Lawes as they said 6000. yeeres old, which agreeth with their Phœnician originall. To hunt the Legends of Bacchus, & Osiris, I here purpose not, as hauing little truth, and no mention at all of Spaine: nor is that more credible of the Phœnicians besieged by Nabuchodonosor, and relieued from their Phœnician Colonies in Spaine, and his reuenge vpon them therefore inuading the Spaniards. Aldrete a learned Spaniard rejects both, howeuer Megasthenes other where found fabulous, may make somewhat for them.

Yet I beleuee their commerce and Phœnician originall, and great trafficke; their Mines also of Gold and Siluer: but such as yeelded more to the Phœnicians and Carthaginians then all the New World hath hitherto to the Spaniard, or many yeeres after Goropius his biberto, added by Pineda, Credat Indans apella. Yea still Pineda brings testimonies to proue it no lesse rich in Mines; which makes me not a little maruell at their wisdom to be at such cost to fetch so farre off that which they haue so plentifull at home; and that as the throate which swalloweth all the meate and nothing staies there (it would cause suffocation) so the Spaniards before Columbus his time were so poore and quiet accordingly; and that at that time there appeared so little monie or credit, that the Queene pawned her Jewels to borrow a small summe of 2000. Duckets, or little more; and that since, Spaine hath (except soone after the returne of the Indian Fleete) so little coine stirring but bale monies. Shall we thinke them miserable, miser-like, rich-poore, or is it that their Mines seeme wholly recollected in their mindes? they being, if you beleuee Pineda, a Nation opum tam contemtrix quam lucratrix, ingenio acuto (hoc quorundam exterorum ineptissima inuidia suspiciosum & callidum vocat, saith he) ad magnas res nato (hoc sordida aliorum socordia superbiam & inmorem.) I enuie not their happinesse to them so much chanted by this Spaniard, I wish that they were so contented therewith, that they disturbed not the quiet of others; and that as they haue their Nauies of Tharsish yeerely bringing Gold and Siluer (as for Apes and Peacocks they neede not goe so farre for them) so they would doe as Salomon, liue in peace with their neighbours and build the Temple at home: which had they done, much of this our paper Nauie of Tharsish had not beene, neither had their Gaditane Tartessus become a pray to Her Nauie of Tharsish, who in her daies was filia Tharsish indeede, not Venus orta Mari, but Cui coniurati venere ad classica ventis, who defended her owne at home, by home inuading, by hunting her enemies round about the World. Let vs leaue the Spaniards magnifying the present riches of their Mines, as that of Gualcanal, one of the best in the world by the Kings Treasurer reported in a Letter to our Author, dated 1607. and another of Francisco Tesada his Sonne, so farre extolling the Spanish (hee names diuers) beyond those of Potosi, that whereas a quintall (that is 1600. ounces) of Potosi Ore, or earth digged vp, yeeldes but an ounce and halfe of pure Siluer, most of the Spanish yeelde ten ounces of a quintall, some more to 15. 30. 60. Markes, each of eight ounces. It is fit in a long tractate, and as it were another Voyage to Ophir, to end with Mines: and fitter in Salomons Ophir to end with honorable mention of our Salomon, who without any *Hiram*s helpe, sent her seruants to Ophir and Pern too, and round about the vnuerse to repaire that Temple, and to defend the Faith, which a greater then Salomon had by her in England reitored from Babylonish captiuitie; which the greatest powers on earth sought in vaine to hinder, she sailing further by her seruants, raiging longer in her owne person, more glorious in her last daies, then Salomon, and leauing a peaceable Salomon to succede her; yea to exceede, with addition of another Kingdome; (not a Rehobam, to loose the greatest part of the former.) Him God defend to defend his faith long amongst vs, with Salomons vertue and Ophirian magnificence. Amen.

CHAP. II.

Mans life a Pilgrimage. The Peregrinations of Christ, and the first Encompassing the habitable or then inhabited World by the holy Apostles and first planters of the Gospell.

§. I.

Man by sinne become a Worldly Pilgrime; Christs Pilgrimage in the flesh to recouer him: Mans spirituall Pilgrimage in and from the World.

GOD which in the beginning had made the World, and endowed Man with the Naturall inheritance thereof, whom also hee made another, a liuing and little World, yea a compendious Image of God & the World together: did in the <sup>a</sup>ful- <sup>a</sup> Gal. 4.
nesse of time send his owne Sonne (by whom hee had made the World and Man) to be made a Man in the World, that he might make new and recreate the World and Man, now lost & vanishing to perdition. Which saluation first accomplished in the infinit worth and worthinesse of his person and passion, He committed to faithfull witnesses, giuing them charge to go <sup>b</sup>into all the world and preach the Gospell to euery creature, that by those Ministerial conduits (in the cooperation of his Spirit) his amiable and imitable Example might, as the load- <sup>b</sup> Marke 16.15 starre of Christians be proposed; his sauing vertue as heavenly influence infused; his all-couering and al-curing merits imputed to his beleeuing members by spirituall grace to prepare them to supercelestiall Glory, whither Hee is before ascended as our Priest to make intercession, and as a King in humane flesh to take possession for Vs, by him made Kings and Priests vnto God.

<sup>30</sup> Thus haue we one Author of the World, of Man, of Peregrinations by men in and about the World. The first He made by his omnipotent Word, he commanded and in sixe dayes this huge Fabrike was both made and furnished. The second is vouchsafed greater indulgence, in preparation premised as of consultation, Let vs make Man; in the worke doing <sup>c</sup>, as of a Master-peece, <sup>c</sup> Gen. 1.26. &
he formed, and builded; in the exemplar or prototype in our owne image, after our likenesse: in his <sup>2.7.22.</sup> bountifull portion, the Sea and earth with all their appurtenances, subiected to his regall possession, the heauens with their reall influence and royall furniture to his wise vn-erring contemplation.

<sup>40</sup> Thus at first; but the first became last, by setting the last first, and preferring the Creature to the Creator, and therefore is iustly turned out of Paradise to wander, a Pilgrime ouer the world: But therefore did his Creator (for medicines are of contraries) preferre this Creature to himselfe, by infinitenesse of humilitie to make satisfaction for his vnspeakeable pride; and hee which had before made Man after his image, makes himselfe after mans image, to recouer that which was lost. Ω φιλαυτομία! O amanda & admiranda dignatio! propitious, vnspeakeable, superadmirable bounty! The World he made that he might giue it Man. Man he made such as might be capable of the world, and gaue him now a double world, adding to the former greater, this lesser of Mans selfe. And when both these were lost, by wilfull Treason and voluntary actuall rebellion, that he might forgive the Traitor He gaue the Prince, who to Himselfe forgaued not the demerits of his seruant; nor was content to regieue the forfeited world of creatures, but added a world supercelestiall, where fallen regained Man might supply the roomes of fallen forlorne * Angels: yea Hee restored lost Man to himselfe in a surer and nobler possession: and for the complement of Bounty <sup>50</sup> he gaue to this lost Creature the Creators selfe: dedit se in meritum, dabit se in premium. In this vnity giuen God hath obserued a Trinity of giuing. Hee gaue his Sonne vnto vs, doth giue his Spirit into vs, reserueth Himselfe for vs to be our exceeding & great reward, our crown of glory & diadem of beautie in that glory where we shall see him as he is, and God shall be all in all vnto vs. Nor was this a six daies worke, but he which made the world and man in sixe daies, vouchsafed to be made Man, indured to conuerse with sinners more then halfe sixtie yeeres; and not with a word commanded this new creation to be made, but the Word was commanded (& dixit multa & gestis mira & pertulit dura) God ouer all blessed foreuer was made obedient: to the death, euen the death of the Crosse, and was made <sup>60</sup> a curse for vs, to redeeme vs from the Curse, and to make vs heires of blessednesse.

This was indeede the greatest of all peregrinations, when the word was made flesh and (leaving palaties and Thrones to bee by Gods mercie recovered and repossessed by Men whom they had made sinfull, Christ victorious,
<sup>d</sup> Ier 15.1. <sup>e</sup> Psal 28.3. <sup>f</sup> 1. Iohn 3. <sup>g</sup> 1. Cor. 15. <sup>h</sup> Ber. de dilig. Deo. <sup>i</sup> Phil. 2. <sup>k</sup> Gal. 3.

* Folly and madnesse of enuee euen in those wisest creatures taken by a higher Wisdome in their owne craftinesse!
who enuying man his Paradise lost their owne Heauen, and God; yea, left thole Thrones and Principalities of Princ-

in a sort his heauenly Country, and his Fathers house) dwelt amongst vs. The next remote peregrination was his ascention from the lower parts of the Earth (where also his life was a certaine vncertaine pilgrimage, farre m above all beaueus, to leade captiuitie captiue, and giue gifts to Men. And he gaue some Apostles, and some Prophets, and some Euangelists, and some Pastors and Teachers. By whom in the worke of the Ministry is effected a double remote Peregrination; one in vs, when we trauel from our selues, that each man might say to his corrupt corrupting flesh (as that traueller to his quondam Mistresse n, seeking after his returne to renew her dissolute acquaintance, and saying, when she saw him strange as if he knew her not, Ego sum? Tis I: At ego non sum ego, answered he, I am not I now) *I trauell in birth till * Christ be formed in me, and, I liue o not but Christ liues in me,* that I may P deny my selfe and take up my crosse and follow him. The other is when wee put off our earthly tabernacle, and departing from this house of clay, whose foundation is in the dust, arriue in the faire bauens of Heauen, in the quire of Angels and triumphant societie of the Heauenly first borne. And thus is Mans whole life a Pilgrimage, either from God as Cains, or from himselfe as Abels, and all the Saints which confessed themselves Pilgrims on the earth, and to seeke another Country, that is, a heauenly. Vnto this spirituall and celestiall peregrination, was subordinated that bodily, of those first Euangelists vnto all Nations thorow the World to plant the Church and settle it on her foundation, which also in their 9 times was effected according to the Prophecie and precept of our Sauour, whose peregrinations, if wee had all the particulars, were alone sufficient to yeelde a large Volume of Voyages.

Christ indeede vouchsafed, euen in literall sense, to honour peregrinations in his owne person, whose blessed Mother soone after his conception trauelled from Nazareth in Galilee, into the hill Countries of Iudea, to her Cousin Elizabeth, and after her returne is by Casars Edict brought back that in an Inne at Bethlehem, this Pilgrime might in a Pilgrimage bee borne, the Gouernour of his people Israel, that is of spirituall Pilgrimes. And there from a remote place by Pilgrimes of the East is he visited; and how soone is his infancy forced to an Egyptian peregrination: how restless and manifold were his after-peregrinations in Galilee, Samaria, the Wilderneses and Cities of Iudea in the Coasts of Tyre and Sidon, in Decapolis by Sea, by Land, going about all the Cities and Villages, teaching and preaching, and healing euery disease among the people, till the Heauens receiued him into a certaine rest. But my Pen is vnworthy to follow his foot-prints.

d. II.

How Apostles differed from Bishops: their preaching the Gospel to all Nations.

How Bellarmine contradicts himselfe touching the Pope and Bishops succeeding the Apostles. See Torti Torti p. 248. and how improperly Gregory is called, our Apostle 325. a Acts 10. 18. b Acts 10. 18. c Acts 10. 18. d Acts 10. 18. e Acts 10. 18. f Acts 10. 18. g Acts 10. 18. h Acts 10. 18. i Acts 10. 18. k Acts 10. 18. l Acts 10. 18. m Acts 10. 18. n Acts 10. 18. o Acts 10. 18. p Acts 10. 18. q Acts 10. 18. r Acts 10. 18. s Acts 10. 18. t Acts 10. 18. u Acts 10. 18. v Acts 10. 18. w Acts 10. 18. x Acts 10. 18. y Acts 10. 18. z Acts 10. 18.

Is Apostles as they differed from others in immediate vocation, to Euangelicall Ministry, and infallible reuelation of the Euangelicall mysterie; so in the vnbounded limits of their Mission vnto all the world: whereas other ordinary commissions and callings are (though of God, yet) by Men; nor haue priuiledge of vnerring illumination; and must take heede to the seuerall flocks over which the holy Ghost hath a set them overseers: whence also Episcopall Churches are called Cathedrall, and sees, from their sitting<sup>b</sup> or teaching (that being the preaching posture of the ancients both Iewes and Christians) in their speciall places of charge.

Well therefore did Saint Gregorie Bishop of Rome hold the title Oecumenicall incompetent to a Bishop, and Antichristian: and as ill haue his Successors in that See swelled ouer all Episcopall bankes into Titles, and vniuersalitie Apostolicall.

The Apostles were not all in all places, and sometimes as in consideration of diuine blessing vpon Pauls Ministry amongst the Gentiles, as of Peters amongst the Iewes, they did especially employ themselves where they saw their labours most fruitfull, in which respect some settled their longer abode in certayne Cities, and some scarcely departed from Ierusalem, while others of them went forth and preached euery where, and the Gospel was in all the World (not virtually, but actually) and was fruitfull, and was preached vnto euery creature vnder Heauen, that is in Saint Matthewes phrase, to all Nations, or to all sorts of men. After which Embassage accomplished, the Temple as CHRIST had prophesied, and all the Legall Ceremonies, which dyed in the death of our Sauour, receiued a more solemne then honourable Funerall, by the reuenging Romane; Diuine Prouidence ordering that The fall of the Iewes (should bee the riches of the World, and the diminishing of them the riches of the Gentiles; and preventing the reuolting of weaklings, which seeing those things to remaine, which the Prophets had built, and God had ordayned, might in a Iudaizing retire, embrace the shadow for the bodie, and preferre the dazeling lustre of carnall shewes to the synceritie of faith and spirituall truth: Nimirum id Dominus ordinante dispositum ut legis seruus (saith Sulpitius) a libertate fidei atq; Ecclesia tolleretur.

And

And that this was accordingly in the Apostles daies effected, we haue not onely generall testimonies of the Ancients, but the particular Regions and peoples mentioned and acknowledged elsewhere by that generation, which in the question of Antichrist hence raise a demonstration, (no lesse still serues them, their Geese are all Swans) that he is not yet comen, because the Gospel is not yet preached thorow the World. Neither doe we seeke aduantages of the word World, as it is vsed in opposition to the narrow limits of Iudaea, where the Church in her nonage was impounded, and as it were swaddled in that cradle of her Infancy (so you euen now read the fall of the Iewes the riches of the World.) Nor in a Roman challenge, wherein Rome pretends her selfe Head of the World, in the stile of her quondam Emperours (succeeded and exceeded therein by her Moderne Prelate) one of which decreed in the Edict about intimated, That all the World should bee taxed; which World was no more then the Roman Empire, as since also the petty Councells Papall are called Oecumenicall (euen that of Trent) and the Church of Christ, in a strange Babylonian contradiction, Catholike-Roman: Nor yet in a figuratiue Hyperbole, as that seemes spoken of the Iewes at Ierusalem of every Nation under Heauen, which heard the Apostles in their seuerall Languages, uttering the great things of God. But their sound went ouer all the Earth, and their words to the ends of the World, is true of the heauenly Bodies, and these heauenly Messengers; Neither can any of the World bee shewed then inhabited, that is, no Nation of the World, whereof wee haue not plaine History, or apparant probability, that the Gospel had there sounded before that generation of the Apostles passed. Whereof as wee haue alleadged Diuine both prophetic before, and testimonie after the fulfilling: so our Ecclesiasticall Authors are herein plentifull. Thus doth Saint Chrysostome interpret that prophetic of our Sauour, Matthew 24. to haue beene fulfilled before the destruction of Ierusalem, and proues it by the fore-alleadged places, Romans 10. 18. Colossians 1. 6. and 23. So Theophilact after him. So Saint Hilarie Cum uniuersis fuerit cognitio Sacramenti celestis inuenta, tum Hierusalem occasus & finis incumbit: Then shall bee the end of Ierusalem, when the knowledge of the heauenly Myserie hath beene carried to all men. So Tetullian, Beda, Euthimius, Lyranius, Tostatus, Iansenius, Barradius, and others cited by the Reuerend and learned Bishop Downam, to whom I referre the Reader. And how else had they executed their commission to all Nations, if this mission had not succeeded? For if by succession of after Popes or Bishops; then ought that gift of tongues to haue continued or beene restored, and that of immediate reuelation, whereby the glory of the Worlds conuersion might be Gods peculiar, and not diminished by the arts (not by the acts and labours alone) of Men. Ad quid enim necessaria lingua gentium nisi ad conuersionem gentium? And Genebrard accordingly affirms that whiles the Apostles liued, in thirtie yeeres space at most, the Gospell (which hee calls the Faith of the Romans) was diuulged thorow the World, euen all the most remote Nations and barbarous. Hereof he citeth witnesses (besides the former) Clement Alexand. Iustin Martyr, Irenaeus, Origen, Cyprian, and the Prophecie of Esaie. c. 66.

1 Bell. de Rom.
Pont. 1.3. c. 4.
Lectus de Antich.
d. 8.

m Rom. 11. 12.

n Luk. 2. 1.
α' ε' ο' γ' παρ' ε' θ' α' ι' π' α' σ' α' ν' τ' λ' ο' σ' ι' κ' α' ν' α' λ' ι' σ'.

o Acts 2. 5. p Rom. 10. 18.

q Chrys. in Mat.
hem. 76.

r Theoph. in
Mat. 24. 21.
s Hilin Mat.
Can. 25.

t Terul. de re-
sur. carnis c. 12.
vid. Down. de Antich. part. 2.
ad Lectij. dem. 8.
who also citeth
Euseb. Hieron.
Ambros. Theod.
Ignat. us, &c. u Bern. de Pentec.
x Geneb. Chron.
An. 44.

§. III.

The peregrination of Saint PETER.

WE see the persecution which began against Stephen proceeded to the dispersion of the Disciples into the Regions of Iudaea and Samaria, and Phenice, Cyprus, and Antioch (where they first heard the name Christians.) Peter also warned by vision, breakes the partition wall, and preacheth to Cornelius, and other Gentiles, vnto whom soone after Paul and Barnabas receiue larger commission. Saint Peter also (as Ecclesiasticall writers testifie) besides Palestina, Syria, and the Regions adioyning to Iudaea, preached the Gospell in Antiochia, and after in Rome (in both which places they constitute and celebrate his Episcopall Chaire) in Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, Bithynia, to whom is inscribed his former Epistle, that is, to the dispersion of the Iewes, in those Regions, he being principally the Apostle of the Circumcision. For the Iewes were diuided into three sorts, the Hebrewes (which were the inhabitants of Palestina) and the scattered strangers, which were either Hellenists, διασπορά Ἑλληνιστῶν, or διασπορά Βαβυλωνίων, the remainders of the Babylonish deportation which still continued in those parts, when others returned, and from thence were occasionally dispersed afterwards. The Metropolis of these was Babylon, of the former Alexandria. Of this sort were the Italian, Egyptian and Grecian Iewes, which vsed the Greeke tongue in their Synagogues, in which also they read the Scriptures translated by the seuentie two Interpreters: yea they were ignorant of the Hebrew, as Scaliger affirms of Iosephus and Philo, two of their most learned: they had a Synagogue at Ierusalem, (called of the Alexandrines) of which were those Disputers against Stephen. Of the Babylonian dispersion were the Iewes in Asia, to whom Saint Peter wrote that Epistle from Babylon: And although Baronius and our Rhemists out of diuers Ancients labour to proue by Babylon in that place of Peter, to bee ment Rome, that some Scripture might testifie his beeing there a Acts 8. 1. & 11. 19.

b Acts 10. 13.
c Gal. 2. 6, 7.
d Acts 6. 1. &
1. Pet. 1. 1.
e 10. 7. 35.
vid. 10. Scal.
Annot. in Euseb.
p. 124. & Can.
Isag. pag. 278.

e Scal. cont. Se-
rar. trib.
f Acts 6. 9.
g Baron. 10m. 1.
an 45.
1. Pet. 5. 13. &
Rhem. Annot. om
those words
(the Church at Babylon saluteth
you)

Bellarm. de R. P.
 Kibera in Ap.
 &c. i See this largely proued in Conf. Rainold.
 Ch. 6.
 k Onuph in Plat.
 diu. 3. vit. Pet.
 l Mar. Scot. an.
 72. Babyloniam verbo predicationis illustrare
 m Euseb. hist.
 Eccl. 1. 2. ca. 14.
 n Vtricus Velenus his booke is extant with
 B. Fisher his answer, printed at Antwerpe 1522. n Gul. 2. 6.
 p Niceph. Cal.
 Eccl. hist. 1. 2. c. 35.
 q Metaphr. 29.
 Iun.
 r Onuph. ad Pla. in vita Petri.
 s In Choropiscopos sine coadiu-
 tores suos insti-tuit. peregrinati-one deinde per totam fere Eu-ropam suscepta.
 t Hier. de script.
 Eccles. in verbo, Clemens.
 u Iren. 1. 3. c. 31.
 x Euseb. Chron. &
 hist. 1. 3. c. 19.
 y Iren. ubi sup.
 z Rufin. prefat.
 recognit. Clem.
 ad Gaudent.
 a Epiphanius 27.
 * So Damasus in Pontif. saith that Peter ordained Linus & Cletus ut presen-tialiter omne ministerium sa-cerdotale exhiberent. And Genebrard. An. 81.
 saith of Linus & Cletus, eos Petrus chorepisco-
 pos sine coadiu-
 tores ascriuit. &
 Marianus Scotus
 An. 59. Linus coepiscopus sub.
 Petro Apostolo exterior acurauit. An. 70. Cle-
 tus coepiscopus successit. after the ptoote hereof, out of Pope Leo, ads
 Post Petrum, imo cum Petro,
 primus papa S.
 Clem. Romanam
 regit eccles.

there at least (though little could thence be inferred a 25. yeeres Episcopality, and lesse, Apostolike succession, and least of all an approbation of later nouelties successively hatched in the last and worst ages) yea the current of the Jesuites argue (not say onely) that Rome is the mysticall and Appocalypiticall Babylon, and cry out vpon vs for vnholiest partiality, that there acknowledge it:
 here in Peter disclaime it, not considering what a hooke they swallow with this baite: yet because that Epistle of Saint Peter is deliuered in litterall and not mysticall forme, like the Apocalyps, and because that opinion of Peters five and twenty yeeres Bishopricke deliuered by Eusebius, is manifestly repugnant to the Scriptures; and because that some of the Romanists themselues differ from the receiued opinion as incredible, as <sup>1</sup> Onuphrius and Genebrard, and Maria-nus Scotus also alleadgeth out of Methodius that Peter preached at Babylon, to which hee also addeth Corinth and almost all Italie, and because the Ancients receiued that conceit of Papias, a man of no great iudgement, as appeared by the Millenary fancie deriued from his tradition:
 though I will not meddle with that controuersie, whether Peter were euer at Rome, or no, the negatine whereof in whole bookes Velenus and Bernard haue written, yet I cannot beleue but that he wrote that of and in the Chaldaea Babylon. The rather because that was the Metropolis of the Asian dispersion (as is said) & that it wel agrees with the prime Apostle to execute his Apostolicall mission to remote and many Nations, especially to the Circumcision (whose peculiar A-postle he was) in all Countries where they were scattered, as appears by his care of the Helle-nists and Alexandria their Mother Citie, where he placed, as Authors affirme, Saint Marke the first Bishop; and because Ecclesiasticall writers affirme that he preached ubique fere terrarum, almost all the world ouer (so p Nicephorus) breuiter in totius Asia & Europa oris, omnibusque adeo qui in dispersione erant Indis & Gracis &c. q Metaphrastes affirmeth that after the Church of Rome and many others set in order, Saint Peter went to Carthage in Africa, & Onuphrius acknowledging his Roman See, yet will haue him a Non resident (if not an Apostle rather) not to abide there, but findes him in that five and twenty yeeres space at Ierusalem, after that at Antioch, seven yeers together, whence he came to Rome and reformed that Church, constituted Linus and Cletus his Suffragans or Coadiutors; and traouelling thence thorow the most part of Europe, at his returne to Rome, was there crucified.

Thus in a larger sence of the word Bishop, might Peter bee stiled Bishop of Rome, as hauing care to ouersee that as a principall Church, not neglecting meane while his Apostleship, to which properly belonged the care of all Churches. And hence is that different reckoning of the Roman Bishops, Hierom reckoning Peter the first, Linus second, Cletus the third, Clemens the fourth. But Irenaeus nameth Linus the first Bishop, Cletus the second, &c. The like difference is in the See of Antioche twixt Hierom and Eusebius, the one beginning with Euodius, the other with Peter, which sheweth their opinion that Peter preached in both places as an Apostle, not as Bishop in proper sence. So Irenaeus, the two Apostles (Peter and Paul) hauing founded the Roman Church, committed the Bishoply charge thereof to Linus: and Rufinus, that Linus and Cletus were Bishops while Peter liued, that they might haue the care of the Bishoply charges (Episcopatus curam) and he might doe Apostolatus Officium, the dutie of the Apostleship: & Epiphanius, in Roma fuerunt primi Petrus & Paulus Apostoli idem ac Episcopi, deinde Linus, &c. Peter and Paul were both Apostles and Bishops in Rome; and after other wordes of doubt touching Clemens his being Bishop in the times of Linus and Cletus, all of them liuing in the same times while Peter and Paul were Bishops, saith, propterea quod Apostoli saepe ad alias terras ablegabantur propter Christi predicationem, non potuit autem urbs Roma esse sine Episcopo, That the Apostles went often into other Countries to preach Christ, in which meane while Rome could not bee without a Bishop. For the Apostolicall function enioyned an vniuersall; the Episcopall, a particular charge.
 And as the greater Office includes the lesse, as the Office of the Lord Chancellour, or Lord Cheefe Iustice, or any Councillor of State, containeth the authority of a Iustice of peace in each shire, with larger extension and intension of power, and a diocesan Bishop the Ministeriall function in any pastorall charge in his Diocese, which the Parson or Curate must yeelde to him being present, and pleased to supply and execute: so, and more then so, the Apostolicall comprehends the Episcopall commission, as lesse: and the Apostles were in this respect Bishops wheresoeuer they came, not by ordinary constitution, but by a higher and extraordinary function: to whom other Bishops are successors not in the Apostleship strictly taken, but as Bishop to Apostles, as Iustices of peace in their limits to the higher Commissions either ordinary as of Itinerant Iustices, or extraordinarie by speciall commission on speciall occasions constituted, in part, not in all their authoritie.

We shall launch into a Whirle-pool if we proceede to declare Peters Successors (as some call the Bishops of Rome) the Fathers themselues disagreeing in their Catalogues. So farre off were they from making Papall succession an essentiall either Note of the Church, or ground and rule of Faith. But for their preaching the Gospell thorow the World, all Bishops are all Apostles successours, these in their limited, those in an vniuersall Commission; which either they performed, or not: if they did not, it was disobedience, as in Sauls expedition against Amalek: if they could not, it was impotence, and the command of preaching to all Nations, impleadeth defect in the Commander, who is the wisdom of God, and the power of God. His wisdom appeared also together with his power in giuing them tongues, and not onely healthfull constitution of body, but miraculous transportation and power, Natures defects not hindring the effects of Grace, as appeareth in the story of Philip and the Eunuch, Acts 8. of Pauls suruiuing a stoning, Iohn the scalding in Oyle, and others other difficulties, mentioned in part, both in Diuine and Ecclesiasticall History, Neither haue Miracles and tongues necessary to such a conuersion, euer since happened, nor haue we promise that they euer shall. Nor was it euer meeter that the New King should be proclaimed, then when hauing led captiuitie captiue, he ascended on high, and tooke possession of his supercælestiall throne: the Apostles herein doing that, for the heavenly Salomon with spirituall magnificence, which Nathan, Zadock, and others had done for the typicall Salomon, by Dauids appointment. The vniuersall Ceremonies being the same in the whole Church, and such as no generall Councell could determine, argue the vnitie of the spirit in the Apostolicall preaching, Thus as we haue partly shewed in all, and particularly shewed in Peter for his part, we will declare of the rest.

§. IIII.

Of Saint ANDREW, IOHN, the two IACOBI, PHILIP and SIMON ZELOTES.

Andrew the brother of Saint Peter, as Dorotheus and Sophronius <sup>b</sup> testifie preached to the Scythians, Sogdians, and Saca, and to the inner or Sauage Ethiopians; was buried at Patra in Achaia, being crucified by Ageas Gouverneur of the Edesens. Nicéphorus <sup>c</sup> writeth that he trauelled into Cappadocia, Galatia, and Bithynia, and thence to the Countrey of the Anthropophagi, or Man-eaters, and to the Wilderneses of the Scythians, to both the Euxine Seas, and to the Southerne and Northerne Coasts, as also to Byzantium now called Constantinople, where hee ordained Stachys Bishop: after which, hee went thorow Thrace, Macedonia, Thessalia, and Achaia. That hee was sent to the Scythians, Baronius prooueth out of Origen, <sup>d</sup> and Eusebius; and out of Nazianzene <sup>e</sup> his descent into Gracia and Epirus.

Saint Iohn his banishment into Patmos, and Epistles to the seuen Churches of Asia (which Tertullian <sup>f</sup> calls Ioannis alumnas Ecclesias) are extant in his owne Writings. Irenæus <sup>g</sup> and many other mention his labours at Ephesus, Prochorus <sup>h</sup> (his supposed Disciple) hath written a Historie of his Asian Peregrination, his actions at Ephesus, his passions at Rome, whither hee was sent, and in other places; but his authoritie is no better then of a Counterfeit, as Baronius <sup>i</sup> hath also branded him. Of this nature we find many counterfeit Gospels and Iournals, or Histories of the Apostles acts, censured by the Ancients, the Deuill then labouring to sow his tares in the Apostolicall Historie, which in after Ages, Antiquitie might countenance with venerable authoritie. Metaphrastes <sup>k</sup> relateth his acts in Phrygia and Hierapolis: That he preached in other Regions of the East, Baronius <sup>l</sup> affirmeth, especially to the Parthians, to whome his first Epistle was inscribed in ancient Copies: that hee conuerted the Bassora, is still holden by Tradition amongst them.

Iames the brother of Iohn was put to death by Herod to please the Jewes, <sup>m</sup> a wicked Generation not pleasing God, and contrary to all men. It is reported of some, that before his death he trauelled as farre as Spaine, and there preached the Gospel, at least to the dispersed Jewes. Baronius in his Martyrologe <sup>n</sup> produceth a Booke of suspected faith attributed to Isidore, testifying his preaching to the Nations of Spaine, and of the Westerne Regions; and the Breniarius of Toledo, in which are these Verses, Regens Ioannes dextra solus Asiam, Et laua frater positus Hispaniam, &c. the testimonies also of Beda, Turpinus and others. All the Churches in Spaine, hee saith, <sup>o</sup> hold the same opinion. Yet is he vncertaine, and so leaues his Reader, because of that vntimely timeliness of his death. It is not likely that the Apostleship and office of preaching to all Nations, and the name of the Sonne of Thunder was giuen to him by Him, which as easily infuseth the vertue as imposeth the name, and foreknew the times and seasons of his life and death, but that the sequell was answerable.

His hastie death argues his forward courage, as of him which stood in the forefront of the battle. That hee preached to the dispersed Tribes <sup>p</sup> hath many authors: that his bodie was brought from Ierusalem to Spaine, the Romane Martyrologe, and the Popes Callistus and Innocentius are cited by Baronius.

The other Iames called Alphai, and Oblis, and Iustus, and the brother of our Lord (either because he was the sonne of Ioseph by a former wife, according to Eusebius, <sup>q</sup> or because his a Dorat. Synopf.

b Ap. Hieron.
c Catol. scrip. Eccles.
c Nic. hist. Eccl. l. 2. c. 39.

d Orig. in Ge. l. 3
Euseb. hist. l. 3. c. 3
e Greg. Naz.
Orat. in Arian.
f Tert. 4. cont.
Marc.
g Iren. l. 3. c. 3.
h Prochor. in hist. S. Ioan. in Biblioth. pat. l. 2. c. 1.
i Baron. to. 1.
An. 44.
k Metaph. in 5.
Septem.
l Relat. ex Ep.
Iesuit. an. 1555.

m Act. 12.

n Bar. Mart.
Iul. 25.

o Annal. to. 1.
an. 44.

p Duodecim tribus in dispersis constitutis. catalog.
Hieron. Dorab.
Synopsis. Mer-
manni thea-trum. &c.

q Euseb. hist. l. 2.
c. 1. Vid. Epipha-nar. 78. Abd. l. 6.

x Hier de script.
Ecclef.
f Iof. Antiq. l.
20. c. 8.
t Talmud. Bab.
de Idol. c. 2. Hier.
rosol. Sciabboth.
c. 14.
* So Hierom.
but Euseb. l. 2. c.
22. hab. una cum ceteris A.
postolis.
u Euseb. bi. l. 5.
c. 17.
x Plin. l. 5. c. 14.
longe clariss. urbium Orientis non ludæ modo.
y Mat. 4. & 5.
z Ps. 76.
a Es. 2. 3.
b Cl. Euseb. in
1. Tim. 4.
c Ec. 1. 7.

d Gal. 1. 19.
e Act. 15.
f The other general Coun-cels were rather of the Roman, then the vniuersall
World; assembled by Roman Emperors only.
f Ep. l. 7. c. 8.
g As the President of Yorke
for the whole Prouinces; the Vice-roy of Goa for all the Indies, &c. h Bar. p. 325. to. 1

i Rom. Mart.
Mai. 1.
k Baron. Mart.
l Niceph. l. 2. c.
40. & li. 8. c. 30.

Mother was sister to the Blessed Virgin, as Saint Ierome rather thinketh) was a man famous for Sanctitie and Denotion amongst the Jewes by the testimonie of Iosephus, which imputeth to his cruell and vniust murder, the terrible desolation which soone after befell that Nation. And the Talmud both of Ierusalem and Babylon, mention him as a worker of Miracles in the Name of Iesus.

Hegeippus a man neere the Apostles times, saith of him, Suscepit Ecclesiam Hierosolyma post Apostolos frater Domini Iacobus cognomento Iustus &c. Of which wordes this seemes the sense, That whereas the Apostles by common consent in a iust Aristocratie had gouerned the Church of Christ, residing at Ierusalem, vntill the time of their dispersion, to diuers parts of the World, (which as Eusebius citeth out of Apollonius, was the twelfth yeere after Christs Passion) they then betaking them to their severall Prouinces; iointly agreed to leaue Iames the Iust at Ierusalem for the regiment of the Church both there, and as from other places of the World occasions were offered thorow the Vniuerse. For as Ierusalem was faire, the famousst of the Cities of the East, not of Iudea alone, in other respects, as Plinie hath honoured it; so in Religion, it was by better testimonie called the Holy Citie, and the Citie of the great King, whose Tabernacle was in Salem and his dwelling in Sion; not in the time of the Law, but of the Gospel also; the Law of the Lord went out of Sion, as Esay had prophesied, and the word of the Lord from Ierusalem. This was the Staple of Christian Merchandize, Emporium b fidei Christiana (saith Especeus) the Mart and Mother of the Christian Faith, which therefore alway needed some graue Father to be the principall Factor in her Holy affaires: Hierusalem was before her destruction, the Center of Christianitie, whence all the lines of Apostolicall Missions were diffused and thither againe reduced; the Ocean, whence all the Ecclesiasticke streames of the Euangelicall waters of life issued, and whither they againe returned; Once, it was the Senate-house of Christian Counsels and Counsailes for all Prouinces of Christianitie, the confluence of others, but specially of the Jewish dispersions, which from all Countries comming to the Legal Feasts, might there freight themselues home with Festiuall wares of Euangelicall commodities. Necessarie it was therefore that some Apostolicall Senator and principall Apostle should there reside, with whom in all difficulties to consult, not so much as Bishop (in proper sense) of that Citie, as of the Jewes, yea and as opportunitie serued, of other Nations thorow the whole World. This was that Iames which wrote the Epistle bearing his name, whom Paul mentioneth to the Galatians, and the Acts often, especially in the fifteenth Chapter, where you see him President of the first Councell (if not the only in strictest sense termed Generall) of the Apostles, after their Prouinciall dispersions assembled at Ierusalem. For in his sentence the Councell concludes; and if the Apostles (as the Fathers concur) had committed to him being an Apostle, the gouernment of Ierusalem, to whom might the Presidenship of Councils in that place appertaine, rather then to this Apostolicall Bishop and Bishoply Apostle, to whom the Lord first committed his throne on earth, as Epiphanius testifieth. As a Deputie or President residess in one Citie, though his gouernment be not there confined, but extends to the whole Kingdome or Region, so was it with this Apostles Bishoprike at Ierusalem, from that high Pinacle to ouersee and prouide for the affairs of the Catholike and Vniuersall Church. From that high pinacle (in another sense also) was he cast downe, stoned, and at last with a Fullers Club brained by the Jewes, which were soone in a terrible desolation called to accounts for this and other Apostolicall and Prophetical bloud, yea of the high Prophet and Apostle of our saluation, which yet the Jewes attributed to this Martyrdom of Iames, as lately and neerely preceding. His Successour was Simeon his brother, in that See of Ierusalem, not Simon called the Cananite, one of the twelue, as Baronius hath also obserued.

Saint Philip is recorded to haue preached in Asia superior, and (as the Romane Martyrolog saith) almost all Scythia. Baronius supposeth the testimonie of Isidore, and the Toletan Breuiarie, that Philip conuerted the Galls, is fally written for Galatians, which yet, if Nicephorus Relations be true, needs no such correction.

Simon was called Cananite, as Nicephorus saith, for his birth at Cana, whose marriage was there celebrated when Christ turned water into Wine, and for the feruour of his Zeale, hee was surnamed Zelotes. His preaching peregrinations he relateth thorow Egypt, Cyrene, Africa, Mauritania, and all Libya euen to the Westerne Ocean, yea, to our Britaine Ilands. Hee preached last in Phrygia, and at Hierapolis was crucified.

§. V.

Of Saint THOMAS, BARTHOLOMEW, MATTHEW, IVDE, MATTHIAS: and of counterfeit Writings in the Apostles names.

Saint Thomas called Didymus, preached to the Parthians, as <sup>m</sup> Origen, and after him <sup>n</sup> Eusebius have written: Gregorie Nazianzene <sup>o</sup> addeth the Indians: Chrysostome <sup>p</sup> saith, he whited the blacke Ethiopians. Theodoret <sup>q</sup> reciteth the Parthians, Persians, Medes, Brachmans, Indians and the adioyning Nations: Nicephorus <sup>r</sup> hath the same, and addes the Iland Taprobana, which is now called (in the opinion of the most) Samottra: in Hieroms Catalogue is added out of Sophronius, the Germanes (of India) Hircans and Bactrians, and his death at Calamina. On the Coast of Choromandel, where the River Ganges is swallowed of the Sea called the Gulfe of Bengala, are diuers Christians from old times called S. Thomas Christians. Some of the Iesuits haue added China also to the labors of S. Thomas. Of these Christians, both in Narsinga, and Cranganoron that Sea where Indus falleth, and in diuers parts of the Indies you may read in <sup>s</sup> Osorius <sup>t</sup> Maffaus and others. His Feast day is celebrated at Malipur, (so they now call the Citie where he lyes buried) not by the Christians alone, but the Ethnikes also of those parts. The Eunuch of Candace <sup>u</sup> conuerted by Saint Philip, is amongst the Ethiopians in Prester Iohns Countreies honoured for Plantation of the Gospel in those parts of Africa; but by Dorotheus <sup>x</sup> said to haue preached in all the Erytbrean Coast, and the Iland Taprobana, before ascribed to Saint Thomas, and in Arabia Felix.

Saint Bartholomew (saith Chrysostome <sup>y</sup>) passed into Armenia Maior, and instructed the Lycaones; Sophronius <sup>z</sup> addes the Albanians, and the Indians termed Fortunates; Origen saith the hither India; <sup>a</sup> Socrates, India next to Ethiopia. Eusebius <sup>b</sup> testifieth, that Pantanus a Stoike Philosopher and Rector of the Schoole or Vniuersitie at Alexandria, was ordained Preacher of the Gospel to the Easterne Nations, and pierced to the Regions of the Indians. For there were at that time many <sup>c</sup> zealous imitators of the Apostles: of whom was this Pantanus, which preached to the Indians, amongst whom he is reported to haue found the Gospel of S. Matthew, in the hands of some Christians, which <sup>d</sup> had receiued the faith by S. Bartholomew, and left them the said Gospel in Hebrew, reserued till that time. Nicephorus <sup>e</sup> adioyneth S. Bartholomew, to S. Philip in his Plantations of the Gospel in Syria and Asia Superior, and after at Hierapolis, where he was crucified with Philip, but deliuered, and yet againe at Vrbano polis in Cilicia, died that ignominious death and glorious Martyrdome. This <sup>f</sup> Hebrew Gospel of Saint Matthew, Saint Hierome, both saw and copied out. It was reserued in the Library of Casarea.

Saint Matthew travelled into Ethiopia, that namely which adhereth to India, as Socrates <sup>g</sup> writeth. Nicephorus <sup>h</sup> addeth the Anthropophagi, and tels I know not what Legends, reiected also by Baronius. For such was the indulgent prouidence of God, not to burthen the faith of the Church with voluminous Histories of Apostolicall Acts thorow the whole World, which scarcely (as Saint Iohn hath of our Lord) the <sup>i</sup> whole world could haue contained. Vnto the faith of all, not to the curiositie of some, was written enough by those holy Penmen, the Secretaries of the Holy Ghost in holy Scripture. But the Deuill impiously prouident, hence tooke occasion to burthen the Church with so many vnworthy Legends, both presently after their times forged in their names, and since by Vpstarts deuised and obtruded on the Credulous world, as Lines, (lies) of the Saints, Histories, yea, Misfe-stories, Hisse-stories, by the old Serpent hissed and buzzed amongst superstitious men (missing worthily the right, and deceiued with lyes, because they had not receiued the lone of the truth; to make way to the succeeding mysterie of Iniquitie; out of which Babylonian Mint, wee haue lately that babbling and fabling Abdus, by Lazius his Midwifery borne after so many Ages, an Abortiue indeed, or Changeling, as the wiser <sup>k</sup> of themselves confesse. Hee can tell you instead of Saint Matthews life, many Ethiopian Fables, and intertayne you in a (Fooles) Paradise situate aboue the highest Mountains, with such delicacies, as shew that Adams children are still in loue with the forbidden fruit, and will lose, or at least aduenture the true Paradise to find a false. Inopes nos copia fecit. Their abundant labours and trauels which Came, Saw, Overcame, each so large portions of the World, left them no leisure to write Annales (whence some haue found leisure to write Aniles, olde wiuers Tales) and makes the conuersion of the World an obiect of our faith, rather in beleenuing the prediction and testimony thereof in the Scripture, then of humane credit, where the Apostles and Martyrs of their golden Actions and Passions, haue found such Leaden <sup>k</sup> Legends and wooden workmen, Makers or Poets, rather then Historians: which here once spoken may bee applied to the rest, of whole great workes so little is recorded.

Saint Augustine <sup>l</sup> complains of such Apocrypha Scriptures amongst the Manichoes, a nescio quibus

<sup>m</sup> Ori. en. in Gen. l. 3. c. 6.
<sup>n</sup> Euseb. l. 3. c. 1.
<sup>o</sup> Naz. hom. ad Arian.
<sup>p</sup> Chrys. hom. de 12. Ap.
<sup>q</sup> Theod. ad Gent. l. 9.
<sup>r</sup> Nic. l. 2. c. 40.
<sup>s</sup> Osor. de reb. Em. l. 3.
<sup>t</sup> Maff. hist. Ind.
<sup>u</sup> Act. 8.
<sup>x</sup> Dor. Synops. sine.

<sup>y</sup> Chrys. hom. de 12. Apost. ex Bar.
<sup>z</sup> Soph. ap. Hieron. de script. Ec.
<sup>a</sup> Soc. l. 1. c. 15.
<sup>b</sup> Euseb. l. 5. c. 10.
<sup>c</sup> In the time of Aurelius and Commodus.
<sup>d</sup> Nic. l. 2. c. 39.
<sup>e</sup> Hier. ubi sup.

<sup>f</sup> Socra. ubi sup.
<sup>g</sup> Nic. l. 2. c. 41.
<sup>h</sup> Iohn 21.

Counterfeits fathered on Apostles, &c.

<sup>i</sup> Baron. c. 4.

<sup>k</sup> Vines and Canus complaine no 1. sc hereof, yea
D. Hardung &c.
1 Aug. cont. au.
& cont. auer.
leg. l. 1. c. 79.

quibus futoribus fabularum sub Apostolorum nomine Scriptas : and refuseth the like testimonies of m Hier. de scrip. Iohn and Andrew produced by the Marcionites. S. Hierom<sup>m</sup> nameth five Apocrypha Bookes fals-ly attributed to Peter; his Acts, his Gospel, his Pradication, his Apocalypse, his Iudgement. Some n Clem. Alex. Strom. l. 6. also mention<sup>a</sup> Itinerarium Petri, which perhaps is the same with Clements Recognitions, anoo Epiph. her. 26. Vid. de his Ba- ron. an. 44. to 1. ther counterfeit. In Pauls name was published a Gospel, Apocalypse, his Revelations, his Ascent to p Gel. in decret. de lib. Apoc. Heaven (which the Gnostiks vsed, as saith Epiphanius<sup>o</sup>) his Acts, & third Epistles to the Corinthians, and to the Thessalonians, and one to the Laodiceans. Iohn is made a Father of other Revelations, and of the Virgins Departure. Saint Andrewes Gospel, Saint Thomas his Gospel and Apocalypse. Saint Bartholomews Gospel, Saint Matthews Booke of Christs Infancy, receiued by the Valentinians, are condemned by ¶ Gelasius. Neither did Matthias, Philip, and Thaddæus want their Gospels, here- 10 ticall birchs iniuriouly laid at their doores : nor Barnabas also, nor Marke, no nor Indas the Traitor, which the Caians acknowledged, as Theodoret and Epiphanius haue written, lettice futable to such polluted lips. Wee might adde the Acts (so inscribed) of Andrew, of Thomas, of Philip, of Paul and Thecla Iohns Circuit. Yea the Colledge Apostolicall was made to father like Bastards, as the Doctrines of the Apostles, the Lots of the Apostles, the Praise of the Apostles, besides other Acts of the Apostles, and the manglings of the truly Apostolicall Pages by Addition, or Substraction.
 What shall I say? Our Blessed Lord escaped not hereticall Impostures in his Name, as the Booke De magia ad Petrum & Paulum. And I thinke him rather prodigall then liberall, or iust of his q Euseb. l. 1. c. 13. faith which subscribes to that story q of Abagarus. But it were endlesse no lesse then needlesse, to intangle our selues in this diabolicall Maze and hereticall labyrinth of sacred forgeries, in that and 20 after Ages, the Ennions mans superfeminations to bewitch unstable soules, not contented with Gods dimensum and prouident allowance. If therefore of Saint Matthewes Ethiopian peregrinations, if of Saint Matthias in Ethiopia also (for a great part of Asia, and the greatest of Africa were stiled by that name) if of Indas Thaddæus his preaching in Mesopotamia, Arabia, Idumæa, and the Regions adiacent, we haue so little recorded, it is no great maruell. It may be sufficient to vnder-standing Readers, that wee haue out of the best Authors extant, named the most Countries of the then knowne world. And if euery Region and People bee not mentioned, impute it to the want of History of their seuerall Acts, who sought rather to write Christs Passions in the hearts, then their owne Actions in the bookes, of Men; to produce deeds not wordes, and monuments of Diuine, not their owne glory. Few places can be named in Asia or Africa, which wee haue not 30 mentioned in their prerigration and preaching : and faire probabilitie is for those not mentioned by consequence of reason, which at least can proue nothing to the contrary ; and more then probability is the Diuine testimony before obserued.

¶ VI.

Of Saint P A V L : of Apostolicall Assistants : some doubts discussed.

a Gal. 1.

b Mermannii Theat. Conuers.
gent.

c Bed. & Aug.
Script. Niceph.
l. 2. c. 20.

d Vid de his Dorothei Synopf.
Merman. Baron.
&c.

For Saint Paul, the Doctor of the Gentiles, he flew like a swift Fowle ouer the World: 40 wee haue his owne testimony of his Preaching in Arabia, his returne to Damascus, and iourney after a three yeers to Ierusalem, thence to the Regions of Syria and Cili- cia; yea that hee (not sprinkled, but) filled Ierusalem to Illyricum with the Gospel; of his preaching in Italy and Rome, of his purpose for Spaine, which some<sup>b</sup> say hee fulfilled afterwards, adding thereto Portugall France, Britaine, the Orchades, the Ilands and Regions adioyning to the Sea, and his returne by Germany into Italy,<sup>c</sup> where hee suffered Martyrdome, being by Nero beheaded. I force no mans credit, as neither to that of Ioseph of Arimathea his preaching to the Britons, nor Saint Denis his Conuersion of the Galles, at least in all things written of them.
 But for the Acts of Paul, as the Apostle of the Gentiles, the Scripture is more ample then of any the rest, the greater parts of Saint Lukes History, being of Pauls Acts. 50

What should wee adde the labours of Euangelists, Assistants, and Co-workemen with the Apostles in those first Plantations, sent by them in seuerall missions to diuers places? Such were Bar- nabas,<sup>d</sup> Silas, Philip the Deacon, Siluanus, Timothee, Titus, and others : some of which were after Bishops (as is anciently beleueed) of particular Churches. Epenetus Saint Pauls disciple is said to haue beene Bishop of Carthage, Andronicus another of them in Pannonia, now called Hungary, Amphyas at Odyssa, Urbanus in Macedonia, Iason at Tarsus, Trophimus at Arles, Crescens at Vienna, Aristobulus in Britaine, Asyncritus in Hyrcania, Hermes in Dalmatia, and others in other places, a Catalogue of whom in Mermannius his Theatre you may see at leasure. Saint Marke disciple of Saint Peter hauing preached to Libya, Marmarica, Ammonica, Pentapolis, and Egypt ordained Bishops in the new planted Churches. Eutropius another of Saint Peters disciples, is said to haue 60 preached in France: Mansuetus another of them, to some parts of Germany, as Symon of Cyrene, to other parts. But it were too tedious, to bring hither all that Authors haue written of the seuenty disciples, and other Apostolicall Assistants, who spent and were spent, consumed and consummated their course in and for the Gospel.

But

HONDIUS his Map of Saint PAULS Peregrination.

- 40 But here some may say, that wee haue not named all Countries of the World, and of those named there is in Authors much varietie of report, in iudicious Readers much scruple to credit. I answer, that it were a farre harder taske to proue that any Countrey, not here mentioned, was neglected in this Ministry. Neither did the Geography of those times extend their suruey much further, then that wee haue here in their Iournalls expressed: although it much extended it selfe beyond the truth. Besides, who can wonder that the Apostles found not Pen-men, to record their Euangelicall conquests thorow the World, seeking to establish a Kingdome Spirituall and Internall, contemning the worlds glory, and of vaine-glorious worldlings contemned, when the great Conquerours, which sought to subdue the World by force, and plant Empires by Armes, haue left so obscure notice of their exploits, though dedicated to humane applaue and admiration? Of the Egyptian Conqueror Sesostris, Lucan sings, Venit ad occasum mundi, extrema Sesostris,
- 50 Et Pharios curus regum seruibus egit! Of Nabuchodonosor the Scripture witnesseth, that his greatnesse reached to Heauen, and his Dominion to the end of the Earth; Yet haue they neither Iournalls nor Annalls of their great Acts left to posterity, not so much as the names of their subdued Prouinces, not so much as wee haue here produced of the Apostles. Nay, what is left to memory of the long-lived Assyrian Monarchy, but shadows, glimpses, tables? Who hath left in Register the names of the one hundred twenty seven Prouinces, subiect to the Persian Monarchy from India to Ethiopia? Nay, how little and how vncertaine is remaining of the Greeke Alexander his Expedition, although then vnderaken, when Greece had arrived at the height of humane learning, and by him that was himselfe a famous Scholler of the most famous of Philosophers?
- 60 Did not hee deplore his owne unhappinesse in this kind, treading on the Tombe of Achilles? And had not Curtius and Arrianus long long after his death, written of him (I question not the certainty) how little should wee haue of Great Alexander? Great in his Acts and Arts, greater in his Attempts, greatest in the vnbounded Ambition of Greatest Rencume to latest posterity; yet how much more is left of the Acts of Humble Apostles, then of Ambitious Alexander?

c Dan 4.22

f Ester 8.9.

g Cic. pro Arch. Poet.

der? And now his Conquests are obliterated and forgotten, how are theirs written, not in Bookes and Lines, but in the minds and liues of Men, so great a part of the World still remaining the Volume of their Expeditions in their Christian profession?

And how much more did so, till the vnbeleefe and vnthankfulnesse of wicked men, prouoked Diuine Iustice to remoue his golden Candlestick from so many Nations thorow the World, which for contempt of Christian Truth, were againe abandoned to Ethnicke superstitions? Thus had God dealt with the Iewes before; thus after with the Christians in Africa almost generally in a great part of Europe, and in a great great part of Asia by Mahumetan madnesse, in which what that Arabian Canker-worme had left, the Tartarian Caterpillar did almost vtterly deuoure. Thus in Marco Polo, in Rubruquius, in Odoricus and Mandauile, yee may read of Christian Nations dispersed quite thorow Asia 1200. yeeres and more after Christ, ouerwhelmed with that Tartarian deluge, where the Name of Christians in the remotest parts is extinct, till Nauigation in the last Age reuiued it. And had not Nauigation and Peregrination opened a window, no Geographer had let vs know the names of Nations, which Christians of the West found, professing the same Christ in the vnknowne Regions of the East, at once seene to bee, and to be Christian. Yea, how little of the remote North and East of Europe and Asia, or of the South of Africa, was knowne to Plinie, Ptolomey, and other ancient Geographers, where their Christian light hath shined to vs with the first notice of themselves?

The reason of the name Pagan or Paynim.

Rom. 10. 18.

I inferre not, that the Gospells lightning kindled an Euangelicall flame, and obtained Episcopall entertainment in euery place where the Apostles preached: nor that euery Lord, Tribe, and Family heard this Diuine Message; nor that each Country was filled with the Gospel, or any with an vniuersall profession in the first Plantations, or in their times. The name Paganus which signifying a Pesant or Rustike, for this cause was altered to a Panime or Ethnike, because Religion could not, but in tract of time diffuse her bright beames and lines of light, from her Episcopall City Centre (that also not wholly Christian) to those ruder parts of her remoter circumference. This I say, that their sound went into all the Earth, and their words unto the Ends of the World, in some Countries and Nations more fully, in some more obscurely, in all by fame at least, if not by the Apostles presence, as the Spirit permitted vtterance, that some of all might be conuerted.

§. VII.

Of America, whether it were then peopled.

* Sup. c. 1. §. 3.

And if any more scrupulous doubt of the New World, and of many places where no foot print of Chistianity is extant, I answer, * (besides what before in our Ophirian Tractate is spoken) not onely that time eates vp her owne Children, and that none can proue that Christ hath not bene there preached in former times, because these are thereof ignorant; (for a deluge of opposing persecutions, another of ecclipsing superstitions and heresies, a third of warre and inuasions, extinguishing both the Religion and People also hath succeeded, in some the most renowned Churches of the World: and what then may time haue done in vnknowne places?) But who can tell that America, and many parts of Asia, Africke and Europe were then peopled with Men, the Subiects capable of this Preaching? Nay, may wee not in probabilitie think the contrary: how great a part of the World is yet without habitation? how great a part of the World is yet vnknowne? All the South Continent is in manner such, and yet in reason * coniectured to bee very large, and as it were another New World; Also Fernand de Quirós saith hee hath discovered eight hundred leagues of shoare. Neither is it probable but that so temperate parts are inhabited (which in part, so farre as is knowne on the Shoares and adjacent Ilands, is apparant) nor is their likelihood of Chistianity, where the Nations euery way adioyning are Ethnike, that I say not Sauage on the parts of Asia and America: and both these and they seeme latelier peopled then the Apostles dayes. In the new Straits beyond the Magellane, the stupidity of the Fowles argued they knew not the face of Men, which they not at all dreaded. And many many Ilands not yet inhabited, this ensuing Discourse will manifest. Yea in large Tracts of the Continent of Groenland, & other parts vnto New-found-land, it is found that eyther there are no people, or they but for some time in the Summer, and for some purpose, as of hunting or fishing, not certaine and settled dwellers: a name scarcely fitting to the people in Virginia and Florida. Euen in our old World it self, how new are the eldest Monuments & Antiquities, in al the North, Norway, Sweden, Finland, Lapland, the Samoyeds, Tartars, yea the Northermost Russes, Lithuanians, Linonians, Poles; how new their Arts, their Aets, their Lawes, Gouvernement, Ciuility and Fame? Which therefore must needs as the World increased, bee euacuated from Countries neerer the Sunne, by necessitie inforced to harder Climates. Of Iceland our story will shew, it was but yesterday inhabited.

* See Brewoods Book of Lang. & Acofia
de temp. nou. l.
c. 18.

See my Pilg. l.
c. 10.

The Scythians and Sarmatians of the ancient are more Southerly; and well may we reiect the fables of Hyperboreans, and I knowe not what deuised Northerne Peoples and Monsters, the Creatures.

Creatures and Colonies of idle busie braines. These Northerne people, scarcely worthie the name of a People, did God vse when the sinnes of the Roman Empire were full, to punish their pride by so bale instruments, in Gottish, Vandall, Hunnish, Saxon, Franke, and other names, in iudgement remembring mercy to the chastised Children, and to the chastising Rod, not therefore cast into the fire; except to refine them, but by conquering Christian Nations, themselves disposed by diuine hand to become a Christian Conquest, and to submit themselves to that God, to that Religion, whose looser Professors they ouercame with an ouerwhelming inundation. How unssearchable are thy wayes, O God, and thy iudgements passing knowledge, which of Stones raisest children to Abraham, and bringest Lions into the Sheep-fold in hope of prey and spoyle,

- 10 where thy discipline transforms them into Lambes: and persecuting Saul turnes a Prophet?
- The remotest Northerne and Southerne parts of America are yet thinly inhabited, and in great part not at all, as before is obserued, whereas Mexicana, and Peruiana were abundantly peopled at the Spaniards first arriual, with the Ilands adiacent. Two great Empires were there erected, one * in Mexico, the other of the Incas in Cusco; but neither of them ancient. Nor let any impute this to their illiterate barbaroulnesse. For they had meanes to prelerue memorie of their acts by computation no lesse certaine then ours, though more troublelome: and thereby is the Mexican Epocha, or first beginning, then beginning to bee a People, the Deuill imitating the Israelites in their Exodus towards the Countries which they after possessed, apparant to haue beene aboue seuen hundred yeeres after Christ: as that of the Incas some hundreds later. For it
- 20 is most likely that America was first peopled from the North of Asia and Europe in her neerer and Northerne parts, whence by secret instinct, and hopefull allurements they were inticed to remoue neerer the Sunne, and from the Mexican to passe to the Peruian Continent. Neither can probable reason be given of peopling America but from thence, as by the Discourses of Acosta and Master Brerewood appeareth: neither did those Northerne parts receiue Inhabitants till the Regions of the World neerer Noas Arke, and of more commodious habitation were first peopled, whence the East and South parts were soone after Noas time replenished: the colder and worse successiuelly, and the extreme North by later compulsion and necessitie, the better being peopled before: and there exceeding their iust proportion, they emptied themselves partly by returning into the South by Conquests to ouer-runne ciuill Nations, and partly were forced to seeke further, as vicinitie of Seas and Lands afforded, till America was also peopled.
- 30 For (besides that those Northerne parts were as fertile in the wombe, as barren in the soyle, numerous beyond due food) whole rough, cold mountainous habitations yeelded like constitution of body and vnquietnesse of mind strong and able to indure, bold and forward to aduenture greatest difficulties, still pressing (where worse then the present could hardly befall) and following their hopes till neerer propinquitie to the Sunne, Climates more temperate, richer Soyle, content of Elements and Aliments bred content to their mindes and more prosperous concent of Fortunes, which softned their rigid dispositions, and by degrees disposed them to thinke on mechanickall and politike Arts, further to humanize their society, and to polish their cohabitation with Politie. This we see soone done in Egypt, and Babylonia presently after the Floud: but how long
- 40 before the Persians were ciuilized? how long after before the Macedonians, or Romans? yea, how long before there were Romans?

Nature infused the first cares of necessary being, which being by the fertile habitation and industrious culture richly supplied, in the settled standing the Milke of humane wits yeelded the flower or creame of Arts for flourish and beautie, which vnsettled and discontented estates weary of the present, and pressing still forwards cannot produce; neither can a rolling stone gather mosse. And thus we finde the Germans now a ciuill Nation, which many ages after Christ were barbarous. Yea, where more feritie and sauage rudenesse then this our Britaine yeelded not long before the birth of our Sauour, for their painting, nakednesse, and other rude demeanours worse then the Virginians now, and like some more barbarous Americans? What hath America sauouring of Antiquitie? what besides the former, not sauouring of the Cradle, and later transmigration?

- 50 Those memorials which they haue of the Floud might passe with them by Tradition euen from the Arke it selfe thorow all their remoues and transigrations. And no lesse might be said of that Ticfiniracocha mentioned by Acosta, (whom Vega obserueth to haue many things not so truly) like to Our Men, and preached amongst them many good lessons with little effect, and after many miracles amongst them was slaine; whose picture some of the Spaniards had seene, resembling those of our Saints. Vega tells another and more likely storie of Viracochas apparition in that habite, which no doubt was the Deuill. The like is recorded by Lerius, of a tradition amongst the Brasilians, that innumerable Moones before, there came a Muir or Stranger, clothed
- 60 after the Christian manner, and bearded, which preached vnto them the knowledge of God, but none would beleue him: after whom another came which deliuered them a Sword, since which time they haue vsed to slay and eate one another. These things, as they may be true, so may they be the New actions of the old Serpent ambitious of Deitie, or may by Tradition flie with them thorow all their habitations; or if any shall thinke it there happened (which I can-

* As Canaan was in Abrahams time nothing so populous as in Isaiah.

* Acosta reckons the Mexican beginnings out of their owne histories, about An. 900: and Garcilasso de la Vega born in Cusco and of the stocke of the Incas, begins the first Inca after A.D. 1100. which were before most sauage.

Acosta de procur. Ind. Sal. l. 1. c. 2. Vega com. 2 lib. 7. c. 13. pag. 1454. Lerius hist. Nau. in Bra. c. 16.

Kniets Jour-nall.

P. Ph. L. 8. 2.

not beleue) yet are they rather to interpret it of the Apostles (& so further confirmeth our opinion) then of any other, seeing no such men could there haue access, and their speech be vnderstood, but by miraculous dispensation. As for the Rocke in Brasil called Esouca (where, as Master Kniets affirmeth, Saint Thomas preached) conuerted out of Wood into Stone, the Fishes being his auditors, who seeth not a Frierly supereminence in the report: we reade in Theophrastus or Aristotle, or whosoeuer else be Authour of that Booke De Mirabilibus Auscultis, of a fertile desert Island found by the Carthaginians, abounding with Woods and Rivers nauigable, and other bounties of Nature, distant many dayes sailing from the African Continent: some of the Carthaginians intended there to inhabite, but were repelled, and all men prohibited on paine of death, lest the Soueraigne power and weale publike of Carthage might thence be endamaged. This is by some interpreted of the West-Indies, or some Islands thereof; which if it be so, confirms our opinion that those parts were not then inhabited. Nor did any ciuilitie appeare in America to argue ciuill Progenitors, but that which was of later memorie. Plato's Atlantis wee haue elsewhere shewed to be allegoricall, at least no historicall truth: nor any likelihood in other ancient Nauigations mentioned in Plutarch, Diodorus and others to point at these parts.

If the multitudes of people found thereby the first Spaniards seeme to pleade for a longer habitation then that we allow; let it be obserued that a thousand and foure hundred yeeres (for the first Discouerie was 1492, after Christ) might well fill a world with people, especially considering their Polygamie, or many Women, their simple Diet, and that which attended the same, healthfull Constitution and long Life (in some places admirable) their easie course of life contented with a little, not fearing to exceed their meanes and maintenance by numerous issue; where Nature yeelded home-spunne or rather womb-spunne attire, and the Mother Earth with little importunitie or labour yeelded food sufficient; where Plagues, Morraines, Famine, were scarce heard of; where Couetousnesse the root of all euill had so little worke; Ambition scarcely knew to diuertise titles of honor; and warre (the enchanted circle of death, compendium of misery, Epitome of mischiefe, a Hell vpon Earth) had not Iron, Steele, Lead, nor Engines, Stratagems, Ordinance, nor any humane Arts of inhumanitie to fill those parts of the World with emptinesse, and there to erect Theaters of Desolation and Destruction. Nor did Nature yeeld many deuouring Beasts, but reserued all her sauenesse to the Men.

a Gen. 46. 27.

b Ex. 12. 37.

c Num. 1. 46.

d 2. 32.

d Num. 26. 51.

64.

e Diatrib. de Europaeor. ling.
Ios. Scalig.
P. Merul. Cos-
mog. part. 2. l. 1.
cap. 8.

* Acoffa l. 1.

cap. 21. & l. 4.

6. 34.

f Ouedol 15. c. 1.

A few Horses

also and mares

left by the Ri-uer of Plate so encreased, that since they haue

aine them

only for their tailes, to sell to the Negros.

Of Conies

strange en-crease, see l. 2.

6. 1. 5. 2.

To let passe the peopling of the World before and after the Floud, in no great time, we see that in Egypt in the midst of heauy burthens, inhumane butcherie, and intolerable tyrannie, the Israelites were multiplied, in the space of two hundred and ten yeeres, from seuentie persons to about two millions, as may be ghesed, in that there were 600000. men, besides children, and besides the females also as appeareth in the second numbring by Moses, and in the third by him and Eleazar, when all those but Caleb and Ioshua were dead. Allowing therefore the male children not much lesse, as that third numbring euinceth, and the females in probabilitie as many as the males (the rather for that Pharaohs cruell Edict touched not them) you cannot but find about 2000000. Now this their encrease was by naturall meanes though by singular prouidence, and therefore might as well happen in America, those impediments remoued, and many other furtherances annexed, in libertie, plenty, and largenesse of Territorie, all elements conspiring to multiplication. Neither can any thing but Diuine prouidence (which none can denie in America, and had many more easie and visible meanes, fewer lets then in Egypt) be alledged for the one more then the other. This I may say, that if any list to examine the proportion, and suppose like prouidence, in that time of 1400. yeeres may follow a more numerous inundation of people, then euer America (perhaps the whole World) may probably be supposed at once to haue numbred, although large deductions be allowed both for ordinary mortality and some more dilimal accidents. Neither is it likely that the first plantations were so few (if volutarily seeking, & not by accident forced to those habitations) as 70. persons twice told: nor that America at once or from one place receiued her first Colonies, as by the diuers languages, statures, habits of men may appeare, although time, custome, accident, be allowed no litle power in these things. This we see amongst our selues, where one Dutch or Tentonike hath yeelded not onely a distinction of higher and lower, but the English, Danish, Sweden, Norwegian, Islandish, Nordalbing, Frisian (besides the subdiuersified dialects which each of these multiplieth) Languages, Peoples, Rites, so much differing, and the elder both tongues and customes (as in our Saxon) by Variation and succession after a few Centuries in manner extinguished. So vaine a thing is Man. Let me conclude this discourse of multiplication in America, by an American example of cattell transported out of Europe thither, especially Kine, which as they beare no more at a burthen then a woman, nor oftner, so are they shorter-liued vsually by two third parts: yet haue they so increased there, that one man the Bishop of Venezuela had about 16000. yea they haue growne wilde, their numbers exceeding the care of owners, and euery man at pleasure killing them for their hides. And one man, the Deane of Conception, had of one Kow liuing 26. yeeres, in her life time the increase of 800. Sic canibus canulos similes. These Indians which respected in generation little else but sensuality, and in manner of life resembled brute beasts rather then ciuill (that I say not Christian) Men, enjoying like priuiledges of Nature in other things, might in this also.

§. VIII.

The glorie of Apostolicall Conquests: the hopes of enlarging the Church in this last Age, by knowledge of Arts and Languages through the benefit of Printing and Navigation.

Et me conclude this Discourse of Apostolicall Peregrinations with consideration, with collaudation, with admiration euen to extaie and astonishment, of Their (shall I say or Gods?) Exploits, and renowned Acts. Little are the Acts of Great Alexander, Pom- peius Magnus, Fabius Maximus, and other Great and Grandes of the World, who by Armes and Arts military, by Fire, Sword, Famine, Massacres forced the bodies (the least part) of Men to a compulsive subiection, shaken off with the first opportunitie. But how shall I adorne your noble Conquests, Yee Diuine Apostolicall Worthies? who walking in the flesh, not war- ring after the flesh, without, yea, against the force of carnall weapons, pulled downe strong holds, cast downe imaginations, and euerie high thing that exalted it selfe against the knowledge of God, and brought into captiuitie euerie thought to the obedience of Christ? Herein they vied not assistance of other Nations by confederation, nor mustered multitudes in pressed and trained bands of their owne;
nor receiued supportation by Subsidies, nor made inuasion by force, nor obtained an vnwilling conquest of Bodies (the shell without the kernel) nor entertayned close intelligence, nor wrought by close Treasons, nor diuided to themselves the spoiles; nor erected Forts, established Garrisons, imposed taxations, transplanted inhabitants, depressed Nobles, shared new Prouinces into Timars, tithed Children, planted Colonies; nor had their counsels of Warre at home, or warlike customes abroad, Engines, Stratagems, Combats, Sieges, Skirmishes, pitched Fields, Ships, Horses, Chariots, Tents, Trumpets, Munition, nor that worst Baggage of Armies, Crying, Spoyleing, Sacking, Wounding, Mayming, Killing with Multiformities of Cruelties, as if the nethermost Hels had mustered and euaporated the most and worst of Her Fumes and Furies into Our world, which might therefore take, that they might destroy, the shapes of Men, by humane inhumanitie. But a few poore Fishermen, and Tent-makers ouerthrow the Worlds Wisemen, in the most flourishing times of worldly learning, subdue the Scepters of greatest Kings and Monarchs, ruine the gates of Hell, & vndermine the deepnesse of Satan, supplant the profoundest, subtlest, mightiest of Satanicall combinations with the whole World of Men against a handfull; and maugre their vnited Forces, preaching a Crucified God, and teaching the Crosse as the first Principle of Christian Learning, to overcome the edge of the Sword with suffering it, to stop the mouthes of Lions with their flesh, to quench the violence of fire with their blood; to forsake all Goods, good Name, Wife, Life, Childe, to deny themselves, to plucke out their right eyes, to cut off their right hands, to pray for their persecutors, to recompence hatred with loue, and overcome euill with goodnesse, looking for no other reward then what the World can neither looke on, nor for; they inuade with innocence, and with Sauing overcome, the World; and whiles it most resisteth, per-secuteth, ouercommeth, incline it to willingnesse, calmenesse, subiection; write their conquests not in the blood of the Conquered but of the Conquerors; erect Trophees, not in Obeliskes, Pyramides, Arches, by others industry, but in their owne Funerals, Crucifyings, Stonings, Martyr-domes; solemnize Triumphs not with their owne Armies, nor with captiued troupes, attending in greatest pompe the sublime Triumphall Chariot, but by being led forth with out-cries, shoutes, clamours, to the basest and most ignominious deaths. Those of whom the World was not worthy, reputed vnworthy of the World; haue the Panegyrikes of their prayses, written not by the pens of Parasites or Poets, nor in the lines, (as is said) but in the liues of men; the Christian World (as before is obserued) remayning not written, but reall Annalls of the Apostles Acts, who being poore made many rich, and hauing nothing possessed all things. The Solacismes b of Fishermen dissol-ued the Syllogismes of Philosophers, and where but a few of any Nation could be wonne, to pro-fesse themselves the Disciples of any Philosophicall Sect, though graced and admired by the World, yet the World becomes Christian in despite of the Worlds disgraces and persecutions: nor could the immane cruelties of some, or superfine subtleties of other, subuert, nay they conuerted men to the Gospel; the seed, the fatning of the Church was the Blood of her flaine Martyrs; all ages, sexes, sorts of men, euen women, euen children, euen women-children, out-brauing the greatest, the fiercest, the wisest of Satanicall instruments, by suffering, conquering, and at once overcomming the Deuill, the World, Themselves. Euen so O Father, because it pleased thee.

And be not angry Reader, if the passed, present vnto my contemplation future things; and if the consideration of diuine assistance in Tongues, Reuelations, Miracles immediately contered for the first Plantation of Christianitie, occasion my thoughts to a more serious suruay of future hopes in the propagation and reformation thereof. In the first foundation of Mosaicall Rites, God raysed Bezaleel, and Aholiab with others, by diuine instinct inabled to curious workmanship, fitting that Oeconomie of the Tabernacle, whiles that Iewish Church was as it were rocked in the Cradle, and God vouchsafed to dwell amongst those Tent-dwellers in a Tent. But after that

2. Cor. 10. 3, 4, 5

Ap. 2.

2. Cor. 6. 10.

b Theo. 1. 6. 11.

Ex. 31. 1. 6. 11.
35. 30.

1. Cor. 10. 11.

ταῦτα δὲ παρ-τα τούτοις συμβαίνοντες ἐκείνοις.

that State was settled, and the Church flourished in the Reigne of David and Salomon, God did not againe infuse Sciences by Miracle, or by miraculous disposition (as before the Egyptians were spoyled) provided materials to that Worke; but furnished Salomon's wisdom, with helpe of the two Hirams, the one a cunning workman in Gold, Silver, Brasse, Iron, Stone, Timber, to grave any manner of graving, and to find out every devise, the sonne of a Tyrian, by an Israelitish woman; the other his Matter, the King of Tyrus, a man furnished with a Nauy of ships and store of Mariners, by whose meanes the Temple and Court might be provided of necessities from remotest Ophir, as well as the neerer Lebanon. I implore not, I importune not any unwilling assent or follower of my apprehension and application hereof to what I now propound in like differing states of the Christian Church. Omnia contingebant illis in figura. This was likewise founded, and as it were a Tabernacle built for Christ by the Apostles, men wholly enabled by immediate graces and gifts of the Spirit to so diuine a Worke. A Tabernacle I call the Church, not only as being yet militant, and therefore abiding in Tents, but in comparison and respectiue to that externall splendour which followed long after the Apostles times, when Kings became her Nursing Fathers and Queenes her Nursing Mothers, subiected their Crowne to the Crosse, shining in the highest top thereof. Albeit therefore in puritie of doctrine and manners the Apostolicall times had their spirituall preeminence (as the Tabernacle also exceeded the Temple in the ordinary Cloud, Pillar of fire, Manna, Miracles, sincerest worship by Moses, and the like.) Yet when the World became Christian, and the Crosse became the Imperiall Banner for the Church, before persecuted, now reuiued vnder Constantine, Iouianus, Theodosius, and other Religious Monarchs, and Kings, seemed to renew the Golden reuolutions and settled returnes of Christian Dauids and Salomons; and they which before had not a Smith in Israel, scarcely a Bishop or Temple to be seene, had Temples, Schooles, Bishops, Councils, whence Religion was propagated and established in the seuerall Realmes and Nations of Christianity; not now by Miracles as before by the Apostles, but by the Ministry of Bishops and Priests of ordinary calling and gifts; and hee himselfe was now the greatest Miracle that beleued not, the whole World beleeuing and wondering at infidelitie as a Monster.

Psal. 37. 4.

And as the Temple and state of Religion declining was repaired and reformed by godly Kings, as Ioash, Hezekiah, Iosiah; and Zealous Priests such as Iehoiada; and after the ruines thereof was rebuilded by Princes and Priests, Zorobabel and Ioshua, Nehemiah and Ezra: so hath God stirred vp good Kings & Pastors in the declining age of the Church, as Charles the Great, King Alfred and many others in Histories mentioned; & after the deportation therof into Mysticall Babylon, when shee seemed in her truest members fled out of the Worlds easie view into the Wildernesse, hath God raysted vp the Kings of England, Sweden, Denmarke, and other Christian Princes, States, and Potentates with Religious Bishops and Ministers to repaire the desolations of Sion, and restore Ierusalem with the Temple, if not to her first splendour, yet from her late Captiuitie, where shee had smal pleasure to sing the Lords song in a strange land, & babble her holies in the vnknown Language of Babylon. As therefore the first Plantation of the Tabernacle was by miracle and immediate instinct; the erection of the Temple, and succeeding reparations were by the art and humane industry of such Heroike spirits as God raysted vp and sanctified in euery age: so the Christian Church planted by Apostles, hath bene since watered by faithfull Pastors, exalted by pious Emperours, depressed by Heretikes and Persecutors, captiued by Popes, and in her diuersified changes and chances, rather expecteth extraordinary blessing vpon the ordinary helps, functions, and graces, then meanes meerly extraordinary and miraculous. Amongst all which helps by humane industry, none (in my mind) haue further preuailed then those two, the Arts of Arts, Printing and Navigation, both in manner giuen at once to the World by diuine goodnesse, this for supply of matter, that other of forme, to this Spirituall Reedification of Gods Sanctuary. And as Hiram's Art improouing natural wit by diligent industry, succeeded the infused Sciences of Bezaleel and Aholiab; so to that Apostolicall gift of Tongues, in the foundation of the Church hath succeeded for reformation thereof, the principall Tongues and Languages of Nations, Ebrew, Greeke, Latine, Syriake, Arabike, and the rest, partly refined, partly renewed by humane industrie, through the benefit of Printing. For how were the learned and remoter Tongues buried and vnknowne in these parts, till that Art brought in plentie, facilitie and cheapnesse of Bookes, whereby Languages became the Keyes, Bookes the Treasuries and Storehouses of Science; whiles by those men found access into these; and Printing yeelded admittance to both in plentie and varietie? And thus was vnuailed that mystery of Iniquity in the age before vs, which had captiued so many Ages in worse then Egyptian darknesse. This mystery at first arose in a myst from the bottomlesse pit, in a time of barbarous ignorance, occasioned by irruption of Barbarians into all parts of Christendome, successiue like wild Bores out of the Forrest, rooting vp Gods Vineyard, and preparing a way to the Romish Foxes to spoile the Vines, to corrupt and deuoure the fruits thereof. The Goths, Vandals, Hunnes, Herules, Lombards, Saracens, in Spaine, Afrike and Italy; the Frankes, and after them the Saracens, Danes, and Normans in France, and the places adioyning; the Picts, Saxons and Angles, and after them the Danes, in these parts; the Auares, Saracens, Tartars, Turkes in the East and South; with other deluges of Ethnikes hating learning, burning

Libraries, killing learned men, in these and other parts seconded with factions, treasons, and ciuill vnciuill combustions of Christians amongst themselves, made easie way first, and strong confirmation after to the Papacy apprehending all opportunities to aduance it selfe, first in spirituall things, after also in temporall.

But what illiterate ignorance little discerned, not muth withstood, renewed literature hath exposed to the view of all, and by reuiued Arts hath discerned the Arts of that painted Iezabel; whose fouler wrinkles, her Iezabelicall, Iesuiticall Parasites still labour with renewed and refined Arts also to playster and fill vp a fresh; but hereby whet the industry of others to improoue their Arts and industry on the other side, in more eage search and diligent inquisition to take 10 those wise in their craftinesse, and to let men see that the materials of this later Babylon in the West are turfes of earth, which humane wits haue baked into bricks, and with slime of Policy, haue raysted to so superadmirable a frame and structure.

And lest so great a bleissing procured by Printing, should rest and rust amongst our selues in this Westerne corner of the World, God hath added that other Art of Nauigation, as that other *Hiram*s assistance to Salomon, and of Nehemiah to Ezra, the Prince and Priett, learning and power combined. This Art was before obscure and rude, but by the industry of the Portugals lifted vp to higher attempts, with care of their Kings (employing Astronomie to her better furniture) enabled to new Discoueries in Africa, and after that in all the East; whose example the Spaniard following happily encountred a New World, and first of all men vnloosed the Virgin Zone of the 20 Earth, encompassing the whole Compasse of this vast Globe. And thus hath God giuen opportunitie by Nauigation into all parts, that in the Sun-set and Euening of the World; the Sunne of righteousness might arise out of our West to illuminate the East, and fill both Hemispheres with his brightnes: that what the Apostles, by extraordinary dispensation sent, by extraordinary providence protected & conducted into all parts, by extraordinary gift of Tongues were able to preach to all sorts of men; this latter Age following thole glorious Fathers and Founders (though farre off, non passibus aquis) might attempt and in some sort attaine by helpees of these two Artes, Printing and Nauigation, that Christ may bee saluation c to the ends of the Earth, and all Nations may serue him; that according to the Scripture innumerable numbers of all Nations and Kin-

30 dreds, and peoples, and Tongues, may be clothed with the white robes of the Lambe. I am no Prophet, nor sonne of a Prophet, instructed in future reuelations, but one with all others praying, thy Kingdome come; neither dare I take vpon me the reuelation of the Reuelation in that Prophecie of the holy Ierusalem descending out of Heauen from God, newly measured with a golden Reed, to apply it to the reformation of the Church in the last times; which howsoeuer some haue interpreted only of her glorious and celestially estate, others haue included the terrestriall also, after the calling of the Jewes (which Saint Paul calls life from the dead, as if it were the Resurrection of the World; and consequently in spirituall respects, a new Heauen and new Earth) alleading many Arguments, seeming altogether to this purpose not improbable. And least of all, will I, lesse then the least of all, take vpon me the reducing of the Jewes into I know not what externall pompe and policie, and exalt them in splendour aboue all other Nations and Monarchs (the very stumbling 40 stone of their downfall; this dreame of a glorious Messias, prouoking them to crucifie the Lord of glory, whose Kingdome is not of this World, though prefigured by types, and painted in shadowes of Secular glorie) I meddle not with Secular States, but pray for the conuersion and spirituall regeneration of all men. And Nature it selfe preacheth thus daily: if the Sunne daily, shal not the Sunne of righteousness once, enlighten all the World? It is the Holy Ghosts resemblance. If the Fathers d of old did expect a further conuersion of Nations by the Gospel; if the Sybil line Oracles promise as much; if the Papists make this a demonstration that Antichrist is not yet come, because the Gospel is not yet preached to all men, which they hope hereafter shal bee effected; if the Prophecies of the glorious state of the Church mentioned in Esay and Zacharie, shadowed in Ezekiels Temple, and destruction of Gog and Magog, renued in the Reuelation,

50 seeme not yet to haue taken their full effect, but to promise some better future estate, as euen those many Ancients also conceited, whose full sayle and forward gale carried them beyond the Truth into the Millenary Error: if our Church prayeth for all Jewes, Turkes, and Infidels, that they may be one sheep-fold vnder one Pastor: then I may also with the Streame bee carried into expectation of that dilating the Churches Pale, and a more Catholike enlarging of her bounds, specially in those parts of the World, where though we grant the Gospel preached by the Apostles, yet little fruit in comparison followed in many Countries; nor any generall conuersion of Nations, except of the Romane Empire with the adioyning Regions, and some few, scarce a few Prouinces annexed, hath hitherto happened. And how little to the rest of the World is all that which is called Christendome, or that also which in any settled flourishing estate of a Church hath

60 euer yet bene Christian? Pardon therefore this Charitie extended to all men, to pray and hope for the remotest of Nations no more remote from Christ in Nature or promise, then our selues.

And (to returne to our Nauigation) the present Nauigations, Missions, Preachings, of Iesuites Norwegians, Danes, Russes, and other Northerne people most of them lately added to the Church; & the Abassines on the South, & some handfulls on the East; Christianity hath rather bin disperfed in Nations then publicly and generally professed. God grace (if it be his will, for I rather make it an Article of my Charitie then of my faith) a larger Christendome.

Of this improvement of Nauigation read the next Chapter.

c Ps. 1. & 22.
Luke 2.
Apoc. 7. & 9.

Forbis, Brightman, Bernard,
&c. in Apoc.
Rom. 11. 15.
d Psal. 19.
Rom. 10.
c Aug. Ep 78.
80. vid. Prosp.
de lib. arbit.
Syb. Or. 43. & 6.
Bellar. Lessius,
&c.
Vid. Acoft. de Proc. Ind. fab. 4.
c. 2. & de temp.
nouis. l. 1. c. 17. & 18
Colle Son
Good Friday.
Except in the quondam Roman Empire & the Countries
next adioyning, viz the Sweden, Poles,

d The greatest and plausiblest arguments of Papists drawn from the authority, &c. of the Church, may be with fairer shew & lurer ground applyed to the Iewish Church, which yet apo-statize.
e English and Dutch.
Apoc. 17. 13, 16.
2. Reg. 9. 22.
Apoc. 17. 5.
Exploits of Spaine.

Apoc. 17. 6.
Apoc. 18. 6.

Vid. Prefat. Mo-
nit. Regis Iacobi.

FROM. 21. 11.

Ex. 29. 19.

Ex. 27. 6. Ap. 12

* So some interprete Gog & Magog.
Apoc. 20. 8. &
Ap. 9. &c.
* Acts 15.
Ep. ad Gal. Col.
Phil. Heb. &c.

and Friars in the Heathen Nations of the World, seeme to present vnto my minde that state of the disperied Iewes before Christs comming in the flesh. He came to his owne, and his owne receiued him not, which yet by their Scriptures, Synagogues, Rites, in their many many disperfions, had vnwitting prepared a way vnto him amongst the Gentiles. Let none contemne this figure of the Iewish Church (which yeelds <sup>d</sup> in most obiections of Popery touching Viſibility, Succeſſion, Antiquity Vniuerſality, Conſent, Pontificall Priuiledges, and moſt of their vulgar and popular flouriſhes, reall and experimentall reſolutions, by paraleling the Iew and Romanist; this being inferior in euidence, ſuperiour in arrogance) if herein alſo we ſee them like; and thoſe later Phariſes, compaſſing Sea and Land to make Proſelytes, by preaching ſome Chriſtian verities amongst their Traditionary chaſſe, become Apparitors and Harbengers of a future purity, which yet themſelues crucifie as Hereticall. Spaine hath as is ſaid, in Nauigation beſt deſerued (in leading the way to others, ſome of which haue <sup>e</sup> ſince in the Art equalled, in attempts perhaps exceeded her) and by diuine Providence hath bene bountifully rewarded in the Eaſt and Weſt, both ouerſhadowed vnder her wings: is alſo one of the ten hornes (as the current of our Interpreters agree) which together with the beaſt receiue power as Kings, out of the ruines of the Romane Empire; of which it is prophesied that the ten hornes ſhall hate the Whore, and ſhall make her deſolate and naked and ſhall eaſe her fleſh and burne her with fire. For God hath put into their hearts to fulfill his will, &c. God put into their hearts to be thus truly Catholike, and able to diſcerne the whoredoms and many wiſchcrafts of their mother Iezabel, the mother of fornications of the Earth; enable them to ſee that Catholike-Roman is the Language of Babel, where men but babble, and the word (like Eſau and Iacob ſtriving in the wombe) ſupplants the next preceding; that the now-Roman is but new-Roman, and therefore Catholike no more in time then place, no more in ſound apprehenſion of truth, then in round comprehension of the Vniuerſe. And that God which hath giuen them to chaſe the relikes of the Moors out of Europe, to chaſtiſe them in Aſrik & Aſia, to find that New World of America, with her two armes of Nauigation from Liſbone and Sinill yeerely, to embrace the whole Globe, and to haue greater oportunities for ſo Catholike a worke then yet is granted to any other Nation; put into their hearts with other Princes and Chriſtian Nations to fulfill this his will againſt that Whore; which the Propheſie enforceth to beleue ſhall bee done, and their King in our Fathers dayes gaue inſtance how eaſie. I ring not, ſound not an alarme, nor ſtrike vp a march for warre, I determine not the particular way or inſtruments of that deſolation. I delight not in imprecations, nor to that Whore drunken with the bland of Saints and Martyrs with any bloody reward of my ſelfe: but God himſelfe hath foretold denouncing her fleſh and burning her, and enioyned alſo, in the cup which ſhe hath filled, fill to her double. Which howſoeuer it ſhall bee effected, I doe not preſcribe, nor doe I tingle out that Nation to this purpoſe, but ioine them with others in my Prayers for the execution of that Propheſie, both to goe out of Babylon, and to goe againſt it in iuſt reformation, that it may bee no more ſannd at all; at leaſt by making her naked of that protection which thence ſhe receiueſh, and redemanding their owne, may detayne the ouer-flowings of EUPHRATES that the way of the Kings of the Eaſt may bee prepared to exterminate Babylon out of the World. And is it not better thus to pray for them that they may haue an honorable part in that Propheſie, that Babylon may further fall by their falling from them, then that they ſhould fall with her? or to reckon vp the bloody effects of their Inquiſition in Europe, and their inhumanity in America, and number them amongst the Kings of the Earth, who ſhall bewaile and lament Romes ruines; or to thoſe Ship-maſters, Ship-companies, Saylers and Traders by Sea, and Merchants of the Earth weeping for her deſolations? Once, I ſay not that they of all men haue the moſt eminent oportunity to ſubuert Babylon by their Italian neighbourhood and Territories; I pray that they endeouour to conuert the Eaſterne and Weſterne Indians making that beſt uſe of their Nauigations, giuing them Gold refined and truly ſpirituall for their temporall. And though they now of all Nations ſeeme moſt enamoured of that Roman (therein truly Catholike, that is, common) Harlot, yet Hee which hath the heart of Kings in his hand at the riners of water, can turne it, when and whither ſoeuer he will: can effect this alſo by others, without, yea againſt them: can reward (as ſometime hee did Nebuchadnezzar for his ſeruiſe done at Tyrus, with the land of Egypt for the wages of his Armie, and the Iſraelites at their departure with Egyptian ſpoiles) can reward I ſay both thoſe which at his command go out of, or when his Providence ſhall diſpoſe, againſt this Babylon (which for captiuing the people of God is called Egypt, for filthineſſe Sodom, & for the Staple of ſpirituall Merchandize, is alſo reſembled to Tyrus) with the ſpoyles of the ſpirituall Egyptians, with the Turks deſtruction (which litterally poſſeſſe Egypt) with the riches of the Gentiles brought to the Church, beſides their own and the Churches liberty. And as Ieruſalem (to return to our ſimilitude) being demolished by the Romans, the Church became truly Catholike, not looking any more to walls of a Temple, to carnall Sacrifices, to the petty pinfold of one Nation, to one City, as the Mart & Mother of Chriſtian Religion and diſcipline (how much had the Apoſtles to doe whiles Ieruſalem ſtood, to withhold * Chriſtians from Iudaizing?) ſo is it to bee hoped and prayed, that this Myſticall Babylon, which now by vſurpation challengeth to bee Miſtreſſe and Mother of the Church, arriuing at that prophesied irreuerable downefall, Catholike-Roman (vniuerſall-particular) may no more bee heard, but true Catholike.

tholicisme recouering her venerable and primary Antiquitie, may without distracted faction, in free and vnanimous content, extend her Demesnes of Vniuerſalitie as farre as the Earth hath Men, and the light of her truth may shine together with the Sun-beames, round about the habitable World: that as Salomon by Hiram's Mariners fetched materials, Gold, Gemmes, Almuggim Trees, to the Temples ſtructure, which by the other Hiram's Art were brought and wrought into due forme, ſo the Heauenly Salomon, the LORD IEſvs, may by this his gift of Nauigation ſupply thoſe remote fieldes, white vnto the Harneſt, with plentie of labourers, to bring into the Societie of the True Church thoſe rude Ethnikes, of them to frame pillars in the houſe of God, veſſels of ſanctimony in the ſanctuary finer then the Gold of Ophir, enlightned with ſpiritual wildome and vnderſtanding of holy things, richer then Rubies, and the moſt incomparable Jewells: that theſe may by the art of Hiram, the ſon of an Iſralitiſh woman by a Tyrian father, that is by the Miniſtery of Paſtors & Doctors, learned in diuine & humane Literature be inſtructed, baptiſed, ediſed and diſciplined; that in the places where yet is no Chriſtian, may no Humane or Cruell People, it may be ſaid vnto them, yee are the Sonnes of the liuing God; that there may be one Paſtor and one ſheepfold, one Saluation, Redeemer and Aduocate, to Iew and Gentile, IEſvs CHRIS T the light of the Gentiles and the glory of his people Iſrael: whom my Diſcourſe hauing now obtained to embrace, ſhall here confine it ſelfe with a Nunc Dimittis, and end with Amen, to that Amen, in whom all the promiſes of God are yea and Amen. Euen ſo, Amen LORD IEſvs.

Prou. 8.

Hof. 1. 10.

20

HONDIVS his Map of, the Chriſtian World.

CHAP. III.

Of diuers other principall Voyages, and Peregrinations mentioned in holy Scripture. Of the trauells and dispersions of the Iewes; and of Nationall transmutations.

Paradise.

Ez. 37.31.

Babel.

Abram and Lot

Abraham and Isaac.

Jacob &amp; Ioseph.

Moses & Aaron.
Israels peregrination in the Desert. See it before in Map.Tit. 3.5.
Exod. 13.

Matt. 7.

Matt. 16.24.

Saul. David.

Ieroboam.

Captiuitie.

Matt. 2.

Iob. 1.

1. Pet. 5.

Having premised the two former Tractates, as the two Eyes of Peregrinations most faire Face, I shall be as brieue in the following, as I haue in them beeps te- 10 dious and discursive. The first voyage of Mankind was out of Paradise into the curled parts of the Earth, thence with sweat and labour to get his living, Cains restlesse wandrings, and yet still dwelling in the Land of Nod, that is of agi- tation and vexation, neuer being still (there is no peace saith my God, to the wicked) and Henochs contrary walking with God, I need not mention. And I haue already mentioned the first Ship and voyage by water, Noahs Arke, and the first earthly Peregrination after to the Plaine of Shinar, where Babels building was with mutuall babbling or confusion of Languages confounded; which gaue occasions to the dispersion of Mankind ouer the Earth, that is, to the planting and peopling of the World, of which I haue giuen account somewhat largely before, in the first Booke of my Pilgrimage. Abram is called out of Ur of the Chaldees, and trauells with 20 Lot to Haran first, and after into Canaan: thence Famine forced him into Egypt; after hee sets forth for the recovery of Lot in a Martiall Expedition against foure Kings, returning by Melchi- sedek King of Salem. Abraham after many tent-wandrings comes to Gerar, and after Isaacs birth and blessed hopes conceiued of him, is sent on the most difficult iourney to Morab: at Hebron he burieth his Wife and fellow Traueller: sends his seruant to Mesopotamia for Rebekah: and hauing sent his multiplied issue by Keturah vnto the East Countrey (as before Ishmael) hee ended his earthly Pilgrimage. Isaac inherits the promises, and yet trauelleth of them by traueilling, not founding Cities but dwelling in Tabernacles, as did Jacob also, before and after his long seruice in Padan Aram, till at last hee descended into Egypt, whither God had sent Ioseph in a former Peregrination. These both died in Faith, and gaue charge, the one for his dead body, the other for his 30 bones to trauell to Canaan the type of their hopes.

Out of Egypt God called his Sonne, now multiplied into an Armie as is before obserued: which yet are not presently in Canaan after the passage of the Red Sea, but are Pilgrims fortie yeeres in the Wildernesse. Wee also after wee haue escaped the bondage of hellish Pharao, and scene him vanquished in the Red Sea of Christs blood, whereinto wee are baptised, must liue the life of Faith, passing thorow the wildernesse of this World, hauing no more sustenance to our soules from our meere naturall powers, then there their plowing and husbandry yeelded their bodies:
but as their food and raiment, were the effects of Gods grace, and not humane labour; so not by the workes of righteousness, which wee haue done, but according to his mercy hee saueth vs: and by his Word and Spirit as a pillar of cloud by day, and of fire by night trauelleth with vs, till Ioshua, the 40 true I E S V S (for Moses brings not into Canaan, nor can the Law iustifie) set vs in possession of the heauenly Canaan, where Iericho is battered not by warlike Engines, but by the power of faith in the Word and Couenant of God; and the houses which our workes builded not, and vineyards which our merits planted not, euen the Thrones which Angells lost, are made ours for euer by free grace and meere mercy. This is that rest, into which none but Trauellers can enter, and that by crowding so hard into that narrow gate, that they must leaue themselves behind; nor take possession of, but by losse of life it selfe, passing that Jordan which floweth the way of all flesh into the Dead Sea, before they can liue with God.

Nor need men thinke much to trauell, where God himselfe was a Mysticall Traueller in the Tabernacle, til Salomon built him an House adorned by Ophirian Navigations. Saul before this had 50 trauelled to seeke lost Asses, and stumbled on an earthly Kingdome: David by keeping of Sheepe and following the Ewes with yong was initiated, and after by many many trauels trained to the Mysteries of Royalty, which with diuersified trauels hee exercised all his dayes. Ieroboams tra-uels to Egypt taught him those caluish deuotions, which made Israel trauell into many Assyrian Plantations; and Iudah also was carried captiue to Babylon, restored by a trauell from thence to Ierusalem vnder Zorobabel, Ezra, and Nehemiah; a mystery of that mystie deportation of the Christian Church, by ignorance and superstition, and her reformation by Godly Princes and Pastors. Hirams Mission, the Queene of Shebas Visitation, Jonahs Iourney to Ninive, intimate the calling of the Gentiles, whose First-fruits were the Wisemen of the East, which came to farre a voyage to salute the New borne King of the Iewes.

The Deuill also is a Traueller, and continually compasseth the Earth to and fro, and goeth about 50 as a roaring Lyon seeking whom to deuoure; traueilling of mischief, and conceiuing lies. Such were the Assyrian, Syrian, Persian, Babylonian, Egyptian, and other trauels of the Churches Enemies; theirs also which in blind zeale compassed Sea and Land to make Pharisaicall Profelites. In Mordecais time, you

you ſee in the Booke of Eſther the Jewiſh diſperſions thorow all the one hundred and twenty ſeuen Persian Prouinces, euen from India to Ethiopia, long after the returne vnder Zorobabel, which multiplied no doubt in Ages following accordingly.

Eſt. ult.

But why looke I for Trauellers and Voyages there, where the Church was tied to one place, to trauell thither three times a yeere, and therefore ordinarily not to bee farre from thence? The Babylonian and Alexandrian diſperſions, after the Captiuitie we haue already mentioned; whereby the World was ſtrewed with Jewes (not to mention the Iſraelites) as Apparitors to the Meſſias, and preparers thereof to Chriſtianitie in the Apoſtles preaching. Then indeed the Jewes were Trauellers from all parts to Ieruſalem, & as men were more religiously affected, There dwelled at Ieruſalem Jewes, devout men out of euery Nation vnder Heauen, which being of Jewiſh Parentage, were by the place of their birth, Parthians, Medes, and Elamites, Meſopotamians, Cappadocians, of Pontus and Aſia, Phrygia and Pamphilia, Egypt, and of the parts of Libya about Cyrene, Strangers of Rome, Jewes and Proſelytes, Cretes and Arabians.

Deut. 16.

Act. 2. 5, 9, 10, 11

This was after that imprecation of theirs, His bloud bee on vs and on our children: ſo did God ſeeke to ouercome their euill with his goodneſſe: but when they which had before perſecuted the ſeruants, and crucified the Lord of glory himſelfe, now reſiſted the holy Ghoſt, being vncircumciſed in hearts and eares, and iudged themſelues vnworthy of eternall life; God let out his Vineyard to other Husbandmen, and the fall of the Jewes became the riches of the World. Then came the wrath of God on them to the vtmoſt, and they became a trauelling Nation indeed, trauelling

Matt. 27.

Act. 7. & 13.

now about 1500. yeeres from being a Nation; and Moses his prophecie was verified in their ſcattering from one end of the World to the other. Eleuen hundred thouſand are ſaid to haue periſhed in Ieruſalem alone (where Chriſt had been crucified) beſides all other ſlaughters in all other parts of Iudea, in that fatall warre vnder Veſpaſian and Titus: 97000. were ſold to be diſtracted ſlaues thorow the world, Galatinus ſaith 200000. thirty of them for one piece of Siluer, which had giuen thirty pieces for him which came to make them free. Yet had not the Land ſpued out all her Inhabitants, but grew ſo queaſie and full of qualmes, that the remainders in Adrians time entertained Bencochab for their Meſſias, who with 200000. Jewes in his Army, is ſaid to haue rebelled and bred ſuch combuſtions, that this Sonne of the Starre (ſo his name ſoundeth) was after called Barchosba, the Sonne of Lying. It were prodigious*, not hyperbolicall alone, to tell what the Jewes tell of their following ſlaughters: 700000. ſlaine in Egypt, and in Iudea, ſo many as paſſeth all mo- deſty to relate after them. Dion Nicæus tells of fifty Caſtles and nine hundred and eighty of their beſt Townes rased, 580000. ſlaine, beſides innumerable multitudes which periſhed by famine, fire, diſeaſes, and other Baggage of Inuading Campes.

Deut. 28.

Jof. de Bel. Iud.

1. 7. c. 24.

Gal. Arcan. 1. 4.

21.

* See my Pilgrimage 2. c. 10.

Dion Adrian.

Elus Adrianus baniſhed the Jewes from Cyprus and Iudea, erected a new City inſtead of Ieruſalem, called of his owne name Elia, and ſet Images of Swine ouer the Gates as Porters to keepe out the Jewes, yea prohibited by Ediſt the Jewes to looke toward it from any high place. Traſian before was intigated by their rebellion, to deſtroy many thouſands of them in Egypt, Cyrene, and Meſopotamia. And euer ſince, thoſe which are contrary to all men, haue found all men contrary to them; and haue liued (if ſuch ſlavery and baſeneſſe be a life) like Cain, wandring ouer the World, branded with Shame and Scorne. Spaine, England, France, Germany, Poland, Italy, Turkie, all the Indies as farre as China haue had them Inhabitants; haue had indeed, for many haue giuen them terrible expulſions, the reſt vſing cruell and vnkind hospitalitie, ſo that they are ſtrangers where they dwell, and Trauellers where they reſide, ſtill continuing in the throwes of trauell both of miſery and miſchiefe. But I haue handled this matter more fully in my Pilgrimage, and both Beniamin Tudelenſis a Trauelling Iew, and other Trauellers in the following Relations, will giue you ſtrange trauels of theirs thorow Aſia, Africa, and Europe; in all their diſperſions to this day retaining their bloud, name, rites, as diſpoſed by a higher and moſt mercifull prouidence, which in his time will ſhew mercy on them, to ſee him by the eye of Faith, whom by the hand of Cruelty they had crucified, and all Iſrael ſhall be ſaued, and returne to the Church by a more generall Conuerſion then hath yet beene ſeene; and as their reſection hath proued the reconciling of the World, ſo the receiuing of them ſhall be life from the dead.

Jewes diſtructions.

Jewes diſperſions

All times are in Gods hand, but hee which hath promiſed is able to performe: and perhaps if Rome the Spirituall Babylon bee captiued and ruined, which hath obtruded ſo long on them the monſters of Image worſhip, Tranſubſtantiation, worſhipping of ſo many Saints, with other ſeemings of refined Ethnicisme, and impoſeth on Conuerſes the loſſe of all their ſubſtance; the way ſhall bee made more plaine for them: which wee hope is growing to ſome ripeneſſe in this Age, when about ſo many yeeres haue paſſed ſince the calling of the Gentiles, as from Iacobs Family in Egypt, growing to the face and proportion of a People and Nation, vnto their deſtruction: and full out as many as were from Iosephs death in Egypt, to the deſtruction of the Temple vnder Titus, and more then from Moses his Exodus, to that other Exodus and extermination vnder Adrian. We are no Prophets, and muſt learne by euent the certainty of Gods (before ſecret) counſells. In meane while let vs pray, Hallowed be thy Name, thy Kingdome come, that this trauelling Nation may one day trauell in birth of Chriſt till he be formed in them, and with the prodigall Sonne, may trauell from their wandrings, and at once returne to their Father and to themſelues, that we may all

See my Pilg. 2. c. 21.

Rom. 11. 26.

Rom. 11. 15.

Gal. 4. 19.

Luc. 15. 17, 18.

meet in the unity of Faith, and Gods will may bee done in Earth, as it is done in Heauen, there being but one Shepherd and one Sheepsfold, Amen. As the Jewish Nation hath been literally Trauellers, so the Christian Church is alway traueilling spiritually to her home, and from her selfe; and the Jewish deportation to Babylon, was a figure of the Antichristian Captiuitie in Romish and Popish superstition, of which wee haue taken occasion to speake more fully elsewhere*.

* To. 1. 18. 6. 6.

Dent. 2. 9, 12, 10

Varro distinguished Relations of times into αἰώνιον μυθικόν ὑποκρινόμενον: that is, Fabulous, Obscure, and Historicall.

As at first the World was peopled by peregrination successiuelly from Noahs Arke, and Babels Tower: so in the worldly vicissitude of all things, a world of peregrinations haue happened in the World, and that of worlds of men together, in Nationall inuasions, plantings, supplantings, Colonies and new alterations of the face of the world in each part thereof. Thus the Israelites supplanted the Canaanites & dwelt in their rooms; as did the Moabites to the giantly Emims, the Edomites to the Horims, the Ammonites to the Zamzummims, and other Nations to others. To recite these were to recite all Stories in manner of the World: Lazius de Migrationibus Gentium, and others haue in part vnderaken it. For euen in Palestina alone how many successions haue beene, of Canaanites, Israelites, Assyrians (after called Samaritans) and Jewes together? Of those which the Romans placed or permitted, of Saracens, of Franks, or Westerne Christians in so many millions as two hundred yeers space sent out of Christendome thither; of Drusians, Syrians, & a very Babylon of Nations (none and all) euer since? This Britaine of ours, besides those which first gaue it name (whose remainders still enioy Wales) hath admitted Romane sprinklings and Colonies, and after that a generall deluge of Saxons, Iutes, and Angles; tempests and stormes out of Denmarke and Norway, and lastly the Norman mixture and combination. Neither is there any Region of ancient Note, which hath not sustained chance and change in this kind. But wee mind not such neere peregrinations, as these vsually were, but longer Voyages and remoter Trauels. And such also we haue already mentioned in Sesostris the Egyptian, in the Phœnicians, in the Assyrians, vnder Semiramis to India, besides Eudoxus and other priuater persons; and such are the Fables or outworne Stories of Ethnike Antiquity, touching the Atlantines, Osiris, Bacchus, Hercules, Perseus, Daedalus; and those which retaine some more truth, though obscure enough, of the Argonauts, Ulysses, Menelaus, Aeneas, Hanno, Himilco, Iambolus, and others; some of which shall follow in the following Relations. That of Alexander is more renowned, and first opened the East to the West, and to Europe gaue the Eyes of Geography and History, to take view, of India and the Regions adiacent. And here is the first solid foot-print of History in this kind, though heere also Trauellers haue beene as farre from the truth, as from their homes, and haue too often traueled of Vanitie and Lies.

CHAP. III.

Fabulous Antiquities of the Peregrinations and Nauigations of BACCHVS, OSIRIS, HERCVLES, the Argonauts, Cadmus, the Græcian Nauie to Troy, MENELAUS, VLYSSES, AENEAS and others.

It is not the fable or fallshood which wee seeke in fabulous Antiquities, but that truth which lieth buried vnder poeticall rubbish. For nothing but nothing can rise of nothing. Some truth therefore gaue occasion to those fables, as Thamars and Dinahs beautie occasioned their rauishment; the Deuill (a Lier from the beginning) lusting to defloure that beautie, and then like Ammon adding a second force, in hatred turning her as much as he may out of the World. Hence the fables of Poets, Idolatries of Ethnikes, dotages of Rabbins, phrenies of Heretikes, phancies and Legends of Papists: to all which, when Histories cannot make them good, Mysteries are sought to couer their badnesse, and bald nakednesse; and were they neuer so bad before (like the shearing of a Friar, or vailing of a Nouice Nunne) suddenly they are heereby become errant honest persons, nay venerable and religious. And thus hath that Impostor, not only insinuated and procured admission and credit to lies, but thence hath raised the very Faith of Infidels, which worship they know not what; and obtruded I know not what Pias fraudes, and religious Lies, forsooth, vpon vnchristian and Anti-christian Christians; to whom because they receined not the loue of the truth to be saued, God hath sent the efficacy of error, that they might beleene a lie. This is the Devils triumph, and Mans madnesse; out of which confusion, if wee cannot try out the pure truth, yet those Diuine Relations and Reuelations premised, will appeare more louely and admirable from these Ethnike Fables.

John 4.

2. Thess. 2.

Trauels of Bacchus.

I may here mention Saturnes Trauels into Latium, being eielected Heauen: Iones fabled fine encompassings of the World; Apollos daily circuit; Mercuries frequent Messages to all parts, who was also the Trauellers God, and had his Statues in High-ways; Innos iealous wandrings; Bacchus and Hercules were renowned by the Poets for their Peregrinations, perhaps (as before is obserued) no other but Salomon and *Hiram*s Ophirian Voyage. Bacchus (they tell) was the sonne of of Jupiter and Proserpina, who being torne in pieces by the Titans, Jupiter gave his heart to Semele to drinke; and thereby conceived of this other Bacchus; whereupon ieaious Inno transformed into the shape of Beroe Semeles nurse, perswaded her to desire Jupiters company in Maiesticall appearance, as hee accompanied Inno, which was her destruction; the babe taken out and sewed in Jupiters thigh, and after put to Nysus to nurse, whereupon he was named Dyonisus. I should distrust you to tell the disagreeing tales of Poets touching his birth and life (for lies neuer agree) as also his Miracles, which euer make vp the greatest part of a Legend. Tigres, Ounces and Panthers, with Pans, Nymphs, Sileni, Cobals, and Satyrs were his companions and attendants. Hee was drawne in a Chariot by Tigres, and held a Thyrus in his hand for a Scepter (which was a Speare or Iauelin, adorned with the Leaues of Vines and Iuie) and marched thus madly both to

Hygin. Fab. 167.
Eurip. in Bac.

- 10 India in the East, and to Spaine in the West, which of Pan was called Pania, whence Spania and Hispania haue beene deriued. A learned Spaniard saith, that in the eight hundred and tenth yeere, before the building of Rome, Bacchus inuaded India, moistned it with blood, filled it with slaughters, polluted it with lusts, which before had beene subiect to none, and liued content and quiet in it selfe. Some apply that of Noah to him, and make him the Inuenter of Wine, Hony, and Sacrifices: say also that hee reigned at Nysa a Citie in Arabia; some adde other Kingdomes, and that hee had Mercurius Trismegistus his Counsellor; and leauing Hercules his Egyptian Lieutenant, Anteus in Lybia, Busiris in Phoenicia, conquered all the East, built Nysa, and erected Pillars in the Easterne Ocean, as did Hercules on the Westerne. His story is also confounded with that of Osiris, this being the name which the Egyptians gaue him, as Herodotus affirmeth. And Diodorus relateth his Epitaph in hieroglyphicall Letters in these words, I am Osiris the King, which tra- 20 uelled thorow all the world to the Indian Deserts. Onid also singeth;

Oros. l. 1. c. 9.

Her. Euterpe.
Diod. Sic. l. 1.
Fab. l. 3.

Te memorant Gange, totoq; Oriente subactis
Primitias magno seposuisse Ioui.

Cinnama tu primus captinaq; thura dedisti
Deq; triumphato viscera tosta bone.

His journey they describe first thorow Ethiopia, and then Arabia, and so to Persia, Media, Bactria, and India: after his returne, to Hellepont, Lidia, Phrygia, Thrace, Greece, and whither tra-uelling witts please. Wee shall lose our selues to follow him further; as they doe which with worst prophaneesse celebrate his drunken Holies daily.

Strab. l. 1.
Eurip. &c.

- 30 Theseus and Hercules liued in one time, of which Theseus is famous for his Acts in Crete, Thebes, Theffaly, with the Amazons, and his descent into Hell, with other his Voyages and Navigations: But farre farre more famous is Hercules for his Trauells, and for his twelve Labours, his Peregrination being another Labor added to each of them. The Nemean Lion, Lernean Hydra, Phrygian Bore, Arcadian Hart, Angean Stable, Cretan Bull, Thrasian Diomedes, with his man-eating Horses, Celtike, Alexia, Alpine passage, Italian Tenths, Symphalide Birds, Amazonian Belt, Atlantike Dragon, Balearian Geryon, Lybian Antaeus, Egyptian Busiris, Lydian seruice to Omphale, Theffalian Centaure, and Tartarean Cerberus, proclaime his trauells ouer and vnder the World; as his Pillars; to the end of the World, and his helping Atlas, that the World trauelled on him. Neither trauelled hee by Land alone, but by water also hee nauigated with those famous Argo- nauts, which make vs another Voyage to find them.

Theseus & Hercules.

The Argonauts.

- 40 Hyginus hath registred their names: Iason a Theffalian, Orpheus a Thracian, Asterion of Peline, Polyphemus of Larissa, Iphictus, Admetus, Eurytus & Echion, Ethalides, Ceneus, Mopsus the Soothsayer, Pirithous, Menaeus, Eurydamas, Amponitus, Eribotes, Ameleon, Eurytion, Ixition, Oileus, Clytus and Iphitus, Peleus and Telamon, Butes, Phaleros, Tiphys the Master of the Ship, Argus the Ship-maker, Philiastus, Hercules and Hylas his companion, Nauplius, Idmon, Castor and Pollux, Lyncus (which could see things hidden vnderground, and in the darke) and Idas, Perichymenus, Amphidamus and Cepheus, Ancaus, Lycurgi, Augus, Asterion and Amphion, Euphemus (which could runne dry-foot on the water) Ancaus Neptuni, Erginus, Meleager, Laocoön, Iphictus Theffaly, Iphitus Naubo Zetes and Calais (sonnes of Aquilo with winged heads and feet, which chased away the Harpyes) Focus and Priapus, Eurymedon, Palamonius, Actor, Thersanon, Hippalcinnos, Asclepius, 50 Atriacus, Mileus, Iolans, Deucalion, Philoctetes, Ceneus sonne of Coronis, Acastus, voluntary companion to Iason: These with their Countries and Parentage Hyginus hath recorded. Their Voyage was to Colchos, but many of of them came not thither. Hylas was stollne by the Nymphs in Mafia, whom Hercules and Polyphemus seeking, were left behind. Tiphys died by the way, & Ancaus son of Neptune succeeded in his Masters place. Idmon was slain by a Bore; Butes threw himselfe into the Sea, allured by the Syrens Musick. In their return also Euribates was slain in Libya, Mopsus died in Africa of a Serpents byting.

Hygin. Fab.

- Now for the Voyage of the Argonauts, they say that Pelias Iasons Vncle was commanded by Oracle to sacrifice to Neptune, to which if any came with one shooe on, the other off, then his death should not bee farre off: Iason came thither, and wading thorow the Riuer Eubenus, left one of his shooes in the mire, which he stayd not to take out, for feare of comming late to the Holies. Pelias seeing this, asked Iason what hee would doe, if hee had a prophecie that any man should kill him. I would send him, said hee, To fetch the Golden Fleece. This was the Fleece of the Ram (which some say was the name of a Ship hauing a Ram on the Beake, that had carried 60 Phryxus

* Diod. Siculus addeth the deliverance of Hefione from the Whale, the killing of King Laomedon and taking of Troy in their return for breaking his promise of Horses to Hercules. l. 4. Harpyes. * Diod. maketh Medea and Circe sisters, daughters of Hecate. l. 4.

g Timens saith that they went to Tanais and thence crossed over land to the Ocean, and sailed about by Cades into the Straits. Odyss. 14.

h Strab. l. 1. speaking of the Poets Argonauts saith in quibusdam cum historia consentit, quaedam etiam affingit, morem servans & communem suum. Cum historia consentit quando Aetam nominat & Iasonem & Argo &c. Grecian Navies against Troy.

Phryxus to Colchos, who sacrificed the Ram to Impiter, and hanged vp the Fleece in the Grove of Mars) and thus Pelias out of his owne mouth sentenced him. Argus made the Ship which of him was called Argos, which they say was the first ship of long fashion. These first came to Lemnos, where they were so kindly entertained, that Iason by Hypsipila the Queene had two sons, and staid till Hercules chode them away. Next they came to Cyzicus, * in Propontis, which liberally feasted them; and being gone thence, by foule weather they were put backe in the night, where Cyzicus mistaking them for enemies was slaine in fight. Thence they sailed to Bebrycia, where Amycus the King challenged them to a single encounter at whorle bats, in which Pollux slew him. Lycus a neighbour King was glad hereof and gaue the Argonauts entertainment, where Iphis or Tiphis died, and Idmon was slaine.

Phineus the Son of Agenor a Thrasian was blinded by Impiter for reuealing the gods secrets, and the Harpyes set to take the meate from his mouth. The Argonauts consulting with him of their future luccesse, must first free him of this punishment, which Zetes and Calais did, chasing them to the Strophades. Phineus shewed them how to passe the Symplegades, following the way which a Dove sent forth of the Ship, shewed them. Thence they came to the Ile Dia where the Birds Symplegades shot quills which killed men, whom by Phineus his precepts they feared away with sounds (such as the Curetes make) and vsed thereto shields also and speares. Thus being entred the Euxine Sea to Dia, they found poore, naked, shipwracked, the Sons of Phrixus, Argus, Phryonides, Melas and Cylindrus, which traueiling to their Grandfather Athamas there encountered that misfortune. Iason entertained them, and they brought him to Colchos by the Ruer Thermodoon; and comming neere Colchos caused the ship to be hidden, and came to their Mother (Calcioppe sister of Medea), to whom they related Iasons kindnesse, and the cause of his comming. She brings Medea to Iason, who as soone as she saw him, knew that it was the same whom in her dreame she had seene and ioued, and promiseth him all furtherance.

Aeta had learned by Oracle that hee should so long reigne as the Fleece which Phrixus had consecrated, remained in Mars his Temple. He therefore imposeth on Iason to yoke the bras-footed firebreathing buls to the plow, and to sow the Dragons teeth out of the Helmet, whence armed men should suddenly be produced and kill each other. This he did by Medeas helpe, and likewise cast the Dragon into a sleepe which guarded the Fleece, and so tooke it away. Aeta hearing that Iason and his Daughter Medea were gone, sent his son Abysrtus in a ship with touldiers after him, who pursued him to Istria & in the Adriaticke Sea, where Alcinous compounded their quarrel so little to Abysrtus his liking, that following him to Memnus Ile, Iason slew him, and his followers builded there a Citie called of his name Abysrtis. Some tell of the Syrtes which the Argonauts passing carried their ship on their shoulders twelue daies. But the varieties are inextricable and innumerable. After his returne, by Medeas helpe he made away his Vnckle Pelias (to whom she had promised to restore his youth) and gaue his Kingdome to Acastus his sonne, which had accompanied him to Colchos. The exile of Medea and the rest of the tale you may haue amongst the Poets. I am more then wearie with relating so much. This voyage was so admired of Antiquitie that this Argo which Homer calleth παιμύλοσ, was not onely praised to the stars by the Poets, but placed amongst the stars by their Minerua, and the constellation famous to these times. The Argonauts after this instituted the Olympian games. The Poets are full of such Chymeras, mixed lye-truths, not sparing any of their Gods or Heroes. Impiter hauing stolne Europa transformed into a Bull, or as some say in a ship of that name, or hauing a bull in the Beke, Cadmus and Thasus her brethren were sent by Agenor their father to seeke her. The Phenician Naue is diuided betwixt them. Thasus hauing long sought in vaine, returned not, but in the Aegean Sea built a Citie of his name. Cadmus built Thebes, and after that! But what and why doe I while you in these vncertainties? Yet haue I touched a little of his storie who is famed the first inuenter of the Grecian Letters, and of Historie. But we will turne your eyes to the most fabled of all Poeticall fables, and in a peece of an houre with a swift pen will dispatch ten yeeres worke with 1000. ships.

The Princes in the Troian siege and their ships are these: Agamemnon brought from Micena one hundred ships: Menelaus his brother from thence also 60. Phenix of Argos 50. Achilles of Scyros 60. Automedon his Chariot driuer 10. Patroclus of Phthia 10. Ajax of Salamine 12. Tencor his brother as many, Vlisses of Ithaca 12. Diomedes of Argos 30. Stenelus of Argos 25. Ajax the Locrian 20. Nestor the Pylion 90. Thrasymedes his brother 15. Antilochus sonne of Nestor 20. Euryppylus of Orchomene 40. Macaon of Attica 20. Podalirius his brother 9. Tlepolemus of Mycena 9. Idomeneus of Crete 40. Meriones from thence as many, Enmelus of Perrhebia 8. Philoctetes of Melibaa 7. Penelous of Boetia 12. Pylus a Boetian also as many, and his brother Chronius 9. Arcefilas 10. Prothenor 8. Iadmenus of Argos 30. Aescalaphus 30. Schedius 30. and Epistrophus his brother 10. Elephenor, Calchodontis and Imenaretes (all likewise of Argos) 30. The sonne of Menaeus from Athens 50. Agapenor from Arcada 60. Amphimachus of Elea 10. Enrychus of Argos 15. Amphimachus of Mycena 19. Polyfenes from Aetolia 40. Mege the Dulichian 60. Thoas 15. Podarces his brother 10. Prothous the Magnesian 40. Cyrenus the Argine 12. Nireus from thence 16. Antiphus the Theffalian 20. Polyboetes the Argine 20. Leophites of Sicyon 19. You see the particulars amount farre about the thousand vsually named. The Voyage was too short, and the Siege too long for this place.

Menelaus

Menelaus hauing recovered his eye. faire Helena, is said to haue beene eight yeeres wandring the world, and Vlyffes longer. Menelaus his errour was about Cyprus, Phania, Egypt, and the neighbouring Ethiopians and Arabians (so Strabo expoundeth Homers Erembs in his first Booke, and in his sixteenth, yet there addes also the Troglodites) he produceth some which place the Sidonians in the Persia Gulfe, I know not how iustly. Homers Verses, where Menelaus relateth his trauels to Telemachus are :

Trauels of Menelaus.
Strab. l. i.

Odys. p.

Κύπρον, Φοινίκην, καὶ Αἴγυπτον, ἰσχυρόν
Αἰθίοπας δ' ἰνδολογῶν, καὶ Σιδωνίους καὶ Ἑρμουσί, καὶ Λιβύαν.
Cyprus, Phania, Egypt hauing past,
Th' Ethiops, Sidons, Erembs, I went at last. And Libya —

Trauels of Vlyffes.

Arifonius the Grammarian, and after him Eustathius, interpret it of sailing round about Africa, as is said of Endoxus and others before (περιπλῶντας τὸν Ὠκεανὸν διὰ τῆς Γαδύρου μίξις τῆς Ἰνδίας) a thing to mee altogether improbable, and easier to be sailed by the Poet or his Commenters in an Inkie Sea with a quill Mast, then by the ruder Sea-men of those times. Menelaus his errours we see continued more then eight yeeres, yea are not yet ended, but breed new trauels in Grammarians braines. Tantum uis erat infans reducere scortum.

Vlyffes returning from Troy, came to the Ciconæ, the Lotophagi, and after that to Polyphemus the Giant, with one eye in his forehead, thence to Aeolus, to the Lestrygonæ, to Ænaria infamous by Circes charmes, to Auernus, to the Syrenes, to Scylla, Sicilia, Charybdis, to Æea, to the Phæaces, and at last to Ithaca. The like fables Grammer-schoole boyes can tell you of Æneas out of Virgil, and other Poets. I am weary of traueilling in such a loose sandy soile, where so few footprints and paths of truth are to be found. And for Æneas his trauels, I will present you them in another fashion as Hondius hath in his Map described them.

I might adde Dædalus his flight from Athens, his sleight for Pasiphae in Crete, his acts in Sicilia, his arts euery where in his trauels. As for his, and his sonne Icarus his flying, the truth is found HONDIVS his Map of the Navigation of Æneas the Troian.

See of al these in Photius his Bibliotheca. Heliod. & Achilles are extant.

in taking away the first letter, except you flye to Mysteries. And this is the false too ordinary in all the Poets fables, Perseus, the Atlantides, and others, which I forbear to relate.

Other fabulous Relations of Trauellers we haue, meerey fained, as that of Heliodorus his Æthiopike History, Achilles Tattius, Iamblichus, all in Loue-stories; Lucius Patrensis his Metamorphoses (whence Lucian had his Lucius, and thence Apuleius his Asinus). Antonius Diogenes his Thule, and other like, they are not fabulous Histories but Parables, Mysticall Fables and Poems in Historicall forme, as Utopia and Arcadia; that I adde not more then a good many others amongst vs of worse note, which idle wits haue made both Mothers and Daughters of Idlenesse, or fruitlesse foolish businesse without braine or heart.

I haue more mind to giue you a History, though euen here wee cannot secure Quicquid Gracia mendax Andet in Historia. Some things are vncertaine in the best, yet better a tattered truth then nothing.

The Philosphers and Wisemen of Greece were Trauellers for knowledge (of which some trauelled with knowledge also, and haue left Geographickall Monuments) Merchants for gaine, and mightie Potentates for Dominion and Glory. The Merchants had their reward in that which they sought, the other for better knowledge of times, deserue more leisurely view.

CHAP. V.

A briefe recitall of the famous expeditions mentioned in ancient Histories, of the Assyrians, Egyptians, Scythians, Æthiopians, Persians, and others.

29

These last haue bin told by Poets as fables, that is truths eeked and wrought vpon by their wits for greater delight, so the stories of the first Assyrian Monarchie and Egyptian Dynasties haue little more solidity. Ninus by the Greeke and Latine stories is renowned for his ambitious marches, and trauels thorow all Asia from the Red to the Euzine Sea, and thorow Scythia to the Bactrians. Hee conquered (saith Diodorus) the Armenians and their King Barchanes, Pharnus also King of Media and all Asia from Tanaïs to Nilus, the Egyptians, Phanicians, Syrians, Cilicians, Pamphylia, Lycia, Caria, Phrygia, Misia, Lydia, Troas, Propontis, Bythinia, Cappadocia, the Barbarians vpon Pontus, Cadusians, Tapyrans, Hircans, Dranges, Derbici, Carmani, Coronei, Rhomni, Vorcans, Parthians, Persians, Susians, Cassians, and many others. Arians the Arabian King was his Colleague in armes in these expeditions. After which he built Ninus or Ninive, the wals one hundred foot high, broad enough for three Carts to passe together on the tops, with 1500. Turrets 200. foote high, the squares vnequall the two longer 150. furlongs, the two shorter 90. Hee made a second expedition against the Bactrians, and then married Semiramis a Syrian, which he tooke from her husband Menon, who hanged himselfe in foolish griefe.

Ninus.

P. Orof. l. 1. c. 4.

Diod. sic. l. 2.

Ninive builded.

Semiramis.

The Scripture more truly ascribeth Babylon to Nimrod, Ninive to Asshur.

Theutamo. Memnon.

Ios. Scal. Note ad Enseb. Chron.

Vexores the Egyptian. Tanaïs.

Semiramis succeeded, and exceeded his exploits: She inuaded Ethiopia, and whereas (if you beleue Ctesias) Ninus had with him in his last expedition against Zoroastres the Bactrian 1700000. footmen and 200000. horsemen with 10600. hooked chariots: She builded (as they say) Babylon, with a stupendious Garden in Chaona, and Pallace at Ecbatana, cut out highwaies in Persia, passed thorow Egypt to Libya to the Oracle of Iupiter Ammon, subiected Ethiopia, and made three years provision to inuade Staurobates King of India, slew 300000. Bees of their Hides to frame counterfeit Elephants, and with 3000000. (it is Ctesias also which taleth it) of Footmen, and 500000. Horsemen, and 2000. Ships, with Elephantine counterfeits carried on Camels, shee made that Indian inuasion, where Staurobates encountered her with greater numbers, threatening to crucifie her. On Indus was the Nauall fight, wherein the Indians had the worse, and lost 1000. Ships, but in the Field the Assyrian Armie was ouerthrowne. Thus they proceed in the Assyrian Empire for 1300. yeeres together, and say that at the warres of Troy, Theutamo the twentieth from Ninus relieved Priamus with 20000. Men, and 200. Chariots vnder the conduct of Memnon. As for Sardanapalus the thirtieth and last of them, the truth is, as in the former, a certaine vncertainty. Ensebius reckoneth the time of Semiramis to haue beene the same with Abraham, so that Moses, whom Iosephus, Clemens, Africanus, Tatianus, make to be 850. yeeres before the Troian warre, is by his more probable reckoning made much later, yet, as hee saith, ancienter then the Greekish Antiquities, and their Gods also: being borne, as Scaliger calculateth out of his Positions 394. yeeres before the destruction of Troy. Now what petty Kingdomes the World had in the best peopled parts in Abrahams time, the fourth Chapter of Genesis sheweth, euen of those Regions; which some therefore make but Vice-roys vnder the Assyrian, very daringly. Ninus his numbers saue of Nimrods Babel, which after Ages could make swel with such vanities. It may be a question (I thinke the negatiue out of question) whether the World had then so many soules so soone after the Flood, as those Indian and Assyrian Armies are said to containe.

The like may bee said of Vexores the Egyptian Kings Expedition, which conquered to Pontus,

60

Pontus, and Tanais the Scythians, which conquered him and almost all Asia; some say before Ninus. Vexores by Genebrard is supposed to be Osiris, the first Pharao. And for Sesostris wee haue already in part acknowledged his greatnesse, and withall his latenesse in the time of Rehoboam the Sonne of Salomon. He is said to haue had in his Army 600000. Footmen, and 24000. Horse, 8020. Chariots of Warre, in the Red Sea foure hundred Ships. Hee conquered beyond Ganges, the Medes, the Scythians vnto Tanaïs, and the rest of Asia. Into Europe he passed as farre as Thrace, and left Pillars as Monuments for his victories, engrauen with the representation of a mans Priuities, if they were valiant; of a womans, if effeminate.

Diod. sic. l. 1.

Zerab the Ethiopian.

2. Chron. 9. 14

2. Kin. 16. 6 17.

Thercon.

Strab. l. 15.

Megasthenes his testimony of old Expeditions.

Nabuchodon-sors

Idanthyrsus.

Cyrus.

Dan. 2. 6 4.

Cambyfes.

Darius. Xerxes.

Her. 4. 7.

- 10 Not long after was that Expedition of Zerab the Ethiopian with a million of men, over-throwne by King Asa; as that of the Queens of Sheba (some thinke shee raigned ouer Arabia and Ethiopia) to Salomon a little before. Tiglash Pileser King of Assyria tooke Damascus, and Salmanser carried away the tenne Tribes into Assyria and Media, and placed Babylonians, Cutheans and others in their roomes. Senacherib soone after inuaded Judah, but Tirbakab King of Ethiopia came out against him. This Tirbakab is thought to be that Tearcon, which Strabo mentioneth, where hee denieth that India had beene inuaded by any but Bacchus and Hercules before Alexander, denying that of Semiramis, and al- leading Megasthenes both to that purpose, and that Sesostris the Egyptian, and Tearcon the Ethiopian pierced into Europe, yea that Nabucodonosor, or Nanocodrosor (more celebra- ted by the Chaldeans then Hercules) came to the Straits or Hercules his Pillars; as did al-
- 20 so Tearcon: also that Idanthyrsus the Scythian pierced as farre as Egypt; but none of them went (saith hee) to India. Megasthenes acknowledgeth that Cyrus came neere the Indi- ans, in his Expedition against the Massagets, but not thither. As for Nabucodonosors Asian and Egyptian Expeditions, and his Dominion in manner ouer the World wee haue diuine te- stimony in Daniells Tree and Golden Image; of Cyrus also, whose Conquests are knowne, and large Peregrinations from the West parts of Asia, where hee captiued Crae- sus and subdued his, with the adioyning Dominions, and all the Regions thence thorow Sy- ria, Armenia, Media, Persia, to the Massagets and Scythians. His sonne Cambyfes added Egypt, and that foolish Expedition against the Ethiopians. Darius with 800000. men inuaded the Scythians. Xerxes, as Herodotus hath recorded, inuaded Greece with 1700000. Footmen, 80000. Horsemen, 20000. Chariot Men, one thousand two hundred and eight saile of Ships. Ctesias (which vseth elsewhere to say the most) hath but 800000. men besides Cha- riots, and one thousand Ships. As for other Scythian and Amazonian inuasions, with others of other Nations, for their vncertaintie I omit them. The Greeks also had their many, both Expe- ditions and defensue Warres against the Persians before Alexanders time. Themistocles, Xenop- hon, and many others of them are renowned, tam marte quam Mercurio. And thus the Persian Empire hath brought vs to Alexander, which succeeded it, of whose Expedition wee shall anon take speciall and more leisurely view.
- 30

- As for the later Empires of Carthage and Rome, to tell of their Trauellers and Trauels would proue a History of their States, and all their famous Captaines, especially the Romans when they began to spread their wings farre from their Italian nest, and flowed out of European Bankes into Africa and Asia. The Scipios in the Carthaginian warres, Lucullus in Africa, and after in the Mithridatike war; Great Pompey in his European, Asian, and fatall African Voyages & Expeditions; Greater Iulius, whose trauels procreated a Monarchy; Couetous Crassus, Cruell Antonius, Flourish- ing Augustus, Seely Claudius, Triumphant Vespasian, Gentle Titus, Proud Domitian, Glorious Traian, Witty Adrian, & in manner all the rest of their Emperors forced, or forcing on their Fron- tiers, & whose very Imperial progresse in their own State, were great voyages & peregrinations; yea their Empires (as before * is obserued) was called by the ambitious title of the World: For better knowledge whereof I haue here presented the Map thereof. Seuerer Seuerus died at Torke, Christian Constantine arose a bright Sunne to the World out of our North; Apostata Iulian travel- led also and brought forth an incarnate Deuill, which after many peregrinations perished in the East, and left the Empire to Good Iouian. To set downe the Emperours trauels would be to giue you the Imperiall History from Iulius, till the times that the World fell in trauell with Barbart- an trauellers, Goths, Vandals, Hercules, Hannes, Anares, Frankes, Saxons, Lumbards, Saracens, which shared amongst them that vast Empire: especially the trauell of the Imperiall Seat from Rome to Constantinople, giuing the occasion both to a mysticall conception of Antichrist (which may seeme borne long after by Phocas midiwifery, and growing vp till Gregory the seuenth, when the Deuill was loosed from the bottomlesse pit, and in Christian names restored in great part the Ethnike Gentilisme) and to those inundations of Barbarians and Barbarisme, which like a smoake from the bottomlesse pit prepared the Papall way. Pipine, and especiall Charles the Great were great Trauellers also, and vnwitting much furthered the growth of that Monster, which after swallowed vp the Imperiall Eagle, and left but the feathers and shadow remaining. The Danes and Normanes were vnwelcome Trauellers, which perfected that, which others had be- gun: especiall the Normanes by their warres and greatnesse in Italy, growing out of the ruines of the Easterne Empire, and by that conspiracy of Urban and Boamund, which seeking to fish in troubled waters deuised the Expeditions of the Frankes to the Hierosolymitan warre, which set the
- 40
- 50
- 60

* Sup. c. 1. §. 2.

Hondius his Map of the Roman Empire.

world in travell 200. years together, the Mahumetans of the South and East, and the Christians of the North and West making Palestina the stage of fury & slaughter. After these the Tartars filled 40 the world with innumerable armies & mischiefs, especially all Asia & one halfe of Europe. But these are later things, and some of them follow in our Relations. For the Parthians, and later Persian Dynasty, and Saracenicall travells over, and both spirituall and temporall conquests thorow the world, and the Ottoman, Sophian, Mogoll, and other branches from that root, I have bin a large relater in my Pilgrimage.

CHAP. VI.

The travells of the antient Philosophers and learned men briefly mentioned.

50

*Least Travellers may be greatest Writers. Even I which have writtē so much of travellers & travells, neuer travelled 200. miles from Thaxted in Essex, where I was borne: herein like a whet-

Now let vs examine the Voyages of Philosophers and Learned men, into remote parts for Wisdome and Learning. Diogenes Laertius maketh two kinds of Philosophy, the one Ionike, the other Italike: this began from Pysbgoras, the other from Thales, both which, with many of their Successors were great Travellers. As for Thales, his Epistle to Pberocydes a Syrian (another travelling Philosopher) is yet extant in Laertius, in which he mentions his & Solons travells, in these words: For neither are I and Solon the Athenian so foolish and mad, that when we have sailed to Crete & pierced into Egypt, there to conferrē with the Priests and Astronomers, we would not with like care saile to Ithaca. For Solon will come also if you thinke good. For thou being holden with liking of that place sel-dome passest into Ionie; neither art moved with desire of Strangers: but as I hope thou onely appliest thy selfe to writing. But wee which write nothing, * travell thorow Greece and Alia.

None, which being blunt causeth sharpnesse; or a Candlestick holding many Candles, without which it selfe is vnseene in the darke; and as the Compass is of little compasse and motion, yet teacheth to compasse the World; or as the Pole-star is least moved of all, & most of all moving & guiding the Traveller. Enuy not a marginall roome to him, who hath vied Volumes so spacious to thee; in which, how little is the travell of the greatest Traveller; or how could a great Traveller have travelled of so much.

Thus

Thus haue you one testimony of two Grandees, Thales and Solon. This later, in his return from Egypt visited Cyprus, and after went to Croesus, who adorning himselfe in greatest glory & pompe, asked Solon if euer he had seene goodlier spectacle? Yes, laid he, Cockes, Pheasants, and Peacockes. Croesus being after by Cyrus sentenced to the fire, cried, O Solon, Solon, Solon, and being demanded the reason, answered, That Solon had told him, that no man might be accounted happy before his death: wherein Cyrus reading the mutabilitie of his owne fortunes, gaue him his life and a competent estate. Thence Solon went into Cilicia, and built Solos:

To Croesus is an Epistle also of Anacharsis, another trauelling Philosopher, borne in Scythia, and brother to the Scythian King, making some mention of his Trauells in these words: I, O King of Lidians, came into Greece to learne their Manners, Studies, and Instructions; and need not Gold, esteeming it enough to returne to the Scythians a better man, and more learned. Yet I will come to thee to Sardis, much esteeming thy friendship and familiaritie. Hee was Solons guest at Athens, whither he came in the fortie seuenth Olympiad. Socrates the first bringer in of Ethikes or Morall Philosophy, was a Traueller also, and followed the warres by Land and Sea. Xenophon his Scholler, was both in Arts, and Armes, and Trauells famous, and hath left Monument: thereof written by himselfe. His Voyage to Delphos, and thence to Cyru, and after his Persian iourney to Agessilaus King of Sparta, and with him against the Thebans, and after that to Helis and Corinth, are recorded by Laertius. In his daies Ctesias a Traueller and Historian liued, which writ the Persian, Assyrian and Indian Stories, but often trauells from truth.

Laert. l. 2.

Xenophon.

Aristippus.

Aristippus was a Cyrenian by birth, by studies an Athenian, as were many others of his Countrymen, by base flattery a trencher-worme to Dionysius the Sicilian Tyrant. Ptolemus an Ethiopian was his Scholler, and Antipater a Cyrenean. Epitemedes, Parabates, Hegesias, Anniceris were also Cyrenaiques, holding voluptuous opinions, as also Theodorus and another Aristippus, magnifying sensuall pleasures. The Ecclesiastike Histories of Socrates and Sozomen, mention the trauells of Empedocles, which threw himselfe into the Sicilian Crateres, and of Democritus Cous which spent eightie yeeres in trauelling thorow diuers Countries. Meropius also, and Merodorus are mentioned with others. But wee will come to men better knowne: Plato is famous both for Philosophy and Trauelling. Hee trauelled to Euclide at Megara, to Theodorus the Mathematician, into Italy to the Pythagoreans, Philolaus and Eurytus, thence to Egypt to the Priests (and with him Euripides also) and intended to visit the Persian Magi, but was prohibited by the Asian warres. Returning to Athens hee set vp the Academie. Thrice hee trauelled in warfare to Tanagra, to Corinth, to Delos. Thrice also hee sayled into Sicilia. First to see it, at which time Dionysius the Tyrant displeased with his free speech, caused him to bee sold in Egina; but being freed, Dionysius writ to him not to reproach him. Plato answered, Hee had not so much leisure as to thinke on Dionysius. He sailed thither to the younger Dionysius twice. His Disciples were Speusippus the Athenian, Xenocrates of Chalcedon, Aristotle the Stagirite, Dion of Syracuse, Amphilus of Heraclea, Timolaus of Cyzicus, Heracledes of Pontus, and others of other Countries, his Schoole yeelding a prettie Geographickall Map of Countries. Bion was borne neere Boristhenes, but added honor to his Country by his studies. He was sold for a Slaue, and bought by an Orator which made him his heire: he sold al & went to Athens. After his studies there, he liued at Rhodes.

Plato.

Laert. l. 3.

Euripides.

Lacydes the chief of the New Academie, was a Cyrenean. Carneades was also of the same natio. Clitomachus was a Carthaginian, & his true name was Asdrubal. He went to Athens, & there became the scholler of Carneades & his successor. Menippus was a Phenician by birth, & liued a Cynik at Thebes. Aristotle was borne the first yeere of the 99. Olympiad: at seuentene yeers he became Platoes Scholler, and so continued twentie yeeres. After that hee went to Mitylene, and when Alexander was fiftene yeeres old, to King Philip, in the second yeere of the 109. Olympiad, and hauing commended the care of young Alexander to his Cousin Callisthenes, in the second of the 111. returned to Athens, and taught in Lyceo thirteene yeeres, and then went to Chalcis and there died. Callisthenes trauelled with Alexander, till the Persian Conquest had made him swell beyond the measure of a man, and some Greeke Foolosophers (Philosophers I dare not call them; but amongst the Muses some haue alway beene Hedge-whores, and the learning of some in all Ages hath licked the trenchers, and fly-blowed the sores of great men; with the basest of vices, Flattery, kissing the hinder parts, sucking * the Emerodes, feeding on their excrements, themselves the excrements of Mankind: but whither hath passion transported mee?) Agis an Argine, and Cleo a Sicilian, some adde Anaxarchus also, Et cetera urbium suarum Purgamenta (saith Curcius) would needs open Heauen to Alexander, and preferre him to Hercules, Bacchus, Castor and Polux: Alexander stood behind the hangings, whiles Cleo made a speech to perswade the Persian Rites, and with them to deifie and incense their Kings. Which being grauely refuted by Callisthenes (for to him especially was the speech directed, that they which went before others in learning, should in this innouation also) that it was not for him and Cleo to make Gods, or for the King honor to bee beholden to them for his Diuinitie, which could not giue a Kingdome on Earth to him, and much lesse Heauen: Alexander concealed his malice, till vpon occasion of torturing some, which had conspired his death, he tortured also euen to death Callisthenes, giuing him that recompence for sauing his life, when hauing slaine Cytus in a drunken rage, hee would haue Bion.

Lacydes.

Carneades.

Clitomachus.

Menippus.

Aristotle.

Callisthenes.

40 Lacydes the chief of the New Academie, was a Cyrenean. Carneades was also of the same natio. Clitomachus was a Carthaginian, & his true name was Asdrubal. He went to Athens, & there became the scholler of Carneades & his successor. Menippus was a Phenician by birth, & liued a Cynik at Thebes.

Aristotle was borne the first yeere of the 99. Olympiad: at seuentene yeers he became Platoes Scholler, and so continued twentie yeeres. After that hee went to Mitylene, and when Alexander was fiftene yeeres old, to King Philip, in the second yeere of the 109. Olympiad, and hauing commended the care of young Alexander to his Cousin Callisthenes, in the second of the 111. returned to Athens, and taught in Lyceo thirteene yeeres, and then went to Chalcis and there died. Callisthenes trauelled with Alexander, till the Persian Conquest had made him swell beyond the measure of a man, and some Greeke Foolosophers (Philosophers I dare not call them; but amongst the Muses some haue alway beene Hedge-whores, and the learning of some in all Ages hath licked the trenchers, and fly-blowed the sores of great men; with the basest of vices, Flattery, kissing the hinder parts, sucking * the Emerodes, feeding on their excrements, themselves the excrements of Mankind: but whither hath passion transported mee?) Agis an Argine, and Cleo a Sicilian, some adde Anaxarchus also, Et cetera urbium suarum Purgamenta (saith Curcius) would needs open Heauen to Alexander, and preferre him to Hercules, Bacchus, Castor and Polux: Alexander stood behind the hangings, whiles Cleo made a speech to perswade the Persian Rites, and with them to deifie and incense their Kings. Which being grauely refuted by Callisthenes (for to him especially was the speech directed, that they which went before others in learning, should in this innouation also) that it was not for him and Cleo to make Gods, or for the King honor to bee beholden to them for his Diuinitie, which could not giue a Kingdome on Earth to him, and much lesse Heauen: Alexander concealed his malice, till vpon occasion of torturing some, which had conspired his death, he tortured also euen to death Callisthenes, giuing him that recompence for sauing his life, when hauing slaine Cytus in a drunken rage, hee would haue

50 the Muses some haue alway beene Hedge-whores, and the learning of some in all Ages hath licked the trenchers, and fly-blowed the sores of great men; with the basest of vices, Flattery, kissing the hinder parts, sucking * the Emerodes, feeding on their excrements, themselves the excrements of Mankind: but whither hath passion transported mee?) Agis an Argine, and Cleo a Sicilian, some adde Anaxarchus also, Et cetera urbium suarum Purgamenta (saith Curcius) would needs open Heauen to Alexander, and preferre him to Hercules, Bacchus, Castor and Polux: Alexander stood behind the hangings, whiles Cleo made a speech to perswade the Persian Rites, and with them to deifie and incense their Kings. Which being grauely refuted by Callisthenes (for to him especially was the speech directed, that they which went before others in learning, should in this innouation also) that it was not for him and Cleo to make Gods, or for the King honor to bee beholden to them for his Diuinitie, which could not giue a Kingdome on Earth to him, and much lesse Heauen: Alexander concealed his malice, till vpon occasion of torturing some, which had conspired his death, he tortured also euen to death Callisthenes, giuing him that recompence for sauing his life, when hauing slaine Cytus in a drunken rage, hee would haue

60 Callisthenes trauelled with Alexander, till the Persian Conquest had made him swell beyond the measure of a man, and some Greeke Foolosophers (Philosophers I dare not call them; but amongst the Muses some haue alway beene Hedge-whores, and the learning of some in all Ages hath licked the trenchers, and fly-blowed the sores of great men; with the basest of vices, Flattery, kissing the hinder parts, sucking * the Emerodes, feeding on their excrements, themselves the excrements of Mankind: but whither hath passion transported mee?) Agis an Argine, and Cleo a Sicilian, some adde Anaxarchus also, Et cetera urbium suarum Purgamenta (saith Curcius) would needs open Heauen to Alexander, and preferre him to Hercules, Bacchus, Castor and Polux: Alexander stood behind the hangings, whiles Cleo made a speech to perswade the Persian Rites, and with them to deifie and incense their Kings. Which being grauely refuted by Callisthenes (for to him especially was the speech directed, that they which went before others in learning, should in this innouation also) that it was not for him and Cleo to make Gods, or for the King honor to bee beholden to them for his Diuinitie, which could not giue a Kingdome on Earth to him, and much lesse Heauen: Alexander concealed his malice, till vpon occasion of torturing some, which had conspired his death, he tortured also euen to death Callisthenes, giuing him that recompence for sauing his life, when hauing slaine Cytus in a drunken rage, hee would haue

Callisthenes trauelled with Alexander, till the Persian Conquest had made him swell beyond the measure of a man, and some Greeke Foolosophers (Philosophers I dare not call them; but amongst the Muses some haue alway beene Hedge-whores, and the learning of some in all Ages hath licked the trenchers, and fly-blowed the sores of great men; with the basest of vices, Flattery, kissing the hinder parts, sucking * the Emerodes, feeding on their excrements, themselves the excrements of Mankind: but whither hath passion transported mee?) Agis an Argine, and Cleo a Sicilian, some adde Anaxarchus also, Et cetera urbium suarum Purgamenta (saith Curcius) would needs open Heauen to Alexander, and preferre him to Hercules, Bacchus, Castor and Polux: Alexander stood behind the hangings, whiles Cleo made a speech to perswade the Persian Rites, and with them to deifie and incense their Kings. Which being grauely refuted by Callisthenes (for to him especially was the speech directed, that they which went before others in learning, should in this innouation also) that it was not for him and Cleo to make Gods, or for the King honor to bee beholden to them for his Diuinitie, which could not giue a Kingdome on Earth to him, and much lesse Heauen: Alexander concealed his malice, till vpon occasion of torturing some, which had conspired his death, he tortured also euen to death Callisthenes, giuing him that recompence for sauing his life, when hauing slaine Cytus in a drunken rage, hee would haue that recompence for sauing his life, when hauing slaine Cytus in a drunken rage, hee would haue added in a fullen and mad penance his owne death, and was by Callisthenes wiledome reclaimed. This was his preparation to the Indian Expedition.

* So the Barber of Levis the Eleventh. Arrian. l. 4. Q. Curt. l. 3. Plut. Alex.

Many other learned men followed Alexander, and writ his story, viz. Marfjas, Pellani, Hecataus Abderita, Aristobulus, Clitarchus, Anaximenes, Onesicritus, Nearchus, Ptolemaus Lagi after King of Egypt, Antipater another of Alexanders Captaines, and an Historian, Aristus, Asclepiades; Vossius addes Archelaus, Strattis, Enmenes, Diodorus, whose stories wee haue cited by Arrianus, Strabo, Plutarch, &c. But then the World trauelled of Trauellers of all sorts, learned and vnlearned.

Lact. l. 7.

L. I. 8.

Pythagor. 21.

Plin. l. 30. c. 1.

Iambl. pag. 39.

Strab. lib. 15.

Curt. 10.

Fr. Elian. &c.

Amb. Ep. 7.

Diod. Sic. l. 4. c. 9.

See Vossius of

Polybius, & Pythias. De hist.

græc.

Herod. l. 4.

Scyllax sent by the Persian to discouer the Græcian Coast,

before that famous inuasion.

Zeno was a Cyprian, by birth of Phenician parentage, and at Athens began the Stoike Sect, whither hee came with Purple out of Phenicia to sell, and suffered shipwracke in the Piræum, vpon which occasion solacing himselfe with a booke, hee followed Crates. Cleanthes was his successor, & after him Spharus a Bosphoran, which trauelled also to Alexandria to Ptolemaus Philopater. Heraclites the Ephesian was a traueilling Philosopher, of whose acquaintance Darius Hiftaspis was ambitious and writ to him about it. But of all the Philosophers none were more famous, then the first founder of that name Pythagoras, either in traueills with, or for Science. He was borne at Samos, thence passed to Lesbos, and there heard Pherecydes the Syrian. Returning to Samos, Polycrates the famous Minion of Fortune, commended him to Amasis King of Egypt. Hee learned the Egyptian Mysteries and Language, and trauelled thence with Epimenedes into Crete, and after that into Italy to Croton, and there began the Italike Philosophy before mentioned. But who can tell his traueills? Iamblichus his Scholler, saith that Pythagoras learned his Philosophy, partly of the Orphics, partly of the Egyptian Priests; partly of the Chaldees and Magi. Learned Plinie saith of him, that to learne Zoroastres his Magia, Pythagoras nauigauit, exilio verius quam peregrinatione suscepta. Hee (doe you beleue it?) had beene Ethalides the sonne of Mercury, and after that had beene Euphorbus in the warres of Troy, who being dead, his soule passed into Hermotimus, and trauelled to Branchida to Apollos Temple, after whose death a new transmigration befell him into Pyrrhus a Delian Fisherman, and at last you haue Pythagoras. It seemeth hee had beene also in India, where the Brachmanes or Bramenes to this day oblerue the Rites and Opinions which the Western World ascribe to Pythagoras, as not eating of things which haue had life; transmigration of soules, and the like. Hiftaspis, the Father of Darius the King, is reported to haue trauelled into India and learned their Magike & Philosophy, which the Magi in Persia after professed. Philostratus hath written a long Legend of Apollonius Tyanus his Pilgrimage to the Brachmanes in India, to Babylon, Egypt, and Arabia, to Nysa, to Taxilla, to Iarchas the principall Indian Brachmane, to his Egyptian and Ethiopian Gymnosophists, &c. But incredulus odi. I reckon him an Hospitall beggar, with whom I will haue nothing to doe. Pyrrho an Athenian Philosopher Scholler of Anaxarchus, is said to haue trauelled both to the Persian Magi, and Indian Gymnosophists, and learned of them that hee could learne nothing; nay learned not so much, but doubred of that also. India also yeelded some traueilling Philosophers to the Gracians, of whom the most famous is that Calanus which followed Alexander to Pasargada, some say to Babylon, and there burned himselfe, an end sutable to his seuerer profession beyond the Stoikes austeritie. An Epistle of his is registred at large by Saint Ambrose. Archimedes also trauelled into Egypt and left famous Monuments of his Art in many parts of the World. But wee haue beene too long in trauell of this argument. More are wee beholden to the traueills of Historians, such as Herodotus, Megasthenes, Diodorus Siculus, Strabo, Polybius, and many others which trauelled into Italy, Egypt, Ethiopia, Greece, Asia, and diuers parts of the World, that they might giue the World vnto posteritie. Herein also they deserue mention, which then were counted fablers, as Pythias Massiliensis, whom Strabo and others reiect: yet his reports of short nights, &c. are now knowne truths. Some haue written of traueilling and sailing by the Coasts, as Arrianus his Circumnavigation of the Red or Indian Sea, and of the Blacke or Euxine Sea; the Periplus & Periplus of Marcianus Heracleotes, published in Greece by David Hoeschelins, rare Iewells for knowledge of antient Geography, but not so fitting our common Reader. The like wee may say of Scyllax Caryandensis, mentioned by Herodotus, Artemidorus the Ephesian, Dicearchus Meseinus, Isidorus, Conracenus. The Learned know where to read them: the Vulgar would not regard them if they were here; Time hauing deuoured the very names by them mentioned, and not the Cities and Ports alone. Yet for a taste wee will giue you a Voyage of two of the Antients. And first that of Hanno.

CHAP. VII.

Phœnician Voyages, and especially that of Hanno, a Carthaginian Captaine.

Diodorus Siculus reporteth of the Phœnicians (of whose Navigations in the Indian and African Ocean, and Spanish Plantations we have spoken before) that say-
 10 ling to diuers Marts, they planted many Colonies in Africa, and some also in the West parts of Europe: that they sailed also out of the Straits into the Ocean, and built on the European Continent the Citie Gadirra (or Cadiz) and therein erected a sumptuous Temple to Hercules, which to his dayes was holden in great reputation of Sanctitie, the Rites therein obserued after the Phœnician manner, wherein many famous Roman Commanders after their great exploits, haue paid to this God their vowed 20 Holies. The Phœnicians sailing alongst the Lybian shore in the Ocean, were many dayes carried with tempests vnto an Iland very great and fertile, with pleasant Champaines and Mountaines, goodly Woods, Gardens, Houses, Fountaines, wholsome Ayre, seeming to be the dwelling rather of Gods then Men. The Tyrrheni (which were strong by Sea) would haue sent a Colonie thither, but were forbidden by the Carthaginians, which feared lest their Citizens allured by the goodnesse of the Countrey should betake themselues thither: and besides, they would refuse it 30 for a place of refuge, if any aduersitie should happen to their Citie. Aristotle also in his Booke de diuinatione ex aëre hath some such thing of Carthaginian Merchants, which sailed from Spaine into the Westerne Ocean; but I thinke both may bee applied rather to some one of the Ilands of the Canaries, or Cape Verd, or Saint Thomas, or to some part of the African Continent, which they might thinke (not sailing further) to be an Iland, or to some fiction, then to America. Aristotle in that Treatise mentioneth Hanno, which Vossius thinketh rather to be the worke of the younger Aristotle, called Ponticus (Laertius mentions eight Aristotles) then of that great Oracle of learning and miracle of Nature. But of Hannos Periplus (as it was falsely termed) many Authors haue made mention. Plinie to speaketh of it, as if hee had sailed about Africa, in these words, Et Hanno, Carthaginis potentia florente, circumuectus à Gadibus ad finem Arabia, nauigationem eam prodidit scripto; sicut ad extera Europa nascenda missus eodem tempore Himilco. By which words it is apparant that Hanno and Himilco in those flourishing times of Carthage, were sent by 40 publike decree vpon discoueries, Himilco to the Coasts of France, Britaine, and other parts of Europe; Hanno Southwards to coast around the African shores. The like testimony he hath in his fifth Booke, Fuere & Hannonis Carthaginensium Ducis commentarij, Punicis rebus florentissimis, explorare ambitum Africe iussi: quem secuti plerique nostris, ad alia quedam fabulosa, & vrbes multas ab eo conditas ibi prodidere, quarum nec memoria ulla, nec vestigium extat. Whereby wee see that Plinie doubted of the truth of Hannos relations: yea it was a Prouerbe, as Athenaus, which Casaubon in his Notes vpon him, with Vossius also haue obserued; Siquid eiusmodi Iuba refert, gaudeat Lybicis libris Hannonis ac erroribus: as good a testimonie of Iuba and Hanno for 50 Historians as Virgils of Banius and Manius for Poets. Yet, as I will not altogether cleare him, so I thinke that ignorance of those places in those times made him seeme the more fabulous, as Marco Polo and others did till our Grandfathers daies: which appeareth in that they make that a circumnauigation about Africk, which reached not one quarter of the way from the Pillars of Hercules, to the Arabian Gulfe. Artemidorus the Ephesian doth mention it, and Mela also with Solinus. Mela came neere the truth, which saith that Hanno sailed a great part of the coast, and returned for want of prouision, not of Sea-roume. He, and Solinus and Plinie haue cited much out of him, which perhaps might receiue a better interpretation then Antiquity could giue, as appeareth by Ramusios annotations on that Voyage, and by helpe of a Portugall Pilot expert in those coasts, comparing Hannos with the present Navigations. We will first giue you the Text and then the Commentarie. But first we will adde out of Galiano touching Himilco, that hee is said to haue 60 sailed to Gotland and Thule, within 24. degrees of the Pole, where the day in Iune is two and twenty houres, and to haue spent in that discouery two yeeres: I know not what good prooffe he hath of that Relation. Plinie whom he citeth, saith that the Northerne Ocean was sailed for the most part by the procurement of Augustus, to the Cimbrian Promontory, and the Scythian coast, and that from the East when Selencus and Antiochus reigned, the North Sea about the Caspian was sailed, and called by their names Selencida and Antiochida. But that he ioyneth the Caspian with the Ocean, makes it lesse credible, being contrary to later experience. No better credit hath that report of Nepos touching Indians which had for trade sailed out of India and come about by the Northerne Ocean, and by tempest were brought into Germany, presented by the King of the Suenians to Quintus Metellus Celer then proconsull of Gallia, which haply were of some Nation in the Balticke Sea, by tempest loosing themselues, and not finding any which could vnderstand their language, were by some smattering Grammarians or trusty trauellers (which by daring ignorance would aduenture on applause for skill in Geography) or else by the Ciuier (which thought the mention of the Indian name would much commend his present) obruded on the no

D. Sic. l. 4. c. 7.
 Sup. c. 1. § 12.

Gadira or Cadiz built by the Phœnicians.

Goodly Iland.

Galiano, Quiedd and others apply it to the American Antilles.

Gerardi 10. vof. de hist. Græ. l. 4.

Plin. l. 2. c. 67.

Himilco.

L. 5. c. 1.

a & alia quædam fab.

Qui Barium non odit, amet sua carmina Mani.

I. Solin c. 27.
 Pomp. Mel. de sit. Orb. l. 3. c. 10.
 Hanno Carthaginensis, cum per Oceani ostia exisset, magnam partem eius circumuectus, non se mari sed comitatu defecisse &c.

Plin. l. 2. c. 67.

lesse ignorant Spectators, for Indians: a thing easily said, and not easily disproved, where none had scene any Indian. But now to Hanno.

The Navigation of HANNO a Carthaginian Captaine on the Coasts of Africa, without HERCVLES Pillars, which he dedicated, written in the Punick tongue in the Temple of Saturne, after translated into the Greeke, and now into the English, with brieve annotations.

Thymiatarium.

THE Carthaginians determined that Hanno should saile without Hercules Pillars, & there build Cities of the Liby-phinicians. He set saile with threescore Ships of fiftie Oares a peece, conducting with him a great multitude of men and women, to the number of thirty thousand, with victuals and all other necessities. We arrived at the Pillars, and passed them, and having sailed without them two daies, we built the first Citie, calling it Thymiatarium. It had round about it very large Champaignes. After turning toward the West, we came to a promontorie of Africa, called Soloente, couered all ouer with woods. And having here built a Temple to Neptune, we sailed halfe a day towards the East, till we arrived at a Fen, which is situated not farre from the Sea, very full of great and long Canes: and there were in it feeding Elephants, & many other creatures. Then having gone about a daies saile beyond that Fenne we built Cities on the Sea coast, calling them by their proper names Marus, Caricus, Gutta, Acra, Melitta and Arambis. Departing from thence we came to the great Riuer Lixus which descends from Africa: By it there were certaine men called Lixita, feeders of Cattell, tending their flockes; with whom wee continued so long, that they became verie familiar. Moreouer vp in the Countrie about them the Negros inhabited, who will not traffique with any, and their Countrie is verie barbarous and full of wilde Beasts, and enuironed with high Mountaines, from which as they say, issues the Riuer Lixus, and round about the Mountains inhabit men of diuers shapes, which haue their abiding in Canes; they runne swifter then horses, as the Lixians report: from thence taking some Interpreters, we sailed by a desert Countrie towards the South two daies. And then wee vered one day towards the East, where in the bottome of a Gulfe we found alike Iland, that was five furlongs in compasse, which we inhabited, naming it Cerne, and by the way that we had sailed we iudged that that Iland was opposite to Carthage, for the Nauigation from Carthage to the Pillars, and from thence to Cerne seemed equall. Parting from thence, and sailing by a great Riuer called Crete, we arrived at a Lake, which had in it three Ilands greater then Cerne. From whence sailing the space of a day, we came to the further part of the Lake: there we saw very high Mountaines which overlooked all the Lake: where were sauage people cloathed in beafts skins, who chased vs away with stones, not suffering vs to land: sailing from thence we came to another great and large streame full of Crocodiles, and Riuer-horses. From thence turning backe againe, wee returned to Cerne. Sailing then twelue daies Southerly, not going farre from the coast, which was peopled with Negros, who vpon sight of vs fled away, and spake so, as the Lixita that were with vs vnderstood them not. The last day we arrived at a Mountaine full of great trees, the wood whereof was odoriferous and of various colours. Having now coasted two daies by this Mountaine, wee found a deepe and troublesome race of Sea; on the side whereof towards the land was a plaine, where by night we saw fires kindled on euery side, distant one from the other some more some lesse. Having watered here, we sailed by the land five daies, so that we arrived in a great Bay, which our Interpreters said, was called Hesperus his borne. In this there was a great Iland, and in the Iland a Lake, which seemed a Sea, and in this there was another Iland; where having landed, by day we saw nothing but woods, but in the night many fires were kindled, and we heard Pluses and the noise and sound of Cimbals and Drummes, and besides infinite shours; so that wee were exceedingly afraid, and our Diuiners commanded vs to abandon the Iland: then swiftly sailing from thence, we passed by a Countrie smelling of Spices: from which some fierie Riuers fall into the Sea, and the land is so hot that men are not able to goe in it; therefore being somewhat affrighted we suddenly hoised out our sailes, and running along in the maine the space of foure daies, we saw by night the Country full of flames, and in the midst an exceeding high fire, greater then all the rest, which seemed to reach vnto the Starres: but wee saw this after in the day time, which was a very loftie Mountaine, called Σῶν ὄχνηα that is, the Chariot of the Gods. But having sailed three daies by fierie Riuers, we arrived in a Gulfe called Notuceras, that is, the South borne: in the inner part thereof there was a little Iland like vnto the first, which had a Lake in it, and in that there was another Iland full of Sauage men, but the women were more; they had their bodies all ouer hairie, and of our Interpreters they were called Gorgones: we pursued the men but could take none, for they fled into precipices and defended themselves with stones; but we tooke three of the women, which did nothing but bite and scratch those that led them, and would not follow them. Therefore they killed them and flead them, and brought their skins to Carthage: and because victuals failed vs, we sailed no further.

It appears that Hannos wisdom for discovery in that infancy of Navigation* about 2000 yeeres since, thought small Vessels fittest by which he might keepe neere the shoare, the edging whereof caused him to saile East or West, as the Land trended. The Carthaginians being of Phoenician originall from Tyrus, and Lybian habitation and Empire, called their Cities Lybiphanician: of which Thymiatonium seemes to the Portugall Pilot in Ramusio, to be Azamor in 32. and a halfe, where runneth a spacious Plaine to Morocco. The Promontory Soloente seemeth Cape Cantim in 32. degrees. After which the coast runneth in much Eastward, and the abundance of Rivers cause the great Fenne mentioned; beyond which they built those Cities, the same, or neere to those now in the Kingdome of Morocco, Azafi, Goz, Aman, Mogador, Teshua, &c. After they passe the Cape Ger, and encounter the River Lixus, where the Poets fables place Hercules his Anteus and the Hesperides Gardens. The Pilot thought it the River of Sus, which runnes into the Sea at Messa in 29. degr. 30. min. Beyond that begins Mount Atlas the lesse, which runneth Eastward quite thorow Barbary, and to which the Romans came, the sands prohibiting their approach to the greater Atlas. After this Hanno commeth to Cape Non, Cape Boiador and Cape Blanke; and then turning to the East, comes to the Ile Argin, which hee called Cerne: and thought to be as farre from the Straits in the course of their sailing, as it was betwixt those Straits and Carthage. For as for the height, it is plaine that they neither vsed compasse, nor obserued degrees. And for Ptolemeis degrees, they are almost euery where false or vncertaine, rather from his conjecture, then the Mariners calculation, and in transcribing made worse in so many barbarous and ignorant ages: his places are of more vse in shewing their bearing East or West, North or South, short, or beyond, or wide, then for exact gradations.

The Islands of Cape Verd in 13. are Hannos Hesperides (the Canaries or Fortunate Islands he could not see, creeping neere the shore) and for River Horses and Crocodiles, they are no rarities in Africke. From Cape Verd the race of the Sea might seeme terrible to their small Vessels, where the River of Saint Mary and Rio Grande in 15. degrees, hath troubled waters. Such fires as hee mentioneth are seene to this day of those which saile on the coast of Senega and Guinea, because the Negros eat little in the day time for heate, but at night haue their fires without doores and there refresh themselves: many of which a farre off present such lights at Sea; the merry Negros to fray away wilde Beasts and to expresse their mirth, making such musick with shouts and cries.

30 Sierra Leona is that chariot of the Gods in 8. degrees, the continuall thunders and lightnings at some times of the yeere presenting such a fierie spectacle as Hanno reporteth: yet augmented for greater wonder, as also are his fiery Rivers, that whereas the world talked of a fiery Zone, not habitable through heate, he might lye a little to saue his credit from imputation of a greater lye, if he had reported the temperature neere the line. The like humour of inclining to vulgar fancies appeareth in his tales of the Gorgones. And for the monstrous womens hairy skins, they might be of the Baboones or Pongos of those parts, some of which as Iobson and Battell our Countymen which trauelled those parts will tell you, are greater then women, & the Pongos nothing in manner differing from their shape. These were, as is probable within foure degrees of the line. The Island is thought to be that of Fernando Poo: but my learned friend Master Hoelstin a German, which is now preparing a learned treasury of Geographical antiquities to the Presse, supposeth that hee

40 passed not the Cape Tres puntas or that de Palmas.

* Some make Hanno at least as auncient as Philip the Father of Alexander: Vossius thinks him to be that Capitaine which was sent against Agathocles, mentioned by Trogus (or his shadow Isidore) 1.22. Liuy mentions another, and Pliny 1.8. c. 16. of another Hanno that he was exiled for raiming Lyons.

See Iobsons voyage and larger notes. Inf. 47.

CHAP. VIII.

IAMBULVS his Navigation to Arabia, and Aethiopia, and thence to a strange Island, from whence hee sailed to Palimbothra in India.

50 IF Hannos Voyage and Relations seemed incredible, much more may that of Iambulus, recorded by Diodorus. In what age hee liued is vncertaine, and as vncertaine what Island it was that hee is said to come to, which may seeme to some to be Zeilan or Sana, I rather thinke Sumatra. That it is wholly fabulous I cannot thinke, but that all is true therein, I were worthy also to haue my tongue slit, if I should affirme. Hee did mixe fables to the truth, to make his storie more plausible, and imitating the Poets; and without annotations the truth may easily be knowne from the fables of Platoes Republike and common women, and strange creatures, with other tales. But, if you will, thus the storie lyeth.

D. Sic. la.

60 Iambulus was learned from his child-hood and after his Fathers death (who was a Merchant) he exercised also Merchandizing. Passing through Arabia to buy Spices, he was taken by theues, with the associates of his iournie: at first with one of his fellow stoues, he was appointed to be a Keeper of Cattle: but after that, together with him hee was taken by certaine Aethiopians, and conuayed beyond the maritime Aethiopia. Seeing that they were strangers, they were taken for an expiation of that Country. The Aethiopians that inhabited those parts had a custome, which which they had anciently receiued from the Oracle of their Gods, and obserued it twenty Ages, that is sixe hundred yeeeres (for an Age is finished in thirtie yeeeres.) They had a little vessell prepared able to endure the tempests of the Sea, which two men might easily steere. They put into six months victuals for two men: bringing the men aboard, they commanded them to direct their vessell towards the South according to the answere of the Oracle: and told them that they should come to a goodly Iland and courteous people, that liued happily. And by that meanes, if they safely arriued in the Iland their Countrey should bee in peace and prosperity sixe hundred yeeeres. But if, being terrified through the length of the Sea they should retorne backe, they should bring, as impious and debauched perlous, great miseries to all their Nation. They report that the Ethiopians feasted diuers dayes by the Sea-side, and kept their holies, wishing them a lucky Voyage, and that the accustomed expiation were accomplished. After foure moneths sayle and many a storme, they were carried to an Iland of round forme, five thousand furlongs in compasse. When they drew neere to the Iland, some of the Inhabitants sent forth a Boat to meete them. Others running to them wondred at these new come strangers: and entertayned them very kindly and courteously: imparting to them such things as they had.

Iambulus twice taken.

Jambuli insula.

Inhabitants described.
as So doethe Nairos now.

Clouen
tongues.
Liers Em-
bleme.

Temperate Aire.
Homer.

This Reed is a just descriptio of Maiz, or Indian Wheate.

Their Letters.

China forme of lines in writ-ting.
Common women.

Wondrous creatures.

The men of this Iland are not like to ours, either in their bodies or manners, yet all haue the same forme, but they exceed vs foure Cubits in stature. They wind their bones this way and that way as they please, like sinewes. Their bodies are stronger and nimbler then ours. For if they haue taken any thing into their hands, no man can pull it out of their fingers. They haue no haire, except on their head, eye-browes, eye-lids, and chinne: on the other parts of their bodies they are so smooth, that there doth not appeare the least downe. They are faire, comely, and haue well shaped bodies, the holes of their eares are much wider then ours, also their tongue differs from vs. For their tongue hath somewhat peculiar by Nature or Art. Nature hath giuen them a clouen tongue, which is diuided in the bottome, so that it seemes double from the root. So they vse a diuers speech: and doe not only speake with the voice of men, but imitate the singing of Birds. But that which seemes most notable, they speake at one time perfittly with two men, both answering and discoursing. For with one part of their tongue they speake to one, and with the other to the other. The aire is very cleere all the yeere long, as the Poet hath written, That the Peare doth ripen vpon the Peare, and the Apple vpon the Apple, and the Grape vpon the Grape, and the fig vpon the fig. Also they say the day and night are alwayes equall. About noone, when the Sunne is ouer their heads it maketh no shadow. They liue according to their kindreds and societies: which yet exceed not foure hundred. They dwell in Medowes, the earth bringing forth plentifully fruits freely without any tillage. For the goodnesse of the Iland and temperature of the ayre make the earth of it owne accord wonderfull fertill.

There grow many Reeds, bearing plentiful fruit like to a white Vetch; when they haue gathered these, they steepe them in water, till each of them be swolne to the quantity of a Doves Egge. Afterwards of these beaten they make bread, of a wonderfull sweetnesse. There are also in that Iland great Springs of water, whereof some flow forth very hot for the vse of Baths, and curing Diseases; and some are cold, very sweet and wholesome. They respect all kind of Learning, especially Astrologie. They vse Letters whereof they haue eight and twentie, according to the value of signification, yet but seuen Characters: each whereof is varied foure wayes. They liue very long, namely one hundred and fifty yeeeres, and for the most part without any sicknesse. If any haue a Feuer or be sicke in his bodie, they enforce him to dye according to their Law. They write not by the side, as we doe, but from the top in a straight line to the bottome. They haue a custome to liue to a certaine age, which being finished, they diuersly of their owne accord kill themselves. They haue a double plant: vpon which whosoeuer lyeth downe is brought into a sweet sleepe and dyeth. The women marry not, but are common to all. In like manner the Males are brought vp, and common to all. They often take away the children from the Mothers, that they might not know them, whereby it commeth to passe, that there is no ambition amongst them, or factious affection, but they liue peaceably without iarring.

There are small creature in the Iland, whose blood is of an admirable nature and vertue. Their bodies are round, and like to Tortoises, two streakes crossing one another on the middle of them: in the extremity of each of which is an eare and an eye: so that they see with foure eyes, and heare with so many eares: they haue but one belly wherein they conuey that which they eate. They haue many feet round about, wherewith they goe both wayes. The blood of this beast is affirmed to be of a wonderfull efficacie. For any bodie cut with gashes, while it breathes, sprinkled with this blood presently cleaues together. And in like manner, if a hand bee cut off, or any other member, while life lasts, the parts will bee ioyned together, if it bee applied to the wound while it is fresh. Euery Family nourisheth great Birds of a diuers nature, wherewith they trie what their sonnes will be. For setting their children on these Fowles, if they be not affrighted while they are carried through the Aire, they bring them vp, but if they faint through feare or cowardlinesse, they cast them downe as vnworthy to liue any longer, and vnprofitable for any exercise.

The eldest of euery Family, as King commands the rest, who all obey him. When hee is one hun-hundred and fiftie yeeres old, they take away his life according to their Law: and the eldest next him takes the Principality. The Sea wherewith the Iland is enuironed is very tempestuous, and causeth great waues, the water is fresh. The Bears and many starres which appeare to vs are not seene of them. There are seuen Ilands of the like greatnesse, like distance betweene, and of the same people and Lawes. Although the earth doth bring forth food of it owne accord abundantly for all, yet they vse it moderately. They desire plaine dishes, seeking only nourishment: they eate their flesh roasted and boiled: they reiect the Cookes art, and all kind of sawces as vnprofitable. They reuerence the Gods, and that which containeth all things, and the Sunne, and the other heauenly Creatures. They take fishes and Birds of diuers sorts. There grow of their owne accord fruitfull Trees, Oliues, and Vines, from which they draw great plentie of Oile and Wine. The Iland produceth great Serpents, but harmelesse: whose flesh they eate, which is extraordinary sweet. They make their clothes of soft and shining downe, taken out of the midst of Canes: wherewith their Purple garments died with Sea Oysters are made. There are many kinds of creatures and such as will hardly be beleued: they obserue a certaine order of life, and eat but of one kind of meat in a day; for one day they eate fish, on another Birds, and then beafts; sometimes they feed only of oile. They are addicted to diuers exercises: some serue, some fish, others exercise their Trades, others are busied about other necessarie affaires. Some (except the old men) minister in common, or serue one another by turnes. On their Holies and Feast dayes they sing Hymnes in commendation of their Gods, and chiefly of the Sunne, to whom they dedicate themselues and their Iland. They burie their dead on the shore, heaping sand vpon the carkasse when the Sea flowes, that with the flowing and increasing of the water, the place may be made greater. They report that the Reeds from which they gather fruit, increase and decrease according to the Moone. The sweet and wholsome water retaines the heate of the Fountaines, vnlesse it be mingled with cold water or wine.

Some truths of the Countrey.

Iambulus and he which came with him tarried in the Iland seuen yeeres, and at length were forced to depart at their wils, as wicked persons, and accustomed to euill conditions. Therefore preparing their Boat and victualling it, they were compelled to depart. In foure monethes they came to a King of India, through sandie and shallow places of the Sea. The other perished in a tempest: Iambulus was driuen into a certaine Village, and carried by the Inhabitants to the King into the Citie Palibothra farre distant from the Sea. The King loued Gracians, and greatly esteemed their Learning; hee gaue him many things, and first sent him safely into Persia, and then into Greece. Afterward Iambulus writ these things, and many things concerning India before vnknowne to others.

Iambulus his returne.

CHAP. IX.

Great ALEXANDERS Life, Acts, Peregrinations and Conquests briefly related.

King Alexander, as they report, deriued his Pedigree by the Father from Hercules, by the mother from Aacus; from the one descended his Father Philip, and from the other his Mother Olympia. Shee the first night of her Nuptials dreamed that she saw Lightning enter into her Wombe, and thence a great flame presently kindled. Philip also not long after seemed in his sleepe to seale his wiues belly, the Seale engrauen with a Lion. By these Aristander the Diuiner foretold that shee was with childe, because a Seale vseth not to be set on emptie things: also that shee should bring forth a child, who should haue the nature and spirit of a Lion. But when a while after Philip in the night saw through a cranie of the doore a Dragon lying by her, it abated his loue to her, fearing Magicall Charmes, or the familiaritie of some Deitie. Notwithstanding Olympias counselled Alexander that he would assume a minde worthy of his father. Others say, that shee said Alexander would make her (by challenging to bee Iupiters sonne) hatefull to Inno. On the Ides of August she was deliuered of Alexander, who although he were of a goodly feature, yet he bowed his necke somewhat to the left side, and a certaine whitenesse mixed with red beautified his face. Also such an odour issued both out of his mouth, and members, that his inner clothes did breath forth a wonderfull fragrant sauour. Which as it perhaps proceeded out of the temperature of his hot bodie, so surely he was by his naturall hotnesse giuen to Wine and anger. While he was young, he refrained himselfe from pleasures more then be seemed one of his yeeres, manifesting his couragious minde, who when his equals in yeeres asked, if he would willingly contend in the Olympian Games: willingly, saith he, if I were to contend with Kings. He greatly excelled in swiftnesse of foot. Hee alwayes meditated vpon some great and extraordinary thing, that he might purchase fame. Therefore the Persian Ambassadors not a little maruelled at the courage of the youngman: seeing he questioned no triuiall, or childish thing of them, but the situation

Alexanders Pedigree.

His birth.

His fragranie.

His youthfull magnanimitie.

tion of Countries and dangers of passages, and power of the King of Persia. He did seeme to bee angry at his Fathers victories; What said he, will my Father leaue for me to doe, if hee atchieue all noble exploits?

Bucephalus.

About those times, Philip bought Bucephalus for thirtie three Talents a very fierce Horse; stomackfull, vnmanaged, and abiding no Rider. Now when hee would suffer none to backe him, Alexander was angry with them, who could not through feare or ignorance tame the Horse, and offered himselfe to breake him. To whom his Father, if thou dost not, for thy boasting, what punishment wilt thou haue? then he answered, I will pay for the Horse: Philip smiling let the price: He seeing him moued with his shadow, turned his head to the Sunne; then letting goe his Cloke, laying hold with his hands vpon his mane, mounted him, still blowing and trampling the sands vnder his feet. Letting goe the reines, and crying out aloud, hee spurred him and made him runne. Then holding in the reines hee easily turned him. While the people shouted, his Father weeping for ioy, kissed him when he alighted, saying my Sonne, Macedonia cannot containe thee, thou must seeke a Kingdome competent. Afterward Philip noting the disposition of Alexander, that hee would rather bee induced to vertue by gentlenesse then rough dealing committed him to Aristotle to be instructed in the precepts of Philosophie. Wherein and in Physicke he so profited, that sometimes he helped his sicke friends. He learned Homers Iliads of Aristotle: calling it the Souldiers Knap-sacke, laying it with his Dagger alwayes vnder his Pillow.

His arts.

His first martial acts.

When he was seuentene yeeres old, his Father warring against the Byzantines, hee swayed the Scepter of Macedon. And when the Megarians rebelled, he discomfited them in battle, and expelling the Barbarians, called their Citie Alexandropolis. Hee first also broke through against the sacred band of the Thebans. Wherefore the Macedonians called him King; and Philip Emperour.

Isthmus neere Corinth.

Diogenes, Delphos.

His expedition against the Persians.

Citus saueh his life. His victorie.

Not long after Philip being slaine, Alexander being twentie yeeres old beganne to reigne, the Barbarians reuolting, many supposed that they were to bee appeased with clemencie and mildnesse. Then Alexander, we must not (saith he) maintayne our Dominions with gentlenesse, but force and magnanimitie, lest if we seeme to abate of our loftie courage, we be scorned of others. And gathering his troupes together, he repressed the mutinie of the Barbarians, chased away the King of the Triballi, ouerthrew the Thebans, sacked the Citie; and leuelled it to the ground. He sold thirtie thousand of the Citizens: fixe thousand that remained kild themselves. In the meane while, the Gracians hearing that the Persians would shortly inuade them, elected Alexander to be their Leader. Who as soone as hee came to Isthmos, where their Generall Parliament was assembled, went to Diogenes, whom hee found sitting in the Sunne. Then courteously saluting him, he demanded if he wanted any thing? But he answered only this, stand aside out of the Sunne. Alexander admiring the constancie of the man, departing said, if I were not Alexander, I would be Diogenes. Thence he went to Delphos, to consult with the Oracle about his expedition. It was an vnluckie day wherein it was not lawfull to giue Oracles. Alexander notwithstanding, going in haste to the Temple, began almost by force to draw along the Priest of the Oracle with him. My Sonne, said the Priest, thou art vnconquerable. Hee being ioyfull at these words said, I haue no need of any other Oracle. And returning to the Campe, where abode the Army of thirtie thousand foot-men, and five thousand horsemen, hee did not goe aboard the ship before he had distributed all his Chattels, Lands, and Lordships amongst his friends. He to Perdiccas asking, what will you leaue for your selfe? answered, only Hope.

Hauiing sailed ouer the Hellepont, he went to Ilium. And then visited Achilles Sepulchre, and adorned his Statue with Garlands. Saying, O thou most happie, who hadst so faithfull a companion, liuing; and dead, so great a Poet to renoume thee.

In the meane while, the Chieftaines of Darius, the King of Persia hastening to passe ouer Granicus with a great power, Alex. met them at the banks of the same Riuer: and getting the higher ground, as soone as he had marshalled his bands, ioyned battle with the Barbarians. The fight waxing hot on both sides, Rhesaces & Spithridates, Darius his Captains, onewith a Speare, the other with a Battle-axe, with a full careere encountred Alexander, who was easie to be known by reason of his Target, and the Plume on his Helmet, being a great bush of white feathers. Auoyding nimble the one, he strooke Rhesaces with his Speare and with his Sword made at the other, who without delay, tooke away his Helmet, with his Battle-axe to his haire, but while he lifted vp his hand for another blow, he was strooke through with a Lance by Cytus. Alexander hauiing vanquished the Commanders, put the rest to flight. In which flight twentie thousand of the Barbarians (two thousand Horsemen) were slaine. But Alexander lacked not about thirtie foure Souldiers.

Hauiing gotten this victorie, he tooke the strong Citie Sardis, with other Townes, Miletus and Halicarnassus. Hauiing determined to try the vphot with King Darius, if he would ioine battle with him, he tooke Phenicia and Cilicia. From thence marching to Pamphilia, he subdued the Pisidians and Phrygians. After taking Gordium, where had beene of old King Midæ his Pallace, he ouercame the Paphlagonians, and Cappadocians. But King Darius relying on the number of his forces forces (for he had an Army of sixe hundred thousand) remooued his Campe from Susis. His Diuiners had flattered him in the Interpretation of a Dreame of the shining of Alexanders Armie, and Alexander ministring to him, who entring into Belus his Temple, was taken out of his sight. He thought basely of him also for staying so long in Calicia. There was Alexander detained in great danger of his life, hauing washed himselfe in a cold Riuer, and fallen into a sudden sicknesse. When other Physicans gaue him ouer, Philip an Acarnanian promised to recover him in a short space: and although there came a Letter from Parmenio, warning him to take heed of Phlips Treason, who was corrupted by King Darius; yet he dranke vp the potion boldly, and with all deliuered the Letter to Philip. He read it very heauily, but bad Alexander to be of good cheere.

10 In the meane time, while the potion entred into his bowels, the King lay almost dead. But such was the efficacie of the medicine, that he presently recouered his former health.

Darius approaching, Alexander getting the higher ground, ordered his battell, and after a great slaughter put the Barbarians to flight: ten thousand were slaine, and many more taken. Alexander himselfe was wounded. Alexander got the Tent, Money, rich Staffe, Chariot, and Bow of Darius, all adorned with Gold. Moreover, Darius his Mother, Wife, and two Daughters Virgins were taken with the rest. To whom hee said, compassionating their fortune, seeing them weeping and lamenting, that Darius was aliue, and that they should haue no hurt. And indeed (herein was Alexander King of himselfe) they suffered no hardship or dishonor, but liued vnscene of any, as it were in sacred Cloysters, or Virginal Closets. Alexander did so refraine from them and all others, that he vsed to say in ieast, that the Persian Damsels were eye-sores. He was also very temperate in his diet, for betweene euery cup, hee accustomed to spend a long time in discourse.

20 Hauing diuided the spoyles, his next Exploit was the dominion of the Sea, and ouercomming Cyprus, he subdued all Phenicia, except Tyre, which hee besieged seuen monethes with Mounts, Engines, and two hundred Gallies, and at length after diuers skirmishes tooke it by assault. But when he had added Gaza and Egypt to his Conquests, he resolved to visit the Temple of Iupiter Ammon. A very difficult Iourney and dreadfull, by reason of the want of water, and store of sands: yet his good fortune preuayled, shewes making the sands firmer, and Crowes guiding him, he came thither without any harme; Whereas Cambyses his Armie had beene buried in the sands. Entring the Temple he saluted the chiefe of them, who answered, All haile, O Sonne of Iupiter, which he receiued so ioyfully, that euer after hee carried himselfe more haughtily. In Egypt hee founded Alexandria a Greeke Colonie.

30 After this the Ambassadors of the King of Persia came to him with Letters, proffering ten thousand Talents, and all Mesopotamia, and his Daughter in marriage, and Darius himselfe to become his friend and associate, if he would cease from Warre: such conditions, that if I were Alexander, said Parmenio, I would accept them: so would I said Alexander, if I were Parmenio. He had them tell Darius, that he should receiue all courtesie of the Grecians, if he would come to them, if he would not, let him know that we, wil he, nill he, wil come to him speedily. Then going out of Egypt into Phenicia, he took all the Country between Euphrates, and the second time remooued his Campe against Darius. And now the Armies came in fight each of other; wherein Darius had a Million of men. The battle was fought not at Arbela, but at Gausancla. The Bactrian Horsemen running vpon the Macedonians prouoked Alex. to fight, who encouraged his men and praying to Iupiter that he would giue him aide and victory, an Eagle is reported to haue been shewed him by Aristander his Diuiner flying aboue him ouer his head, and thence directing her flight against the Persians, which filled the Macedonians with hopes and cheerefull courage. Forcible was the impression, and Alexander pierced into the midst of the enemies Campe, where beholding Darius well guarded in the midst of his troupes, he gaue a terrible assault and routed them, many beeing slaine. Darius was of a tall stature, comely face, Kingly countenance, and sat aloft in a Chariot couered with Gold, which Darius leauing, leaped vpon a barren mare, seeking to saue his life by flight. The dignitie of this victory altogether ouerthrew the Persian Empire, and made Alexander King of Asia. Then he tooke Babylon and Susis, the royall Citie where he found fortie thousand Talents of siluer, with royall household-stuffe, and of Hermionike Purple kept one hundred and ninety yeeres still fresh to the value of fise thousand Talents.

40 Now did Alexander aduance into Persia, whither Darius had fled. There he found as much siluer as before in Susis, and as much royall furniture and goods as laded ten thousand yokes of Mules, and fise thousand Camels. Hee tarried foure moneths in his wintering Lodgings. And, as the report is, when he feasted vnder the golden rooffe of the Kings Hall, he said, That he had obtained the fruit of his labours, seeing he so magnificently banqueted in the Palace of proud Xerxes. Thais an Athenian, a beautifull Scrumper, being present; enticed the King with her flatteries, and said, I were the happiest woman of Greece, if I might in this our mirth fire Xerxes Pallace, who sometime burnt my Athens. The King smiling, the Harlot fired the House. The King bewitched with wine and her allurements, the rest furthering the flame, suffered such a goodly building to be consumed to ashes. Alexander was naturally munificent, and kept a kinde of stately magnificence in giuing: which he did illustrate with infinite testimonies of his bountie, lesse esteeming those

Second battle:
Alexanders vi-Story.

His temperance.

Cyprus.
Tyrus.

Ammons oracle

Alexandria
builded.

Embassage from Darius.

The third battell with the Persians, and second with Darius.

Alexanders
victorie.

Babylon taken;
Suse.

Persopolis burden

Darius slaine by treason of his owne.

Hyrcania subdued.

Scythian expedition.

Amazonian tale

Philotas and Clitus slaine.

Bucephalus.

those that refused then these that craved. About this time Darius had now the third time gathered an Army. Alexander in eleven dayes passed with great Iournies 3200. furlongs, conducting his Armie through rough places, that wanted water, so that the whole Armie well neere languished with thirst: a certaine common Souldier brought a Helmet full of water to Alexander; who looking vpon all of them panting for beate and thirst, gaue it him againe vntouched: thinking it vnfitting that he alone should cherish himselfe, and the others faint; whose continencie the Souldiers admiring, resolved to vndergoe any trouble, as long as they followed such a Leader. Then after a few dayes, the Armie of King Darius being gathered together, did flee as soone as they came in sight of the Macedonians. The Persians being thus discomfited, the Macedonians pursuing them, found King Darius in his Chariot stricken through with many wounds, and almost dead, speaking some few things. But when Alexander came thither by chance, hee tooke very bitterly his ignoble death, and casting his coate vpon his carcasie, and adding the Royall Ensignes, he gaue charge to carrie it honourably to his Mother. Bessus the Murtherer, Alexander caused to be tied to two trees brought by force together, which rent him in funder.

Darius being ouerthrowne, he brought into his subiection Hyrcania, and all the Cities adioyning to the Caspian Sea. After going into Parthia, hee attired himselfe in a habit, being a meane betweene a Persian and a Mede, that he might accustome the Macedonians the more willingly to adore him.

Passing ouer the Riuer Orexartes, which he thought to be Tanais, hee warred on the Scythians, and chased them one hundred furlongs. Thither Clitarchus, Polycritus, Onesicritus, Antigenes and Hister say, the Amazon came to him; which Chares, Isangelus, Ptolemas, Anticlides, Philon, Philippus, Hecateus, Philippus Chalcidensis, and Duris the Samian, say was a deuised Fable: and this appeareth to be true by Alexander himselfe, who writing to Antipater an exact Relation of all things, mentions the Scythian Kings offer of his Daughter in marriage, but hath nothing at all of the Amazon. It is said that Lyfimachus, when hee heard Onesicritus reading that Relation, smiled and said, Where was I then?

At length beholding the beautie and noble demeanour of Roxanes, Darius his Daughter, hee married her, that so he might perpetually tie the Barbarians to him; whom hee did also so reuerence, that he did not but solemnely enter in to her. But when hee proceeded to bring the rest of Asia to his obedience, he caused Philotas Parmenio his sonne a man of eminent place to be slaine. Also a little while after being drunke, hee stricke Clitus through with a Lance, a man of a noble courage, which had freed him from Spathridates Battle-axe: yet he presently repented, and snatching the Lance out of Clitus his wound, would haue turned it into himselfe; but was restrained by the standers by, and had died with griefe, but that Aristander the Diuiner, and the Philosophers Callisthenes and Anaxarchus perswaded him to patience. Callisthenes was as ill repaid as Clitus, which before we haue mentioned.

After this, Alexander sets forth towards India, and there perceiuing his Army by reason of the greatnesse of pillage to bee slow and dull, hee burned vpon the baggage of the Macedonian Campe. After which he became an inexorable and seuerer punisher of faults, and a terrour to his owne. Hee killed Menander, one of his greatest Familiars for neglecting his charge: And slue Orsodates hauing rebelled with his owne hands. He carried Babylonians (or Chaldeans) with him, whom hee vsed in superstitious expiations.

Neere the Riuer Oxus, Proxenus found a Fountayne of Oyle and fat liquor, resembling Oyle in colour and taste, whereas that Region knoweth not Oliues. This Alexander tooke as a diuine Miracle in his fauour. The Diuiners tooke it for a token of a difficult but glorious Warre. Hee tooke two strong Rockes in his way, which seemed impregnable. When the Macedonians refused to passe thorow the Riuer to lay siege to Nysa, hee tooke his shield and was readie to swimme ouer himselfe. But their Embassage for peace staid him. To Taxiles an Indian King, hee gaue a thousand Talents of siluer.

After that he warred vpon Porus King of a great part of India (some thinke Rahanni to be his Successour, and those parts which the Reisboots now hold in the parts, which whiles they please, acknowledge the Mogoll, to haue been subiect to him.) Hydaspes ranne betwixt both their Tents, and Porus by his Elephants (furnished also with twentie thousand foot, and two thousand horse) hindered the passage of Alexander, who therefore raised continuall alarmes, noyles and tumults in his Tents, and got ouer the Riuer with great difficultie, tooke the Indian Charets, and foure hundred of their Horsemen. In eight houres fight Porus lost the field and himselfe. Hee was foure Cubits and a handbreadth high, and rode vpon an Elephant, which fought valiantly for his Rider: and finding himselfe spent, kneeled downe gently to preuent his fall. Alexander asked his Captiue Porus what he would haue done if he had taken him: and Porus answered that he would haue done that which should haue becomed the Maiestie of either of them: because this fauoured of no barbarousnesse, he restored him to his Kingdome, adding a Region of a free State there subdued, in which were fifteene Nations and 5000. Cities, besides Villages. In this battle with Porus, or soone after it Bucephalus died, being thirtie yeeres old: for whose death Alexander did so grieue, that hee built a Citie vpon Hydaspes, calling it by his name, as another also to his

Dogge

Dogge Peritas. The Souldiers now being wearie of the trouble of daily warre, when they vnderstood that he determined to goe to the inmost parts of India, refused to passe over Ganges. For they heard that Ganges was thirty two furlongs broad and a hundred fathome deepe, and the bankes covered with troupes of Horsemen, Elephants and Footmen; viz. 80000. Horsemen, 200000. Footmen, 8000. Charets, and 6000. Elephants trained to the warres, by the Gaudaritan and Persian Kings. Wherefore Alexander seeing his desires could not obtaine their wished end, kept himselfe very sorrowfull in his Tent, and threatened that they should receive no recompense for that they had done, vnlesse they would passe over Ganges: at length ouercome by the entreaties and teares of his Souldiers, he desisted from his intended Iourney. But longing to see the Ocean, gathering ships together he came thither by the Rivers. Where taking many Cities he was almost slaine by the Malli, valiant men of India. For when hee had leapt into the Citie from the wall (which he first ascended) he was oppressed with such a multitude of the Barbarians, that vnlesse the Macedonians had speedily succoured him being grievously wounded with an Arrow and a blow with a Club vpon the necke, here he had in his rashnesse finished his dayes. But being freed from the perill of death, he ouerthrew Cities and many places, seven monethes being so spent. At last hee came to the Ocean with his Armie. Then contemplating the shoares, and finishing his holies, he intreated the Gods that no man euer after should goe beyond his bounds: he also had Nearchus tarrie about India, with a Navy. He went on foot to Orchus. But he was so distressed with the barrennesse of the Countrey, heate and diseases, that of a 120000. Footmen, and 15000. Horsemen, scarcely the fourth part liued. After sixtie dayes hee came to Gedrosia, where being honourably entertained by the Kings and Officers which had prepared against his comming, hee forgot all his passed troubles: so that he spent his time day and night in drinking, banqueting, singing and dalliance with women. After this Nearchus returning, presently he sailed downe Euphrates: and passing over Arabia and Lybia, purposed to goe to Hercules Pillars by the Mediterranean Sea. But because his armie was very impatient; being consulted by the tediousnesse of the way, hauing sent backe Nearchus to defend the Sea coast, he returned into Persia. And bestowing his money among all his women (for that was the Kings custome, as often as they entered Persia) he celebrated the Nuptials of his companions at Susa. He also married Statyra the other daughter of Darius. Making then a costly banquet to his companions, he had 9000. Guests, and gaue every one of them a golden cup. He opened the Sepulchre of Cyrus, whose Epitaph was this, Whosoever thou art, and whence soeuer thou comest (for I knew thou wilt come) I am Cyrus which was the Empire to the Persians. Ennie me not this little earth, which coners my body. Calmus also here burned himselfe, hauing taken familiar leaue of all; and told the King he would shortly see him againe at Babylon. He also paid the debts of his souldiers, which came to 10000. talents, lacking onely 130. He found 30000. Persian youths which hee had giuen order to be trained and instructed of manly growth and comely presence, which gaue plausible testimonies of their admirable actiuitie. This caused emulation to the Macedonians, which murmuring, he chose his guard of the Persians. Whereupon the Macedonians being grieved went to him, intreating him not to reject them as vnprofitable; for they did confesse that they had beene ingratefull, and desired pardon. At length Alexander pittying their teares and habit, sent them away abundantly rewarded with gifts. He entertained others according to their dignity. But when he went toward Ecbatana of Media, he gaue himselfe to plaies and spectacles, and about that time a feuer tooke away Ephestion, whose losse hee tooke so to heart that nothing could please him. Therefore to appease his griefe, he went to warre as to a man hunting: And so raced out all the Nation of the Cossai, as it were offering them in sacrifice to Ephestio his ghost. Those things being finished, he was admonished by some of the Chaldeans, that hee should not come to Babylon. But he went notwithstanding, where he was againe troubled with many Diuiners, and not onely suspected all his seruants but all his gods and deities. At length to recreate himselfe he went a little into a bathe, where he began exceedingly to sweate: And being carried to bed, after a few daies the Feuer increasing, hee gaue directions to his Princes concerning the Empire, and died. But before his body was buried, it lay a great while in hot places. And seeing it remained sound and vncorrupted, by this all suspicion of poison was taken away. We will end this Relation of Alexander with Nearchus his Voyage by him set forth.

HONDIVS his Map of Alexanders Expedition.

The Voyage of NEARCHVS and his Fleet set forth by ALEXANDER the Great, from the Riuer Indus to the bottomé of the Persian Gulfe.

IN this History of Voyages I thinke it not a misse to giue some accounts briefly of the Fleete which Alexander set forth from Indus to the Persian Gulfe, commanded by Nearchus, gathered out of the eighth Booke of Arrianus, who had taken it out of Nearchus his owne discourse thereof. I had the whole Relation at large by me translated, as those also of Arrianus his sailing about both the Erythrean and Euxine Seas; but Time hath so altered the Names, ports and peoples, that I dare not giue you them at large. This briefly was thus:

Hydaspes, perhaps that which now is called Bhat.

Alexander provided his ships in Hydaspes (a Riuer which runneth into Indus) and manned them with Phenicians, Cypriots, Egyptians, men best skilled in Marine affaires. He chose also for Captains the Greek Islanders of Ionia and Hellepont, & diuers others; amongst the rest Nearchus which writ this Nauigation, of Cretan anceltry, an Amphipolitan by habitation, whom he made Generall of the Fleet. After things set in order, he sacrificed to the Gods of his Country and to such others as the Diuiners prescribed, to Neptune, Oceanus, the Sea Nymphes, and to the Riuer Hydaspes, and to Acesines, which floweth thereinto. He instituted also muscalle and gymnicall Games (prizes for maisteries) also, distributing the remainders of the sacrifices to the Armie. A hundred and 20000. souldiers followed Alexander, who himselfe went with the ships downe Hydaspes. He had 800. ships, some long, some of burthen. Being afraid to aduenture so long a Sea Voyage, as from Indus to the Persian Gulfe, lest his glorious lustre of victory and Fortune hitherto attending him might so be drowned; the Monson seruing (the Etesia then ceasing which there blew in Summer) he committed the Fleet to Nearchus, which put forth to Sea on the twentieth day of Boedromion, in the eleuenth yeere of King Alexanders reigne.

Riuer Sinra.

Nearchus sacrificed also before his departure, to Iupiter the Sauour, and likewise instituted Games; on that day of his departure he came to a great Riuer called Sinra, about 100 furlongs, and staid there two daies. On the third day hee came to another Riuer called Cannana thirty furlongs further, where the water began to be salt, and the tide ascended. Thence he sailed twenty furlongs to Coreatis within the Riuer. Mouing thence they saw the white frothy surge at the mouth of the Riuer, and in a ditch or channell made of five furlongs, he anchored his fleet when when the tyde came 150. furlongs, thence he came to the Ile Crotala, neere to the which are the Indian Arrabates. Thence he remoued; hauing mount Irus on the right hand, and the Ile Halitene on the left, to a Port which he called Alexanders Port, before which is Bubarta a small Island. There he staid foure and twenty daies, and gathered Sea Mice and Oysters wonderfull great. The winde ceasing, he went sixtie furlongs neere the Ile Doma, where they were forced to goe twenty furlongs within land for fresh water. Hauing passed 300. furlongs the next day, they came to the Region Saranga, and fetched water eight furlongs within land. Departing thence hee came to Sacalasis, and passing two rockes so neere that the ships edged on them as they passed by, after 300. furlongs he anchored in Morontoboris, a round, deepe and safe harbour with a narrow entrance, called the Womens Port. The next day he left an Island to Sea ward of him and yet so neere the shoare that the Sea seemed a Gut or narrow ditch. That day he sailed sixtie furlongs. On that shoare was a wood and shade Island. The next day he sailed thorow a narrow channell, the ebbe hauing left a great part dry, and hauing passed 120. furlongs he came to the mouth of the River Arabius, where is a great and safe harbour. They fetched water sixtie furlongs vp the River in a Lake. At the harbour is an Island full of Oysters and all sorts of fish. This River confineth India; the next Regions are possessed by the Orta; their first anchoring on the Orta-shoare was Pagali, hauing sailed 200. furlongs neere a craggie rocke. The next day 300. furlongs to Bacana: and because the shoare was rockie, hee was forced to anchor farre from land. In this way three ships were lost in a storme, but the persons were saved being neere the shoare.

20 He sailed thence two hundred furlongs to Comala: and there went on shoare, and set vp tents to refresh his people wearied with their long Navigation, and desiring to haue some rest. Here Leonnatus, to whom Alexander had giuen Commission for the Orta, ouerthrew them in a great battell and slew 6000. The weatherbeaten ships being repaired, and ten daies provisions being taken in, and those sailers which were weary of the Sea, being left with Leonnatus, some of his company supplying their roomes: the Fleete proceeded 500. furlongs, and anchored at the River Thomeros. The Inhabitants dwelt in small cottages, and wondered at the Naue as a strange Noueltie: they came to the shoare with lances of six cubits sharpened and burned at the ends, easily chased by those which were sent on shoare against them, which also tooke some, which had hard and sharpe nailes wherewith they killed fish, and cut softer wood (for they had no vse of Iron) the harder they cut with stones: their garments were beasts or fishes skins. Here Nearchus staid five dayes, and repaired his Naue. Proceeding three hundred furlongs he came to Malana, the vtmost border of the Orta; who for the most part dwell vp within the land and vse Indian attire and armes, but differ in language and customes. Nearchus had sailed now 1000. furlongs from Indus mouth to Arrhabius, and 1600. by the Orta. Now also their shadowes fell Southward, and at noone they had no shadow. The Starres also differed in their height and appearance. After the Orta are the Gedrosi, amongst whom Alexander found more difficulty then in all the rest of India. Nearchus hauing sailed 600. furlongs came to Bagisara, a conuenient harbour: the Towne Pasira is sixtie furlongs vp from the Sea. Next day he passed by a high overhanging Rocke, which runneth farre into the Sea: and digging Wells had store of water, but brackish: sailing other six hundred furlongs hee came to Calime where Cornina lieth one hundred furlongs into the Sea, an Island whole Inhabitants sent Nearchus sheepe, whose flesh tasted like Sea-fowles, they being fed with fishes, there being no grasse there. Next day they sailed two hundred furlongs to Carbis, the towne Cysa was thirty furlongs from Sea. Here were small Fisher-boates, but the Fishermen at sight of the Fleete ran away. He passed next a high and craggy Cape, reaching one hundred and fifty furlongs into the Sea, vnto Mosarna a safe harbour. There he took Hydraces a Gedrosian Pilot for Carmania. The way from hence to the Persian gulfe is not so euill as the former.

Hauing sailed 750. furlongs, he came to the Balomon shoare, and after 400. furlongs to Barna, a towne where were Gardens of Myrtle and diuers flowers, culture of trees, and more ciuilitie of the men. 400. furlongs further he came to Dendrobasa, where they fish in small Boats, not rowing like the Greekes, but like diggers beating the waters on both sides. After 800. furlongs he came to Cyza a desert shore, and five hundred furlongs from thence to the borders of the Ichthyophagi or Fish-eaters. They invaded the Towne to get Corne which now failed them; but found little, except meale of roasted fishes, of which they make Bread. Thence he went to Bagia a rocke sacred to the Sunne, thence to Talmena a good port, 1000. furlongs from Bagia. Thence to Cana-fis a desert Cite 400. furlongs thence, 750. furlongs to Mount Canate: thence 800. furlongs to Tay; thence to Dagasira 300. furlongs, thence 1300. furlongs to the vtmost confines of the Ichthyophagi, in great want of prouision: Here was a Cape running farre into the Sea. The coast of the Ichthyophagi is about 10000. furlongs, where all feede on fish, yet are there few fishermen, but the Ebbe leaues the fish on shoare, some haue nets which reach two furlongs, made of Palme-tree leaues. The softer fish they eat raw: the greater and harder they roast in the Sunne, and then beate them into powder and make a kinde of bread thereof, some sprinkle the powder with wheate meale. Their Beasts haue no other foode, for there is no grasse. There is store of Crabs, Oysters, and shel-fish; Salt also and Oyle produced by the soile it selfe: some sowe a little Corne. Their houses are made of Whales bones. The Whales casting much water into the aire, Ile Crotala.

Ile Halitene.
Ile Bubarta.

Ile Doma.
Saranga.
Sacalasis.
Morontoboris.

End of India.
The Orta.

All their sailing is with Oares and by shoare.
* Was not this age thinke you like to saile to Peru or Hispaniola?
Ships a rarity.

The Gedrosi.

The Ichthyophagi.

Madners of the Ichthyophagi.

Fish-e.d beasts.

Whales.

How differs this from a Greenland
Whale-voiage?

The Carmani.

Persian gulfe:
he calls it also thered Sea.

Armozia, now
Ormus.

A King worthy of good Sea-service.

Legend of Erythrus drawne from Edom in the Arabick Gulfe to this Persian, such is the effect of Legends and superstitious traditions.

Beginning of the Persians.

Beginning of the Susians.

Euphrates and Babylonians.

the people wondred what it was, and hearing that they were fishes, the Oares fell out of their hands with feare: But after being hartened, the ships went neere together, and with great shouts and noise of Oares and sound of Trumpets feared the Whales, and made them sinke into the deepe. The prodigious tales of the Ile Nosala sacred to the Sunne, on which, if any went ashore he should neuer be scene after, Nearchus proued false by his owne experiment: as also another tale went thereof that a Nymph there dwelt, which lay with men that came thither, and after turned them into fishes.

After he was come to Carmania, he anchored before a Cape where the Persian gulfe goeth inward & then sailed no longer to the West, but betwixt the West and North, for most Northerly. Being come to Padichorus he sailed thence 800. furl. to the rock Maceta, of a daies sailing, whence Cinamon and Spices are carried to the Assyrians. After 700. furl. he came to Neapotannus and 100. furl. further to the Riuer Anenus; the Region is called Armozia, cultivated and fertile except of Oliues. Here they went ashore desirous to rest from their labour, and there found a Græcian which told them that Alexanders Campe was not farre off, five daies iourney from the Sea. Here Nearchus repaired his Nauie, and meane while sent to the King, & after went himselfe, he and his by their changed weatherbeaten countenances and growne haire, being not knowne by those whom Alexander had sent to him. Some had made Alexander belecue his Fleet was lost, which finding otherwile, hee wept for ioy, swearing by the Grecian Iupiter, and by the Lybian Ammon, that he more ioyed in those tidings then in the Empire of all Asia. After this hee instituted Muscicall and Gymnicke Games, and pompe to Iupiter Servator, to Hercules, to Apollo the chaser away of euill, and to Nep- 20 tune, with the other Sea-Gods. Especially Nearchus was eminent and glorious, the whole army casting flowers and garlands on him.

Alexander after this would haue sent another to bring the Fleet to Susa, which Nearchus enuying to any other, intreated that the whole glory might be entite to himselfe, and was sent backe. After sacrifice to Iupiter the sauior, Nearchus exhibited a Gymnicke game (for trying of matteries, which we call prizes) and set saile. He passed by a small land called Organa, and another lesse called Oaracta, 300. furlongs from the place whence he set forth, where were many Vines, Palmes, and Fruits. Here they said was the Sepulcher of Erythrus, or King Red, which gaue name to this red Sea. The land was 800. furlongs long, of which hauing sailed two hundred, he saw another land forty furlongs long sacred to Neptune, and reported to be inaccessible. 30
At their departing three ships sticke fast by reason of the Tide, which at the next floud were afloate againe. After forty furlongs sailing hee anchored in another land 300. furlongs from the Continent; thence to the Ile Pylora, in which is Dodon a towne which hath nothing but fish and water. After 300. furlongs sailing, he came to a Cape running farre into the Sea, thence 300. furlongs to the Ile Cataa sacred to Mercury and Venus, whither dedicated Goates and Sheepe are yeerely sent which there grew wilde. Hitherto the Carmani extend about 3700. furlongs by the shoare. These liue like the Persians their neighbours. Thence Nearchus sailed to the Ile Caicandros, forty furlongs, and thence to an inhabited land where Pearles are found, fifty f. Thence to Mount Ochus, and thence to Apostane, 450. f. and after 400. f. to a Bay celebrated with many Villages; thence 600. f. to the mouth of the Riuer Oreon: thence 800. f. to Riuer Sitacus. All this 40 course was on the Persian shoare, sheliue for the most part and fenny. Thither Alexander had sent provision of Corne, and they staid one and twenty daies to refresh themselves, and repaire their Nauie. Sailing thence 750. f. he came to Hieratis by the Riuer Heratemis, the next day to the Riuer Padargus, where is a fertile place called Mesambria a peninsula: 200. furlongs to Tarnus to the great Riuer, aboue whose entrance 200. furlongs are the Persian Kings Palaces. In this way he saw a Whale dead fifty cubits long, with Oysters growing on the skin, Dolphins also bigger then those in our Seas. He proceeded 200. furlongs to the Riuer Rhogenis fifty furlongs to the Riuer Brizana: thence to Arofis the biggest Riuer in all his course, the end of the Persian borders, that shoare containing 4400. furlongs. There begin the Susians, and within land the Uzians, as the Mardi to the Persians, and the Cossai to the Medes. 50

Hauing sailed on the Susian shoare 500. furlongs, he came to Cataderbis, a fishie Lake, neere which is the Ile Margastana; then he passed shoals which scarcely admitted ships; single, discerned by stakes or poles purposely fixed there, the mirie ground taking a man vp to the waste. In such way we sailed 500. furlongs. Thereafter in a night and day he sailed 900. f. to the mouth of Euphrates, neere Diridotis a Village of the Babylonians, a Mart for the Spices of Arabia. From thence to Babylon, Nearchus saith, are 3300. f. Nearchus hearing that Alexander was going to Susa, sailed backe toward Pasitigris, that sailing vp the streame he might meete him, hauing the Susians on the left hand, and the Lake into which Tigris runneth 600. f. from the Riuer it selfe, at Aginus a towne of the Susians. Hauing sailed 150. f. he staid till the returne of his Messengers from the King. At last both armies were ioined with incredible ioy, and Alexander exhibited diuers kinds 60 of game with sacrifices, & much honour was done to Nearchus; Alexander also crowned him and Leonnatus with a crown of gold. Alexander sent others on the right hand to discover all the coasts of Arabia. And thus Europe must acknowledge Alexander the chiefe Easterne discoverer, as the Roman armes first opened to vs the West. We will adde a little out of Ecclesiasticall writers.

CHAP. X.

The Travels of MUSÆVS, THEBÆVS and others mentioned by Saint AMBROSE *; of others also mentioned in the Ecclesiasticall Histories of EVSEBIUS, RUFFINVS, SOCRATES and SOZOMEN.

* Edit. Paris. 1614. This Treatise is in the Vatican, Florentine, and Millan Libraries attributed to Saint Ambrose. Others doubt whether that Father be the Author, or Palladius, &c. Cotton Trees or Shrubs. Serica is hereby is knowne to be far short of China, neere which Alexander neuer came Aromata. Muziris. a Perhaps the Maldiuas now.

MUSÆVS Bishop of the Dolens related to the Authour of the Treatise De Moribus Brachmanorum (supposed to be Saint Ambroses) that hee intending to goe into India to see the Brachmans, had trauelled thorow almost all the Region Serica, in which hee said there were Trees (which brought fourth not only leaues, but very fine wooll also, of which they make Garments called Serica; and that there was a memorable Pillar of stone thus inscribed; I Alexander came hitherto; and that hauing passed thorow many Countreyes, he came at last to Ariana neere the Riuer Indus, and by the intolerable heat wasinforced to returne into Europe, not hauing seene the Brachmans. He reported that he had heard of Thebæus a certaine Scholer which went into India to see and conferre with Indian Philosophers called Brachmans and Gymnosophists: but hee was there captiued. For shipping himselfe with certaine Merchants in the Red Sea, he first came to the Towne of the Adulites, or the Bay Adulicus, after that to the Promontory Aromata, and a Mart of the Troglodytes, and hence to places of the Assumites, and many dayes after to Muziris the Mart of all India on this side Ganges, and hauing stayed a while there, he passed ouer to the Ile Taprobane. This is gouerned by foure Princes, one of which is the chiefe, whom the others obey, and to him are subiect a thousand Islands, as he reported, of the Arabian and Persian Seas, and those which they call Mammolus *. The Island hath fise Riuers very great, the temperature such that at the same time the same Trees produced blossomes and fruits some greene, some ripe. The men liue on Fruits, Rice and Milke, and the chiefe men eate Mutton and Goats flesh on solemne dayes. He was taken as a Spie and kept fixe yeeres in Prison, but the Gouvernour which had so vsed a Roman Citizen, was by the Emperors command slayed. He reporteth true and false things blended, and amongst others of the Brachmans thus. They liue naked in the Regions adioyning to the Riuer Ganges; they haue no beasts, tillage, vse of Iron, nor any kinde of Instrument to doe any worke: they haue an excellent Aire and temperate Climate. They alway worship God, of whom they professe a distinct knowledge, both of his Prouidence and Diuinity. They alwayes pray, but in their Prayer looke not to the East, but directly to Heauen. They eate (as the beasts) what they find on the ground, leaues, and herbes; they haue the herbe Inula and the Tree Acanthus. The men liue on the further side of Ganges, on the Ocean Coasts, the women on this side, to whom their Husbands vse to haue recourse in Iuly and August. For those moneths b seeme colder there, because the Sunne then comes neerer to vs, and when they haue continued fortie dayes with their wiues, they returne home. When a woman hath had a child or two, her Husband forbeareth her altogether. And if in fise yeeres a woman hath no child, shee is diuorced. And thus their number is but small. The Riuer is passed ouer with great difficultie by reason of the tyrannie of Ondonitus, which infesteth those places, and of a certaine beast so great that hee deuoureth a whole Elephant. This beast is not seene when the Brachmans time of passage is. There are Dragons also reported to be seuentie Cubits long, I saw one whose skin was two and fortie foot: Ants as great as a mans span, Scorpions a Cubit long, &c. If this Scholler Thebæus be worthy credit. There are in the same Treatise added out of the Writers of Alexanders life many speeches and discourses of the Brachmans, which I forbear here to insert. They indeed are in many points admirable, if some Greekes haue not rather made experiment of their wits and facultie in Philosophicall discourses, then deliuered a true Historie; at least mixed truth and seeming together, as wee see here in this Bishop and his Thebæus. Those Gymnosophists (as Megasthenes also related) condemned Calanus, which followed Alexander, whose Epistle is extant in a worke of Saint Ambrose lesse suspected, which I haue here also inserted, out of Saint Ambrose his seventh Epistle.

Thebæus in many things a fabler.

b This is not the cause, but Summer and Winter differ in those places neere the hills of Balagate, not so much by heat and cold, as by faire and foule weather, winter being in the same propinquity of the Sunne on one side, and Summer on the other at the same time, to which perhaps is here alluded.

Amb. ep. l. 3. pp. 7. edit. Froben.

c Euseb. de vit Const. l. 4 c 30. Indian Embassadoirs to Constantine, as before to Augustus.

Calanus to Alexander. Thy friends perswade thee to lay hands and violence on an Indian Philosopher; not so much as dreaming of our workes. For thou maist remooue our bodies from place to place, but thou shalt not compell our minds to doe that which they are not willing, any more then thou canst make Stones or Trees to speake. A great fire causeth burning smart to liuing bodies, and worketh corruption: but we are aboue this, for we are burned aloue. No King or Prince can extort from vs to doe what we haue not determined: Nor are wee like the Philosophers of Greece, which haue studied words instead of deeds, to get themselves a name and reputation. With vs things are companions to words, and words to the things, our deeds quicke and speeches short, we haue a blessed libertie in vertue.

Eusebius c in the Life of Constantine mentioneth an Indian Embassie sent to him with rich Presents of almost all kind of Gemmes, and beasts differing from ours, with Pictures and Statues, whereby the Indians acknowledged him Emperour, and King of all vnto the remotest Coast of the Ocean, that as the Britanes, in the furtheſt Weſt obeyed him at firſt, ſo now at laſt the Indians in the extremelt Eaſt.

Soc. hiſt. Eccleſ. l. 1. c. 15.
Soc. m. hiſt. Ec.
l. 2. c. 23.

Socrates and Sozomene in their Eccleſiaſticall Hiſtories haue related how in Constantines dayes Chriſtian Religion entred the Inner India, which (as ſome thinke) till that time had not heard of Chriſt. Meropius a Philoſopher of Tyre being deſirous to ſee India (prouoked by the Example of Meſtrodorus the Philoſopher, which before that had trauelled thorow that Region) ſailed thither with two boyes of his Kindred ſkillfull in the Greeke Tongue. When he had ſatiſfied his deſire, and was now readie to returne, the league betwixt the Indians and Roman Empire was broken, and the Philoſopher with all his company were taken and ſlaine, the two youth excepted, which were preſented to the Indian King. The King tooke liking of them, and made one of them named Adeſius his Cup-bearer, and Frumentius (ſo was the other named) his Secretary. Soone after the King dyed and gaue them liberty. The Queene ſeing the young King a child, deſired their care and aſſiſtance till he were growne to manhood. They yeelded and Frumentius managed the gouernment, who enquiring amongſt the Roman Merchants which came thither, whether there were any Chriſtians amongſt them, gaue them a place by themſelues to ſerue God after the Chriſtian manner, and in proceſſe of time builded a Church to pray in. Theſe Chriſtians inſtructing ſome of the Indians in the myſteries of the faith, added them to their ſocietie. When the King was come to mans eſtate, Frumentius and Adeſius deliuer vp their accounts, and deſire leaue to returne to their Countrey, the King and his mother earneſtly (but in vaine) in-treating their ſtay.

S. Athanaſius
ſends Frumen- tius Biſhop into India.

Iberians con-uerſed.

Palladius his ſwifneſſe and Trauels.
Soc. l. 7. c. 19.

Adeſius went to Tyre to ſee his friends, Frumentius went to Alexandria, and acquainted Athanaſius, then newly Biſhop with the premiſſes, and the hopes of Indian conuerſion, deſiring him to ſend a Biſhop and Clergie thither. Athanaſius conſidering well the buſineſſe, conſecrateth Frumentius Biſhop, ſaying he had no man fitter for that purpoſe, who thus honoured returneth and preacheth the faith to the Indians, builds many Churches, and by the grace of God worketh many Miracles, healing both bodies and ſoules of many. Ruffinus writeth, that hee heard theſe things of Adeſius himſelfe, who alſo at Tyre obtayned the dignity of Prieſthood. The Iberians (now called Georgians) were at the ſame time conuerted by meanes of a Captiue Chriſtian woman, which by Miracles perſwaded the King and people to receiue the faith of Chriſt, which ſent Embaſſadors to Constantine to enter into league, and to obtayn a Biſhop & Clergie, which the ſame Ruffinus reporteth, he heard of Bacurius a great man of that Nation. Before we leaue Socrates, it is meet in this Argument of Trauels, to mention his report of Palladius, a man of ſo ſtrong conſtitution and admirable abilitie, that he in three dayes could ride from Conſtantinople to the Conſines betwixt the Persian and Roman Empires, and returne thither againe to his Maſter Theodoſius the Emperour in three other daies. Yea, he ſwiftly poſted to all parts of the World to which he was ſent, inſomuch that one ſaid of him, This man by his ſwifneſſe makes the Roman Empire, as large as it is, to be very narrow. The Persian King was amazed to heare theſe things reported of him.

CHAP. XI.

*A briefe and generall conſideration of * Europe.*

* This was intended the beginning of our promiſed European Pilgrimage: but no man aſſiſted the Pilgrime, which forced him to leaue off, and intaken of his intents to giue this taſte thereof.

* The fourth time it is now on the Preſſe.
Jo. 2. 10.
Gen. 15. 1.
1. Cor. 15. 28.
Dedit ſe in meritum, dabit ſe in premium. Ber.

¶ I.

Of Europe compared with the other parts of the World.

Three parts of the World haue beene three times * viſited by our more laborious then learned Muſe: the Fourth for whoſe ſake that triple-worke receiued ſo often ſuruiue, hath ſeemed forgotten. Asia, Africa, and America, haue firſt bin diſcouered to our Reader, not as enioying the firſt and beſt place, but offering their readie ſeruice and beſt attendance vnto Europe; the leaſt in quantity, and laſt in diſcourſe, but greateſt in thoſe things which for greatneſſe and goodneſſe deſerue the moſt applauſe and admiration. Our method hath not obſerued that Feaſt-maſters rule, at the beginning to ſet forth good Wine, and when men haue well drunke, then that which is worſe; but we haue kept the good Wine untill now: following His example, who in the firſt Creation made Man laſt; in humane and reaſonable deſignes, allots the laſt execution, to the firſt intentions; in Religions Myſteries ſends the Goſpel after the Law, giues Heauen after Earth, and reſerues Himſelfe for the laſt ſeruice, to be our exceeding great reward; when God ſhall be all in all vnto his ſeruants, Him I beſeech that here alſo he will turne our water into Wine, that we may be able to

to give Feastuall entertainment vnto our Gueſts, that as Europe excels the other parts of the World, ſo my Muſe may here exceed her wonted ſelfe, and preſent it vnto you in ornaments of Art, Induſtry and Sincerity, beſitting ſuch a Subiect. Hard were our hap to ſuffer ſhipwracke in the Hauen; to faile in the laſt Act would marre the Comædie; to be a ſtranger at home, and like the Lapwing to flie moſt and cry lowdeſt, being fartheſt from the Neſt, were to trauell of vanitie, and bring forth folly, or with the wilde Prodigall in the Goſpell to be ſtill traueiling from himſelfe. We are now in manner at home; when moſt remote, neuer out of European limits, and therefore need not feare (as before) burning or frozen Zones, huge Oceans, new Conſtellations, vnknowne Lands, vnpaſſable Deſerts, vnconth Monſters, Savage beaſts, more beaſtly and monſtrous men. We need not follow the out-worne foot-prints of rare vnceſtaine Trauellers, where Truth herſelfe is ſuſpicious in ſuch forren diſguiſed habit, nor need wee doubt to want guides, except the ſtore become a ſore, and plenty troubleſome. Only we may feare in this taſke frequent Cenſurers, not rigid Catoes, or leuerer iudicious Iudges, but capricious Nouices, which hauing come to their Lands ſooner then their wits, would think the World might condemne them of ill ſpent time, if they ſhould not ſpend an indigeſted cenſure on the Bookiſh Trauels of others. But I ſhould be like them if I ſhould feare them, ſhallow and emptie. However, I haue aduentured on this European Stage; where in we are firſt to conſider the more generall Occurrences, and after that the particular Regions. Of the former ſort are the Names, Bounds, Excellencies, Languages.

Luke 15. 17. ἐλθὼν δὲ ἐλθὼν, &c.

II.

The Names of Europe.

The Ancients haue differed much, nor is the queſtion yet agreed on, about the limits of Europe, ſome comprehending Africa vnder this diuiſion (making but two parts of the World) others adding the ſame to Aſia. Thus Varro diuides the Vniuerſe into Heauen and Earth, this into Aſia and Europe, allowing to that the Southerne parts, to this the Northerne. So Silius ſings of Africa.

Var. de ling. lat. l. 1.

Aut ingens Aſia latius, aut pars tertia rerum.
Lucan otherwiſe, Si ventos Cœlamq; ſequaris
Pars erit Europa, neq; enim plus liſſora Nili
Quam Scythicæ Tanais primis à Gadibus abſint.

Luc. l. 9.

This opinion is alleadged by Saluſt, Saint Auguſtine, Oroſius, Paulinus; followed by Iſocrates and others. But the moſt attribute to Europe only a third, and that the leaſt part in their partition of the elder World.

Sal. Bel. Iug.
Aug. C. D. l. 16. c. 17.
Oroſ. l. 1. c. 2.
Paul. ap. Aulon.
Iſoc. in Pane. yr.
Her. l. 4.
* Hom. Iliad. 5.
M. ſchus, Lycoph.
Theocr. Apollod.
Horat. Ouid. Senec.
Manil. &c.
Euseb. Chron. l. 2.

No leſſe contention hath beene about the Etymology of the Name, which Herodotus ſaith is vnknowne. Others fetch from I know not what Europa, the daughter of Agenor, rauished by Iupiter in forme of a Bull. The Truth ſhould indeed be rauished by our Poets, if the Fable bee receiued; for ſhe was transported from Phœnicia, a Region of Aſia into Africa; others ſay into Cyprus; and if wee agree to others that it was into Creta, yet Κρήνη δὲ Λούσαι, vnkely it is a ſmall Iland for a ſmall ſtay (for ſhee was after that carried into Africa) could giue name to ſo great a part of the World. Nor haue wee much more ſatisfaction in Europus, the ſonne of one Himerus King of ſome part (can you tell where?) of Europe. Europus raigned ouer the Sicyonians, ſaith Pausanias: at that time when Abram was borne, if wee follow Eusebius, and may bee the likelier Author of this name. Some aſcribe it to the goodlineſſe of the European Tract, as being beautifull to the ſight. Becanus deriues it from ver, which ſigniſieth great or excellent, and hop, a multitude; rather chaſing a Dutch then Greeke Etymologie, that people inhabiting Europe ſooner (as hee conceiues) then this. And in another booke noted by himſelfe for a ſecond Impreſſion, * Gor. Orig. l. 9.

ver. by tranſpoſition: Eur, as Terentius Terues.

he liketh better that it ſhould be compoſed of E, i. marriage; ur excellent; hop, hope; alluding to that prophecie of Noah, that Iapheth ſhould dwell in the tents of Shem, whole poſterity being diuorced, the Church of the Gentiles in Iapheths progenie ſhould ſucceed in a more ſtable and euerlaſting marriage. Ptolemy better thinks it might bee called Celtica, almoſt euery Region thereof being antiently either wholly or in part, peopled with the Celta: which Ortelius, Paulus Merula, and others haue ſhewed in the particulars. Some haue called Europe Tyria, of that Tyriam maiden aforeſaid rauished by a Bull (a Bull-formed, or as others, a Bull-ſigned ſhip; after Palephatus, a man whoſe name was Bull; a Band of Souldiers ſay others bearing a Bull in their Banner; the Adythologians can tell you more, if this bee not too much: ) Some haue of Iaphet called it Iapetia. The Abasines and Eaſterne Inhabitants of Aſia call the Europeans Franks, which name I ſuppoſe was occaſioned by their Expeditions and Conqueſts in the Holy Land, and the Countries adioyning by the Weſterne Forces, in the compoſition whereof the French were a principall ingredient; that I mention not a French Councell to further it, and the Crowne of Ieruſalem falling to Godſie of Bullen & his heires to reward it: whence it hapned that the Europeans then were, and Seco of this l. 8. c. 1. 2. 3. & 4.

cues

ever since are by the Saracens and Easterne Asians called Frankes; as perhappes for the same cause the Turkes call those of the Popish Faith, stiling those of the Greekish Religion Romans, of their chiefe Citie Constantinople, otherwise named New Rome.

§. III.

The Quantitie, and Bounds.

THe quantitie of Europe is much larger, especially towards the North, then Ptolemy and the elder Geographers haue written. At Wardhouse, and the North Cape, the longest day is reckoned two moneths and seuen houres, in 71. degrees 30. minutes, whereas at the Hill Calpe, one of Hercules Pillars, and at Cabo Maini in Morea (accounted the most Southerne parts in 36. degrees) the day is but fourteene houres and an halfe at the longest. Much difference hath beene about the Easterne Confines. Plato, Aristotle, Herodotus, and others extend it to the Riuer Phasis, or that Isthmus betwixt the Euxine and Caspian Seas; Dionysius, Arrianus, Diodorus, Polybius, Iornandes, adde nothing to the Riuer Tanais: which Ortelius passeth ouer and takes in both Volga and all the Musconites and Tartarian Hords, as farre as the Riuer Obi. Ptolemy imagineth a line from Tanais Northwards; which well agrees to the method of our History, as including the most part of the Russian Empire. All the other parts are bounded and washed by the Sea, Palus Maotis, the Euxine, and Egean on the East inclining to the South; the Mediterranean on the South, on the West and North the Ocean. Bertius numbers 2400. Italian miles in the latitude, and 3000. in the longitude.

§. IIII.

The Qualitie and Excellencies.

THe Qualitie of Europe exceeds her Quantitie, in this the least; in that the best of the World. For how many both Seas and Deserts take vp spacious Regions in Asia, Africa, and America? whereas in Europe neither watry Fens, nor vnstable Bogs, nor Inland Seas, nor vnwholsome Ayres, nor wild Woods, with their wilder Saueage Inhabitants, nor snow-couered Hills, nor stiffling Frosts, nor long long Nights, nor craggy Rocks, nor barren Sands, nor any other effect of Angry Nature, where she seemes in some, or other parts thereof the hardest step-mother, can prohibite all habitation and humane societie. In the most parts Nature hath shewed her selfe a naturall and kind Mother; the prouidence of God, and industry of Man, as it were conspiring the Europaean good. Which of the Sisters are comparable in a temperate aire? which in a soile so generally fertile, so diuersified in Hills and Dales, so goodly Medowes, cheerefull Vineyards, rich Fields, fat Pastures, shadie Woods, delightfull Gardens, varietie of Creatures on it, of Metalls and Mineralls in it, of Plants and Fruits growing out of it? Which so watered with Fountaines, Brookes, Riuers, Bathes, Lakes out of her owne bowells? such sweet Dewes and comfortable Showers from Heauen? so frequent insinuations of the Sea, both for commerce with others, and proper Marine commodities? Which so peopled with resolute courages, able bodies, well qualified mindes? so fortified with Castles, edified with Townes, crowned with Cities? And if in some of these things Asia, Afrika, and America may seeme equall, or in any thing superiour, yet euen therein also they are inferiour, by iust and equall inequalitye made Tributaries and Seruants to Europe: the first captiued by Alexander, the first and second by the Romans, the last and the most commodious places of the first, with all the Sea Trade, by Spanish and Portingall Discoueries and Conquests; first, second, last, All and more then they all, since and still made open and obnoxious to the English and Dutch, which haue discouered new Northerne Worlds, and in their thrice-worthy Marine Armes haue so often imbraced the inferiour Globe. Asia yeerely sends vs her Spices, Silkes, Gemmes; Africa her Gold and Iuory; America receiueth seuerer Customers and Taxe-Masters, almost euery where admitting Europaean Colonies.

If I speake of Arts and Inuentions (which are Mans properest goods, immortall Inheritance to our mortalitie) what haue the rest of the world comparable? First the Liberall Arts are most Liberall to vs, hauing long since forsaken their Seminaries in Asia and Afrika, and here erected Colledges and Vniuersities. And if one Athens in the East (the antient Europaean glory) now by Turkish Barbarisme be infected, how many many Christian Athens haue wee in the West for it? As for Mechanicall Sciences, I could reckon our Ancestors inuentions now lost, as that malleable Glasse in the dayes of Tiberias; that oleum vinum found in olde Sepulchers still burning, after 1500. yeeres; I could glory of Archimedes his ingenuous Engines; but miserum est isthuc verbum & pessimum, habuisse & non habere. I can recite later inuentions the Daughters of wonder. What eye doth not almost loose it selfe in beholding the many artificiall Mazes and Labyrinths

Vid. Pancirol. & Salmuth. de de-perditis & re-paratis.

in our Watches, the great heavenly Orbes and motions imitated in so small a modell? What eares but European, haue heard so many Muscicall Inuentions for the Chamber, the Field, the Church? as for Bells, Europe alone beares the bel, and heares the Muscicall consort thereof in the Steeples diuersified, yea thence descending to Birds and Squirells? Where hath the taste beene feasted with such varieties for delight, for health? are not Distillations, the Arts also of Candyng and Preseruing meere European? If I should descend lower, who inuented the Stirrop to ascend, the Saddle to ride the Horse? Who deuised so many kindes of motions by Clock-workes, besides Clockes and Dials to measure Time, the measurer of all things? Who inuented wild Fires that scorne the waters force and violence? Who out of ragges to bring such varieties of Paper for Mans manifold vse? Who so many kinds of Mills? Who euer dreamt of a perpetuall Motion by Art, or De quadratura circuli, or innumerable other Mathematicall, and Chymicall deuises? And what hath Mars in the World elsewhere to parallel with our Ordnance, and all sorts of Gunnes? or the Muses with our Printing? Alas, China yeelds babes and bables in both compared with vs and ours: the rest of the World haue them borrowed of vs or not at all. And for the Art Military, the exactest Science, Discipline, Weapons, Stratagems, Engines, Resolution, Success herein, haue honoured Europe with the Macedonian and Roman spoiles of the World: and euen still the Turkish puissance is here seated; the English, Dutch, French, Italian, Spanish courages haue not degenerated from those Ancestors, which tamed and shooke in pieces that Tamer and Terror of the World, the Roman Monarchy.

20 But what speake I of Men, Arts, Armes? Nature hath yeelded her selfe to European Industry. Who euer found out that Loadstone and Compasse, that findes out and compasseth the World? Who euer tooke possession of the huge Ocean, and made proceffion round about the vast Earth? Who euer discovered new Constellations, saluted the Frozen Poles, subiected the Burning Zones? And who else by the Art of Nauigation haue seemed to imitate Him, which laies the beames of his Chambers in the Waters, and walketh on the wings of the Wind? And is this all? Is Europe onely a fruitfull Field, a well watered Garden, a pleasant Paradise in Nature? A continued Citie for habitation? Queene of the World for power? A Schoole of Arts Liberall, Shop of Mechanicall, Tents of Military, Arsenall of Weapons and Shipping? And is shee but Nurse to Nature, Mistresse to Arts, Mother of resolute Courages and ingenious dispositions? Nay these are the least of Her praises, or His rather, who hath giuen Europe more then Eagles wings, and lifted her vp above the Starres.

I speake it not in Poeticall fiction, or Hyperbolicall phrase, but Christian Sincerity. Europe is taught the way to scale Heauen, not by Mathematicall principles, but by Diuine veritie. I E S V S CHRIST is their way, their truth, their life; who hath long since giuen a Bill of Diuorce to ingratefull Asia where hee was borne, and Africa the place of his flight and refuge, and is become almost wholly and onely European. For little doe wee find of this name in Asia, lesse in Africa, and nothing atall in America, but later European gleanings. Here are his Scriptures, Oratories, Sacraments, Ministers, Mysteries. Here that Mystical Babylon, and that Papacie (if that bee any glory) which challengeth both the Bishopricke and Empire of the World; and here the victory ouer that Beast (this indeed is glory) by Christian Reformation according to the Scriptures. God himselfe is our portion, and the lot of Europes Inheritance, which hath made Nature an indulgent Mother to her, hath bowed the Heauens ouer her in the kindest influence, hath trenched the Seas about her in most commodious affluence, hath furrowed in her delightfull, profitable confluence of Streames, hath tempered the Ayre about her, fructified the Soyle on her, enriched the Mines vnder her, diuersified his Creatures to serue her, and multiplied Inhabitants to enioy her; hath giuen them so goodly composition of body, so good disposition of mind, so free condition of life, so happy successe in affaires; all these annexed as attendants to that true happinesse in Religions truth, which brings vs to God againe, that hee may bee both Alpha and Omega in all our good. Euen in Ciuilitie also Europe is the youngest of the Three, but as Beniamin, the best beloued, made heire to the Rest, exchanging the Pristine Barbarisme, and Inciuilitie (which Authors blame in our Ancestors) with Asia and Africa, for that Ciuilitie of Manners, and Glory of Acts and Arts, which they (as neerer the Arkes resting place) sooner enioyed, by Mohometan pestilence long since become barbarous; the best of the one fiely called Barbaria, and the best Moniments of the other being but names, ruines, carkasses, and sepulchrell Moniments of her quandam Excellencies.

¶ V.

Of the Languages of Europe.

For their particular manners, dispositions, customes, wee shall in due place obserue: their Mother Tongues and Originall Languages I will here out of Scaliger (our European Mithridates) relate. Of these he now reckons in Europe eleuen, seuen of smaller note, foure of greater, which yeeld many Dialects, seeming differing languages out of them.

*Ios. Scalop. de diatriba de Eu-
rop. ling. & ap-Meyu'a. p. 2. l. 1.
c. 8.*

them. These are the Greeke, Latin, Dutch, and Slavon, from whence by inflexion, traiection, mutation, and mixture, are deriued many others. Thus the Slavon hath Daughters or Dialects, the Russian, Polonian, Bohemian, Illyrian, Dalmatian, and Windish tongues; some of these also not a little in themselves diuertified. They vse two sorts of letters, the Russian depraued from the Greeke, with some barbarous additions; and the Dalmatian of Saint Hieronims inuention, much vnlike the former. The Dutch hath three principall Idiomies, Tentonisme, Saxonisme, and Danisme. The first contains both the High and Low Dutch; the second, the Nord-albing, Frisland and English Dialects; the third Danish, Sweden, and the Norwegian, Mother of that of the Islanders. The Latin hath propagated the Italian, Spanish and French. The Greeke in so many Lands and Ilands so farre distant, cannot but be much different.

The smaller languages yet Originall, without commerce and deriuation from others are, the Epirotike, or Albanian in the Mountaines of Epirus: Secondly the Cosaks or Tartarian: Thirdly, the Hungarian, which the Hunnes and Anares brought thither out of Asia: Fourthly, that of Finnemmark, which yeelds also the Lappian: Fifthly the Irish, which is vied likewise of the Red-shankes: Sixtly the Welsh or Brittish (the same with that of the ancient Galles, as Master Camden hath proued) spoken diuersly in Wales, Cornwall, and little Britaine: Seuenthly, the Biscaine, the remainder of the old Spanish, in vse on both sides the Pyreanean Hills. These were all in Ecclesiasticall affaires subiected to the Constantinopolitan and Roman Bishops, and vied five sorts of letters, the Greeke, Latin, and Gottish, besides those two formerly mentioned. The Greeke principally possesseth the South East, the Latin with her Daughters, the South; the Dutch, the North-west parts of Europe; and the North-east, the Slavon.

And thus haue we giuen a taste, of that which sometimes was intended, an European Feast: in which if I seeme to haue broken promise, I haue not done it alone; and pouertie cleeres mee of perfidie. If yet my rashnesse bee accused, in promising upon hopes of others assistance, let him that hath relieved those wants throw the first stone at the Promiser. How euer, I will rather confesse the Action then stand Sute. Nor doe I now beg helpees in that kind; it is too late. My body is worne and old before and beyond my yeeres; and o haue borne so long two such burthens as a Pulpit and Presse, that is, Heauen and Earth, would perhaps haue tired my quarrelling Plaintiffe too, to haue ascended the one (idque Londini) twice or thrice a weeke ordinarily, and descended the other with so frequent successions, and long continuations. Hercules and Atlas were both weary of one burthen: Patience yet and pardon! for I haue paid here a great part of my debt. I haue giuen thee the Christian Sects, and Europes Ecclesiastike part, with her other Secular parts also in great part both in Maps and History presented, especially there where shee was left knowne: and if not so fully as the former in my Pilgrimage, yet Poore men are welcome pay-masters when they come with parts each weeke or moneth, or with day-labour-set-offs; though they cannot at once discharge the whole debt. Indeed my Genius most leads mee to remotest and lest knowne things, that where few others can giue intelligence, I may supply the Intelligencers place. Of uere and knowne things, Scribimus indocti doctique poemata passim. I haue giuen thee Arctoa Regio, the Polare World; and Antarctica, the Southerne Continent; and both Americas; besides Asia, Africa, and Europe knowne to the Ancients. Tea I haue giuen thee an Asia in Asia, and an Africa in Africa neuer knowne to the Ancients; as likewise I may affirme of the Northerne Parts of Europe. Cœtera quis nescit? Who cannot dull and deafe thine eares with French, Dutch, Spanish, Italian affaires? Neuer are we destitute of some intelligence and slighter knowledge of Spaine, France, and Germany, Italy and other parts, which you will find handled in one or other place of this Worke, as much as concerneth our Travelling purpose. As for Spaine, the Kings Title is a sufficient Lecture, which some thus expresse: P. By the Grace of God King of Castile, Lions, Arragon, both Sicills, Ierusalem, Portugall, Nauarre, Granada, Toledo, Valencia, Galicia, Maiorca and Minorca, Siuil, Sardinia, Corduba, Corfica, Murcia, Iaen, Algarbia, Algeria, Gibraltar, Canary Ilands, East and West Indies, of the Ilands and Continent of the Ocean; Archduke of Austria, Duke of Burgundy, Lorraine, Brabant, Lunburg, Luxemburg, Geldres, Millaine, &c. Earle of Habsburg, Flanders, Tirol, Barcelona, Artois, Hannalt, Holand, Zeland, Namur, Zurphen, &c. Marquess of the Empire, Lord of Biscay, Friezland, Mecklin, Vtreck, Ouer-Issell, Gruningen. Ruler in Asia and in Africa. This doth more fully present the present Spaine to your view, then to tell the Situation, Mountaines and Riuers; of which euery Map and Traveller can informe you. France also is not to be now measured by the ancient Geographical limits, but by the present Royall, so much being most properly France, as is comprehended in that most compact, best seated, well peopled, and goodliest of Kingdomes. The parts you shall see in the Diocesse hereafter following. Germany in largest sense by some is bounded by Rhene, Vistula, the Danow and the Ocean, is diuided into Kingdomes, Dukedomes, Counties, and Marquisates. The Kingdomes are Denmarke, Norway, Sweden, Boheme. The rest concerning Germany and other parts of Europe I teach not here; I point at rather these things, and therefore will retorne to Our former discourse of languages, and therein produce a better Linguist and Artist then my selfe, Our learned Countryman, Master Brerewood in his laborious Travells and Industrious Enquiries of Languages and Religions.

Seuen parts of
of the World.

Cap. vii.

CHAP. XII.

Enquiries of Languages by EDW. BTEREWOOD, lately professor of Astronomy in Gresham Colledge.

Greece, as it was anciently knowne by the name of Hellas, was inclosed betwixt the Bay of Ambracia, with the River Arachthos, that falleth into it on the West, and the River Peneus on the North, and the Sea on other parts. So that Acarnania and Thessalie, were toward the Continent the vtmost Regions of Greece. But yet, not the Countries onely contained within those limits, but also the Kingdomes of Maccedon, and Epirus; being the next adioyning Prouinces ( Maccedon toward the North, Epirus toward the West ) had anciently the Greeke tongue for their vulgar language: for although it belonged originally to Hellas alone, yet in time it became vulgar to these also.

Secondly, it was the language of all the Isles in the Aegean Sea; of all those Islands I say, that are betwixt Greece and Asia, both of the many small ones, that lie betweene Candie and Negropont, named Cyclades ( there are of them fittie three ) and of all about Negropont also, as farre as the Strait of Constantinople.

Thirdly, of the Isles of Candie, Scarpanto, Rhodes, and a part of Cyprus and of all the small Islands along the Coast of Asia, from Candie to Syria.

Fourthly, not only of all the West part of Asia the lesse, ( now called Anatolia, and corruptly Natolia ) lying toward the Aegean Sea, as being very thicke planted with Greeke Colonies: of which, some one, Miletus by name, is registred by Seneca, to haue beene the Mother of seuentie five, by Plinie, of eightie Cities; But on the North side also toward the Euxine Sea, as farre (saith Isocrates) as Sinope, and on the South side respecting Africke, as farre (saith Lucian) as the Chelidonian Isles, which are ouer against the confines of Lycia with Pamphylia. And yet although within these limits onely, Greeke was generally spoken, on the Maritime Coast of Asia, yet beyond them, on both the shoares Eastward, were many Greeke Cities ( though not without Barbarous Cities among them. ) And specially I find the North coast of Asia, euen as farre as Trebizond, to haue beene exceedingly well stored with them. But, it may bee further obserued likewise out of Histories, that not onely all the Maritime part of Anatolia could vnderstand and speake the Greeke tongue, but most of the Inland people also, both by reason of the great traffike, which those rich Countries had for the most part with Grecians, and for that on all sides the East onely excepted, they were inuironed with them. Yet neuerthelesse, it is worthy obseruing, that albeit the Greeke tongue preuailed so farre in the Regions of Anatolia, as to bee in a manner generall, yet for all that it neuer became vulgar, nor extinguished the vulgar languages of those Countries. For it is not onely particularly obserued of the Galatians, by Hierome, that beside the Greeke tongue, they had also their peculiar language like that of Trier: and of the Carians by Strabo, that in their language were found many Greeke wordes, which doth manifestly import it to haue beene a seuerall tongue: but it is directly recorded by Strabo ( out of Ephorus ) that of sixteene seuerall Nations, inhabiting that Tract, only three were Grecians, and all the rest ( whose names are there registred ) barbarous; and yet are not omitted the Cappadocians, Galatians, Lydians, Meonians, Cataonians, no small Prouinces of that Region. Euen as it is also obserued by Plinie and others, that the twentie two languages, whereof Mitridates King of Pontus is remembered to haue beene so skillfull, as to speake them without an Interpreter, were the languages of so many Nations subiect to himselfe, whose dominion yet wee know to haue beene contained, for the greatest part, within Anatolia. And although all these bee euident testimonies, that the Greeke tongue was not the vulgar or native language of those parts, yet, among all none is more effectual, then that remembrance in the second Chapter of the Acts, where diuers of those Regions, as Cappadocia, Pontus, Asia, Phrygia, and Pamphylia, are brought in for instances of differing languages.

Fiftly, Of the greatest part of the Maritime Coast of Thrace, not onely from Hellepont to Byzantium ( which was * that part of Constantinople, in the East corner of the Citie, where the Seraille of the Great Turke now standeth ) but about it, all along to the out-lets of Danubius. And yet beyond them also; I find many Greeke Cities to haue beene planted along that Coast ( Scylax of Carianda is my Author, with some others ) as farre as the Strait of Cassa, and specially in Taurica. Yea, and beyond that Strait also Eastward, along all the Sea Coast of Circassia, and Mengrelia, to the River of Phasis, and thence compassing to Trebizond, I find mention of many scattered Greeke Cities: that is, ( to speake briefly ) in all the circumferences of the Euxine Sea.

Sixtly, ( from the East and North to turne toward the West ) it was the language of all the West and South Islands, that lie along the Coast of Greece, from Candie to Corfu, which also was one of them, and withall of that fertile Sicily, in which one Island, I haue obserued in good Histories,

Of the ancient largenesse of the Greeke tongue.

Strabo l. 8. non longe a principio

l. 10. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 11. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 12. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 13. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 14. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 15. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 16. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 17. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 18. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 19. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 20. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 21. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 22. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 23. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 24. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 25. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 26. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 27. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 28. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 29. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 30. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 31. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 32. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 33. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 34. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 35. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 36. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 37. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 38. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 39. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 40. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 41. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 42. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 43. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 44. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 45. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 46. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 47. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 48. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 49. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 50. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 51. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 52. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 53. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 54. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 55. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 56. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 57. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 58. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 59. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 60. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 61. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 62. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 63. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 64. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 65. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 66. c. 1. c. 2.

l. 67. c. 1. c. 2.

Strab. l. 6. in medio.

ries, about thirtie Greeke Colonies to haue beene planted, and some of them goodly Cities, specially Agrigentum and Syracusa, which later Strabo hath recorded to haue beene one hundred and eighty furlongs, that is, of our miles two and twenty and a halfe in circuit.

Seuenthly, not onely of all the Maritime Coast of Italie, that lyeth on the Tyrrhene Sea; from the Riuer Garigliano, (Liris it was formerly called) to Leucopetra, the most Southerly point of Italie, for all that shoare being neere about two hundred and fortie miles, was inhabited with Greeke Colonies: And thence forward, of all that end of Italie, that lyeth towards the Ionian Sea, about the great Bayes of Squillacci and Taranto (which was so thicke set with great and goodly Cities of Gracians, that it gained the name of Magna Gracia) but, beyond that also, of a great part of Apulia, lying towards the Adriatique Sea. Neither did these Maritime parts onely, but as it seemeth the Inland people also towards that end of Italie, speake the Greeke tongue.

Goltz. in Numis-mat. magna Gracia Tab. 24.
Galat. in descrip.
Callipolis.
Bar. l. 5. de anti-quit. Calabrie.
Rocca Tract. de Dialectis in Ita-lica lingua.

For I haue seene a few old Coynes of the Brutians, and more may bee seene in Goltzius hauing Greeke Inscriptions, wherein I obserue they are named ΒΡΥΤΤΙΟΙ, with an ε, and two σ, and not as the Romane Writers terme them, Brutii. And I haue seene one piece also of Pandosia, an Inland Citie of those parts, with the like. Neither was the vulgar vse of the Greeke Tongue, vnterly extinct in some of those parts of Italie, till of late: for Galatemu a learned man of that Countrey, hath left written, that when he was a Boy (and he liued about one hundred and twentie yeeres agoe) they spake Greeke in Callipolis, a City on the East shoare of the Bay of Taranto: But yet it continued in Ecclesiasticall vse in some other parts of that Region of Italie much later. for Gabriel Barrius that but liued about forty yeeres since, hath left recorded, that the Church of Rossano (an Archiepiscopall Citie in the vpper Calabria) retayned the Greeke Tongue and Ceremony till his time, and then became Latino. Nay, to descend yet a little neerer the present time, Angelus Rocca that writ but about twentie yeeres agoe, hath obserued, that hee found in some parts of Calabria, and Apulia, some remaynders of the Greeke speech to bee still retayned.

a Strab. l. 4. non long. à princip.
Thucid. l. 1. b Strab. loco citato.
Plin. l. 3. c. 5.

Eightly, and lastly, that shoare of France, that lyeth towards the Mediterraine Sea, from Rodanus to Italie, was possessed with Gracians, for Massilia was a Colonie of the Phoceans, and from it many other Colonies were deriued, and placed along that shoare, as farre as Nicea, in the beginning of Italie, which also was one of them.

Strab. l. 17.

c Loco iam ci-tato.
Ptol. tab. 3. Afri.
Mela. l. 1. c. 8.
Hieronim. loco
supra citato.

And yet beside all these forenamed, I could reckon vp very many other dispersed Colonies of the Greeks both in Europe, and Asia, and some in Afrique, for although I remember not, that I haue read in any History, any Colonies of the Grecians to haue beene planted in Afrique, any where from the greater Syrtis Westward, except one in Cirta, a City of Numidia, placed there by Micipsa the Sonne of Masiniissa, as is mentioned in Strabo: yet thence Eastward it is certaine some were: for the great Cities of Cyrene and Alexandria, were both Greeke. And it is euident, not onely in Strabo and Ptolemie, but in Mela, and other Latine Writers, that most of the Cities of that part carried Greeke names. And lastly, Saint Hierome hath directly recorded, that Lybia, which is properly that part of Afrique adioyning to Egypt, was full of Greeke Cities.

Appian. l. de Bellis Syriac.

These were the places, where the Greeke Tongue was natiuely and vulgarly spoken, either originally, or by reason of Colonies. But yet for other causes, it became much more large and generall. One was the loue of Philosophie, and the Liberall Arts written in a manner onely in Greeke. Another, the exceeding great Trade and Traffique of Gracians, in which, about all Nations, except perhaps the old Phanicians (to whom yet they seeme not to haue beene inferiour) they employed themselues. A third, beyond all these, because those great Princes, among whom all that Alexander the Great had conquered, was diuided, were Gracians, which for many reasons, could not but exceedingly spread the Greeke Tongue, in all those parts where they were Gouernours: among whom, euen one alone, Seleucus by name, is registred by Appian, to haue founded in the East parts vnder his government, at least sixty Cities, all of them carrying Greek names, or else named after his Father, his Wiues, or himselfe. And yet was there a fourth cause, that in the aftertime greatly furthered this enlargement of the Greeke Tongue, namely the imployment of Gracians in the government of the Prouinces, after the Translation of the Imperiall Seate to Constantinople. For these causes I say, together with the mixture of Greeke Colonies, dispersed in many places (in which fruitfulness of Colonies, the Gracians farre passed the Romanes) the Greeke Tongue spread very farre, especially towards the East. In so much, that all the Orient (which yet must be vnderstood with limitation, namely the Orientall part of the Roman Empire, or to speake in the Phrase of those times, the Diocesse of the Orient, which containd Syria, Palestine, Cilicia, and part of Mesopotamia and of Arabia) is said by Hierome, to haue spoken Greeke: which also Isidore, specially obserueth, in Egypt, and Syria, to haue beene the Dorique Dialect. And this great glorie, the Greeke Tongue held in the Apostles time, and long after, in the Easterne parts, till by the inundation of the Saracens of Arabia, it came to ruine in those Prouinces, about six hundred and forty yeeres after the birth of our Sauour, namely, in the time of the Emperor Heraclius (the Arabians bringing in their language together with their victo-

Hiero. ubi super.
Isidor. Origin.
l. 9. c. 1.

victories, into all the Regions they subdued) euen as the Latine Tongue is supposed to haue perished by the inundation and mixture of the Goths, and other barbarous Nations in the West.

But at this day, the Greeke Tongue is very much decayed, not only as touching the largenesse, Of the decayand vulgarnesse of it, but also in the purenesse and elegancie of the Language. For as touch- ing of the an-ing the former. First, in Italie, France, and other places to the West, the naturall Languages of cient Greeke the Countries haue vsurped vpon it. Secondly, in the skirts of Greece it selfe, namely in Epirus, tongue, and of and that part of Macedon, that lyeth towards the Adriatique Sea, the Sclauonique Tongue hath the present extinguished it. Thirdly, in Anatolia, the Turkish Tongue hath for a great part suppressed it. vulgar Greeke.
And lastly, in the more Eastward, and South parts, as in that part of Cilicia, that is beyond the Chap. 2.
Riuer Piramus, in Syria, Palestine, Egypt and Lybia, the Arabian Tongue hath abolished it: Abolished it I say, namely, as touching any vulgar vse, for, as touching Ecclesiasticall vse, many Christians of those parts still retayne it in their Liturgies. So that, the parts in which the Greeke Tongue is spoken at this day, are (in few words) but these. First Greece it selfe (excepting Epirus, and the West part of Macedon.) Secondly, the Iles of the Aegean Sea. Thirdly, Candie, and the Iles Eastward of Candie, along the Coast of Asia to Cyprus (although in Cyprus, diuers other Languages are spoken, beside the Greeke) and likewise the Iles Westward of Candia, along the Coasts of Greece, and Epirus, to Corfu. And lastly, a good part of Anatolia.

But as I said, the Greeke Tongue, is not onely thus restrained, in comparison of the ancient ex-tention that it had, but it is also much degenerated and impaired, as touching the purenesse of speech, being ouer-growne with barbarousnesse: But yet not without some relish of the ancient elegancie. Neither is it altogether so much declined from the ancient Greeke, as the Italian is de- Bellon. obseruat.
parted from the Latine, as Bellonius hath also obserued, and by conferring of diuers Epistles of l. 1. c. 3. Turco-the present Language, which you may find in Crusius his Turcogracia, with the ancient Tongue, grec. l. 3. & 5.
may be put out of question which corruption yet, certainly hath not befallen that Language, through any inundation of barbarous people, as is supposed to haue altered the Latine Tongue, for although I know Greece to haue bene ouer-runne and wasted, by the Goths, yet I finde not in Histories, any remembrance of their habitation, or long continuance in Greece, and of their coalition into one people with the Gracians, without which, I conceiue not, how the Tongue could be greatly altered by them. And yet certaine it is, that long before the Turkes came among them, their Language was growne to the corruption wherein now it is, for that, in the Writings of Cedrenus, Nicetas, and some other late Greekes (although long before the Turkes inuasion) there is found, notwithstanding they were learned men, a strong relish of this barbarousnesse: Insomuch that the learned Gracians themselves, acknowledge it to bee very ancient, and are vterly ignorant, when it began in their Language: which is to me a certaine argument, that it had no violent nor sudden beginning, by the mixture of other forreine Nations among them, but hath gotten into their Language, by the ordinarie change, which time and many common occasions that attend on time, are wont to bring to all Languages in the World, for which reason, the corruption of speech growing vpon them, by little and little, the change hath bene vn sensible.
Yet it cannot be denied (and some of the Gracians themselves confesse so much) that beside many Romane words, which from the Translation of the Imperiall Seat to Constantinople, began to creepe into their Language, as we may obserue in diuers Greeke Writers of good Antiquitie, some Italian words also, and Slauonian, and Arabique, and Turkish, and of other Nations, are gotten into their Language, by reason of the great Traffique and Commerce, which those people exercise with the Gracians. For which cause, as Bellonius hath obserued, it is more altered in the Maritime parts, and such other places of forreigne concourse, then in the inner Region. But yet, the greatest part of the corruption of that Language, hath bene bred at home, and proceeded from no other cause, then their owne negligence, or affectation. As first (for example) by mutilation of some words, pronouncing and writing sin for mundin, va for iva &c. Secondly, by compaction of seuerall words into one, as πῶς for πῶς εἶς, εἰς for εἰς τὴν εἰς &c. Thirdly, by confusion of sound, as making no difference in the pronouncing of three vowels, namely u, i, u, and two Diphthongues ei and oi, all which five they pronounce by one Letter i, as οἶκος, οἶκος, εἰς, αἶμα, they pronounce icos, icon, stubi, lipi. Fourthly, by Translation of accents, from the syllables to which in ancient pronouncing they belonged, to others. And all those four kinds of corruption, are very common in their Language: for which reasons, and for some others, which may be obserued in Crusius, Burmana, &c. the Greeke Tongue, is become much altered (euen in the proper and native words of the Language) from what anciently it was. Yet neuertheless it is recorded by some, that haue taken diligent obseruation of that Tongue, in the seuerall parts of Greece, that there be yet in Morea, (Peloponessus) betwixt Napoli and Monembasia (Nauplia and Epidaurius, they were called) some fourteene Townes, the Inhabitants whereof are called Zacones (for Lacones) that speake yet the ancient Greeke Tongue, but farre out of Grammer Rule: yet, they vnderstand those that speake Grammatically, but vnderstand not the vulgar Greeke. As Bellonius likewise remembreth another place, neere Heraclea in Anatolia, that yet retayneth the pure Greeke, for their vulgar Language. But the few places beeing excepted, K ic

Belon. obseruat.
l. 1. c. 3. Turcogrec. l. 3. & 5.

Gerlach. in Epist.
ad Crusium Tur-cog. ad l. 7. p. 489

d Zygomalos, in Epist. ad Crus.
Turcog. pag.

Belon. obseruat. l. 1. c. 3

Vide Crus. Turci
p. 44. 224. 242.
392. 398. 399.
&c.

Burman. in Co-
ron. prelopa.
Gerlach. apud Crus. l. 7. Turcog.
p. 489.

Belon. obseruat.
l. 2. c. 111.

e Burdoun in Epist. ad Chitra, at u dillum in li.
de statu Ecclie
liar. p. 47.
f Vide Chitra.
loc. citato, &
Turcogrec. Cris.
p. 127 & 415.
Oc.
Of the ancient largeness of the Roman tongue in the time of the Roman Empire.
Chap. 3.

g Spartian. in Hadriano & in Seuero.

And Fulv. l. 2.
Antiq. Rom. c. 3.
Gell. l. 13. c. 14.
Strab. l. 1.

Dionys. Hal. l. 2.
Antiq. Rom.
Vopisc. in Aureliano.

Euseb. in Chro.
ad Olymp. 174.
in Lipsius de mag. Rom. l. 3. c. 3

Appian. l. 1.
Civil. longe ante
med.

Dion. l. 41.

Tacit. l. 1. Histo-riar. Plin. l. 3. c. 3.
Digest. l. 1. Tit. de statu hominum.
Leg. in Orbe Romano.

i Digest. l. 42.
Tit. de re iudicata, Leg. Decreti

it is certaine, that the difference is become so great, betwixt the present and the ancient Greeke that their Lyturgie, * which is yet read in the ancient Greeke Tongue, namely that of Basil, on the Sabbaths and solemne dayes, and that of Chrysostome on common dayes, is not vnderstood (or but little of it) by the vulgar people, as learned men that haue beene in those parts, haue related to others, and to my selfe: which may be also more euidently prooued to be true by this, be- cause the skilfull in the learned Greeke cannot vnderstand the vulgar.

THe ordinary bounds of the Romane Empire were, on the East part Euphrates, and sometimes Tigris: On the North the Riuer of Rhene and of Danubius, and the Emxine Sea: On the West the Ocean: On the South the Cataracts of Nilus in the vtmost border of Egypt, and in 10 Africke the Mountaine Atlas. Which, beginning in the West, on the shoare of the Ocean, ouer against the Canarie Ilands, runneth Eastward almost to Egypt, being in few places distant from the Mediterrane Sea, more then two hundred miles. These I say, were the ordinary bounds of that Empire in the Continent: for although the Romanes passed these bounds sometimes, specially toward the East and North, yet they kept little of what they wanne, but within those bounds mentioned, the Empire was firmly established. But heere, in our great Ile of Britaine, the Picts wall was the limit of it, passing by New-castle and Carleil from Timmouth on the East Sea, to Solway Frith on the West, being first begun by the Emperour Adrian, and after finished or ra- ther repaired, by Septimius Seuerus.

To this greatnesse of Dominion Rome at last arriued from her small beginnings. And small her 20 beginnings were indeed, considering the huge Dominion to which shee attained. For first, the Circuit of the Citie wall, at the first building of it, by Romulus in Mount Palatine, could not bee fully one mile: for the Hill it selfe, as is obserued by Andrea Fulvio, a Citizen and Antiquarie of Rome, hath no more in circuit: And, that Romulus bounded the Pomerium of the Citie (which extended somewhat beyond the wall) with the foot of that Hill in compasse Gellius hath left re- gistrated. Secondly, the Territorie and Liberties of Rome, as Strabo hath remembred, extended at the first, where it stretched farthest scarce six miles from the Citie. And thirdly, the first Inha- bitants of Rome, as I find recorded in Dionysius of Halicarnassus, were not in number aboue 3300. at the most. Yet, with Time, and fortunate successe, Rome so increased, that in Aurelianus his 30 time, the circuit of the Citie wall, was fiftie miles, as Vopiscus hath recorded: And the Domini- on, grew to the largeness aboue mentioned, contayning aboue 3000. miles in length, and about 1200. in breadth: and lastly the number of free Citizens, euen in the time of Marinus, that is, long before forreigne Cities and Countries, began to be receiued into participation of that free- dome, was found to be 463000. as Eusebius hath remembred: of free Citizens I say (for they one- ly came into Cense) but if I should adde, their wiues, and children, and seruants, that is, general- ly all the Inhabitants, a learned man hath esteemed them, and not without great likelihood of truth, to haue beene no lesse, then three or foure Millions.

Beyond these bounds therefore of the Roman Empire (to speake to the point in hand) the Ro- man tongue could not bee in any common vse, as neither, to speake of our Kings Dominions in Ireland, Scotland, nor Northumberland, as being no subiects of the Roman Empire. And that with- 40 in these bounds it stretched farre and wide (in such manner as I will afterward declare) two principall causes there were. One was the multitude of Colonies, which partly to repress re- bellion in the subdued Prouines, partly to resist forreigne Inuasions partly to reward the ancient Souldiers, partly to abate the redundance of the City, and relieue the poorer sort, were sent forth to inhabit in all the Prouinces of the Empire: Another was the Donation of Romane free- dome, or Communication of the right and benefit of Romane Citizens, to very many of the Pro- uinciall, both Cities and Regions. For first, all Italie obtained that freedome in the time of Sylla and Marinus, at the compounding of the Italian Warre, as Appian hath recorded: All Italie I 50 say, as then it was called, and bounded, with the Riuer of Rubicon and Arnuu, that is, the nar- rower part of Italie lying betwixt the Adriatique and the Tyrrhene Seas. Secondly, Iulius Ce- sar in like sort enfranchised the rest of Italie, that is the border-part, named then Gallia Cisalpina, as is remembred by Dion. But not long after, the forreigne Prouinces also, began to bee infran- chised, France being indued with the liberty of Roman Citizens by Galba, as I find in Tacitus; Spain by Vespasian, as it is in Plinie. And at last, by Antoninus Pius, all without exception, that were subiect to the Empire of Rome, as appeareth by the testimonie of Vlpian in the Digests. The benefit of which Romane freedome, they that would vse, could not with honestie doe it, remay- ning ignorant of the Romane Tongue.

These two as I haue said, were the principall causes of enlarging that Language: yet other there were also of great importance, to further it. For first, concerning Ambassages, Suites, Ap- peales, or whatsoever other businesse of the Prouincialls, or Forreignes, nothing was allowed to be handled, or spoken in the Senate at Rome, but in the Latine Tongue. Secondly, the Lawes 60 whereby the Prouinces were gouerned, were all written in that Language, as beeing in all of them, excepting onely Municipall Cities, the ordinary Roman Law. Thirdly, the Prators of the Prouinces, were not allowed to deliuer their Iudgements saue in that Language: and wee reade reade in Dion Cassius, of a principall man of Greece, that by Claudius was put from the order of Iudges, for being ignorant of the Latine Tongue : and to the same effect in Valerius Maximus, that the Romane Magistrates would not giue audience to the Gracians, (lesse therefore I take it to the Barbarous Nations) saue in the Latine Tongue. Fourthly, the generall Schooles, erected in sundry Cities of the Prouinces, whereof wee finde mention in Tacitus, Hierome, and others (in which the Roman Tongue was the ordinary and allowed speech, as is vsuall in Vniuersities till this day) was no small furtherance to that Language. And, to conclude that the Romans had generally (at least in the after-times, when Rome was become a Monarchie, and in the flourish of the Empire) great care to enlarge their Tongue, together with their Dominion, is by Augustine in his Bookes de Cinit. Dei, specially remembred. I said it was so in after times, for certainly, that the Romane were not very anciently possessed with that humour of spreading their Language, appeareth by Linie, in whom we finde recorded, that it was granted the Cumanes, for a fauour, & at their Suit, that they might publikely vse the Roman Tongue, not fully one hundred and fortie yeeres before the beginning of the Emperours : And yet was Cuma but about one hundred miles distant from Rome, and at that time the Romane had conquered all Italie, Sicilie, Sardinia, and a great part of Spaine.

Dion l. 57. Val.
Max. l. 2. c. 2.

Tacit. l. 3. Annal.
Hieron. in Ep ad
Rufinum. Tom. 1.

Aug. de Ci. Dei,
l. 19. c. 7.

Lin. l. 1. Ro. l. 40.

But yet in all the Prouinces of the Empire, the Romane Tongue found not alike acceptance, and successe, but most enlarged and spread it selfe toward the North and West, and South bounds: for first, that in all the Regions of Pannonia, it was knowne, Velleius is mine Author : Secondly, that it was spoken in France and Spaine, Strabo : Thirdly, that in Afrique, Apuleius : And it seemeth the Sermons of Cyprian and Augustine, yet extant (of Augustine it is manifest) that they preached to the people in Latine. But in the East parts of the Empire, as in Greece, and Asia, and so likewise in Afrique, from the greater Syrtis Eastward, I cannot in my reading find that the Roman tongue euer grew into any commonvle. And the reason of it seemes to be, for that in those parts of the Empire it became most frequent, where the most, and greatest Romane Colonies, were planted. And therefore ouer all Italy, it became in a manner vulgar, wherein I haue obserued in Histories, and in Registers of ancient Inscriptions, to haue beene planted by the Romane at seuerall times aboue one hundred and fiftie Colonies : as in Afrique alio neere fixtie (namely fiftie seuen) in Spaine nine and twentie, in France, as it stretched to Rhene twentie fixe, and so in Illyricum, and other North parts of the Empire, betweene the Adriatique Sea, and Danubius verie many. And yet I doubt not, but in all these parts, more there were, then any Historie or ancient Inscription that now remaynes hath remembred.

Villei. l. 2.
Strab. l. 3. & 4.
Apuleius in Florid.

And contrariwise in those Countries, where fewest Colonies were planted, the Latine Tongue grew nothing so common : as for example heere in Britaine, there were but foure : 1 Torke, 2 Chester, 3 Caerluske in Monmouth-shire, and 4 Maldon in Essex (for London, although recorded for one by Onuphrius, was none, as is manifest by his owne Author, in the place that him selfe alleadgeth) and therefore we find in the British Tongue which yet remaineth in Wales, but little relish (to account of) or relikes of the Latine. And, for this cause also partly the East Prouinces of the Empire, sauoured little or nothing of the Roman Tongue. For first in Afrique beyond the greater Syrtis, I find neuer a Romane Colonie : for Onuphrius, that hath recorded In-dicia Cyrenensium for one, alleadging Vlpian for Author, was deceived by some faultie Copie of the Digests. For the corrected Copies haue Zernensium, and for Indicia, is to be read In Dacia, as is rightly obserued (for in it the Citie of Zerne was) by Pancirellus. Secondly in Egypt, there were but two : and to be briefe, Syria onely excepted, which had about twentie Romane Colonies, but most of them late planted, especially by Septimius Seuerus, and his Sonne Bassianus, to strengthen that side of the Empire against the Parthians (and yet I finde not that in Syria, the Romane Tongue, euer obtained any vulgar vse) the rest, had but verie few, in proportion to the largenesse of those Regions.

1 Eboracum.
2 Deburia.
3 I/ca.
4 Camalodunum
Onuphr. in Imp.
Rom.
k Tacit. l. 1. q.
Annal.
Onuphr. liam
citato.
l Vide Digest. l.
50. Tit. de Censibus leg. sciendum
Pancirell. id
Comment. Notit.
Imper. Orientalis
cap. 138.

Of which little estimation, and vse of the Roman Tongue, in the East parts, beside the want of Colonies fore-mentioned, and to omit their loue to their owne Languages, which they held to be more ciuill then the Romane, another great cause was the Greeke, which they had in farre greater account, both for Learning sake (inasmuch that Cicero confesseth, Græca (saith he) leguntur in omnibus fere gentibus, Latina suis finibus, exiguis sane, continentur) and for Traffique, to both which, the Gracians, aboue all Nations of the World were anciently giuen : to omit, both the excellencie of the Tongue it selfe, for sound and copiousnesse, and that it had forestalled the Romane in those parts. And certainly, in how little regard the Romane Tongue was had in respect of the Greeke in the Easterne Countries, may appeare by this, that all the learned men of those parts, whereof most liued in the flourish of the Romane Empire, haue written in Greeke, and not in Latine : as Philo, Iosephus, Ignatius, Iustine Martyr, Clemens Alexandrinus, Origen, Eusebius, Athanasius, Basil, Gregorie Nyssene, and Nazianzene, Cirill of Alexandria, and of Ierusalem, Epiphanius, Synetius, Pislemie Strabo, Porphyrie, and verie many others, so that of all the Writers that liued in Asia, or in Afrique, beyond the greater Syrtis, I thinke wee haue not one Author in the Latine Tongue : and yet more evidently may it appeare by another instance, that I finde in the third Generall Councell held at Ephesus, where the Letters of the Bishop of Rome, hauing beene

Cicer. in Orat.
pro Arabia poeta.

Consp. Ephesus.
Tome. cap. 12.
Edit. 1583.

read by his Legates, in the Latine Tongue, it was requested by all the Bishops, that they might be translated into Greeke, to the end they might be vnderstood. It is manifest therefore, that the Romane Tongue was neither vulgar, nor familiar in the East, when the learned men gathered out of all parts of the East vnderstood it not.

That the Roman Tongue abolished not the vulgar languages, in the forreine Prouinces of the Roman Empire.
Chap. 4.
Galat. de Situ
Iapigia p. 98.
Vin. l. 3. de tra- den. disciplin. & ad Aug. dec. Dei
li. 19. c. 7.
3 Scal. in Dia- trib. de ling. Eu- ropa.
4 Mcru. Cosm. part. 2. l. 2. c. 8.
5 Scal. loc. citato
m. Ortel. in tab.
Fris Oriental. n Scal. loc. citato 13 Bert. in de- scrip. Hungar.

OF the weake impression therefore of the Romane Language in the East, and large entertainment of it in the West, and other parts of the Empire, and of the causes of both, I haue said enough. But in what sort, and how farre it preuailed, namely, whether sofarre, as to extinguish the ancient vulgar Languages of those parts, and it selfe, in stead of them, to become the native and vulgar Tongue, as Galatens hath pronounced touching the Punisque, and Vines with many others of the Gallique and Spanish, I am next to consider.

First therefore, it is certainly obserued, that there are at this day, fourteene Mother Tongues in Europe (beside the Latine) which remaine, not onely not abolished, but little or nothing altered, or impaired by the Romanes. And those are the 1 Irish, spoken in Ireland, and a good part of Scotland: the 2 Brittish, in Wales, Cornwaile, and Brittaine of France: the 3 Cantabrian neere the Ocean about the Pyrene, Hills, both in France and Spaine: the 4 Arabique, in the stee-pie Mountaines of Granata, named Alpuxarrae: the 5 Finnique, in Finland, and Lapland: the 6 Dutch, in Germany, Belgia, Denmarke, Norway, and Suedia: the old 7 Canchian, (I take it to be that, for in that part the Canchi inhabited) in East Frisland, for although to strangers they speake Dutch, yet among themselves they vie a peculiar Language of their owne: the 8 Sla- nonish, in Polonia, Bohemia, Mosconia, Russia, and many other Regions (whereof I will after intreate in due place) although with notable difference of Dialect, as also the Brittish and Dutch, in the Countries mentioned haue: the old 9 Illyrian, in the Ile of Veggia, on the East side of Istria in the day of Liburnia: the 10 Greeke, in Greece, and the Ilands about it, and part of Ma- cedon, and of Thrace: the old 11 Epirotique in the Mountaine of Epirus: the 12 Hungarian in the greatest part of that Kingdome: the 13 Iazygian, in the North side of Hungaria betwixt Danubius and Tibiscus, vtterly differing from the Hungarian Language: And lastly, the 14 Tartarian, of the Precopenes, betweene the Riuer of Tanaas and Borysthenes, neere Meotis and the Euxine Sea, for, of the English, Italian, Spanish, and French, as being deriuations, or rather degenerations, the first of the Dutch, and the other three of the Latine, seeing I now speake one-ly of Originall or Mother Languages, I must be silent: And of all these fourteene it is certaine, except the Arabique, which is knowne to haue entred since, and perhaps the Hungarian, about which there is difference among Antiquaries, that they were in Europe in time of the Ro- mane Empire, and sixe or seuen of them, within the Limits of the Empire.

And indeed, how hard a matter it is, vtterly to abolish a vulgar Language, in a populous Countrey, where the Conquerers are in number farre inferiour to the Native Inhabitants, whatsoeuer Art be practized to bring it about, may well appeare by the vaine attempt of our Nor- man Conquerour: who although hee compelled the English, to teach their young children in the Schooles nothing but French, and set downe all the Lawes of the Land in French, and inforced all pleadings at the Law to be performed in that Language (which custome continued till King Edward the Third his dayes: who disanulled it) purposing thereby to haue conquered the Language together with the Land, and to haue made all French: yet, the number of English farre exceeding the Normans, all was but labour lost, and obtained no further effect, then the mingling of a few French words with the English. And euen such also was the successe of the Frankes among the Gauls, of the Gothes among the Italians and Spaniards, and may be obserued, to be short in all such conquests, where the Conquerors (beeing yet in number farre inferiour) mingle themselves with the Native Inhabitants. So that, in those Countries onely the mutation of Languages hath ensued vpon Conquests, where either the ancient Inhabitants haue bene destroyed or driuen forth, as wee see in our Countrey to haue followed of the Saxons, vi-stories, against the Brittaines, or else at least in such sort diminished, that in number they remained inferiour, or but little superiour to the Conquerours, whose reputation and authoritie might preuaile more then a small exceffe of multitude. But (that I digresse no further) because certaine Countreies are specially alleaged, in which the Romane Tongue is supposed most to haue preuailed, I will restraîne my discourse to them alone.

And first, that both the Punisque and Gallique Tongues, remained in the time of Alexan- der Senerus the Emperour (about two hundred and thirtie yeeres after our Sauours birth) appeareth by Vlpian, who liued at that time, and was with the Emperour of principall reputation, teaching, that • Fidei commissa might bee left, not onely in Latine, or Greeke, but in the Punisque or Gallique, or any other vulgar Language. Till that time therefore, it seemeth euident, that the Romane Tongue had not swallowed vp these vulgar Languages, and it selfe become vulgar in stead of them. But to insist a little in either seuerally. First, touching the Punisque, Aurelius Victor hath recorded of Septimius Senerus, that he was, Latinis liti-
ris sufficienter instructus, but Punica eloquentia promptior, quippe genitus apud Leptim prouincia Africa. Of which Emperors sister also dwelling at Leptis (it is the Citie wee now call Tripoly o Digest. l. 32.

lege Fidei com- missa.

Aur. Victor. in Epitom. Septim.
Sener.

in Barbarie) and coming to see him, Spartianus hath left written, that shee so badly spake the Latine tongue (yet was Leptis a Roman Colony) that the Emperour blushed at it. Secondly long after that, Hierome hath recorded of his time, that the Africans had somewhat altered their language from the Phœnicians: the language therefore then remained, for else how could hee pronounce of the present difference? Thirdly, Augustine (somewhat younger then Hierome, though living at the same time) writeth not onely, that b hee knew diuers Nations in Africke, that spake the Punike tongue, but also more particularly in c another place, mentioning a knowne Punike prouerb, he would speake it (he said) in the Latine, because all his Auditors (for Hippo, where hee preached was a Roman Colony) vnderstood not the Punike tongue: And some other d passages could I alleadge out of Augustine, for the direct confirmation of this point, if these were not euident and effectuell enough. Lastly, Leo Africanus, a man of late time, and good reputation, affirmeth, that there remaine yet in Barbary, very many descended of the old Inhabitants, that speake the African tongue, whereby it is apparent that it was neuer extinguished by the Romanes.

Secondly, touching the ancient Gallike tongue, that it also remained, and was not abolished by the Romanes in the time of Strabo, who flourished vnder Tiberius Cæsars gouernment, it appeareth in the fourth Book of his Geography, writing that the Aquitani differed altogether in language from the other Gauls, and they somewhat among themselues. Nor after that in Tacitus his time, noting that the language of France, differed little from that of Brittaine. No, nor long after that in Alexander Seuerus his time, for beside the authoritie of Ulpian before alleadged out of the Digestes, it is manifest by Lampridius also, who in the life of the said Alexander, remembreth of a Druide woman, that when hee was passing along, in his Expedition against the Germanes through France, cried out after him in the Gallike tongue (what needed that obseruation of the Gallike tongue, if it were the Romanes?) Goe thy way, quoth shee, and looke not for the victory, and trust not thy Souldiers. And though Strabo bee alleadged by some, to proue the vulgarnesse of the Latine tongue in France, yet is it manifest, that he speaketh not of all the Gauls, but of certaine onely, in the Prouince of Narbona, about Rhodanus, for which part of France there was speciall reason, both for the more ancient and ordinary conuersing of the Romanes, in that Region aboue all the rest: for of all the seuentene Prouinces of France, that of Narbona was first reduced into the forme of a Prouince: And the Citie of Narbona it selfe, being a Mart Towne of exceeding traffike, in those dayes, was the e first forraigne Colonie that the Romanes planted out of Italy, Carthage onely excepted: And yet furthermore, as Pliny hath recorded, many towns there were in that Prouince, infranchized, and indued with the libertie and right of the Latines. And yet for all this, Strabo saith not, that the Roman tongue was the natieue or vulgar language in that part, but that for the more part they spake it.

Thirdly, concerning the Spanish tongue: Howsoever Vines writ, that the languages of France and Spaine were vtterly extinguished by the Romanes, and that the Latine was become f Vernacula Hispania, as also Gallia & Italia; and g some others of the same Nation vaunt, that had not the barbarous Nations corrupted it, the Latine tongue would haue beene at this day, as pure in Spaine, as it was in Rome it selfe in Tullies time: yet neuertheless manifest it is, that the Spanish tongue was neuer vtterly suppressed by the Latine. For to omit that of Strabo, h that there were diuers languages in the parts of Spaine, as also in i another place, that of the speech of Aquitaine was liker the language of the Spaniards, then of the other Gauls: It is a common consent of the best Historians and Antiquaries of Spaine, k that the Cantabrian tongue, which yet remaineth in the North part of Spaine (and hath no relish in a manner at all of the Roman) was either the ancient, or at least one of the ancient languages of Spaine. And although l Strabo hath recorded, that the Roman tongue was spoken in Spaine, yet hee speaketh not indefinitely, but addeth a limitation, namely, about Betis. And that in that part of Spaine, the Roman tongue so preuailed, the reason is easie to be assigned by that wee finde in Pliny. Namely, that in 50 Betica, were eight Roman Colonies, eight Municipall Cities, and twentie nine others indued with the right and libertie of the Latines.

Lastly, to speake of the Pannonian tongue (Pannonia contained Hungarie, Austria, Stiria, and Carinthia) it is certaine that the Roman did not extinguish it: For first, Paterculus (who is the onely Author that I know alleadged for that purpose) saith not, that it was become the language of the Countrey, for how could it, being but euen then newly conquered by Tiberius Cæsar? but onely that in the time of Augustus, by Tiberius his meanes the knowledge of the Roman tongue was spread in all Pannonia. And secondly, Tacitus after Tiberius his time hath recorded, that the Os in Germany might be knowne to be no Germanes, by the Pannonian tongue, which a little before in the same booke, he plainly acknowledged to be spoken euen then in Pannonia.

And as for these reasons, it may well seeme that the Roman tongue became not the vulgar language in any of these parts of the Empire, which are yet specially instanced, for the large vulgarity of it: So haue I other reasons to perswade mee, that it was not in those parts, nor in any other forraigne Countries subiect to the Empire, either generally or perfectly spoken. Not

Spartian. in S. uero post med. a Antonin. in Itinerario. Hieron. in Proem. l. 2. Com. Epist. ad Gala. in fine. b August. de Ciu. Dei. l. 16. c. 6. c Id. Serm. 25. de verb. Apost. d Id. Expos. in Chart. Epist. ad Roman. circa med.

Leo 1. Africa. l. 1. descript. Africa. cap. de Ling. Africanis. Strab. l. 4. in princip. Tacit. in Iulio Agricola. Lamprid. in Alexander. Seuerus. longe post med.

Strab. l. 4. long. ante med.

e Vel. Patercul. l. 1.

Plin. l. 3. c. 4.

f Vid. Annot. ad August. de Ciu. Dei. l. 19. c. 7. Id. l. 3. de tradend. Discip. g Marin. Sicul. de Reb. Hispan. nic. l. 5. c. 4. h Strab. l. 3. paul. a principio. Id. l. 4. in princip. i Marian. de Reb. Hispan. l. 1. c. 5. Marin. Sicul. de reb. Hispan. l. 4. c. ultim. & Alib. k Strab. l. 3. c. 1. Plin. l. 3. c. 1. Vel. Patercul. l. 2.

*Tacit. de morib. Germ. prope fin. * Lib. eod. parum a medio.*

generally ( I say ) because it is hard to conceiue , that any whole Countries , specially because so large as the mentioned are , should generally speake two languages , their owne Natiue and the Romane. Secondly , there was not any Law at all of the Romans, to inforce the subdued Nations , either to vse vulgarly the Romane tongue, or not to vse their owne natiue languages ( and very extreame and vnreasonable had such Lords beene, as should compell men by Lawes, both to doe, and to speake onely what pleased them. ) Neither do I see any other necessitie, or any prouocation to bring them to it, except for some speciall sorts of men, as Merchants, and Citizens, for their better traffick and trade, Lawyers for the knowledge and practise of the Romane Lawes, which carried force throughout the Empire (except priuiledged places) Schollers for learning, Souldiers, for their better conuersing with the Romane Legions, and with the Latines, Trauellers, Gentle men, Officers, or such other, as might haue occasion of affaires and dealing with the Romans. But it soundeth altogether vnlike a truth, that the poore scattered people abroad in the Country, dwelling either in solitarie places, or in the small Towns and Villages, either generally spake it, or could possibly attaine vnto it. An example whereof, for the better euidence may at this day bee noted ; in those parts of Greece, which are subiect to the Dominions of the Turks and Venetians : for as Bellonius hath obserued , the people that dwell in the principall Townes and Cities, subiect to the Turke, by reason of their trade, speake both the Greeke and Turkish tongues, as they also that are vnder the Venetians, both the Greeke and Italian, but the Countrey people vnder both governments, speake onely Greeke. So likewise in Sardinia, as is recorded by * others, the good Townes by reason of the Spanish Gouvernement and Trade, speake also the Spanish tongue, but the Countrey people the naturall Sardinian language onely : And, the like by our owne experience wee know to bee true, in the Prouinces subiect to our King, namely, both in Wales and Ireland. It seemeth therefore that the Romane tongue was neuer generally spoken in any of the Roman Prouinces forth of Italy.

Bellon. Obseruat. l. 1. c. 4.

* Gesner. in Myth. in Lingua Sardinica.

Rocca de Diu. lect. in Ling. Sardinica. Porcacchi. l. de No. Isola. nel. descritt. di Sardinia.

Vide August. in Enarrat. Ps. 123. c. 138. & l. 2. de doctrin. Chris. c. 13. & Tract. 7 in Ioan.

Of the beginning of the Italian, French, and Spanish languages. Chap. 5.

And certainly much lesse can I perswade my selfe, that it was spoken abroad in the Prouinces perfectly. First, because it seemes vnpossible for forraigne Nations, specially for the rude and common people, to attaine the right pronouncing of it, who, as wee know doe ordinarily much mistake the true pronouncing of their natiue language : for which very cause, wee see the Chaldee tongue to haue degenerated into the Syriake among the Iewes, although they had conuersed seuentie yeeres together among the Chaldeans. And moreouer, by daily experience wee see in many, with what labour and difficulty, euen in the very Schooles, and in the most docible part of their age, the right speaking of the Latine tongue is attained. And to conclude, it appeareth by Augustine in sundry places, that the Roman tongue was vnperfect among the Africans (euen in the Colonies) as pronouncing offsum for os, floriet for floribit, dolus for dolor, and such like, insomuch that hee confesseth, hee was faine sometimes to vse words that were no Latine, to the end they might vnderstand him.

The common opinion, which supposeth that these Nations in the flourish of the Romane Empire, spake vulgarly and rightly the Latine tongue, is, that the mixture of the Northerne barbarous Nations among the ancient Inhabitants, was the cause of changing the Latine tongue into the languages, which now they speake, the languages becomming mingled, as the Nations themselves were. Who, while they were inforced to attemper and frame their speech, one to the vnderstanding of another, for elie they could not mutually expresse their mindes ( which is the end for which Nature hath giuen speech to men ) they degenerated both, and so came to this medly wherein now wee finde them.

Which opinion if it were true, the Italian tongue, must of necessitie haue it beginning about the 480. yeere of our Sauour : Because, at that time, the Barbarous Nations began first to inhabit Italy, vnder Odoacer, for although they had entred and wasted Italy long before, as first, the Gothes vnder Alaricus, about the yeare 414 : Then the Hunnes together with the Gothes, and the Heruli, and the Gepidi, and other Northerne people vnder Attila, about An. 450. Then the Wandales vnder Gensericus, crossing the Sea out of Africke, about An. 456. ( to omit some other inuasions of those barbarous Nations, because they prospered not ) yet none of these, settled themselves to stay and inhabit Italy, till the Heruli, as I said vnder Odoacer, about An. 480. or a little before entred and possessed it neere hand twenty yeeres, hee being ( proclaimed by the Romans themselves ) King of Italy, about sixteene yeeres, and his people becomming inhabitants of the Countrey. But, they also, within twenty yeeres after their entrance, were in a manner rooted out of Italy, by Theodoricus King of Gothes, who allotted them onely a part of Piemont about Turin to inhabit : for Theodoricus being by Zeno then Emperour, inuited with the title of King of Italy, and hauing overcome Odoacer, somewhat afore the yeere 500. ruled peaceably a long time, as King of Italy, and certaine others of the Gothes Nation succeeded after him in the same government, the Gothes in the meane space, growing into one with the Italians, for the space neere hand of sixtie yeeres together. And although after that, the Dominion of Italy was by Narses againe recouered to the Empire in the time of Iustinian, and many of the Gothes expelled Italy, yet tarre more of them remained, Italy in that long time being growne well with their seed and posteritie.

steritie. The Heruli therefore, with their associates were the first, and the Goths the second of the barbarous Nations that inhabited Italy. The third and the last, were the Longbards, who comming into Italy about the yeere 570. and long time obtaining the Dominion and possession, in a manner of all Italy, namely about two hundred yeeres, and during the succession of twenty Kings or more, were neuer expelled forth of Italy, although at last their Dominion was fore broken by Pipin King of France, and after more defaced by his sonne Charles the Great, who first restrained and confined it to that part, which to this day, of them retaineth the name of Lombardy, and shortly after vtterly extinguished it, carrying away their last King captiue into France. Now although diuers * Antiquaries of Italy there bee, which referre the beginning of the Italian tongue, and the change of the Latine into it, to these third Inhabitants of Italy the Longbards, by reason of their long and perfect coalition into one with the Italian people: yet certainly, the Italian tongue was more antient then so, for besides that there remaines yet to bee seene (as men * worthy of credit report) in the King of France his Library at Paris, an Instrument written in the Italian tongue, in the time of Iustinian the first, which was before the comming of the Longbards into Italy: another euidence more vulgar, to this effect, is to be found in Paulus Diaconus his Miscellane History: where wee read that in the Emperour Mauritius his time, about the yeer 590. when the Langbards had indeed entred, and wasted Gallia Cisalpina, but had not inuaded the Roman dition in Italy, that by the acclamation of the word Torna, Torna, (plaine Italian) which a Roman Souldier spake to one of his fellowes afore, (whose beast had ouerturned his burthen) the whole Army (marching in the darke) began to cry out, Torna, Torna, and so fell to flying away.

* Blond in Ital.
Illustrata in Marchia Trivis-ana.
Tinto della Nobilita diuerona. l.
2. c. 2. & alij.
* Lipp. de Pro-nuntiat Ling. lat.
cap. 3. & Merul.
par. 2. Cosmog.
l. 4. c. 18.
Paul. Diacon.
hist. Miscel. l. 17.
longe ante med.

But the French tongue, if that afore mentioned were the cause of it, began a little before, in the time of Valentinian the third, when in a manner all the West part of the Empire fell away (and among the rest, our Countrey of England, being first forsaken of the Romans themselues, by reason of grieuous warres at their owne doores, and not long after conquered and possessed by the Saxons, whose posteritie (for the most part wee are) namely, about the yeere 450: France being then subdued and peaceably possessed by the Franks and Burgundions, Nations of Germany: the Burgundions occupying the Eastward and outward parts of it, toward the Riuer of Rhene, and the Franks all the inner Region. For although France before that had beene inuaded by the Wandali, Sueni, and Alani, and after by the Goths, who hauing obtained Aquitayn for their Seat and Habitation, by the grant of the Emperour Honorius, expelled the former into Spaine, about An. 410: yet notwithstanding, till the Conquest made by the Franks and Burgundions, it was not generally, nor for any long time mingled with strangers, which after that Conquest began to spread ouer France, and to become native Inhabitants of the Countrey.

But of all, the Spanish tongue for this cause must necessarily bee most antient: for the Wandali and Alani, being expelled France, about the yeere 410, beganne then to inuade and to inhabite Spaine, which they held and possessed many yeeres, till the Goths being expelled by the Franks and Burgundians, out of France into Spaine, expelled them out of Spaine into Afrike (the Barbarous Nations thus like nailes driuing out one another) and not onely them, but with them all the remnants of the Roman Garrilons and gouernment, and so becomming the entire Lords and quiet possessours of all the Countrey, from whom also the Kings of Spaine that now are be descended. Notwithstanding, euen they also within lesse then three hundred yeeres after, were driuen by the Saracens of Afrike, into the Northerne and mountainous parts of Spaine, namely Asturia, Biscay, and Guipuscoa, till after a long course of time, by little and little they recovered it out of their hands againe, which was at last fully accomplished by Ferdinand, not past one hundred and twenty yeeres agoe, there hauing passed in the meane time, from the Moors first entrance of Spaine at Gibraltar, till their last possession in Granada, about seuen hundred and seuentie yeeres.

Whereby you may see also, when the Roman tongue began to degenerate in Afrike (if that also, as is supposed spake vulgarly the Latine tongue, and if the mixture of barbarous people were cause of the decay, and corruption of it) namely, about the yeere 430. for about that time, the Wandali and Alani, partly wearied with the Gottish warre in Spaine, and partly inuited by the Gouernour Bonifacius entred Afrike, vnder the leading of Gensericius, a part whereof for a time, they held quietly, for the Emperour Valentinianus gift: But shortly after, in the same Emperours time, when all the West Prouinces in a manner fell vtterly away from the Empire, they also tooke Carthage; and all the Prouince about it, from the Romans. And although the dominion of Afrike was regained by Belizarius to the Empire almost 100. yeeres after, in Iustinians time, yet in the time of the Emperour Leontius (almost 700. yeeres after our Sauiours birth) it was lost againe, being anew conquered, and possessed by the Sarracens of Arabia (and to this day remaineth in their hands) bringing together with their victories, the language also, and religion (Mahumatanisme) into all that coast of Afrike, euen from Egypt to the Strait of Gibraltar, about 2000. miles in length.

About which time also, namely during the gouernment of Valentinian the third, Bulgaria, Serua, Boscina, Hungarie, Austria, Stiria, Carinthia, Banaria and Suenia (that is, all the North-border

border of the Empire, along the River Danubius) and some part of Thrace, was spoiled and possessed by the Hunnes, who yet principally planted themselves in the lower Pannonia, whence it obtained the name of Hungarie.

Out of which discourse you may observe these two points. First, what the Countries were, in which those wandering and warring Nations after many transmigrations from place to place, fixed at last their final residence and habitation. Namely the Hunnes in Pannonia, the Wandales in Afrique, the East Gothes and Langbards in Italie, the West Gothes in Aquitaine and Spaine, which being both originally but one Nation, gained these names of East and West Gothes, from the position of these Countries which they conquered and inhabited, the other barbarous Nations of obscurer names, being partly consumed with the warre, and partly passing into the more famous appellations. And Secondly, you may observe, that the maine dissolution of the Empire, especially in Europe and Afrique, fell in the time of Valentinian the third, about the yeere 450. being caused by the barbarous Nations of the North (as after did the like dissolution of the same Empire in Asia, by the Arabians in the time of Heraclius, about the yeere 640.) and together with the ruine of the Empire in the West by the inundation of the foresaid barbarous Nations, the Latine tongue in all the Countries where it was vulgarly spoken (if it were rightly spoken any where in the West) became corrupted.

Wherefore if the Spanish, French and Italian tongues, proceeded from this cause, as a great number of learned men, suppose they did, you see what the antiquity of them is: But to deliver plainly my opinion, having searched as farre as I could, into the originals of those languages, and having pondered what in my reading, and in my reason I found touching them, I am of another minde (as some learned men also are) namely, that all those tongues are more ancient, and have not sprung from the corruption of the Latine tongue, by the inundation and mixture of barbarous people in these Prouinces, but from the first vnperfect impression & receiuing of it, in those forraine Countries. Which vnperfectnesse notwithstanding of the Roman tongue in those parts, although it had, as I take it beginning from this euill framing of forraine tongues, to the right pronouncing of the Latine, yet I withall easily beleue, and acknowledge that it was greatly increased, by the mixture and coalition of the barbarous Nations. So that me thinkes, I haue observed three degrees of corruption in the Roman tongue, by the degeneration whereof, these languages are supposed to haue receiued their beginning. The first of them was in Rome it selfe, where towards the latter end of the Common-wealth, and after, in the time of the Empire, the infinite multitude of seruants (which exceedingly exceeded the number of free borne Citizens) together with the vnspeakeable confluence of strangers, from all Prouinces, did much impair the purenesse of their language, and as Isidore hath obserued, brought many barbarismes and solacismes into it. Inso-much, that Tertullian in his time, when as yet none of the barbarous Nations had by inuasion touched Italie (for he liued vnder Septimius Seuerus gouernment) chargeth the Romans to haue renounced the language of their fathers. The Second step, was the vnperfect impression (that I touched before) made of the Roman tongue abroad in the forraine Prouinces among strangers, whose tongues could not perfectly frame to speake it aright. And certainly, if the Italians themselves, as is remembered by Cicero, failed of the right and perfect Roman pronounciation, I see not how the tongues of strange Nations, such as the Gauls and Spaniards were, should exactly vtter it. And the Third, was that mixture of many barbarous people (to which others attribute the beginning of the languages in question) which made the Latine, that was before vnperfect, yet more corrupt then they found it, both for words and for pronouncing: So that, I rather thinke the barbarous people to haue beene a cause of increasing the corruption, and of further alteration and departure of those languages from the Roman, then of beginning them. And me thinkes I haue very good reasons so to be perswaded, beside all the arguments aboue mentioned, which I produced, both for the remaining of the vulgar languages, and for the vnperfect speaking of the Roman tongue in the Prouinces. First, because the Gothes, Wandales, Langbards, as also the Franks and Burgundians language was, by the consent of learned men, the Germane tongue, which hath but small affinitie or agreement with either the Italian, French or Spanish tongues. Secondly, because among all the auncient writers (and they are many) which haue written of the miserable changes made in these West parts of the World, by those infinite swarmes of barbarous people, I finde not one, that mentioneth the change of any of these languages to haue beene caused by them: which me thinkes some auncient writers among so many learned, as those times, and those very Countries, abounded withall, and whose writings yet remaine, would certainly haue recorded. But though we finde mention in sundry auncient writers, of changing these languages into the Roman (whom yet I vnderstand of that vnperfect change before touched) yet nothing is found of any recharging of those languages from the Roman, into the state wherein now they are. But it is become a question onely of some late searchers of Antiquity, but of such, as determine in this point, without either sound reason or good countenance of Antiquitie.

These reasons perhaps (ioyned with the other aboue alleadged, whereby I endeoured to proue that the Latine tongue perfectly spoken, was neuer the vulgar language of the Ro-

Isidor. Origin.
l. 9. c. 1.
Tertul. in Apo- log. adu. Gent.
Cap. 6.

Cicer. l. 3. de Ora- tore.

* Irenic. Exeg.
Germ. l. 1. c. 31
Lazus. l. 10. de
Migra. Gent.
Corop. Origin.
Antwerp. l. 7.
Gesner. in Mi-
thridate. Rhenan lib. 2. Rev. Germ.
Leunclau. in Pandect. Turric.
§ 71. & Alij
multi.

Objections touching the extent of the Latine tongue and the beginning of the mentioned Languages with their solutions. Chap. 6.

man Prouinces) may perswade you as they haue done mee, that the barbarous Nations of the North, were not the first corrupters of the Latine tongue, in the Prouinces subiect to Rome, nor the beginners of the Italian, French and Spanish tongues: yet some difficulties I finde (I confesse) in writers touching these points, which when I haue resolved my opinion will appeare the more credible.

One is out of Plutarch in his Platonique questions, affirming that in his time all men in a manner spake the Latine tongue.

Plutar. in quest. platonice quest. 9

Another before touched that Strabo recordeth the Roman tongue to haue beene spoken in Spaine and France, and Apuleius in Africke, which also may appeare by sundry places in Augustine, whose Sermons seeme (as Cyprians also) to haue bin made to the people in that language.

Strab. l. 3. & 4. Apul. in Florid.

A third, how it falleth if these vulgar tongues of adulterate latin be so ancient, that nothing is found written in any of them of any great antiquity?

A fourth, how in Rome and Latium, where the Latine tongue was out of question, native, the latine could so degenerate, as at this day is found in the Italian tongue, except by some forraine corruption?

To the first of these I answer, either, that as Diuines are wont to interpret many generall propositions; Plutarch is to be vnderstood de generibus singulorum, not de singulis generum: So that the Latine tongue was spoken almost in euery Nation, but not of euery one in any forraine Nation: Or else, that they spake the Latine indeede, but yet vnperfectly and corruptly, as their tongues would frame to vtter it.

To the second I answer: first, that Strabo speaketh not generally of France or Spaine, but with limitation to certaine parts of both, the Prouince of Narbon in France, and the Tract about Bætis in Spaine. Secondly, that although they speake it, yet it followeth not, that they speake it perfectly and aright (except perhaps in the Colonies) so that I will not deny but it might be spoken abroad in the Prouinces, yet I say it was spoken corruptly, according as the peoples tongues would fashion to it, namely in such sort, that although the matter and body of the words, were for the most part Latine, yet the forme, and sound of them varied from the right pronouncing: which speech notwithstanding was named Latin, partly for the reason now touched, and partly because they learned it from the Romanes or Latines, as the Spaniards call their language Romance; till this day, which yet we know to differ much from the right Roman Tongue: and as Nithardus (Nephew to Charles the Great) in his Historie of the dissention of the sonnes of Ludouicus Pius called the French then vsuall (whereof he setteth downe examples) the Romane Tongue, which yet hath no more agreement with the Latine then the French hath that is now in vye. Thirdly, to the obiection of Cyprians and Augustines preaching in Latine, I answer that both a Hippo, whereof Augustine was Bishop, and b Carthage, whereof Cyprian was Archbishop, were Roman Colonies, consiting for the most part of the progenie of Romans, for which sort of Cities, there was speciall reason. Although neither in the Colonies themselves (as it seemeth) the Roman tongue was altogether vncompact, both for that I alleadged before out of Spartianus of Seuerus his sister dwelling at Leptis, and for that which I remembred out of Augustine for Hippo, where they spake c Ossum and d Floriet, and e Dolus, for Os and Florebit and dolor (and yet were both Leptis and Hippo Roman Colonies :) And yet it appeareth further by Augustine, that in their translations of the Scriptures, and in the Psalmes sung in their Churches, they had these corruptions, where yet (as it is like) their most corrupt and vulgar Latine had not place.

Nithard. de dissens. filior. Ludou. Pyl. 3.

Antonin. in Itinerario. Plin. l. vi. in Epi. l. 8. ad Canninum. a Plin. Sec. Hist. nat. l. 5. c. 4. Velleius l. 1. Ap. pian. l. de Bel. Punicis in fine. b Enarr. Ps. 138. c L. 2. de doc. Chr. c. 13. d Tract. 7. in Ioannem.

Tschud. Descript. Alpine cap. 36. Genebr. l. 4. Ebr. Secul. 11.

To the third I answer, that two reasons of it may be assigned: One, that learned men would rather write, in the learned and grammaticall, then in the vulgar and prouinciall Latine. Another, that the workes of vnlearned men would hardly continue till our times, seeing euen of the learned ancient writings, but few of infinite, haue remained. Furthermore it is obserued of the Germane tongue, by Tschudus and of the French by Genebrard, that it is very little about 400. yeeres, since bookes began to be written in both those languages, and yet it is out of all doubt, that the tongues are much ancients.

Quintil. Inst. Orator. l. 1. ca. 6.

Fest. in Diction. Latine loqui.

Fulu Ursin. not. ad Anton. Augu. de Lugh & enatus consus.

To the fourth I say, that there is no language, which of ordinary course is not subiect to change, although there were no forraine occasion at all: which the very fancies of men, weary of old words (as of old things) is able enough to worke, which may be well proued by obseruations and instances of former changes, in this very tongue (the Latine) whereof I now dispute. For Quintilian recordeth, that the Verses of the Salij which were said to be composed by Numa could hardly be vnderstood of their Priests, in the latter time of the Common-wealth, for the abluteness of the speech. And Festus in his booke de verborum significatione, who lived in Augustus Cæsars time, hath left in obseruation, that the Latine speech, which (saith he) is so named of Latium, was then in such manner changed, that scarcely any part of it remained in knowledge. The Lawes also of the Roman Kings, and of the Decemviri, (called the Lawes of the twelue Tables) collected and published in their owne words by Fulu Ursinus are no lesse euident testimonies, if they be compared with the later Latine, of the great alteration of that language.

Further-

Polyb. l. 3.

*Vid. Paul. Me-vul. cosm. par. 2.
l. 4 c. 18. & Celsum. Cit. tad. in Tractat. de Orig.
ling. vulgaris.
Ital. cap. 7. & c.

Furthermore, Polybius hath also recorded, that the articles of league, betwixt the people of Rome and of Carthage, made presently after the expulsion of the Kings from Rome, could very hardly in his time be vnderstood, by reason of the old forsaken words, by any of the best skilled Antiquaries in Rome. In which time notwithstanding, they received very few strangers into their Citie, which mixture might cause such alteration, and the difference of time was but about three hundred and fifty yeeres. And yet to adde one instance more, of a shorter revolution of time, and a cleerer evidence of the change, that the Roman tongue was subiect to, and that, when no forraigne cause thereof can be alleadged: there remaineth at this day (as it is certainly recorded) in the Capitall at Rome, though much defaced by the iniury of time, a Pillar (they call it Columnam rostratam, that is, decked with beakes of ships) dedicated to the memory of Duilius a Roman Consull, vpon a nauale victory obtained against the Carthaginians, in the first Punicke warre, not past one hundred and fifty yeeres before Cicerones time, when the Roman tongue ascended to the highest flourish of Elegancie, that euer it obtained: And thus the words of the Pillar are (those that may be read) as I finde them obserued, with the later Latine vnder them.

Exemet. Leciones. Macistratos. Castris. Exfociont. Pugnandod. Cepet. Eng. Nauebos. Mari.
Exemit. Legiones. Magistratus. Castris. Effugiunt. Pugnando. Cepit. Ing. Naubus. Mari.
Consol. Primos. Ornauet. Nauebons. Clascis. Panicas. Sumas. Cartacinienfis. Dictatored. Altod.
Consul. Primus. Ornauit. Naubus. Classes. Punicas. Summas. Carthaginiensis. Dictatore. Alto.
Societis. Triresmos. Naueis. Captom. Numei. Naualed. Pradad. Poplo, & c.
Socijs. Triremes. Naues. Captum. Nummi. Nauali. Prada. Populo, & c.

Where you see in many words, e. for i. c. for g. o. for u. and sometime for e. and d. superfluously added to the end of many words. But (to let forraigne tongues passe) of the great alteration that time is wont to work in languages, our own tongue may afford vs examples euident enough: wherein since the times neere after, and about the Conquest, the change hath beene so great, as I my selfe haue seene some evidences made in the time of King Henry the first, whereof I was able to vnderstand but few words. To which purpose also, a certaine remembrance is to be found in Holinsheds Chronicle, in the end of the Conquerours raigne, in a Charter giuen by him to the Citie of London.

Of the ancient Languages of Italie, Spaine, France and Afriue. Chap. 7.

But if the discourse of these points of Antiquitie, in handling whereof I haue declared, that while the Roman Empire flourished, it neuer abolished the vulgar languages, in France, or Spaine, or Afriue, howsoever in Italie. If that discourse I say, moue in you perhaps a desire, to know what the ancient vulgar languages of those parts were: I will also in that point, out of my reading and search into Antiquitie, giue you the best satisfaction that I can.

Inscrip. vet. pag.
143. 144. 145.
146.

And first for Italie: Certaine it is, that many were the ancient tongues in the seuerall Prouinces of it, tongues I say, not dialects, for they were many more. In Apulia, the Mesapian tongue: In Tuscanie and Vmbria, the Hetruscan, both of them vtterly perished: Yet in the booke of ancient Inscriptions, set forth by Gruter and Scaliger, there be some few Moniments registred of these languages, but not vnderstood now of any man. In Calabria both the higher and lower, and farre along the miritime coast of the Tyrrhene Sea, the Greeke. In Latium (now Campagna di Roma) the Latine. In Lombardie, and Liguria, the old tongue of France whatsoever it was. Of which last three, the two former are vtterly ceased to be vulgar: and the third, no where to be found in Italie, but to be sought for in some other Countie. And although, beside these fise, wee finde mention, in ancient writings of the Sabine, the Oscan, the Tusculan, and some other tongues, in Italie, yet were they no other then differing dialects of some of the former languages, as by good obseruations, out of Varro, Festus, Seruius, Paul. Diaconus, and others, might be easily prooued.

Cesar. l. 1. de Bel.
lo Gallie. in principio Strab. l. 4.
in princip.

Secondly, of France what the ancient tongue was, hath bin much disputed, and yet remaineth somewhat vncertaine: Some thinking it to haue beene the Germane, others the Greeke, and some the Walsh tongue. But, if the meaning of these resolvers be, that one language, whatsoever it were, was vulgar in all France, they are verie farre wide, Cesar and Strabo hauing both recorded, that there were diuers languages spoken in the diuers parts. But, to omit the speech of Aquitaine, which Strabo writeth to haue had much affinitie with the Spanish: And, of that part (in Cesar called Belgia) that at the Riuer of Rhene confined with Germanie, which for that neighbourhood, might partake much of the Germane tongue: To omit those I say, the maine question is, about the language of the Celta, which as inhabiting the middle part of France, were least of all infected with any forraigne mixture. And certainly, that it was not the Greeke, appeareth out of Cesar, written to Q. Cicero, then besieged by the Gaules in Greeke, lest the Gaules should intercept his Letters. And secondly, no lesse euidently by Varro, written of the Massilians that they spake three languages, the Roman, the Greeke, and the Gallique tongue: And thirdly, the remnants of that tongue, may serue for instance, whereof many old words are found disperfed in ancient writers, that haue no affinitie at all with the Greeke. The Greeke therefore, was not the ancient native language of the Gaules; Neither was it the Germane: for else it had

Ces. l. 5. de Bello Gallie. long.
post med.
Varro ap Hieron.
in prefat. l. 2.
Comment. epist.
ad Galat. & apud Isidorum li.
15. Orig. cap. 1.

had beene but an odde relation and reason of Cæsars, that Arionistus a German Prince, had liued so long in Gallia, that he spake the Gallique tongue: And that of Tacitus, that the Gallique tongue proued the Gothines to be no Germanes: And that of Suetonius, that Caligula compelled many of the Gaules to learne the Germane tongue. But Hottoman (of all that I haue read) speaking most distinctly, touching the originall and composition of the French tongue, diuideth it as now it is spoken, equally into two parts, of which he supposeth the one (and I thinke it is rather the greater part) to haue originall from the Latine tongue: and the other halfe, to be made vp, by the German and Greeke, and Brittish or Walsh words, each almost in equall measure. Of the deduction of the French words from the Greeke, you may read Perionius, Postell, and others: Of those from the Germane, Tschadus, Goropius, Isacius, &c. Of the Walsh, Lhuid, Camden, &c. Which last indeede for good reason, seemeth to haue beene the native language of the ancient Celta, rather then either the Greeke or Dutch tongues: for of the Greeke words found in that language, the neighbourhood of the Massilians, and their Colonies, inhabiting the maritime coast of Pro- uince, together with the ready acceptance of that language in France (mentioned by Strabo) may be the cause: As likewise of the Germane words, the Franks and Burgundions conquest, and possession of France, may be assigned for a good reason: But of the Brittish words none at all can be iustly giuen, saue, that they are the remnants of the ancient language. Secondly, it seemeth to be so by Tacitus, written, that the speech of the Gaules, little differed from that of the Brittaines. And thirdly, by Cæsar recording, that it was the custome of the Gaules that were studious of the Druides discipline, often to passe ouer into Brittaine to be there instructed: wherefore seeing there was no vse of bookes among them, as is in the same place affirmed by Cæsar, it is appa- rent that they spake the same language.

Thirdly, the Spanish tongue as now it is, consisteth of the old Spanish, Latine, Gottish, and Arabique (as there is good reason it should, Spaine hauing beene so long, in the possessions of the Romans, Gothes, and Moors) of which, the Latine is the greatest part (next it the Arabique) and therefore they themselves call their language Romance. And certainly I haue seene an Epistle written by a Spaniard, whereof euery word was both good Latine and good Spanish, and an example of the like is to be seene in Merula. But the language of Valentia and Catalonia, and part of Portugall, is much tempered with the French alio. Now the ancient and most generall language of Spaine, spoken ouer the Country before the Romaines conquest, seemeth to me out of question, to haue beene the Cantabrian tongue, that namely which yet they speake in Biscay, Guipuscoa, Nauarre, and Asturia, that is to say, in the northerne and mountainous parts of Spaine, neere the Ocean, with which the Visconian tongue also in Aquitaine, neere the Pyrene hills, hath as there is good reason (for out of those parts of Spaine the inhabitants of Gascogne came) much affinitie and agreement. And my reason for this opinion is, that in that part of Spaine, the people haue euer continued without mixture of any forraigne Nation, as being neuer subdued by the Carthaginians, nor by the Moors, no, nor by the Romans (for all their long warring in Spaine) before Augustus Cæsars time, and for the hillinesse, and barrenesse, and vnpleasantnesse of the Countrey, hauing nothing in it, to inuite strangers to dwell among them. For which cause, the most ancient Nations and languages are for the most part preserved in such Countries: as by Thucydides is specially obserued, of the Aussques and Arcadians, in Greece, dwelling in barren soiles: Of which Nations the first, for their Antiquitie, vaunted of themselves that they were αὐτόχθονες, and the second, γενέτλητοι, as if they had beene bred immediately of the Earth, or borne before the Moone. Another example whereof wee may see in Spaine it selfe, for in the steepy Mountaines of Granata, named Alpuxarras, the progeny of the Moors yet retaine the Arabique tongue (for the Spaniards call it Arauiga) which all the other remnants of the Moors in the plainer Region had vtterly forgotten and receiued the Castilian (till their late expulsion out of Spaine) for their vulgar language. The like whereof, is also to be seene in the old Epirotike speech and Nation, which yet continueth in the mountainous part of Epirus, being (for the tongue) vtterly extinguished in all the Country beside. And (to let forraigne instances goe) in the Brittaines or Welsh-men in the hilly part of our owne Countrey. What the reason thereof may bee, I will not stand now curiously to enquire: whether that being inured to labour, to watching, to sundry distemperatures of the aire, and much other hardnesse (for otherwise their liuing will not bee gotten out of such barren ground) they proue vpon occasion good and able Souldiers? Or, that the craggy Rockes and Hills (like fortresses of Natures owne erecting) are easily defended from forraigne Inuaders? Or that their vnpleasant and fruitlesse soile, hath nothing to inuite strangers to desire it? Or that wanting riches, they want also the ordinary companions of riches, that is proud and audacious hearts, to prouoke with their iniuries other Nations to be reuenged on them, either by the conquest or deuolation of their Countries? But whatsoeuer the cause may be, certainly in effect so it is, that the most ancient Nations and Languages, are for the most part to bee found in such vnpleasant and fruitlesse Regions: Insomuch that the Biscaynes, who gaue mee occasion of this digression, vaunt of themselves among the Spaniards, that they are the right Hidalgos, (that is Gentlemen) as some also report of the Welsh-men here in Brittaine to say of themselves, which yet I that am their neighbour (to confesse a truth) neuer heard them say.

Cæs. l. de Bello Gallico. Tacit. l. de mor. German. prope finem. Sueton. in Caligula. c. 47. Hotom. in l. r. r. cogall. c. 2. Perion l. de Cognat. Li. 3. Gal. c. 1. de 12. Ling. Tschad. in Descr. Rhet. Alp. c. 8. Gorop. in Francicis. Isac. in Glossario Pr. 10. gal. Lhuid. in D. c. r. Britan. Camden in Britannia. Strab. l. 4. Tacit. in Julio Agricola. Cæs. l. 6. de Bel. Gallico.

Merul. Cosmogr. part. 2. l. 2. c. 8.

Thucyd. l. 1. parli. a princip.

Now

Galut. de situ.
Iapyg. pag. 98.
* Gesner. in Mithridate. in Ling. Afric. & Arab.
Roccha de dialect. in Ling.
Arabica.
Postell. de Ling.
12. in ling. Arab.
Mas. in Gram.
Syriaca. prop.
Init. Bibliand.
de ration. Linguar.
Schidder. in Lex. Penta-glotto in voce הרר Mart.
Galeotti. de
doct. promiscua.
c. 6. & alii multi * Leo Afric. l. 1.
Descrip. Afr.
cap. de Ling.
Africa.
Flo. in Epitom.
Liu. l. 51.
Strab. l. 17.
Plin. l. 15. c. 18.
Strab. li. citato.
Mela. l. 1. c. 7.
Liu. li. 33. Plin.
l. 5. c. 19. Appia.
l. de Bel. Punicis in principio.
Curtius. l. 4. &
alii plures.
* פנינים
Arias Mont. lib.
Chanani. c. 8.
Postell. in descrip. Syrie. c. de Syrie Nominib.
Matth. 15. 22.
Mark. 7. 26.
Ios. 5. 1.
* Gen. 10. 19.

Strab. l. 16. non long. ante med.
Plin. l. 5. c. 12.
Ptolem. Tab. 4.
Asie. Dionys. Alex. in Perieges.

Aug. expos. inchoat. epist. ad
Roman. in med.

Now lastly, touching the Punike tongue, as I am not of Galatens his opinion, that it was vtter-ly extinguished by the Romanes: So neither can I bee of the phantasie (for it is no better) that many * other learned men are: namely, that it was the Arabike, that is to say the same language, that is vulgar in Afrike at this day. For it is well knowne to the skilfull in Histories, that the Punikes were of another off-springs (not of Arabian race) and that it is not yet a thousand yeeres, since that tongue was by the Arabians, together with their victories brought into Afrike. And as certaine also it is, that the remnants of the Africans progeny, as * Leo Africanus hath recorded, hath a different language from the Arabike. But the Punike tongue seemeth to mee out of question, to haue bin the Chananitish or old Hebrew language, though I doubt not somewhat altered from the originall pronuntiation, as is wont in tract of time to befall Colonies, planted among 10 strangers farre from home. For first Carthage it selfe, the Queene of the Cities of Afrike (and well might she be termed so, that contained in circuit 24. miles, as Plorus in his abridgement of Linie hath recorded, and by the vtter wall 360. furlongs (that is 45. miles) as it is in Strabo: And held out in emulation with Rome, as is noted by Pliny, 120. yeeres, and to conclude (before the second Punike warre) had in subiection all the Coast of the Mediterrane Sea, from the bottome of the greater Syrtis in Afrike, to the Riuer Ebro (Iberus) in Spaine, which is about 2000. miles of length, that the same Carthage I say, and diuers other Cities of Afrike (of which Pliny nameth Vuca and Leptis, as being the principall) were Colonies of the Phœnicians, and namely of the Tyrians, is not onely by Strabo, Mela, Linie, Plinie, Appian, and many other certaine Authors, acknow- 20 ledged, and by none denied, but also the very names of Pœni and Punics, being but variations or mutilations of the name Phœnicij import so much, and lastly their language assureth it. For Hierome writing that their language was growne somewhat different from the Phœnician tongue, doth manifestly in these words imply, it had beene the same.

And what were the Phœnicians but Chananites? The Phœnicians I say, of whose exceeding merchandizing wee read so much in antient Histories, what were they but Chananites, whose very name * signifieth Merchants: for, the very same Nation, that the Græcians called Phanicians (φονικς) and the Romans in imitation of that name Pœnos & Punicos, for the exceeding store of good Palmes, wherewith that Countrey abounded: In- 30 somuch that in Monuments of Antiquitie, the Palme Tree is obserued for the Ensigne of Phœnicia: the same Nation I say, called themselues, and by the Israelites their next neighbours, were called Chananites. And that they were indeed no other, I am able easily to proue. For first, the same wo- man that in Matthew is named a Canaanite, is in Marke called a Syropœnician. 2. Where mention is made in Iosua, of the Kings of Canaan, they are in the Septuagints translation named, βασιλεις & φοι 3. To put it out of question. All that Coast, from Sidon to Azzab (that was Gaza) neere to Gerar, is registred by * Moses, to haue beene pos- sessed by the posteritie of Chanaan: Of which coast the more Northrene part about the promontory of Carmel, or rather from the riuer Chorsequ (Kison the Jewes called it) that neere the promontory of Carmell, entreth the Sea to the Citie of Orthofa, about Sidon Northward, is by Strabo, Pliny, Ptolomy and others, referred to Phœnicia (although Strabo ex- tend that name, along all the Maritime Coast of Palestina also, to the confines of Egypt, as Dionysius Periegetes also doth, placing Ioppa and Gaza, and Elath in Phœnicia) which very tract to haue been the seuerall possessions of Zidon, and Cebth, and Girgash, and Hark, and Arnade, and Chamash, six of the eleuen sonnes of Canaan (the other fiue inhabiting more to the South in Palestina) they that are skilfull in the ancient Chorography of the Holy Land cannot be ignorant. Seeing therefore out of this part of the Land of Canaan, (for in this part Tyrus was) the Carthaginians, and other Colonies of the Phœnicians in Afrike came, it is out of all doubt, that they were of the Chananites progeny: and for such in very deed, and no other, they reputed and professed themselues to be: for as Austine hath left recorded, who was borne and liued among them, the Countrey people of the Punikes, when they were asked touching themselves what they were, they would make answer that they were Channai, meaning, 60 as Austine himselfe doth interpret them Canaanites.

Certain therfore it is, that the natieue Punike language was the Chananitish tongue: but that I added for explication this clause (or the old Hebrew, meaning by the old Hebrew, that which was vulgarly spoken among the Jewes before the captiuitie) you will perhaps suspect my credit, and φονικς in the Greek signifieth the Palme, for as touching the deduction of the name Phœnicia, either from פון by Montanus, or from פניני by Postellus, signifying the delicacy of the Inhabitants by the first, and their obseruation or adoration of the fire, by the second, they are but late sprung fantasies, and haue not any ground of reason at all: for as much, as in all the Hebrew writings of the Bible, that Countrey is neuer termed by any name sounding toward Phœnicia, but in the Greeke onely. But in many old coynes that I haue seene, I haue noted the Palme Tree, as the speciall cognifance of Phœnicia, (as I haue also the Oliue branch, and Conies to be of Spaine: the Horse of Mauritania: the Elephant, or the spoile of the Elephant of Afrike: the Camell of Arabia: the Crocodile, or the Bird Itis, of 40 Egypt: and diuers other specialties for other Countreies:) And namely I haue seene sundry old Coynes of the Emperour Vespasian, of seuerall deuices and imagery, stamped for a memoriall of his conquest of Iudea, and taking of Ierusalem (for the Inscription is in euery of them, Iudea capta) & in each of them, I especially obserued a woman sitting in a sad and mournfull fashion, with her backe to a Palme tree: wherein, I make no doubt, but the desolate woman signifieth Iudea, and the Palme, Phœnicia, euen as Phœnicia is immediately toward the North, at the backe of Iudea. 50 and bee offended, for I am not ignorant how superstitiously Diuines for the most part are affected toward the Hebrew tongue: yet when I had set down the Africans language to haue been the Canaanitish tongue, I thought good to adde for plainesse sake (or the old Hebrew) because I take them indeed to bee the very same language, and that Abraham and his posterity brought it not out of Chaldea, but learned it in the Land of Chanaan. Neither is this opinion of mine, a meere paradox and fantasie, but I haue * three or foure of the best skilled in the language and antiquities of that Nation, that the later times could afford of the same minde: And certainly, by * Isaiah it is called in direct termes, the language of Chanaan: And it is moreover manifest, that the names of the places and Cities of Chanaan (the old names I mean by which they were called before the Israelites dwelt in them, as is to be seene in the whole course of the Bookes of Moses and of Ioshuah) were Hebrew names: touching which point, although I could produce other forceable reasons, such as might (except my fantasie delude mee) vex the best wit in the world to giue them iust solution, yet I will adde no more, both to auoid prolixity, and because I shall haue in another place fitter occasion.

But to speake particularly of the Punike tongue, which hath brought vs into this discourse, and which I proued before to bee the Canaanitish language: it is not onely * in one place pronounced by Augustine (who knew it well, no man better) to haue neere affinitie with the Hebrew tongue, which also the * Punike wordes disperfed in the writings of Augustine, and others (as many as come to my remembrance) proue to be true. But more effectually in * another place, to agree with it in very many, yea almost in euery word. Which speech, seeing they could in no sort haue from the Israelites, being not of Abrahams posteritie (both because no such transmigration of them is remembred in the holy Histories, and for that the Punike Colonies, are specially mentioned to haue beene deduced from Tyre, which neuer came into the possession of the Israelites) but from the Canaanites, whose off-fpring they were: It followeth thereupon that the language of the Canaanites, was either the very same, or exceeding neere the Hebrew. And certainly, touching the difference that was betweene the Hebrew and the Punike, I make no doubt, but the great distance from their primitiue habitation, and their conuersation with strangers among whom they were planted, and together with both the length of time, which is wont to bring alteration to all the Languages in the World, were the causes of it. And although that Punike speech in Plantus, which is the onely continued speech of that language, that to my knowledge remaineth extant in any Author, haue no such great conuenience with the Hebrew tongue, yet I assure my selfe the faults and corruptions that haue crept into it by many transcriptions, to haue beene the cause of so great difference, by reason whereof it is much changed from what at first it was when Plantus writ it, about one thousand eight hundred yeeres agoe: And specially because in transcribing thereof there would bee so much the lesse care taken, as the language was lesse vnderstood by the Writers, and by the Readers, and so the escapes lesse subiect to obseruation and controlement.

* As in the Punike tongue Salu three. Augustin. in expof. inchoat. epist. ad Roman. Heb. שלש. Edom, bloud. Enar. Psalm. 126. Heb. חרם. Mamon, lucre, De Sermon. Dom. in Mont. l. 2. c. 14. Heb. ממן. Bal. the Lord. Quelt. in Iudic. cap. 16. Heb. בעל. Samen, Heauen. Ibid. Heb. שמרים. Messe, to annoint. Traff. 15. in Ioan. Heb. משה. Alma, a Virgine. Hieron. in c. 7. Isai. Heb. עלמה. Gadir. a fence or wall. Plinie. l. 4. c. 22. גדר. and some other that diligence might oblerue.

Many are the Nations that haue for their vulgar Language, the Slauonish Tongue in Europe, and some in Asia. Among which the principall in Europe are the Slauonians themselves inhabiting Dalmatia and Liburnia, the West Macedonians, the Epirotes, the Bosnates, Seruians, Russians, Bulgarians, Moldauians, Podolians, Russians, Muscovites, Bohemians, Polonians, Silesians. And in Asia the Circassians, Mangrelians, and Gazarites. These I say are the principall, but they are not all: for Gesner and Roccha reckon vp the names of sixtie Nations, that haue the Slauonian tongue for their vulgar language. So, that it is knowne to be vulgarly spoken ouer all the East parts of Europe (in more then a third part of the whole) euen to the vtmost bounds of it the Riuer of Droyna and Tanaus; Greece and Hungary, and Walachia onely excepted. Indeed the Regions of Serua, Bosina, Bulgaria, Rascia, Moldauia, Russia and Moscouia, namely all the Nations of the Easterne parts, which celebrate their diuine seruice after the Greeke Ceremony, and professe Ecclesiasticall obedience to the Patriarch of Constantinople, writ in a diuers sort of Character from that of the Dalmatians, Croatians, Istrians, Polonians, Bohemians, Silesians and other Nations toward the West (both which sorts of Characters are to bee seene in Possels Booke of the Orientall languages) of which, this last is called the Dalmatian or Illyrian Character, and was of * Hieromes diuising, that other bearing for the most part much resemblance with the Greeke, is termed the Seruian Character, and was of * Cyrills inuention: for which cause, as Roccha hath remembred, they terme the language written in that Character Chiuirizza. But yet notwithstanding the difference of Characters in the writing of these Nations, they speake all of them (the difference of dialect excepted) the same language.

But yet is not the Slauonike tongue (to answer your question) for all this large extent, the vulgar language of the Turkish Empire. For of the Turks Dominion onely Epirus, the West part * Possel lib. de Phœnic. l. c. 2. §. 5. Aras Mont. l. c. 2. Chanaan c. 9. Genebrard l. 1. c. 1. Chron an. Dilu. uij. 131. Scalig. ad fest. indi. Sarra. & in ep. ad Vbert. & ad Tomson. * Isa. 19. 18. * Aug. in ser. 35. de verb. Dom. in Idang sec. Luc.

* Aug l. 2. cont. litter. Petilian cap. 104.

* Plut. in Paneg. l. 1. 6.

Of the largesse of the Slauonish, Turkish, & Arabike languages. C. 8.

Gesner in Mi. l. 1. c. 1. Illyrica. Boccha in Append de dialect. in Illyrica.

* Possel de l. n. Dalmat hæch. in Biblioth. Vat. cap. 161. c. 1. §. 1. Roccha. lib. citato pag. 103. id pag. 111.

of Macedon, Bosnia, Serbia, Bulgaria, Rascia, and part of Thrace, and that hee hath in Dalmatia and Croacia (beside the Mengrelli in Asia) speake vulgarly the Slavonian tongue. But no where for the more precise limitation, neither in Asia nor in Europe is that language spoken more Southward, then the North Parallel of forty degrees: some part of Epirus onely excepted: I meane it is not spoken as the vulgar language of any Nation more Southward. For else, being acceptable and vsuall, as it is in the Great Turkes Serrail at Constantinople, and familiar with most of the Turkish Souldiers, by reason of their Garrisons and other great imployment in those parts toward the confines of Christian Princes, all which parts as before I said (Hungarie and Walachia excepted) speake that language: for these reasons I say, it is spoken by diuers particular men in many places of the Turkish Dominion, and the Ianizares and Officers for the most part can speake it, and many others also of the better sort, but yet the generall and vulgar language of his Dominion (excepting those places afore mentioned) it is not.

Michou. l. 1. de
Sarmatia. c. 15.
Rocch de dialect.
in ling. Turcica.

But in Anatolia, although the old languages still remaine, being for the most part corrupt Greeke, as also in Armenia they haue their peculiar language, yet is the Turkish tongue very frequent & preuaileth in them both: which being originally none other then the Tartarian tongue, as Michonius, and others haue obserued, yet partaketh much, both of the Armenian & Persian, by reason of the Turkes long continuance in both those Regions, before they setled the Seat of their Dominion, and themselves among the Grecians, for which cause it is not without mixture of Greeke also, but chiefly and aboue all other of the Arabike, both by reason of their Religion written in that language, and their training vp in Schooles vnto it, as their learned tongue. And yet although the Turkish bee well vnderstood both in Natolia and Armenia, yet hath it neither extinguished the vulgar languages of those parts, neither obtained to it selfe (for ought I can by my reading find) any peculiar Prouince at all, wherein it is become the sole natieue and vulgar language, but is only a common scattered tongue, which appeareth to be so much the more evidently true, because the very Cities that haue been successiue the Seats of the Ottoman Sultans; namely, Iconium (now Cogna) in Lycaonia, then Prusa in Bithynia; thirdly, Adrianople in Thrace; and lastly, Constantinople, are yet knowne to retaine their old natieue language, the Greeke tongue: Although the Turkish tongue also bee common in them all, as it is likewise in all other Greeke Cities both of Greece and Asia.

* Postell. in praefat.
Grammat. Arabic. Ludovic.
Reg. l. 8. de Picistud. Rer. ad finem.

* Bellon. Obseruat. l. 3. c. 12.

Of the Syriake and Hebrew tongues. Ch. 9.

* Masius in praefat. Grammat. Syric. Sixt. Senen. Biblioth. sancte. l. 4. in voce. Thargum.

Canin. in praefat. Fastitat. Syric.

Ar. Montan. de ratione Mazzoreth in apparat.

ad Bibl. Reg. Fabrit in praefat.

ad Lexic. Syro-chaldaicum.

Genebrard. l. 2. Chronog. ad An.

3690. Bellarm. l. 2. de verbo Dei.

c. 4. & 15. & c. Possuin. Apparat. sac. in Dictionae. Biblia.

But in the East part of Cilicia beyond the Riuer Pyramus, as in all Syria also, and Mesopotamia and Palestina, and Arabia and Egypt, and thence Westward in all the long tract of Africke, that extendeth from Egypt to the Strait of Gibraltar, I say, in all that lieth betwixt the Mountaine Atlas, and the Mediterrane Sea (now termed Barbary) excepting Marocco, and here and there some scattered remnants of the old Africans in the Inland parts, the Arabike tongue is become the vulgar language, although somewhat corrupted and varied in dialect, as among so many seuerall Nations it is vnpossible but it should bee. And although I bee farre from * their opinion, which write (too ouerlashingly) that the Arabian tongue is in vse in two third parts of the inhabited world, or in more, yet I finde that it extendeth very farre, and specially where the Religion of Mahomed is professed. For which cause (ouer and besides the parts aboue mentioned, in which it is, as I said, become the natieue language) in all the Northerne part of the Turkish Empire also, I meane that part that lyeth on the North side of the Mediterrane Sea, as likewise among the Mahumetan Tartars, it is thought not the Vulgar tongue, yet familiar with very many, both because all their Religion is written in that language, and for that * euery boy that goeth to schoole is taught it, as in our Schooles they are taught Latine and Greeke: Insomuch, that all the Turkes write their owne language in Arabike Characters. So that you see the common languages of the Turkish Empire, to be the Slavonian, the Greeke, the Turkish, and Arabike tongues, seruing seuerally for the parts that I mentioned before.

The Syriacke tongue is certainly * thought to haue had beginning, in the time of the Captiuitie of the Iewes in Babylon, while they were mingled among the Chaldeans. In which long reuolution of seuentie yeeres, the vulgar sort of the Iewes forgot their owne language, and began to speake the Chaldee: But yet pronouncing it amisse, and framing it somewhat to their owne Countrey fashion, in notation of Points, Affixes, Coniugations, and some other properties of their ancient speech, it became a mixt language of Hebrew and Chaldee: a great part Chaldee for the substance of the wordes, but more Hebrew for the fashion, and so degenerating much from both: The old and right Hebrew remaining after that time onely among the learned men, and being taught in Schooles, as among vs the learned tongues are accustomed to bee. And yet, after the time of our Sauour, this language began much more to alter and to depart further, both from the Chaldee and Hebrew, as receiuing much mixture of Greeke, some of Romane and Arabike wordes, as in the Talmud (named of Ierusalem) gathered by R. Iochanan, about three hundred yeeres after Christ, is apparent, being farre fuller of them, then those parts of the Chaldee paraphrase on the holy Scriptures, which were made by

R. 16-

R. Jonathan, a little before Christ, and by R. Aquila, whome they call Onkelos not long after.

But yet certaine it is, both for the great difference of the wordes themselves, which are in the Syriake tongue for the most part Chaldee, and for the diuerfitie of ~~the~~ adherents of wordes, which they call prefixa, and suffixa, as also for the differing found of some vowels, and sundry other considerations: Certaine it is I say that the vnlearned Jewes, whose vulgar speech the Syriake then was, could not vnderstand their פְּרָשָׁה & מִשְׁנָה, that is their lectures of Moses and the Prophets, vsed in their Synagogues in the Hebrew tongue. And that seemeth to haue bene the originall reason, both of the publike speeches and declarations of learned men to the people, vsuall in their Synagogues on the Sabboaths, after the readings of the Law and of the Prophets, whereof in the <sup>o</sup> New Testament wee finde some mention, and also of the translation of Jonathan and Onkelos, and others made into their vulgar language, for that the difference betwixt the Hebrew and the Chaldee was so great, that the tongue of the one Nation could not bee vnderstood by the other. First, the tongues themselves, which yet remaine with vs may bee euident demonstrations, of which wee see that one may bee skiltull in the Hebrew, and yet not vnderstand the Chaldee, and therefore neither could they, whose speech the Chaldee then was (although much degenerated) vnderstand the Hebrew.<sup>a</sup> Secondly, wee find that when <sup>r</sup> Ezra, at the returne from the Captiuitie, read the Booke of the Law before the people, others were faine to interpret that which was read vnto them. And thirdly, the answer made to Rabshakeb, by the Officers of King Hezekiah may put it out of question, willing him <sup>q</sup> to speake vnto them in the Chaldee tongue, that the common people of Ierusalem (in whose hearing it was) might not vnderstand what was spoken. But yet it might bee, that as at this day the Jewes vie to doe, so also in Christs time of conuersing on the Earth, they might also read the Chaldee Targamin (and certainly some * learned men affirmed they did so) together with the Hebrew lectures of Moses and the Prophets; for certaine it is, that Jonathan Ben Uziel, had before the birth of our Sauour translated, not the Prophets onely into Chaldee, for it is his Paraphrase that wee haue at this day on the Prophets, and the Language which wee now call the Syriake, was but the Jewish Chaldee, although in the after times, by the mixture of Greeke, and many other forraigne wordes it became somewhat changed, from what in the times afore, and about our Sauours Incarnation it had bene) but the Pentateuch also: at least, if it bee true which Sixtus hath recorded, namely, that such is the Tradition among the Jewes, and which Galatine writeth, that for of that part of the Chaldee Paraphrase, which we haue in the Complutense, and King Philips Bibles, on the Bookes of Moses, Onkelos is the Author: of that on Iosuah, the Iudges, the Booke of the Kings and of the Prophets, Jonathan. Of that on Ruth, Hester, Iob, the Psalmes, and the Bookes of Salomon, R. Ioseph Cacus.

himselfe hath scene that translation of Jonathan, beside that of Onkelos, the beginning of both which hee setteth downe, differing one from another in the first wordes. Which (namely, touching the publike reading of the Chaldee Targamin, either together with the Hebrew Text, or instead of it) I may as well conceiue to bee true, as that the forraigne <sup>t</sup> Jewes, dwelling in Alexandria and others parts of Egypt, in Asia also, and other Greeke Prouinces abroad, vsed publikely in stead of the Hebrew, which now they vnderstood not the Septuagints Greeke translation, as is euident in Tertullian: And of some others of them in the Constitutions of * Iustinian. Which Jewes for that very cause, are sundry times in the <sup>u</sup> Acts of the Apostles termed Ελληνισται. For by that name, in the iudgement of learned men, the naturall Gracians are not meant, which are alwayes named Ελληνες, not Ελληνισται, But, the Jewes dispersed among the Gentiles, that vsed to read the Greeke Scriptures in their Synagogues.

And here shall be the period of my first Enquiry touching the Languages, and beginning of the second, concerning the sorts of Religions abroad in the World. In discoursing whereof you must bee content to accept of Moderne Authors, because I am to intreate of Moderne Matters: And if I hap to step awry where I see no path, and can discerne but few steps afore mee, you must pardon it. And yet this one thing I will promise you, that if either they that should direct mee, mislead mee not; or (where my reason suspects that my guides wander, and I am mislead) if my circumspect obseruing, or diligent inquiring, may preferue mee from error, I will not depart a haire from the way of Truth.

<sup>o</sup> Act. 13. 15.

<sup>q</sup> Reg. 1. 2. ca. 18 v. 26.

<sup>r</sup> Iun. in Bel. larm. Con. 1. l. 2. c. 15. §. 11.

Sixt. Senenf. Biblioth. Saxt. l. 4. in dist. on. Syra editio.

Galatin. de Arcan. Catholice Verit. l. 1. c. 3. Vid. Salmeron. De Canonica.

Scriptura. Prolegom. 3. in Tomo. 1. & de interpretat. Septuagint. Prolegom. 5.

Tertull. in Apologetico. ca. 19. Nouell. 146.

u Act. 6. 1. & 9. 29. & 11. 20. Scalig. in Chron. Euseb. ad Annu. MDCCXXIV.

& Iun. contra. Belarm. Controu. 1. l. 2. c. 15. §. 21. & Druf. Prætorior. l. 5. Annot. ad. Act. Ap. 6. 1.

CHAP. XIII.

*Master BREWOODS Enquiries of the Religions professed in the World:
Of Christians, Mahumetans, Iewes and Idolaters; with other Philosophicall speculations, and diuers Annotations added.*

Of the sundry parts of the World inhabited by Christians
Chap. 10.

Michou. de Sarmatia. l. 2. c. 3.

Boem de Morib.
gent. l. 3. c. 7.

Buter. Relat.

Par. 3. l. 1.

Ziegler. in Schondia c. de

Lapponia. Da-

mian. a Goas

tracl. de Lapetij.

Michou. l. 2. de

Sarmatia. c. 5.

Munster. Cosmo.

l. 4. c. 37. Buter.

Relation pa. 1. l.

c. de Bothnia.

LI Europe is possessed by Christians, except the vtmost corners of it, toward the East and the North, for the small company of Mahumetans, inhabiting their peculiar * Villages about Wilna in Litunia, or the scattered * remnants of Idolaters in the same Prouince, and in Samogitia, are not worthy mentioning. But toward the North, Lappia, Scricfinia, Biarmia, Corelia, and the North part of Fin- marke (all which together passe commonly vnder the name of Lapland, and make a Region about nine hundred miles in circuit) are inhabited by Idolaters: and toward the East, all the Region betwixt Tanaia and Borysthenes, along Maotis and the Euxine Sea (the true native Countrey of the ancient Gothes) being more then twice as large as the former, and withall much better peopled, is inhabited by the Tartars, called Crimai or Pracopita, who are all Mahumetans, excepting onely a small remainder of Christians in some parts of Taurica.

But, in all the Turkes Dominion that hee hath in Europe, inclosed after a peninsular figure, betweene Danubius and the Sea, and containing in circuit about 2300. miles (for Moldania, Walachia, and Transilvania, I reckon not for the parts of his Dominion) namely, from about Buda, on Danubius side, and from Ragusa on the Sea Eastward, to the vtmost bounds of Europe, as also in the Iles of the Aegean Sea, Christians are mingled with Mahumetans. All which Dominion yet of the Turkes in Europe, though so much in circuit as I said, is neuertheless (measured by Iquares) no greater then Spaine, the Continent of it being no way answerable to the Circumference: both, because it runneth farre out in sharpe angles, toward the West and South, namely in Hungary and Moraa, and is beside in Greece in many places extraordinarily indented with the Sea. And in his Dominion of the Turkes in Europe, such is notwithstanding the mixture of Mahumetans with Christians, that the Christians * make two third parts at least of the Inhabitants: 30 for the Turke, so that the Christians pay him his yeerely tribute (which is one fourth part of their increase, and a Saltanie for euery poll) and speake nothing against the Religion and Sect of Mahumet, permitteth them the liberty of their religion. And euen in Greece it selfe, although more dissolute: then any Region of Europe subiect to the Turke (as hauing bin anciently more wasted with intestine discord, and longest groaned vnder the Turks oppression) there remaine yet neuertheless in * Constantinople, the very Seat of the Turkish Empire, about twenty Churches of Christians, and in the Citie of Salonichi (Theffalonica) about thirty, whereas in the later this Mahumetans haue but three, beside very many Churches abroad in the Prouince vnder suffragan Bishops, of whom the Metropolitan of Salonichi, hath no lesse then ten belonging to his Iurisdiction, as there are also recorded yet to remaine vnder the Metropolitans of Philippi, one hundred and fifty Churches: 40 of Athens, as many: Of Corinth one hundred, together with sundry suffragan Bishops vnder each of them.

But in Afrike, all the Regions in a manner, that Christian Religion had gained from Idolatry, Mahumetanism hath regained from Christianitie: Insomuch, that not onely the North part of Afrike, lying along the Mediterranean Sea, namely, betwixt it and the Mountaine Atlas, euen from Spaine to Egypt, where Christianitie sometime exceedingly flourished, as there wee reade Synodes of about two hundred Bishops to haue been gathered, and * three hundred Catholike Bishops to haue been there expelled by Gensericus King of the Wandales: And in some one Prouince alone, b Zengitana by name (it is that wherein Carthage stood) to haue beene one hundred sixty foure Bishops vnder one Metropolitan: Not onely that North part of Afrike I say, is at this present vtterly void of Christians, excepting a few Towns belonging to the King of Spaine (of which onely Septa and Tanger are Episcopall Cities: ) but euen in all the vast Continent of Afrike, being about thrice as large as Europe, there is not any Region entirely possessed by Christians, but the Kingdome of Habassia, no, nor yet (which is more lamentable) any other where Christians are mingled, either with Mahumetans, but onely Egypt: or where with Idolaters, but the Kingdomes of c Conga and Angola: which two about one hundred twenty yeeres agoe, ann. 1491. began first to receiue Christianitie: All the rest of Afrike, being entirely gouerned and possessed by Pagans or Mahumetans. To which, if I should adde those few places in Afrike afore mentioned, neere the Strait of Gibraltar, which the Kings of Portugall and Castile haue conquered from the Moors, with the other few disperfed fortresses, which the Portugalls hold in other places on the Coast of Afrike (altogether euen betwixt Spaine and India are but eleuen or twelue) I know not where to finde euen among all the native Inhabitants of Afrike, any Christians more. For, as for the large Region of Nubia, which had from the Apostles time (as is thought) professed the Christian Faith, it hath againe about one hundred yeeres since forsaken it, and embraced a Mariti. Polon.

Supput. An. 475.

b Vict. l. 1. de

Persecut. Van-

dalee.

Of the Christianitie of Afica, see Santos

& Gramays re-

lat. inf. l. 9. c. 12.

c Pigafer. biff.

Regni Congens.

l. 2. c. 2.

In these parts

Christianity is lessened.

CHAP. 13. Christians of Egypt, Habassia and other African Lands and Islands. 113

embraced instead of it, partly Mahometanisme, and partly Idolatry, and that by the most miserable occasion that might befall, namely famine of the word of God through lacke of Ministers: for as Aluarez hath recorded, at his being in the King of Habassia his Court, there were Embassadors out of Nubia, to intreate him for a supply of Ministers, to instruct their Nation, and repaire Christianitie gone to ruine among them: but were reiected.

Aluarez, hist. Ethio, lib. 137.

And you are the Christians of Egypt, namely those of the native Inhabitants, but verie few in respect of that infiniteness of people, where with Egypt doth, and ever did abound, as being esteemed not to passe 70000. And, as touching the Kingdome of Habassia, neither is it all Christians, but a great part of Geniles, namely toward the West, and South bounds of it, and some part Mahometans, toward the East borders: neither so large and spacious, as many mens relations have made it thought to be. For although I cannot assent to them, who assigne to that great Kingdome, but about 65 Leagues of compass, by which reckoning (suppose they were Spanish league) it should be little larger then Germany (for I know full well, by infallible obseruations, that sparing limitation of others, to be verie true) yet, neither can I yeelde to them, who esteeme it greater, then the vaste dominions of the Emperours of Turkie or of Tartaria, &c. Or, to them, that extend it from the one Tropique to the other, and from the red Sea, almost to the West Ocean. For first, certaine it is (that I may speake a litle of the limits of this Kingdome) that it attaineth not to the red Sea (Eastward) neither within the straits of Babel mandel, nor without: for within those straits, along the Bay of Arabia, there is a continuall ledge of Mountains, known to be inhabited with Mores, betwixt that Bay, and the dominion of Habassia: So that, onely one Port there is, along all that coast (Ercos by name) where those Mountaines open to the Sea, that at this present belongeth to it. Neither without those Straits doth it any where approach to the Ocean. All that coast, as farre as Mozambique, being well knowne to be inhabited with Arabians.

* *Boter. Relat. pa. 1. l. 3. ca. de 1. popoli del Egipto. Thom. a les. de Conuers. gent. l. 7. par. 1. c. 5. Boter. Relat. p. 1. l. 3. c. de Abassia. * Horat. Malaguz. nel discorso de 1. cinque masimi Signori. See hereof latter and better intelligence l. 7. c. 7. & 8. Abassia is reduced now to a small circuit.*

And as touching the west limits of Habassia, I cannot finde by any certaine historie or relation (vnlesfull men may rumour what they will, and I know also that the common Charts represent it otherwise) I cannot finde I say, that it stretcheth beyond the River Nilus, so farre cometh it short of the West Ocean. For it is knowne, that all the West banke of Nilus, from the River of Zaire to the confines of Nubia, is possessed by the Anzichi, being an idolatrous and man-eating Nation, and subiect to a great Prince of their owne; thus then it is with the breadth of the Empire of Habassia, betwixt East and West. And now to speake of the length of it, lying North and South, neither doth it approach Northward on Nilus side, further then the South end of the Isle of Meroe (Meroe it selfe is inhabited by Mahometans, and the deadly enemies of the King of Habassia) nor on the Sea side further then about the port of Snachem. And toward the South, although the bounds of that Kingdome be not perfectly knowne, yet that it approacheth nothing neere the circle of Capricorne, as hath bin supposed, is most manifest, because the great Kingdomes of Moenheminge, and Banometapa, and some others, are situate betwixt Habassia and that circle. But, as neere as I am able to coniecture, hauing made the best search that I can, in the itineraries and relations, that are extant of those parts, the South limit of that Empire, passeth not the South parallell of six or seuen degrees at the most, where it confineth with Moenheminge. So that to make a respectiue estimate of the largeness of that dominion, by comparing it with our knowne regions of Europe. It seemeth equall to Germany and France, and Spain, and Italie laid together: Equall I say in dimension of ground, but nothing neere equall in habitation or multitude of people, which the distemperature of that climate, and the dry barrenness of the ground, in many regions of it, will not allow. For which cause the torride parts of Africke are by Piso in Strabo resembled to a Libbards skinne, the distance of whose spots, represent the dispersedness of habitations or townes in Africke. But if I should absolutely set downe the circuit of that whole dominion, I esteeme the limitation of Pigafetta, nere about the truth, namely, that it hath in circumference 4000 miles (about 1500. in length, and about 600. in breadth) being inclosed with Mahometans on the North, and East, and with Idolaters, on the West and South.

* *Boter. loco prox. citato. Sommar. dei regi. ni Oriental. apud Ramos. vol. 1. pag. 314. Boter. Relat. p. 1. l. 3. c. Loango. An. xichi. I doe not think it now to containe halfe so many Christians (which yet are but halfe Christians) as any one of those foure. The Author alloweth too much as Pigafetta alio, & in these times, it is little, except in misery. Better relations of these parts are since our authors death published by Gadignus, and out of him translated by *ther. l. 7. c. ult. Strab. l. 2. Pigafetta. de Reg. Cong. l. 2. c. 10.

Such then as I haue declared, is the condition of Christians in the continent of Africke: but the Inhabitants of the Isles along the West coast of Africke, as namely Madera, the Canaries, the Isles of Cabo verde, and of S. Thomas, and some other of lesse importance, are by the Portugals and Christians instructed, become Christian: but on the East side of Africke, excepting onely * Zocotora, there is no Christian Isle.

* Paul. Venet. l. 3. c. 38.

Even such is the state of Christians in the firme land, and the adiacent Isles of Africke. And it is not much better in Asia, for excepting first the Empire of Russia (and yet of it, a great part is Idolatrous, namely the region betwene the Rivers of Pechora and Ob, and some part of Permia) secondly, the regions of Circassia, and Mengrelia, lying along Maeotis and the Euxine Sea, from Tanaïs East ward as farre as the River Phasis. Thirdly, the Prouine of Georgia, and fourthly the Mountaine Libanus in Syria (and yet the last of these is of the Turkes Dominion) excepting these few I say, there is not any region in all Asia, where Christians liue seuerall, without mixture, either of Mahometans or of Pagans, for although Variacus a man well experienced in some parts of the orient (as being Bishop of Acon and the Popes Legate in the East, at what time Palestina

See To. 2. l. 1. c. 1. & l. 3. c. 1. of the Russian Christianity. Iacob a Vitissee Hist. Orient. l. 7.

Since the Tartarian times Christianitie
hath extirpate out of Asia.

Paul Venet.
L. I. c. 8.

Scaliger de Emendat.
scilicet L. 7. An-
not. in comput.
Librop.

a Utriac. Hi- stor. Orient. c. 78
b Otho. Phrysi- gen. l. 7. c. 33.
c Utr.
d L. I. c. 45.
e L. I. c. 47.
f L. I. c. 48.
g L. I. c. 39.
h L. I. c. 38.
i L. I. c. 40.
j L. I. c. 41.
k L. I. c. 61.
l L. I. c. 61.
m L. I. c. 64.

and Syria were in the hands of Christians) hath left registered, that the Christians of the Easterlie parts of Asia, exceeded in multitude the Christians of the Greeke and Latine Churches: yet in his time (for he writ almost foure hundred yeeres agoe) Christianitie began to decline, and since his time, it hath proceeded infinitely to decay, in all those parts of Asia: first, by the inundation of the Idolatrous Tartars, who subdued all those Regions, and after by the intertaining of Mahumetanisme in many of them. The time was indeede, (and but about foure hundred yeeres agoe) when the King of Tenduc, whom the histories of those times name Presbyter Iohannes a Christian, but a Nestorian Prince, ruled farre and wide, in the North-east part of Asia: as having under his dominion, beside Tenduc, (which was his owne native and peculiar Kingdome) all the neighbouring Prouinces, which were at that time for a great part, Christian: but after that his Empire was brought to ruine, and he subdued by Chingis a rebell of his owne Dominion (and the first founder of the Tartarian Empire) which happened about the yeere 1190, the state of Christian Religion became in short time strangely altered in those parts, for I finde in Marcus Paulus who lived within fiftie yeeres after Utriacum, and was a man of more experience in those parts, then he, as having spent seuerall yeeres together in Tartarie, partly in the Emperours Court, and partly in traauailing ouer those Regions, about the Emperours affaires, that except the Prouince of Tenduc, which as I said was the Kingdome of Presbyter Iohns residence (for it was the Prince of that Kingdome, which is rightly and vsually, by the ancienter Historians named Presbyter Iohn, howsoeuer the mistaking fantasies of many, haue transported it out of Asia into Africke and by error bestowed it on the King of Habassia) except that Prouince of Tenduc I say, wherof Marcus Paulus confesseth the greater part, to haue professed the Christian Religion at his being in Tartarie, the rest of the Inhabitants, being partly Mahumetans, and partly Idolaters: in all the other Prouinces of those parts beside, that, he obserueth the Christians to bee but few, as namely in the Kingdomes of Tanguth, of Chinchintales, of Sutcuir, of Caraian, of Cassar, of Carcham, of Ergimuli, of Cerguth, of Egrigaisa, and in the other Regions of Tartarie mentioning no Christians at all. Two Cities onely I finde in him excepted, the one was Cingiangifu in Mangi, (that is China) where hee noteth, that many Christians dwelt, and the other Quinsay, in which later yet, (although the greatest Citie in the world) he hath recorded to bee found but one Church of Christians. But these places excepted before mentioned. I can finde no certaine relation, neither in Paul Venetus, nor any other, of any Christians of the native Inhabitants, in all the East of Asia, but Idolatrie keepeth still her olde possession, and ouerspreadeth all.

But yet indeede, in the more Southerly parts of Asia (especially in those where Christianitie was first planted, and had taken deepest roote) as Natolia, Syria, Palestine, Chaldea, Offyria, Mesopotamia, Armenia, Media, Persia, the North part of Arabia, and the South of India, Christians are not onely to be found, but in certaine of those Regions, as in Natolia, Armenia, Syria, Mesopotamia, somewhat thicke mingled with Mahumetans: as they are also in the South of India not farre from the Promontorie of Comorin, in some reasonable number, in the Kingdome of Comtan, of Cranganor, and of Choromandel, but mingled with Idolaters. But yet, is not this mixture of Christians with them of other Religions, in any part of Asia, after the proportion of their mixture in Europe (where I obserued the Christians to make the preuailing number) but they are farre inferiour to the multitude of the Mahumetans, and of the Idolaters, among whom they are mingled, and yet touching their number, decrease euery day, in all the parts aforesaid, India onely excepted. Where since the Portugals held Goa (which they haue erected into an Archbishopricke) and entertayned Malabar, and some other parts of India, what with commerce, and what with amitie, the number of Christians is greatly multiplied, in sundrie places of that Region, but yet not so, as to compare in any sort with the Mahumetans, and much lesse with the Idolaters among whom they liue.

Thus it is with Christians in the firme land of Asia: but in the Islands about Asia, Christianitie is as yet but a tender plant: for although it hath made some entrance into the Isles called Philippinas, namely into thirty of them, for so many onely of 11000. termed by that name, are subiect to the King of Spain. Th. les. de Conu. gent. l. 1. c. 1. by the industry of the Castilians, as also by the preaching of the Portugals, into Ormuz in the Bay of Persia, and into Ceylan in the Sea of India, and some few other of the infinite multitude of Islands, dispersed in that Easterne Sea, yet hath it hitherto found in all those places, rather some faire beginning, then any great proceeding. Onely in Iaponia Christianity hath obtained (notwithstanding many hinderances and oppositions) more prosperous successe. In somuch that many yeeres since, there were recorded to haue bene by estimation, about 200000. Christians in Iaponia.

Plat. de Bon.
Stat. Relig. l. 2.
cap. 30.

Lastly,

Hondius his Map of the Christian World.

Lastly, in America, there be four large regions, and those of the most fruitfull and populous part of it, possessed and governed by the Spaniards, that is, Nueva España, Castilla del Oro (otherwise termed Nuevo Reino) Peru, and part of Brasil, the first three, by the Castilians, and the fourth, by the Portugals, all which together, may by estimation, make a Region as large as Europe. In which, as also in the Islands, specially in the greater Islands of Hispaniola, Cuba, Jamaica, and Puerto Rico, the Christian Region is so largely spread, that one hath presumed, to equall in a manner, the Christians of America, to those of the Latine Church in Europe: And another, hath left recorded, that within a few yeeres after the entrance of the Gospell among them, there were no lesse then seven Millions, or as others reported foureteene Millions, that in the Sacrament of Baptisme had given their names to Christ. But especially in the Kingdome of Mexico (or Nueva España) Christian Religion obtained that plentifull and prosperous success, that we finde recorded of sundry of the Preachers, employed about the conversion of that people, that they baptised each one of them, above 100000. and that in few yeeres: Insomuch, that as is storied by Sorius) It is to be found among the records of Charles the fifth, that some old Priest hath baptised 700000. another 300000. and certaine others very great multitudes. But yet, what manner of Christians many of those proselytes were, I am loath to remember, or report (and it may be by this time, they are better affected and instructed then they were) for certainly, Oniedo, and Benzo, men that had long lived, and were well experienced in those parts, have left recorded, the first of Cuba, that there was scarce any one, or but very few, that willingly became Christians, and both Oniedo of them, and Benzo of the Christians of Nueva España, that they had nothing almost belonging to Christianitie, but onely the bare name of Christians, being so vicerly mindelesse, and carelesse of Christian religion, that they remembered not any thing of the covenant and profession, they made in their baptisme: Onely they kept in minde, the name they received then, which very name also, they forgot soone after. But all the rest of America, except the regions afore mentioned, which compared to the parts possessed by the Castilians and Portugals (to make estimation by the Maps that we have of those regions, for the North and West coasts of America, are not yet perfectly discovered) may be as six to one, is possessed by Idolaters.

Ordas Indano
apella. Iesuites can open their mouths wide in extolling their owne exploits.
These 12 yeeres Christianity hath there gone backward. See
l. 5. c. 2. & l. 10. c. 2.
* Amand. Ziric: in Chro. cric. An.
1519.
* Sorius in Chr.
ad An. Chr. 1558
Vid. epist. Petri
Gauden in Com.
Sedutij ad vitam
S. Francis. p. 129
* epi. Mart. a. 1519
l. 1. c. 1. p. 138.
* Oniedo Histor.
Ind. Occident.
l. 17. c. 4.
Benz. hist. Nov.
Orbis. l. 2. c. 19.
See l. 1. c. 1. p. 138
* l. 7. c. 1. p. 138.
Having l. 3. c. 4. c. 1.

Of the parts of the world possessed by Mahometans. Ch. II.
The Religions of the World
brought into four heads or generall kinds.

a Matbia Mi-chou de Saimat.
l. 2. c. 3.

b They reach to and beyond the River of Gambra. See
Iobson infra l. 9.
c. 13. as likewise on the East to Sofala. Santos l.
9. c. 12. further then our Author hath related.

c Paul Veret l.
3. c. 39.
Linschot. l. 1. c. 3.

d Leo Afric l. 1.
c. de Relig. Afric.

e The Mogul
as great a Prince as these, permits
all Religions, but his greatest Commanders and best Soul-diers are commonly Mahometans: Yea
his sonnes, &c. f See of these places infra l. 8.
c. 13.
g Botes Rel p. 3.
l. 2. c. de Ma-
hometans.

Having declared the multiplicity of Christianities, I will proceed to shew the state of other Religions in the World, and with all, what parts of it, the Professours of those Religions doe severally inhabit; and lastly, what proportion they may have each to other, and all of them to Christians. To indeavour therefore your satisfaction in this behalfe. There are foure sorts or sects of Religion, obserued in the sundrie Regions of the World. Namely, Idolatry, Mahumetanisme, Judasme, and Christianitie. Of Christians I have already spoken: now therefore will I relate for your better contentment, of the other three; and first of Mahumetans.

Mahumetans then possesse in Europe, as I said before (having in that part but small mixture of Christians (all the Region betwixt Tanaïs and Boristhenes (Don and Nieper they are now called) being about a twentieth part of Europe: beside some Villages in Litmania about Wilna, where the vse of their Religion is by the King of Poland permitted them, for in Greece, Macedon, Thrace, Bulgaria, Rascia, Sernia, Bosnia, Epirus, the greatest part of Hungaria, and some part of Dalmatia (which may be together about one fourteenth part of Europe) although the gouernment be wholly the Turkes, yet Mahumetans scarcely passe one third part of the Inhabitants.

But in Afrique, Mahumetanisme is spread exceeding farre; for, first to consider the maritime Coast: It possesseth all the shoare of the Atlantique Ocean, from Cape Blanco to the Strait of Gibraltar, being about 1100. miles. Secondly, on the shoare of the Mediterraine, all from that Strait to Egypt, about 1400. miles, excepting onely on the one Coast, and on the other, some seuen Townes, in the possession of the Spaniards. Thirdly, on the East side of Afrike, all the Coast of the Bay of Arabia, even from Suez to Cape Gardafu, about 1600. miles, excepting onely one Port (Ercoco) being of the Dominion of the King of Habassia. And thence (doubling that Cape) Southward, all the shoare of the Ethiopique Sea, as farre as Mozambique (that is ouer against the middest of Madagascar) about 1800. miles. And in all the Coasts of Afrike hitherto mentioned, being altogether about 7000. miles (that is, by some excesse more then halfe the circumference of Afrike) the Professors of Mahumeds Religion, haue both possession and dominion, together with the Maritime parts, of the great Ile of Madagascar, and many other Ilands along the Coast of Afrike.

And yet, euen beyond Mozambique also as farre as to the Cape des Corrientes, it is vnder the Circle of Capricorne) although they haue there no rule, yet they are found mingled with Idolaters. But yet neuertheless, obserued it is, that along the East shoare of Afrike, namely from Suachem to Mozambique (being towards 3000. miles of the mentioned Coast) Mahumetans possesse onely the Margent of the Land, on the Sea shoare, and haue gotten but little footing in the Inland parts, except in the Kingdomes of Dangali and Adel, confining together, the first within and the second without the Strait of Babel Mandel, which yet are but small Prouinces. And this also (to extenuate their number) is also true, that from the Kingdome of Adel, and Cape Guardafu, to Mozambique, there is found among the Mahumetans, some mixture of Idolaters, although the Dominion be onely in the Mahumetans hands.

But yet on the North and West parts of Afrike, it is farre otherwise, and farre worse: Mahumetanisme hauing ouer-spread all the maine Land of Afrike, betwene the Mediterrane Sea, and the great River Niger: and along the course of Nilus, as farre as the Ile of Metor, which lieth also about the same parallel with the River Niger, and is possessed by Mahumetans. And yet beyond Niger also, it hath inuaded and obtained all the Kingdoms of the Nigrites that border on that River. So that all Barbarie and Biled-elgeria, and Libya deserta, and the Region of Negrees, are become of that Religion. Excepting first some Maritime parts toward the Atlantique Sea, namely from Cape Blanco Southward, which are inhabited by Gentiles. Secondly, the Kingdome of Borno, and some part of Nubia: And thirdly, certaine scattered multitudes of the olde African Progenie, that still retaine their ancient Gentilisme, and are found in diuers places heere and there in the Mountaines and wilder parts of Barbarie, of Biled-elgeria, and of Libya. These I say, being excepted, all Afrike beside, from the Mediterraine Sea, somewhat more Southward then the River Niger, is ouer-spread with Mahumetans: which (adding these before mentioned, along the East Coast of Ethiopia) may by estimation, take vp foure nine parts of Afrique.

And yet in Asia, Mahumatisme is farther spread, being embraced and maintained chiefly, by foure mightie Nations, namely, the Arabians, Persians, Turkes, and Tartars. Arabia was indeed the Nest, that bred and fostered that vnclane Bird, and had it bene the Cage also, for euer to enclose it, it had bene but too much space and libertie, for Arabia is in circuit about 4000. miles, and except a small mixture of Christians in Eltor, a Port Towne toward the inmost Angle of the Bay of Arabia; and Petra (Krac now it is called) a mid-land Towne; and two Monasteries about the Hill of Sawai, all is possessed with Mahumetans. But from Arabia that poylon hath in such sort dispersed it selfe through the veines of Asia, that neere the one halfe, is at this day corrupted by it. For although it hath not hitherto attained to the North Coast of Asia, which is partly inhabited by Christians, namely, from the River of Dwyna to Petchora, and partly by Idolaters from Petchora to the East Ocean: nor yet to the East Coast, which from the most Northerly part of Tartary, to the most Southerly part of India (except some few places in the Kingdome of Siam) Idolaters in like sort generally obtaine: yet neuertheless, it is as I said, said, namely, that a very great part of Asia is infected with that pestilence. For first, all the Southerly Coast of Asia, from the Bay of Arabia to the Riuer Indus, is possessed by Mahumetans: and if we proceed further along that shoare, euen beyond the Riuer of Indus also, the great Kingdomes of Cambaya and Bengala, for a great part of them, and about one fourth part of the Inhabitants of Malabar, are obserued to be Mahumetans. And secondly, to consider the Inland parts: all from the Westerly bounds of Asia, namely the Riuer Tanais, with the Euxine, Aegean, and Mediterrane Seas, as farre Eastward, as the Mountaine Imau (which is more then halfe the length of Asia, is possessed by them: Except, first the <sup>h</sup> Kirgessi neere Imau, who are Idolaters: and secondly, the mixture of Christians among them, who yet haue very small proportion

<sup>h</sup> Guaguin. descr. Tartar. in Kirgessorum Florida.

(for their multitude) to Mahumetans, in any Prouince, of all the mentioned vast circuit, for howeuer Burchardus about 320. yeeres agoe, hath left recorded of those parts of Asia, that there were to be found in them thirtie Christians for one Mahumetan. Deser. ter. sanct. pag. 2. c. 2. §. 9. yet certainly, that in these present times the excesse of multitude is growne great on the Mahumetans side in respect of Christians, the experience of many putteth out of question. And if we shall proceed yet further Eastward in the In-land parts of Asia, and passe in our speculation, beyond the Mountaine Imau, euen there also sundry Prouinces are obserued, as <sup>i</sup> Peim, Cotam, Lop, where Mahumetans are the maine and sole Inhabitants, and many more, <sup>k</sup> Cassar, Car-cham, Chinchutius, Tangut, Ergimul, Cergut, Tenduc, &c. where they are mingled among Idolaters, which may for a great part, counteruaile those Regions of Asia, which Christians and Idolaters take vp on this side that Mountaine. So that, in my estimation, hauing about these points conferred Historie with Geographie in the most circumspect and considerate manner that I was able, about nine parts of twentie of Asia are possessed by Mahumetans.

<sup>i</sup> Paul. Venet. l. 1. c. 41. 42. 43. <sup>k</sup> Id. l. 1. c. 38. 40. 47. 62. 63. 64. &c.

Thus then is Mahumetanism spread ouer the one halfe almost of the firme Land of Asia. And yet moreouer in the Ilands also that are about Asia, that Religion hath found large entertainment. For not onely a good part of the small <sup>l</sup> Iles of Maliduinia, namely those of them that are inhabited (for they are aboue 7000. in all, and most without habitation) are possessed with Mahumetans, but moreouer, all the Ports of the Ile of Ceilan (except Colombo which the Portugals haue, the Sea Coasts of Sumatra, the Port of Iaua, with the Ile of Sunda, the Ports of Banda, of Borneo and of Gilolo, with some of the Ilands Malucos, are in the hands of Mahumetans.

<sup>l</sup> Nical de conc. Viaginate ndie. Barbof ap Ramus. Vol. 1. de Vager. p. 313. 318. 319. Botr. Relat p. 3. l. 2. de Mahometan. See a perfecter Relation of the Maliduel. 9. cap. vlt.

Of the great spreading and enlargement of which Religion, if the causes were demanded of me, I should make answer, that beside the Iustice of Almighty God, punishing by that violent and wicked Sect, the sinnes of Christians (for we see that by the Conquests of the Arabians, and Turkes, it hath chiefly leised on those Regions, where Christianitie in ancient time most flourished, both in Afrike and Asia, and partly in Europe) one cause I say, of the large spreading of their Religion, is the large spreading of their victories. For it hath euer beene the condition of the conquered, to follow for the most part the Religion <sup>m</sup> of the Conquerours. A second, their peremptorie restraint (euen on the paine of death) of all disputation touching their Religion, and calling any point of it into question. A third, their suppression of the studie of Philosophy, by the light whereof, the grossenesse and vanitie of many parts of their Religion might bee discovered, which is inhibited to be taught in their Vniuersities, and so hath bene, about these foure hundred yeeres, whereas till then, it greatly flourished among them, in Cordona, in Fez, in Morocco, in Bagded, and other Cities. And yet, as Bellonius and <sup>n</sup> others write, the Turkes fall now againe, to those studies afresh. A fourth cause may well be assigned, the sensuall libertie allowed by it, namely to haue many Wiues, and the like promise of sensuall pleasures, to succeed after this life (to the Religious obseruers of it) in Paradise wherewith men for the greatest part, as beeing of things wherewith their sense is affected, and whereof they haue had certaine experience, are more allured and perswaded, then with promises of spirituall delights, presented only to their hopes, and for which present and sensible pleasures must in the meane time be forsaken.

<sup>m</sup> Christian Religion (to shew the power and wisdom of Christ) hath contrariwise conquered the Conquerours: And by this meanes the Goths, Hunnes, Vandals, Frankes, Saxons, Normans, Danes, and other Heathen Conquerours of Christians, haue yet beene conquered by their Religion: A grace denied Saracenicall Conquests, because almost all the Nations which now are Mahumetan, were before in part or wholly Christians, but rather in Faith then Workes: to which succeeded the Saracenicall Religion without the Church, and Papall Superstition within, the one professing moralitie of Workes without Faith in him which is, the way, the truth and life; the Other, on that fundamentall Faith of the Trinitie Incarnation, Sec. building their hay and stubble of Worshipp and merits of Workes: the one wholly excluding Christianitie, the other corrupting it; both in steed of that great mysterie of godlinesse, our Iustification by faith in Christ, obtruding mans moralitie, and a righteousness of our owne, euen therefore vnrighteousnesse. <sup>n</sup> Bellon. Obser. l. 3. c. 30. Georgioutz. l. 2. de Ritib. Turcar. cap. de Scholis. See Withers his Seraglio, l. 9. The Saracens at the first were so farre from reiecting Philosophie and Arts, that within the first hundred yeeres after the Hegira, they there most flourished, and Abulqualid Iacob Almanzor (whose Captaines conquered Spaine) erected and endowed eightie two Colledges for Arts, as many Hospitals, and aboue fise hundred Mesquits. Himselfe best wed euery Thursday in hearing disputations, and in his Librarie which contained fise and fiftie thousand Bookes. And after the Barbarian Deluge Christians recouered lost learning by helpe of Arabs.

Now

Of the sundrie Regions of the World inhabited by Idolaters. Chap. 12.

o Boem de Mo-
rib gent. l. 3. c. 7.
Boter. relat p. 3.
l. 1. c. Lithuania.

p Leo African. l.
7. c. de Borno
regno.
q Aluarez. hist.
Ethiop. c. 30.
r Leo Afric. l. 1.
c. de vicys Afror.

Strab l. 2. Ptol. in tab. Orb. general.

f Vid. Ptol. in Tab. orbis uni-
uer. & Merc. in tab. gener. Asia.

Now touching Idolaters, they possesse in Europe, a Region as I before obserued, about 900. miles in circuit (although the ordinary Geographical Charts represent it (but falsely) more then twice so large, containing Lappia, Corelia, Biarmia, Scricfinia, and the North part of Finnuarch. All which together, may by estimation make about one sixtieth part of Europe, or a little more, more I meane in magnitude rather then in multitude, for it is indeed a little greater then so. Beside which Prouinces, there are also to be found in diuers places of Lituania, and Samagotia, some scattered remnants of Idolaters.

But in Afrike their multitude is very great, for from Cape Blanco on the Coast of Libya, the most Westerly point of all Afrike (being about the North latitude of twenty degrees) euen all the Coast of Afrike Southward, to the Cape of Buena Esperanza: And thence turning by the backe of Afrike, as farre as the Cape of Mozambique, being (ouer against the middest of Madagascar) in the South latitude of fiftene degrees: all this Coast I say, being not much lesse, then halfe the Circumference of Afrike, is inhabited by Idolaters. Onely, on the East side, from Mozambique to Cape de Corrientes (which is the South latitude of twentie foure degrees) they are mingled with Mahumetans: And on the West side, in the Kingdome of Congo, and the North part of Angola, with Christians: But yet in both these places of their mixture, Idolaters are the greater multitude.

But now, if we consider the Inland Region of Afrike, all betweene the Riuer Nilus, and the West Sea of Ethiopia, from about the North parallel of ten degrees, to the South parallel of six or seuen degrees, but from that parallel of fixe or seuen degrees, euen all Ethiopia Southward, on both the sides of Nilus, from the East Sea of Ethiopia, to the West, euen to the most Southerly point of all Afrike, the Cape of Buona Speranza, is possessed by Idolaters: excepting onely some part of Congo and Angola afore mentioned, toward the West Sea, inhabited by Christians, and the vtmost shoare of the East Sea, from Mozambique Northward, which is replenished with Mahumetans: And yet, beside all the Regions before mentioned, euen all the Kingdome of Borno, and a great part of Nubia is possessed by them; to speake nothing of the infinite multitudes of the ancient Africans, dispersed in sundry Tracts of Barbary, of Biled-elgerid, and of Libya Deserta, which still continue in their ancient Paganisme. So that (euer and beside these last) very neere about halfe Afrike, is possessed by Idolaters.

And yet in Asia Idolaters abound more then in Afrike, euen as Asia is larger then Afrike for the Continent, and for the people, better inhabited; for of Asia also, very neere about the one halfe, or rather a little more is possessed by Idolaters. For first, if we consider the Maritime parts, all from the Riuer of Pechora, Eastward to the Ocean, and then turning downward, to the most Southerly point of India (and of all Asia) the Cape of Cincapura, and from that point returning Westward, by the South Coast, to the Out-lets of the Riuer Indus, all that Maritime Tract I say, is entirely possessed by Idolaters. Sauing onely, that in the neerer part of India, betweene Indus and Ganges, there is among them some mixture both of Mahumetans and Christians: and in the further part, the Citie and Territorie of Malacca, is held by Portugals, and some part of the Sea Coast of the Kingdome of Siam, by Moores. So that by this account, a good deale more then halfe the circumference of Asia, is possessed by Idolaters. And, although in the In-land parts their proportion be somewhat lesse, then in the Maritime, yet if we consider well, the whole dimension of Asia, we shall find by good estimation, as before I said, that the one halfe, or rather a little more, is replenished with Idolaters: for the better declaring of which point, you may vnderstand, that as Strabo and Ptolomie, haue obserued, of the Mountaine Taurus, that beginning in the West parts of Asia (in the Confines of Lycia and Pamphilia ouer against the Chelidonian Iles) it runneth Eastward euen to the Ocean, keeping betweene the parallels of thirty and forty degrees, and so deuiding the North part of Asia from the South. Euen so must we obserue of the Mountaine Imaus that beginning on the shoare of the North Ocean, it runneth along through the middest of Asia to the South, keeping still about the same Meridian, namely about the longitude of 130. degrees, and crossing (at right Angles in a manner) the Mountaine Taurus deuideth the East part of Asia from the West Imaus, therefore in this sort diuiding Asia into two parts, not much vnequall, diuideth also in a manner, betweene the Idolaters and Mahumetans of Asia, for although the hither part of Asia, West of Imaus, and possessed of Mahumetans, take vp more in the longitude of the Earth, namely East and West: yet the further part East of Imaus, spreadeth more in latitude, North and South, which may make some recompence toward that excessse.

But, if withall we subtraet those parts of the hither Asia, that are covered with the Persian and Caspian Seas, beside large parts of the Euxine and Mediterrane, the further Asia (I thinke) will fully equall it. Now, although many Mahumetans be also found on the other side of Imaus, toward the North-east of Asia, both seuerall in sundry Prouinces, and otherwise mingled with Idolaters or Christians, or with both, as before was partly obserued: Yet many more whole Regions of Idolaters (to counteruaile those Mahumeians) are found on this side Imaus, both toward the South, in the Kingdomes of the neerer India, and toward the North, betwixt Imaus and the Riuer River Pechora, all which Coast of Asia is inhabited by Idolaters. And lastly, in the middest betwixt both, the Kirgessi, and some other of their Neighbour Nations. And not onely in the firme land of Asia, is Idolatry thus spread: but in those many thousand Ilands that lie disperied in the vast Ocean, on the East and South-east parts of Asia: which ouer against China, are recorded vpon the report of Mariners, long practised in those Seas, to be 7448. and about India, to be 27000. And which might for their largenesse, if they were all layed together, make a Continent as large as three foure parts of Europe. In those Ilands I say, Idolatry ouer-spreadeth all, excepting onely those few, which I before obserued, to bee possessed by the Spaniards, and by the Arabians.

Pa. Ven. l. 3. c. 8
u. Id. l. 3. c. 42.

10 Finally, of all other parts of the Earth yet discovered, Idolatry spreadeth farthest in America, which being but little lesse, then the Easterne Continent (that wee terme the old World) is at least sixe parts of seuen, inhabited with Heathenish and idolatrous people. For, except the Regions about mentioned, possessed namely by the Portugals, and Castilians (and yet the inner, and wilder tracts euen of those, remaine still for a great part, in their ancient Paganisme) and many notwithstanding their Baptisme, withall worship Idols, together with some later Conuerts made in the Region about and about the Bay of California, of whom as yet, Histories make so little report, that of their number I can make no estimate: And lastly, two or three Fortresses, held by the Spaniards, on the Coast of Florida, with the English Colonies in Virginia, and the French in Canada, these I say being excepted, all the rest of America (being as I said about six seuenth parts) remaineth in their old Idolatry.

Tba. Jes. de Con. gen. l. 1. c. 19

20 And thus haue I declared the three principall Sects as touching Religion, that are at this present found in the seuerall parts of the World, with their particular Regions. But beside these, obserued there are, two or three irregular Nations, being for their Religion mingled as it were of some of the former Sects. As first, in Asia, the Curdi, inhabiting in the Mountainous Countrey about Mozal, betweene Armenia and Mesopotamia. Secondly, the Drusi, dwelling in Syria, about the skirts of Libanus, the Religion of which Nations (such as it is) partaketh somewhat, both of Mahumetanism and Christianitie. And thirdly, the Mordaites in Europe, possessing the middle Confines betwixt the Precopite Tartars, and the Musconites, that are in a manner as touching their Religion, mingled of all three Sects: for they are both baptised like Christians, and circumcised like Mahumetans, and withall worship Idols.

Curdi. Sec. l. 9. c. 4. & 5.

30 Now will I intreat a little, of the Professors of the fourth sort and Sect of Religion, that is found in the World, namely of Iudaisme, for, although the Jewes haue not for their Mansion, any peculiar Countrey, but are disperied abroad among forreigne Nations, for their ancient Idolatries, and their later vnthankfulness, in reiecting their Sauour the Sonne of God: So that euen in Ierusalem, there be not to be found at this time, an hundred households of Jewes (Onely of all the Townes of Palestina, Tiberias (which Amurath the great Turke gaue to Aluarez Mendez a Jew) and Staffiletto, are somewhat peopled with them.) Neither haue they at this present, for any thing that is certainly knowne, any other Region in the World, seuerall to themselves: Yet because there bee some Prouinces, wherein they are obserued specially to abound, as others also, whence they are excluded and banished, I will consider a little of their present condition.

Of the Jewes disperied in seuerall parts of the World.
Chap. 13.
Boter. relat. p. 3. l. 2. c. de Gindei

40 The first Countrey of Christendome, whence the Jewes were expelled, without hope of returne, was our Countrey of England, whence they were banished, Anno 1290. by King Edward the first. Not long after they were likewise banished France, Anno 1307. by Philippus Pulcher: Onely of all the Countreyes of France, in the Iurisdiction of Anignon (the Popes state) some are remayning.

50 Out of Spaine, Anno 1492. by Ferdinand, and shortly after out of Portugall, Anno 1497. by Emanuel. Out of the Kingdome of Naples and Sicilie, Anno 1539. by Charles the first. In other Regions of Europe they are found, and in some of them in great numbers, as in Germanie, Boheme, Polonia, Lituania, Russia, and part of Italie, specially Venice and Rome. In Greece also a great multitude, wherein two Cities (beside all them of other places) Constantinople and Thessalonica are esteemed to bee about sixteene hundred thousand Jewes. As also they are to be found by plentifull numbers, in many parts of the Turkes Dominion, both in Asia and Afrike.

60 And for Asia, specially in Aleppo, in Tripoli, in Damascus, in Rhodes, and almost in euerie Citie of great Trade and Traffique in the Turkish Empire: As likewise in diuers parts of the Persian gouernment, in Arabia also, and lastly in India (namely about Cranganor) and in some other more remote Regions. And, to come to Afrike, they are not only found in the Cities of Alexandria, and Cair in Egypt, but, as in many other Regions and places of Afrike, so principally, in the Cities of Fez, and Tremisen: and specially, in the Hilles of Sensaua, and Demen in the Kingdome of Maroccho, many of which last, are by LEO AFRICANVS; specially noted to bee of that that Sect, which the Jewes name * Karaim, and by the other Jewes of Africke, are reputed no better then Heretiques.

Leo African. l. 2. c. 3. & 6.

But yet, beside these, and such like dispersions of the Jewish Nation, that may be elsewhere in the world, there is a phantasmie of many learned men, not unworthy some diligent consideration, that the Tartars of Scythia, who about the yeere 1200. or a little before, became first knowne abroad in the world by that name, and hold at this day a great part of Asia, in subiection: That those Tartars I say, are of the * Israelites progeny: Namely of the ten Tribes, which by Salmanazar, and some of his predecessors, were carried captiue into Assyria. Which although it be as I said no other then a vaine and capricious phantasmie, yet, hath it, not onely found acceptance and entertainment, with sundry learned and vnderstanding men: but reason and authoritie are produced, or pretended to establish it for a truth. For first, it is alleadged that the word Tatari, or Totari (for so indeede they are rightly called, as * learned men obserue, and not Tartari) signifieth in the Syriack and Hebrew tongues, a Residue or Remainder, such as these Tartars are supposed to be of the Ten Tribes. Secondly, because (as the Patrons of this phantasmie say) they haue alwaies embraced (the ancient character of Judaisme) Circumcision. And thirdly, the authoritie of supposed *Esdra*s (the verie spring I take it, whence hath flowed this streame of opinion) is alleadged. Namely, that the Ten Tribes tooke this course to themselves, that they would leaue the multitude of the heathen, and goe forth into a farther Countrey, where neuer mankinde dwelt. That they might there keepe their statutes, which they neuer kept in their owne land. And that they entred in at the narrow passages of the River Euphrates. The most high shewing them signes, and staying the Springs of the flood, till they were passed ouer. And that their iourney was great, euen of a yeere and a halfe, and the region is called Arfareth.

But to the first of these arguments, I may answer, that the Tartars obtained that name, neither from Hebrew nor Syriack originall, and appellation, but from the River Tartar, saith Leunclavius, and others. Or else from the Region, saith Hauho, where the principall of them anciently dwelled. Secondly, that the name תתרי or תתרי in the Hebrew or Syriack signification, importing a residue or remainder, can but full ill (as it seemes) be applied to the Tartars in relation of the Israelites, whom they exceedingly surpass in multitude, as ouerspreading halfe the vast continent of Asia, or thereabout. For all the Nations of Asia, from the great Rivers of Volgha and Oby, Eastward, and from the Caspian Sea, the River Oxus, the Countries of India and China, Northward, are contained vnder the Appellation of Tartars: and yet without these bounds manie Tartars there are, both toward the West and South. And what if the innumerable people of so manie Nations, as are knowne to inhabit and ouerspread the huge continent of America, be also of the same of-spring? Certainly, if I be not greatly deceiued, they are no other. For first, that their originall must be deriued from Asia is apparent, because (as he that readeth the relations and histories of those Countries of America may easily obserue) they haue no rellish nor resemblance at all, of the Arts, or learning, or ciuilitie of Europe: And their colour testifieth, they are not of the Africans progenie (there being not found in all that large Continent, any blacke men, except a few about the River of Saint Martha, in a small Countrey called Quarequa, which by force and violence of some tempest, are supposed to haue bene transported thither, from the parts of Guinie or Aethiopia.) Therefore it seemeth, that they had their originall from Asia. Which yet will appeare more credible, if it be obserued, which by the Spaniards discoueries is well known to be true, namely, that the West side of America respecting Asia, is exceeding much better peopled then the opposite or East side, that respecteth toward Europe. And, as for these reasons it is verie likely, that America receiued her first inhabitants, from the East border of Asia: So is it altogether vnlike, that it receiued them from any other part of all that border, saue from Tartarie. Because, in America there is not to be discerned, any token or indication at all, of the arts or industrie of China, or India, or Cataia, or anie other ciuill Region, along all that border of Asia: But in their grosse ignorance of letters, and of arts, in their Idolatrie, and the specialties of it, in their inciuilitie, and many barbarous properties, they resemble the old and rude Tartars, aboue all the Nations of the Earth. Which opinion of mine, touching the Americans descending from the Tartars, rather then from any other Nation in that border of Asia, after the neere vicinitie of Asia to America, this reason aboue all other, may best establish and perswade: Because it is certaine, that that North-east part of Asia possessed by the Tartars, is if not continent with the West side of America, which yet remaineth somewhat doubtfull: but certainly, and without all doubt, it is the least disioyned by Sea, of all that coast of Asia, for that those parts of Asia and America, are continent one with the other, or at most, disioyned but by some narrow channell of the Ocean, the rauinous and harmelesse beasts, wherewith America is stored, as Beares, Lions, Tigers, Wolues, Foxes, &c. (which men as is likely, would neuer to their owne harme transport out of the one continent to the other) may import. For from Noahs Arke, which rested after the deluge * Postel. Descript.

Syriaca. l.

Genebrad. Chron.

l. 1. Euter. Relat.

p. 1. l. 2. c. vltima

partie de la Tartarie

l. 1. p. 3. l. 2. c. de Gindei.

* Leunclau in

Pandect. Hist.

Turcie.

Heb.

תתרי

Syri.

2 Esd. 13. v. 41.

42. 43. 44. 45.

Leunclau. in

Pand. hist.

Turcie. S. 3.

* Boem. de Mo-

rib gent. l. 2. c. 10

Haiti. lib. de

Tartaris. cap. 16.

19

20 30

40

50

60

deluge, in Asia, all those beasts must of necessity fetch their beginning, seeing they could not proceede by the course of nature, as the ymperfect sort of living creatures doe, of Putrifaction: or if they might have Putrifaction for their parentage, or receive their originall (by any other new sort of generation) of the earth without speciall procreation of their owne kinde, then I see no necessity, why they should by Gods speciall appointment, be so carefully preserved in Noahs Arke (as they were) in time of the deluge, Wherefore, seeing it is certaine, that those ravenous beasts of America, are the progenie of those of the same kinde in Asia, and that men, as is likely, conueighed them not (to their owne prejudice) from the one continent to the other, it carrieth a great likelihood and appearance of truth, that if they ioine not together, yet are they neere neighbours, and but little disioyned each from other, for euen to this day, in the Isles of Cuba, Iamaica, Hispaniola, Burichena, and all the rest, which are so farre removed from the firme Land, that these beasts cannot swimme from it to them, the Spaniards record, that none of these are found. Wherefore it seemeth (to digresse no farther) that the Nation of the Tartarians, spreading so exceeding farre, as it doth, cannot certainly be the posterity of those captiue Israelites.

Iosep. Acosta De Natura Nou. Orb. l. 1. c. 21.

Michon. de Sam. ma. l. 1. c. 5. Of thele Tartars; See Tu. 2. l. 1. c. 2. in kub. Polo, Haic. n. lenk. n. c.

Diodor. Sic. l. 1. par. 2. c. 1. Phil. Iud. l. 1. de Circumcision. Strab. l. 16. Herodot. l. 2. parum. a Med. Strab. l. 16. long. 1. 1. med. x Diodor. Sic. l. 3. c. 2.

Agatharchid. l. 1. c. 1. Mar. Kub. c. 49 ap. Phot. in Bibliotheca Cypran. l. 1. de Circumcision. in principio Nicoph. Callist. l. 8. c. 35. Hieron. in Comment. loci iam citati. Epiphani. Panar. l. 1. ber. 30.

* By Sozomen l. 6. c. 38.

Ambr. l. 2. de Abraham. Patriarcha. c. 12. x Saff. de Kiti. gent. l. 1. c. 10. x Bellon Obfer. l. 3. c. 28. George. uir. l. 2. de Kiti. Turcar. c. de Circumcisione.

Neither (to answer the second objection) doth their circumcision in any sort inforce it: for, neither was circumcision, among the Tartars ancienter then Mahometanisme, but was received among them together with it, as Michonius hath remembered, so that to this day, it is not intainted (for ought I can finde in Historie) among those Tartarians, which haue not received Mahometanisme, but remaine in their ancient Idolatrie, as for the most part, both the Tartars of Cataia, beyond the Mountaine Imau towards the East Ocean, and the Tartars of Sarmatia, towards the North, on both sides the Riuer of Oby, doe. Neither if it should be granted, that circumcision had bene ancienter among them then Mahometanisme, were that an argument of any impotence, to proue them to be of the Israelites progenie. Because it is certainly knowne, that the ceremony and custome of circumcision hath bene and still is vsuall among many Nations, of whom there was neuer any suspicion, that they descended from the Israelites, for Diodorus hath recorded of the Colchians, Philo Iudeus, and Strabo, of the Egyptians, Herodotus of both those Nations, and of the Ethiopiens besides, that they vsed circumcision, and that that custome among the Egyptians and Ethiopiens, did seeme very ancient, euen as it is also by both those Nations retained till this day. And yet, beside these Countries already mentioned, the like is also recorded of the Troglodytes by Strabo, and by others: Of the Phenicians, and Arabians, by Cyprian and Nicephorus. And (to leaue this accumulating of humane testimonies) it is not obscurely acknowledged by the Prophet Jeremie, to haue bene vsuall (beside the Israelites) with the Egyptians, Edomites, Ammonites, Moabites, and the inhabitants of the desert, that is the Israelites, or Sarracens of Arabia: Of which Nations, Hierome also (to whom those regions were well knowne (as Epiphanius also of the most of them) hath left testified, that they retained circumcision, euen in his time. Touching some of which, although it may be probably coniectured, that they receiued it (in some sort) from the Israelites, yet not as their progenie (which yet in some sense may be said of the inhabitants of the desert, being the posteritie of Ismael the Sonne of Abraham; and likewise of the Edomites, being the seede of Esau, the sonne of Isaac) yet at least, by imitation of Abrahams familie, to whom also in blood they were allied, as the Ammonites, and Moabites, the posteritie of Lot, Abrahams brothers sonne, and who had liued long in his familiaritie and familie, Although I say of these Nations it may be coniectured, that their ceremonie of circumcision was taken vp, by imitation of the Israelites: yet that the same rite, or custome was also deriued originally, from them to the whole Nation of the Arabians (which was exceeding great) or to the Egyptians, or other neighbouring Provinces, I know not why any should conieure, or if they doe, yet appeareth it to be otherwise, because they circumcised not in the eight day, which is the inuolable custome of the Israelites: but the Egyptians in the foureteenth yeere, as is recorded by Ambrose, and the Arabians in the thirteenth (and some of them both sexes, as learned men haue recorded. Euen as the Turkes also at this day, who receiued the rite of circumcision from the Arabians, are knowne to circumsise in the eight or twelfth, or fifteenth yeere, or sooner or later, as opportunitie may serue. Of these Nations I say, how circumcision should proceede from the Israelites to them, I cannot con-

* For, that the Israelites and Sarracens are the same Nation, is manifest by Hierome, and Sozomen, and others, which being anciently termed Secuite (as Ammonius hath obserued) namely of the Grecians, and Troglodytes, because they dwelled in tents (for such to be the manner of their habitation, is not onely affirmed by Hierome, Sozomen, in Isai ca. 21. Sozomen Hist. l. 4. c. 28. Ammonius l. 2. c. 1. post. med. but signified, and not obscurely, by Dauid Psal. 120. v. 4. etiam Jerem. 40. v. 1. lamenting his dwelling in the tents of Arabia by which name Arabia desert is termed in the Hebrew were of their dwelling in the desert by the Arabians themselves named Sarracens (for Sarra signifieth a desert, and Sarra to inhabit in the Arabique tongue) or else, if not of their place, yet at least (as learned men extremely thinke, Scaliger in Animadu. Eufob. p. 17. an. 88. Fallax. Misell. an. Theolog. l. 1. c. 12. of their property they might obtaine that name of Sarracens, namely, because they liued much by rapine (for that the word Sarrake in Arabique doth import) to which about all Nations they euer were, and still are addicted. For the deduction of the name Sarracens, from Sara, as if they claimed descent from her being indeede Hagar (the progenie of Hagar) is a mere fancy and fable. They claime it not.

*Pigafet. de
Regn. Cong. l. 1.
c. 5.
Buter. Relat. pa.
let. 6. Loange.*

*Paul. Venet. l. 3.
c. 47. Haith. l. de Tartar. c. 1.*

*d'Vicent. Spec.
Historialis. 32.
c. 6.
Paul. Venet. l. 1.
c. 55.*

*Guil. de Rubri.
Itin. Tartar. c. 9.
c. Sigism. com.
Rev. Moscon.
Guil. de Rubricis Itiner. Tartar.
l. 5.
Roem. de Morib.
gentium. l. 2. c. 10
t. Herodot. l. 4.
g. Elish. de Ani-
malib. l. 10. c. 17.
x. Esdr. 2. 13.*

*y. Vers. 39.
x. Vers. 41.*

*1. Chro. 5. 26.
2. Kin. 17. 23.*

x. R. Dan. Kim-chi & R. Shelmo ex sententia seniorum apud Sext. Senens. Biblioth. Sancti. l. 1.

*Abulen. in pref.
Paralipom. in Questiō. 5.*

*Ioseph. Antic.
l. 11. c.*

ceiue : no more then I can of the great Nation of the Anzichi, on the West side of Nilus beyond Nubia, or of the inhabitants of Iucatan in America; whereof the first yet are, and the second (till they came vnder the government of the Spaniards) were meere Idolaters, for of these also, the second had, and the first still haue circumcision in vse.

And although these instances, vtterly dissolve the force of this reason, touching the Tartarians circumcision (though it were admitted to haue beene anoiently in vse among them, as being v-suall with many other Nations, of whom no suspicion at all can be conceiued, to be of the Israelites progenie) yet this may furthermore declare them, not to be of that race, because namely, nothing else was to be found among them, that might saue of Israel. For first, they were meere Idolaters, and without knowledge of the true God, as is recorded by Marcus Paulus, by 10 Haitho, and others. Secondly, they had no remembrance of the Law at all. Thirdly, they neither obserued the Sabbath, nor other rites and ceremonies of the Israelites: but touching their Matrimonies, married without impeachment the verie c wiues, and sisters of their Fathers: and touching their feeding, abstained not at all from vnclane Beasts, but fed on the flesh of Hories, Dogges, Cats, and dead Carrion, and drunke their blood, all vtterly forborne and forbidden among the Israelites. Fourthly, they haue no records, nor regard of their ancestors and linage, from whom, or by whom, they are descended, whereof Israelites were euer curious.
Fifthly, they haue no affinitie of language at all, with either the Hebrew or Chaldees tongues, neither had any vse of those Letters, nor of any other, till together with Mahumetan Religion, the Arabique characters came in vse among some of them. Neither (in a word) doe I finde any 20 thing at all, wherein the Tartarians saued of Israelites; for touching their abstinence from Swines flesh, which we finde recorded of them, neither is it generall among them, but peculiar to those that are Mahumetans: Nor if it were so, were that any good argument, because we know that the ancient Scythians, and Egyptians, and Arabians did, and almost all Mahumetans at this day doe the same, which yet are well knowne to be in no sort descended from the Israelites.

Now touching the authoritie of forged Esdra's, which hath stirred vp as it seemeth this vapourous fantasie, in the braines of new fangled antiquaries: neither doth that which he writeth of the ten Tribes, agree at all with the Tartars: nor, if it did, could yet the circumstances of that historic agree with the truth. It agrees not with the Tartars I say, for whereas they are noted 30 in that Reuelation, to be a peaceable people, and that they left the multitude of the heathen, that they might keepe their statutes, which they neuer kept in their owne land: neither of both those properties hath any conuenience or agreement at all with the Tartarians. For how are they a peaceable people, that with their warres haue troubled and ouerturned almost all Asia, and sundry Countries of Europe, and hold a great part of the former in subiection to this day? Or how kept they the statutes of the Israelites, that were meere Idolaters, and vtterly ignorant of all Iewish Lawes and Ceremonies? And touching the Historie it selfe of the Israelites departure out of Assyria, as it is set downe in that Apocryphall Esdra's (how soeuer it might otherwise agree with the Tartars) there is no wise or considerate man I thinke, that can bring his vnderstanding to giue credit to it. For first it contradicteth the vndoubted canonicall histories of the Chronicles, and 40 of the Kings, in both which it is recorded of them, that they were carried away into Asshur, and disposed in seuerall parts of the Empire namely Calach, and Chabar, and Hara, and Gozan, vnto this day; which limitation of time (vnto this day) must at least of neces-sitie import, the time wherein that Historie (of their remaining in Asshur) recorded in the bookes of the Kings, & of the Chronicles was written. Of which later, either Esdra's himselfe was the Author, as in the iudgement of learned men he is reputed, and therefore could not (as it seemeth) be the Author of that Apocryphall Historie: or, at least, if Esdra's were not the Author, yet, that the Author (whoeuer he was) liued and writ that historie of the Chronicles, after the returne of the Iewes from the captiuitie, or in the end of it (that is in Esdra's time) is euident by the end of the Book: where Cyrus his benignitie, for restoring the Iewes, and his Proclamation for their returne to Ierusalem is recorded, and that in the verie same words, wherein Esdra's in the beginning of his owne booke hath registred them. At that time therefore, 60 it is euident, that the Israelites were not departed out of the dominions of Asshur. No nor long after that in Iosephus his time who hath recorded that euen then the ten Tribes remained beyond Euphrates, and were there growne into innumerable multitudes: neither yet manie hundred yeeres after Iosephus was dead; for R. Benjamin a Iew, that liued but about 440. yeeres agoe, if Asshur be Cholchi, and Iberia, & Armenia, so called for the mountainousnesse of it) & Gauzanie in Media, then al conjoined together, & bounded the North side of the Assyrian Empire, which stretched Northward, but to that Isthme betwene the Euxine & the Caspian Seas: So that, the Israelites were by that meanes, seated farthest off from their owne Country, and placed in the parts of the Empire most wast & desolate of inhabitants, as the confines of warring Nations vsually are. But if Ca-lach be Calsete, and Chabar the hill Chaboras (being part of Taurus, and seuering Assyria, from Armenia, and Media) 50 and Hara the other hilly parts in the North side of Assyria, it seemeth more agreeable to the obseruations of Beniamin Tudelensis, for about those parts, hee found in his trauaile, the greatest multitudes of the Israelites, then in the places alleadged, I would vnderstand by Asshur, not the Empire or Dominion, but the peculiar Kingdome of Assyria.

and traualled diligently those parts of the world, and many other to visite his disperfed Countymen, hath in his Itinerary left obserued, not onely, that he found exceeding farre greater multitudes of the Israelites, to be then remaining in those Prouinces of the ancient Domiaion of Asshur, then he found in other places, possessing e large Regions, and s many Cities, so that in the Cities of some one Region<sup>b</sup> 300000. Jewes were by him numbred, obseruing specially, that in the parts of Media, many thousand Israelites of the progeny of them that Salmanafer led into captiuitie, were then remaining, but withall, he setteth downe particularly and precisely, the very places of those Regions, where certaine of the Tribes were seated, and there growne into great multitudes: as namely, in i one place, the Tribes of Ruben, Gad, and Manasse: And in k another, the 10 foure Tribes of Dan, Assher, Zebulon, and Nephthali.

But yet if there were neither authoritie of holy Scripture, nor experience to refell this fable, and the fancies that haue sprung of it: yet ordinary reason, at least of men that are not ignorant of Geography and are meanly skilled in the affaires of the world, may easily discerne the futilitie of it. For first, what neede was there of such a miracle, as to stay the course of Euphrates, for the Israelites passage from Assyria, or Media toward Tartary, the Riuer lying farre to the West, both of the one Region and of the other, and no way crossing or impeaching their iourney, which lay Northward betweene that Riuer and the Caspian Sea? Or, how might those poore captiue

20 Israelites, disarmed as they were, and disperfed in sundry Prouinces of the Assyrian Empire, and being vnder the ouersight & gouernment of Assyrian Presidents, be able to leaue the places, where by the Kings commandement they were to inhabite? Or, if the Israelites were able by force to depart, and free themselues from the dominion of the King of Asshur, yet were they so wise also, as to forsake the places where they were peaceably settled, and venture their small remainders vpon perils and vncertainties, namely, to finde out a place where neuer mankind dwelt? Or, if their stomacke serued them so well, and their wit so ill, as in such manner to forsake Assyria, yet were they also able to make themselues way (euen a way as hee saith, of eightene moneths passage) through the fierce and mighty Nations of Scythia, whom neither the conquerors of the Israelites, the Assyrians I meane, nor the Persians (and I might adde also the Grecians and the Romans) were neuer able to subdue, but were in the aftertimes subdued by them? for that the parts of Scythia should be without Inhabitants (and in Scythia it must be where they would finde that Country 30 where neuer mankind dwelt, or else it is not in Tartary) is scarce credible, as whereof we reade in histories, to haue contended with Egypt for antiquitie of habitation, and to haue preuailed, and for the abundance of people, to be termed Hominum Officina. Insomuch that the greatest occasion of swarming abroad of those Nations of Scythia, and of their ouerwhelming of Asia and Europe, with their infinite multitudes and Colonies, is in histories recorded, to be lacke of roome for habitation in their owne Countries.

And lastly, to make an end of this tedious discourse, with the end of their imagined tedious journey: what ancient Geographer or Historian is there (set our *Esdra*s aside) that euer remembred of such a Region as Arfareth, where they are said to haue seated themselues. True it is indeede that I finde the Citie of Arfareth mentioned both in Berosus fragments, and in Ptolomie

40 placed neere the issue of the Riuer Araxes into the Caspian Sea: and, it was perhaps one of the Israelish Colonies, planted in the confines of the Empire of Assyria: for it may well be that Arfareth, is but ארר שארית, or ארר שארית, that is the Citie, or the hill of the remainder, or perhaps ארר שארית (the last letter of the first word cut off in the Greeke pronunciation for sounds sake) the Land of the remainder: but the tale of eightene months iourney, will no more agree with this Citie, then the Region of Arfareth doth, with Geography or History.

So that me thinkes this forged storie of the Israelites voiage and habitation, in such remote regions where neuer mankind dwelt, fauoureth of the same phantasticall and Talmudicall spirit, that e another tale of the same author doth, touching the collection of all the waters, into a seauenth part of the earth, the other fix being left vncovered: or, a third, of (the Elephant and the 50 Whale) Behemoth and Leviathan: namely, that God appointed the Sea to one of them, and the Land to the other, because they were so great that the Sea could not hold them both: for else belike, if the Sea had beene large enough, we might haue gone a fishing for Elephants. For how is the Sea gathered into a seauenth part of the earth, whose expansion is not onely by the most skilfull Philosophers esteemed, but found by experience of nauigations hitherto made, to ouerspred as neerely as may be discerned, about halfe the compasse of the Earth? Or, being of that breadth, and withall of the depth, that it is knowne to be, how should it not be spacious enough, to receiue Elephants and Whales together? The dimensions of the Elephant, euen of the greatest sort of Indian Elephants, (and the earth breedeth none so large as those of India) are, saith Alianus, nine cubits of height (the length in that beast is equall to the height) and five of breadth, the greatest that haue beene seene in Europe, being o obserued to be farre lesse. The dimension of the Whale indeede is farre greater (five times saith P. Alianus then the largest sort of Elephants.) But yet his ordinary dimension is but six and thirty cubits long, and eight cubits high, as Rondeletius hath obserued. But admit notwithstanding some of them to be fittie cubits, of which length, Nearchus in Arrianus is said to haue measured one in the East Ocean;

Beniamin
ner p. 7
70. 7
76. 77
81. 86
e Pag. 77. c. 11.
f Pag. 76. c. 6.
g Pag. ead.
h Pag. 77.
i Pag. 87.

2 E/dr. 13.
k And the most high the new ed them signes and staid the springs of the flud (Euphrates) till they were passed ouer. vers. 44.

They tooke this counsell to themselues that they would leaue the multitude of the Heathen
ver. 41.

And goe forth into a Country where neuer mankind dwelt. v. 41.
Iustin. hist. l. 2.
in princip.

Beros. l. 3. Ptole.
Georg. l. 5. c. 13.
e in Tab. 3.
Asia.

m E/d. 6. 42.
n Cap. cod. v. 56.

Aliande Ani.
malib. l. 12. c. 8.
o Vid. Gillium
in Description.
Elephant. c. 6.

Gorep. l. 2. Orig.
Antuerpian.
P Alian. l. 1. c.
c. 12.
Rondelet. de Pi.
scib. l. 16. c. 11.
Arrian. de Reb.
Indicis longa
ant. p. 100.

Plin. l. 32.
Basil. in Evaemer. Homil. 7.

may, to be six hundred foot long, and three hundred and sixtie foot thicke, as <sup>a</sup> Inba in Plinie related to be found in the Bay of Arabia (where yet, as it is well knowne by the soundings of Nauigators, that Sea is not by a good deale three hundred and sixtie foote deepe.) Or, let them be more yet, euen foure Acres long (that is nine hundred and sixtie foot) as Plinie hath related of some in the Sea of India. For, although the two last reports be in truth no better then fancies and fables, which the impudence of some, hath made the ignorance of others to beleue, yet I will exclude none, but onely Basil, as intollerably hyperbolicall, affirming namely that Whales are equall to the greatest mountaines, and their backs when they shew aboue the water, like to Islands. But admitting all the rest I say, what proportion haue those dimensions of the Whale and the Elephant, to the huge bredth and depth of the Ocean?

Fabian apud Plin.
l. 2. c. 102. Cleom.
Meteor. l. 1. c. 10.
Plutarch in Vita
Emily Pauli.
Scalig. de Subjlitate. Exerc. 38.
b. and. Baccius de Thermis. l. 1. c. 4.
et Alij.

Theon, in Comment. Magna Constructio.
Ptolom. l. 1.

Plin. l. 2. c. 63.
Plutarch loc.
supra citato.

Cleomed. l. 1.
Meteor. c. 10.
Alhazen de Crepuscul. propos. 1.

Damasen. l. 2. de fide Orthodoxa
c. 10.

Genes. 1. 9.
Aquinas in Sum.
p. 1. q. 69. a. 1.
Dionys. Carth.
Cathar. n. 5. A.
ly in Comment.
cap. 1. Genes.

For if I may without offence insert a short Philosophicall speculation: the depth of the Sea (to speake nothing of the breadth, which euery common Map doth represent) is determined by Fabianus in Plinie, & by Cleomedes, to be fifteene furlongs, that is, one mile and seuen eight pars: Or else, equall to the height of the greatest Mountaines, to whose height, and the deepenesse of the Sea, the Geometricians (as Plutarch hath recorded) anciently assigned equall dimentions. Or yet rather (if you will any thing respect my opinion) it is a great deale more. For, as for the shallow speculation of Scaliger, and <sup>b</sup> others, of the shallownesse of the Sea, determining the height of Hills, farre to surpass the deepenesse of the Sea: And that in very few places, it attaineth one hundred passes of depth, is indeede true in the narrow Channels and Straits of the Sea: But in the free and large Ocean, it is by the experience of Nauigators knowne to be as false as the Gospell is true. Indeede touching the height of Mountaines, I finde it pronounced by the great Mathematician Eratosphenes in Theon, that the highest sort of them, passe not in perpendicular erectnesse ten furlongs (that is one mile and one fourth part) of which height also, it is obserued in Plinie, that Dicaarchus by Dioptrical Instruments, found the Hill Pelion in Theffalie to be, and in Plutarch, that Xenagoras (another Mathematician) obserued the height of Olympus, in the same Region, sauing, that in this later, there is an addition of twenty passes, for the whole number of passes, is 1270. Neither doe I finde any greater perpendicular height attributed to Mountaines, by any ancient writer, Cleomedes excepted: who assigneth to the height of Hills, as he doth also to the depth of the Sea, fifteene furlongs. (For Alhazen I omit, because he onely restraineth the height of hills, as namely, not to exceede eight miles, without determining what their height should be) But yet, all these, are to be vnderstood, I take it, with relation to the Mountanes in and about Greece, with which themselves were acquainted, which may in no sort compare with the huge Mountaines of vast Continents, such as are the Alpes in Europe, Atlas in Afrique, Caucasus in India, the Andes in Peru, and such other.

But, whatsoeuer the height of Hills may be aboue the common superficies of the Earth, it seemeth to me after good consideration, that the depth of the Sea is a great deale more. For declaration of which point, I require to be supposed, first, that the Earth at the first forming of it, was in the superficies, regular, and sphericall: which the Holy Scripture directs vs to beleue, because the water couered and compassed all the face of the Earth: And secondly, that the face of the Land is in largenesse and expansion, at least equall to that of the Sea: And thirdly, that the vneuenesse and irregularitie, which is now scene in the superficies of the Earth was caused (as is noted in Damasen) either, by taking some parts out of the vpper face of the Earth in sundry places, to make it more hollow, and laying them in other places, to make it more conuexe: Or else (which in effect is equi uolent to that) by raising vp some, and depressing others to make roome and receit for the Sea: that mutation being wrought by the power of that word, Let the waters be gathered into one place, that the dry land may appeare. For, as for the fancy of Aquinas, Dionysius, Catharinus, and some other Diuines; namely, that that gathering of waters, and discouery of the Earth, was made, not by any mutation in the Earth, but by a violent accumulation of the waters, or heaping them vp on high, it is too vnreasonable. Because it is vtterly against the nature of water, being a flexible & ponderous body, so to consist, and stay it selfe, & not fall to the lower parts about it, where in nature there is nothing at all to hinder it. Or, if it be hindered and restrained supernaturally, by the hand and bridle of the almighty, lest it should ouerwhelme and drowne the Land, it must follow thereof, that God in the very institution of nature, imposed a perpetuall violence vpon nature: And this withall, that at the Deluge, there had beene no necessity at all, to breake vp the springs of the deepe, and to open the Cataracts of Heauen, and powre down water continually, so many dayes and nights together vpon the Earth, seeing, the onely withdrawing of that hand, or letting goe of that bridle, which restrained the water, would presently haue ouerwhelmed all.

But to come to the Point. It seemeth vpon the former suppositions (of which, the holy Scripture establisheth the first, Experience of Trauellers, and Nauigators the second, and Reason the third) that in making estimation of the depth of the Sea, are not to reckon and consider onely, the height of the Hills, aboue the common superficies of the Earth, vnto which the extraordinary depths or whirlpooles, that are found in the Sea, doe properly answere (descending beneath the ordinary bottome of the Sea, as the Hills ascend aboue the ordinary face of the Land) but, but, the aduantage or height of al the dry land about the Superficies of the Sea. Because the whole Masse of the Earth, that now appeareth about the waters, being taken as it were out of the place, which the waters now possesse, must be equall to the place out of which it was taken, and consequently it seemeth, that the height or eleuation of the one, should answer the depth or descending of the other. And therefore as I said, in estimating the deepnesse of the Sea, wee are not to consider onely the erection of the Hills, about the ordinary Land, but the aduantage of all the dry Land about the Sea. Which later, I meane the height of the ordinary maine Land, (euen excluding the Hills) is in my opinion more in large Continents about the Sea, then that of the Hills, is about the Land.

10 For first, that the plaine and common face of the dry Land, is not leuell, or equally distant from the Centre, but hath great declinitie and descent toward the Sea, and acclinitie or rising toward the Mid-land parts, although it appeare not so to the common view of the Eye, is to reason notwithstanding manifest. Because as it is found in that part of the Earth, which the Sea couereth that it descendeth lower, and lower toward the middest of the Sea (for the Sea which touching the vpper face of it, is knowne to be leuell by nature, and euenly distant from the Centre, is withall obserued to waxe deeper and deeper, the farther one sayleth from the shoare toward the Maine) Euen so, in that part which is vncovered, the courings and streamings of Riuers on 20 * By which rule of the proceeding of the Riuers by the proclinitie of the earth, & euer sliding from the higher ground to the lower, till they come to the Sea, is euident to be discerned, that in Continents, those Regions are the higher Land from which Riuers streame, and those the lower ground, to which they proceed, and consequently, that of all, those are the highest which receiuing no forreine Riuers, to which they giue passage through them, doe send forth the longest Riuers on all sides to the Regions round about them. By which obseruation is to be discerned, that Hcluetia and Rhetia, sending forth the longest Riuers of Europe, which on all sides descend from them and their Confines, Danubius toward the East, Rhene North, Rhodanus West, beside Ticinus, Addua, and others, that fall into Padus South, are the highest Land of Europe, As the Region of Pamer, and Kijges, with some other neere the crossing of the great Mountaines Taurus and Imanus about India, whence are directed, the greatest and longest Riuers of Asia, Indus and Ganges toward the South, Oxus and Iaxartus toward the West, Oechardes North, Canton East, is prooued by the same reason, to be the highest part of Afrike and Asia, and in my opinion of all the Earth. And as the Region also about the Springs of Nilus, from which beside Nilus, that runneth towardes the North, are sent forth, the Riuer of Magnice, towardes the South, of Zaire West, of Coauo and Zuama East, being (Niger excepted) the greatest Riuers of Afrike, is by the same reason, prooued to bee, the highest part of that Continent.

30 one cubit of declining, in two hundred and fortie foot of proceeding (for he saith, unum cubitum in binos Actus, and Actus as may be obserued in Colamella, and others is a dimension of one hundred and twentie foot long) Vitruuius and Palladius in their conduction of waters, require indeed somewhat lesse, namely, that in proceeding of two hundred foot forward there should be allowed one foot of descending downward, which yet in the course of one thousand miles (as Danubius or Volgha, or Indus, &c. haue so much or more) will make five miles of descent in perpendicular account: And in the course of two thousand or more (as Nilus and Niger, and the Riuer of Amazon haue) ten mile or more of like descent.

40 And although I know well enough, that water being (as it is) heauie and flexible, will slide away at any inequality, and therefore am altogether perswaded, that this rule of Vitruuius touching conueyance of waters, is not to be taken as a rule of necessitie, to be obserued in the deriu-
50 uing of them, as if water could not runne without that aduantage (for in that respect the Conueyors of waters of these times content themselves euen with one inch in six hundred foot, as Philander also on Vitruuius, hath obserued) but is rather to be vnderstood as a rule of commodity, namely with relation to the expedition and wholesomenesse of the water so conueyed, lest resting too long in the pipes it should contract from them some vnwholesome qualitie, or else through the slacknesse of motion, or long closenesse, or banishment from the Aire, it might gather some aptnesse and disposition to putrifie. Although I say, such excesse of aduantage as in the artificiall conueyance of waters the forenamed Authors require, be not of necessitie exacted, in the naturall deriuation of them: yet neuertheless certaine it is, that the descent of Riuers, being as it is continual, and the course of some of them very long, and in many places swift, and here, and there headlong and furious, the difference of height or aduantage, cannot but bee great, betwixt the 60 Springs of Riuers and their Out-lets, betwixt their first rising out of the Earth, and their falling into the Sea.

Vnto which declinitie of the Land, seeing the deepnesse of the Sea doth in proportion answer (as I before declared) and not onely to the height of Hills. It remaineth that we esteeme and deter-all sides from the mid-land parts toward the Sea, * whole propertie we know is to slide from the higher to the lower, euidently declare so much.

And although I am not able precisely to determine, what the ordinarie declinitie of the earth may be, yet, if that bee conuenient in the workes of Nature, which is required in the workes of Art, that imitateth Nature, it will be found true that before I said: Namely, that in great Continents, through which Riuers haue long Courses, some of one thousand or two thousand miles the height of the ordinarie Mid-land, about the face of the Sea, is more, then of the Hillies about the common face of the earth, for Pliny in the deriuation of water, requireth

Plin. l. 31. c. 64.

Columell. de Re Rustica. l. 5. c. 1. Vitruu. Architec. l. 8. c. 7. Pallad. de re Rustica. l. 9. tit. 11.

Philander in Vitruu. l. 8. c. 11.

Arist. Met. l. 2 c. 1
Strab. l. 1. longe
post medium.

termine that deepnesse to be a great deale more, then it hath beene hitherto by Philosophers commonly reputed. And although the deepnesse of the Sardinian Sea (which indeed Aristotle acknowledged for the deepest part of the Mediterranean) be specially recorded by Posidonius in Strabo, to haue beene found but one thousand fadomes (ὑπὸ πύλας) which is but a mile and one fift part: yet what may the depth in that narrow Sea be, compared to the hollow deepnesse of the vast Ocean? Or rather (to turne this Instance to our aduantage) if in so narrow a Sea as the Mediterranean is (whose breadth attaineth not where it is largest, sixe hundred miles) the depth bee so great, what may we esteeme the deepnesse of the huge Ocean to be, that is in many places aboue fife times as broad? especially, seeing that the broader that Seas are, if they be withall entire, and free from Ilands, they are answerably obserued to be the deeper.

But whether haue I bin carried by these Elephants and Whales? to what heights and depths, of Mountaines, and Seas? I pray you pardon me, for I see I haue digressed, that is, transgressed, now I returne into the way againe.

Of the quantitie and proportion of the parts of the Earth, possessed by the seuerall sorts of the aboue mentioned religions. Ch. 14.
1. Posidonius in praef. Gram. Arabic.
Lud. Regius de Vicefuitud. Re- rum. l. 8. in fine.

Now, if out of the former long discourse, I should collect a short summe, and estimate the proportion with respect to the whole Earth, that each one of the forementioned Religions, haue to the other. It being first supposed, which vpon exact consideration and calculation, will be found to swerue very little from the truth, that the proportions of Europe, Afrike, Asia, and America, are as one, three, foure and seuen. And that the professors of the forementioned Religions, possesse the seuerall portions and proportions, of each of them, which is before set downe: It will be found I say vpon these suppositions (which the best Geographie, and Histories doe perswade me to be true) that Christians possesse, neere about a sixt part of the knowne inhabited Earth: Mahumetans, a fift part (not as some haue exceedingly ouer-lashed, halfe the World or more) and Idolaters, two thirds, or but little lesse. So that if we diuide the knowne Regions of the World, into thirtie equall parts. The Christians part is as fife, the Mahumetans as sixe, and the Idolaters as nineteene, for the poore disperfed and distressed Christians, which are found in Asia and Afrike, mingled among Mahumetans and Idolaters, I receiue not into this account, both because they are but thinne disperfed, in respect of the multitudes of Mahumetans and Idolaters in those Regions among whom they liue (beeing withall vnder their dominion) and because also, many Mahumetans, are found mingled among Christians in Europe, to recompence and counteruaile a great part of that number.

Such therefore may be the generall proportion of Christians to Mahumetans and Idolaters, in the Continents of the Earth hitherto discovered, namely, in this our neighbour Continent of the East comprehending Europe, Afrike, and Asia, and in that other Continent of the West, called America, and in the Ilands belonging to them both. But if the South or Antartique Continent, be so large, as I am verily perswaded it is (euen no lesse, then that of the East before mentioned, which containeth Europe, Afrike and Asia together) then will the Idolaters be found to surpasse all the other Religions, in exceeding great proportion, for that the Inhabitants of that South Continent are Idolaters, there is no question at all (as I take it) to be made, both because in the parts hitherto knowne, as namely in the Region of Beach, ouer against Iana, they were found to be so: And also, because they are knowne to be no other then Idolaters, that inhabite all those parts of the other Continents, that neighbour most towards them, from whom it is likely, they should haue receiued the change of their Religion, if any were: for first, in Asia, both India, and the Ilands of the Indian Sea, whereof some lie close on the South Continent. Secondly, in Afrike, the Regions about the Cape of Buona Speranza. And thirdly, in America, the Countries that border on Magaglians Strait, which are the neereft Neighbours to the foresaid Continent of the South, are knowne to be all ouer-spread with Idolaters.

Now that the South Continent is no lesse then I before esteemed it, namely, then that of Asia, Afrike, and Europe altogether, although I might be probably induced to beleue so, because it is well knowne, both (touching Latitude) to approach in some parts neere the Equator, and (touching Longitude) to runne along in a continuall circuite about the Earth, fronting both the other Continents: Yet haue I also another reason of more certaine importance, to perswade me: Namely, because it is well knowne, that the land to the North side of the Line, in the other Continents (the old and new world) yet altogether is at least foure times as large as that part of them which lieth to the South.

*Archim. de Infi-nitib. Aquae. l. 1.
Propos. 2.*

*in Vatro. l. 6. de ling. Lat. Isidor.
Origin. l. 3. c. 12.
& Aly.*

Now, for asmuch as it is certaine, first by Archimides his rule, * that the face of the Sea, is in all parts naturally leuel, or equally distant from the center of the water, for which equalitie, it hath obtained the name of Aequor and Aqua, as Grammarians say. And secondly, by the Philosophers knowne rule, that the

* For touching the first of these suppositions. It is the propertie of water, euer to fall that way, where it findeth decliuitie. Wherefore, if the water, in the vpper face of it, were higher in one place then in another it would necessarily fall from the higher position to the lower, because it is heauie and flexible, and hath nothing in the open and free Sea, to let or hinder it: And consequently, would neuer rest settled and stable, till the face of it were leuelled, in an euen distance from the Centre.

-And touching the second, if the Earth were vne-qually poysed on opposite sides of the centre, then must it follow, that the least and lighter masse of the Earth should presse downie as forcibly, as the greater and weightier, because it attaineth the centre as well as it. But if it be granted, which reason doth inforce, that the weightier part of the Earth should presse downward, with greater force, and with more right challenge the centre, then the lighter part: it must follow, that the lighter masse or side of the Earth, must yeeld and giue place to the weightier, so farre, till the centre of that whole masse of the Earth take possession of the centre of the world (for till then, one side will be still heavier then the other) and so the opposite halves of the Earth, in respect of heauinesse, be brought on all sides, about the centre, vnto a perfect equilibration.

Earth.

10 And the third may be established, by manifest demonstration. Because, a clod of Earth, suffered to fall from any point of the Aire, wheresoeuer on the face of the Sea (the same doth water, falling on euen and plaine Land) when all is calme, and the Aire not troubled with winds, nor the Sea with waues, will descend by a perpendicular line, on the face of the water. In such sort I say, that the line by which it falleth maketh exactly equall and right Angles on all sides, with the face of the water whereon it falleth. Therefore it is manifest, that the Earth so falling, tendeth directly to the centre of the water. Because no straight line insisteth perpendicularly, on the face or circumference of any speciall bodie (as the water is) except only those that proceed directly to the centre of the Sphere: But certaine it is, that the Earth is withall directly carried toward it owne centre, therefore there is but one common centre of the Water and of the Earth.

20 of the South. And yet I omit all the Land that may bee about the Artique Pole, beyond the Scythian or Sarmatian Sea, which must be also counterpoysed in that Antarctike continent, for nothing comes within the compasse of my vnderstanding, to be hereto replied, except any would perhaps imagine, that either the Sea on the South side of the Equator, is very shallow, or that the land of that continent may be much higher above the face of the Sea, then the land of the other two (and so equall in masse, though lesse in circuit) or that the Earth on the South side of the Equator, should be of a more ponderous disposition, then on the North, in which cases, some compensation of weightinesse, may be made for the want of extention. But of these three, the experience of Saylers evidently refelleth the first: who in equall distance from the Land, obserue an equall deepnesse of the Sea, in both South and North Latitude. And neither is there any experience, nor good reason that can be alleadged to establish either of the later: which, but that I haue already too much offended by digressions, I could proue I doubt not against all exception. But this for a conclusion to this discourse, I dare pronounce touching that South continent, that it will certainly be found (in the after-times, when it shall bee better discovered) much larger, then any Globe or Map hitherto extant, hath represented it.

30 Such therefore (as I haue declared) is the generall state of Christianitie at this present in the World, and the proportion of it to other Religions. But because you require yet further to bee specially informed of the diuers sorts and sects of Christians that are abroad in the World, and withall of their diuers Regions and Religions, at least of those principall Characters of their Religion, wherein they specially differ each from other, I will here set downe my second period, touching the generall differences of Religions, and of the seuerall parts of the World where they are maintayned: and will now proceed to that particular consideration touching the Sects of Christianitie, and in deauour to giue you the best satisfaction that my poore reading, and obseruation may inable me to performe.

40 The Sects therefore of Christians, that carrie name and report at this present in the World, beside the Protestants and Romans in the West, of whom I will be silent, because you know their condition better then my selfe, are 1 the Grecians, 2 Melchites or Syrians, 3 Georgians, 4 Moscomites and Russians, 5 Nestorians, 6 Indians tearmed the Christians of Saint Thomas, 7 Iacobites, 8 Cophites, 9 Armenians, 10 Habassines, and 11 Maronites. Of which eleuen Sects, there be three Principall, namely the Grecians, Iacobites and Nestorians, with which the rest haue, for the most part, either some dependance and deriuation, or neerer conuenience and agreement.

50 The Grecians acknowledg obedience to the Patriarch of Constantinople, vnder whose Iurisdiction are in Asia, the Christians of Natolia (excepting Armenia the lesse, and Cilicia) of Circassia, of Mengrelia, and of Russia: As in Europe also, the Christians of Greece, Macedon, Epirus, Thrace, Bulgaria, Rascia, Serbia, Bosnia, Walachia, Moldania, Podolia, and Mosconia: together with all the Ilands of the Aegean Sea, and others about Greece, as farre as Corfu, beside a good part of the large dominion of Polonia, and those parts of Dalmatia, and of Croatia, that are subiect to the Turkish dominion,

60 Of which great extendment of the Greeke Patriarchs Iurisdiction, if you demand the reason: I haue obserued sundry occasions, from whence it hath proceeded. For first, his originall or Primitive

Earth is equally poyled, on both sides of her owne centre. And thirdly, that the center of the Earth and of the water are al one (both of them being indeed no other then the centre of the World) which though some phantastical heads haue called into question, yet no sound Philosopher euer doubted of: It followeth thereupon, that the earth should in answerable measure and proportion, lift it selfe and appeare above the face of the Sea, on the South side of the Line, as it doth on the North. And consequently, that what is wanting in the South parts of the two forelaid Continents towards the counteruailing of the North parts (which is about three fife parts of both the other Continents layed together) must of necessity be supplied in the continents

Of the diuers sorts or Sects of Christians in the World, and of their seuerall Regions. And first of the Grecians. Chap. 15.

Bellon. Obser. l. 1. c. 35.

Concil. Chalcedonensis. 28

Nouell. Leon De ordine Me-tropolitani. l. 2.
tom. I. in O-rientis. Caropalat. de Offic.
Palat. Constantinop. prope finē.
* Cromer descrip. Polon. l. 1.
Heidenst. de Bel.
Mose. l. 1. Guaguin. Descript.
on. Cisterciens. c. 2.

1. Concil. Florēt.
Sess. 18. & se-quentib. Ierem.
Patriarch. Constant. in Resp. 1.
ad Germinos. c. 1.
2. Concil. Florēt.
prope Initium.
Respons. Græc.
ad cardin. Gui-
s. Quest. 9.
3. Resp. ad græ-
cor. 2. 5. Ierē.
Patr. Resp. 1. c. 1.
4. Ierem. Resp.
ad. c. 10. & 21.
5. Possuin. de Rebus Mosco-
uic pag. 43.
6. Id. l. cita. p. 40.
7. Ierem. Respons. cap. 21.
8. Tom. unionis inter nouel. Co-stantin. Por phyrogen. in Tomo.
1. Iur. Orientalis. lib. 2. Zonar.
Annal. Tom. 3.
in Imp. Leonis philosophi.
9. Resp. Græcor
ad Guis. l. 1.
Quest. 8. Possuin. de reb.
Moscou. p. 44.
10. Possuin. l. ci-
tat. p. 41. & 42.
Villamont en.
Vorag. l. 2. c. 21. & Alii. 11. Possuin. l. citato. p. 42. 12. Nilus Episc. Thessal. de Primatu Papæ Barlaam de primatu Papæ & Alii. Leo. 9. epist. 1. ad Episcop. Constantinop. & Acridan. & in pluribus aliis. Sigebert. in Chronico ad An. 1054. Possuin. de Reb. Mosco. p. 38. & sequentib.

Of the Syrians or Melchites.
Chap. 16.
* Botar. Relat.
p. 1. 3. l. 2. ca. de Melchiti.
a Possuin. in Descrip. Syrie. p. 30

mitiue authoritie assigned, or rather confirmed to him (as Bishop of the Imperiall Citie) by the Councell of Chalcedon; contained all the Prouinces of Thrace, and Anatolia (Isauria, and Cilicia only excepted, which belonged to the Patriarke of Antiochia) and they were in all no lesse then twentie eight Romane Prouinces. Secondly, the voluntary submission of the Grecians, vpon their separation from the Latine Church greatly increased it: for thereby not onely Greece, Macedon, Epirus, Candie, and the Isles about Greece (in all seuen Prouinces) came vnder his obedience; but also Sicilie, and the East point of Italy, named Calabria, reuolted from the Bishop of Rome, and for a long time pertained to the Patriarke of Constantinople, as appeareth in the Nouell of Leo Sophus, touching the order and precedence of Metropolitans, belonging to that Patriarchy. And by the like ordination set downe by Andronicus Palæologus, in Cyropalates, where wee find the Metropolitans of Syracusa, and Catana in Sicilie, of Rhegium, Seueriana, Rofia, and Hydruntum in Calabria, registred among the Metropolitans of that Iurisdiction. Thirdly, it was enlarged by the conuersion of the North Regions to Christian Religion, performed by his Suffragans and Ministers, euen from Thrace to * Russia, and the Scythian Sea (the like whereof was the principall cause, that so farre enlarged the Bishop of Rome his Iurisdiction in the West parts of Europe.) And fourthly, by the Turkes conquests made vpon the Westerne Countries, subiect before to the Bishop of Rome: all which, while partly the former Bishops and Pastors fled, to auoid the Turkes oppression (like the hireling that forsaketh the flocke, when he seeth the wolfe comming) and partly, while the Patriarke of Constantinople, to supply that default, was faine to prouide them of new ministers, they haue beene by little and little brought and trayned to the Greeke Religion.

Now as touching the proper Characters of their Religion, I must for the better designing and remembring of them, set before mee some instance or patterne to compare it, and other sects of Religion withall: And that is most fit to be the Romane Church, both because their differences with that Church specially, are in Writers most obserued. So that, by that meanes my discourse may bee the shorter, and yet no lesse perspicuous to you, that know the opinions of the Romane Church so well. The principall Characters then of the Grecian Religion (for none but the principall you require) and to mention euery slender difference of Ceremonies, would be but tedious and fruitlesse (and is beside without my compasse) are these that follow.

1. That the Holy Ghost proceedeth from the Father onely, not from the Sonne.
2. That there is no Purgatory fire.
3. That they celebrate the Sacrament of the Eucharist in both kinds.
4. And in leauened bread, and thinke it cannot bee effectually consecrated in bread vnleauened.
5. That they reiect extreame Vnction.
6. And Confirmation.
7. That they deny the soules of holy men to enioy the blissefull vision of God, or the soules of wicked men to bee tormented in Hell, before the Day of Iudgement. Th. a les. de Conu. gent. l. 6. c. 1.
8. That they admit Priests marriages, namely, so that they may keepe their wiues married before their Ordination, but must not marry after Ordination.
9. That they prohibite vtterly the fourth marriage, as a thing intollerable. Insomuch, that (as we find recorded) their Patriarkes haue for that cause excommunicated some of their Emperors, although they had no issue left of their three former marriages.
10. That they reiect the religious vse of massie Images, or Statues, admitting yet Pictures or plaine Images in their Churches.
11. That they solemnize Saturday (the old Sabbath) festiuall, and eat therein flesh, forbidding as vnlawfull, to fast any Saturday in the yeere, except Easter Eue.
12. That they obserue foure Lents in the yeere.
13. That they eat not of any thing strangled, nor of bloud.
14. And lastly, that they deny the Bishop of Romes Primacy, and (reputing him and his Church for Schismatikes) exclude them from their communion: And so haue done, as I find in Leo the ninth his Epistles, and in Sigebert, about these five hundred yeeres. And if you desire to see more differences of the Greeke and Romane Church, you may see them (but they are of lesse importance then those I haue related in Possuines Booke of the matters of Moscouia.

SYRIANS are the same, that in some Histories are termed Melchites: being esteemed for their number, the * greatest sect of Christians in the Orient. The first, being properly the name of their Nation: And the second noting the propertie of their Religion. Syrians they were named (to let vaine fancies goe) of the Citie of Tyre, which in the ancient language of the Phœnicians, was called צור: and certain-a For Possuin. fantasie deriuing Suria from צור is meerely vaine, and being neuer so named in the Hebrew tongue, but alwayes צור, by which name also it seemeth anciently ly,

to haue been knowne, euen among the Greeians, for ἀσσυρίοι mentioned in Homer, are no other, as Possidonius in Strabo expounds him; then the Syrians: Strabo himselfe also recording in other places, that the Syrians * were called αἰνυοί in his time: And that the * naturall Inhabitants of Syria, so called themselves. Yet neuertheless they were vulgarly knowne by the name of Συροι among the Gracians, because the Citie of ܣܪܐ, being the maine Mart Towne of all those parts, was the place where they had their Trade and Commerce with those Aramites. But when the Phœnician tongue began to degenerate into Chaldee, then the name of ܣܪܐ was conuerted into Tur, the later ܣ being turned into ܬ & ܪ in sound made ܬܪ. As * they that obserue the differences of the Hebrew and Chaldee, and the transitions of the first into the latter know to be ordinary.

ing seated in a small Iland (but nineteene miles in circuit, as Pliny noteth) a small Territory for such a City: or perhaps, because it was the strongest fortresse (for that also ܣܪܐ importeth) of all those Regions, as being founded on a Rocke, enuironed with the Sea (for it was before Alexanders time * seuen hundred paces distant from the firme land) mightily strengthened by fortification of Art, populous as being the Metropolis of Phœnicia, and exceeding rich, as sometime the citie of greatest traffike in the world.

Of this Citie then, both the Region and Inhabitants of Syria obtained their names: but Melchites as I said they were termed, meerely in respect of their Religion, wherein namely they altogether followed the examples and decrees of the Emperours. For whereas after the Councell of Chalcedon, infinite perplexitie and trouble began to arise in the East parts, principally about the opinion of Eutyches and Dioscorus, of one, onely nature in Christ, which that Councell had condemned, but notwithstanding found many that maintained it, and reiected the Councell in those Easterne Countries: And thereupon the Emperour Leo began to exact (as diuers other of his Successours afterward did) the suffrages and subscriptions of the Easterne Bishops, for the better establishment of the Councell. Then began they that embraced and approued the authority of that Councell, because they followed the Emperours decrees made in behalfe of it, to be termed by their aduersaries Melchites, of Melchis, saith Nicephorus (rather מלכא) which in the speech of Syria signifieth a King: (as one would say, Of the Kings Religion) whereas they that opposed themselves to the Councell, were distracted into no lesse then twelue seuerall Sects, and not long after into more, as the same * Nicephorus hath recorded.

Now although the Syrians or Melchites, are for their Religion meerely of the Gracians opinions. As:

1. That the Holy Ghost proceedeth onely from the Father.
2. That they celebrate Diuine Seruice as selemn: on the Sabbath, as on the Lords day.
3. That they keepe that day festiuall, eating therein flesh, and fast no Saturday in the yeere but Easter Eue.
4. That their Priests and Deacons contract not Marriage, being already in Orders, but yet retaine their wiues before married.
5. That the fourth Matrimony is vterly vnlawfull.
6. That they communicate the Eueharist in both kinds.
7. That they acknowledge not Purgatory.
8. That they obserue foure Lents in the yeere, &c. And in a word, although they bee meerely of the same Religion and communion with the Gracians: yet are they not of the iurisdiction of the Patriarke of Constantinople, but of the Archbishop of Damascus, by the title of the Patriarch of Antiochia. For Antiochia it selfe (where yet the name of Christians was first heard in the world, and was long knowne by the name of ܣܘܪܝܝܐ) lying at this present in a manner wast, or broken and dispersed into small Villages, of which onely one, of about sixtie Houses, with a small Temple belonging to Christians, & the Patriarchall Seat was translated thence to Damascus (where, as is reported, are * aboue one thousand Houses of Christians) and there remaineth. For although the Patriarkes of the Maronites, and of the Jacobites, whereof the former keepeth residence in Libanus, and the later in Mesopotamia, intitle themselves Patriarkes of Antiochia, and by the Christians of their owne sects bee so acknowledged: yet doe the Melchites, who retaine the ancient Religion of Syria, acknowledge none for Patriarke, but the Archbishop of Damascus, reputed both the other for Schismatickes, as hauing departed from the obedience and communion of the true Patriarke. And yet besides all these, a fourth there is of the Popes designation, that vsurpeth the title of the Patriarke of Antioch. For * euer since the Latines surprised Constantinople (which was about the yeere 1200.) and held the possession of the East Empire, about seuentie yeeres, all which time the Patriarkes of Constantinople, were consecrated by the Pope: As also, since the holy Land, and the Prouinces about it, were in the hands of the Christian Princes of the West, which began to be about An. 1100. and so continued about eightie yeeres, during which season the Patriarkes of Antiochia also and of Ierusalem, were of the Popes consecration:

ly, that Tyre was anciently called Sarra, is recorded by the * Roman Writers: and it is also acknowledged by * Vitriacus, Niger, Postell and others, that the place of Tyre, (for the Citie was vterly ruined three hundred yeeres ago) is still called the Port of Sur, which name it seemeth to haue obtained, either because it was built on a Rocke, for so Burchardus that viewed the place hath obserued) which ܣܪܐ in the Phœnician tongue signifies: or else as Hierom deriues it, of the straitnesse and scarcenesse of roomes, as be-

* Gell. us. l. 14. c. 6
Festus in Discl.
one Sarra.
* Strab. l. 16. in fine.
* Vitria. histor. Oriental. c. 41.
* Niger in commentar. 4. Affe.
* Postell. in descrip. Syriae pag. 50.
* Strab. l. 17. non long. ante finem.
* Strab. l. 1. post. med. Burch. rd. descr. terra Sancta.
* Hieron. in lib. de Nominib. Hebraicis. Pl. n. l. 5. c. 19.
* Vid. Scaliger ad Fest. in discl. one Sarra. & Guidon. Fabr. c. in Grammatic. Chaldae. &c.
b. Q. Curt. l. 4. c. Plin. loc. citato.
Niceph. Calist. Histor. Eccle- siast. l. 18. c. 52.
* Lib. 18. c. 45. l. 2. 3. 4. 5. l. 206.
* Vitriaco. Hist. Orient. c. 75.

4. Villamont. ex voyag. l. 2. c. 22.
6. 7. 8. Villamont. loco citato.
* Vitriac. loco iam citato. Sa- liguicis. Itiner. Tom. 8. c. 1. Ba- mugart. Pere- grin. l. 2. c. 9. & Alij.
g. Bellou. obseru. l. 1. Chirra. de lia.
Ecclesi. 7. pag. 5.
Boter. Relat. p. 3. l. 2. c. de Maro- niti. Cus. Turco. gar. l. 4. p. 296.
ex relatione Gerlachij.
h. Boter. loco iam citato.
i. Boter. Relat. p. 3. l. 1. c. del Patriarcha lat. nodi. Confus. timonit.

cration: Ever since then I say, the Church of Rome hath, and doth still create successively imaginary or titular Patriarkes (without iurisdiction) of Constantinople, Antiochia, Ierusalem, and Alexandria, so loth is the Pope to loose the remembrance of any Superioritie or Title: that hee hath once compassed.

Of the Georgians, Circassians, & Mengrellians Chap. 17.

* Volaterran. l. 11. c. de sect. Sy-rie Prateol. de sectis. heret. in Verbo. Georgia-ni. & alii.
Mela. l. 1. c. 2.
Plin. l. 6. c. 13.
* Paul. Venet.
l. 1. c. 14.
Chitre. de statu.
Ecclesiar. p. 23.
& 50. & Alii.

THe Georgians inhabite the Countrey, that was anciently named Iberia, betwixt the Euxine and the Caspian Sea: inclosed with Shernan (Media) East: with Mengrelia (Colchis) West: with Turcomania (Armenia the Greater) South: And with Albania (Zania) North. The vulgar opinion of Historians is, that they haue obtained the name of Georgians, from their deuotion to Saint George, whom they principally honour for their Patron: and whose Image they alwayes beare in their Military Ensignes. But yet (as I take it) this vulgar opinion is but vulgar error: because I find mention made of the Nation of the Georgians in those parts, both in Mela and Pliny, afore Saint George was borne whosoever he was. Touching the properties of whose Religion, this may be sufficient to obserue for all: That it is the same, both in substance and ceremonies with that of the Grecians, who yet are in no sort subiect (neither ever were) to the Patriarke of Constantinople: but all their Bishops (being eigheteene) professe absolute obedience to their owne Metropolitan, without any other higher dependance or relation. Who yet keepeth residence farre off, in the Monastery of Saint Katherine, in the Hill of Sinai. Prateo. de Heret. sect. verbo Georgiani. Bernard. Luxemburg. in Catalog. Heret. in Georgiani.

Next these, I must speake a little of their next neighbours, the Mengrellians and Circassians (Colchis and Zychi they were anciently called) seated betweene the Georgians, and the Riuer Tanais, along the Coast of Maotis and the Euxine Sea, as being also Christians of the Greeke communion, and beside of the Patriarke of Constantinople his obedience, and converted by his Ministers Cyrillus and Methodius to the Christian Religion. Which Religion notwithstanding at this present is exercised among them, not without some deprauation and mixture of strange fantasies, for the Circassians baptise not their children till the eight yeere, and enter not into the Church (the Gentlemen especially) till the sixtieth (or as others say, till the fortieth) yeere, but heare Diuine Seruice standing without the Temple, that is to say, till through age, they grow vnable to continue their Rapines and Robberies, to which sinne that Nation is exceedingly addicted. So diuiding their life betwixt Sinne and Deuotion, dedicating their youth to Rapine, and their oldage to Repentance.

Of the Muscovites & Russians Chap. 18.

Ioan. Metropol. Russ. in ep. ad Episcop. Rom. apud. Sigism. de Rebus Muscou. p. 31. Guaguin. descr. Muscou. c. 2. Sacran. de errorib. Ruthenor. c. 2. Sigism. l. citat. p. 41. Sacran. de Relig. Ruthenor. c. 2. Scarga. Polon. l. 3. c. 2. Scarga. Polon. l. 3. c. 2. Guaguin. descr. Moscou. c. 2. Ioan. Metropol. Russ. ubi supra p. 32. Guaguin. descr. Muscou. c. 2. Sigism. loc. citato. pag. 40. Sigism. loc. citato p. 40. Guaguin. loc. citato. 7. Guaguin. Ibid. 8. Ioan. Metropol. Russ. ubi supra. apud. Sigism. p. 31. Guaguin. loc. citato. Sacran. de errorib. Ruthenor. c. 2. 9. Sacran. loc. citato. 10. Sigism. lib. alleg. pag. 47. Possen. de Rebus Moscou. pag. 2. Guaguin. Descript. Moscou. cap. 2. 11. Sacran. de errorib. Ruthenor. c. 2. 12. Sigism. lib. citat. p. 28. Scarga. de vno pastor l. 3. c. 2. Possen. de Reb. Moscou. p. 1. Guaguin. loc. citat. 13. Possen. lib. allegato. p. 44. 14. Ioan. Metropol. Russ. ubi supra p. 31. Guaguin. loc. allegato. 15. Possen. in Moscouia. pag. 42. Sacran. de error. Ruthen. cap. 2. 16. Guaguin. loc. citat. 17. Sigism. lib. citato. pag. 33. Boter. Relat. par. 3. l. 1. c. de Moscouia.

THe Muscovites and Russians, as they were converted to Christianitie by the Grecians. Zonar. Annal. Tom. 3. Cromer. de reb. Polon. l. 3. so haue they euer since continued of the Greeke Communion and Religion.

1. Denying the Holy Ghost to proceed from the Sonne.
2. Reiecting Purgatory, but yet praying for the Dead.
3. Beleeuing that the holy men enioy not the presence of God afore the Resurrection.
4. Celebrating the Sacrament of the Eucharist, with leauened bread, and requiring warme water to mingle with the wine.
5. And communicating in both kindes;
6. But mingling both together in the Chalice, and distributing it together with a spoone.
7. And receiuing children after seven yeeres old to the Communion, saying, that at that age they begin to sin against God.
8. Omitting Confirmation by the Bishop.
9. Denying the speciall efficacie of extreame vnction.
10. Excluding the fourth marriage as vtterly vnlawfull; whereas they approue not the second, as perfectly lawfull, but onely permit it, but tolerate not the third, except on very important considerations.
11. Dissoluing marriage by diuorcement, vpon euery light occasion or displeasure.
12. Admitting neither Deacons nor Priests to Orders, except they be married: but yet prohibiting marriage to them being actually in Orders.
13. Reiecting carved or masse Images, but admitting the painted.
14. Reputing it vnlawfull to fast on Saturdaies.
15. Or, to eate of that which is strangled, or of bloud.
16. Obseruing foure Lents in the yeere.
17. Refusing to communicate with the Roman Church.

And (to conclude) excepting the difference in distributing of the Eucharist, and exacting of marriage to their Priests and Deacons, there is not any materiall difference in points of Religion, that I find betwixt them and the Grecians. With whom, they not onely maintaine Communi-

Ioan. Metropol. Russ. ubi supra. apud. Sigism. p. 31. Guaguin. loc. citato. Sacran. de errorib. Ruthenor. c. 2. 9. Sacran. loc. citato. 10. Sigism. lib. alleg. pag. 47. Possen. de Rebus Moscou. pag. 2. Guaguin. Descript. Moscou. cap. 2. 11. Sacran. de errorib. Ruthenor. c. 2. 12. Sigism. lib. citat. p. 28. Scarga. de vno pastor l. 3. c. 2. Possen. de Reb. Moscou. p. 1. Guaguin. loc. citat. 13. Possen. lib. allegato. p. 44. 14. Ioan. Metropol. Russ. ubi supra p. 31. Guaguin. loc. allegato. 15. Possen. in Moscouia. pag. 42. Sacran. de error. Ruthen. cap. 2. 16. Guaguin. loc. citat. 17. Sigism. lib. citato. pag. 33. Boter. Relat. par. 3. l. 1. c. de Moscouia.

on, but were also, and that not long since (and of right still ought to bee) of the same Iurisdiction and Government, for <sup>a</sup> their chiefe Metropolitan or Primate (who is the Archbishop of Mosco) was wont to be confirmed by the Patriarch of Constantinople, but is now, and hath beene about some sixtie yeeres, nominated and appointed by the Prince (the Emperour of Russia) and vpon that nomination, consecrated by two or three of his owne Suffragans: Of whom euen all sorts together, Bishops and Archbishops, there are but a eleuen, in al that large Dominion of the Emperour of Russia.

Thus is it with those sorts of Christians hitherto related touching their Religion, and Governours. All which (as you may easily perceiue) are of the same communion, and in effect of the same Religion with the Greeks: And beside these, some large parts of the King of Polonia his Dominion, for Podolia, and for the most part b Russia Nigra, or Rubra as some call it (the larger Russia subiect for the greatest part to the Duke of Mosconia, they tearme Russia alba) are of the Greeke Religion. And although the Bishops of South Russia, subiect namely to the King of Polonia, submitted themselues almost twentie yeeres agoe (An. 1594) to the Bishop of Rome, as Baron. Tom. 7. Annal. in fine. & Possuin. in Appar. sac. in Rutheni. haue recorded, yet was it not without speciall reseruatiō of the Greeke Religion and Rites, as is manifest by the Articles of condition extant. ap. Th. a les. de Conu. gent. l. 6. pag. 3. cap. 1. pag. 328. & seq. tendered by them to the Church of Rome, and accepted, before they would accept of the vnion. So that it was not any reuolting from the Greeke Religion, but onely (in effect) from the iurisdiction of the Greeke Patriarch, to the Pope, and that also with sundrie limitations, And in c Wilna (the Metropolis of Lutmania.) Although the Archbishop professe obedience to the Pope, yet are there also in that Citie, as Sigismund hath obserued, more Temples of the Greeke Religion (there bee thritie of them) then of the Roman. d Epist. ad Chitra. de Relig. Russor. So that if wee should collect and put together all the Christian regions hitherto intreated of: which are all of the Greeke communion: And compare them with the parts professing the Roman Religion, wee should finde the Greeke farre to exceede, if wee except the Roman new and forraigne purchases, made in the West and East Indies.

THe Nestorians, who haue purchased that name by their ancient imitation, and maintayning of Nestorius his heresie, inhabite (though euery where mingled with Mahumetans, or with Pagans) a great part of the Orient, for besides the Countreys of Babylon, and Affiria, and Mesopotamia, and Parthia, and Media, wherein very many of them are found, that Sect is spread and scattered farre and wide in the East, both Northerly to Casaya, and Southerly to India. So that in Marcus Paulus his historie of the East Regions, and in d others, wee finde mention of them, and of no sect of Christians but them, in very many parts and Prouinces of Tartarie: As namely in 1 Cassar, 2 Samarchan, 3 Carshan, 4 Chinghizales, 5 Tanguth, 6 Succhnir, 7 Ergimut, 8 Tenduch, 9 Caraiam, 10 Mangi, &c. In somuch, that beyond the Riuier Tigris Eastward, there is not any other Sect of Christians to be found, for ought I can reade, except onely the Portugals, and the conuerts made by them in India, and the late migration of the Armenians into Persia.

The reason of which large spreading and preuayling of that Sect so farre in the Orient, if you enquire I finde to that purpose, recorded by Paulus Diaconus of Cosroes the King of Persia, that hee for the mortall hatred hee bare the Emperour Heraclius, by whom hee had beene sore afflicted with a grieuous warre, inforced all the Christians of the Persian Empire to Nestorianisme permitting no Catholickes to remayne in all his Dominions. By whose preaching, the Christian Religion being farre there enlarged and propagated into the East (as it seemes both because those of the Persian Dominion, were more Eastwardly then other Christians, and because it is certaine that all of them till this day acknowledge obedience to the Nestorian Patriarch in Mesopotamia, which Countrey was then part of the Persian Dominion:) It is no wonder if sowing their owne Tares and Christs wheat together, they propagated with the Gospell also their owne heresie. Shortly after which time, the Sarracens of Arabia (Mahumetans) conquering Persia, and bringing their Religion, together with their victories into all that large Dominion, there remayned but little outward meanes and slender hope of their repayre and reformation from any sound part of the Church (from which they were more now then afore diuided) except what affliction and time, and the grace of God might worke and repayre in them.

Now touching their Ecclesiasticall government: The Patriarch of the Nestorians, to whom all those of the East parts, acknowledge obedience (a number of whose Suffragan Bishops and Metropolitans, you haue reckoned vp in Sauvages booke de Visibili Monarchia, and whom they call Iacelich, laith Paulus Venetus Brocardus, and others, but mistake it (or else they of the East pronounce it amisse) for Catholick, as is obserued by Leunclanius) hath his seat in the Citie of Muzal, on the Riuier Tigris in Mesopotamia, or in the Patriarchall Monasterie of Saint Ermes fast by Muzal. Th. a les. l. 7. pag. 3. c. 4. In which Citie, though subiect to Mahumetans, it is recorded, that the Nestorians retayne yet, fiftene temples, being esteemed about fortie thousand Soules. Th. a les. l. 7. par. 1. c. 4. and the Iacobites three. Which Citie of Muzal, I either take with Masius and Ortelius, to bee the same, that anciently was called Selusia (and in Plinio Se- x Possuin. Rer. Moscon. Com. 1. pag. 1. Guaguin. de script. Moscou. cap. 2. a Possuin. loco proxime citato Sigism. in Mosco pag. 28.

b Boter. Rel. pag. 1. l. 1. c. Russia. Guaguin. de script. Moscou. cap. 2.

c Sigism. de Reb. Moscou. pag. 27. Guaguin. loco iam citato.

Of the Nestorians. Chap. 19.

d Guil. de Rubra. Itin. Tartar. c. Paul. Venet. l. 1. c. 38. l. 2. c. 40. cap. 39. 3. cap. 40. 4. c. 47. 5. c. 45. & 49. 6. c. 48. 7. c. 62. 8. c. 64. l. 2. c. 39. l. 1. c. 61. & 64. & c. Paul. Diacon. Hist. Miscel. lib. 18.

Sand. de Vis. Monarch. l. 7. An. 1556. Paul. Venet. l. 1. c. 15. Brocard. Des. Terr. Jan. Leunclau. Pand. Histor. Turc. § 3. c. Aubrey. Mir. Notitia Episco. Orb. pag. 5. Mas. in Ortel. in Theat. in Seleucia. Plin. l. 5. c. 25. Strab. l. 16. long. leutia An. l. Med.

* Gail. Tyrinus de bell. sac. l. 2. c. 8.
a Concil. Nicen.
Arab. l. 3. c. 33.
c. 34.
Vitriac. hist. Orient. c. 31. Tit. de bell. sac. l. 2. c. 8.
Scal. ad Chron.
Euseb. A. M. D.
CCX II.
Ben in Itinerar.
in Medio.
See more exact relations of
Bag. l. 9. c. 9. & c.
My Pilgrimage
l. 3. c. 2. §. 3.
Strabul. 16.
Plin. l. 6. c. 26.
Ptol. Geog. l. 6. c.
18. & 20. Dion.
hist. l. 40. Plin. l.
6. c. 26.

a Boter. relat.
par. 3. l. 1. c. de Nestoriani. Tho.
à les. de conuers.
gent l. 7. par. 1. c.
3. & 4.

1 Vitriac. hist.
Orient. c. 8.
2 Id. loco ci at.
b Bot. relat. par.
3. l. 2. c. de Nest.
Thom. à les. de conuers. gent l. 7. par. 2.
3 Bot. loco proximo citato.
4 Vitriac. hist.
Orient. 78. Val-lamont en Voyages l. 2. c. 23.
5 Vilk. loc. citat.
6 Et. 7. Sula.
Nest. profess. com.
4. Biblioth. Vet.
Patrum. p. 1054.
8 Guliel. de Rubric. Itiner. Tartar. c. 17.
Of the Indians or Christians of Saint Thomas.
Chap. 20.
c Sommar. d. popoli Orient. ap.
Ramus. Vol. 1. de Viaggi. p. 332.
d Barbosa cod.
Vol. p. 312.
e Bot. rel. p. 3. l. 2.
c. della noua
Christianita d'
India.
f Bot. rel. p. 3. l. 2.
c. della vecchia
Christ. d' India
Th. à les. de con-
uers. gent. l. 7. pa.
3. & 4.

lentia Parthorum) both because Seleucia was, as Strabo saith, the Metropolis of Assyria, euen as Musal is recorded to bee: And also, because I finde the Ecclesiasticall iurisdiction of those parts committed by the fathers * of the Nicene Councell, to the Bishop of Seleucia, assigning him with all, the name of Catholicke, and the next place of Session in Councels after the Bishop of Ierusalem, which name and authoritie in those parts, the Bishop of Musal now hath. Or if Seleucia were some other Citie, now destroyed, as for certaine reasons I am induced rather to thinke, yet at least, the Patriarchall Seate was from Seleucia translated to Musal, for the opinion of Scaliger, namely, that Seleucia was the same, that is now called Bagded, or new Babylon, my obseruations in Geographie and Historie, will not suffer mee to approoue. First, because Seleucia is remembred by Strabo to be three hundred furlongs (seuen and thirtie miles and one or two) Plinie saith, a great deale more, distant from Babylon, whereas Bagded is built close by the ruines of it. Secondly, because I find the position of Seleucia in Ptolemie to be two third parts of a degree, more North then that of Babylon, whereas Bagded is more South. Thirdly, because in Dion, and others, Seleucia is named for a Citie of Mesopotamia, which Bagded is not, but in the Province of Babylon, as being beneath the confluence of Tigris and Euphrates.

The Bishop of Musal then, is Patriarch of the Nestorians. But yet at this present, if the Relations of these times be true, there is a distraction of that Sect: which began about sixtie yeeres agoe, in the time of Pope Innocent the Third: the Nestorians in the North, part of Mesopotamia (about the Citie of Caramit) submitting themselves to another Patriarch of the Pope erecting (that revolting from the Bishop of Musal, taking also on him, the title of the Patriarch of Musal, which the Pope bestowed on him) hauing first rendred and professed obedience to the See of Rome, in which obedience it is said, that those Nestorians about Caramit doe still continue.

Now touching the specialties of these Nestorian Religion, in relation to the Roman: they beleue,

First, that there are two persons in our Saviour, as well as two natures, but yet confesse, that Christ from the first instant of his Conception, was perfect God and perfect man Th. à les. Ibid.

Secondly, that the blessed Virgin ought not to be termed Virgin, which yet now in some sort they qualifye, confessing her to be the Mother of God the Son, but yet refusing to term her the Mother of God.

Thirdly, that Nestorian condemned in the third and fourth generall Councels, and Dionysius Tarsensis, and Theodorus Mopsuestensis, condemned for Nestorianisme in the fifth, were holy men: Rectifying for their sake, the third generall Councell held at Ephesus, and all other Councels after it, and specially detesting (the malt of Nestorianisme) Cyrill of Alexandria, Th. à les. Ibid.

Fourthly, they celebrate the Sacrament of the Eucharist, with leaued bread.

Fifthly, they communicate in both kinds.

Sixtly, they vse not auricular confession.

Seuenthly, nor confirmation.

Eighthly, they contract Marriage in the second degree of consanguinitie. Th. à les. Ibid.

Ninthly, their Priests after the death of their first wiues, haue the libertie of the second or third or of other Marriage. Th. à les. Ibid.

Tenthly, they haue not the Image of the Crucifixe on their Crosses.

The Christians of India, vulgarly named the Christians of Saint Thomas, because by his preaching they are supposed to haue bene conuerted to Christian Religion (and his bodie as is thought, remayneth among them, buried in the Citie of Maliapar on the Coast of Choremandel) inhabit in the neerer part of India: namely, in that great Promontory, whose base lying betweene the Out-lets of the Rivers Indus and Ganges, stretcheth out the sides farre toward the South (well nigh 1000. miles) till meeting in the point of Comori, they make, together with the base line forementioned (betwixt Cambaya and Bengala) the figure almost of an Equilaterall Triangle. In the more Southerly part of this great Promontory, I say neerer to Cape Comori, about the Cities of Coulam and Cranganor on the West side, and about Maliapar and Negapatan, on the East side, doe these Christians of Saint Thomas dwell, being esteemed afore the Portugals frequented those parts, about 15000. or 16000. Families, or after another's account 70000. persons: but on the West Coast, the farre greater number of them is found, and especially their habitation is thickest, about Angamale, 15. miles from the Citie Cochin Northward, where their Archbishop keepeth residence.

Now

Now as touching their government: Their Archbishop till twentie yeeres since or little more, acknowledged obedience to the Patriarch of Mozal,* by the name of the Patriarch of Babylon, as by those Christians of India he is still termed: & certainly that the Patriarch of Mozal, & challengeth their obedience, as being of his Jurisdiction, appeareth by the profession of Abul-Isa, a Patriarch of Mozal, of Pope Pius the Fourth his Inuesting (Anno 1561.) as is to be seene in Sanders Booke de visibili Monarchia. But then, the Archbishop of these Indians, reuolting from his former Patriarch, submitted himselfe by the Portugals perswasion, to the Bishop of Rome, retayning notwithstanding, the ancient Religion of his Countrey, which was also permitted by the Pope. In so much, that in a Synod held in Goa, for that purpose, hee would not suffer any alteration to be made of their ancient Rites or Religion, as one

* For Mozal as I said before, is either Seleucia, or succeeded into the dignitie of it. And Seleucia is recorded to haue bin inhabited by the Citizens of Babylon, whereof it was a Colony: And such a Colony, as in short time it * exhausted Babylon it selfe, of all the Inhabitants, passing, by reason of the more commodious situation, to dwell at Seleucia. So that Seleucia being inhabited by the Babylonians, and so becoming in stead of Babylon, the principall Citie of the Prouinces of Babylonia, and Assyria, the Citie * obtayned the name of Babylon of her Inhabitants (as well as Seleucia, of her Founder) as Plinie hath recorded: And the Patriarch of it, the title of the Patriarch of Babylon. And although * Barbosa note, that subordination of the Christians of India, to be to the Patriarah of Armenia (which no doubt he receiued from the Indians relation, among whom he was) yet certaine it is, that he meaneth no other, then this Patriarch of Mozal: because those Armenians which he meaneth, are by himselfe obserued to haue for their vulgar Language the Arabik tongue, and to celebrate their diuine Seruice in the Chaldee, both which agree with Christians of Mozal, but neither of both with those of Armenia, whose Language both in the vulgar and sacred vse is knowne to be no other then the Armenian Tongue. As also, because the Indians are knowne to haue beene Nestorians, to which Heresie the Armenians were most opposite, as being in a manner Iacobites. But as it seemeth, that Patriarch is said to haue bene of Armenia, for the neerthesse of Mozal to the Confines of Armenia.

that liued in those parts at that time hath recorded. But that Bishop being dead, his successour in another Synod, held by the Archbishop of Goa, at Diampier, not farre from Malapour, Anno 1599. made profession, together with his Suffragans, and Priests, both of the Roman obedience and Religion, renouncing in such direct sort, the Patriarch of Mozal, and Nestorianisme, that they deliuered vp all their Bookes, to the censure of the Archbishop of Goa, and suffered their Lyturgie, in the points that relished of Nestorianisme to be altered, euen in such sort as now it is to be seene in the last Edition of Bibliotheca veterum Patrum.

But before this alteration of their Religion was procured by the Portugals, those Christians of India were Nestorians, as hauing the dependance that I related, on the Patriarch of the Nestorians, they could not well be any other. Some specialties of whose Religion I find thus recorded.

1. That they distributed the Sacrament of the Eucharist in both kinds.
2. That they celebrated it with bread seasoned with Salt, (pane salato, saith my Historian) and in stead of Wine (because India affordeth none) in the iuyce of Raisons, softened one night in water and so pressed forth.
3. That they baptized not their Infants till they were fortie dayes olde, except in danger of death.
4. That they vsed not Extreame vnction.
5. That their Priests were married, but excluded from the second Matrimony. Oser. de Reb. Emmanuel. l. 3.
6. That they had no Images of Saints in their Churches, but onely the Crosse.
7. That detesting (the Mall of Nestorianisme) Cyrill of Alexandria, they honoured Nestorius and Dioscorus as Saints, which yet mee thinkes were strange; beeing of so contrary opinions, as they were, the first, for two persons in Christ, as well as two natures: the second, for one nature, as well as one Person; but it may be that Dioscorus is by the Relater mistaken for Diodorus, who was indeed a great Nestorian, and for it condemned in the fift generall Councell.
8. That they denied the Primacie of the Pope.
9. That their New Testament which in their Churches they formerly read (and still doe) in the Syriack tongue, was by the Nestorians in sundry places, which are now altered by the Romanes, corrupted to the aduantage of that Heresie, wherein yet, I thinke the Reporter is deceiued: because the same corruptions objected to them (whereof some are no corruptions at all, but agree rightly with the originall Text, much better then doth the vulgar Latine, by comparing whereof he examines them, and censures them for corruptions) the same I say, are found in the Syriack Edition that we haue, being so farre from being corrupted by the Nestorians that it was brought out of Mesopotamia into Europe (to be printed by Moses Mardonius, from the Patriarch of the contrary Sect, namely, of the Iacobites. But yet notwithstanding, I am indeed certainly perswaded that the Syriack Translation of the New Testament (whose euer was the Author of it) is nothing neer of that Antiquitie, which the Syrians (as Belharmino and others report of them) pretend it to n The Imperfections of the Syriack Edition, consist partly in sundry defects: namely, 1. of all the Reuelation: 2. of the Epistle of Saint Iude: 3. of the second Epistle of Saint Peter: 4. of the second and third Epistles of Saint Iohn: 5. of the History of the Woman taken in adultery, in the eight Chapter of Saint Iohns Gospel, contrayning the first cleuen Verses: and 6. of the 7. Verse of the 5. Chapter

g Plin. l. 6 c. 16.
* Tb. 2. l. 1. de conu. gent. l. 7. par. 1. c. 4.

h Sand. visib. Monarch. l. 7. p. 642.
* Plin. loco proximo citato.
* Apud Ramus. vol. 1. de Viaggi. p. 313.

i Possuin. in Appar. sacro in Diaperiense Concilio.

Biblioth. vet. Patrum Auct. Tom. 2. in fine.
1 Oserius de rel. Emmanuel. l. 3. Bot. rel. p. 3. l. 2 c. della Vecchia Ch. istiana d' India.

2 Oleard. Barbof. p. Ramus. Vol. 1. p. 313.
3 Nauigat. l. 1. c. pbi Indi, inter relationes noui orbis. c. 134.

4 Ioseph. Ind. li. citato c. 134.
5 Oser. loco ante citato. Possuin. Appar. sacro in Diaperiense Concil. Tb. c. 15. l. 10. c. 15.

6 Ios. Ind. ubi supra c. 133.
7 Possuin. loco citato.

8 Possuin. loco citato.
9 Possuin. in Appar. sacro in Nestoriani. Widmanstad. in pref. Test. Syriac.

Belhar. de verbis Dei. l. 2. c. 4.

be, namely to have beene the work of Saint Marke. First, because Saint Marke dyed in the eighth yeere of Nero, as Hierome with others hath certainly recorded, after which time many parts of the New Testament, were written: as namely Saint Iohns Gospel, the Acts of the Apostles (for all the History from the 24. Chapter to the end, relateth occurrents after Saint Markes death) the Epistles of Saint Paul to the Galatians, Ephesians, Philippians, Colossians, to Philemon, and the second to Timothy. Secondly, because that Syriake Translation is not to be found once mentioned, in any of all those ancient and learned Writers, that liued in those East parts, and diligently sought out and obserued the seuerall Editions and Translations of the holy Scripture. And thirdly, because the Dialect discovereth it to be of a farre later Age, then that of the Apostles: which they will soone find to bee so (to omit some other Euidences) that shall compare the Syriake words recorded in the New Testament by the Euangelists (which allare noted by Hierome and by others) with the Syriake Booke: as for example, μαμμωνα, Mat. 6.25. Mamounno. γαλλαβη Ioan. 19.13. Gephiphio. γολγοθα, Mat. 27.33. Gogoltho. Αχελσαμα, Act. 1.19. Chakaldemo, ωραδα, 1.Cor. 16.22. Moraneto. And to be short, there is not almost any Syriake word recorded in the New Testament, which varieth not from that ancient pronouncing that was vsual in the Apostles time, either in consonants, or vowels, or both: which could not be the alteration of any short course of time.

Hieron. de Scrip. Ecclesiast. in Marc. Erasmus. Beza. Xunius. in Annot. ad loc. predict.

Hieron. l. de nominib. Hebr.

Of the Iacobites Chap. 21.

Damas. l. de heresib. post med. Niceph. hist. Ecclesiast. l. 18. c. 52. a Chitra de stat. Ecclesiast. p. 25. b Namely 15. Crust. in Turcog. l. 4. p. 297. c Bot. relat. p. 3. l. 2. c. de Iacobis. d Breitenbach. peregrin. c. de Iacobitis. Vitriac. hist. Orient. c. 76. e Paul Diacon. hist. Miscel. l. 18. Zonar. Annal. To. 3. in Heraclio f M. r. in notitia. Episcop. orb. p. 35. Bot. relat. p. 3. l. 2. c. de Iacobis. g Sabellio. Supplem. hist. l. 18. h Conc. Chalcedon. l. 1. c. i. Notitia provinciar. k Conc. Constantin. l. 1. prim. Con. 2. l. 1. Mira. notit. Episcop. orb. p. 36.

m Conc. Chalced. Actum 7.

1. 2. 3. 14. Iacob. a Vitriaco. Hist. Orient. c. 76. f. l. 2. c. 22. 2 Bucebing. hist. Ecclesiast. part. 2. p. 331. Saligniac. l. 1. r. To. 8. c. 1. To. a les l. 7. p. 1. c. 14. 4 Bucebing. loco citato.

THe Iacobites obtained that appellation, as Damasene and Nicephorus haue recorded, of one Iacobus surnamed Zanzalus, of Syria, who liuing about Anno 530. was in his time a mightie inlarger of Eutiches Sect, and maintayner of his opinion, touching the vnitie of nature in our Saviour: And his followers are at this day in great numbers, knowne by the name of Iacobites, in Syria, in Cyprus, in Mesopotamia, in Babylon, and in Palestine. For, the Patriarch of Ierusalem who keepeth his residence itill in Ierusalem, (in which City, there yet remaine a ten, or more, Churches of Christians) is also a Iacobite. But although in all these forementioned Regions, these Iacobites are found (where they be esteemed to make about 160000. Families) or rather 50000, as Leonard the Bishop of Sidon, the Popes Visiter in those parts hath recorded. ap. Th. a les l. 7. p. 1. cap. 14. yet chiefly they inhabit in Aleppo of Syria, and in Caramit, and the Mountaine Tur of Mesopotamia: But yet their Religion vnder other Titles, is extended much farther, in so much that it is recorded to bee spread abroad in some 40 forty Kingdomes.

All which Iacobites of the places before specified, haue, and long haue had, a Patriarch of their owne Religion (for I find the Patriarch of the Iacobites spoken of in the Emperour Heraclius his time) to whom they render obedience. The Patriarchall Church of which Sect, is in the Monasterie of Saphran, neere to the Citie of Mardin in the North part of Mesopotamia: But the Patriarch himselfe, keepeth ordinary residence in the Citie of Caramit, the ancient Metropolis of Mesopotamia, and which at this day, consisteth for the greatest part of Christians, for that Caramit is the same Citie, which the ancient Writers called Amida, Sabellius, and others haue left obserued, and Amida to haue beene anciently the Metropolis of Mesopotamia, I find in the subscriptions of the ancient Councils plainly recorded.

But till Eutichianisme so mightily preuailed in those parts, as to worke in them a detestation of the Councell of Chalcedon, and a departure withall, from their ancient obedience: They belonged till then I say to the Iurisdiction of the Patriarch of Antiochia, as beeing 1 Provinces of the Diocesse of the Orient, which we find in the 2 second generall Councell, to be the circuit and limitation of that Patriarchs authoritie, which is the reason that the Patriarch of the Iacobites, keeping euer the name of Ignatius, intitlesh himselfe Patriarch of Antiochia: And that the 1 Patriarch of Ierusalem, who is also as I said a Iacobite acknowledgeth him (as some record) for superiour: Having therein (if it be so) but in some sort returned to the ancient obedience, wherein the Bishops of Ierusalem stood to the Patriarchs of Antiochia, euen till the time of the Councell of Chalcedon: for then began Ierusalem, to be erected into a Patriarchship: And (as we reade in the 2 actions of that Councell) with the consent and allowance of the Patriarch of Antiochia, the three Provinces of Palestina, which till then (Anno 451.) belonged to Antiochia, were withdrawne from it, and assigned to the Bishop of Ierusalem for his Patriarchall Iurisdiction.

Now as touching the Characters of their Religion.

1. They acknowledge but one nature, and but one will and one operation, ex catechismo. Iacobitar. ap. Th. a les l. 7. p. 1. c. 15. in Christ (as there is but one person) and in token of that, they make the signe of the Crosse, with one finger onely, which the other Christians of the East doe with two.
2. They signe their Children before Baptisme, many in the Face, some in the Arme, with the signe of the Crosse, imprinted with a burning Iron.
3. They vse Circumcision. Saligniac. l. 1. r. Tom. 8. c. 1. euen of both Sexes. Vitriac. ut ibi.
4. They confesse their sinnes to God onely, not to the Priest, and as others record, but very seldom, so that many communicate without Auricular Confession. Leonard Sidon. ap. à Iesl.

7. p. 1. c. 14. They admit not of Purgatorie, nor of Prayers for the dead. Th. à Iesl. 7. p. 1. c. 23.

6. They consecrate the Eucharist in unleavened Bread. Salign. Itin. Hieros. Tom. 8. c. 1.

They minister the Sacrament of the Eucharist in both kinds.

7. The Priests are married.

8. They beleene all the soules of iust men to remayne in the Earth till the Day of Iudgement, expecting Christs second coming, ex Catechism. Iacobit.

9. They affirme the Angels to consist of two substances, fire and light. ex Catechism. Iacobit.

10. They honour Dioscorus and Iacobus Syrus as Santas; but yet condemne Eutiches as an Heresiarche. Patriarch. Iacobit. ap. Th. à Iesl. 7. p. 1. c. 14.

These are the Properties (that I find registred) of the Jacobites Religion, namely of them, that are properly so called, and still retayne the ancient opinion of Iacobus Syrus. But it seemeth, that their principall error, and which occasioned their first Schisme and Separation from the Church, Namely, the Heresie of Eutiches touching one nature in Christ, is for the most part, long since abolished: for as Vitriac hath long agoe recorded, they denied to him (then the Popes Legate in those parts, and demanding the question) that they beleued one onely nature in Christ: And being further asked, why then making the Crosse, they signed themselves onely with one finger, their answer was, that they did it in acknowledgement of one diuine Nature, as also they did it in three severall places, in acknowledgement of three persons in that one nature. And besides of late time, Leonard another Legate of Pope Gregories the Thirteenth in those parts, hath recorded of the Patriarchis profession made to himselfe, that although they held indeed but one personated nature to be in in Christ, resulting of the vnion of two natures not personated, yet they acknowledged those two natures to be vnited in his person, without any mixtion or confusion, and that they themselves differed not in vnderstanding, but onely in termes from the Latine Church. Th. à Iesl. 7. p. 1. c. 14. And although (as it is storied by some Writers of these times) some there be among them that still retaine that error, yet certainly, that it is no generall and received opinion among them, is most manifest, for we haue extant the confessions of the Jacobites of Mesopotamia, and of those of Egypt, and of Ethiopia, and of Armenia, that is to say, all sorts of Jacobites, out of which it is euident, that that error of Eutiches, is clearly renounced, as articulary acknowledging that the humane nature of Christ was taken of the Virgin, and of the same substance with ours, and remayned, after the adunation with the Deitie without any mutation of properties) distinct from the diuine nature: All which the Heresie of Eutiches denied.

THE SECT of Christians named Cophti, are no other, the Christians of Egypt: And, it is the name of their Nation, rather, then of their Religion (in respect whereof they are meerely Jacobites) for as Masius hath obserued, the Egyptians in some ancient Monuments are termed Egophti, whom vulgarly we name Cophti, or Copti, and so they also name themselves, as may be seene, in the Confessions of these Egyptians recorded in Baronius. And certainly, that the Egyptians themselves, name their Countrey Chibth, Ortelius after Theuet hath recorded: As also it is obserued by Scaliger, that in the Talmud it is called כנח. And, by Drusius, out of R. David, and R. Shelomo, that Egypt is by them named כנח, but not without some traiection of letters כנח for כנח R. David in praf. l. Radic. R. Shelom. in Exod. 13.

But touching their Religion (to omit curiosity about the name (they differ not, as I said from the Jacobites. Inasmuch that (as Damasen hath obserued) the same Sectaries, that first were termed Egyptij, becaule among the Egyptians, that Heresie of one onely nature in Christ, found the mightiest patronage, were after of Iacobus Syrus aboue mentioned, named in Syria, Jacobites. And till this day Seuerus, Dioscorus and Iacobus, the principall parents and patrons of that Sect, are by the Egyptians honoured in the memorials of their Lyturgies. Th. à Iesl. lib. 7. pag. 1. cap. 5.

1. Vsing Circumcision: Yet I am not very certaine whether for Religion, or (which I obserued it before to haue beene) as an ancient custome of that Nation, which custome yet is reported Th. à Iesl. 7. p. 1. c. 6. Boter. p. 3. l. 3. de Christ. de Egitto, to be now abrogated among them, by the perswasion of the Bishops of Romes Legates in a Synod held at Caire about thirtie yeeres agoe, Anno 1583.

2. They conferre the inferiour sacred orders (vnder Priesthood) euen to Infants presently after Baptisme, altogether, their Parents promising for them and performing in their steads (till they be sixteene yeeres old or thereabout) what they promise in their bel alfes, namely chastitie, and fasting enery Wednesday and Friday, and in the foure Lents of the yeere. Th. à Iesl. 7. p. 1. c. 5. They repute not Baptisme of any efficacie, except ministred by the Priest and in the Church in what necessitie soeuer. Th. à Iesl. 7. p. 1. c. 5.

3. Neither baptize their children afore the fortieth day, though they should die without Baptisme. Th. à Iesl. Ibid.

Alphonf. à Castro. l. 4. cont. Heres. Tit. Confessio Baumgar. Itiner. l. 2. c. 9.

Vitriac. hist. Orient. c. 76.

n Tom. 4. Bib. lioth. vet. Pa. trum p. 1050. o Apud Baron. in fine Tomi 6. Annal. p. Zag. Zabo. de Relig. & Morib. Ethiop. apud Damian. & Goes. q Confess. Armenior. Num. 26. 28. 29 &c. i Vid. Concil. Chalced. Actio. 1. & Theod. de baref. l. 4. in Eutiche.

Of the Cophti, or Chistians of Egypt. Chap. 22. Mas. in Syror. Peculio. Baron. in Legat. Eccles. Alex. ad sed Apostol. Tom. 6. Annal. in fine. Ortel. in Thesau. ro in Egyptus. Scal. ad Euseb. Chron. ad An. MDCCXXXIV. Drus. de Trib. sect. Iudeor. l. 2. c. 14. tit. de Philactery. Damas. l. de bx. sib. post med. 1 Bot. rel. p. 3. l. 3. c. de Christia. del Egitto.

2 Theurt in Cosm. de Leuant.
6.43.

4. Ministring the Sacrament of the Eucharist in both kinds.
5. They minister the Sacrament of the Eucharist in leavened bread. Th. à Ies. ibid.
6. Give the Sacrament of the Eucharist to Infants presently after their Baptisme. Id. Ibid.
7. To sicke persons they neither minister Extreame Vnction, nor the Eucharist. Id. Ibid.
8. Although they acknowledge the Holy Ghost to proceed from the Father and the Sonne; yet in relating of the Nicene Creed, they leaue out those words (and from the Sonne) as the Grecians doe. Id. Ibid.
9. They admit not of Purgatorie, nor of Prayer for the dead. Th. à Ies. l. 7. p. 1. 23.
10. They contract Marriages euen in the second degree of consanguinitie without any dispensation. Tecla. Abissin. ap. Th. à Ies. l. 7. p. 1. c. 13.
11. They obserue not the Lords dayes, nor other Feasts, except in the Cities. Tecla. Abissin. Ibid.
12. In celebrating of the Eucharist, they eleuate not the Sacrament. Tecla. Abissin. Ibid.
13. Reiect all the generall Councils after that of Ephesus, expressly condemning the Councell of Chalcedon. Id. Ibid.
14. Reade the Gospel of Nicodemus in their Lyturgies. Prateol. de Heresib. in Cophti.
15. Repute the Roman Church hereticall, and auoid the communion and conuersation of the Latines, no lesse then of Iewes. And although Baron. in fin. Tom. 6. Annal. haue registred an Ambassage from Marcus the Patriarch of Alexandria to Pope Clement the Eighth, wherein hee is said to haue submitted and reconciled himselfe and the Prouinces of Egypt to the Pope, yet the matter being after examined was found to bee but a trick of Imposture, as Th. à Ies. l. 7. p. 1. c. 6. hath recorded.

*Thom. à Ies. de
conu. gent. l. 7.
par. 1. c. 5.
3 Thom. à Ies.
loco citato.
Bot. loc. cit.*

1 Conc. Chalced.
Actio 3.

*Euag. l. 3. c. 5. 6.
22. 30. 33. & c.
Leont. de Sect.
Actio. 5.
Niceph. l. 16. c. 2.
4. & 5. & l. 18.
& sequent.
in Synod. 97.
101. 103. 108.
c. 45. 109. & c.
in Ad fin. Concil.
Chal. Tom. 2.
Concil. Biny.*

*Bot. relat. par. 3.
l. 3. c. de Christiani de Egitto.*

*o Chitre de sta.
Ecclesiar. p. 11.
at Alex.
ap. Baron. Tom. 6 in fine.*

16. Maintayning the opinion of one nature in Christ: yet in such sort, that although in the generall position touching one nature in our Saviour, they follow Eutyches, yet in the speciall declaration, at this day they differ very much from him. For they acknowledge him to bee truly, and perfectly both God and man: And, that the Diuine and humane natures, are become in him one Nature, not by any confusion or commixtion of them, as Eutyches taught: but onely by coadundation. Wherein although they Catholically confesse, that there is no mutation of properties in either nature, being vnited in Christ, from what the diuine and humane natures seuerally obtaine in seuerall Persons: Yet beeing not well able (as it seemes) to distinguish betweene the nature and the Person, they dare not say there be in Christ two Natures, for feare they should slip into Nestorins Heresie of two Persons. Which Heresie of one onely Nature in our Saviour, beginning with Eutyches, although after dispersing it selfe into many branches, hath euer since the time of the Councell of Chalcedon, by which Eutychianisme was condemned and for it, the Patriarch of Alexandria 1 Dioscorus deposed, beene nourished and maintayned, as by other Christians of the East, so specially by the Egyptians. In somuch, that not onely sundry Patriarchs of Alexandria, and Antiochia (but specially of Alexandria) together with many other Bishops of the East parts, their Suffragans, and adherents, are recorded to haue maintayned and aduanced, that Heresie of Eutyches, but we find moreover, many Synods of those parts, registred or remembred in Euagrius, Leontius, Nicephorus, and the Booke called Συδδον, brought to light by Pappus, &c. wherein (in the behalfe of that Heresie) the Decrees of the Councell of Chalcedon were condemned. In which Councell, although we reade of the greatest Confluence of Bishops, that euer met about the Establishment of any point in Christian Religion (& yet beside the six hundred and thirty Bishops present in that Councell, there are extant in the Booke of Councils, the Suffrages of about thirtie Prouinciall Synods, that by their Epistles to the Emperour Leo, confirmed it, together with all the Bishops of the West, by whom it was likewise receiued) yet notwithstanding all this, that Heresie so preuailed in the East parts, and specially in Egypt, whereof we now entreate, that from that time to this it was neuer cleered of it. But as there was neuer Heresie that so grievously wounded the Church of God, as that of Eutyches (except perhaps Arrianisme) so was no part of the Church so deeply and deadly wounded by it, as that of Egypt. So that, euen at this day, although the wound be in some sort healed, yet the wemme or skarre still remayneth. For it is not many yeeres, since by certaine Iesuites, Agents for the Bishop of Rome, some conferences were had with the Patriarch of Alexandria and his Synod, wherein, although they confessed (if true relation be made of that conference) that Christ is true God and true Man: yet did they purposely refraine from mentioning two natures in Christ, lest they should by little and little slip into the Heresie of two persons.

Now as touching their Ecclesiasticall gouernment they are subiect to the Patriarch of Alexandria, whose Patriarchall Seat is at this present translated (and so long hath beene) to the Citie of Caire, in either of which Cities, (Caire and Alexandria) there remaine at this day, but three Christian Temples a piece. Whereas Burchardus recordeth of his time (about three hundred and twentie yeeres agoe) that in one of them (Caire) there were aboue fortie, Burch. descr. ter. sanct. par. 2. c. 3. But yet, to the Iurisdiction of this Patriarch belong, not onely the native Christians of Egypt, who are but very few, considering the exceeding populousnesse of that Nation (for they are esteemed as I said before, not to passe fiftie thousand) which in Burchardus his time, are by him recorded to have beene about 300000. Id. p. 2. c. 3. together with the small remainder of Christians, that are found about the Bay of Arabia, and in Mount Sinai Eastward, or in Afrika as farre as the greater Syria Westward: but the Christians likewise of Ethiopia acknowledge obedience to him. For although Alvarez in his Storie of Ethiopia have related (as he doth also some other matters touching the ancient condition of the Church, too grossely and boldly) that the Christians of Nubia till their defection from Christianitie, were of the Popes dependance and Iurisdiction, and received their Bishops by his consecration (and say nothing of the Patriarch of Alexandria) yet certainly, that they were not so, is manifest, for besides that Saligniacus (himselfe the Popes Protonotary, and whose travell had taught him some knowledge of the East parts, directly denieth the Nubians professing of obedience to the Bishop of Rome, observing, that they were governed by a Prelate of their owne, whome they termed the Priest of the Law. Itiner. Tom. 8. c. 2. Beside that direct testimony of his I say, there be other Evidences. First, because there cannot be produced any Instance, out of any Ecclesiasticall Historie, either ancient or moderne (as I am certainly perswaded) to that effect. Secondly, because the Fathers of the Nicene Councell, as we find in Celsus Ciceronius, are knowne to have assigned Ethiopia, whereof Nubia is a part, to the Patriarch of Alexandria his Iurisdiction. Thirdly, because the Patriarchship of Alexandria, lyeth directly betwene Nubia and Rome, as being immediately at the backe of Egypt. Fourthly, because the Nubians were in Religion Iacobites, as a Roman Cardinall Viriacus Bocardus, and others have recorded, and as their baptizing with fire remembred by Burchardus and Saligniacus did manifestly import Burch. descr. terr. sanct. p. 2. c. 2. §. 9.

7. Saligniac. Itin. Tom. 8. c. 2. of which Sect the Patriarch of Alexandria is knowne to be: which had the Pope the assignement or confirmation of their Prelates, it is utterly unlike they should have bin. Fifthly, because in time of their necessity, being left destitute of Bishops and Ministers, if they had pertained to the Bishop of Rome his Iurisdiction, they would rather have had recourse to him, for repaire of the decayed and ruinous state of their Church who both plentifully could, and no doubt readily would have releued them; rather, then suffered them to depart as they have done, from the Christian Faith: To him I say, they would rather have resorted for supply, then to the King of Habassia (as they did) being of another Patriarchall Iurisdiction. Certaine therefore it seemeth, that Nubia while it was Christian, belonged not to Rome but to Alexandria: By whom, if the Nubians in their distresses were not releued, no man can wonder, that knoweth the great want and misery of the Church of Egypt.

Alvarez histor. Ethiop. c. 137.

n Nicen. Concil. l. 3. c. 36.

Viriac. hist. Orb. ant. c. 26. Brocardi descript. Terra. sanct.

o Alvarez. loca prox. citato.

Now touching the Habassines, or mid-land *Ethiopian*s, whether they have obtained that name, by reason of their habitations (in houses) which the Egyptians called Anafes, as Strabo hath observed (for the ancient Bookes have and us not ardon) in difference from them, which dwelling neerer the Bay of Arabia, were called Troglodite (τρογολιται) because they dwelled in Caves, not in Houses, as Plinie and others have recorded: whether I say, for that reason they have obtained the name of Abassins, or no, let more curious men inquire. But as touching their Religion, they are in manner mere Iacobites: And their King (whom by error we call Prestor John) is sundry times in Histories termed the Prince of the Iacobites. And their leaving out of their memorialls (in their Liturgy) the Councell of Chalcedon, by which the heresie maintained after by Iacobus Syrus was condemned, whereas the Councells of Nice; of Constantinople, and of Ephesus are remembred, doth import so much. And in very deed considering the dependance, that the Church of Habassia hath of the Patriarke of Alexandria; it is almost impossible but they should be so; for as Zaga, Zabo, an Habassine Bishop hath left recorded, although they have a Patriarke of their owne, whom they call in their owne language Abuna, (our Father) and hee chosen by the Habassine Monkes of Saint *Antonie*s Order remaining in Ierusalem, yet are they limited to chuse one of the Iurisdiction of Alexandria, and a Monke of Saint Antonie he must be. And beside that, the confirmation and consecration of him belongeth to the Patriarke of Alexandria, and by him he is sent with Ecclesiasticall charge into Habassia. And (to be short) their prayer in their present Liturgie, for the Patriarke of Alexandria, terming him the Prince of their Archbishops, and remembring him before their owne Patriarke, evidently declareth their dependance and subiection to that Sea. Which supreme Ecclesiasticall power touching Ethiopia, to have belonged very antiently to the Patriarke of Alexandria, may appeare by the Arabike Booke of the Nicene Councell, translated by Pisanus, where that authoritie is found assigned to the Patriarke of Alexandria, touching that Abuna of Ethiopia (by the name of Catholike) and withall, to that Catholike of chiefe Bishop of Ethiopia, the seventh place in the Sessions of generall Councells, namely, next after the Bishop of Seleucia (whose Seat was next the Patriarke of Ierusalem) by the Decree of the same Nicene Fathers was allotted.

Of the Habassines. Chap. 23. Strab. l. 2. c. 1. 17.

Plin. l. 5. c. 8. Strab. l. 2. c. 34.

Liturg. Ethiop. Tom. 6. Biblioth. vet. patrum. pag. 59. & 69. Zag. Zabo. de Relig. & Morib. Ethiop. ap. Damian. a. 600.

Liturg. Ethiop. Tom. 6. Biblioth. vet. Patrum. p. 62.

Concil. Nicen. l. 3. can. 36.

You may observe, which I in my reading have done, that all the Patriarkes and other Bishops of the East, are Monkes, of the Orders, either of Saint Basil, or Saint Anthony, for the Patriarke of Constantinople, of Antiochia, and of Armenia, are Monkes of Saint *Basil*s Order: the Patriarke of Alexandria, of Ethiopia, of the Iacobites, and of the Maronites, are of Saint *Antonie*s: And the Patriarke of the Nestorians either of both.

And beside that, the confirmation and consecration of him belongeth to the Patriarke of Alexandria, and by him he is sent with Ecclesiasticall charge into Habassia. And (to be short) their prayer in their present Liturgie, for the Patriarke of Alexandria, terming him the Prince of their Archbishops, and remembring him before their owne Patriarke, evidently declareth their dependance and subiection to that Sea. Which supreme Ecclesiasticall power touching Ethiopia, to have belonged very antiently to the Patriarke of Alexandria, may appeare by the Arabike Booke of the Nicene Councell, translated by Pisanus, where that authoritie is found assigned to the Patriarke of Alexandria, touching that Abuna of Ethiopia (by the name of Catholike) and withall, to that Catholike of chiefe Bishop of Ethiopia, the seventh place in the Sessions of generall Councells, namely, next after the Bishop of Seleucia (whose Seat was next the Patriarke of Ierusalem) by the Decree of the same Nicene Fathers was allotted.

preme Ecclesiasticall power touching Ethiopia, to have belonged very antiently to the Patriarke of Alexandria, may appeare by the Arabike Booke of the Nicene Councell, translated by Pisanus, where that authoritie is found assigned to the Patriarke of Alexandria, touching that Abuna of Ethiopia (by the name of Catholike) and withall, to that Catholike of chiefe Bishop of Ethiopia, the seventh place in the Sessions of generall Councells, namely, next after the Bishop of Seleucia (whose Seat was next the Patriarke of Ierusalem) by the Decree of the same Nicene Fathers was allotted.

But if you desire a register of some speciall points of their Religion ;

1.2.3.4.5.6.9.
10.11. Zag. Zab. de Relig. &
morib. Ethiop.
ap. Damianum.
4. Alvarez. Hist.
Ethiop. c. 11.
5. Alvarez ibi.

Tecla Abissin.
ap. Th. a Ies. loc.
alleg.

* Tecla Abissin.
ap. Th. a Iesu de conu. vers. gent.
l. 7. pa. 1. c. 13.

Alvarez. loc.
loco.

Zaga. Zab. loco. citato. Alvarez.
lib. citato. c. 5.

Aluar. c. 13.
Zaga Zab.
ubi supra.

Herodot. l. 2.
par. a Medio.
Stephanus By-
zant. repr. πρῶτα,
in dictione
Ἀβῆλῳσι.
* Liturg. Ethi-op. in Tom. 6.
Bibliothecae
Vet. Pat. p. 59.
* Zag. Zab. de Morib. Ethiop.
apud Damian.

1. They circumcise their children the eight day, after the manner of the Jewes: Euen Females also as well as Males, wherein they differ from the Jewes.

2. They reuerence the Sabbath (Saturday) keeping it solemne equally with the Lords day.

3. They eat not of those beasts, which in the old Law are censured for vncleane.

4. They consecrate the Sacrament of the Eucharist in vneleavened bread: contrary to the custome of all the East, the Armenians excepted. Neuerthelesse Tecla an Habassine Monke and Priest, saith that they celebrate ordinarily in leavened bread, but on the day of the institution of the Lords Supper (the Thursday before Easter) they do it in bread vneleavened over al Habassian.
Th. a Ies. l. 7. p. 1. c. 13.

5. And communicate in both kinds, which they receive standing. And all of them, as well of the Laity as Clergy at leastwise euery weeke, the Priest ministring the bread, and the Deacon the wine with a spoone. Tecla. Abissin. loc. Zag. Zab. de rel. But yet onely in the Temple; it being not lawfull for any (not the King or Patriarke) elswhere to communicate. After the receiving whereof, it is not lawfull for them to spit that day till the setting of the Sunne. Zag. Zab. ibid.

7. And that euen to their yong Infants, presently after they are baptised: which in their Males is fortio dayes after their birth, and in Females eightie (except in perill of death, for then they are presently baptised. Tecla. Abissin. ib.) till which time be complete, their women also enter not into the Temple. Zag. Zab. ibid.

8. They professe but one Nature and one Will in Christ, yet without any mixtion or confusion of the Diuine and Humane substances. Tecla. ap. Th. a Ies. l. 7. pa. 1. c. 13.

9. Beleeue the reasonable soules of men, to bee traduced from parents by seminall propagation. Zag. Zab. de Relig. Ethiop. in fine. Th. a Ies. l. 7. p. 1. c. 8.

10. Beleeue the soules of the Infants departing afore Baptisme to bee saued, because they are sprung from faithfull parents, and namely the verrue of the Eucharist, received by the mother after conception to sanctifie the child in her wombe. Zag. Zab. ibid. Th. a Ies. l. 7. p. 1. c. 8. Aluar. hist. Ethiop. c. 22.

11. They presently vpon commission of sinne resort to the Confessor, and at euery confession (though it were euery day) receive the Sacrament of the Eucharist. Zaga Zab. ibidem.

12. They haue onely painted, not massie Images in their Churches. Tecla. ubi supra.

13. They accept onely the three first generall Councells, reiecting that of Chalcedon, for determining two Natures to be in Christ, and for condemning Dioscorus the Patriarke of Alexandria. Tecla. Abissin. ib.

14. Eleuate not the Sacrament in celebrating of the Eucharist, but keepe it couered: neither reserve it after the Communion.

15. To excommunicate obstinate sinners, is peculiar to their Patriarke, which yet is not vsuall among them, except in case of Murthar. Zag. Zab. ibid.

16. Their Priests, and other inferiour Ecclesiasticall Ministers (as also Monkes) liue by their labour, hauing no tithes for their maintenance, nor being suffered to craue Almes. Zag. Zab. loc. citato.

17. But the conferring of Bishopricks, and other Ecclesiasticall Benefices (except the Patriarchship) belongeth onely to the King. Zag. Zab. ibid.

18. Vse neither confirmation, nor extreame vnction.

19. Admit the first marriage in their Bishops and Priests, but not the second, except their Patriarch dispense.

20. Eat flesh euery Friday (as on other dayes) betwixt Easter and Whitsunday: as on euery Saturday also through the yeere, except in Lent.

21. Baptise themselves euery yeere on the day of the Epiphany, in Lakes or Ponds.

Concerning which first and last points, namely, of their Circumcision and annuall Baptismes, I haue somewhat to obserue: Namely, first, touching their Circumcision, that they obserue it, not so much perhaps of Religion, as of an ancient custome of their Nation. For although their circumcising on the eight day, semeth to imply that they received it from the Jewes, yet their circumcising of both sexes, as certainly agueth that they did not so. And if the Habassines bee of the race of the ancient *Ethiopi*ans, the doubt may bee the lesse: because Herodotus and others haue recorded it, for an ancient Ceremony of that Nation. Or, if they bee not of the Ethiopian race, but of the progeny of the Arabians, as by Uranus in Stephanus Byzantinus it should appeare, recording them for a Nation of the Arabians, neere to the *Saba*ns: euen in this case also, the occasion and originall of circumcising among the Abassines will bee discerned well enough: namely, because it is specially storied to haue been a very ancient Ceremony among the Arabians: among whom it might haue beginning, by reason of the

* Which seemeth to bee true, both because in the Ethiopian * Liturgie, they terme their owne Kingdome the Kingdome of Sheba, and also because the Kings of Habassia * deduce lineally their descent, from the Queen of Sheba that came to see Salomon: which Sheba is to the skilfull certainly knowne to be in Arabia: and either the same that wee call Arabia felix, or some parts of it. And certainly it is descent observed by learned men, that Arabia felix in the Easterne tongue, is named שכנ, as Arabia deserta שכנ and Arabia Petrea, שכנ, or שכנ. descent of many of the Arabians, from Ismael, and sonnei of Abraham, by Keisrah, planted in Arabia, of which Sheba by name recorded for one. But yet if the Abassines observe circumcision, not, as an ancient National Custome, but in any sort for Religion sake, then it may be excused in such manner, as one of their owne Bishops hath professed, namely, that it is done onely in remembrance and loue, and imitation of our Sauour, because he was circumcised, and not for any other opinion of holinesse at all.

And secondly, touching their annuall baptisings in the Feast of the Epiphany, which they (with many Ancients of the Church) suppose to be the day of our Sauours Baptisme, it is declared by the Ethiopian Bishop above mentioned to be practised among them, not as any Sacrament, or any conceit of sanctification to be obtained by it, but onely as a memoriall of Christs baptisme, because as on that day he was baptised in Iordan, Euen as the Moscomites also do the like on the same day in Rivers, and for the same reason, which appeareth the more evidently to be so, because this yeerely baptising is no ancient Ceremony of the Habassins, but a fashion of late taken vp among them, as Aluarez that lived long in those parts hath related, as being namely the institution of his grandfather, that then reigned in Habasia, being about one hundred yeeres agoe.

The Armenians, for Traffike to which they are exceedingly addicted, are to be found in multitudes, in most Cities of great Trade, specially in thole of the Turkish Empire, obtaining more fauour and priuiledge among the Turkes, and other Mahumetans, by a patent graunted that Nation vnder Mahumet owne hand, then any other sect of Christians. Infomuch that no Nation seemeth more given to Merchandize, nor is for that cause more dispersed abroad, then the Armenians, except the Iewes. But yet the natue Regions of the Armenians, and where they are still found in the greatest multitude, and their Religion is most supported, are Armenia the Greater (named since the Turkes first possession of it Turcomania) beyond Euphrates, and Armenia the Lesse on this side Euphrates, and Cilicia, now termed Carmania.

Now the Armenians touching their Ecclesiasticall gouernment, were anciently of the Iurisdiction of the Patriarke of Constantinople, as being 8. Prouinces of the Diocesse called Pontica, which together with the Prouinces of the Diocesses Asiana, and of Thrace (three of the thirteen Diocesses, into which the whole Empire was diuided) were by the Council of Chalcedon, assigned or else confirmed to the Patriarke of Constantinople, for his iurisdiction. But at this day, & very long since, euen before Photius his time (as is euident by his circular Epistle) the Armenians are departed, both from the gouernment of that Patriarke, & from the communion of the Grecians (whom at this present, they haue in more detestation then any other Sect of Christians) and that principally, for the very same occasion, for which the Iacobites of Syria withdrew their obedience from the Patriarch of Antiochia, namely, the Heresie of one onely nature in Christ. And euer since that depature, they acknowledge obedience, without any further or higher dependance, to two Patriarckes of their owne: whom they terme Catholikes. Namely one of the greater Armenia, the families vnder whose iurisdiction exceede the number of 150000. beside very manie Monasteries. Leonard. Sidon. episc. ap. Tho. a Ies. l. 7. p. 1. c. 19. who at this present keepeth residence, in the Monasterie of Ecmeazin, by the Citie, &c. Leonard. Sidon. episc. ap. Tho. a Ies. loc. citato. by the Citie of Eruan in Persia, being translated thither by occasion of the late warres betwixt the Persians and the Turkes: but his ancient seate was Sebastia, the Metropolis of Armenia the greater: And the other Patriarch of Armenia the lesse, the Families of whole iurisdiction are esteemed about 20000. Leonard. Sidon. ubi. supra. who anciently kept at Melitenae, the Metropolis of that Prouince, but now is resident in the Citie of Sis, not farre from Tarsus in Cilicia, the middle limit on Interstitium, of thole two Patriarchs Iurdictions, being the Riuer Euphrates.

Such at this present is the state of the Arminian Church, and the iurisdiction of their Patriarchs, But it should seeme, by that I finde recorded, by Otho Phrysingensis, vpon the report of the Legates of Armenia, sent from the Catholique, to the Bishop of Rome in his time, that the iurisdiction of the Catholique of Armenia was then farre larger, as namely, that he had about a thousand Bishops vnder his obedience: Except Otho perhaps mistooke, as I verily beleue he did, obedience for communion: for as touching the communion, which the Arminians maintained with other Iacobites, it extended indeede very farre: But the iurisdiction of Armenia, for ought I can finde in any record of antiquitie, contained onely foure Prouinces, namely, the two Armenias before mentioned, the greater and lesse, and the two Prouinces of Cilicia. In which small circuit, that such a multitude of Bishops should be found, is vterly vncredible, especially because we finde registers extant, both of the Bishops of the two Armenias, in the Nonell of Leo. Sophus the Emperour, touching the precedence of Metropolitans: and likewise the Bishops of Cilicia, in c. Guilielmus Tyrius: and all of them put together, exceede not the number of thirtie. And although I finde that Iustinian diuided the two Armenias into foure Prouinces (which yet to haue beene after reduced againe into two, the Nonell of Leo euen now mentioned affureth

Gen. 25. 3.
S. Shindler. in Dictionar.
Pentaglot. in שכנ La a Zabo
ubi supra.
c. De Religion.
Ethiop. long.
aut. med.
H. Poffen. de
Reb. Moscov. p. 6.

c. Aluarez. hist.
Bishop. c. 95.

Of the Armenians. Chap. 24.
f. Vid. Poffel. lib.
de 12. Linguis.
Tit. de Lingua
Armenica.

g. Notitia pro-uinciar. Orient.
Concil. Chalce-
don. Can. 18.

Photii epist. encyclica. apud Baron. Tom. 10.
Annal. An. 863.

h. Mira Notit.
Episc. Orb. p. 36.
Botcr. Relation.
p. 31. 2. c. de Dioscoriani.
k. Concil.
Chalced. A. 451.
1. in subscrip. b.

Otho. Phrysing.
l. 7. c. 32.

Tom. 1. l. 1. 2.
Oriental. l. 2.

c. De Bel. sacra
l. 14. c. 12.
Nouel. 31. c. 1.

- vs) yet were not for that cause, the number of Bishops encreased any whit the more. Now, touching the properties of their Religion.
1. They are charged with the opinion of one nature in Christ: yet not as Eutyches imagined it one, namely, by a permixtion and confusion of the diuine and humane natures; but yet by such a conjunction and coalition of them, that they both together, make but one compounded nature in our Saviour, as the body and soule, but one compound nature in man. But neuertheless, it seemeth by the confession of the Armenians, which we haue extant touching the Trinitie, sent by the mandate of the Catholique of Armenia, to the Patriarch of Constantinople, not fiftie yeeres agoe, that at this present, they haue vterly renounced that phantasie.
  2. They beleue the Holy Ghost proceedeth onely from the Father.
  3. They celebrate the Sacrament of the Eucharist with vnleavened bread (as the Romans doe.)
  4. They denie the true body of Christ to be really in the Sacrament of the Eucharist vnder the Species of Bread and Wine. Guido Sum. de heresib. They mingle not water with wine in the Eucharist. An ancient opinion and propertie of theirs, for I finde it recorded of them (and condemned) in the first generall councill. But they retaine it notwithstanding still.
  5. They receiue Infants presently after baptisme to the communion of the Eucharist, affirming that baptisme cannot be conferred without the Eucharist. Guid. Sum. de heresib.
  - They denie the vertue of conferring Grace, to belong to the Sacraments. Guido loc. alleg. They reiect Purgatorie, and pray not for the dead. Th. a lesl. 7. p. 1. c. 17.
  7. They beleue that the soules of holy men obtaine not blessednesse till the vniuersall iudgement. Th. a lesl. 7. p. 1. c. 17. They admit married Priests, and as Burchardus hath recorded, deser. terr. sanct. pa. 2. c. 2 §. 9. admit none to be secular Priests, except they be married. They rebaptise those that come to their communion from the Latine Church. Guid. Sum. de heresib. but exclude their second marriage.
  8. They abstaine from eating vncleane Beasts.
  9. They eate flesh on fridaies betweene Easter and Ascension day.
  10. They fast Lent most strictly, without Egges, Milke-meats, Flesh, Oyle, Wine, &c, onely with Fruits, Herbs Roots, and Pulse.
  11. They celebrate not Christmasse day when other Christians doe (Decemb. 25.) but fast on it: and instead of it, celebrate the feast of our Saviours Baptisme, namely, on the day of the Epiphanie.
  12. They solemnise the feast of the Annunciation, the sixth day of Aprill. The purification the foureteenth of February, &c.
- THE Maronites who were so named, not of an heretique called Maron, as many falsely write, Prateol. de sect. Heretic. in verb. Maronite. But of a holy man of that name, for wee finde mentioned in the Booke of Councils the Monasterie of Saint Maran. Concil. Constantinop. sub. Mon. act. 5. the Monkes onely whereof at first were termed Maronites: they are found in small numbers, in Aleppo, Damascus, Tripolie of Syria, and in Cyprus: But their maine habitation, is in the Mountaine Libanus. Which although it containe in circuit about a seuen hundred miles, and 40 is possessed onely in a manner by the Maronites, who for that priuiledge, namely to keepe themselves from the mixture of Mabumicians, pay the Turke a large tribute: yet of all sects of Christians, they are the least, as being esteemed not to passe in all a 12000. houses, (all in scattered Villages) beside a few Monasteries, by reason of the indisposition of Libanus in most places, for frequent habitation. For beside the craggednesse or steepnesse of that Mountaine, which maketh many parts of it in a manner inaccessible, the higher Ridges of it (which by Brocardus his relation are so eminent, that they may be discerned fortie leagues off) are also couered in a manner continually with snow, 50 which it retaineth, as Tacitus with y others, hath left recorded, notwithstanding the heate of that climate, even in the neereft approach of the Sunne. And is scarcely, as hath beene obserued by Postell, in one Summer of thirtie to be found cleare of it: for which very cause and no other, that mountaine seemeth to haue gotten the name of Libanon. For לבן in the ancient language of those parts (the Phenician or Hebrew tongue) signifieth White, and לבנון Whitenesse: Euen as, for the like whitenesse of Snow, Gerundensis hath remembered Camus (the highest part of the Pyrene hills) to haue obtained that name. And as Festus supposeth the Alpes, for the same cause, to haue gayned theirs, that in the Sabine diale& being termed (saith hee) Alpum, which the Romans in theirs named Album. For so touching the originall of the name Libanus, had I much rather thinke, then bee led by the phantasie of Isidorus and some 2 others, namely, that Libanus, should purchase that name of Francincense which the Grecians call λίβανος and the Iewes לבנון For, if it bee not true, which yet Theophrastus and Plinie write, that Francincense is gotten onely in Arabia felix, (according with that of Virgil, Solus est Thurca virga Sabaeis) by reason of which propertie of place, to burne incense is termed in Tertullian, aliquid Arabia incendere: if that I say

1. Niceph. hist.

Eccle. 1. 18 c. 53

Confes. Armenio.

Art. 16, 17, 18.

29. 30. &amp;c.

2. Alfons. a Castro

45. cont. heresib.

Titul. de Dile.

Heresib. 1. Boem.

de Morib. gent.

1. 2. c. 16.

3. Nicephor. loc.

sup. citato. Litur.

gia. Armen. apud

Cassandrum de

Litur. 3.

4. Niceph. loc. cit.

Id. Li. 4. Armen.

nior. ubi supra.

* Concil. Constant. 3. Can. 32.

5. Boem. de Mo-

rib. gent. 1. 2. c. 10

6. Guido in Sum.

de heresib.

Alfons. a Castro. l.

12. cont. Heresib.

Tit. de Purgato-

rio. heresib. 1.

Boem. loc. citato.

7. Bellon. Obser.

1. 3. c. 12. PoBel.

in Lingua Tetr.

uiana.

8. Boem. loc. citat.

9. Nichol. Peregr.

Orient. 1. 4. c. 19.

Boter. Rel. pa. 3. l.

2. c. D. osoriani.

10. Vitriac. hist.

Orient. c. 79.

11. Vitriac. loc.

citato.

12. Boter loco.

citato.

Of the Maro-

nites. Chap. 25.

2. Possuin. Ap-

par. Sac. in Maronite.

b. Boter. Rel. at. p.

3. l. 2. c. de Maroniti. Possuin.

loci citato.

Brocard. in Des.

Terr. sancte.

Tacit. historiar.

l. ultimo.

c. Vitriac. hist.

Orient. c. 84. Postell. descript. Syria. pag. 53.

Gerundens. l. 1.

Paralipom. His-

par. ca. de terra

Rosilion. Fest. in Diction. Album.

Isidor. Origin.

l. 4. c. 8.

* Struk. in Com. ad

Arrian. Periplu.

Mar. Erythra. p.

47. Adricom.

Theatr. terr.

sanct. in Nephsalim. Num. 63.

Theophrast. hist.

Plantar. l. 9. c. 5.

* Namely, for euery one about 12. yeeres old 17. Sultanes by the yeere (the Sultane weigheth a dramme of Gold, about seuen shillings six pence of our money) and for euery space of ground sixteene spans square, one Sultane yeerely, as is recorded by Possuine.

60

bee not true, for indeede, I finde in Dioscorides, record of Franckincense gotten in India, and in Pedro Cieza of the like in some part of America, yet is there no mention or remembrance in any historie of nature, or other, as I take it, that Franckincense was ever gotten in the Hill of Libanus.

The Patriarch of the Maronites (to come neerer to our purpose) who is noted to bee a Monke of Saint Antonie; and to have vnder his iurisdiction a eight or nine Bishops, keepeth residence for the most part in Libanus, in a Monasterie of Saint Antonie, and now and then in Tripolie: And is one of them, that challenge the title of the Patriarch of Antiochia, keeping ever the name of Peter as the Patriarch of the Iacobites, the other challenger of the same dignitie, doth of Ignatius. But touching Religion, the Patriarch of the Maronites professeth obedience at this present, to the Bishop of Rome, yet but lately, in Clement the eight his time: And both hee, and all the Maronites, are become of the Roman Religion (being the onely Nation of the East, except the Indians, lately brought also to the Roman Communion, that acknowledgeth that obedience) and haue a Seminary in Rome of Gregorie the thirteenth his foundation, for the trayning vp of the youth of their Nation in that Religion. But before that alteration, these were the Characters of their Religion.

1. That the Holy Ghost proceedeth onely from the Father. Th. a Ies. l. 7. p. 2. c. 6.
2. That the soules of men were all created together from the beginning. Id. loc. citato.
3. Not to baptise male children together. Interrog. Patriarch. Maronit. ap. Th. a Ies. lib. 7. p. 2. c. 5.
4. That Heretiques returning to the Church are to be rebaptised. Th. a Ies. l. 7. p. 1. c. 6.
5. That the childe is made vncleane by the touch of the mother till she be purified, which after a male childe is 40. daies, and 80. after a female, for which reason they baptise not their Infants afore those termes. Th. a Ies. loc. citat.
6. That they celebrated the Sacrament of the Eucharist in both kindes. Possuin. Appar. sac. in Maronita. Patriarch. Maronit. Interrog. 3. ap. Th. a Ies. l. 7. p. 2. c. 5.
7. And in leauened bread. Th. a Ies. l. 7. p. c. 6.
8. Distributing to all the Communicants each one a peece of the same Bread (which they consecrate in great Masses) together with these words of the Gospell, be blessed, and brake, and gaue to his Disciples, saying, take, eate, &c. Mat. 26. 26. d. Patriarch. Interrog. 3. ap. Th. a Ies. loc. citat.
9. To distribute the Sacrament of the Eucharist to children before the vse of reason, and first presently after baptisme. Th. a Ies. l. 7. p. 2. c. 5. q. 9. & cap. 6.
10. Not to reserue the Sacrament of the Eucharist. Patriarch. Maron. vbi supra.
11. Nor to carry it to any sicke person in danger of death. Th. a Ies. l. 7. p. 2. c. 5.
12. To omit confirmation by the Bishop. Patr. Maron. Int. 2. vbi supr.
13. To exclude the fourth Matrimonie, in euery person as vtterly vnlawfull. Id. Ibid. Interrog. 5.
14. That marriage is not inferiour to single life. Th. a Ies. l. 7. p. 2. c. 6.
15. Vtterly to dissolue Matrimonie in case of adultery and marry another. Patr. Maronit. Inter. 5. vbi supra.
16. That the Father may dissolue the matrimonie of his Sonne or Daughter if hee mislike it. Th. a Ies. l. 7. p. 2. c. 6.
17. Not to ordaine yong men Priests or Deacons except they were married. Patriarch. Maronites Inter. 5. vbi supra. Possuin. in Appar. sac. in Maronita. But yet to restrain their second marriage. Th. a Ies. lib. 7. p. 2. c. 6.
18. To create children five or six yeares old Subdeacons. Patriarch. Maronit. Inter. 5. vbi supra.
19. That no man entred the Kingdome of heauen before the generall Iudgement. Th. a Ies. l. 7. p. 2. c. 6.
20. Not to fast on the Lords day, nor on the Sabbath. Th. a Ies. loc. citat.
21. In the daies of fasting not to celebrate Masse till the Euening. Patr. Maron. ap. Th. a Ies. l. 7. p. 2. c. 5.
22. Not to eate of any thing strangled or of bloud. Id. l. 7. p. 2. c. 6.
23. To exclude women during their monthly issues both from the Eucharist, and from the Church. Patriarch. Maronit. Inter. 8. vbi supra.
24. Their maine Errour was, the heresie of the Monothelites, touching one onely will and action in Christ. Which errour although they renounced about 400. yeeres agoe, and reconciled themselues then to the Roman Church, at what time those parts of Palestine and Syria, were in the Christians hands, as Iacobus a Vitriaco, and Gustelmus Tyrius, the one Bishop of Acon, and the other of Tyre, haue recorded: yet shortly after, when those parts were by Saladin, the King of Egypt and Syria, recovered from the Christians, those Maronites relapsed, and forooke againe the Roman communion, till the late times of Pope Gregorie the XIII. and Clement the VIII. with whom they againe renewed it.

And this heresie of the Monothelites, springing out of that bitter roote of the Iacobites, touching one onely nature in Christ, was the last of that long and wicked traine of heresies, which vpon the contempt of the councill of Chalcedon, exceedingly wasted and ruined the East Church, for after

Plin. l. 12. c. 14.
Virg. Georg. l. 2.
Tertul. de coron.
Milit. circa Med.
Dioscorid de Me- dic. mat. l. 1. c. 7
a Possuin. Appa. sacr. in Maronita
b Boter Rel. p. 3. l. 2. c. de Maroni- ti. Possuin. loc. citato.
\ Possuin. loc. citat*
Boter. loc. citato.
Mira: notitia
Episcop. Orbis. p.
34. Th. a Ies. de
Conu. Gent. l. 3. c. 3.

Vitriac histor.
Orient. c. 78.
Tyrius de Bello
sacro l. 2. c. 8.
Saligniac. uiner.
Tom. c. 2.
\ Vitriac. & Tit.*
locis tam citatis.

after that the detestation of Nestorius heresie, touching two persons in our Sauour (condemned in the third generall Councell) had so immoderately dis tempered the phantasies of Eutiches in Constantinople, and the Patriarch of Alexandria, Dioscorus, with other their adherents, that they thought not themselves safe enough from the heresie of two persons, till they were fallen into the other & opposite extremitie of one nature in Christ; the Diuine and humane natures in Christ (in their conceits) by permixtion and confusion of substances, and of properties growing into one, vpon their adunation: and withall, that the humane nature of Christ, was not consubstantiall to ours, but of another kinde, and condition; which phantasies the fourth generall Councell condemned. After I say, this heresie of Eutiches and Dioscorus, had growne to that head in Egypt and Syria, that like a violent and furious stream, whose course would not be staid, it bare downe before it all oppositions, and among the rest, that great and reuerend Councell of Chalcedon, that had condemned it, and was contemned by it, it gaue occasion for an infinite traine of heresies to follow at the breach, which it had made.

Vid Nicenbor.
Hisor Eccles.
l. 18 c. 45. & sequent.
Leont. de Stasis.
Action. 5. & c.

For first (to omit infinite extrayagant branches that sprang from it, and infinitely deformed the Church, renting with many schismes the vnitie, and with as many heresies wounding the faith of it.) It drew after it the heresie of the passiblenesse of the Deitie, because the Deitie of Christ, was become (in their conceits) the same nature with the Humanitie, that was passible. Secondly, (the absurditie of that being discerned) it occasioned another extremitie opposite, namely of the Impassibilitie of the Humanitie of our Sauour (but on the same ground) because namely, it was become one nature with the Deitie, which now wee know to bee vnpassible. Thirdly, when the fondnesse of both were discovered, it bred a great deuice, touching one nature in our Sauour (as the wit of Heretikes will better serue them to deuise a thousand shifts to delude the truth, then their pride will suffer them once to yeeld and acknowledge it) It bred I say a new deuice, namely, to be one, not by permixtion or confusion of substances, as Eutiches first taught, but onely by composition, the Deitie and Humanitie, by coalition becoming one nature in Christ, as the Bodie and Soule grow into one nature in Man. And fourthly, when this fantasie began also somewhat to abate and relent in many: yet still a fraction, as it were, or rather a consequent of it was retained (for indeed it implieth by necessarie consequence the vnitie of nature) namely, that there was but one Will, and one Action of both natures in the person of our Sauour. And God knowes what a traine and succession of heresies might haue followed these, if that Lord, whom they had infinitely wronged, by their wonton and wandring conceits of him, had not, to stop the course and streame of their wickednesse and follie, brought on them the Sarracens of Arabia. For euen while the Church, speciallie that of the Eastene parts, was in a great perplexitie and trauell with the heresie of the Monethelites (which I last mentioned) the Mahumetans of Arabia, like a mightie inundation brake forth, and ouerwhelmed all, and them first, that first and most had wronged the Sonne of God, by fostering the forenamed heresies, and the infinite brood that sprung of them, I meane Egypt and Syria, and to this day both they and the neighbouring Nations, that had beene infected by them, remaine in thraldome. But yet, as in the diseases and distemper of our bodies, contraries are vsually healed by contraries, so seemeth it to haue fallen out in the distempers of these mens religions: for as worldly prosperitie and wantonnesse of wit (ordinarie companions) wherewith these Nations in those times abounded, bred in them their ordinarie children, namely, prosperitie of the world, pride, wantonnesse of wit, error, which couple in matter of Faith and Religion, is wont to produce no better issue then heresie. So on the other side, hauing now at length their hearts humbled, and their wits tamed by that pouertie and affliction, wherein the tyrannie and oppression of the Arabians and Turkes hath long holden them, it seemeth the Lord hath taken pittie on them (as it is his propertie not to dispise humble and broken spirits, and to remember mercie in the midst of iudgement) and reduced them, or most of them, to the right acknowledgement of his Sonne againe. For certainly, that they and other Chrtistians of the East, haue (at least in these later times) disclaimed and abandoned, those hereticall fancies touching our Sauour, wherein by their misleaders they had beene anciently plunged (and which many Christians of these West parts still charge them withall) doth manifestly appeare: First, of the Iacobites, & secondly of Nestorians, by their seuerall confessions, translated out of the Syriack tongue by Masius, & extant in Bibliotheca Veterum patrum. Thirdly, of the Armenians, by their owne confession also, translated by Tretorius. Fourthly, of the Cophiti, by the profession of their faith extant in Baronius. Fifthly, of the Habassines, by the relation of Zaga Zabo, a Bishop of their own. Sixthly, of the Indians, by their reconcilment to the Church of Rome, mentioned by Possennius. And seventhly, of the Maronites, by their like reconcilment, recorded by him and by others.

* * Biblioth. Vet.
Patr. Tom. 4. pa.
1049. & 153.
c Conf. ff. Arme.
de Trinitat. Art.
26. 27. 28. 29. 30.
d Bar. n. Tom. 6.
Annal. in fine.
e De Relig. &
Morib. Ethiop.
ap. Domian a Goes.
f Possenn. Appa.
fac. in Nestorianis.
g Possenn. lib.
citat. in Maron.
Boter. Rel. p. 3.
l. 2 c. Maroniti.
Michou. l. 2. de
Sarmat. c. 1.
Cru. Turcog. l. 7.
p. 1. 4. 5. 7. & c.
Of the seuerall languages wherein Li-turgies of Christians in the seuerall parts of the World are celebrated.
Chap. 26.

And thus haue I related the seuerall sects of Christians that are abroad in the World, with the places of their habitations, & the special characters (that are recorded of their Religions. One point notwithstanding of their difference, haue I left purposely as yet vntouched, both for the ampleness of the matter, and because I conceiue you would haue it declared seuerally. Namely, touching the different languages, in which all these seuerall sorts of Christians celebrate their Liturgies or Diuine Seruice.

But

But first to speake a word or two, of the publique Service of the Jewes, and of the Mahumetans, in their Synagogues, and Meskedes (seeing I intreated before of those Religions.) The Jewes where they obtained libertie for their Synagogues, celebrate theirs in the ancient Hebrew tongue, as Michonius, with many others hath related, and as is manifest by their owne editions of their publique Praiers, printed both at Venice and in Polonia, in that language.

But the Mahumetans haue theirs in the Arabique tongue (the native language of their Prophet) as Georgenitz, Richerius, and sundry others haue recorded: So that not onely in Arabia and Egypt, and Barbarie, and Palestine, and Syria, and Mesopotamia (in which parts the Arabique tongue is become the vulgar language) the Alcoran is read, and their publique deuotions exercised, in Arabique: but also in Greece, and Natolia, and other parts of the Turkish Dominion, where the Greeke, and Turkish, and Slauonique tongues are vulgar, as also in Persia, in Tartarie, in India, where they haue other native, and peculiar languages, the Mahumetans reade the Alchoron (which they suppose were profaned if it were translated into vulgar tongues) and performe their publique deuotions in that language.

But Christians in celebrating of their diuine Liturgies, differ touching the language very much, Indeede I finde it recorded in Durandus (but vpon what warrant and authoritie I cannot finde) that till the time of Hadrian the Emperour (that is about an hundred and twentie yeeres after Christ) their Liturgies were all celebrated in the Hebrew tongue: And then, the Orientall Church began, first to celebrate them in Greece. Indeede mee thinkes it is possible, that the Christians of the Gentiles might in honour of the Apostles, retaine the Apostles Liturgies, in the verie tongue wherein by the Apostles themselves, they had beene first ordayned, for it is not to bee doubted, but * many yeeres passing (about tenne) after our Sauours ascension, before the Apostles left Syria, and sundred themselves to preach the Gospell abroad in the world among the Gentile and forraine Nations. It is not to bee doubted I say, but the Apostles, while they remayned in Iurie, ordayned Liturgies in the Jewish tongue, for the vse of those Jewes, whom they had conuerted to Christianitie: which Liturgies by the Christian Disciples of the Jewish Nation, dispersed in many Prouinces of the Gentiles, might together with Christian Religion, bee carried abroad, and gladly entertayned among the Gentiles. This is possible I say, but if it bee also true (as I haue not obserued any thing in antiquities shat may certainly impeach the truth of it) yet that which is spoken by Durandus of those Liturgies in the Hebrew tongue, must bee vnderstood (I doubt not) of the Hebrew, then vulgar and vsuall, that is to say the Syriacke tongue: not onely, because in that language wee finde them in these times, celebrated by the Christians of the East: but also because I can conceiue no reason, either, why the Liturgies should bee ordayned by the Apostles in that language which the Jewes themselves (the learned excepted) vnderstood not, if it were done for the Jewes: or else why the Gentiles should translate them (or vse them so translated) out of the Hebrew into the Syriacke, seeing both were to them alike, vulgarly knowne, and not vnderstood. But howsoeuer it was in that most ancient and primitive state of the Church, in and immediatly following the Apostles times, the difference certainly among Christians in these present times, in that behalfe is very great, some of them celebrating their Liturgies in their owne native and vulgar, and some other in learned and forraine tongues.

The Christians then (to speake first of the first sort) that celebrate them in their owne vulgar languages, are the Armenians, Habassines, Moscouites with Russians, Sclauonians, and Protestantes.

For that the Armenians (how soeuer otherwise in their ceremonies belonging to Diuine seruice they approach neerer as * Belonius and others report, to the Rites of the Latine Church, then any other sect of Christians) that they I say exercise their common diuine seruice in the Armenian tongue, Iacobus a Vitriaco, Brocardus, Michonius, Breitenbachius, and many others, some of their owne experience, and others of certaine Relation, haue left recorded. And namely, as touching the translation of the Holy Scripture, into the Armenian tongue, which at this present, is in solemne vse among them, the Armenians themselves as a Sixtus Senensis hath recorded, attribute it to no other Author then to Chrysostome: who also, out of the historie of George Patriarch of Alexandria, written of the life of Chrysostome, remembreth it specially to haue beene Chrysostoms worke after his banishment from Constantinople, while he liued in those parts of Armenia, to which as we reade in b Sozomen, he was by the Emperors decree confined, and there dyed. And certainly, that the holy Scriptures were translated into the Armenian tongue before Theodorets time, who liued soone after Chrysostome, for he flourished about the yeere 440. Theodore himselfe (although he name not the Author of the Translation) hath left recorded: as I finde also acknowledged by Angelus Roccha, in his discourse of the Vatican Librarie, not onely that Chrysostome is said to haue translated of the Scriptures into the Armenian tongue, but, that hee is also celebrated among the monuments of the same Vatican, as the c Inuentor of the Armenian Characters still in vse.

And touching the Habassines, Aluarez a Portugall, that liued many yeeres among them, hath not onely left recorded, that they reade Scriptures in the Tigian tongue, which is a dialect of the Habassin, (for Tigia hee noteth to bee that part of Habassia, which first receiued Christianitie) in-

Michon. l. 2. de
Sarmatia. c. 1.
Crus. Turcor. l. 7. p. 487. &c.
Georgiou. De
Rit. Turcar. lib. 2. cap. 1.
Richer. l. 2. de Morib. & Instit.
Turcar. Crus.
Turco. l. 7. p. 487
\ Georgio. de*
Rit. Turcar. l. 2. c. de Sacerd.
Durand. Ration.
diu. nor. l. 4. c. 1.

* Vide Baron.
Tom. 1.
Annal. ad An.
Chr. 445. 14.

* Bellon O. Ser. l. 3. c. 12. Viri.
Hist. Gr. c. 79.
Brocard. de descrip. terre sanct.
Michon. de Sar.
lib. 2. cap. 1.
Breitenbach.
Peregrin. c. de Armen.
Pestel. de Lingua
Armenica.
Bellon. loco citato. Nichol.
Peregrin. Orient.
lib. 4. cap. 19.
Villamont de
Voyages. l. 2. c. 23.
Boter. Relat. p. 3. l. 2. c. Alii
plures. a Sixt Senens. l. 4. Biblioth. sancti in Ioannes Constantino- politani. b Sozomen.
Hist. l. 8. c. 22.
Theodore. l. 5.
de Curand.
Grecor. Aff. Et.
post med Roccha in Bibliotheca
Vaticana. p. 1. 7.

c Id pag. 155.
& Mut. Pansa
de Biblioth.
Vaticana. p. 4.
dis. cr. 21.
Aluarez histor.
Ethiop. cap. 15. 9

to which language Sabellicus Supplem. Histor. lib. 8. recorderth both the Olde and New Testament to haue beene translated out of the Chaldees. But he, with many others, that they celebrate their Liturgie in their owne language, though the Chaldees bee esteemed amongst them, as their learned tongue, which also the Liturgie it selfe (you may finde it in the new Edition of Bibliotheca veterum Patrum) if you marke the long answers of the People to the Priest, in their prayers doth euidently import.

And no lesse certaine is it also, of the Musconites and Russians, that their Liturgies are likewise ministred in their vulgar tongue (being a kind of Slauonian) though sometimes intermingling Greeke Hymnes, as Guaguinus hath obserued: Descript. Moscom. ca. 2. as is testified by Mathias Michon, by Sigismund, by Possesine, by Thence, and sundry others.

And as euident is it of the Illyrians, whom we commonly call Slauonians that they also exercise their publike Diuine Seruice in their owne language: which to haue beene allowed them by the Pope, at the suit of Cyrrill their Bishop, or as others say, of Methodius (but the difference is of no importance, for they both liued in the same time, and were companions in preaching the Gospel to barbarous Nations) Aeneas Silvius and others haue recorded. And in particular of the Liburnians (the more Westerly part of the Slauonians) it is affirmed by Auentine: and of the Dalmatians (the more Easterly part of them) by Angelus Roccha, that they celebrate their Liturgies in their owne language: Which Roccha saith the Dalmatians are most certainly perswaded to haue beene of Hieromes deuising. But yet in determining the Antiquitie of that Custome, Roccha that referreth it to Pope Paul the second is greatly mistaken: Because wee find it to haue beene much more anciently granted them by Pope Iohn the eighth, that they might both read the Scriptures, and celebrate Masse in their owne tongue, as appeareth by the same q Popes Epistle extant to Sfentopulcher. And euen Roccha himselfe (forgetting himselfe) confesseth it in another place, to haue beene obtrayned of the Pope by Cyrrill, who was about six hundred yeeres ancienter then Paul the second. And certainly (now I am speaking of Popes) of no other Iudgement touching Diuine Seruice in vulgar Tongues, seemeth Pope Innocent the third to haue beene (and perhaps it was also the Decree of the Councell of Laseran) charging that in Cities, where there was concourse of diuers Nations, that differed in Languages and Ceremonies, Diuine Seruice and the Sacraments should be celebrated according to that difference.

But to speake a little in particular of the vulgar translation of the holy Scriptures vsed among the Dalmatians: It is not onely affirmed by sundry Writers to be the worke of Hierome, but Hierome himselfe in his Epistle to Sophronius, seemeth to some learned men to intimate so much: But yet there is another translation also of the Scriptures into the Slauonick Tongue, later then that of Hieromes, as Scaliger hath obserued, being written in the Seruian Character (as the former is in the Dalmatian) vsed in Rascia, Bosnia, Bulgaria, Moldania, Russia, Mosconia, and other Nations of the Slauonian language in the Easterne parts, that celebrate their Liturgies after the Greeke Ceremonie, and professe obedience to the Patriarch of Constantinople: Of which latter translation Methodius the companion of Cyrrill, in preaching the Gospel to Gentile Nations, is certainly reported to haue beene the Author. Which Cyrrill (if you question what he was) was neither hee of Alexandria, nor hee of Ierusalem, as Mutius Pansa hath vainely imagined, but another farre later then either of them, whom in the Slauonick tongue they call Chinrill, one that liued about the yeere 860. namely, hee that in the time of the Emperour Michael the Third, and Pope Nicholas the First, together with Methodius, first brought the Mengrelians, Circassians, and Gazarans, and after that many of the Slauonians to the faith of Christ, as Michonius hath recorded. Neither need wee any other testimony to refell the fantasie of Pansa, touching Cyrrill of Ierusalem, then Pansa himselfe, as namely acknowledging that Cyrrill was the Inuenter of another sort of Illyrian Characters, then by Hierome had beene formerly deuised (for of the Dalmatian Characters, that are vsed in Dalmatia, Liburnia, Istria, Moravia, Silesia, Bohemia, Polonia, &c. Hierome is acknowledged to bee the Author.) It could nor bee therefore Cyrrill of Ierusalem, as being ancienter then Hierome, and by him registred in his Catalogue of Writers. And indeede (to make an end) what reason or occasion might the Bishop of Ierusalem haue to diuise Characters for the Illyrians?

But to intreat a little more (on this occasion) of translations of the holy Scripture, made by the ancient Fathers into vulgar languages: Besides those already mentioned, of Hierome and Chrysostome, by the one into the Dalmatian, and by the other into the Armenian tongue; It is also recorded by Socrates and Nicephorus, and sundry others of Vulphilas, Bishop of the Goths one more ancient then either of the former, for hee flourished in the time of Constantius the Emperour, and was successour to Theophilus, whose subscription wee find in the first Nicene Councell (being the same man, to whom the Inuention of the Gothicke Alphabet is likewise attributed by the same Authors) that hee translated the holy Scriptures into the Gothicke tongue. A Copie of which translation is remembered by Bonauentura Vulcanius, to be yet remaining in some Librarie of Germany: And it may bee that the Gothicke translation of the foure Euangelists, mentioned by idem. c. 11.

n Postell. de Ling. Indica.
Theu. Cos. l. 2. c.
24. Vilamont.
l. 2. cap. 24.
Bibli. Vet.
P. it. tan. 6. p. 55.
Michon. l. de
Sarmat. 2. p. 1.
Sigism. l. de Reb.
Moscou. p. 46.
Possesin. l. de Rebus Mosc.
p. 4. Theu. Cos.
l. 19. c. 12.
p. Bapt. Palat.
de Rat. scribéd.
Roccha in Bib-lioth. Vatican.
p. 162.
q Auentin. l. 4.
Anal.
En. Silu. in Hist. Bohemica.
c. 13. Auentin.
loc. citat. Rocch.
loc. citato.
r Epist. 247.
Iom. Papae. 8. in Tom. 3. Concil.
par. 2. ap. Bin. p.
990. Roccha. lib.
citato p. 168.
Concil. Lateran.
c. 9. & decret. l. 1.
Tit. 31. c. 14.
f Iofas de Sacro Vernacul. legendo. Postell. de lingua Illyrica. E-rasm. Declarat.
37. ad censur.
theolog. Paris.
Sixt. Senens. l. 4.
Biblioth. Sanct.
in Hieronymus Stridonensis Scal-lig. Diatrib. de Linguis Europae.
& alii plures.
c. Sixt. Senens.
loco citato. Hieron. in Epist. ad
Sophron. Tom. 3.
Scalig. loc. iam
citato. Auentin.
l. 4. Anal. Pan-
sa de Biblioth.
Vatican. par. 4.
Discor. 23.
u Martyrolog.
Rom. Mar-
tii. 9. Michon. de Sarmat-
ia. l. 1. c. 7.
Postell de Ling.
Dalmatica.
Roccha. Biblioth.
Vatican. p. 161.
& Alii plurimi.
x Socrat. Hist. Eccles. l. 4. c. 27. Niceph. Hist. Eccles. l. 11. c. 48. Tripart. hist. l. 8. c. 13. Paul. Diacon. Hist. Miscell. l. 12. Sozomen. l. 2. c. 37. Socrat. l. 2.
c. 32. Vulcan. in pref. de Littur. & Lingua. Getarum. Inscript. Vet. p. 146.

Gruter in the Booke of ancient Inscriptions, to bee of a thousand yeeres antiquitie, and remaining in the Abbey of Werden, might bee part of that translation of Vulphilas: But yet, that besides these translations into vulgar Languages, hitherto mentioned of Vulphilas, Chrysostome, and Hierome, the holy Scriptures were likewise anciently translated into the languages of many Nations, is affirmed by Hierome: And in particular (although the translators names bee not recorded) into the Egyptian, Persian, Indian, Scythian, and Sarmatian Tongues, nay into all the Languages of other Nations, as Theodoret, that flourished in the time of the Ephesine and Chalcedon Councils (almost 1200. yeeres agoe) hath left testified: As also in the following times (yet ancient) wee read of the like translations of the Scriptures, to haue beene made by b Iohn Archbishop of Smill into the Arabike, about An. 717. which then was the vulgar speech of that part of Spaine, and some part of it into the Saxon or Englisch by Beda about the same time: Into the Slauonike by c Methodius, about An. 860. &c. Into the Italian by d Iacobus de Voragine, about An. 1290. &c.

And now, to intreate of those sects of Christians that celebrate their Liturgies in learned and forraigne tongues; which the vulgar people doe not vnderstand: I finde onely three languages wherein they are all performed. Namely, the Greeke, the Latine, and the Chaldee, or Syriacke Tongues.

And first, touching the Chaldee or Syriacke, in it are celebrated the Liturgies of the Nestorians, as Vitriacus, Barbosa, Villamont, Botero, and others haue recorded: for Genebrard, that pronounceth peremptorily the Hebrew tongue, and not the Syriacke to be the viual language, wherein all the Orientall Nations minister their Diuine Seruice, bewrayes but too much, both his boldnesse and his ignorance, as being not able, I am certainly perswaded, to produce any History or other lawfull testimony that recordeth the Liturgies of any Christians in all the East, to be performed in the Hebrew tongue. But yet it may be obserued, that where in sundry Writers we find it mentioned, that the Nestorians exercise their Diuine Offices in the Chaldee, we are not to vnderstand them of the pure and ancient, but of the degenerate or Iewish Chaldee, which beside the Chaldee and Hebrew, whereof it is principally tempered and compounded, hath much mixture also both of Greeke and Arabike, such as the Iewes language was, after our Sauour and his Apostles time, that is (in a word) the Syriacke, for the Iewish Chaldee (to declare this point a little better) is of two sorts: One of those that returned not againe after the captiuitie to Ierusalem, but settled themselves to inhabite about Babylon, whose language (although somewhat degenerating also from the right Chaldee) is termed the Babylonian tongue, of which sort the Iewes Dialect of Neardea in Mesopotamia (the compilers of the Babylonian Talmud) was: The other of those that returned from the captiuitie, whose language is properly termed the Syrian or Ierusalem Chaldee, varying somewhat farther from the native Chaldee then the former, by reason of the mixture of forraigne words Arabike, Greeke, Roman, and others, which in course of time it contracted: In which Dialect, the Talmud and Targum, both named of Ierusalem, and the bookes of their later Rabbines are written. And in the second sort of Chaldee, is the holy Scripture by the East Christians translated, and their Liturgies at this day celebrated.

Secondly of the Indians, that they in like sort performe their Liturgie (not in the Hebrew, as is confidently affirmed by Genebrard, but) in the Chaldee or Syriacke, is testified by Oforius, Posseusne, Linschot, &c. and confirmed by their Liturgie extant in Bibliotheca Veterum Patrum, which is there remembred to be translated out of the Syriacke.

And so doe thirdly the Iacobites: Namely, they of Mesopotamia, of Babylon, of Palestine, of Syria, and of Cyprus, which are peculiarly knowne by that appellation. Or whom Vitriacus long since obserued, that they read the Diuine Scriptures in a language vnkowne to the Lay people: And that the language by the New Testament brought fro them by Moses Mardenus in Europe to be printed (for the more commodious dispersing of it abroad into their Churches) we now certainly know to bee the Syriacke tongue, euen as it is also knowne and recorded touching the rest of their Diuine Seruice, that it is performed in the same Syriacke language, which they terme the Chaldee. And it is thought, that the Liturgie commonly termed Anaphora Basilij, which we haue by Masius translated out of the Syriacke into Latine (and is found in Bibliotheca Veterum Patrum) is the Iacobites Liturgie: which language, although it be now vnkown among them (their Clerkes or learned men excepted) yet that it was vulgarly vnderstood, when that Liturgie was first ordained, the long answers of the people to the Priest in their prayers, which wee finde in it may bee demonstrations. But touching the Old Testament, which they haue also (as Arrius writes he hath heard from their owne Relations, and Possell, that he hath seene) vsuall in all those East parts in the Syriacke tongue, it is specially obserued by Arias Montanus, to be translated, not out of the Hebrew, but out of the Greeke of Origens Emendation.

And fourthly, of the Coptis or Christians of Egypt, it is likewise obserued, that they celebrate their Liturgies in the same language: (reading yet the Gospell after it is done in the Chaldee, in the Arabike tongue, which is now, and long hath beene the vulgar language of Egypt.) And it may further appeare, beside the testimony of Histories, by the Liturgie of Seruerus Patriarch of Alexandria in vie among them, translated out of Syriacke into Latine, by Guido Fabritius.

Hieron. in praefat. in 4. Euang. Theodoret. l. 3. de Carand. Græcor. Affectibus post med. b Vasco. in Chro. Hisp. ad An. 717 c Ioan. Trevis. l. 5. c. 24. d Augustin. l. 4. Annal. e Sixt. Senens. Bibl. Sanct. l. 4. in Iacobus Archiepiscopus Genens. Vitriac. Hist. Orient. c. 77. Barbosa. in Vol. 1. de Viaggi. apud Ramus. p. 313. Villamont. l. 2. c. 22. Botero. Rel. par. 3. l. 2. c. de Nestoriani. Genebrard. Chronog. l. 3. ad An. Chr. 31.

Ofor. de Reb. Emmanuel. l. 3. Posseus in Ap. par. fac. in Di. amperien. Concilium Lincol. l. 1. c. 15. Bibl. Vet. Patr. in Aust. ria. Tom. 2. in fine. Vitriac. Hist. Orient. c. 76. f Vide Wid. manslad. in p. e. f. Test. menti. Syriac. g Post. de lingua Chaldee. Botero. Rel. p. 3. l. 2. c. de Giacobiti. Biblioth. Vet. Patr. To 6. p. 27. Arias. Montanus. in Admonit. re. fix. Bibl. Reg. de Version. Syriaca. Possell. in Lingua Chaldaica. h Ioter Rel. p. 3. l. 3. c. de Ch. i. fiani. de Eg. sto.

And

And fifthly, the Maronites in their Liturgies (which Possennine obserueth to be the Liturgies of Peter, of Iames, and of Sixtus) vse the same Syriacke language (the Arabicke being also their vulgar) as beside Possennine, Postell also, and Villamont, and others haue recorded.

And so doe sixthly and lastly (to make an end of this reckoning) the poore Christians of the Isle of Zocotora (and Iland after Barros his dimension of sixtie miles in length, and twenty seuen in breadth) without the Bay of Arabia, for although I find it questioned touching the Religion, whether they be Iacobites or Nestorians; Iuan Barros affirming the first (and it may seeme so for their neerenesse to the Dominions of Habassia) and Ananias, prouing the latter because they are vncircumcised, which Iacobites are not, & professe obedience to the Patriarch of Mozal, who is known to be Patriarch of the Nestorians: yet in this they both agree, that their Diuine Seruice (such as it is) is performed in the Chaldee tongue. And although Botero relate it to be done in the Hebrew, yet he meaneth (out of doubt) not the ancient and pure Hebrew, but the latter or degenerate language of the Hebrew, that is to say the Syriacke. As the other also that affirme the publike and solemne deuotions, either of these Zocotorini, or any other Christians in all the East, or South parts of the world, to be read in the Chaldee, require also the like interpretation: Namely to bee vnderstood, not of the right, and Babylonian, but of the Iewish and corrupted Chaldee.

But now to speake of those Christians, that celebrate their Liturgies in the Greeke tongue: I obserue them to be these.

1. The Grecians themselves: Namely, all they whose vulgar speech the Greeke tongue is, inhabiting in Greece, and a great part of Natolia, of Macedon, and of Thrace, together with all the Ilands of the Aegean Sea, and the other many scattered Ilands, about the Coast of Greece. But yet they doe it, not in the present vulgar, but in the pure and ancient Greeke tongue, whereof as I before obserued, the common people vnderstand but little: vsing namely, on festiuall daies the ancient Liturgie of Basil, and on common dayes that of Chrysostome, as Jeremy a late Patriarch of Constantinople hath recorded. And namely, as touching the holy Scriptures, vsing the Septuagints Greeke translation, and specially that of Lucians Emendation. At least it was so with them in Hieroms time (and I find no mention at all recorded of any alteration) who obserueth the Edition of the seuentie Interpreters by Lucianus, to haue bene receiued in vse from Constantinople, as farre as Antiochia: As also that of Origens Emendation, from Antiochia to Egypt, and in Egypt that of Hesychius. But (howsoeuer it may bee touching the Edition viually among them) yet certainly, that the Grecians haue not the Scriptures translated into the vulgar Greeke, the Grecians themselves haue directly recorded.

2. The Syrians, namely those, that for distinction of Religion from the Iacobites (who likewise inhabite Syria) are termed so, that is to say the Melchites, for they hauing the Arabicke for their vulgar language) as they agree in other points of their Religion and Ceremony, and order of Diuine Seruice with the Grecians, so doe they as touching their Liturgie in language also, as is obserued by Vitriacius, Haitho, Breitenbachius, and many others.

3. The Georgians, who hauing for their vulgar speech, a peculiar language of a middle temper (which well agreeth with the position of their Countrey) betwixt Tartarian and Armenian, as Gesner, and Postell, and Roccha, in their bookes of languages haue obserued, exercise notwithstanding their Liturgies in the Greeke tongue, as Iacobus a Vuriaco, Gesner, Postell, Roccha, and diuers others haue certainly recorded.

4. The Circassians: who yet in such sort celebrate their Diuine Seruice in the Greeke, that their Priests themselves, by reason of their grosse ignorance, vnderstand not what they read as Intireano (chat liued among them) hath remembred.

5. And lastly, in the Greeke tongue are celebrated the Liturgies of all the Monasteries, that are of the Greeke Religion, wherefoeuer disperfed within the Turkish Dominions, in Africke or Asia: As in Mount Sinai, the Cities of Petra and Eltor in Arabia: In Iernsalem, Alexandria, Damascus, and in sundry other places, as Bellonius with others hath left recorded.

And to come at last to the Nations that celebrate their Liturgies in the Latine tongue: To speake of them, euen this little will bee enough: Namely, that all the Christians, that are found of the Roman Communion in America and in Africa, celebrate their Liturgies in the Roman tongue. As all likewise in Europe (except the Slauonians aboue mentioned.) And in Asia, except the two new Roman purchases of the Maronites in Syria, and of the Christians of Saint Thomas in India, who retaine still the old accustomed language, which as I obserued before, is in the Liturgies of both those Nations, the Syriacke tongue.

I haue thought good to adde this note in the conclusion, that Christian Religion may seeme instly to be diuided into foure parts, in regard of her professors thorow the World: of which the Grecian Faith possesseth one, reckoning to them the Russian; the Romanists or Papists another; the Protestants (by their aduersaries, and by the intemperate zeale of some Lutherans, and other factious persons, made more to disagree then indeed they doe, as by the Harmonie of Confessions appeareth, and by their uniforme acknowledgement of all the maine points of Religion; their differences being about circumstances, rites, manner of presence, and some more abstruse points then whereof the vulgar is capable) these by a generall name called Protestants, may bee reckoned for a third part, perhaps not all so great in multitudes as either of the

Possenn. in Ap-par. sacro. in Maronite. Postel. de l'uz. Chaldaica. Villam. l.
2. c. 24.

Barros. de Asia.
Decad. 2. l. 1. c. 3.

Anan. Fabric.
del. Mondo.
Trat. 3. p. 292.

Boter. Relat. par.
3. l. 3. de Christiani di Socotena.

Ierem. Resp. 1. ad
Germanos c. 13.

Hieron. in pref.
ad Lib. Paralip.

i Theodof. Zymo-mal. in epi. ad Crus. l. Turcogr. c. 431.

k Vitriac. Hist.
Orient. c. 75.

Haitho. l. de
Tartaria. c. 14.

Breitenbach Peregrin. c. de Surianis. Baum-gart. Peregr. l. 2.

c. 9. Villamont.
l. 2. c. 22. Boter.

Rel. p. 3. l. 1. c. de Melchius.

l Vitriac. lib.
citat c. 80.

Ge. ner. Mitbrid in Lingua Georgia. Postell. de l. 2.

Ling. Tit. de ling.
Geo. g. Roccha de Dialect. in Georgiana. c. in gre-
ca. Vet. Baum-gart. loc. citat
Villamont. l. 2.

c. 23.

m Interian. della vita de. 1.

Zychi. c. 1. Bello.
Obser. l. 1. c. 35.

the former, but more flourishing then the first in splendor of power and learning, onely by an Inquisition inferior to the second; and in numbers as many as all other professions of Christianitie, here rekoued a fourth part.

CHAP. XIII.

Relations of diuers Travellers, touching the diuersities of Christian Rites and Tenents in diuers parts of the World.

§. I.

TECLA MARIA an Abassine, his answeres to questions touching the Religion of the Abassines and Cophti.

20 You haue read in Aluarez, Bermudez, and the Iesuites Relations, large Relations of the Abassine Faith, and of the Portugalls remaining in Habassia, as also of 8.
three Patriarchs sent thither from the Pope, but refused by the Abassine.
These Portugalls dwelling there sent one Tecla Maria, an Abassine Priest in their behalfe to Rome, who before the Cardinalls made answeres as followeth July 1. 1594.

Taken out of Thomas à Iesu
de Conuers. om.
Cent. 1. 7. c. 13.
Xenia or Sna.

The Reuerend Brother Tecla Maria, sonne of Tecla Nebiat, of the Citie Henza Mariam, of the Prouince of Xena, of the Kingdome of Ethiopia Priest and Monke, of the Order of Saint An- tonie, and of the Monastery Libanus of the same Prouince, aged fortie five yeeres, at the command of the most Illustrious, and most Reuerend Lord Cardinall of Saint Seuerine Protector of the E- thiopian Nation, to certaine interrogatories made in the Arabike to him, thus answered.

Of God & the Holy Trinity.

30 Being asked what the Ethiopiens beleue of God and the holy Trinitie, he answered; Wee beleeue in one God and three persons, the Father, Sonne, and Holy Ghost. The Father is vnbe-gotten, the Sonne begotten onely of the Father, the Holy Ghost proceeding from the Father and the Sonne. Being asked, whether the Holy Ghost proceeds from the Father and the Sonne, as from two beginnings, and two spirations, or as from one beginning and one spiration, he answered, As from one beginning, and one onely spiration. Being asked of the Incarnation, hee answered, That the Person of the Sonne, the Word of God the Father was incarnate by the Holy Ghost of the Virgin Mary.

40 Being asked how many Natures, Wills, and Operations the Ethiopiens professe to be in Christ our Lord, he answered, That the Ethiopiens beleue after the vnion one Nature, one Wil, & one Operation, yet without mixtion and without confusion: in which opinion he confesseth, that the Ethiopiens and Cophti, and other Easterne Nations erre from the truth. Being asked whether they hold one Nature in Christ resulting from two, hee answered, The Ethiopiens say not so, but simply professe one Nature without mixtion and without confusion, and affirme that to bee Diuine.

Abassines are Monothelites.

Being questioned of Images, he answered, That amongst the Ethiopiens they are onely painted and not carued or grauen, which the Ethiopiens haue in great veneration, in respect of representation and relation, and incense them. Being asked of the Canonickall Bookes of both Testaments, hee answered, That both the Testaments are diuided amongst them into eightie one Bookes, all which are had in Egypt, but without booke he could not remember their names.

Pictures incensed.

Canonickall
bookes 81.

50 Being asked how many Generall Councells they hold, he said; That they hold onely three, the Nicene, Constantinopolitan, and Ephesine, which he had read, but could not now recite. Touching the Chalcedon Councel, he said, They condemned it, because it determined two Natures in Christ, and condemned Dioscorus the Patriarke of Alexandria. How many vniuersall Councells were held after, he answered, He knew not.

Gen. Councels

60 He acknowledged seven Sacraments * instituted by Christ, Baptisme, Confirmation, the Eucharist, Penance, Vnction, Order, and Matrimony. Being asked in what formall words the Ethiopiens baptized, he answered, That after many prayers they say, I baptise thee in the name of the Father, and of the Sonne, and of the Holy Ghost: The matter, hee said, was naturall water; the Minister, a Priest, or in his absence a Deacon, besides whom hee neuer saw any to baptise: their Males after fortie dayes, and Females after eightie dayes, except in danger of death, and then they baptise presently. Being asked, whether the Ethiopiens circumcise their children: hee answered, That from ancientest time to this day in all Ethiopia, they circumcise their children in their owne houses without any Ceremony, but for a certaine ancient Custome, cutting away the Prepuce from the Males, the Nympha from the Females: being asked, whether they beleue Circumcision necessary to saluation, he answered, They know that it is now ceased, and that it is no longer necessary.

Sacraments.
* This Tecla
cometh neerer the Romish
Faith in diuers things then the Ethiopiens, as sup. 1. 7. c. 8.
perhaps for fear, perhaps of flattery.
Baptisme.
Circumcision
sary.

No baptisme with fire.

See sup. Aluares l. 7. c. 5. §. 14.
whom i rather beleue; but this man and Zaga Zabo whom Dam. a Goes published, and L.
Vrreta, daub ouer as well as they can, di-uers of the Ethiopian Superstitions, & yet this is more credible then Vrreta (a very dunghill of lies) and then Zaga Zabo (too thicke strewed therewith) for which cause I haue omitted them: whereas this in most things of moment saith the truth, but excuseth as farre
as hee may some of their Rites in Bap-tisme, Circumcision, &c.
Consecration.
Communion
in both kinds.
Children communicated.
Purgatory.
Locus alleuiatio-nis.
Soule-sleepe.

Mortall sinne.

Vniuersall
grace.

Indulgences.

Inuocation of Saints.

Simony.
Difference
twixt Abassines and Cophti.

sary. Being asked, why the *Ethiopi*ans are said to be baptised with fire, and to signe in the forehead: hee answered, That there is none in Ethiopia which is baptised with fire, but in some Prouinces onely they marke themselues with a razor in the forehead, either for the health of their eyes and sight; or, as some say, by the command of a certaine King of Ethiopia, to differ from the Mahumetans. Being asked why they baptise themselues euery yeere, he answered, That the *Ethiopi*ans euery yeere for the solemnitie of the Epiphanie goe forth to a Riuer, and there many prayers are said by the Priests, and all are washed in the Riuer; and many stay there all night with great festiuitie for deuotion of the Baptisme of our Lord Iesus Christ; but no man baptiseth himselfe as they say.

Being demanded of Confirmation, the Matter, the Forme, the Minister, he answered, Confirmation with vs is conferred by a Priest, together with Baptisme, and the Infant is anointed with Chrisme in the forehead, in the name of the Father, Sonne and Holy Ghost: asked of the effect thereof, he said he knew not, but hee beleueth that it is giuen, that a Christian may be confirmed in the faith. Being asked, whether Chrisme bee made amongst them euery yeere, hee answered; Chrisme is sent them from the Patriarch of Alexandria, by whom alone it is made and not by the Bishop, and is sent euery seuenth yeere and seldomer, with the Pilgrimes which returne from the pilgrimage of the Holy Land, and the old Chrisme is preserued in all Churches. Being asked whereof it was made, hee said, Of Balsam and Oyle, and of many Flowers and odoriferous things.

Being interrogated of the Sacrament of the Eucharist, and the matter thereof, hee answered, That the Matter is Bread of Bread-corne, and Wine of the Grape; but in many Prouinces of Ethiopia, in Wine pressed out of Raisins washed with water, and steeped in the same water the space of certaine houres. Being asked what are the words, whereby the Bread is transubstantiated into the Body, and the Wine into the Blood, he answered, They are those words when the Priest saith, And he tooke Bread in his hands, and lifting up his eyes to Heauen unto God his Father, he blessed, saying, Take yee and eate yee, this is my Body. And likewise taking the Chalice, he blessed and sanctified saying, Take yee and drinke yee. This is the Chalice of my Blood, which shall be shed for you for the remission of sinnes. The Minister, he said, is the Priest onely, and the effect remission of sinnes. Being asked whether all the *Ethiopi*ans are communicated in both kinds: he answered, That all the *Ethiopi*ans, both Clerkes and Laymen are communicated vnder both kinds: the Priest ministers the body, and the Deacon the blood in a spoone. Being asked whether Infants are communicated, hee answered, That Infants on the day of their baptisme are communicated in this manner: The Priest puts his fore-finger in the Chalice, and being dipped in the blood, he puts it in the Infants mouth. And after baptisme, till they be ten yeeres old, the Priests little finger is put in the childs mouth without the blood, for deuotio<sup>n</sup>s sake. Being asked, whether they celebrate in bread leauened or vnleauened, and what they thinke of him, which celebrates in vnleauened, he answered, The *Ethiopi*ans celebrate in leauened bread, & they which celebrate in vnleauened make the Sacrament also. And we throw all Ethiopia, on Mandie Thursday euerie yeere, in the Supper of the Lord, in memoriall hereof celebrate in vnleauened.

Being asked what the *Ethiopi*ans thinke of Purgatory, hee answered, The *Ethiopi*ans beleue that the soules after death are detained in a certaine place, called in the Ethiopian tongue Mecan aarast, that is, the Place of lightning, in which the soules of the penitent are kept, which haue departed out of the world, not hauing finished the satisfaction of their sinnes. Being asked whether the soules of the good presently after death enioy happinesse, and those of euill men bee punished in Hell, Hee answered, There are some in Ethiopia, which thinke that the soules of the good rest in Paradise terrestriall in which Adam was created, vntill the Day of Iudgement. There are others which beleue that the soules of the iust, presently after death enioy their Creator in Paradise.

Also being asked what sinnes, and how many are mortall, he answered, Those are mortall sinnes which are done against the Lords commandements, which are so many that I cannot number. Being asked whether the sinnes of the Will, which passe not into outward act, bee mortall, Hee answered, they are mortall, when a man hath giuen consent to the desire and concupiscence.

Being asked whether any man can be saued without the faith of Iesus Christ, the Mediator of God and men; he answered, None can be saued. Being asked of them which are now in the law of nature, to whom no knowledge of the Gospell hath comne; he answered, I beleue that God also hath provided for them, that by some meanes they may be saued, when they shall haue kept the precepts of Nature. Being asked what the *Ethiopi*ans thinke of Indulgences, hee answered, I beleue they are acceptable amongst all, and they call them Benedictions, but I desire to vnderstand the vse of them. Being asked of Inuocation of Saints, hee answered, that the Inuocation of Saints is very well approued amongst the *Ethiopi*ans, and all doe professe their intercession with God.

Being asked of Simony, and of those which by fauour or compact are ordained Priests, Bishops, or Patriarch; he answered, that it is forbidden by the holy Canons.

Being asked what difference there is betwixt the *Ethiopi*ans and the Cophti, in matters of faith; he

he answered, that there is no difference betwixt them, and they agree in all things; for they are vnder the obedience of the same Patriarch. But in some things I haue seene them to differ; namely, the Ethiopians contract not in degrees prohibited; But the Cophiti contract in the second, and the degrees after it euery where with license, and without the license of their Bishop and Patriarch. Also the Cophiti in the Country and Villages keepe no Lords daies, nor holy daies, but onely in Cities, which the Ethiopians doe euery where. Also the Ethiopians keepe the Sabbath (or Saturday holy) which the Cophiti doe not. Also the Ethiopians euery where thorow all Ethiopia circumsise their Sonnes and Daughters; but some Cophiti, onely at Cairo within these few yeeres circumsise not. Also in the ceremonies of the Masse the Cophiti differ much from the Ethiopians; For the Priests of the Cophiti celebrate without the Vestments called Planeta, and the Deacons without the Dalmatic Vestments, & with their head couered with a wollen Tobalea, and neuer eleuate the Lords body and the Chalice in their Masses; which ceremonies are not amongst the Ethiopians. Being demanded if he knew in what things the Ethiopians and Cophiti differ from the faith of the holy Catholike Roman Church; hee answered, they differ principally in these things. They inuocate Dioscorus of Alexandria, and Iames the first his Disciple; and Senerus Antiochenus in the Churches with the holy Fathers. They receiue not the Chalcedon Councell, and Saint Leo Pope. They professe in Christ our Lord one onely Nature, will, and operation. They recite the thrice holy Hymne with addition of those words, which was crucified for vs; yet with this exposition that the three sanctifications be applied to the most holy Trinitie, & those words, which was crucified for vs, onely to our Lord Christ. The Cophiti and Ethiopians vse circumcision, and these also obserue the Sabbath.

Note.

Holy, holy, holy.

Holy Orders.

Iosephus Cophiti

Popish rites of giuing Orders.

Being asked when, where, of whom and what orders he had taken: hee answered, when I was fifteene yeeres old, in the Church of Saint Mary in the Monasterie of Denob of the Prouince Xena in Ethiopia, I was entered in orders by Ioseph a Cophite, Archbishop of Ethiopia, in this manner: The Archbishop before the celebration of Masse shaued my head in five places, in forme of a crosse, and annointed me with Chrisme in the forehead, reciting praiers in the Egyptian tongue, and breathed in my face; and the same houre, in time of the celebration, made me an Oltiary, and Lector or Psalmist, and Acolyte, and Nefcadeacon or Subdeacon, and Deacon of the Gospell, and gaue me the holy Communion: and a long time after, when I was thirty yeeres old, in the Citie Bed in Dembia of Ethiopia, in the Church of Saint George, I was ordered Priest by Archbishop Marke, the successeur of the said Ioseph. Being asked whether hee heard the Archbishop vtter in collating orders, the formall words of each order; he answered, The Archbishop vttered them, but I heard not, nor vnderstood, becaute he celebrated in the Egyptian tongue, whereof I was vtterly ignorant. Being asked whether any materiall was deliuered by the Archbishop in collation of each order, and whether he touched the same with his hands; namely, whether in making him Oltiary the Keyes of the Church, and opened the doore, and sounded the Bell; in the Lectorship, the Booke of Lessons, or touched the Psalmist, in exorcistship the booke of exorcisme or Missall; in Acolythship the Candlesticke, with the candle put out and an emptie pot; in Subdeaconship, the empty Chalice with an empty patene ouer it, and pots with wine and water, and the basen with a towell, and the Booke of the Epistles, and whether the Amice was by the Archbishop put on his head, and the maniple on his left arme, and whether hee was vested with the Tunicle: and in his Deaconship, whether he touched the Booke of the Gospels, and the stole was put on his shoulder, and he vested with the Dalmatike: and in being orderd Priest whether he touched the Chalice with wine and water, and the patene with the hoste, and whether the Archbishop and Priests imposed hands on his head, and whether the stole was applied to his breast in manner of a crosse, and whether he put on the casule without the planet, and had his hands touched with the Oyle of the Catechumeni: He answered, I certainly know, that I in all the said orders had no materiall or instrument deliuered me by the Archbishop in collation of the Orders, nor did I touch any such, nor was I vested with any vestiment peculiar to any order, nor did the Archbishop impose hands on me, nor were my hands annointed with holy Oyle. He said also, our Archbishop in Ethiopia giueth orders to 2000. and more at one time, and to each giues fixe orders together, without examination before, and without enquire, examination, choise, approbation, writing, or register, and in regard of the multitude, cannot giue to each and euery of them any materiall to be touched: and in the same manner it is obserued in all ordinations by our Archbishops successiuelly; although it be otherwise obserued in Egypt, where so great a multitude is not ordered at once together, and some competent matter is deliuered to be touched of the ordained. Being asked whether he knew the said Ioseph and Marke, Bishops aforesaid, to haue beene Schismatickes, and without the communion of the holy Roman Church: he answered, that hee knew not so much. Yea, he rather certainly beleued at that time, that they were Catholikes, as also all the Ethiopians and Cophiti, and that they obeyed the Apostolike See in all things, and held communion with the holy Roman Church; and beleued that all Christians did agree in matters of Faith; but he learned the things before said, when afterwards hee was at Ierusalem and in Egypt.

Relations of the Iacobites and Armenians, written by LEONARD Bishop of Sidon, Pope GREGORIE the 13. his Nuncio to the Easterne parts.

Iacobites numbers.

Their Bishops.

Monasteries and Churches.

Rites.

Armenians. Their Patriarks.

Their numbers

Preachers or Masters.

Romish Armenians.

Second Patriarch.

The Iacobite Nation is dispersed thorow the Cities, Lands, and Townes of Syria, Mesopotamia and Babylonia, obtaining the number of 50000. houses, most of them poore, and living on daily labour. In Aleppo and Caramit are many rich families which live on Merchandise. Their Patriarchall Church is in Mesopotamia without the Citie of Moradim, in the Monastery Zafra; but the Patriarch resideth for his greater commoditie and quiet in the Citie Caramit. This Nation is subiect to the Patriarch David, but is governed of the Bishop Thomas, Vicar Generall and brother to the said Patriarch. Under whose obedience live at this time John the Metropolitan of Ierusalem, by the Iacobites stiled the fifth Patriarch: Michael Archbishop of Damasco, James Archbishop of Edessa called Orfa, or Raha. Mimas Archbishop of Saur, Effrem Archbishop in the same Prouince, James Archbishop of Bisuaris, Abraham Bishop of Asafra, Melchez Bishop of Saint Melchi in Tur, Iesu Bishop of the Monasterie Deiriloemor, Abelmedich in the Prouince of Tur, Elias Bishop in Salach, Elias Bishop of the Monasterie Saint Crosse in Zaz, Gazel Bishop in Tarach, David Bishop in Maaden, Pilas Metropolitan in Musal and the East Gazel Archbishop of Miaferichin, the Archbishop of the Monasterie of Mar Abibai, Ananias Bishop of Saint Bertonias, John Bishop of Hartbert, Isaac Archbishop of Cyprus, Simeon Archbishop of Caramit, Habib. There are many Monasteries of the same Nation, Churches, Religions, and Deacons, and Clergie men innumerable, which I could not visit, being reiected by the said Vicar Generall Thomas: Yet I visited the Temple of the Iacobites in Tripoli, Ammasir, Damasco, Neph, Ierusalem, Aleppo, Orfa, Orbis, Mar Abibai, Gargar, amongst the Churches of which parts I found those of Ierusalem and Aleppo well furnished, but the rest without Images and ill governed. For the Sacrament was kept in wodden pyxes without light or lampe; and the baptisfmal Funt wanted water, for at euery baptisme they blesse the Funt anew: the ornaments of the Altars also were most vile, and the office of the Masse was performed verie basely and carelesly. Of the holy Oyles, onely Chrisme was kept in Churches: this is called Miron and is blessed of the Patriarch euery seventh yeere with many flowers and odoriferous things. They haue not the Oile of the Catichumeni, and for the Oile of extreame vnction, the Priest blesseth it in lights set on foure parts in manner of a crosse, and therewith anoints the sicke, after many Gospels and Praiers recited. The Sacrament of Confession is rarely frequented, and many communicate without auricular confession. The Patriarch professed that they held the same in substance with the Roman Church, but the Greekes and Latines could not attemper such words and tearmes as the Iacobites in those things had done.

Of the Armenians the said Bishop of Sidon testifieth, that they are subiect to two principall Patriarkes, one of Armenia the Greater, the other of Armenia the lesse. The former resideth in the Monastery and Church of Ecmeazin, neere the Citie Ernan in Persia: the other in the Citie Cis of Cilicia, now called Caramania. Other Patriarkes are sometimes by the fauour of the Turks created amongst them, and are exacters of Tributes which the Armenian Families are bound to pay the Turkes. Others also are elected Coadiutors of the same Patriarkes with consent of the Bishops and people. Further there are others, Primates or rather Patriarkes of the same Nation in the remotest parts of Persia & in Constantinople, which although legally they are subiect to the Patriarke of Armenia maior, yet sometimes doe not acknowledge him. The Families subiect to the Patriarke of the Greater Armenia exceed the number of 150000. besides very many Monasteries, Bishops, Religious persons and Deacons. Their Preachers are called Mortabiti, and are obeyed by the people, as the Patriarke himselfe. In the Prouince Nenuam, in Persia also, in two Cities there live Catholike Armenians subiect to an Archbishop of the Dominican Order, and other Friars of that profession, which obserue the Latine Rites, and live vnder the obedience of the Roman See.

The Patriarke of Armenia Minor hath vnder his Iurisdiction foure and twentie Prelates, Archbishops and Bishops, and the Election of the Patriarke belongs to 12. Bishops neerer the Patriarchall Church. Yet sometimes the Armenian people by fauour and command of the Turkish Officers create their Patriarks, and after obtaine the consent of the Bishops and Archbishops, and by the fauour of the principall people, a Coadiutor with future succession is deputed to him, who of a Master and Preacher, after the death of the said predecessor, is receiued and confirmed by the people for Patriarke. To this Patriarke are subiect about 20000. Families; and they live in the Villages, Castles and Cities of Cilicia and Syria: there are twentie Monasteries each containing 100. Religious, 300. Priests, Deacons and Clokes many, which live of Almes, and of their owne industry.

§. III.

Of SIMON SULAKA a Papall Easterne Patriarke amongst the Chaldeans: and of diuers others thither sent. Of ABDESU, AATALLA, DONHA his Successours.

10 Amongst the Asian Nestorians, there haue beene some Roman Catholikes which haue exhibited obedience to the Pope. Some of those which professed Simon Sulaka, a Monke of Saint Basil's Order to be their Superiour, calling themselves Chaldeans and Assyrians, acknowledged Pope Iulius the Third, and reiected the name of Nestorians. Sulaka was by the Pope confirmed Patriarke of that Nation with the Title of Mozal, which Church his aduersary possessed. He returned to Caramit, and there ordained certaine Archbishops and Bishops, and reiected the Nestorian Inuocation, which at that time was vsually made by the Deacon in the Church. He sought to spread the Roman faith, but by the policy of the Antipatriarke Dry he was taken and slaine by the Turkes. The confession of faith by the same Sulaka made at Rome is extant in Bibliotheca Patrum.

20 The Bishop Arienfis a Dominican was sent by the Pope to visit and confirme this Church, who hauing reformed some things, was driuen with some Assyrians to flee to Ormus and Goa, where hee dyed.

30 His companion Frier Anthony, with the Archbishop Ermetes Elias Disciple of Sulaka, visited many Christians in Cochin and India of Saint Thomas, and after his returne was made a Bishop by the Pope. To Sulaka succeeded Abdesu of the same order of Saint Basil, which was at the Council of Trent vnder Pope Pius the Fourth, & from him carried with him the Title of Mozal, and returning to Caramit and Seert, ordained many Priests, Bishops and Archbishops, and many Cities of the Chaldees yeelded him obedience, but soone after hee died in the Monastery of the City Seert: and Aatalla a brother of the same Order succeeded, and after him Donha Simon the Archbishop of Gelu and Salamas renounced the Antipatriarke, and was elected Patriarke by the Prelates of that Nation, and confirmed by Gregorie the Thirteenth, to whom he sent Archbishop Ermes Elias in his name to exhibit obedience. Who returned with his Patriarchall Pall from Rome 1582. But hitherto they haue nothing of Mozal but the Title, the other Patriarke possessing the See, and they are glad to seeke a place of residence where they can, as at Caramit, and this last at Zeinalbach. The richest and mightiest of that Nation are at Mozal and Gesire, and acknowledge the other Patriarke, lately called Elias, resident in the Patriarchall Monastery of Saint Ermes neere Mozal. He hath vnder him two and twentie Bishops. about sixe hundred Territories, of which two and twentie are flourishing Cities, each contayning five hundred Nestorian Families, and in Masul 1000. each hauing about fortie persons: the other Territories haue two or three hundred Nestorian Families. They haue thirtie Monasteries of Saint Anthony's Order in which fiftene or twentie Monkes liue: and in that of the Patriarke seuentie. 40 The Patriarke and Bishops must bee Monkes They extend to Baldach and the East Indies.

I feare the Popish multiplication making great harvests of little corne: yet I here recite what I finde, and wish that all Nestorians would abandon those heresies, and in that point be Roman and Catholike. Dryne Patriarch.

I thinke hee meaneth Saint Thomas Christians in India. Abdesu or Abilisu.

Of these Nestorians, see Rubriques, Polo, &c. in To 2. l. 1. & Breuements Enquiries following.

§. IIII.

Of the Cophti, their Synod at Cairo, the Iesuites being the Popes Agents, and of STEPHEN COLINZAS message to the Georgians, and two Iesuites sent to the Maronites.

50 Pope Gregorie the Thirteenth sent diuers messages to the Cophti, whereby a Synod was procured at Cairo, in December 1582. which had three Sessions to reconcile them to the Roman Church. At the first were present Bishops and principall men. At the third, the same men, with the Iesuites, especially Iohn Baptista Romanus. In the first were opened the causes of their defection in the Conuenticule of Ephesus assembled by Dioscorus, whereby Eutyches his Heresie which denied two natures in Christ was begun, condemned after in the Chalcedon Council. They desired to search their Writings which were few and eaten with Age. And in the second Session was much alteration, and the matter put off to the third. In that third the Law of Circumcision was abrogated first; and after that Anathema was denounced against such as should spoile Christ of either. Yet for all this the Vicar of the Patriarke then being, 60 resisted the subscribing, and a quarrell was picked by the Turkes against the Popes Agents, as if they sought to subiect the East, to the Pope, or the King of Spaine. They were therefore cast into Prison, and their redemption cost 5000. Crownes.

At Cairo is a Librarie in which are kept many Bookes of the ancient Doctors in Arabike, as of Saint Ierome, Gregorie Nazianzene, Saint Basil, &c. and the men haue good wits, and some there- by

Synod. at Cairo.

I. B. R. Romanus a Iesuite.

by proove learned. In the time of Pope Clement the Eighth, Marke the Patriarke sent a Submission to the Pope, as was pretended; but it prooved to be the Imposture of one Barton.

King of Georgia his letter to the Pope.
Paul the Third also sent to the Georgians, Anno 1545. Stephen Colynza elect of Nequian in Armeni, his Nuncio to the Kings of Georgia and Armenia. The Georgian King writ backe to the Pope, his Letter beginning. Miseratione Dei Symeon Rex Cardely totius Iberia & Orientis. Excelsa & splendissime, & sanctissime, & beatissime Domine noster, Pater noster & Papa, Pastor Pastorum, Princeps Principum, & decime tertie Apostolorum, Pater noster & Papa Magna Roma, aurea tuba, organum Dei inflatum, Petro index & clauicularie Regni caelestis, Paule Doctor gentium, qui ascendit usq; ad tertium caelum, &c. Hee proceedeth in twelling Titles of vanitie ascribed to the Pope, and saith so much that all his zeale and profession was spent, as it seemeth, in that Epistle; for little effect hath since appeared.

Seminarie of Maronites.
Poore Priests.
Their old rites.
L. 86. 6. 1. 9. 6. 9.
Pope Clement the Eighth sent two Iesuites with a Bishop to the Maronites in Mount Libanus, Hierom Dandin a Diuine being principall. The cause of sending was, that it might by the eyes be discerned, whether the costs bestowed at Rome on the Seminary of Maronites were well bestowed. The Pope sent the Patriarch a whole Vestiment of Silke wrought with Gold for a Patriarchall Masse, and many Chifts of Bookes in the Chaldean Tongue printed in the Citie, containing the Lyturgies of Saint James, Saint Peter, and Saint Sixtus, they hauing no Bookes but written, and thole torne or erroneous: with Seruice-bookes to God and the Blessed Virgin. For they vie the Chaldee Tongue as wee doe the Latine. Out of the Seminary was sent one to bee a Coadiutor to the Patriarch and made Bishop, and another Coadiutor to him in his Bishopricke. Their common Language is Arabike. The Pope sent also siluer Chalice, and Iron Instruments to make the Hosts and sacred Vests for other Priests by the said Dandin. He staid two monethes with his companion a Priest, in the Monasterie of the Patriarke, in which time the old Patriarke died, and the other was substituted by a Synod according to the custome. The Patriarkes performed all kind Offices to the Iesuites, as did also the Monkes which lye sparingly, eating little but Rice, Herbs and Broth. The Priests lue single, but are addicted to no Studies of Learning, and spend the rest of their time in tilling the ground, or stirring vp others thereto, that they may haue to lue on, and to pay their Tributes. Their women are very modest and chaste, neither haue they any mercenary Harlots. They haue a place at the entrance of the Church by themselves and when Seruice is done they depart first, no man stirring till they be all gone. Dandin altered, diuers things amongst them, as to reserve some cales to the Bishop or Patriarch, not to constrain Priests to marrie before they tooke Orders, that some of the Seruiarians should be appointed on some Holy dayes to preach, and write cases for others to learne, where as before they had no Sermons, but sometimes a Homily; to vse no other Missals then such as had beene sent from Rome; that other Bookes should bee examined; not (as before) to admit Children to the Eucharist, &c.

He which will read more of these Maronites, may read out of themselves and others in this Worke, as also touching them and all other Christians in the East in Master Brerewoods Enquirie hereto annexed: also Thomas a Iesu our Author is farre more ample in these things, then agreeeth with our scope. I thought good yet to addc out of a Manuscript aboue a doozen yeeres since communicated to me by the Right Reuerend Father in God Doctor Vsher, Lord Bishop of Meath, copied out of a Iesuites written Catalogue of Heresies, these Errours as they are there recited by the Iesuite, and gathered out of the Maronites Bookes

Errores ex libris Maronitarum excerpti 1580. sunt
autem huiusmodi.

- |    |  |    |  |    |
|----|--|----|--|----|
| 1  | Christus caput est diuinitatis.  |    | sunt, aut in proprijs corporibus detinentur, vel | 50 |
| 2  | In Christo una tantum est natura.  |    | circa sepulchrum, vel descendunt ad locum te-    |    |
| 3  | In Christo una tantum est operatio, una voluntas.  |    | nebrosum, pro meritorum vel demeritorum di-      |    |
| 4  | Natura inuisibilis in Christo est passa.   |    | uersitate.                                       |    |
| 5  | Trinitas est passa.  | 11 | In die iudicii noua corpora animabus crea-       |    |
| 6  | Trisagium recitandum est cum illa additione,Qui crucifixus est pro nobis.  |    | buntur.  |    |
| 7  | Christus non est mortuus ut alij homines.  | 12 | Spiritus sanctus a patre procedit.               |    |
| 8  | Christus descendens ad inferos omnes filios Adaliberauit.  | 13 | Baptismus non debet ministrari nisi a Sacer-     |    |
| 9  | Christus post resurrectionem unam habet na-turam.  |    | doto.  |    |
| 10 | Anima sanctorum patrum deducta sunt aChristo ad Paradisum terrestrem: animavero eorum qui nunc moriuntur, aut illuc tra- | 14 | Apostata, ut heretici, sunt rebaptizandi.        |    |
|    |  | 15 | Emergentes non sunt baptisandi, nisi mortui      | 60 |
|    |  |    | articulo.  |    |
|    |  | 16 | Masculus in baptismo non debet suscipere fo-     |    |
|    |  |    | minam, nec e contra.                             |    |
|    |  | 17 | Baptismus non debet dari in quadragesima.        |    |

- |   |  |
|---|--|
| 18 Parvulus baptizatus non debet tangi à matre que patitur fluxum sanguinis ne eum polluat. 19 Mater non potest lactare suum infantem ratione chrysmatis cum est baptizatus. 20 Angelus custos tribuitur in baptismo homini. 21 Chryσμα debet confici ex varijs rebus, &amp; coqui igne ex q<sup>uo</sup> libis facto. 22 Forma confirmationis hac est. Vngo te hoc chrysmate in vitam eternam, ut sis heres regni celestis in nomine P. F. &amp; S. S. 10 23 Sanguis Christi potest consecrari ex aqua, ex vniis siccis expressa. 24 Summus Episcopus potest consecrare sanguinem sine corpore. 25 Forma consecrationis hac est. Benedixit &amp; divisit unicuique discipulorum partem, &amp; fecit ut essent, corpus Dominicum, quod datur in vitam mundi in remissionem peccatorum. Item benedixit &amp; sanctificavit, &amp; divisit aequaliter ad bibendum illum Apostolis suis electis, &amp; fecit possidere illum sanguinem viz. novum Testamentum Discipulos suos. 20 26 Sub speciebus panis &amp; vini est corpus &amp; sanguis sed non anima Christi. 27 Eucharistia consecranda feria quinta in Cena Domini, debet consecrari per totum annum. 28 Sacerdos qui nunquam celebrat, non peccat. 29 Licet sacrum facere super librum Evangelij. 30 Qui non est dispositus ad communicandum, non debet sacro interesse. 30 31 Dignius sumit Eucharistiam infans quam adultus. 32 Infantes Christi sanguinem sumere debent. 33 Impedit communionem digitum ori insuisse, aut os abluisse. 34 Absolvere penitentes est super eius caput recitare orationem Dominicam. 35 Impositio manuum Apostolorum super baptizatos erat absolutio à peccatis. 36 Peccata minima sunt aperienda in confessione. 40 37 Peccata spiritualia ne in mortis articulo dimitti possunt. 38 Mali Sacerdotes non habent usum clavium. 39 Post mortem redditur ratio commissorum peccatorum ab anno 12. 40 Olenm extrema unctionis debet benedici à 7. Sacerdotibus. 41 Matrimonium in lege veteri erat institutum tantum ob prolem. 50 42 Matrimonium non est validum sine Sacerdotis benedictione. | 43 44 Non potest pater &amp; filius contrahere cum matre &amp; filia, vel duo fratres cum duabus sororibus. 45 Quarta nuptia &amp; deinceps sunt illicitæ. 46 Ob multas causas licet uxorem dimittere, &amp; aliam ducere. 47 Vsum Matrimonij in Quadragesima est peccatum irremissibile. 48 Paradisus terrestris fuit creatus ante omnia. 49 Adam fuit formatus ex terra Paradisi. 50 Adam &amp; Eva ante peccatum erant circumdasi pelle, ut non posset cognosci virum mas vel femina esset. 51 Sacerdos erat Abel &amp; non Cain, &amp; ideo Deus placuit illi Sacrificium, non huius. 52 Nos tempore diluvij in Arca sacrificavit. 53 Filij Israel qui adorabant vitulum, &amp; biberunt eius pulverem, mugebant ut boves. 54 Iudæi in deserto ferebant lapidem secum in quo 12. fontes manabant. 55 Christus factus est Sacerdos à Iohanne Baptista. 56 Maria apparuit Christus in forma hortulani. 57 Apostoli usq; ad Pentecostem fuerunt in statu peccati. 58 Christus fecit Apostolos Diaconos cum insufflavit eis Job. 20. Sacerdotes vero cum ascendit in Cælum. 59 Anima Beata Virginis fuit primum omnium creata. 60 Omnes credentes, etiam heretici sunt in statu salutis. 61 Non licet occidere hominem etiam publica auctoritate. 62 Deus promisit Moysi visionem divinitatis coniunctam cum anima Christi, quo modo solus est visibilis divinitas. 63 Sancti patres in limbo carebant spe exeuendi. 64 Dammati non torquentur die Dominica. 65 Damnatorum poena mitigatur per sacrificia. 66 Ioseph sponsus Beate Virginis habuit quatuor filios. 67 Virginitas non est preponenda matrimonio. 68 Mendacium officiosum licitum est. 69 Iudæi coegerunt Beatam Virginem potare aquam amaram propter suspicionem adulterij. 70 Dies Veneris est celebrandus ut Dominicus. 71 Pharaon non meretur penam, quod Deus cor eius induraverit. 72 Vestes Sacerdotales si lacerentur &amp; id genus alia, amittunt consecrationem. |
|---|--|

I have hither also translated some observations of Christopher Angelos a Greeke Monke and Priest, which hath lived many yeeres in England, and some five yeeres since gave mee a Greeke Booke printed by him in London, touching their present Rites, both in their Churches and Monasteries. Many things I could have added touching the Greekes, and their moderne Language, State and Religion, out of Crusius, Ieremias the Patriarke and others. But this man being a Traveller, I chose rather to let you heare him in that wherein he hath bene bred. As for dogmaticall differences you have had them before, and the present Greekes are not ordinarily so learned as to give you a perfect account thereof.

It was printed also in Latine at Cambridge.

V.

Of the condition of life in which the Greekes now liue, and of their rites of Feasts, Feasts, and other obseruations, gathered out of the Booke of

CHRISTOPHEROS ANGELOS, a Greekish Monke and Priest.

Simple fillinesse: either of this Monke or of this Nation!
Or rather base courage palliated with Scripture misapplied. The true cause is,
that they, weakened by diuisions amongst themselves & from the Latines; and not assisted from Princes abroad were not able to hold out. An obscure Prophetic ought not to hold mens hands,, except they will be treacherous to their state; for Gods will reuealed is the rule of our actions; vailed prophecies can but foretellithe euents, being not terrible till then, and therefore not eligible, as Gods rule, not ours, intimating what hee wills, and not what we ought Deut. 29.
Diuers tributes to the Turke.
Tithing of their children.
Another fashion.

He ancient Gracian heard Iohn the Euangelist speaking in the thirteenth of the Apoc. and first verie. And I saw a beast rise out of the Sea, and power was granted him to make warre with the Saints, and to overcome them, and power was ginen him ouer euery Kindred and Tongue, and Nation; and all that dwelt upon the Earth worshipped him, whose names are not written in the Booke of Life of the Lambe, who was slaine from the beginning of the World: if any man haue an eare let him heare. If any leade into captivity, he shall goe into captiuitie: if any kill with a sword hee must be killed with the sword, and that which followeth. The Greekes hauing this prophesie and many others of this kind of holy men, when they saw the Turkes come, said, This is the Beast, that Saint Iohn speaketh of, and would not fight with the Turke. They fought a little in the beginning, but afterward yeelded; and for this were not carried away captiues. In like manner they carried all their goods with them, and bought all of the King of the Turkes. This thing also did the Monkes, and redeemed their Monasteries, and fields, and houses, and whatsoeuer they possessed before. Therefore to this day, they retaine all their old Bookes, and obteine their Countrey Lawes, and liue as the Christians and Monkes in former ages, if the Christians shall at any time get the superioritie. But let vs returne to our purpose.

Each of the Males pay Tribute to the Turkish King, as likewise the women: that is to say, that the men dwelling in one house from twentie yeeres, and vpwards pay yeerely six shillings. But if they be striplings, that is to say, fiftene yeeres old they pay three only, if they are passed fiftene, pay foure or fise, till they come to the age of twentie yeeres. They will giue this tax, because the Lord saith, be wise as Serpents. They are mindfull also that Iohn saith, Apoc. 7. 14. Those are those which came out of great tribulation, and washed their garments, and made them white in the blood of the Lambe. Moreover, they pay another custome. That is to say, when the Army goeth to warre; they are wont to contribute certaine pieces of monie, to buy bread and flesh, to sustaine the Armie, they doe not yet all equally pay this: but sometimes twentie, sometimes ten shillings in euery house, sometimes more hauing respect to the Armie. But all the houses doe not contribute alike in this as in the former. In that the rich and poore pay the same summe, in this no man giues beyond his abilitie. There is also another dutie: to wit, when the Kings spies are sent to exact Tribute of the Christians, in the iourney the Christians which dwel there, allow them victuals. And thus much concerning their Tributes.

The tithing of their children is in this manner. When at first the Turke exercised authoritie ouer the Greekes, in euery Citie & Prouince he took an account of the houses, and euery fourth yeere, of ten houses took one of their children. There was at that time in one Citie a hundred households of ten times ten household he chuseth one. Afterwards after that foure yeeres were expired, he took ten other children of the second, that is to say, of the next house, not of that former whereof he tooke before. And so they doe euery foure yeeres vntill all the houses bee finished. And then againe they beginne to take children at the first house, vntill they returne againe to the first. After forty yeeres are past they returne againe to the first house, and after this manner they doe with the other Houses, Cities and Prouinces. They haue another vniust custome of gathering children, that is to say, when the Ianizaries goe from the King to gather Boyes through the Prouince, that is subiect to them, where they ought to gather them: Passing through the Prouince as many Boyes as they find in the way, they take without tithing, saying, those Boyes are our prey. But if it happen, that any children among them that are vniustly taken, bee of those houses, which are to giue a Boy, then they will take no other Boy of those houses, whereof that Boy was, because they may not take two Boyes out of one house in the same yeere; therefore when the Boyes fathers heare that the Ianizaries come to gather Boyes, they hide their Boyes before they come, some in Mountaines, some in the houses of the great men that are Turkes, because those Rulers are Citizens, and the Greekes friends, and therefore desire to keepe the Greekes sonnes safe, and after they restore againe their sonnes, sometimes the Boyes flie into the Mountaines, and the Ianizaries take the Boyes Father or Mother, and punish them with death. And when the children heare that their parents are punished, they come of their owne accord, and are deliuered: sometimes the childrens parents die of the punishment for their sonnes, and thus much concerning their children.

Greek Lent four in euery yeere.
First Lent.

The Greekes obserue foure Lents euery yeere. The first is called the great and holy Lent: this continues eight and forty dayes together before Easter. They fast in that holy Lent eating dry things for the tithing of their soule. On Annuntiation day they eate fish, and feast for ioy of the Annuntiation, therefore there remaine only fise and thirtie daies for the tithing of the yeere, which which are five times seven, which make five and thirtie daies. Because that for seven weekes together they fast before Easter, five daies in euery weeke, that is to say, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday: they fast not on Saturday and Sunday, because they eate Oile and drinke Wine twice in a day, therefore they are not called fasting daies, but only after a sort. Some of the Laicks in those five daies of the weeke eate Oile, and drinke Wine, because they respect not the tithing of soules

Saturday and Sunday not fasting.

The Fasts of the Monkes differ from the Laicks fasts; for the Laicks may sometimes eate Oile, and drinke Wine in those five daies, and haue absolution of the spirituall (Priest) when they confesse to him their particular sinnes. But the Monkes may not eate Oile, nor drinke Wine those five daies: for when they confesse, they are punished according to the Canons, vnlesse they haue some diseale, or some other necessitie.

Their second Lent, is called the Lent of dayes, because they fast fortie daies together before Christmasse. They fast in those daies, first, in the honour of Christ: Secondly, because Moses fasted forty dayes, and then merited (or obtained) to conuerse with God: and receiue the stonie Tables of the Decalogue. To our example. Moses fasted there forty daies, that he might speake with God and receiue the Tables. But we fast so many daies, that wee may meete Christ borne for our sinnes, as the Wise men did with gifts, and as the shepherds spake with the Angels, and were thought worthy to see an Armie of Angels, and to worship Christ. Wee also confessing our sinnes, and fasting and keeping vnder our bodie, worship Christ.

Second or Advent Lent.

20 The third Lent is called the Lent of the holy Apostles Peter and Paul. It beginnes one weeke after Whitsontide; and continues to the nine and twentieth day of the month of Iune, that is to say, to the Feast of Peter and Paul.

Third Lent.

Their fourth Lent beginnes from the first day of August, and continues to the fourteenth day of the same month, because on the 15. day they celebrate a great Feast to the Virgin Mary, who on that day ascended from Earth to Heauen, from corruptible things to incorruptible, and went to her Sonne, and to her God and our Lord Iesus Christ and our God, Amen: in her honour they fast fourteene daies.

Fourth Lent. Assumption.

30 But these fasts differ from the great Lent, for in the Lent of Christmasse, and of Peter and Paul, they eate fish twice in a day: but in our Ladies Lent they eate no fish, yet they eate twice a day.

Difference of fasts in Lent.

They beginne to fast after this manner: the tenth Sunday before Easter Sunday, to wit, the ninth weeke before Easter; that Weeke is called, the calling weeke, and the Sunday of the Publican and the Pharisee, for on the tenth Sunday they reade the Gospel of the Publican and the Pharisee, that they may learne humilitie, and abase themselves, and not iudge and condemne others; as the Pharisee iudged the Publican and was punished; and they sing at Ennsong, and the day following before day (that is, the tenth Sunday before Easter) these Songs, with a great and drie voice, and very often melodiously, so that all may heare: Let vs auoid the Pharisees boasting, let vs learne the Publicans lowlinesse, and others of this kind: and they confesse their sinnes, and pardon the wrongs of their Enemies, that they may be pure in heart when they begin to fast. The following Sunday (which is the ninth Sunday before Easter, and the eighth weeke, that Sunday is called the Sunday of the second comming, and the iudgement of our Lord Iesus Christ) wherefore on this day they read the Gospell, then they shall see the Sonne of man comming in the clouds; and the rest that followes. And the Prophecie of Daniel the Prophet, viz. Behold the thrones were set, and the ancient of daies sat downe, and the Bookes were opened to iudgement. And they read in the Church these words of Christ, and of the Prophecie of Daniel singing with a drie and great voice, so that all may heare and many tremble, for all heare, that iudgement and vengeance is at hand. They feast verie much this Sunday, and giue manie almes, and procure friendship with their enemies, and will neuer iudge nor backbite them after they are made friends, nor remember the iniurie so long as they liue, because Paul saith, neither thiefe, nor euill speaker, &c. shall inherit the Manner of fasting.

40 Kingdome of God. This is called Shrouesunday, because on this day is an inhibition from flesh; for in the day following (that is) Monday, they begin to fast onely from flesh, and eate Egges, Milke, Cheese, Butter, and such kinde of meates; that come from flesh all the weeke, but on Saturday and Sunday, which is called the eighth Sunday before Easter, and the seventh weeke before Easter.

O Vtinam.

60 The eighth Sunday before Easter is called Cheese saturday, because they eate Cheese and Egges, and all kindes of white meates: and the Greekes doe greatly reiect this day, because the day following (that is to say) Monday, they begin to fast. The day is called the fall of Adam, because on that day is read the fall of Adam; that is, how Adam and Eue ate of the Tree of knowledge, and for that vnbridled lust of eating, were cast out of Paradise; because they neglected the ordinance of God, therefore they were banished, and because after the fall of Adam then went out of Paradise, and mourned because hee was deceiued, by his curled desire to eate, and was so made the seruant of the Diuell, therefore they giue large almes, and commiserate their enemies (as we said before) and now they doe these things that they may be pure in heart, when they begin to fast: But they begin to fast on Munday, to wit, the the first day of the seventh weeke before Easter, and they fast five daies, viz. Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, but they fast eating dry things, that is to say, they eat Beanes, Pease, with Vinegar they boile Herbes in water, and eat them with Vinegar, Raisons, Figges, dried Apples, dried Peares, dried Cherries, and Honie. These they boile altogether in water: they eat the Fruit, but drinke the broth as wine, &c. On Saturday and Sunday (which is called the Lords day, they eat Oile, and drinke Wine: and after this manner they liue euerie weeke yntill Easter.

Two weekly.
fast: Wednesday & Friday.

They fast also two daies euerie weeke throughout the whole yeere, viz. Wednesday and Friday. They fast on Wednesday, because on that day Iudas tooke monie to betray Christ, and they are afflicted with Christ by fasting. But on Friday they fast because Christ was crucified, and they are in heaviness with Christ, because he saith, when the Bridegroom shall be taken from them, then shall my Disciples fast.

Saturdaies, Sundies, and other holy daies.

On every Saturday, and other feasts throughout the yeere, the Greekes are wont at evening to goe to the Temple. All the Grecian women and children rise very timely, that is to say, the second houre after midnight on every Sunday, and Feast day, to goe to the Temple; and leaue at home one boy or one girle, to keepe the house, and they continue there singing all the night till morning; when the Sunne riseth, they goe out, and returne home: they sit idly, and eat nor drinke, till the ninth houre after midnight. But at the ninth houre the Priest runnes to the Temple, and prepares those things that belong to the liturgie, and takes one loafe which a woman or pure man made the day before (that is, some man which knew not his wife the day before, or a woman which knew not her husband, that is, on Saturday night, or otherwise from the evening of Friday till the morning light of Saturday, lay not together.) That man or that woman, baketh and kneadeth meale, and makes that loafe on Saturday, or another day. Hee must needes be pure which shall make this bread: before they put this Bread into the Ouen, they signe it with a certaine peece of wood engrauen with letters, viz. Iesus Christ ouercomes: and then they put it into the Ouen marked with these letters, viz. Iesus Christ ouercomes. This Bread signifies the Virgin: as the Virgin was pure, so a pure man must bake that bread: this Bread the Priest takes in his hands, and blesseth, saying, In the memory of our holy unspotted Lady Mother of God, &c. and other prayers, and consecrates that Bread to the Virgin, and after this the Priest hath a little speare, in forme of the speare wherewith the Souldiers pierced Christ, and the Priest taketh the little speare, and cuts off some fouresquare peece of the outside of the loafe, which containeth those letters, Iesus Christ ouercomes, typifying Christ, who was borne of the Virgin Mary; and of this Bread they make their Eucharist: the Eucharist being administred, the Priest or Deacon deuides that greater part of bread which was left into verie small peeces, of which bread wee say, that it is the body of the Virgin: and of this bread hee distributes to them which tooke Christs bodie, and to as manie as fasted all that day, who neither ate nor dranke anything. They call this kinde of bread the reward, because they giue it to all those which are, and which are not partakers of the Lords supper as a certaine diuine gift. Those things being finished they goe out of the Temple, and again gather themselves to evening Praiers, which custome is obserued throughout the whole world.

Crosse Fast.

Twelfth day holy water. See the Russe and Abassine ceremonies on that day in their places.

Moreouer, they fast the foureteenth day of September, in honour of the crosse, which was found on that day, and they celebrate the feast of the crosse, abstaining from white meates, because on that day they kisse the crosse of Christ, and they desire to kisse it fasting. They fast also the fift of Ianuarie from all white meates, because the sixt day of that moneth Christ was baptised, according to the Greekish custome. Moreouer the Priests that day hallow water, whereof the Laikes drinke, and that they may be pure drinking of that holy water, they fast the day before, that is to say, the fift of Ianuarie.

They obserue no fasting the fourth and sixth day of the weeke: for they eat flesh on Wednesdayes and Fridaies, and all white meates which come from flesh, as Egges, Butter, Milke, Cheese, &c. from the day of Christs natiuitie to the foureteenth day of Ianuarie, that is, from the 25. of December to the foureteenth of Ianuarie, they fast not; yet they fast the fift of Ianuarie that they may drinke holy water the sixt day, whereof we spake before. If the natiuitie of Christ happen on a Wednesday, or a Friday, the common people eat flesh, and all white meate: but the Monkes onely whitemeates without flesh, in honour of Christs Natiuitie. Also on the sixt day of Ianuarie, whereon Christ was baptised, the Laikes eat flesh and all kinde of white meates, as we said before: but the Monkes eat onely white meates.

Dog-tale.

Notwithstanding in the eleuenth weeke before Easter, they eat flesh on Wednesday and Friday: the reason whereof is this. In times past there were certaine Heretickes, which had an excellent good Dogge, who were accustomed to tie Letters about his necke, and send him to their friends two or three daies iournie from them, who when they had read the Letters, sent backe others to them by the same Dogge, and this they did diuers times; At the length the Dog died and returned not, then those Heretickes for griefe fasted Wednesday and Friday, that they might deride the Orthodox Christians, who fasted those daies in honour of Christ: but when the Christians vnderstood this, they decreed in the eleuenth weeke not at all to fast with them, but to eat flesh on Wednesday and Friday. They call this weeke Archburch.

More.

Moreover, throughout Easter weeke, that is, from the resurrection of Christ vntill the Sunday following they eate flesh and white meates. The Fathers call it the weeke of renouation. After the same manner, on the day of Pentecost they eate flesh, and make merrie, but on the Monday next following that feast, they abstaine from flesh and all white meates, because the Priests on that day after Noone gather the people into the Temple, and all the people kneele in the same place, and the Priests pray, that the holy Ghost would descend vpon them, as it did formerly on the Apostles on the day of Pentecost. And therefore they fast on that Monday, that is the day following, but on Wednesday and Friday of that weeke, they eate flesh for ioy of the holy Ghost: but the Monkes eate onely white meates.

- 10 The Greekish Bishops haue a custome, that at three set times they giue the Priests spirituall gifts, as Christ at three times especially gaue to his Apostles spirituall gifts, and when they had receiued this fauour thrice, then they were perfect; that is to say, the Apostles receiued the first gift when he gaue them authoritie and power ouer all diuels, and to heale diseases, Luke 9.1. hee gaue them the second on the day of his resurrection, when he said to them, John 20. 22. Receiue the holy Ghost: whose sinnes you remitt, they are remitted to them, &c. The third gift he gaue them in the feast of Pentecost, when he sent his holy spirit vpon them: which being finished, the Apostles were perfect. After the same manner the Græcian Bishops make other Bishops; first the Bishop makes this or that man a Priest, but no confession, onely to sacrifice and sanctifie. But after that the Bishop vnderstands that that Priest is a Scholler and learned, then on the day following hee giues him power to be a Confessor, and if hee bee vnlearned hee onely Sacrificeth. And if hee deserue to bee a Bishop, on the third day two or three Bishops make him a compleate Bishop, and by reason hereof euery Priest hath not power to heare Confessions, but hee onely who hath authoritie from the Bishop: the Priests desire for the most part that the people confesse their sinnes to them in the Temple, sometimes also in other places, either in a priuate house, or in the fields, but no man is present besides themselves, whether it be in the Church or out of the Church.

Times for Orders.

Confession.

- The Greekes pray in the Temple standing vpright. But they haue some high seates in the Temple, such as are in many Colledges, and they may sometimes sit in them, and sometimes stand. When the Priests Preach, then the lay people sit in those seates, yet they stand when they sing. But when they come into the Temple, euery one takes his proper place, and then standing with his Hat off, bendeth downe the three former fingers of his right hand; which being done, he intimates that there are three persons in one deitie. And these fingers thus bended downe, he first laies on the forepart of his head; signifying thereby that the holy trinitie is in heauen. Then he remoues them to his belly, signifying, that the Sonne and the Word of God descended to the earth, and tooke flesh, and was crucified, and buried for our sinnes. Then hee placeth them on his right shoulder, signifying that Christ is risen from the dead, and sits at the right hand of the Father, as Dauid said, Sit at my right hand, till I put thine enemies vnder thy feet. Then hee laies them on his left shoulder, intimating that Christ should not set vs at his left hand at the last day, but deliuer vs from that, as he hath taught vs, deliuer vs from euil: and againe when he saith, Then will hee place the Sheepe at his right hand, and the Goates at his left: and euery one in these seuerall spaces of time, that is from the first period of time, wherein hee puts those three fingers on his head, vntill the laying them on his left shoulder, saith these words; Lord Iesus Christ, Sonne, and Word of God, be mercifull to me a sinner; and he bends his body, and so this figure signifies the signe of the Crosse, that is, putting his fingers first on his head, after on his belly, then on his right shoulder, and lastly on his left: these actions make a Crosse, and signifie the Crosse whereon Christ was crucified for our sinnes. And thus euery one makes this figure three or foure times, and then sits downe on his seate.

Rites of praier &c. in their Churches.

- The Greekes haue a custome that the better sort of them receiue the Sacrament of the precious body and blood of Christ, once, twice, thrice, or foure times in the yeere, yet confession of their sinnes must goe before to some spirituall Priest (they call those spirituall Priests, who haue authoritie from the Bishop) And whosoever hee bee which will confesse himselfe to such a kinde of Priest, ought to come to him. And the Priest asketh him, what he desires? hee answereth, saying, I desire to confesse my sinnes. Then the Priest goeth with him to the Temple, and there in some priuate place he begins to teach him, saying: See, the Angell of God stands before thee to receiue thy confession. Take heede therefore, that thou concealest no sinne, neither for shame, nor for any other cause, for I am a sinner like thy selfe. Then the Greeke begins to confesse his sinnes particularly: which being done, the Priest saith againe, take heede that you ouerslip no sinne through forgetfulness. Then more seriously then before hee lookes into himselfe, and whatsoeuer sinnes he can remember hee ingeniously confesseth to the Priest. But if hee can remember no more, he tels him, he hath confest all that hee remembers. Then the Priest imposeth him penance, that he fast so many daies, and giue so many almes: which being finished, hee blesteth him in these words; According to the power which Christ gaue his Apostles, laying, whatsoeuer you shall binde on earth, shall be bound in heauen; and whatsoeuer ye shall loose on earth, shall be loosed in heauen: Againe, according to the power which the Apostles gaue the Bishoppes, and the Bishoppes

Rites of Confession.

gave mee, be blessed of the Father, of the Sonne, and of the holy Ghost, and let thy portion be with the just. Which short benediction being ended, he makes a longer prayer over his head: who ariseth and leaveth some money in the place for the Priest to pray for him afterward. And so hee goes forth and performes whatsoever the Priest enioynes him. And when the time comes that he must receive the Lords Supper, he must goe to that Priest or some other, who must pray over his head, he in the meane time kneeling.

Their Temples
The Quire.

Communion,

Holy bread.

Fonts and Baptisme.

Excommunication.

All the Greekish Temples have a certaine place, distinct from the rest of the Temple, wherein Priests, Deacons, and Subdeacons onely enter, and wherein they performe their holies, and when the Priest will give the holy Sacrament to them that will receive it, hee stands at the doore of that place, and they that desire to receive it come neere the doore, and stand right before it. They come after this manner: when the time drawes neere to receive it, they come before the doore where the Priest celebrates his holies, and bend their knees to the East, and worship God. Then they turne to the West, and kneeling, say to the people, Blesse vs brethren, wee have sinned in word and deede. And the people answer, saying, God pardon you brethren: then they turne to the South side of the Church, and say the same words to them as before, and they answer in the same manner. In like fashion they turne themselves and kneele to the North side of the Church, saying as before, and receiving the same answer. After this they all come neere to doore of the place where the Priest performes his holies, and the Priest comes forth holding the Sacrament in his hands, and stands in the middle of the doore, and gives to every one the body and bloud of our Lord, the Bread and Wine mingled together, saying, N. N. servant of God, receiveth in the name of the Father, and of the Sonne, and of the holy Ghost. And in the very particle of time, wherein they receive the Sacrament every one with a lowe voyce saith to himselfe, Lord I will not kisse thee as Iudas, but as the Theefe I confesse thee, remember mee O Lord when thou comest in thy Kingdome: And after these words hee takes the Sacrament. And after that holy receiving, presently hee receives of the same Priest, a small portion of the Bread, called the divine guist, whereof we spake before, when we mentioned the Greekish praiers of the whole yeere.

The Greekes have certaine small Vessells in the Church called Fonts, wherein they baptise Infants in this manner; when the time comes to baptise an Infant, the kindred of the childe heat water with sweet smelling hearbs, and put the water into the foresaid vessell, but whiles the water warmes, the Priest prayes and puts Oyle into the water. After the prayers, the Priest taketh the childe in his armes, and puts the whole Infant thrice quite vnder the water, saying N. N. the servant of God is baptised in the name of the Father, then hee ducks the Infant, and drawes him out and then addes, and of the Sonne, and then againe ducks him, and drawes him out, and lastly addes in the name of the holy Ghost, and then againe ducks the Infant and pluckes him out, that is three times diving him the water, and pulling him out of the water, as Christ said to his Disciples, goe forth baptising in the name of the Father and of the Sonne and of the holy Ghost. All which being finished, hee reades certaine prayers, as heere in Great Brittain, and restores the childe to his Kinsfolke.

It is a custome amongst the Greekes to excommunicate those that are grievous offenders (because Saint Paul saith, when you are assembled together, and my spirit also deliver that man over to Satan; and againe reprove him severely) for example sake. A certaine wicked man hath borne false witness, or dealt iniuriously with some man, the man wronged, cites this false witness before some Priest, or Bishop, and the Bishop asketh the false witness whether his testimonie bee true or not: the witness affirms his testimonie to be true; then the Bishop or Priest puts on his Pontificall attire (whether hee be in the Church, or elsewhere) which garments signifie the seamlesse and purple coat of Christ and other things. And at that time the Bishop or Priest is a tipe of Christ, because of those holy Garments, and the grace which he received of the Bishops. Then he commands the false witness to stand before him, and begins that Psalm, wherein it is said, O God be not silent of my praise, because the mouth of the sinner and deceitfull was opened against mee, and the rest which followes in that Psalm; then hee addes certaine prayers; and after saith, by the authoritie which Christ gave his Apostles, viz. Whatsoever you shall loose in earth shall bee loosed in heaven, and whatsoever you shall binde in earth, shall bee bound also in heaven: And by the authoritie which the Apostles gave to the Bishops, and the Bishops gave mee, by this authoritie I excommunicate thee; thou shalt not converse with Christians, and shalt be separated from the Father and the Sonne, and the holy Ghost; and from the three hundred and eightene Fathers, Divines of the Nicene Councell, and from all Saints: and thy portion shall bee with the Devil, and Iudas and thou shalt bee indissoluble for ever as stones and Iron for a testimonie, vlesse thou repentest. These things being done, hee dismisseth him. And if the false witness doe not afterward repent, but die in his opinion; after a yeere (for the Greekes are wont to digge vp the Sepulchres of those, which died in the former yeere, and also the Sepulchre of that false witness) and they finde him entire, his bodie blacke, his hayre yet remayning and his nayles white, and they cast him out of the Sepulchre, and set him bolt vpight against a wall and hee stands firmly of himselfe, as a solid piece of timber: and if you strike his belly it will sound like a drumme, and therefore he is called Timpanians. See also Cassianus in his rian in his histories calls an excommunicate person Timpanium. If you doubt, you may speake to your Merchants to enquire in Palae-patia, Theffalonica, Alexandria, Constantinople or any where else, you may also enquire of the Greeks that are in England, who will certifie you of the truth.

About threescore yeeres since or somewhat more, the Iewes which inhabited about Cairo, bitterly enuied the Christians; for they saw that the Gouernour was very courteous, and therefore they consulted together to giue him a double tribute for the Christians, so that he would destroy them because Christ spake falsely, saying, Whosoever hath Faith as a graine of Mustard seede, shall say to this Mountaine, passe hither or thither, and it shall goe. Math. 17. 20. and if they drinke any deadly thing it shall not hurt them, Mar. 16. 19. Then the furious Gouernour called the Patriarch, and laid, your Religion is false, because Christ said whosoever belieueth in mee although he drinke any deadly thing, it shall not hurt him: And presently commanded the Patriarch, that he should drinke poison before him, without making the signe of the crosse, because the Iewes had enforced him, that the Christians wrought magically by it, for when they make the signe of the crosse, then the poison looseth his efficacie, and therefore the Gouernour commanded the Patriarch, that he should not make the signe of the crosse, when he drunke the poison. Then the Patriarch calling the people, praied and fasted with them three daies, and the third day tooke the Communion with them, and they went all to the Gouernour. Then the Gouernour being present and all the Iewes, one of the Iewes brought a cup full of strong poison, and gaue it the Patriarch to drinke: Then the Gouernour said to the Patriarch, holding the cup in his hand, take heede you make not the signe of the crosse on the cup; then the Patriarch blessing the cup mystically, asked the Gouernour, saying, where will you that I drinke, on this side, or on this, or on this, or on this? and by this meanes he laid his fingers on the foure sides of the superficies of the cup, sanctifying the cup mystically. Then the Gouernour said to the Patriarch, drinke where you will, not knowing that the Patriarch had blessed the cup with the signe of the crosse: after this the Patriarch dranke off the whole cup. And after hee had drunke, he bad them bring him some water, and they brought some: then he put a little water into the cup, and washed it. Then he said to the Gouernour, I haue drunke all the poison, let a Iew drinke onely this water that is in the cup, that we may see his faith; then the Patriarch offered the cup to the Iew that first brought it him, that he might drinke it: but the Iew would not. Then the Gouernour threatned him, saying, drinke, that we may see also thy Religion. And so the Iew dranke the water in the cup, and presently burst in sunder. Then the Iewes gaue great quantitie of monie to the Gouernour, saying that the Patriarch had wrought witchcraft: but Christ saith whosoever hath faith as a graine of mustard seede, shall say to this Mountaine, remoue thither, and it shall remoue. Now let the Patriarch call that Mountaine which is ouer against vs, and if it come to vs, then let the Christians slay vs. Then againe the Prince said to the Patriarch, that hee should call the Mountaine, or otherwise the Christians must die. Then the Patriarch besought the Gouernour to grant him three daies, that the Greekes might take counsell together: but the Patriarch and people praied with teares daie and night, and on the third day, according to their custome they receiued the Lords Supper; and after they had done, they all assembled together both Greekes, Turkes, and Iewes, and came to the appointed place, and then the Patriarch stretching out his hand towards the Mountaine, said, In the name of the Father, and of the Sonne, and of the holy Ghost, Mountaine, come hither; and sodainely it cloue in peeces, and came to them. But all feared least it should couer them. Then the Gouernour said to the Patriarch, command that the Mountaine stand still, then againe stretching out his hands, the Patriarch blessed the Mountaine, saying, Stand Mountaine, and the Mountaine stood there: and from that time the Mountaine was called Stand-Mountaine vnto this day: but in Turkish it is called Dourdag, that is, Stand-Mountaine. Then the Gouernour said to the Patriarch, that the Gracians should kill the Iewes: but the Patriarch answered the Gouernour, wee Christians are not accustomed to kill men; but for their punishment let them cause that the water which runs beneath Cairo, may come into Cairo, that all men in the Citie may drinke of it at the Iewes cost, which to this day is done.

The Greekes also haue Monkes, but onely of the order of Basil the great. But this order is diuided into three orders, the first is called Monasticall, the second is Anacoreticall (which liue apart) the third Asceticall, or if you will Exerciticall.

The first Order which is called Monasticall is in this manner: there are Monasteries amongst the Greekes, both great and little; some of them haue fiftie Monkes, others a hundred, some one hundred and fiftie, some two hundred, others three hundred, others foure hundred, and others more. But the Monkes of this first Order liue a common life; for they all dine and sup together with their Gouernour at the same table: And neither the Gouernours meate nor drinke differs from the rest of the Monkes, whether they be illiterate or wise. And whensoeuer the Gouernour eates or drinks, they all eate the same bread and the same meate, and drinke the same drinke. But for decencie, the Gouernour, Seniors, and Priest, differ in their garments. Most of the Monkes of this first Order labour with their hands: but the Priests and Deacons labour not, but attend to reading and ecclesiasticall functions: but the rest liue by the labour of their hands, some make the Christopher Furner mentioneth this Patriarch and his poisoned Cup, pag. 1376. He was aliue 35. yeeres after An. 1565. being then 103 yeeres old. That of remouing the Mountaine I doubt Greca fide to haue benee hither added from that which M. Polo relateth, To. 2. pa. 70. For Furer should as wel haue heard this as that, hauing letters of commendation from him: but he mentions it not. Addition & multiplication is no new thing with Miraclemongers.

Greekish Monks

Order Monasticall.

Their life in common.

Hand-labours.

Monkes shooes, some spin Sheepes wooll, and Goates haire, some are Brasiers, and make Hatchets, of Brasse, others betake themselues to keepe flockes of Sheepe, and hire mercenarie Shepheards to serue them: and are conuersant with them a yeere, and when a yeere is past, they goe to the Monasterie and tarrie there, others goe to keepe Horses, and remaine out a yeere, and then others are sent out by the Ancients of the Monasteries, and according to this manner the ancients send out Monkes yeerely to keepe Horses, Oxen, Bees, Sheepe, and other busineses, and after a yeere they returne to the Monasterie, and in this manner liue the Monkes in the Monasteries: many Priests also are sent by the ancients into Walachia, Mosconia, and Iberia, that whatsoeuer the Kings giue them, they may carrie to the Monasterie, and they abide in the Monasterie, and others are sent forth, and thus liue the Monkes of the first Order in their Monasteries,

Their habit.

They weare a hat on their head, which hides their eares, signifying that they heare nothing, neither learne mens vices, but are accounted as deafe men: as Paul saith, bee children in malitiousnesse. They weare also another Hat vpon that which represents the figure of a Sepulcher, and hides the head, and hangs downe almost to the girdle, intimating that hee which weares this figure is dead from worldly things, neither ought hee which is cloathed in this habit to be carefull about worldly affaires, that is, about honours, riches, kindred, friends, fauour with men, nor cherishing the body, but account himselfe to be dead, not as if hee were really dead, but with a kinde of preoccupied opinion of death, as the Lord saith; Whosoener will come after mee, let him deny himselfe, and take up his crosse and follow mee: And David, Wee are killed all the day long for thy sake.

Monkes Eremiticall.

The second Order of Monkes is called Anachoreticall, or Heremiticall, that is, when there is any rich man, that cannot liue in the Monasterie, then hee giues as much monie to the Monasterie as will buy a house, and the Monks liuing in the Monasterie giue him some great house, which is distant two or three miles from the Monasterie, wherein hee liues with two or three poore Monks, as the Monasticall do in Monasteries: but that house hath a Church, Vine-yard, Oliue-yard, Nuts, Cherries, Almonds, and other things necessarie to liue on abundantly. And this is the second Order of Monkes of Basil the great.

Monkes Asceticall, or vacant to stricter exercises.

The third Order of Monkes is called Asceticall, or Exerciticall, that is, the Order giuen to exercise, for these are exceedingly exercised in vertue: these liue a strict and rigid life, they are content onely with little houses, or Caues, and haue neither Vineyards nor Fields; yet some of them haue great Vines, but make no Wine of them, but nourish them to eat the Grapes: they haue also Figge trees, and such like things, wherewith they liue, namely Beanes, Cherries, Apples, Chestnuts boild on the fire with water. They gather also in the Spring time Apples, Parseley, Figges, Cherries, and cut them in peeces, and dry them in the Sunne: and these thus prepared they eat with bread the rest of the yeere, once in a day, and twice on Feast daies: some eat once onely on Feast daies: these get their liuing by their sweate and labour: For the Greekish Church doth not suffer Monkes or Hermites to begge; because they remember that Paul saith, Hee which will not worke, let him not eat. But sometimes some rich Grecians send almes to the Monasteries, and to the Hermites, and these exercised men receiue them: but the course of their life is such; some make vpper Garments of Goates and Sheepes wooll, which the Monks weare vpon their Garments: some make Hats of straw, some make wodden Spooones, and some of them write Bookes; and all these hand-wrought things they giue to the Monkes dwelling in Monasteries, and they supply the Hermits with all necessities: and this is the third Order of Hermit Monkes. I write these things, because I am an eye-witnesse, and speake certainly, truely, and boldly. This is the third Order of the Monkes of Basil the great.

No Abby-labbers nor begging Friers.

Monkes fasts.

The fasting of the first and second Order, that is of the Monasticall, and of those who are Governours of two or three Monkes is on this manner: They fast through the whole yeere, euerie weeke thrice, Monday, Wednesday, and Friday: they fast on Monday, because on Saturday and Sunday they eat twice in a day, and they eat Fish, and Butter, and Egges, and Milke, and Cheefe, and Oyle, and Wine: but that their concupiscence may not be encreased, they fast on Monday: on Tuesday and Thursday, Saturday and Sunday, they eat twice those things which I mentioned before. The fast of the three daies is in this manner: the second houre after noone they pray in the Temple, and going out they goe to the Table, and eat Beanes with broth, without Oyle and Butter, and some Hearbes with Vinegar, or Pease, or other pulse boild without Oyle or Butter, &c. at euening they goe to the Temple, and after praiers going out, they sit neere the Temple, and the Butler is wont to goe round about carrying a Cup full of fragments of Bread, and giues to euery one of the Monkes a peece of Bread, and a cup of water: the yonger sort take them, but the elders receiue nothing; but after they haue sit a while, they goe againe into the Temple, and pray, and sometimes the space of an houre, sometimes halfe an houre; and when they goe forth, the Governour stands in the Church Porch, euerie Monke when hee goeth out at the doore prostrates himselfe before him, saying, blesse Lord; but the Governour answers, saying, God grant thee this my Sonne, and so againe they returne to their houses, and it is not lawfull for any, any longer to speake together, and so they begin to pray in their

their houses, and performe their priuate deuotions, and kneeling before God, euery one to aske pardon for himselfe, and for others a whole houre, and then they goe to sleepe till the clocke sounds midnight, and then they all rise, and goe all to praier, vntill morning, and then going out of the Temple, they goe about their priuate arts, and worke almost till dinner; and then they goe to the Temple before dinner, and when they are come from thence, they goe to dinner as the day before, and when they rise from dinner the Gouvernour stands in the doore of the dining roome, and euery Monke going forth prostrates himselfe before the Gouvernour, saying, blesse Lord, and the Gouvernour answereth, saying, God pardon thee my sonne. But in the time of their great Lent, they bow themselves before the Gouvernour, both in dinner time, and after supper in the Temple answering in the same manner: and thus doe they throughout the whole yeere. Moreover, if any of the Monkes chance to sleepe, and not rising at the beginning when they beginne to pray but the first houre of praier, which is called midnight, is past, and hee riseth after midnight; hee on that day dineth not with the other Monkes, but whiles the rest are eating, hee stands at the entrance to the Table before them all, and bowes himselfe before all that are eating, saying, Haue mercy on mee O God, according to thy great mercie, &c. vntill all of them rise from dinner; and when they rise, all would goe forth together; but hee falls on the ground and saith, O holy Fathers, blesse mee an idle person, because I haue sinned; and euery one of his brethren saith, God pardon thee brother: and when all are gone out, then hee eates: and they doe after this manner both the elder and yonger Monkes: they doe this willingly, that all may haue a good example to rise alwayes at the time of the first Prayer.

The third order of Monkes is called the exercised Order, these exercised eate all the yeere once in a day, except on solemne daies, and feast daies, and often then also they eate but once; if they dine they sup not; as we declared before of the fasting of the first and second order of Monkes.

Their Lent
fasts.

The Monkes also haue foure Lents in the yeere as the Laickes. The first Lent is called the great and holy Lent, as is said before, because it is the tithing of their soules for the yeere, because in the eighth weeke the Laickes pardon their enemies, and confesse and prepare themselves, that when the holy Lent comes they may be pure in heart, and supplicate God for their sinnes. After the same manner also the Monkes vntill the seuenth weeke before Easter, forgiue one another their trespasses, and prepare themselves that they also may be pure in heart: they beginne to fast from Munday, that is the seuenth weeke before Easter: they fast Munday and Tuesday: but one Wednesday they eate: but on the two former daies they eate nothing. But some on Tuesday about the Euen eate a morsell of bread with water; and after Wednesday they begin daily to eate once vntill Saturday. On Saturday and Sunday, on these two daies vntill Easter they eate Oile, and drinke Wine; but on the five other daies of the weeke they eate once, and eat dried Apples, and such like things (whereof we said the exercised eate) they eate, and the Monkes in the great Lent. But some of the Monkes of the two Orders, and of the Exercisers and Heremits, in the great Lent often in three daies eate once. But in the great Euen wherein Christ was crucified, all the Monkes fast all the daies, and neither dine nor sup, but only eate a little bread on Saturday, and drinke Wine moderately, that they may abide in the Church, for they watch all night singing for ioy of the Resurrection of Christ.

Good Friday,

The Greekish Monkes haue an order to rise to pray euery night an houre and an halfe after midnight: but on Sundaies one houre after throughout the whole yeere. They watch from the Euening till Morning on Dominiacall Feasts, and on the Feasts of great Saints, that is; in the night of the Resurrection of Christ, and of the Ascension: Pentecost and John the Baptist, and the foure and twentieth of the month of June, on the Feast of Peter and Paul; on the sixt day of August: because on that day they celebrate a great Feast for the Transfiguration of Christ on Mount Thabor: And it is called to this day, the day of the transfiguration of Christ. Moreover, rich and poore celebrate a great Feast, and watch all the night the fifteenth day of August; because on that day Mary a Mother and a Virgin was translated from Earth to Heauen: and so on other Feast daies as on Christs Natiuitie.

The Grecian Monkes haue a custome, that when a Laicke will be made a Monke, he first goeth to the Monasterie; and there the Gouvernour asketh him what he would haue; to whom hee answers that he would be made a Monke. The Gouvernour replies: it is necessary that you remaine three yeeres in the Monasterie, in which time you may proue and examine your selfe. After the three yeeres finished, if he like not to be a Monke, he may goe away and marrie a wife; but if hee like, then the Gouvernour taketh him, and leading him to the Temple thus speaketh to him: Behold, the Angell of the Lord expecteth that he may receiue the confession: take heed therefore that thou desirest not to be a Monke because of any affliction (that is lest thou shouldst haue killed any, and therefore for feare of death comest hither; or hast grieved thy parents, or hast desired to haue carnall pleasures with some and couldst not, and for easing thy griefe comes to be made a Monke, and not for loue to God &c.) Then he which is to be a Monke answereth, not so honorable father, but I desire to liue a quiet and peaceable life, and to abstaine from worldly troubles and tumults, to fast, watch, and in peace to pray vnto God. Then the Gouvernour replies againe: therefore dost thou desire to renounce the world, and made.

Monkes how

Three yeeres probation.

worldly pleasures for the love of God? hee that is to be a Monke answereth, yea truly honourable Father, God willing: Will you forsake Father and Mother, Brethren, Marriage, the ioyes and delights of this world? (as Christ saith, Whosoever leaueth Father and Mother, &c. for the love of Christ) he answeres, yea truly, honourable Father, God willing, and after this manner answeres to euery Interrogatorie. Then the Gouvernour after Praiers attires him in a Monkish Habit; and with a palse of Cissers cuts from his head a few haire, and fastens them mingled with Bees Waxe in some corner neere the Sacring place, signifying that hee is consecrated to God, nor henceforth hath power ouer his owne bodie, to marrie a wife: because Christ saith, No man putting his hand to the plough, and looking back is fit for the Kingdome of God.

Forgiuing one another.
Obedience.

The Greekes obey the diuine Law verie strictly: when as the Lord saith Forgiue and it shall bee forgiven you, they forgiue their enemies their offences: euery one saith particularly these words, I heartily forgiue mine enemies that God may forgiue me. Also they obey the lawes of the holy Apostles for example, where Paul saith, Let every soule bee subiect to the higher powers; for there no power but of God. They obey diligently also the precepts of the Fathers which are according to the Lawes of God.

Easter why different from the Latines.

See of this
Sandys sup. l. 6. p.
907.

Moreouer, the Greekes celebrate the Feast of Easter according to the ancient custome for these reasons: first, that they may neither keepe it before the Jewes, nor with the Jewes, as it sometimes happens that this new Passouer is obserued by the Latines, before the Jewes, and sometimes with the Jewes. Secondly, because the holy Nicene Councell that first and vniuersall one saith, if any celebrate Easter before the Jewes, or with the Jewes let him bee accursed. Thirdly, because neere the Riuer Nile, and the Citie Cairo, is a great wonder the earth casting forth dead carkasses (that Countrie begins to cast them forth on the great day of Thursday before the Feast in which day Christ made his mysticall Supper) but it casts forth dead bodies daily till the day of Ascension, that is, the day on which Christ ascended into Heauen, viz. till the fortieth day after Easter, and after that day it ceaseth to cast forth any. This wonder both Gracian and Turkish Merchants mention, as many as come from those places into Greece: as also others testifie, who goe to Ierusalem to worship Christs Sepulchre, and after they goe to that place, where the bodies are cast out of the Earth, to see the Miracle: but his Miracle is according to the number of the old Feast. The Greekes did decree twentie yeers since to celebrate the feast according to the new number, but the bodies were neither cast forth according to that time; neither did the holy light shine, as it was wont yeerely to shine in the holy Sepulchre of Christ about the ancient time of Easter: then the Greekes staied til the ancient time of Easter, about which time the holy light shined in Christs Sepulchre, as it was wont yeerely, and the earth neere Nile cast forth dead bodies: and then the Greekes kept the Feast, saying: behold, God sheweth vs the true time of Easter, and wee care not for humane wisdom.

See Fulcherius
sup. l. 8. c. 2. p.
126.

The weapons of our warfare are not carnall
but spirituall.
2. Cor. 10. 4.
Christ crucified apprehended by faith, crucifying our old man, and mortifying our lusts.
All the spiri-
tuall worship of God would be turned to such carnall & bodily rites, as you see in this and almost all the differing Christian sects Patriarke of Constantinople.
His Giergie.
His maintenance.

The Greekes say, that the Crosse is Christs Scepter, and his two edged Sword; and as a Souldier fights with his Sword, and ouercomes his enemies, so Christ also because hee was crucified, ouercame the Deuill, he could without the Crosse haue saued man, and vanquished the Deuill; but he would not, because it seemed good to him to doe so: but as when a great King goeth to warre, he sends his Scepter before him, and armeth his Souldiers with strong weapons, that they may fight with their enemies, and that the people may know the King comes: whence it comes to passe, that the glorie of the King is spread all abroad, before he comes to that place, whither he sent his Scepter before him; after the same manner also our Lord Iesus Christ doth, he defends vs Christians, armed with his Crosse, which Crosse signifies the Passion of Christ, and wheresoeuer the Crosse appeares, hauing this Title written on it, Iesus Christ ouercomes, Christ is preached and prayes: but not euery Crosse, or thing like a Crosse is called the Crosse of Christ, but that which is inscribed with this Title, Iesus Christ ouercomes; that is called the Crosse of Christ, whether it be of siluer or of metall, or of wood, these Letters consecrate that Crosse to Christ: for that Crosse signifies that Christ was crucified for our sinnes, and ouercame our enemies: therefore Dauid saith, Lord, in thy light we shall see light: the light of the Father is the Sonne, the light of the Sonne is the Crosse, &c.

The Patriarke of Constantinople hath now vnder him seuentie and foure Metropolitans; but there are more then thirtie of these, that haue not Bishops vnder them, of those which haue, this hath one, this two, this three, &c. all the Bishops are seuentie two or seuentie and three. But all the Bishops and Metropolitans are almost a hundred and fiftie. The Patriarke of Constantinople hath his proper Seate only at Constantinople. Hee hath for his maintenance from that Citie a piece of Gold at euery Marriage. And he hath twelue pence of euery house once in three yeeres throughout his whole Prouince; viz. of euery Prouince of the Metropolitans that haue their Seates subiect to him: he hath also a certaine small gift of the Deacons and Priest when he giues them their Orders. Also euery Priest in that Citie yeerely giues him a piece of Gold. When rich Christians die, they leaue to the Patriarke of that Church; houses, fields, sheepe, wealth, &c. And euery Metropolitane and Archbishop when they are consecrated by the Patriarke giue him some small gratuitie. And euery Metropolitane yeerely giues the Patriarke, this man twentie pound, that thirtie, another five and twentie pounds for the Kings Tribute. Of which wealth the the Patriarke giues annually 6080. pieces of Gold in name of all the chiefe Priests: that the Tur- Tribute. kish King may let the Patriarke remaine in Constantinople, and the Greekish Metropolitans, Archbishops and Bishops in his whole Kingdome; and obserue the Christian Religion. The Pa-triarkes seruants, and of all the chiefe Priests are Monkes. Seuentene or more Priests and His Family:

 Ministers eate of the Patriarkes bread. Hee hath two Chaplaines, two Deacons, a Steward, Chappell Clarke, two Singers, a Porter, a Horse-keeper, and a Keeper of his great Seale, and and another of his Priue Seale.

In like manner euery Metropolitane and Archbishop hath a proper Citie: these also receiue a Other Bishops:
 small reward for the election of Bishops. Also they receiue yeerely of euery Bishop, twentie, 10 fiftene, or ten pounds. Moreouer, of the Deacons and Priests a small gratuitie for their imposition of hands. Moreouer, euery Priest yeerely giues to the Metropolitane or Archbishop a piece of Gold: they take also at euery Wedding a piece of Gold; and Almes for burying the dead, as is said of the Patriarke. Moreouer, yeerely of euery Family in the Citie a bushell of Corne, and Wine, and Oile, and Silke, and of these things the Metropolitans liue.

After the same manner the Bishops take a small reward of the Deacons and Priests for Imposition of hands: they also receiue yeerely of euery Priest a piece of Gold, and as much for euery Marriage, also as much of euery Family yeerly in his Prouince, besides a bushell of Corne, Wine, Oile, and Silke.

The Priests liue of the superfluitie of the Church, that is to say, some Churches haue fields, Priests, liuinge 20 vineyards, houses and such like: but if the Church hath not plentie of those, euery householder giues the Priest yeerely a bushell of Corne (a Bushell signifies here the third part of a horse load.) Moreouer the Greekes haue yeerely fixe and thirtie feast daies, twelue of them are called Dominicall, that is, pertaining to Christ and the blessed Virgin, the other foure and twentie are of Saint Iohn the Baptist, of the holy Apostles and famous Martyrs: on all these Feast daies the Priest must administer the Communion: and euery Family giues to the Priest two pence, hee prayes particularly for euery donor, before he begins to sacre. Moreouer, on these Feast daies, the Greekes entertaine many strangers: and sometimes make fixe or fixe Feasts in a Village, and the Priest must be present at euery Feast, and blesse the viands, and they giue the Priest bread, flesh, 30 wine, monie and other things which will be sufficient for his Family the whole weeke, and thus doe the Priests liue.

Moreouer, if any liuing in the Cities or Prouinces of the Greekes will be made Deacons, they Deacons: must first marrie: and then the Bishops make them Deacons. But if they will not marrie, they must first be made Monkes, and then the Bishops with their Suffrages make them Monkish Deacons, and they may not after marrie, because the Bishops haue separated them.

Also, the Monkes sleepe alwaies with their Coats girt about them: so also the Laicks sleepe with their wiues with their clothes on: because Paul saith; I would haue those that haue wiues to be as if they had none, and those that haue none, as if they had.

Scripture abused.

CHAP. XV.

Collections out of PETER STROZA, Secretary to Pope PAUL the Fifth, his Treatise of the Opinions of the Chaldeans, touching the Patriarke of Babylon, and the Nestorrians in Asia.

It happened that amongst those poore men, whose feet were on Maundie Thursday, according to the wonted Solemnitie, washed by Pope Paul the Fifth, in the first yeere of his Papacie, there were two Chaldeans, one a Monke, the other a Lay-man, which a little before had made their Pilgrimage to Rome; which carried some presents to Elias the Patriarke of Babylon from the Pope, and gaue him a Booke of the profession of faith, propounded to the men of the East which came to Rome; whereby, and by their extolling the Popes gentle vsage, the said Patriarke Elias sent Legates to the Pope to giue him thanks and to acknowledge him for their common Father and Lord, with acknowledgement of his subiection & profession of the same faith, indeuouring to make it appear that the difference betwixt Rome & them was only in words & not in sense. These Legates fell amongst Theeues; and others were sent, which with much difficultie came to Rome, 60 where hearing how odious the name of Nestorius was, to decline the suspicion of Nestorian He-resie, they tooke some pages out of the Bookes of their profession and rites, being perswaded thereto by a Iew lately conuerted. They returning in this manner, and little being done, Elias consul-teth with his Bishops, and sends Adam the Archdeacon of the Patriarchall Chamber, Abbot of the Chaldeen Monkes, to render account of their faith, and humbly to desire correction, if ought ought therein were erroneous. Hee brought a Letter and profession the third yeere after the departure of the former. The Letter is this.

From the Patriarchall Chamber, Prayers and Blessings be giuen to you.

The Letter of Elias Patriarch of Babylon to the Pope,
A. 1610.

See what the Popes presence can doe with a poore Patriarch.
Remoue from me vanity and lies—least I be poore and steale, and take the name of my God in vain, Pro. 30.

* Yea what need, and very needy ones are they, and this too, which makes him tell more then Rome it selfe euer dreamed, of Romes great-nes in the East, as others haue also done of the South.

* This is the Easterne fashion to receiue the Letters & Mandates of their Princes on their heads

From humble Elias of the East, who by the grace of God serueth the holy See of Babylon, continuall adorations, and perpetuall inclinations & everlasting kneeling before your holy feet: O blessed Father, and head of Fathers, Sunne of Christianitie, and Name on which is situated the adifice of the Church of Churches; my Lord, and my Father the Pope, Lord (and) Father of all the Patriarches which are in the Vniuerse. Your Charitie towards vs may be pleased to take notice, that your Letters haue come to vs, and your firme Faith, and the blessing which you sent my lowliness; and I receiued a blessing together with my people, and haue giuen thanks to Christ, for that I am made worthy of the blessings of your Holinesse, and of your illustrious memorie, and you haue numbred me among the sonnes of your Father-hood besides my merits. I presently sent a thanksgiving and letters, and my Faith. But wicked men met my Legates, and tooke all things from them, and they returned to me empty: againe I sent others, which came not to your Holinesse, which grieved mee with my Bishops and Archbishops, and I said, What shall I doe? I cannot goe, because the Princes our Oppressors permit mee not; neither can I goe to Ierusalem: they hold vs as Slaues, and permit vs not to doe our will. At last I sent thy Faith and letters of thy puritie, with my faithful Sonne and Counsellour Father Adam, to shew them in all our Regions, that we might see what was fitting to be done of vs Orientalls, and he remained in these Regions a whole yeere: and wee all consulted together, and haue sent to your Holinesse the same Father Adam; and I haue sent with him my Faith and letters, and said that he should treat with your Holinesse of these things further then is written, because hee is the Head of Fathers and Abbat of the Orientall Monkes, and wee haue none of more note, as all the East confesseth. And now, O Father, with bowed head wee adore before thy Seat without fraud and guile, & thy Precept is receiued of me according to his Precept, which deliuered thee the Keyes. Nor will I deny that voyce spoken to Peter, I haue giuen thee the keyes, and what thou shalt bind on Earth shall be bound in Heauen, and what thou shalt lose on Earth shall be lost in Heauen. And I will not resist as doe others, Heretikes against the precept of the holy Apostles, and orthodoxe Fathers, which affirmed that the See of Great Rome should hold the principalltie, and she is the Head of all Sees: farre be it from me, but I confesse that the Roman Church is the Mother of Churches, and he which doth not confesse it, let him be Anathema. And our Babylonian See is not elected of it selfe, as of other Heretikes, which haue multiplied Patriarches in the world without Law, but by the Precept of the Pope, and counsell of the Roman Church, was the See of Babylon chosen, and so it is found written amongst vs in the Chronicles, namely, that the Orientall Fathers were ordained at Rome. But afterwards it came to passe, that when they sent men for Confirmation they were slaine in their iourney, and when they did so a long time, all perished. This being told to the Church and Pope, the Pope decreed in a Conncell and said, Let vs ordaine them a Patriarch, and let vs permit them to chuse their Patriarches, that they die not in the way for Confirmation, nor any evils happen to them, and so we should sinne, and they remaine without the Roman fold. And thus wee haue receiued power till this time, and we haue done nothing of our selues, as the rest, which haue troden under foot the Canons of the Apostles, and Lawes of the Fathers, and haue filled the Earth with Patriarches without need. For this cause the See of Babylon was called the Fifth, for the foure Sees of the foure Euangelists; and because the Patriarch was elected with the Roman Confirmation, and he hath giuen vs power to make Pastors, then was the See of Babylon called, which doth accompany the foure Sees, and is numbred the fifth, as one of them. For, O Father, behold my Faith hath come to your Holinesse with letters, and you may see if there be fraud in our profession, or error, or recoiling from our Mother the Roman Church. Admonish, and we will doe, teach, and we will obey. And if in all things we be true before your See, and there be no fraud in our faith, we desire of your benignitie, that you forget not the pouerty of your seruants, because many of our profession haue undergone dangers when they haue come to you. For some haue dyed, others were slaine by enemies, and few haue returned. And let this suffice your Holinesse from our lowliness, that from the furthest parts of the East, we beare your Precepts on our heads and eyes, and we come against all Nations with our blood, and sustaine calamities that we may adore before your Excellency, and we lowly and subiect may receiue blessing from the Great Mother Church of Paul & Peter. Who vrgeth vs to do this, but the Christian faith, and your loue to our lowliness? And let this suffice that we haue shewed to your Wisdom. But this whole labour we sustaine for the Roman Church; and your Ministers at Ierusalem hold all that are of my profession, as forraiuers and rebels from the Church of Rome, and doe not gratifie vs as before, because their Interpreters are of professions which hate vs, and those your Ministers enquire not the truth. Wee desire your Holinesse to admonish them, and to hold those of our profession, as of yours, and to be gentle to them. I haue sent Letters to your Teachers, to command those of our profession in Ierusalem, because it was written in our Annalls that our Archbishop, which was in Cyprus, and those of our profession which inhabit Ierusalem, and the Clergie in the Monastery of Saint Iames in Nisibis, are numbred amongst the sonnes of the Church of Rome for your Fatherhoods loue to our lowliness. And now who am I, and all mine, and all the Easterne part? Wee are liuing before your Holinesse, but as obedient seruants, are subiect to your Lordship, and with a mind farre from schisme kisse your holy feet, and earnestly desire health to your Holinesse, and flee to your prayers, and the prayers of your fellow seruants Peter and and Paul, that wee may bee made worthy of the remission of sinnes in the terrible Iudgement Day of God the Word, to whom, and his Father and the Holy Ghost, bee honour and glorie for ever Amen.

His profession of the Faith followeth, part whereof wee haue translated: Wee beleene in God the Father, who is the Maker of Heauen and Earth, and all things therein visible and invisible. And in the Sonne which is of him, and which is equall with him in Essence, and is not lesse then his Father and Maker of all things. And the Spirit of Sanctitie, which proceedeth from the Father, and is not begotten nor begotten, and hee is a glorious substance, and equall in substance with the Father and the Sonne. The Father is Begetter, and not begotten; and the Sonne is begotten, not begetter, and the Spirit of Sanctitie proceeding, not begetter nor begotten, &c. God the Word descended into the Virgin and was ioined with Man, which was compact in her in the power of the Spirit of Sanctitie, and was made one with man, as the coniunction of fire with Iron. And wee beleene that hee receined a body and soule, and understanding, &c. And though they say against vs, that wee confesse not that the Virgin is the Mother of God * but the Mother of Christ, that is, the Mother of Christ God over all: yet this is nothing, for this is set for the confusion on and reprobation of the false opinion of Apollinaris, which said that the Deitie was without Humanity, and to the confusion of the wickednesse of Semystius, which said; That Christ is a mere Man, to wit, Humanity without Diuinitie, &c. Wee in the denomination of Christ comprehend the two Natures, of the Deitie of the Humanity, and confesse not a simplicitie in Christ as they tra-* Nestorius himselfe in an Epistle to Pope Celestine, hath these words of the blessed Virgin: Christos con autem cum modo quodam theoticon dicitur &c.

The differences between the Orientals, called Nestorians, &c. vs.

* See Fulbertus, lib. 7. c. 2.

duce vs, &c. In another Epistle written by the said Elias to the Pope, hee confesseth that the differences acknowledged are brought to these heads. First, The Lord Pope, with all the Fathers of the Great Church of Rome, call the Virgin Saint Mary the Mother of God: but wee of the East call her the Mother of Christ. Secondly, They confesse two Natures of Christ, two Powers, and two Wills: but wee confesse one Power and one Will. Thirdly, They confesse one Person in Christ, and wee confesse two Persons. Fourthly, And they say that the Spirit proceedeth of the Father and the Sonne, and wee confesse that the Spirit proceedeth of the Father. Fifthly, Also the Fathers of Rome say, that that which comes out of our Lords Sepulcher * is not true light, and wee with all ours receiue it as true light. Hee saith, hee consulted with Adam aforesaid, and with Gabriel the ancientest Archbishop and chiefe Grammarian in his Iurisdiction: which Gabriel answered, That they had receiued of their Ancestors, that there is no diuision twixt vs and the Church of Rome, but in Ceremonies, and they in all their Regions obserue their owne Ceremonies: and as farre, saith hee, as I can understand, there is none other diuision but that one understandeth not the other. But touching thy request, behold Father Adam is before thee, which hath bene proued in the desert from his youth. And I said to our Father Adam, What sayest thou of these things? Hee answered, giue me three dayes space, and the third day, I will answer as much as my infirmities is able, and as much as may suffice, and the third day hee brought his writing; and it pleased mee and all mine. And I gaue him Letters with my Faith and Thy Epistles and Faith, and sent him to the Countries and our Flocke, writing that if they had any thing to answer, hee should bring it. A yeere after hee returned with Letters, that all of our profession submitted themselves. And now I haue sent him, &c.

The Treatise of the said Adam in seuen Chapters, is published by the said Stroza the Popes Secretary, in which hee laboureth to reconcile the Roman and Orientall Churches in the differences aforesaid; which by the said Stroza is learnedly discussed, and the truth enucleated and cleared from Nestorian shuffling, which the learned Reader may peruse in Stroza himselfe; the vnlearned could hardly doe it, though wee had troubled our selues to trouble him with the Translation. The effect was, Adam was reclaimed in those points aforesaid to the Orthodoxe Faith, and sent with the Popes Breue (published also in the Booke aforesaid) dated on the five and twentieth of March, 1614. And Adam wrote another Treatise in maintenance of his corrected faith learned at Rome, by him dated, Ann. 1974. Regis Gracorum, Rome. Diebus beatissimi Patris & Petri nostri temporis, Domini Papa Pauli Quinti, cuius oratio nobiscum sit; all published together by the said Stroza.

Godignius and Myraus say, that Iohn Antonie Maariertus, and Peter Metoscita two Iesuites, were sent backe with this Adam by the Pope, to make a more full reducing of the Nestorians.

CHAP. XVI.

A briefe survey of the Ecclesiasticall Politie Ancient and Moderne, or of the severall Patriarchs, Archbishops and Bishops Sees thorow the Christian World: also of the Iesuites Colledges and numbers, and of other Monasticall Orders.

Vbertus Myraus hath written a Treatise, called Notitia Episcopatum Orbis Christiani; and another of Ecclesiasticall Politie, or the State of Christian Religion in Europe, Asia, Africa, and the New World diuided into foure Bookes; and as many more of Monasticall originalls; out of whom principally, and out of some others I thought fit to collect such things as might serue for our present Historiall purpose; for the Readers knowledge as well of the extension of Christian Religion in these times, as the opinions and differing rites before deliuered.

Our Author begins with Italy, as being himself more then enough Italianated. The Princes now potent in Italy, are the Pope, the Spaniard (which is King of Naples, Sicil and Sardinia, and Duke of Millaine) the Prince of Piemont (which now is the Duke of Sauoy) the Great Duke of Tuscaine, the Dukes of Mantua, Mutina & Parma; the Republikes or free States of Venice, Genna, and Luca. Rome is the Seat of our Authors Religion, and by him honoured with that blasphemous title of Vrbs Aeterna (as for Terrarum domina, urbium Regina, Orbis compendium, they are given too, but too compendious) and was indeed of principall respect in the Church of Christ, euer since the Apostolicall preaching of the Gospell, and the Apostle of the Gentiles testified that their faith was then renowned thorow the whole world; which was so fattened with the blood of their Primitive Bishops and Martyrs, that no where was a more fertill haruest then there, during the Raigne of the Ethnike Emperours. Constantine subiecting his Imperiall Scepter to the Crosse, her Bishops also receiued greater splendor of power and pompe, and being the Imperiall Citie, was therefore reputed the first See or Seat of the Patriarches, which then were three, the Roman, Alexandrian, and Antiochian: which diuided the Ecclesiasticall Iurisdiction of the Roman World (so they called their Empire) betwixt the: the Constantinopolitan being after both added to the number, & preferred aboue the Alexandrian and Antiochian; and equalled also with the Roman, sauing his meere primacie of Order (for the same cause that now it was also become New Rome, and the Imperiall Citie) by decree of the Councell of Constantinople, A. 381. and more plainly expressed by the Chalcedon Councell, A. 451.

Rome.

Rom. 1. 8.

Three Patri-arches in the Roman Empire.
Luc. 2.
Constantinople.

See Plat. Onup.
Baron. and all the Writers of the Popes liues in Bonifac. 3.

Onupb. ad Plat.
in Bonif. 3.

Fiue Patri-arches.

Bellar. & alij.

Patriarkship of the West, or Rome.

As for reasons drawne from Scripture, I haue prayed for thee, I will giue thee the Keyes, feed my Sheepe, &c. now adayes alledged as proper causes of Papall preeminence, the ancient Councells knew them not, but alledged meere ciuill respects of the Imperiall residence and power: which yet so puffed vp the Imperious spirits of their successors, that in Gregories dayes the Constantinopolitan would needs be stiled Vniuersall Bishop, which Gregory then withstood as Antichristian; and yet in few dayes after his death, his successor Boniface obtained of Phocas the murtherer, that swelling and exorbitant Primacie and Papacie, in Ecclesiasticalls, to the Roman See, by Phocas (to make sure of the Romans, in that slippery state of his new gotten Empire by blond and treason) made the Head of al Churches. Which power could yet, neither by Phocas bee graunted any further then the Roman Empire extended, nor was euer acknowledged in the remoter parts of the world, till in these last times pouertie hath made some of the poore Patriarchs (I had almost said Parrats, whom their belly and externall respects haue taught their chups which was neuer with reall subiection acknowledged) yea the others Patriarches of the Empire to this day gainsay it, and by long vse, the Constantinopolitan is stiled Oecumenicall or Vniuersall Patriarch, the Roman vniuersall Pope (which title of Pope, was in ancient times commonly giuen to other Bishops, as in Saint Augustines and others Epistles is seene, and the name of Archbishop and Patriarch giuen as preminent Titles to the Roman Bishop, yet extant in the Roman Councells) who now hauing gotten a Spirituall Papacie, Gregory the seuenth aboue 1070. yeeres after Christ, began to turne the same into a Papall Monarchie, which his successors haue more fully effected, not onely in the absolute Principalitie of the Churches Patrimonie, but in a wide-mouthed challenge of Supremacie to depose Kings, and dispose Kingdomes in that hypocritical pretended ordine ad Deum. But this you shall finde in other Authors, and I but touch it and now returne to our Myraus. The Ierosolimitan Bishop, in honour of that holy Citie was dignified with that Patriarchall honor, but later: for the Councell of Nice left to the Bishop of Casaria his Metropolitan right entire: the Councell of Chalcedon gaue him the Title, which some say Leo the Bishop opposed so much in pretence of the Nicene authoritie, that it was not fully ratified till Iustinians time, in the fifth Councell, A. 553. Now for a fifth See at Babylon you haue heard Elias (a lye as I conceiue) not to be found I thinke ratified by any good History: nor were the most parts of his Iurisdiction euer subiect to the Roman Empire.

The Roman or Westerne Patriarch had sixe Diocesses, Italy, Illyricum, Africa, The Gallie, Spaines, and and Britaine, which were subdivided into severall Prouinces, of which Italy is said to haue seuenteene, Illyricum seuen, Africa fixe, Gallia seuentene, Hispania fixe, and Britaine fixe, Britannia Prima, Br. Secunda, Maxima Caesariensis, Flavia Caesariensis and Valentia: by Gregory the Great reduced to the two Archbishopricks of Canterbury and Torke, and long after Saint Andrewes and Glascow, two other in Scotland, and foure in Ireland, by authoritie of Pope Engenius, An. 1151. Ar- mach, Dublin, Cassiliensis and Tnamensis. Thus much generally and briefly for the West. Now for the Easterne World, it was diuided into seuen Diocesses or Regions, Oriens, Egyptus, Asiana, Pon- tica, Thracia, Macedonia and Dacia. Of the Orientall part (more properly called) Antioch was chiefe Citie, of Egypt Alexandria, of the Asian Ephesus, of the Pontike Casarea, of Thracia Constantinople, of Macedonia and Dacia Thessalonica, till Iustinian made Iustiniana Prima the Metropolitan of Dacia. The Constantinopolitan had three Diocesses acknowledged by the Chalcedon Councell, Asiana, Pontica, Thracia. Asiana had eleuen Prouinces, Pontica as many, Thracia fixe. Macedonia had anciently fixe Prouinces, Dacia fixe. In the time of Leo Emperour, which began to reigne An. 1386. the Constantinopolitan had eightie one Metropolitans subiect to him (and before the Norman Conquest many more, when Sicilia, Calabria, and many Cities of the Kingdome of Naples were subiect to the Greeke Empire) and eightie three Archbishopricks in the same Leos time.

Easterne division.

Pat. of Const.
tinople.

Pat. of Alexandria.

Pat. of Antio-chia.

W. Tyr. b. 12. S.

Pat. of Ierusalem.

Meaner Patriarchates.

Catholici.

Aquileia.

* See Myr.
Notit. Ep. l. 1 c.
14. Glo. d. 21 c. 1 verb. Archiepiscopus.
Azarias Frid-
nius a trauceller

Cardinals.
Marc. Cor. Sac.
Cer. R. E.
Of these read
Onuphr. us lib.
de Epist. tit. &
D. C. & Sac.
Cer. m. R. E.

To the Patriarch of Alexandria the Councell of Nice ascribeth Egypt, Lybia, and Pentapolis:
After that there were numbred fixe Prouinces, Egypt, Thebais, Lybia Superior, Lybia Inferior, or Pentapolis, Arcadia and Augustamnica, and after ten. The Patriarch of Antioch had the East Dio-cesse, in which were fifteene Prouinces, Syria prima and secunda; Palestina prima, secunda, Saluta- ris; Phoenicia prima and secunda, Cilicia prima and secunda, Cyprus, Euphratensis, Mesopotamia, Osrhana, Arabia, Isauria. When the Frankes had conquered the Holy Land, the Antiochian had fixe Archbishopricks onely subiect to him, Tarsus, Edeffa, Apamia, Heliopolis, Conzensum and Mann- strensem: Tyrius reckons thirteene Metropolitans in the first times, besides nine Cities Metropolitans not Suffragans, and twelue Archbishopricks, which it seemeth were also autocephali, as the former. But afterwards Ierusalem was decked with Antiochian spoiles, the three Palestinas being added to the Ierolimitan Patriarch. Tyrius addes two other taken from the Alexandrian Patriarch, Rubensis and Berytensis, in later times stiled Petracensis and Bostrensis; and vnder the Frankes, Tyre, Casarea, Nazareth and Petracensis.

Other Patriarchs there are of lesse note, as of Seleucia, whom Filefacus suspected to haue remoued his See to Armenia; of Ethiopia (who is neuertheless subiect to the Patriarch of Alexan- dria) of these the Seleucian was to haue the sixt place; the Ethiopian the seuenth in Councells, and they both with the Armenian were stiled Catholici. The Patriarch of Aquileia is mentioned by Paulus Diaconus, and it is propable that when Aquileia was taken by the Lumbards, the Patriarch remoued to Gradus, and was called the Patriarch of New Aquileia or Gradenfis. Friuli also hath had that title; and Venice hath succeeded in that Aquileian and Gradenfis Patriarchate, A.
1450. by grant of Pope Eugenius. The Pisan Prelate hath beene also stiled Patriarch, and the To- letane in Spaine, as also the Valentian, and the Archbishop of Goa, and the Archbishop of Can- turbury, Ments, Lions, and Bituricensis, but not so commonly and constantly. The Iacobites, Ne- storians, Maronites, Cophiti, and other Easterne Sects with their Patriarchs wee haue already considered. There are also Franc-Armenians vnder the Archbishop of Nexianum, in whose Iurisdiction are the Townes Abbaran, Abbragon, Carna, Saltach, Hascassen, Meascen, Carfan, Xhabun, Giuhug, Caragus, Chensug, and Artach; in which are Monasteries of Dominicans. Azarias Fri- donius an Armenian, A. 1604. was made Archbishop of Mexian, in Armenia Maior, fixe daies journey from Tauris. Hee was a Dominican, and came from Armenia in Rome, and out of his writing this is related. The Georgians were wont to bee subiect to the Patriarch of Constanti- nople, but now are diuided. (The Russians also haue procured their Metropolitan the title of Patriarch, as wee shall see in D. Fletchers Relations. They tell also of a Patriarch at Damascus, at Mosul, Cairo, and other places which proteste the former titles.) But let vs looke backe to Rome, where Myraus next to the Pope the Prince, as he calls him, of all Patriarchs and Bishops placeth the Cardinals.

The Priests and Deacons of Rome haue growne with the Papacie to a strange Prelacie vn-knowne in the first thousand yeeres after Christ, to be not only aboue Bishops and Archbishopps, and other names of Ecclesiasticall greatnesse, but to be Peeres to Kings and Emperours and Coniudices terrarum orbis, (as Pope Pius the Second calls them.) Of these fixe are Cardinall Bishops, Ostia, Porto, Sauina, Palestina, Frascati, Alba: the Cardinall Priests and Deacons haue their names of the Parish Churches in Rome, (all which Cardinals were wont to bee but twelue, and, when a Prelate from any place was chosen, as appeareth in our English Ecclesiasticall Storie, by Wendouer, Paris and others, he left his former Prelacie and Residence, and attended the Pope, as one of his Priuie Countell, and another succeeded to his former place: since which time, within these three hundred yeeres, they haue not only increased the numbers at pleasure, and chosen the principall Prelates of other Nations; to make themselves strong in each Nation, permitting them there still to reside; but haue procured the noblest persons for bloud, and most eminent for power

power in each Kingdome to admit of that dignitie, and haue heaped greatest preferments in eue-ry Countrey on their Cardinals, which only theare the fleecce; and neuer see the face of their innumerable flockes.)

Five Patriarchal Churches
in Rome.

Besides, this preferring of Priests and Deacons to Patriarkes, in Rome it selfe (as representing the whole Church) they haue instituted five Patriarchall Churches, viz. S. Iohn Lateranes, S. Peters, S. Pauls, S. Maries the greater, S. Lawrences. The Church of Laterane hath an Arch-presbyter who is a Cardinall. S. Peters beareth the Title of the Church of Constantinople, and hath an Arch-priest Cardinall. S. Pauls represents the Church of Alexandria, hath an Abbot and Monkes. S. Maries designes the Church of Antioch, hath an Arch-priest, Cardinall and Canons as Lateran and S. Peters. S. Lawrence represents the Church of Ierusalem; it once had an Abbot and Monkes, now is in Commenda, and hath Canons Regulars.

Where two are ioyned with this - stroke, it beokeneth an vnion of two Bishopricks.
Rauenna, sometimes competitor with Rome
Fermo.

The Bishopricks of the Romane Prouince are Sutri-Nepi, Cinita-Castellana-Horti, Viterbo-Tuscanella, Bagnarea, Orueto, Perugia (an Vniuersitie) Citta di Castello, Cinita de Plebe, Castro, Arezzo, Spoleto, Terni, Narny, Amelia, Todi, Rieti, Foligno, Affisi (the Countrey of S. Francis)
Tinoli, Aragna, Verulo, Terracina, Sezza, Segni, Alatro, Fiorentino, Ancona-Humana, Loreto, Ricanati, Ascoli, Iesi, Osimo, Fano, Camerino. Luca hath the Pall.

The Archbishop of Rauenna hath these Suffraganes, Adri, Comachio, Faenza, Brentinore, Forli, Cesena, Sarsina, (Countrey of Plantus) Rimini, Imola, Cervia, Fanestria, Ferrara (an Vniuersitie)
The Archbishop of Bologna instituted 1583. hath Bologna (an Vniuersitie) Parma (an Vni-uersitie) Placenza, Reggio, Modema, Crema, Borgo di S. Domino. The Archbishop of Fermo created by Sixtus the Fifth, hath Suffraganes, Macerata (an Vniuersitie) Tolentino, San Senerino, Montalto, Ripa, Beneuent and Aninon follow in their places.

Naples.
Capua.

Salerno.

Amalfi.

In the Kingdome of Naples, the Archbishop of Napoli (an Vniuersitie) Pozzuolo, Nola, Cerra, Ischia, Aversa (an exempt) to which are vnited Cuma and Atella. The Archbishop of Capua hath Suffraganes, Teano, Calvi, Caserta, Gaiata, Carinola, Sergna, Sessa, Venafro, Monte Cassino and Saint Germano, Aquino, Pondi, Gaieta, Sora. The Archbishop of Salerno hath Salerno (an Vni-uersitie) Capaccio, Pulcastro, Sarno, Acerno, Marsico, Campagna, Nocera delli Pagani, Nusco, Cana. Vnder the Archbishop of Amalfi are the Bishops of Capri, Scala-Rauello, Minori, Lettre.
Vnder the Archbishop of Sorrento are Uico, Massa, Stabia. The Archbishop of Conza hath Mu-ro, Satriano Cagiano, Lacedogna, S. Angelo di Lombardi-Bisaccia, Monte Verde. The Archbishop of Cirezza and Matera hath the Bishop of Venosa, Tricarico, Potenza, Granina-Anglona, Monte Peloso. The Archbishop of Taranto his Suffraganes are Motula, Castellaneta, Oria. Vnder the Archbishop of Brindisi are Hostuni, Nardo, Monopoli. Vnder Otranto, Lecce, Capo di Leuco, Castro, Gallipoli, Vigento. Vnder the Archbishop of Bari and Canosa, Bitonto, Gionenazzo, Ruvo, Conuersano, Monermino, Pulignano, Lauicello, Bisetto, Catzeri, Molfetta an exempt. The Archbishop of Tranni and Salpe hath Bisignia, Andri. To the Archbishop of Manfredonia and *Citta di S.
Angelo* are subiect, Vesiti, Melpo-Rappollo. The Theatine Archbishop erected in Cinita di Chieti, Anno 1526. hath Suffraganes, Ortona, Citta di Penna-Atri, Valva-Sulmona, Aquila, Marsi, Teramo, Cinita di Calvi. The Archbishop Lancianensis hath no Suffragane Bishop. Pius the Fourth aduanced it. The Bishop of Trineto is an exempt. The Archbishop of Reggio is ouer the Bishops of Catanzaro, Crotone, Tropea, Oppedo, Bone, Nicastro, Nicotera, Gieraci, Squillaci, Mileto. The Archbishop of Cosenza and Monte alto hath Marterano, S. Marco, Bisignano, Cassano. The Archbishop of Rossano hath no Suffragane. The Archbishop of San Senerina hath Vmbriato, Belcastro, Isola, Cariati, Strongoli. The Archbishop of Beneuento in the Popes Iurisdiction, hath Ascoli, Telese, S. Agatha delli Goti, Alife, Monte Marano, Anellino-Fergiente, Vico della Baronia, Ariano, Bonino Bonino, Vulturara and Monte Coruino, Lavino, Termoli, San Senero, Troia, Guardia Alfana. So that in the Kingdome of Naples, besides the Popes Beneuento, there are nineteene Arch-bishopricks.

Number of Ie-suits & their Colledges in Italie.

The Iesuites haue in the Continent of Italy (besides the Prouinces of Sicilia and Sardinia) foure Prouinces, the Roman, Neapolitan, of Millaine, and of Venice. The Romane Prouince hath at Rome, Domus professa, Collegium Romanum, Domus probationis, the Colledge of the Penitentie, the German Colledge, the English Colledge, the Roman Seminarie, the Colledge of Maronites, the Scots Colledge. The Residence at Frascati, the Colledges of Tinoli, Loreto, Perugia, Fiorenza, Siena, Macerata, Ricanati, Sezza, Ancona, Monte Santo, Monte Pulciano, Fermo, Citta di Castello, Ascoli, Sora. In this Prouince are seuen hundred fortie seuen of the societie. The Prouince of Naples hath in Naples Domus professa, the Colledge, the House of Probation, the New House professed. The Colledges of Catanzaro, Nola, Lecce, Bari, Salerno, Consenza, Barletta, Chieti, Aquila, Be-neuento, House of Probation at Atri, Colledges of Bonino, Trepia, Massa, Castell à Mare, Capua, Mol-fetta, the Residences of Monopoli, Taranto, Paula. In this Prouince are five hundred ninety foure of the societie. In the Prouince of Millaine, are at Millaine the House professed, and the Colledge Breiden; at Genua the House professed, the Colledge, and the House of probation; the Colledges of Turino, Como, Vercelli, Mondeni, Cremona, Bastia, Nizza, Alexandria, the House of probation at Arona, and the Residence of Pavia. In this Prouince are foure hundred and eleuen of the Company. The Venetian Prouince hath the professed House at Venice, the Colledges of Padoua, Ferrara, Bo-

Bologna, Brescia, Forli, Parma, with another there for the Nobilitie Piacenza, Verona, Mantona, Mirandola, Reggio, Faenza, Castiglione, the houses of probation at Nonellara, Imola, Busseto, the Residences of Candia and Vicenza. In this Prouince are three hundred seventy three of the Societie.

Sicilia hath three Archbishopricks, first the Panormitan, to whom are subiect the Bishops of Mazara, Gergenti. Malta is gouerned by their great Master and Knights Hospitulars. The Archbishop of Messana hath vnder him the Bishops of Lipari, Patti, Cefalu. The Archbishop of Mons Regalis hath Catania and Siracusa. In it also are Iesuites Colledges, Houses and Residences one and twentie. Fellowes sixe hundred thirtie eight.

10 The Ile and Kingdome of Sardinia hath had fourteene Episcopall Cities, and now hath according to Ferrarius, three Archbishopricks, Calaris, Sassari, Arborea, and Bishops, Villa Ecclesia, Bosa, Alghero, Castrum Aragonense, and Lusa.

The Archbishop of Calaris or Cagliari is Primate of Sardinia and Corfica. His Suffraganes are Doli, Iglesias, Solus. Suelis vnit to the Archbishop. The Archbishop of Sassari or Torre Sassari hath Algar, Bosa, Empurias, Terra Noua. The Archbishop of Arborea hath Ussella, Terra Alba, S. Iusta. In Sardinia are Houses, Colledges and Seminaries of Iesuites eight, and in them one hundred and ninetie of that Societie and Prouince.

20 Millaine is the Seat of the Spanish Viceroy and Counsell, and also of an Archbishop, to whom are subiect the Bishops of Cremona, Lodi, Nouarra, (Birth-place of Peter Lombard) Alessandria della Paglia, Tortona, Viglenano, Bergamo, Brescia, Vercelli, Aste, Casale di Monferrato, Alba, Acqui, Saoua, Vintimiglia, Pavia hath the Pall and is an Vniuersitie.

Etruria is for the most part subiect to the Great Duke of the Family of Medices, in which Florentia, Pisa and Siena haue beene Free States. Charles the fifth, Anno 1530. created Alexander de Medices his Sonne in Law Duke of Florence, whose Sonne Cosmus by Pope Pius the fifth was created Great Duke of Toscaine, Anno 1569. This Cosmus intituted the Knight Order of Saint Stephen against the Turkes. The Archbishop of Florence or Fiorenza hath Suffragans, Fiesola, Pistoia, Volterra, Colle, Burgo S. Sepulchro, Serzana, Monte Pulciano, where Cardinall Belarmino was borne, and Cortona are Exempts. The Archbishop of Siena (which is also an Academie) hath Soana, Chiusi, Grosseto, Massa-Populonia, Pientia, Monte Alcinio. The Archbishop of Pisa (an Vniuersitie also) hath suffragans Ciuitella, Aiazzo, Sagona, Aleria.

Mantua famous for Virgils birth hath a Duke of the Family Gonzaga; Duke Vincent, A. 1608. instituted the Military Order of The Redeemer Iesus Christ, in honour of his blood supposed there kept. Musina and Rhegium haue a Duke of the Este Family, reuolued to the Papacie, Anno 1598. Vrbino of the Family Roborea and Parma, and Placentia of the Farnesian. Vrbino hath an Archbishop and sixe Bishopricks subiect, the Leopoltan, Pisaurian, Calliensis, Eugubinus, Forosempronienfis, and Senogallienfis. Parma and Placentia with Burgo in that Principallitie are Suffragans to the Archbishop of Bologna.

40 Venice, Genua, Luca, and Ragusi are Italian Free States; the chiefe is Venice, and said to incline to the French, as Genua the next, to the Spaniard: Ragusi supports it selte by fauour of the Turke, paying a yeerely pension to him. Luca hath a Bishop subiect to the Pope only, and vsing a Pall. Ragusi (in times past Epidaurus) is in Dalmatia, Italianated in language and conditions: it hath an Archbishop, to whom are subiect the Bishops Stagnensis, Tribunnensis, Marcatensis, Rodonensis, Garzalenfis, Stephanensis and Curzolenfis.

In the State of Venice are two Patriarkes, one of Venice, which succeeded to Gradus, the other of Aquileia: and foure Archbishops, Spalatenfis, Iaderensis, Corcyrenfis, and Candienfis. The Patriarke of Venice hath Suffragan Bishops, Chioza, Torzello, both Ilands. The Patriarke of Aquileia resideth in Vdene, and to him are subiect the Bishops of Como (Countrey of both Plinies) Verona, Padoua, Vicenza, Treoizi, Concordia, Zeneda, Felire, Ciuida di Bellun, Pola, Parenzo, Trieste, Petin, Capo d' Istria, Citta Noua, Trento and Mantona are Exempts. The Archbishop of Spalatro and Salona, Primate of Dalmatia and Croatia, hath Suffragans, Segna, Nona, Faro-Lesina, Tran, Sanadria, Scardona (subiect to the Turke) Tina, Almiza. The Archbishop Iaderensis, or of Zara a Venetian Iland, hath Suffraganes, Arbe, Viglia, Ossaro. The Archbishop of Corcyra, or Corfu, hath the Bishops of the Ilands Cefalonia and Zante. The Archbishop of Crete or Candie hath vnder him the Bishops of Canea, Rettimo, Sittia-Hierapetra, Cheroneffo, Melliptamo, Archadia, Sicchimo, Budoa sometimes subiect to the Seruan Archbishop. Some adde Catharensis and Curzulensem.

Genua hath in times past extended their Empire to Caffa in Taurica, Cyprus, Chio and Lesbos, and to Pera. It now commandeth almost all Liguria and Corfica. To the Archbishop of Genua are Suffragans, Albenga, Bobi, Brignale, Noli, Mariana-Accia, Nebio. To the Gennois are thirteene Diocesess subiect, but some of the Bishops acknowledge the Archbishops of Millaine and Florence. Sixe Bishopricks are in the Iland and Kingdome of Corfica, subiect to that State, Mariana, Aleria, Nebium, Sagona, Aciensum and Adiacium. Malta hath a Colledge of Iesuits.

Sicilia the Bishops.

Iesuites.

Sardinia.

Iesuites.

Millaine.

Toscaine.

Great Duke.

Mantua.

Foure Italian Free States.

Ragusi.

Venice.

Two Patriarkes &c.

Genua.

Spain.

Spaine.

* The Manuscript was sometimes presented to Q. Elizabeth: and came to my hand from M. Burrough Controller of the Navy, not so perfect as I could have wished: yet as it is, not warranting the authoritie; I haue transcribed somthings thence, and inserted with Myraus. By fault of the transcriber, many names are so fallly written, that I was loth to giue the aduenture to preuent the Readers correction. Bertius ascribeth but 200000. Duckets to the Church of Toledo, and 80000. to the Archbishop. Dam. à Goes & Mar. Siculus haue their valuations also but more ancient, & much since improved. This Manuscript reciteth the Dukes, Marquesses & Earles of Spaine with their seuerall Reuenues, which are farre lesse then these of the Bishops, the Dukes from 10000. to 70000. which only Braganza exceedeth, and likewise the Marquesses, The Earles from 8000. to 20000. Bertius saith, the Duke of Infantalgi hath 120000. Duckets, and Medina Sidonia 130000. Duc.

Spaine first attempted, and one of the last of the Roman Prouinces pacified in the declining of the Empire, was possessed by the Wandals, Suenes, and Alans, whom the Gothes had expelled Gaul. The Gothes expelled thence by the Frankes, chased the Wandals and Alans out of Spaine, and destroyed the Suenes. The Saracens Anno 720. expelled the Gothes, and could not by the Gothicke remnants be quite exterminated till Anno 1492. at which time the New World also was added to the Spanish Fortunes by Colons Discouerie, and by the Match of the Heire of the Houses of Burgundie and Austria, with the Heire of Aragon and Castile, and since by Conquests &c. The Castilian hath in few yeeres from an estate in comparison of some other Kingdomes, poore and almost contemptible growne to the present puissance and almost terrible greatnesse. In Spaine and Portugall are these Archbishopricks, whose names and reuenues out of a Manuscript are thus deliuered.

Toledo, his Reuenues are said to bee 320000. Duckets, more then of diuers Kingdomes. Simill, 113000. Duckets. Granado, 80000. Duckets. Lisbone, 130000. Duckets. Saragosa, 70000. Duckets. Valentia, 90000. Duckets. Tarragona, 80000. Duckets. Burgos, 90000. Duckets. Santiago, 100000. Duckets. Brage, 90000. Duckets. He omits Euora, which he reckons among the Bishops, being latelier exalted to the Pall. Myraus reckons them thus, Toledo, Burgis, Compostella, Simill, Granado, Casarrangusta, Tarragona, Valentia, Brararenfis, Lisbone and Ebora. To the Archbishop of Toledo, Primate of Spaine are Suffragans, the Bishops of Cordona, Segonia Cuenca, Sequenza (an Vniuersitie) Iaca, Cartagena or Murcia, Osma, Valladolid instituted by Clement the Eighth, Anno 1595. made an Vniuersitie also. To the Archbishop of Brugis in olde Castile are subiect Pamplona chiefe Citie of Nanarre, Calagorra, Palencia. To the Archbishop of Compostella or Santiago in Galacia, the Bishops of Salamanca an Vniuersitie erected, Anno 1240. Anila, Placenzia, Lugo, Astorga, Zamora, Orense, Tuy, Badaios, Mondonedo, Coria, Cinista Rodrigo, Leon exempt, and Oniedo exempt. To the Archbishop of Simill in Betica are subiect Guadix, Cadiz, and the Bishop of the Canaries. To the Archbishop of Granada, erected by Alexander the sixth, Malaga and America. To the Archbishop of Casarrangusta, or Caragosa in Aragon, Huesca an old Vniuersitie, Iaca, Barbastro, Tarazona, Teroel, Albarazin. To the Arch. of Tarragona in Catalonia, Tortosa, Lerida an Vniuersitie, Barcelona an Vniuersitie, Vicz, Girona, Vrgel, Elna, Solsona, Perpimian, by Paulus quintus. To the Arch. of Valencia, Segorue, Orihuela, Mallorca. To the Arch. of Braga in Portugall, Porto, Viseo, Guardia, Lamego, Miranda, Leyra. To the Arch. of Lisbone, Coymbra, an Vniuersitie; Portalegre, Centa in Africa, Funchal in Madera, Angra in Tercera, Congo in Africa, Cabo Verde, or San Tago, San Thome, both in the Ilands so called, (the Bishop of Brasil) at San Saluador, or the Bay of all Saints (lately taken by the Dutch.) To the Archbishop of Euora, erected 1540. The Bishops of Silues in Faro, Elnas, Tanger in Africa vnited with Centa. Pope Adrian the sixth, Anno 1523. gaue the Kings of Spaine power to elect and present their Bishops, as Mariana reporteth.

My Manuscript reckoneth not so many, nor goeth to Africa and the Ilands, and perhaps some of the Bishops in that time might be vacant or holden by Commenda, and so the Title drowned. The names differ somewhat, perhaps by false writing, which may be helped by the former Catalogue. For the valuations I thought them not vnworthy recitall together as they are in the said Booke expressed, although I must intreate the Readers patience for misse-writing the names by some vnlearned transcriber, which yet I present as I found.

	Duckets.		Duckets.		Duckets.		Duckets.
Sobrack	50000.	Camaria	50000.	Corona	50000.	Osma	46000.
Torrossa	50000.	Cordona	56000.	Rodrigo	65000.	Ayda	48000.
Tuy	45000.	Cartagena	50000.	Quadrapp	64000.	Placentia	53000.
Vigne	58000.	Cadona	56000.	Quembra	75000.	Valentia	54000.
Alueria	55000.	Pamplona	83000.	Quardio	47000.	Solomonea	65000.
Viso	50000.	Corria	58000.	Questarie	47000.	Segeusia	69000.
Astorga	65000.	Dadies	50000.	Ayne	480000.	Segonia	65000.
Anela	60000.	Sequenza	60000.	Lomego	53000.	Selua	53000.
Badaies	5600.	Quembra	57000.	Leon	57000.	Malorca	57000.
Barcelona	75000.	Euora	74000.	Lerida	64000.	Mandanedo	63000.
Camora	57000.	Enna	58000.	Lugo	50000.	Oporia	69000.
Callabora	65000.			Maliga	64000.	Orensa	58000.

Damianus à Goes addeth that the Clergie of Spaine haue twice as much Reuenues as the Bishops, besides Impropriations of Tithes they granted by the Pope to the King and Grandes: and that besides all this, the Monasteries and Abbeyes Reuenues, exceed those of the Clergie.

There are also in Spaine certaine Militarie Orders instituted to free the Countrey from the Moors. Such were the Orders of Saint James, with a long red Crosse, of Alcantara with a square red Crosse of Calatrana with a square greene Crosse: which were by Pope Adrian appropriated to the King: besides the Orders of Christ and others.

The rest not vnder 40000. Marqueses from 10000 Duc. to 60000. Earles from 10000. to 40000.

There

There are also Iesuits diuided into five Spanish Prouinces : the Prouince of Toledo hath Colledges, Houses and Residences one and twentie, in them five hundred and seuentie Iesuites. The Prouince of Castile eight and twentie, in them six hundred and thirteene. The Prouince of Aragon fourteene, and Iesuites three hundred and ninetie. The Batske Prouince foure and twentie, and six hundred Iesuites. The Prouince of Portugall eighteene, and six hundred and eightie of the Societie. The Ile Maiorica hath a Bishop and Vniuersitie. The Canaries haue a Bishop also. So haue the Islands of Cape Verd with a Colledge of Iesuites. Tercera likewise : and in it and Saint Michaels are Iesuites Colledges. Madera hath a Bishop and Iesuiticall Colledges.

Iesuites in Spaine.

- 10 IN France are numbred one hundred and seuentene Diocesses, fourteene of which haue Arch-Bishopricks, which are these, with their one hundred and three Suffragans. The Primate Archbishop of Lions hath Austun, Langres, Mascon, Chalon Sur Saone. The Archbishop of Rone in Normandie, Baioux, Aureux, Eurenx, Sais, Lizieux, Constances. The Archbishop of Tours, hath Mans, Renes, Angers an Vniuersitie, Nantes an Vniuersitie, Cornouaille, Vannes, Leon, Tri- quier, Saint Brien, Saint Malo, Dol which weareth a Pall, and is exempt. The Archbishop of Sens, Chartres, Auxerre, Trois, Orleans an Vniuersitie and Dutchie of the Kings second Sonne, Paris an Vniuersitie and seate Royall, Meaux, Neuers. The Archbishop of Rhemes, Duke and Chiefe Peere of France, hath Soissons, Chalon, Laon, Senlis, Beaunais, Amiens, Ncyon, Bouloigne
Surmer. The Archbishop Bisuricensis, or of Bourges Primate of Aquitaine an Vniuersitie, hath 20 Suffragans Clérmon, Rodes, Albij, Caors, Limoges, Mende, Le Tuy, Castres, Vabres, Tulle, Saint
Flour. The Archbishop of Bordeaux hath Agen, Engoulesme, Santonge, Poitiers an Vniuersitie, Perigoux, Condom, Maillezais, Luzon, Sarlat. The Archbishop of Auch hath Aq, Letoure, Saint Bertrand de Comenge, S. Legier de Conserans, Aue, Basas, Tarbe de Bigorre, Oleron on Bearn, Les- car, Baionne. The Archbishop of Narbonne, Beziers, Agde, Carcassoue, Nismes an Vniuersitie, Lodens, S. Pont de Tomiers, Alec, Mompelien an Vniuersitie, Vzes. The Archbishop Aquensis, or of Aix in Prouence, hath Suffragans the Bishops of Ries, Apt, Frejus, Gap, Cisteron. The Archbishop of Vienne, Genene (now residing at Anessy in Sauoy) Grenoble, Vuisers, Die-valents, both Vniuersities, S. Jean de Maurienne vnder the Duke of Sauoy. The Archbishop of Embrun hath Digne, Grasse, Vence, Senex, Clandenez, Nice in Sauoy. The Archbishop of Arles, Marseille, S.
30 Paul de Tricastin, Tolon, Orange, the Principalitie of the Prince of Orange, an Vniuersitie and seat of a Parliament. The Archbishop of Tolose (an Vniuersitie) hath Pasmires, Montauban, Mire- poix, La Vaur, Rieux, Lombes, S. Papoul. Foure of the former Bishops, Maurianensis, Genenensis
Niceensis and Arançonensis are not subiect to the French King : in whose roome you may adde Metemsem, Tyllemsem, Urdumensem and Bellicensem to make vp the former number.

France.

In France also are the Chiefes or Originals of many Orders, as the Chuniake Order in the Diocese of Meticon founded Anno 910. by Abbat Berno; Grandemont founded by Stephen, Anno 1126. Cartusia Maior by Bruno 1084. Cistercium 1098. Pramonstratum 1120. In the Diocese of Landun. Cerni Frigidi by Iohn Matha 1126. Vallis Scholarium in Champaine by William an Englishman 1218. Fons Ebraidi in the Diocese of Poitiers by Robert Blefeld 1117. The Hospitallars of 40 Saint Anthone in the Diocese of Vienna, by Gasto 1121. Our Ladies Charitie 1307. S. Bernard de penitencia, or the Reformed Cistercians by Iohn Barrerim 1600. The Willhelmites by Saint Wil- ham Duke of Aquitaine. The Militarie Orders of the Holy Ghost by Henry the Third, and of Saint Michael, and of Saint Mary of Mount Carmel, and of Saint Lazarus approoued by Paul the Fifth.

Religious and Militarie Orders.

The Iesuites haue five Prouinces in France, the Prouince called of France, hath fourteene Houses, Colledges and Residences; the Prouince of Aquitaine ten, in which Prouince are two hundred and eightie Iesuites. The Prouince of Lions fourteene, in them foure hundred and seuentie. The Prouince of Tolose eleuen, in them three hundred and ten. The Prouince of Cham- paine ten, and two hundred twentie six Iesuites.

Iesuits in France.

In France, though not in the French subiection is the Country of Aninion, in which Citie the 50 Popes resided seuentie yeeres together. The Archbishop hath three Suffragans, Carpentras, Cabal- lon, Vaison. In Sauoy is the Archbishop Tarentaisensis, to whom the Bishops Augustanus and Sedu- nenfis are Suffragans. Piemont is subiect to the same Duke, the Metropolitan Citie whereof is Taurinum, Seat of the Dukes and an Vniuersitie, to which are subiect the Bishops Epoediensis, Montis Regalis and Fossanensis; Saluzo is an exempt.

Aninion the Popes Coun-ty. Sauoy.

The Duke of Sauoy is Chiefe of two Militarie Orders, Of the Virgins Annuntiation, and of SS. Maurice and Lazarus. Lorraine, sometimes a Kingdome, now a Dutchie, hath Nancie the Metropolitan Citie, Pontamousson an Vniuersitie ruled by Iesuites, S. Nicola is of next note. Lo- raine is subiect to diuers Bishops, amongst others, Metensis, Tullensis and Urdunensis Imperiall Ci-60 ties wonne by Henry the second.

Two Militarie Orders. Lorraine.

The Principalitie of Orange, hath the B. of Orange as is said, and an Vniuersitie: it is subiect to the house of Nassau, Henry of Nassau marrying the Sister and Heire of Philibertus Cabillonensis Viceroy of Naples, flainat the siege of Florence, A. 1530. Renatus son of Henry was flaine 1544.
William his brothers sonne succeeded and was traiterously murdered at Delfe 1584. His sonne Orange.

The Low Counties.

Philippus Gulielmus after long detention in Spain, died at Brussels An. 1618. and left his Brother Prince Maurice his Heire by Testament: whose Arts, experience and exploits Militarie haue attracted into a stupendious gaze the Eyes of all Europe,

His Name admits vs into Gallia Belgica, or the Low Countreyes, or seuentene Lands, of which foure are Dukedomes, Brabant, Limburg, Luttenburg and Gelderland: seuen Counties or Earledomes, Flanders, Artois, Hanalt, Holland, Zeland, Namur and Zutphen: the Marquisate of the Holy Empire, and five Lordships of East Frisland, Mechlin, Virecht, Ouerisel, and Groningen. In these are two hundred and ten Cities walled and ditched about, Villages fixe thousand three hundred, besides Monasteries, Forts, Palaces and Mannor-houses almost innumerable. That part which obeyeth the Archdutchesse is Romish, that which acknowledgeth the States <sup>10</sup> gouernment is of the Protestants faith, not without Arminian and other fancies amongst many of them.

In times past there were but foure Belgian Bishopricks, of Cambray, Arras, Tournay and V. trick. But King Philip the second (seeking to alter the gouernment, which occasioned the Wars and this Diuision, whereby about one halfe of the Countrey haue not only defended their Liberties, maugre the Austrian Greatnesse, American Treasures, Spanish Ambition and Italian Souldioury, to the Worlds amazement, many hundred thousands of Christians beeing slaine to purchase the Spaniard this losse; but haue acquired a Free Estate, with wealth and honour, and by them haue beene so acknowledged, whom they would willingly with conseruation of their Liberties haue obeyed) Philip the second (his losse made me almost lose my selfe) Anno 1559. <sup>20</sup> procured the Pope to constitute three Archbishopricks, and fiftene Bishopricks (his Inquisition shall escape our inquisition) the Archbishop of Mechelen, to whose Iurisdiction are subiect the Bishops of Antwerpe, of Bruges, Gant, Iperen, Rurmound, Hertogenbosch: the Archbishop of Cambray, whose Suffraganes are Arras, Tournay, Saint Omer, Namur. The Archbishop of Utrecht hath Donenier, Groningen, Harlem, Leenwarden, Middleburgh.

Iesuites.

The Iesuites haue there two Prouinces, Flandre-Belgica which hath eightene Houses, Colledges and Residences, in which there are of that crue fixe hundred and seuentene. And Gallo-Belgica which hath twentie Houses, Colledges, and Residences, and fixe hundred fiftie two Fellowes of that Order, beside Augustinians, Dominicans, and I know not what others. <sup>30</sup>

Germanie hath seuen Archbishopps Mentz, Collen, Trier, all three Electors; Meydburg Salzburg, Breme, Befanzon. To the Archbishop of Mentz (an Vniuersitie) are subiect Bishops Wormes, Wurtzburg an Vniuersitie, Speir Aichstet, Strasburg, Werden, Chur, Heildesheim, Paderborne, Costritz, Halberstadt, Ausburg. Bamberg is exempt. To Coloigne, are Suffraganes Liege, Munster, Minden, Osenbrug. To Trier, Metz, Toul, Vordun, all in Lorraine and now French. To Meydburg, Meyssen, Mersburg, Brandenburg, Hanelburg. To Salzburg (an Vniuersitie) Freyfingen, Regenspurg, Passau, Brixen, Goritz, Lauenmütz, Seckaw Vienna in Austria, is an Vniuersitie and exempt; Newstat and Loßbach are also exempt. <sup>40</sup>

German Bishops Princes.

To Breme are subiect Lubeck, Rathenburg, Swerin. To the Archbishop of Vesontionensis or Befanzon (an Vniuersitie) are subiect Basel an Vniuersitie, Losanne, Bellay en Bresse. All these, as also the Bishop of Trent are Princes of the Empire, and Lords in Temporalibus, except Lauenmütz, Seckaw, Chiemse, and Goritz. Meydburg and Breme, and eight Bishopricks are Protestants.

Iesuites.

The late Warres haue since our Authors writing so altered the face of things in Germanie that iust account cannot bee giuen of their Religion and State so vnsetled. And how can things be well settled where the Foxes haue so many Burrowes. The Iesuites haue (as some say) three score Colledges in Germanie, deuided into three Prouinces.

The Prouince of Higher Germanie hath thirteene Colledges, two Houses, three Residen- <sup>50</sup> ces, five hundred fortietixe Iesuites. The Prouince of Rhene hath three and twentie, and in them fixe hundred and one. The Prouince of Austria five and twentie, and five hundred fiftie three of the Societie.

Switzers.

The Switzers, Cantons are thirteene, Episcopall Cities fixe, Lucerna, Vri, Switz, Vnderwalden, Zugb, Friburg: Iesuites Colledges two, at Lucerne and Friburg. They are also in great part subiect in Spirituals to the Bishops of Constance, and of Basel, whose Seat is now at Bruntutum. Laufanna hath a Bishop subiect to the Archbishop Bezanzon.

Grixons.

The Grixons are diuided into three leagues, in which Chur is a Bishop subiect to Mentz. The Valesins haue seuen Communalities, one of which Sedunum hath a Bishop. Pomerland is a Dukedome and hath foure Cities, Stetin, Caminum sometimes a Bishops See, Griphswald an Vniuer- <sup>60</sup> sitie, and Wolgastum.

Bohemia.

In Bohemia, Prage is an Archbishopricke, to which are Suffraganes, the Bishops of Olunütz in Moravia, and Littomssensis in Bohemia. In Silesia, Wratisslania or Preslaw is a Bi-shopricke.

In Hungaria, Strigonium hath bin the Seat of the Archbishop & Primat, which being taken by the Turks, it is removed to Tyrana, and hath six Suffragans, Nitrich, Raab, Agria vnder the Turks, Vaccia, Quinqueeclesia vnder the Turke, as is also Vesprim. Colocia is an Archbishop in Pannonia inferior, vnder which are the Bishops of Agram, Fairwar in Transilvania, Varadin, Sirmisch, Conad, Bossina. Transilvania hath an Vniuersitie at Clandiopolis and a Seminary. In Austria Vienna is also an Vniuersitie before mentioned: There and at Oenipont in Triol and at Prage in Bohemia Ferdinand the Emperour founded Iesuites Colledges. Brixina is Suffragan to Salzburg. Gratz hath an Vniuersitie and Colledge of Iesuites, and is a Metropolitan Citie; the Bishop Secouienfis there, and Gurcenfis & Laurentinenfis in Carinthia are subiect to the Archbishop of Salzburg.

Hungaria.

The Kingdome of Poland containeth the Prouinces of Lithuania, Masonia, Samogitia, Cnania, Linania, Varmia, Prussia Regalis, Russia Nigra, Volbima, Podolia, and others. There are two Archbishops of the Latin Church, Gnesuensis the Primat, and Leopoliensis. To the former are subiect these Bishops, Krakow, Poznan, Plock, Miednikie, Preslaw in Silesia, Lebus, Uladslaw, Chemnicz, Lucko, Vilensk or Wilde, Wenden, Warmerlant an exempt. Leopolis or Lunow is in Russia Nigra, and hath Suffragans Przemysl, Chmielnick, Kion, Camianick. All these together with the Bishop Culmensis are Senators or Councillors of the State, except Preslaw and Lebus. There are also eight Russian or Greeke Bishops in Poland, Kion the Metropolitan, Vlodimir, Luceorsensis, Polocensis, Pramissiensis or Przemysl, Leopoliensis, Chelmensis and Pinscensis, which were receiued into Communion by Pope Clement the eighth. Russia Nigra is subiect to the Pole and Russia Alba to the Mosconite. There liue also in Poland many Armenians which haue a Bishop of their owne, Resident at Leopolis. The Russian Bishops haue no Parliament voyce. The Iesuites haue two Prouinces in these parts, that of Poland containing fifteene Colledges, Houses, and Residences, and 459. Iesuites, that of Lithuania as many, and Iesuites 336. Prussia is diuided into Regalis and Ducalis. The former hath two Bishops, Varmiensis which resideth at Brunsbereg, and Cuimensis: the Ducal had two, but extinct with the Order of the Dutch Knights, the one of Kuningsberg, the other at Mariawerda. The Marquesse of Brandenburg possesseth the Countrey.

Poland.

Prussia.

England hath two Archbishops, Canterbury and Yorke. The Archbishop of Canterbury is Primate of all England, and Metropolitan, the other Primate of England and Metropolitan. To the former are subiect the Bishops of London, Winchester, Conuentre and Lichfield, Salisbury, Bathe and Welles, Lincolne, Excester, Hereford, Norwich, Ely, Rocheſten, Chicheſter, Worceſter, Saint Davids, Bangor, Landaff, Saint Aſſe, Peterburrow, Gloſter, Oxford and Bristol. To the Archbishop of Yorke, Durham, Cheſter, Carlile, to which is added Soderenſis, or the Bishop of Man. Scotland also hath two Archbishops, one of Saint Andrewes, and the other at Glasco. Suffragans to Saint Andrewes the Primate of Scotland, Myraus reckoneth the Bishops of Dunkeld, Aberdin (an Vniuersitie) Moranienſis resident in Elgin, Dumblain, Brechin, Roffe, Cathnes, Orckney: to Glasco, Galloway, Lismor, Colmkil. His Maiestie hath beene such a restorer, as he may in some sort bee reckoned the Founder of the present Episcopall, both Sees and Government in that Kingdome. At the dissolution of the Bishops they erected Superintendents, changing a good Greek word for a bad Latin, but referuing to those Superintendents the greatest part of Episcopall power; and after some Changes, his Maiestie hath reduced it to the present state.

England.

Scotland.

Booke of Discipline 1560. See the Booke of the Proceedings at Perth, Ireland.

Ireland hath foure Archbishops. To the Archbishop and Primate of Armah are subiect, Dunensis, Conner, Derry, Misib, Clocher, Ardache, Kilmore, Rapho, Dromore, Killoom, Dondalck. To the Archbishop of Dublin (an Vniuersitie) Kilkenny or Offerriensis, Kildare, Ferme, Leghlin, Glendalagh. To the Archbishop of Cashel, Limericke, Lismor, Roffe, Waterford, Emmelen, Corcke, Lymbricke, Clon. To the Archbishop Tuamenſis, Galuben, Achade, Alache, Olsin, Roscomau, Clonsert, Killaloe. Thus Myraus.

Denmark.

Sueden.

Denmarke hath the Archbishop of Lunden erected 1092. Primate of the Kingdome, Suffragans, Roschilt, Odenſee, Slezwick, Rype, Wiburg, Arhusen. Norway hath Nidrosia the Metropolitan See, and Suffragans, Bergen, Staffanger, Hammar, Groenlandt, Scalbolt, Hola. In Suecia the Archbishop Vpsalienſis hath subiect to him the B B. of Scar, Lincopen, Stengenes, Abo, Aroesen, Villimen. Thus Myraus, who addes a little of Russia and Greece, which you shall find more full in the Discourses of those parts, both precedent and following: as likewise touching the Christians of Asia, Maronites, Iacobites, Nestorians, &c. handled by Myraus in his second Booke. The Archbishop of Goa hath subiect to him the Bishops of Cochin, Malaca, Macao, Iapon, Malabar, Melaxor or San Thome. The Archbishop of Cranganor (erected by Paul the Fifth, 1608.) is called also the Archbishop of the Christians of San Thome: hee hath no Suffragans. Myraus reckons Iesuites Houses, Colledges and Residences in the East Indian Prouince of Goa 15. and 280. of the Societie. In the Prouince of Malabar 14. in them 150. For China and Iapon you shall learne better in our Relations then in Myraus. In the Philippinas he reckons nine Residences & one hundred Iesuites. Neither shall wee need his instructions of Africa in his third Booke, our Relations being farre more full and certaine: as also of the New World handled in his fourth Booke. Hee numbers therein five Archbishops, the first of Mexico, whose Suffragans are the B B. of Tlaxcala in Pnobia de los Angeles, Mechoacan in Valladolid, Guaxara in Antequera, Guadalajara, Gnatimata in Saint Iago, Iucatan in Merida, Chiappa, Honduras in Truxillo, Vera Paz, Nicaragua in Leon. This Archbishop, and those of Lima and Domingo were founded by Charles the Fifth, confirmed by Paul the Third, A. 1547. The Archbishop of Saint Domingo hath Suffragans Porto Rico, Saint Iago de Cuba, Venezuela, Iome adde Margarita. To the A. of Lima, Cuzco, Arequipa, Truxillo, Guamanga, Quito. Paul the Fifth erected two Archbishop Sees, Plata or Potosi in Charcas, to whom are subiect the Bishops of Baranca, Paz, Santiago in Tucuman, Buenos Ayres, Panaton, Santiago in Chili, Imperial, Nuestra Señora de la Assumption, Paraguay: the other Archbishop is of Saint Faub of Bogot in New Granada, to whom are subordinate the Bishops of Popayan, Carthagena, Saint Martha; Manila is an Archbishopricke in the Philippinas, to which are subiect the Bishops of Cagayan, of the Name of Iesus, and Cacerensis. Mexico and Lima are Vniuersities. The Iesuites Dominicans, Franciscans, Carmelites, and the Fathers of our Lady of Putie are many, besides Priests, Canons, Inquisitors, &c. The Iesuites haue foure Prouinces: that of Peru hath Seminaries, Residences, Colledges and Houses of probation thirteene, and therein 370. of the Societie: that of Paraguay ten, and therein 116. that of New Granada seuen and 100. of the Company: that of Mexico fourteene, and therein Iesuits 340. In Brasil they haue in nineteen Houses, Colledges, and Residences 180. Iesuites.

And thus haue we audited Myrans his accounts of Bishops and Iesuites, names not otherwise futable but by Papall Arts. For what concord hath Antiquitie and Noueltie, Iesus and Iesuites, Catholike and Romish, Apostolicall Institutions with Apostaticall? Neither hath the Church wanted Bishops in all ages and places Christian since the Apostles, or knowne Iesuites in any age but this last, or in any Church (except as busie bodies) but the Romish: so that what they obiekt to vs, is truly their owne with aduantage, to be both Nonatores (Leiola being farre later then Luther) and Veteratores too; like the Gibeonites, which fained themselves Ambassadors, and tooke old Sackes upon their Asses, and old Bottells for Wine both rent and bound up: and old Shooes and clouted upon their feet; also the raiment upon them was old, and all their provision of bread was dried and moulded: Thus pretended they remoteness being neere neighbours, to delude the Israelites; as these neerer vs in time, then those others to Ioshua in place and habitation) chant nothing so much as Catholike and Old, when Time knew them not till yesterday, nor doth any Place yet know them but such as are Romish, except in Treasons: their old, old, old, being but the old Serpent, the old Man, and old refined rubbish to build their new Babel. Nihil mihi antiquius, said one in another case, quā antiquare antiquitas istor. The ancient government of the Church by Bishops, by Papall Monopoly vsurped, was set on foot by weakening Bpiscopall power in exempted Monasteries, that so all Monasteries might become Papall Forts, and in manner all the learned and leasurely penne might plead for the Patron of their exemption; furthered by both the one and the others inuestitures first, and dependance after, with subiection denied to Kings; and when the Waldenses began to shake downe the Lateran, the Pope dreamed that Dominike, or as the Franciscans will haue it, that Francis supported the Lateran, which proued not a dreame in their new deuised Orders of Friars, which maintained the Papacy with no lesse reputation of learning and fulnesse of commission in those dangerous daies, then the Iesuites haue done since Luther; which all the Deuills could not haue kept from falling both then and since, if they had not found such old-shoed Ambassadors to trauell ouer the World for their Mother Babylon, and their Father the Pope, palliated with the name of the Catholike Church. I wil not trouble you with recitation of their other orders particularly, but out of Myrans wil tel you that the Benedictine Order can glory beyond the Iesuiticall in 52000. Monasteries, 15000. Writers, 44000. Saints, 4000. Bishops, 1600. Archbishops, 200. Cardinals, and 25. Popes, which in succession of times they haue had. And if the Iesuite pretend his Tam marte quā mercurio, his mustering of Armies against the Heretickes, and setting Europe in the present combustion; the Benedictine can produce Martiall Orders, affixes to his profession, intituted for better purposes against Mahumetans, the Templaries (sometimes as proud as the proudest of Iesuites) the Knights of Calatrana, of Alcantara, Montesia, and Mercedis in Spaine, of Christ, of Anise, of Ala in Portugall, of Saint Maurice in Sauoy, of Saint Steuen in Toscanie, and others elsewhere. The Augustinians haue 555. Monasteries in Italy, and in Europe, as Volatteranus writeth 4000. and besides other subdiuided Orders, haue also their Military Knights of Rhodes or Malta, the Dutch Knights of our Lady in Germany and Prussia, the Knights of Saint Iago in Spaine; of Saint Lazarus of Ierusalem, of Iesus Christ instituted by Dominike against the Albigenses, of Saint Mary of Mount Carmel and Saint Lazarus (the former Lazarites being vnited to the Maltafes) instituted by Paul the Fifth. But Monastike Religions, notwithstanding their vow of chastitie haue so multiplied in the West, (for in the East few Orders are found to this day) that Benedicts Order hath procreated 23. Augustines, 28. and that later of Francis 15. And for the Individualls they are like the Grashoppers of Egypt, Pauperis est numerare pecus, The Pope is not so poore as to bee able to number his Creatures. Of the Franciscans alone Sabellicus numbers in his time at once liuing 90000. and addes that the Generall to that Order offered to Pope Pius against the Turke, 30000. able warriors of this Seraphicall Family without detriment to their Holies. They haue (saith hee) filled the world, being 10f.9.

* Thus Myreno Hospinian hath Abbates cruditione & scriptis celebres 15700. Canoniz-atos 15600.

Volaterr. l. 21.

being divided into fortie Prouinces, each Prouince into Custodie, Wards or Wardenships, & these subdivided into Convents and Places. These mortified Minors had in that time found the way, Sabel. En. 9. l. 6 five of them to the Papacy, 26. to the Red Hat; as for inferior Prelacies who can number them? The Dominicans in the same time (about six score yeeres since 21. Prouinces, Conuents 4143. in them living 26460. Friers, and of them about 1500. Masters (or Doctors) of Divinity, besides many of them in Armenia and Ethiopia, or Abussia, Constantinople anticipating the Iesuites glory in this kind, the Augustinians also were then numbered 30000. the Carmelites more, not to speake of the rest. This course of life first begun by deuout persons to auoid persecution; Antony and others which made vse of Deserts, and a solitary life to escape the Sword, and the Worldes infection by vice together: was after imitated by good men, both for their owne deuotions, freed by this meanes from secular interruptions, and fitted for the seruice of the Church both in Faith by Doctrinall studies, and exercises in their Monasticke Schooles, and also in charity by beneficence therein to the poore, with the labours of their hands; and lastly, degenerated into smoakie superstition and ambition, of getting the glory of the World; with wealth and ease by seeming denials thereof; and became a refuge, and sinke-sanctuary to Malecontents, Bankrupts, men in danger of Law, and weary of the crosses which attends each vocation (God hauing set downe this rule to all men, to eat their bread in the sweat of their browes, which these seeme to illude) that they which cannot bee In negotio sine periculo (to vse the Orators words) may bee In otio cum dignitate. A master-piece of hypocrisie, which in another fence, and by another course can say with the Apostle, as hauing nothing, and yet (euen carnally) possessing all things.

- 20 But who will hope to number the persons of each Order termed Religious, when the Orders themselves cannot bee reduced to due order or number? All Historians in manner mention them, but none can name them all, much lesse marshall them. Ioannes Wolphius in his Centenaries of Memorable Readings, thus expresseth many of them with the times of their Originall. A. D. 341. Thabensiorum. 366. Ordo Publica. 384. Order of Saint Basil. 399. Of Saint Augustine. 422. Of Paula Romana. 495. Canonissarum Regularium: also Ordo Canoniorum. A. 530. Apostolicorum: also Benedictinorum: also Scholasticorum Benedictinorum. 595. Gregorianorum. 610. Gervandensium. In the seuenth and eighth Centenary none. In the ninth A. 912. Ordo Cluniacensis. 950. Camaldulensium. 977. Canoniorum Secularium. A. 1012. Hospitalium. 1017. Humilitati. 1030. Ordo Ieiunantium. 1046. Lazaritarum. 1050. Luceolanorum. 1076. Grandmontensium. 1080. Carthusianum. 1059. S. Antonij de Vienna. 1098. Ordo Cisterciensis A. D. 1110. Templarij. 1113. Bernhardini. 1119. Pramonstratenses. 1121. Militia Calatrave. 1137. Ordo Robertinorum. 1148. Gilbertinorum. 1160. Carmelitarum. 1170. Ordo Militum D. Iacobi de spatha. 1190. Ordo Tentonicorum Marianorum. 1190. Franciscanorum. 1200. Cruciferorum. 1201. Ordo S. Spiritus Hospitaliorum. 1202. Gladiferorum. 1205. Dominicanorum. 1211. Ordo S. Trinitatis, sive Equitum de Redemptione Captiuorum. 1214. Ordo Militia Montesia. 1215. Ordo Eremitarum S. Pauli. 1217. O. Vallis Scholarium. 1228. O. S. Clara. 1232. Or. Militia S. Mariae. 1250. Ordo de Observantia Minorum & Predicatorum. 1252. Ordo Fratricellorum Beghardorum, Beghinorum, sive Beguittarum. 1257. O. Bethleemitarum. 1258. O. Bonorum hominum. 1273. O. Augustinianorum Eremitarum & Guibelmistarum. 1282. O. Servorum S. Mariae. 1297. Celestinorum. 1300. Militum Sepulchri Domini. 1303. 40 Sarabitarum. 1323. Militum Iesu Christi. 1326. Alcanthare militum. 1349. Flagellantium. 1350. Charteriorum Equitum. 1360. Equitum Stella. 1365. O. Iesuatorum. 1366. Ordo Saluatoris sive Scopetinarum. 1370. S. Brigitte. 1371. Turlupinorum. 1399. Albatorum. 1400. Vallis Vmbrose. 1405. Hieronymitarum. 1407. Canoniorum S. Georgij in Alga. Also Mendicantium D. Hieronimi. Also S. Spiritus. Also Montoluitensium. 1408. Canoniorum Lateranensium Congregationis Frisenaria. 1409. S. Iustine. Also Mauritianorum Equitum. 1420. O. Equestre Annuntiationis B. Mariae. 1429. O. Eq. Aurei Velleris. 1433. S. Ambrosij ad Nemus. 1453. O. Equitum S. Spiritus. 1455. S. Catherina Senensis. 1464. Equitum Lune. 1469. Equitum S. Michaelis. 1499. Ordo penitentium mulierum semmeretricum. 1500. Ordo peregrinorum pauperum. 1506. Ordo Indianorum. 1529. O. Sodalitatis diuini amoris sive Theatinorum. 1537. O. Paulinorum sive Gastalianorum. 1540. O. Iesuitarum, sive Societatis Iesu. 1549. Capucinorum. 1561. O. militum S. Stephani. 1571. Ordo minorum Iesu Mariae seu Tertiariorum. 1579. O. Eq. S. Spiritus.

Vnto these Orders whereof some time is set, may bee added many others of whose Originall no certaine time is deliuered. Wolphius hath in Alphabetically order named these of that kinde, Ord. Ambrosianorum, Antonianorum, Fratrium de Armenia, Ordo Equestre de Anis, Batutinorum, Bona voluntatis, Bursfeldensium, Canoniorum Regularium, differing from the former, Capellano- rum, Challomerianorum, Cellariorum, Clauigerorum, Constantinopolitanorum militum, Cruciferorum another kind. O. Fratrium Crucis, O. Stellatorum Crucis, O. Forficorum, O. Genette Equestre, O. S. Gertrudis Monialium, O. Fratrium Helena, O. Fratrium de Hispania, Or. Histrice Equestre, O. Hospitaliariorum, O. Fratrium D. Iacobi, O. Ignorantia, O. Ioannitarum de ciuitate, Ordo Vallis Iosaphati, O. Iosephi, Or. militum de Labanda, Lazariseu Magdalena, Linonchleniorum, Monialium S. Mariae, O. S. Mariae nouus, Conceptionis Mariae, O. ex Fratrib. martyrum, Maturinorum, Mensa Orbicularis (Knights of the Round Table) O. Pauperum Voluntariorum, O. de Corbullo S. Petri, O. S. Petri in Schunbach, O. Purgatorialium, Rebaginorum, Reclusorum sive Inklusorum, O. S. Russi, Ordo Monache usi vel Sacerd. libera. Scala dei. Sclauonianorum. Fratrum ex Scotia. S. Sophia sine Gratia. Speculariorum. Stellatorum. Militum S. Thome. Vespillonum. Fratrum de viridi vallo. O. Valentinario-feruentium. Ungarici eq. O. Wenceslaurum. Zambonitarum. Zupfnoharum.

But it is time to haue done, lest such vncouth names make some Reader feare hee shall thereby coniure vp some Demills, ordered to disorders. I could almost out of History adde others, but these are more then enough, Papall Orders enough to breake all Christian orders and rules of simplicitie and sanctitie, with their superstition and hypocrisie. Of their rules, habits, and other superstitions (vnderstand this of the later, for the ancient were bath without vow, and fit Schooles and Seminaries for the Church, as our Vniuersities now) the same Wolfius, Hospinian and other Authors haue written at large.

CHAP. XVII.

A Discourse of the diuersity of Letters used by the diuers Nations in the World; the antiquity, manifold use and variety thereof, with exemplary descriptions of about three score severall Alphabets, with other strange Writings.

Rationis & orationis privilegia.

Manifold and excellent use of Letters.

Who first inuented Letters
Ios. Ant. l. i. c. 2.

Plin. l. 7. c. 36.
Orho Heurnij
Chaldaicus.

Ful. Misc. l. 4. c. 4

Iob 13. 26. & 19
23, 24, & 6.

GOD the giver of euery good gift, hath endowed Man (created after his owne Image) with diuers priuiledges aboue other sensitiue Creatures, not onely with dominion ouer them, but with Reason and Speech, both aboue their Naturall capacities: By the one he composeth naturall syllogismes in himselfe, proposing to his Vnderstanding, disposing in it, and by his Will electing what seemes best of those things, which the externall Senses, as the Cinque-Port-Intelligencers haue brought in, and the Internall, the Common sense, Phantasie, and Memory, as Reasons handmaids haue prepared to Discourse. By the other, as a Sociable creature, hee imparteth those Mind-conceptions vnto other men; and those which are many persons, are made as it were one body reasonable. God hath added herein a further grace, that as Men by the former exceed Beasts, so hereby one man may excell another; and amongst Men, some are accounted Ciuill, and more both Sociable and Religious, by the Use of letters and Writing, which others wanting are esteemed Brutish, Sauage, Barbarous. And indeed much is the litterall aduantage; by speech we vtter our minds once, at the present, to the present, as present occasions moue (and perhaps vnaduisedly transport) vs: but by writing Man seemes immortall, conferreth and consulteth with the Patriarkes, Prophets, Apostles, Fathers, Philosphers, Historians, and learnes the wisdom of the Sages which haue beene in all times before him; yea by translations or learning the Languages, in all places and Regions of the World: and lastly, by his owne writings furnieth himselfe, remaines (littera scripta manet) thorow all ages a Teacher and Counsellor to the last of men: yea hereby God holds conference with men, and in his sacred Scriptures, as at first in the Tables of Stone, speakes to all. And whereas speech pierceth the Eare (pierceth indeede and passeth often, in at the one, and out at the other) Writing also entertaineth the Eyes; and so long, by our owne or others reading, speakes to either of those nobler Senses, as wee will, and whereof wee will our selues; hushit and silent at our pleasure; alway free from feare, flattery, and other humane passions. Therefore the dead were esteemed the best companions and faithfulest Counsellors, in Alfonso his opinion, namely, in their Writings still liuing to performe those Offices: and want of Letters hath made some so seely as to thinke the Letter it selfe could speake, so much did the Americans herein admire the Spaniards, seeming in comparison of the other as speaking Apes. Thus excellent is the use of letters: how ancient, vncertaine. Iosephus mentions Writing enter then the Floud, by which, knowledge of Astronomy was commended to posteritie in two Pillers, the one of Stone, the other of Bricke, to outliue those two dismall destructions which Adam had prophesied should befall the World, by Fire and VVater: that of Stone remaining to his time. Plinie conceiteth an eternitie of Letters, as of the VVorld and Mankind: and supposeth that the Affyrians were such: elsewhere attributing their inuention to the Phœnicians, as of Astronomy also, and the Arts of VVarr and Nauigation, and after others opinion to the Egyptians, after others to the Syrians. It is, I see not how probably by some affirmed, that Moses first receiued Letters in the Two Tables of the Law written by the finger of God. Master Fuller is of opinion that the Phœnicians themselues learned them of Abraham, who seemeth to him, as likely in his long stay with the Canaanites to haue taught them Letters, as to haue instructed the Egyptians in so short a space, in Astronomy and Arithmetike, which Iosephus affirmeth. And most probable it seemeth that in blessed Shems posteritie by Heber, Noah had left the best Arts of the former VVorld. Iob is by some, vpon good reasons, holden ancienter then Moses, who yet often speakes of Bookes and writing, as a thing then familiarly vsed.

Another notable controuerted question is of the ancientest kind of Letters, which Postellus, Scaliger Scaliger & others thinke to be the Phœnicians, or as now they are called, the Samaritan, at first vsed by all the Canaanites (of which the Phœnicians were a part) and Hebrewes; but after the deporation to Babylon, the Cuthæans or Samaritans still continued them (being taught by the Israelish Priest) but the Iewes grew into vse of others, which Scaliger saith, are nupera ac nouitia ex Syriacis deprauata; illa autem ex Samaritanis; quod sicut luce clara sit, tamen quidam semidocti, semitheologi, & ut signantius loquar semihomines, Iudaicas literas verè Hebraicas esse priscas audent deirare, &c. And after; Videntur hodie Sicli qui quotidie Ierosolymis effodiuntur, & sub regibus Iuda in vsu fuerunt. In illis nummis eadem litera incisa sunt, qua in scriptis Samaritanorum leguntur; and thinkes it extrema insania & imperitia to thinke that the elder Hebrewes had any other.

What Letters most ancient.
2. Reg. 17. 17.
10. Scal. Annot. in Euseb. Chron.
See those Coines and Letters at the end of this Chapter.
1st. pref. in 1. reg.

- 10 Saint Jerome also affirmeth, that Esdras was Inuenter of the present Hebrew Letters after the Captiuitie. His words are, viginti & duas literas esse apud Hebraeos, Syrorum quoq; lingua testatur, qua Hebraea magna ex parte confinis est. Nam & ipsi 22. elementa habent, eodem sono, sed diuersis characteribus. Samaritani etiam pentateuchum Moysitotidem literis scriptitant, figuris tantum & apicibus discrepantes. Certumq; est Esdras, post captam Hierosolymam, & instauracionem templi sub Zerubabel, alias literas reperisse, quibus nunc utimur, quàm ad illud usq; tempus, idem Samaritanorum & Hebraeorum characteres fuerint.

- 20 Postellus attributeth the reason of this new Inuention to the difference of Religion, which began in Ieroboam, but became worse in those Cuthæans & other strangers which were placed by the Assyrians in the Cities of Samaria, whose irreconcilable hatred I haue elsewhere shewed in my Pilgrimage. He alledgeth also such Coines, said to be as old as since Salomons dayes, seene by him, (two of which shall follow with their Letters.) Hee addeth that the Iewes affirmed the same, which still hate the Samaritans, but highly prize those Coines as their owne Antiquities; the Inscription whereof being Ierusalem the holy, could not proceed from the Cuthæan Samaritans, which worshipped in their Mountaine, (as the Samaritan woman said to our Sauour) and not in Ierusalem. Postellus saw a Grammar in their Letters, but the Language Hebrew, the Exposition Arabike; the Characters their owne, which now also want the points which in Saint Jeromes dayes they had.

G. Postell. ling.
12. Alphab.

P. Pilg. l. 2. c. 94

Ioh. 4.

- 30 Scaliger sheweth further how the ancient Greeke or Ionike Letters (like in forme to the present Latine, which seeme thence deriued) were by Cadmus carried from Phœnicia, and communicated to the Greekes, of him called by Herodotus Καδμήϊα γράμματ᾽, which both hee and Panfanias affirme that they had seene; and of which Plinie testifieth, Gentium consensus tacitum primus omnium conspirauit, ut Ionum literis uterentur. Of these anon you shall see an example. Scaliger addeth that the Chaldees fashioned theirs from the Phœnician, now vsed by the Nestorians and Maronites. These haue both Capitall Letters and lesser: from which Chaldee Letters the moderne Iewish and Arabike are deriued, the Chaldees being in a meane betwixt the Phœnicians and them.

10f. Scal. ubi sup.

- Our Learned Countreyman Master Fuller, as hee will not yeeld that the ancient Hebrew was the Phœnician Language; so neither will subscribe to this opinion, which maketh the moderne Hebrew Letter to be of later deuise. But as the Egyptians had two sorts of Letters, one sacred and hieroglyphicall, the other vulgar; and as with vs the writing proper to the publike Courts in Court and Chancery hands differ from the common writing: so the Hebrewes also might haue a two fold writing, the one in ciuill and common affaires, still read in the Samaritans Bookes and Coines; the other Ecclesiastike or sacred, vsed by the Priests and Leuites, and in which the holy Scriptures are preserved; which then became Secular and Vulgar, when their emulation against the Samaritans admitted nothing common betwixt them, especially in Letters, which it appeareth they learned of one of the Samaritan Priests of Bethel, of Ieroboams institution, and not of Leuiticall race. For it is probable that Ieroboams baser Priests either could not, or would not write in that Leuiticall and Priestly Character, but retained vnto all purposes that which before had beene admitted only to ciuill affaires. He conceiueth them to be both of Israeliticall originall; and if either be ancienter, the sacred (still stiled Hebrew) to haue the preheminence, Ecclesiasticall things being of more Antiquitie then ciuill; in which sense Irenæus calleth the ancient Hebrew Letters, Sacerdotales; these being also more simple and vniforme then the Samaritan, as is seene in the Iod, which our Sauour citeth as the lest of Letters, which yet in the Samaritan is multiforme and large. How euer the case stands herein, it is euident they are both very ancient, and as it were Mother-letters to the rest of the World: which as wee haue noted already of the Chaldees, Ionike and Latine, so may it be obserued in the principall of those others which we shall anon present to your view.

Full. Miscellane.
l. 4. c. 4.

1. Reg. 12. 13. &
2. Reg. 17. 17.

Iren. aduers. hær.
l. 2. c. 41.
Mat. 5. 18.

- 60 Plinie reporteth that Cadmus brought sixteene Letters into Greece, to which in the Troian Warre Palamedes added foure others @ ε φ χ, and after him Simonides other Ζ Η Ψ Ω. Aristotle saith there were eighteene ancient Α Β Γ Δ Ε Ζ Ι Κ Λ Μ Ν Ο Π Ρ Σ Τ Υ Φ, to which Episcarmus added @ χ, or rather Palamedes: veteres Græci fuisse easdem pene quæ nunc sunt latine, he auereth out of a Brazen Table in the Palace inscribed Ν Α Ψ Ι Κ Ρ Α Τ Ε Σ Τ Ι Σ Α Μ Ε Ν Ο Α Θ Ε Ν Α Ι Ο Σ (so Scaliger expresth it) in later Letters Ν α υ τ ι κ ρ α τ ε ς Τ ι σ α μ ε ν ο υ Α θ η ν α ι ο ς. Scaliger also out of an old Scholy vpon Enripides his Orestes, affirmeth that the

Plin. l. 7. c. 56.

the old Greekes had seuentene Letters, sixteene of Cadmus his Inuention, and V added thereto, and thinks this to be Aristotles assertion, who would neuer haue reckoned  $\phi$  for one, being of later inuention. These seuentene are ΑΒΓΔΕΗΙΚΛΜΝΟΞΡΖΤΤ. Before $\Theta$  &  $\chi$  were inuented by Simonides, saith Marinus Victorinus, they vied to place after  $\tau$ ,  $\Gamma$ ,  $\kappa$ , the aspirate  $\eta$ , as  $\tau\eta\epsilon\omicron\varsigma$ ,  $\pi\eta\iota\lambda\omicron\varsigma$ ,  $\kappa\eta\rho\omicron\nu\omicron\varsigma$  for  $\tau\eta\epsilon\varsigma$ ,  $\pi\eta\iota\lambda\epsilon\varsigma$ ,  $\kappa\eta\rho\eta\epsilon\varsigma$ . But let the studious herein read Scaligers whole Discourse or Digression in his Notes vpon Eusebius his Chronicle, who also giueth the examples mentioned by Herodotus: ΑΜΓΗΙΤΡΥΟΝ.
Μ. ΑΝΕΤΗΕΚΕΝ. ΕΟΝ. ΑΠΟ. ΤΕΛΕΒΑΟΝ. in the moderne Letters, Αμπετρουν μ' ἀνέθηκεν ἐὼν ἀπὸ Τηλεβοῶν. The like he doth in diuers others. But an old Inscription is in Ionike Letters I could not but transcribe from him. It was ingrauen in a Pillar in Via Appia, thence remoued to the Farnesian Gardens; whereby it appears that these Ionike Letters continued in Italy long after they had ceased in Greece.

ΟΔΕΝΙ. ΘΕ ΜΙΤΟΝ ΜΕΤΑΚΙΝΕΣ ΑΙ
ΕΚ. ΤΟ. ΤΡΙΟΙΟ. ΗΟ. ΕΣΤΙΝ. ΕΓΙ. ΤΟ
ΤΡΙΤΟ. ΕΝ. ΤΕΙ. ΗΟΔΟΙ. ΤΕΙ. ΑΓΓΙΑΙ.
ΕΝΤΟΙ. ΗΕΡΟΔΟ. ΑΑΡΟΙ. Ο ΑΑΡ.
ΛΟΙΟΝ. ΤΟΙ. ΚΙΝΕΣΑΝΤΙ. ΜΑΡΤΥΣ.
ΔΑΙΜΟΝ. ΕΝΗΟΔΙΑ. ΚΑΙ. ΗΟΙ
ΚΙΟΝΕΣ. ΔΕΜΕΤΡΟΣ. ΚΑΙ. ΚΟΡΕΣ
ΑΝΑΘΕΜΑ. ΚΑΙ. ΑΘΟΝΙΟΝ. ΘΕΟΝ. ΚΑΙ. *

The same Inscription in later Greeke Letters.

ὁδὲν δὲ μίτον μετακινῆσαι	καὶ τὸν τῶν κινῶντων. Μάρτυς
ἐκ τοῦ τριοῖο, ὃ ἐστὶν ἐπὶ τῷ	δαίμονι Ἡροδῶτα, καὶ οἱ
τεῖτον ἐν τῇ ἐν τῇ Ἀγγίᾳ	κόρες τῆς Διμήντρος, καὶ Κόρης
ἐν τῷ Ἡρόδῳ ἀρχῶν. καὶ γὰρ	ἀνάθεμα, καὶ Ἀθόνιον θεόν, καὶ *

Plin. ubi sup.

Plinie saith that the Pelasgi first brought Letters into Italy: Hennius cites these Verses out of an old Booke touching the Inuencers of Letters.

Moses primus Hebraicas exarauit literas: Mente Phœnices Sagaci condiderunt Atticas: Quas Latini scriptitamus edidit Nicostrata: Abraham Syrae & idem reperit Chaldaicas
Isis arte non minore protulit Egyptias: Gulfila prompsit Getarum quas videmus ultimas.

But who is so literate as to reduce the Letters of each Nation to their first founder? it seeming probable, that as Nations became more ciuill, so some more Heroike Spirit in each Nation deuised new of himselfe, or deriued the old from some other Nation, or made a mixture of both: besides that the conquered Nations vsually haue receiued in some part both Language, and Letters, with their Lawes from the Conquerors.

We see still that those which teach short writing, can and doe deuise new Characters daily for that purpose; that others ordaine Cyphres or Characters only knowne to those whom the Au-thour shall impart the skill vnto; and these diuersified ad libitum, as any intends to impound or pale in his secrets or mysteries of State, or Art; some of which perhaps in proceſſe of time haue beene made vulgar and ordinary Letters. These mysticall Writers haue also deuised other Arts of concealement, as writing with Allume water, not to be read after it is once dried, but laid in water; with an Onyon, to be read at the fire, &c.

Differing figures of Letters, and diuerſitie of Instruments and materials.

Now for the varietie and differing formes, Art hath superabounded: both in the subiect and instrument, some writing with Pencils as the Iapemites and Chinois, others with Pens, others with Instruments of Iron as the Malabars, of Gemmes, Brasse also, or other metall, in Tablebookes, Leaues, Barkes, Wood, Stone, Aire, Sand, Duſt, Metall, Paper, Cloth, Parchment, and innumerable other materials: in the forme also and manner, with Quippos in Stones or Threads, as in Pern; with Pictures as in Mexico, and the Egyptian Hieroglyphikes; with Characters, each

each expressing a word or thing, not a letter, as the Chinois, Iaponites, and our Arithmeticians and Astronomers in the figures of their Arts; some with fiery Torches, as you may read in Captaine Smiths following Relations; the most haue vsed letters, which by Art are disposed to frame all words, and hath beene the most complete kind of writing which euer was. But Babel neuer had more confusion of languages then Letters haue sustained alteration, differenced both by place and time, yea and by the humours of men. Thus not onely diuers languages haue diuers letters, but the same language, as it changeth with time, so the letters also are diuersified, as in the Ionike and later Greeke hath beene obserued, from both which the Moderne Greekes write much differently. In this our Countrey wee haue had manifold successions of letters in succeeding ages, as is most easie to be seene in well furnished Libraries, and that especially of the Miracle of industry in this kind, Sir Robert Cotton, both in Bookes, Chartells, and Letters. The Conquerour (as In- 10 gulfus, Edmerus and others then liuing obserue) would not indure the English Language or Letters, whereby the Saxon Letters are now commonly extinct. And both all Records of old, and the diuers Courts of this Kingdome, yea euery Copy-booke, and each writing Masters Masterpiece hanged forth to publike view, easily manifest the passed and present varietie of Letters in common vse at the same time. It is impossible therefore to giue an example of all, either Letters or Languages. Yet in this so Generall a History, I thought it would minister some delight to the Reader, to haue a taste of that immense varietie, which here out of Thesius Ambrosius, Possellus, Duretus, Scaliger, Gramaye, Lazius, &c. we exhibite.

Cap. Smith,
inf. l. 8.

Why Saxon
letters ceased.

Variety of letters vsed with vs at this day.

Let the Reader take notice also of the varying in lines, some reading (as the Latines, Greekes, 20 and most of the Europaans) from the left hand to the Right sidewayes; the Hebrewes, Arabikes, and most of the Indians (except the Malabars and Siamites) from the right to the left: the Iugres, Cathayans, Tartars, that is the most of the Easterne and Northeasterne Asians write their lines downeward, and multiply them from the left hand to the right, as you may see in the Iaponian charters following. And in Patane they vse three, both languages and sorts of writing: the Malayan, which I haue seene in Arabike characters written from the right hand; that of Siam from the left, and that of China downewardes. The people of Tangut (North-neighbours to China) are said to write from the right hand to the left, and to multiply their lines vpwads. The Mexicans had writings in forme of a wheele, which were read from the 30 Center vpwads to the Circumference. In Honduras they had Bookes of Paper made of Cotton-Wooll, or the inner Barke of Trees, or of Metleleaues, folded like Broad-cloathes, the writing whereof was partly painting (where such things as had forme or figure were therein represented) partly in Hieroglyphicall characters, as Fishhookes, Starres, Snares, Files, &c. In these they kept their Records. And our Heralds Art keepeth records of pedegrees in a kinde of Hieroglyphikes, not much vnlike. To let passe Magicall characters, Thesius Ambrosius hath published a confused kind of scroll, the Copie of one (hee saith) written by the Deuill. I had rather mention that which Eusebius in the life of Constantine recordeth written by Diuine hand, which some say was the Crosse, but by his description appeareth rather to haue beene the two first letters of Christs name,  $\chi$  and  $\rho$  combined, with promise of victory to the pious Emperour, not in that signe (of the Crosse) but in Christ himselfe, to whom be glory for euer, Amen.

Diuers wayes of Reading.

Iaponian Character l. 4. c. 1. §.

America books.
See a whole History in Pictures. To. 2. l. 5,
c. 6.
Heraldry.
Magicall characters and diabolically.

40 The Phœnician or Samaritan Letters, which some say were the Mosaicall and first Hebrew, with the Names of the elder and later Syrians, and the Ionike and later Greeke Letters answering them, and answered by the Latine, we haue transcribed out of Ioseph Scaliger in this forme and order.

Apellaciones

Appellationes Syrorum posteriorū.	Appellationes Syrorum veterum.	Phœnicia littera.	Græcæ literæ recentiorum & Ionum veterum.	Latine.
Olaph.	Alpha.	Α	Α Α. Αλφα.	A.
Beth.	Betha.	Β	Β. Βητα.	B.
Gomal.	Gamla.	Γ	Γ Α. Γαμμα.	C.
Dolath.	Delta.	Δ	Δ Α. Δλτα.	D.
He.	He.	Ε	Ε Ε. Η.	E.
Wau.	Wau.	Ϝ	Ϝ Ϝ. Επισημον βαυ.	F.
Zoe.	Zetha.	Ζ	Ζ. Ζητα.	G.
Heth.	Hetha.	Η	Η. Ητα.	H.
Teth.	Tetha.	Θ	Θ Θ. Θητα.	Θ.
Iud.	Iota.	Ι	Ι. Ιωτα.	I.
Chuph.	Kappa.	Κ	Κ. Κητα.	K.
Lomad.	Lambda.	Λ	Λ Λ. Λαμβδα.	L.
Mim.	Me.	Μ	Μ Μ. Μυ.	M.
Nun.	Nun.	Ν	Ν Ν. Νυ.	N.
Semchath.	Simcha.	Ξ	Ξ Ξ. Ξι.	Ξ.
E.	Oe.	Ο	Ο Ο. Ου.	O.
Phe.	Phe.	Π	Π Π. Πι.	Π.
Tzode.	Tzode.	Ϟ	Ϟ Ϟ. Επισημον σιγμα.	P.
Kugh.	Kophe.	ϙ	ϙ ϙ. Επισημον κοππα.	Q.
Refch.	Roe.	Ρ	Ρ Ρ. Ρο.	R.
Schin.	Schin.	Σ	Σ Σ. Σαν. Σιγμα.	S.
Thau.	Thau.	Τ	Τ. Ταυ.	T.
		Υ	Υ Υ. Υι.	Υ.
		Φ	Φ Φ. Φι.	Φ.
		Χ	Χ Χ. Χι.	Χ.
		Ψ	Ψ Ψ. Ψι.	Ψ.
		Ω	Ω Ω. Ωι.	Ω.

BY the figure of these Characters it is easie to bee gathered that the Letters ( which Herodotus calleth Καρμυδια χαρακτα, scene by him in the Temple of Apollo Ismenius at the Boeotian Thebes ὁμοῖα ἔοντα ταῖσι Ἰωνικοῖσι ) were deuised by Cadmus, with no great alteration in the most from the Phœnician, except in the turning them from the right had posture to the left, and adding sometimes, sometimes cutting off some particks. The Latine no lesse seemeth deriued from the Ionian, and are in the most the very same. Your eyes may easily discern and iudge; and Scaligers Commentary is well worth your consultation herein, too long to transcribe or translate hither. Of the twenty two all had not the vse of Letters and Elements of writing amongst the Ionians, but sixteene onely: the rest were called ἐπισήματα, that is notes. to wit, of Spirit or Numbers: and therefore the first note Ϝ stands for the numerall VI. F is ἐπισημον το βαυ in steed of Wau, wher- of the Aeolians had frequent vse, which called Ελένη Felēn, & therefore was not reputed a Letter, because it might be taken away without change to the word; it stands also for a note of the spiritus lenis, as in that hexametre [αἰὺς δ' ἐφ' ἑνὶ φάρμακῳ] it is neither Consonant nor Vowell, there being a Synalapha for ei and no Position in Farmy. H with the old Iones was as H with the Latines, as in that HODOI in the former Inscription is seene: they also vied E onely, both long and short syllable, as in the same Inscription KINESANTI sheweth, and TEI for τη. Beda lib. de Indigitatione hath touching those ἑμίονα these words; Græci omnibus suis literis exprimunt numeros. Verum toto Alphabeti sui charactere in numerorum figuras extenso, tres, qui plus sunt, numeros, notis proprijs quæ ex Alphabeto non sunt depingunt. Prima est ε̄ qua dicitur Epimon, & est nota numeri VI. Secunda est Γ, quæ vocatur Kophe, & valet in numero XC. Tertia est Ϟ qua dicitur Enneacosia quia valet DCCCC. But let the learned read Scaliger himselfe.

10

The Hebrew Letters and Names thereof now in use are these.

Aleph
Beth Gimel
Dalet
He Vau
Zain
Cheth
Tet
Iod
Caph Lamed
Mem
Nun
Samech
Ain
Phe
Tsadi
Coph
Rec
Cin
Thau

א ב ג ד ה ו ז ח ט י כ ל מ נ ס ע פ צ ק ר ש
ת

I have also added two Coines of the old Samaritan letters, the higher described from Postellus his Introduction of twelve languages, the lower from Bezas larger Annotations, Matth. 17. His words are Huius vero numi, id est dimidij Stateris argentei, qui quatuor Drachmarum erat quales ipsi Iudæi olim signarant, veram imaginem hic exprimendam curavi, expressam ex vero & puri puri argenti numo, mihi à fido illo Christi seruo D. Ambrosio Blaurero, donato. Habet autem hic numus Samaritanis li-

R

teris

teris insignis, una ex parte urnam illam sacram, in qua recondita fuit Manna, superposita litera Aleph, qua declaratur simplex hic fuisse siclus, duarum videlicet drachmarum, cum duplex esset drachmarum quatuor, cum inscriptione [SCHEKEL IISRAEL] id est, Siclus Israel: ex altera vero, Virgam illā Aaronis florentem, cum inscriptione [IERVSCHALAIM KODSCHAH] id est Ierusalem Sancta. That of Postellus (of Silver also) differeth somewhat in the figure and the superscription S.B. which (I conceive) signifieth that it was a double Shekel.

Inf. pag. 910.
Socrat. l. 5. c. 16.
Saz. l. 7. c. 15.

I haue added an Obeliske or Columne inscribed with Egyptian Hieroglyphikes, copied out of Gramay; and in the basis thereof haue added another described out of Laurentius Pignorius his Mensa Isiaca expositio, where the Reader may feast himselfe with Characters of that kind. I also haue elsewhere giuen some of those Egyptian figures. These I thought good to adde for illustration of that mention of the Crosse in the Ecclesiastical History against the Egyptian figures in the Temple of Sarapis, which occasioned the conuersion of many Ethnikes to Christianity.

The Alphabets following wee haue distinguished by figures, for the Readers better vnderstanding of the exposition added. Wherein wee haue most followed Gramayes.

1	h3 d d l m g n i l l m z w 9 x z m c a p f s x z i z v v v t r y r
2	o h 4 6 l i p l c t a h t u l : a m v e > h o e f z x
3	h g y n g y x u x u g n z m z m x m n y y u y u m m m y y
4	o o o o o o o o o o o o e o o o o o o o o o o o o o o o o o
5	p z z y
6	o o
7	n n
8	1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11 12 13 14 15 16 17 18 19 20
9	o o

1. The first is that of the Alans or Lumbards, set forth by Patricius: other haue beene published by Bonauentura Vulcanius in his Specimen Variarum linguarum, and others.
2. The old Aleman Alphabet of Trithemius, much different from those of de Bry, Hermannus Hugo, and Iames Bonauentura.
3. An olde Magicke Alphabet of Honorius Thebanus, of which there are other kinds too many.
4. An Alchymicke of Cid Abdalla, of which the Africans haue other sorts.
5. Gramay saith, it is an old English Alphabet sometimes published by Sir Thomas Moore.
6. The ABC. vsed by the Priests of Iupiter Ammon, deuised by Mercurius Egyptius.
7. The Abassine attributed to Salomon; many others by many others are so inscribed.
8. The Affyrian, ascribed to Abramam.
9. The old Apulian, which inuerted and read from the bottome is one kind of the Armenian fathered on Saint Iohn Chrysostome.

48. The Ethiopiike Alphabet, with the Letter A. added thorowout. 49. Syriak. 50. Arabike. They haue diuers other sorts of Letters, as in Erpennius & Postellus, Megiferus and others which haue written of them is seene. The Turkes also vie the same Letters and Points, or notes of vowels, howsoeuer their Language differeth much, being neerer the Persian and Tartarian. 51. Armenian. 52. Dalmatian. 53. Russian. 54. The Iacobites. 55. Egyptian. 56. Indian. 57. Persian. 58. The old Syriake.

I haue added also this Copie of Malabar Writing, read as the Latine from the right hand, written with a needle in a Palme leafe folded vp, of which I haue two of great length and many folds.

திரவமாதவரணிபகரனது
இயல்புசெய்யுருகும
புடயியமாதகுதிருதின னமமமமமமமமமம

The China Characters are seene in our Map of China, the Iaponian in the Charter of that Emperour to our Merchants in Captaine Saris his Iournall, as alio the Indostan and Arabike; the Mexican Hieroglyphikes in a whole Historie therein written. Wee haue ended with our owne ancient Saxon Characters. But first will giue you another sort of Vlphilas Gotike Characters set forth by De Bry.

Tom. 2. l. 2. c. 7.
Tom. 1. l. 4. c. 1.
Tom. 2. l. 3. c. 23.

Vlphilas Gotike, and the Saxon Alphabet.

See of these Gotike Letters,
Tom. 2. l. 3 c. 23.

A	a	p	r
b	b	δ	S
c	c	γ	s
d	d	τ	t
E	E	u	u
e	e	p	w
f	f	χ	X
g	g	x	x
h	h	y	y
i	i	Ϸ	Æ
l	l	ʀ	e
m	m	Ð	Th
n	n	ð	th
o	o	þ	th
p	p	ʒ	and
q	q	ʒ	that

The end of the first Booke.

20111

AN ALPHABETICALL TABLE OF THE PRIN- CIPALL THINGS CONTAI- NED IN THE FIRST BOOKE

of the first Part of PURCHAS his Pilgrims.

A A Atalla, a Papall Easterne Patriarke, 151 Abassines their habitation, Religion, Rites and opinions, 137. 138. 147. 148. 149. Abdesu an Easterne Patriarke, 151. Ægypt, Christianitie there sometime exceedingly flourished, 112. What Christians there now, 113. Æneas his Navigation, 71 Æthiopian Church their rites and opinions, 138. Their faith declared at large by Tecla Maria an Æthiopian, 147. 148. &amp; seq. Africa hath the richest Mines in the World, 28. Her religion, 112. 113 &amp; seq. African tongue, 101. Almost all Africke Mahometan or Gentiles, 112. 116. 118. Jewes there, 119. The torride parts of Africke resembled to a Libards skin, 113 Alans, and the old Aleman Alphabet, 182 Alcantara Order in Spaine, 170 Alexander the Great, 57. 75. 88. His life, Acts, Peregrinations and Conquests, 81. 82. &amp; seq. His sickness, temperance, Persian expedition, battles with Darius, 83 His marriage, and crueltie, 84	His ambition frustrate, danger, escape, view of the Ocean, 85. His marriage, feasts, guard, mourning, rage, death, 86 Alexanders Port, 87 Alexandria builded by Alexander, 83 Algum trees mentioned, 2. Chronicles, 38 Almug trees, 38 Alphabets diuers kinds old and new, 181. 182. 183. 184. &amp; seq. Alpes why so termed, 140 Alvarez taxed for his report of the Nubians their dependance on the Pope, 137 Amazonian tale, 84 America thinly and newly inhabited, 30. Whither new-peopled, and when the word there first preached, 58. The multiplying of people and cattle there, 60. What Christians among them, and their poore Christianitie, 115. Four large Regions thereof, as large as Europe possessed by the Spaniards, 115. The whole Countrey stored with Beares, Lions, Tigres, Wolves, Foxes, &amp;c. 120 Ammons Oracle, 83 Anabaptists deny their Baptisme, 7 They wickedly remooue the Landmarke, 16 Anacharsis the Philosopher his travels, 75	Anachoreticall, or Hermeticall Monkes, 160 Andrew the Apostle where he preached and died, 53 Antiochia, the place where the Name of Christians was first heard in the World, 129. The Patriarch thereof, ibid. Ants casting up heaps full of golden sands, 32 Ants as great as a mans span, 89 Anzichi an Idolatrous and man-eating nation, 113 Apes, 39. 436 Apochrypha Bookes falsely attributed to the Apostles &amp; others, 56 Apollonius Tyanæus his Pilgrimage, 76 Apostles their mission and preheminence, 50. Their preaching through all the World, 51. Their tongues &amp; miracles, 53. Their preaching in the old knowne World, 57 Apostolicall Acts &amp; Conquests, 61 Aquitaine speech, 106 Arabian Gulfe, 40 Arabicke Language which, &amp; where spoken, 110 Arabia the nest that bred and fostered Mahometisme, 116 Archbishops of the Romane Province, 168 Archbishops of Spaine and their revenues, 170 Argyre, stored with gold &amp; silver, 33 Argo-
--	--	---

THE TABLE.

Argonauts, their Voyage 69. Their Arts, 70

Argus, 70

Aristippus by flattery a Trencher-worme to Dyonisius the tyrant, 75

Aristotle, his birth, life, travels,
&c. 75

Amenians their religion, opinions, and rites, 139. Their Lyturgie or publike seruise, 143. Their Pa-triarkes, numbers, Preachers, or Masters, 140

Armozia, now Ormus a fertile Region, 88

Ariareth a supposed Region, 123

Arsaratha a Citie mentioned by the ancient, 123

Art, but the supply of Natures defects, 10

Asceticall Monks, 160

Asia, the severall Religions therein:
many Mahumetans & Pagans, 113. In what parts thereof,
Christianitie hath taken roots,
114. neere one halfe thereof corrupted by Mahumetans, 116. 117
Another halfe by Idolaters, 118.
What lawes found amongst them,
119

Augustinians have 555. Monasteries in Italy, in Europe 4000. 174

Auicion in France the Popes Countey, 171

Authours excuse for his European promise, 94

Author of the World, Man, Peregrinations, all things, 49

B

Babels Confusion, 29

Babilon, the Metropolis of the Iewes, 51

Baboones greater then women, and little differing from their shape, 79

Bacchus his severall names, his Priests, 23. His travels; with divers his famous exploits, 68. 69

Bagisara a Harbour in India, 87

Ballas, 38

Baptisme every yeere used by the Ethiopians, & the reason thereof, 148

Baptisme in the Greeke Church, 158

Barbarians vanquished by Alexander, 12

Barma a Towne where are Gardens of Myrrhe, flowres, culture of trees &c. 87

Bartholomew the Apostle, his preaching, life, death, &c. 55

Bay called Hesperus his borne;

wherein a great Iland; in the I-land a Lake, and in it another I-land full of Woods, when in the nights are kindled fires, and heard the noise of Cimbals, Drums, and infinite shouts. 78

Beatts fed with fish, 87. A beast so bigge that hee denoueth a whole Elephant, 89

Beda translated some part of the Scriptures into the Saxon or English tongue, 145

Behemoth and Leviathan a Jewish tale of them, 123

Belgian Bishopricks, 172

Benedictine Order beyond the Iesuiticall, 174

Benomotapa a great Kingdome in Africk, 113

Bessus his murdering of Darius, his torture, 84

Bion the Philosopher, 75

Bishops how differing from the Apostles, 52. Religion recomforted by them, 62

Bishopricks of the Roman Provinces 168. & sequitur, Bishopricks in India, 173. Bishopricks in Spaine, France, Low-countries, Germany, Switzer, Hungaria, Poland, Prussia, England, Scotland, Denmarke, Sweden, 170.

171. 172. 173.

Bohemia, 172

Books of strange kinds of paper, 179

Brachmans, their manner of living,
they have no instrument to worke,
no beasts, tillage, use of Iron:
they alwayes worship God; alwayes pray looking to Heaven; they eat what they finde on the ground; the men live of on side Ganges, the women on the other, to whom their husbands have recourse certaine monethes,
&c. 89

Beerewood his Enquiries of Languages, 95. of Religions professed in the World, 112

Bread made of the meale of roasted fishes, 87

Bread for the Greekes Eucharist, called pure bread, made by a pure woman or man, 156

Britaine in Cæsars time, 30

Bubarta, a small Iland, 87

Bucephalus Alexanders fierce Horse, 82

Bucephalia a Citie built by Alexander where his Horse Bucepha-lus dyed, 84

Byscaines among the Spaniards boast that they are the right Hi-dalgos or Gentlemen, 107

C

Abots Voyage, 28

Cadmus, 70. 177

Calabrian revolted from the Bishop of Rome, and for a long time pertained to the Patriarke of Constanth-nople, 128

Calantinhan Empire containing thirteene Kingdomes, hath great riches, 34

Calanus the Philosopher his travels, and burning of himselfe, 76

His Epistle to Alexander, 89

Cambyles, the sonne of Cyrus his Expeditions, 73

Canus the highest part of the Pene-Hils; whence so called, 140

Carbuncles, 38

Cardandan an Iland plentifull for gold, lying about the head of Ganges, 33

Cardinals in the Romane Empire, 167

Carneades, 75

Carthage Queene of the Cities of Africke, 108

Carthaginians called their Cities
Lybphœnician, 79

Cattile, 170

Catza an Ile sacred to Mercury, & Venus, whither dedicated Goats and Sheepe are yeerely sent, which there grow wild, 88

Celtz inhabiting the middle part of France, their language, 106

Cerne an Iland in Africa, 78

Chaldee language and Paraphrase, 111

Chanaan, 108

Characters Magicall and Diaboli-
call, 179

Cheese-sunday, 155

Chiama lake, neere it many rich
Mynes, 34

Chingis first founder of the Tarsarian Empire, 114

Christ the Sunne of Righteousnesse,
8. His Kingdome not of this World, 14. His Peregrinations, 49-50

Christians, 8. Their grace and glory,
9. Compared with Philosophers,
10. Their hold, 15. They are rich, free, and Kings, 11. 12. the diuers sorts of Christians, 127. S. Thomas Christians, 55. 132. Christians much fewer since the Tartars, 58. almost all Europe Christian, 112. Christians possesse neere about a sixt part of the knowne inhabited Earth, 126.

Christian liberty, 78

Chri-

THE TABLE

Christian Religion, entered the Inner India in Constantines dayes, 92
 Christian Churches under the Turke
 Dominion, 112
 Christians in America, 115
 Christians their Liturgie, or publike Service, 143. 144. & seq.
 Christian religion divided into foure parts, in regard of her professions through the World, 146
 Christophoros Angelos his Booke, 154
 Chuniake Order, 171
 Church declining and recomfor-
 ted, 62
 Chryse plentifull for Gold and Silver, 33
 Chrysostome the Translator of holy Scripture into the Armenian tongue, 143
 Cingianfigua City in China, many Christians dwelling there, 114 Circassians their abode, rites, and opinions, 130. They celebrate their diuine Service in Greeke, which their Priests themselves understand not, 146
 Circumcision among the Tartars, 121. Amongst what others Nations it hath beene used, and from whom received, 121
 Circumnauigations of Afrike rare, 47
 Circumnauigation of the Indian and Euxine Sea, 76
 Cleo his speech, 75
 Clitomachus the Philosopher, 75
 Clitus slaine by Alexander, 84
 Clouen tongues, 80
 Coines as olde as since Salomon's dayes, 177. Israel-Samaritan Camels, 181
 Colonies in England, 99
 Columbus Voyage, 28
 Comala, 87
 Communion in the Greek Church, 158
 Compasse: the ancients had it not, 27
 Confession in the Greek Church, 157 Confirmation in what manner v-
 sed, 148
 Conquerours the Conquest of Religion, 59
 Conquest Apostolicall, 61 Constantinople the seat of the Turkish Empire hath aboue twenty Churches of Christians, 112
 Constantinopolitan would be stiled Vniuersall Bishop, 166. Hee had three Diocesses acknowledged by the Chalcedon Councell, 167 Conuersion of the World prayed for, 64. 65
 Conuersion of Indians and Iberi-

ans, 90
 Cophti or Christians of Egypt, their religion, opinions, & rites, 135. 136. Their Liturgie, 145.
 The difference between the Copht-in and the Ethiopians, 149. their Synod at Cairo, 151
 Coruina an Island, where are sheepe whose flesh tastes like Sea-fowles, they being fed with fishes, and ha-
 uing no grasse there, 87 Councell of Chalcedon caused perplexitie and troubles in Easterne parts, 129
 Counterfeits fathered on the Apostles, 55
 Countries are to relieue and enrich one another, 3
 Countrey smelling of Spices, 78
 Countrey full of flames, in the midst whereof an exceeding high fire reaching vnto the starres, 78 Creation of Man, 49
 Creatures very strange and fabulous, 80
 Cæsus, 75
 Crocala an Ile, 87
 Crocodiles, 78. 79
 Crosse, how esteemed in the Greeke
 Church, 162
 Crosse Fast, 156
 Crossing of a poisoned Cup, 159
 Ctesias the Philosopher a traveller, but hee often travels from the truth, 75
 Curdi certaine people in Asia their habitation, 119
 Cyrill, Preacher of the Gospell to Gentile Nations, and Inuenter of Illyrian Characters, 145
 Cyrus his Conquests, 73

D

Dalmatians the vulgar translation of holy Scriptures used amongst them, which some thinke to bee the worke of Ierome 144 Darius his expedition, 73. His bas-tils with Alexander, 83. Hee is slaine by reason of his owne, 84 Dauid his talents, 36. His husbandry 27. Whither hee sent ships to Ophir, 37
 Day at Wardhouse, and the North Cape reckoned two monethes and seven houres, 92
 Deacons in the Greek Church, 163
 Declivity of the chanel of Rivers, 125
 Dædalus flight, 71
 Dendrobola, 87. Denmarke, 173

Deuill a Traveller, 66
 Dia an Ile where Birds shot quils which killed men, &c. 70
 Diamants where the most & best, 37
 Diogenes comparing himselfe with Alexander, 10
 Dirutolis a Village of the Babilonians, a Mart for the Spices of Arabia, 88
 Dodona a Towne in the Ile Pylora, which hath nothing but fish and water, 88
 Dog-tale of a Dog fast, 156
 Dolphins, 88
 Doma an Ile, 87
 Donha Simon a Papall Easterne
 Patriarke, 151
 Dragons seventy cubits long, 89
 Druli, a people dwelling in Syria about the skirts of Libanus, 119
 Dutchmen their Sea-greatnesse, 20

E

Earth, her difficulties, 17. The earth diuided amongst the Sons of Noah, 5. The earth at the first forming of it was in the superfi-cies, regular and sphericall, 124
 The cause of the unuenessse and irregularity thereof now, ibid. The quantity and proportion of the parts of the earth, possessed by Christians, Mahumetans & Ge-niles, 126. The earth is equally possed on both sides of her owne center, 127. The center of the earth and of the water are all one, ibid.
 Easter how celebrated in the Greeke
 Church, 162
 Ecclesiasticall Policy ancient and moderne, 166
 Egypts multiplying by the Israelites, 60
 Elana, 22. Eloth, ibid. Elath, 23 Elephants could not come into Peru, 27. Their nature, 39 Elias Patriarke of Babylon, his letter to the Pope, his belief, 164. 165
 Emeralds, 38
 England the Archbishops and Bishops thereof, 173
 Englishmen, their Sea greatnes, 20
 English Alphabet very old published by Sir Thomas Moore, 182
 Epirotike speech and Nation, 107
 Epistle of Calanus, 89
 Eldras his allegation concerning the Tartars dismissed, 122
 Ethiopians their rites and faith declared by Tecla Maria an Ethiopian, 147. 148
 Ethnikes hold in Villenage, not in state of spirituall Inheritance, 15
 Their summes & computation, 36
 Etruria

THE TABLE.

Etruria,	169
Euangelists,	56
Euphrates,	88
Europe compared with the other parts of the world, 90. The bounds, names, and qualities thereof, 91
91. Her Arts, Inventions, Religion, Civilitie, and Languages, 93. 94. Almost every part thereof Christian,	112
Eurychian Heresie,	129. 136
Excommunication,	158
Ezion-geber, where it was, 21. 22. the signification thereof,	23

F

Fables, the cause thereof,	68
Fall of man 6. 49. By his fall robbed of supernaturall, wounded in in his naturall gifts, ibid.
Fasting daies observed by the Greeks, 155. & sequunt. Difference of Fasts,	155
Fitch, his passing through Ganges, 32. His relation of Pegu,	33
Flaterers their basenesse,	75
Fonts in the Greeke Church,	158
Forgiuenesse,	162
Fountaine of Oyle,	84
Franc-Armenians,	167
France, 171. The Diocesses, Archbishops, and Suffragans, Religions, and Military Orders, and Iesuits there,	171
Franciscans,	174
Frankincense where gotten,	140
	141
Free, who so called, 11. The wise-man most free.
Freedome by Christ,	7
French tongue, 101. The beginning thereof 102. Diversitie thereof, 106. Composition thereof,	107
Frumentius,	90
Fura, a Hill neere to Massapa, in the Kingdome of Monomotapa, where are olde ruinous wals with strange letters, which ignorant people say were built by Demons,	28

G

Gadira or Cadix, a Citie built by the Phœnicians,	77
Gadrosi, a people of India,	87
Galatians had a peculiar Language beside the Greeke tongue,	95
Gallicke tongue,	101

Gallia Belgica, or the Low Countries,	172
Ganges the breadth and depth thereof,	85
Gemmes, where the most and best,	37. 38
Gentiles, their calling figured,	37
Genua,	169
Georgians their habitation, rites, and opinions, 130. Their order of divine Service,	146
German Bishops,	172
Giving of Spirituall Gifts,	157
Gospel,
God ruleth over all, and giveth all dominion and rule 15. The Author of all things,	49
Gold, the excellence and superexcellence thereof above Silver, Gems, &c.	35
Golden Regions, 32. 33. Gold Ants, 32. Gold Bels, 33. Gold in some of the East parts little preheminence above silver,	33
Golden Fleece,	69
Gorgones, Savage men, their bodies all over haires,	78
Goths their true Native Countrey,	112
Gothicke Translation of the foure Euangelists, remayning in the Abbey of Werdin.	145
Gotike Alphabet,	186
Gotland and Thule discovered by Himilco, within 24. degrees of the Pole, where the day in June is 22. houres,	77
Grandemont Order,	171
Greece, the bounds thereof,	95
Grecians obedient to the Patriarch of Constantinople,	127
Grecian Shippes muster against Troy,	70
Greeke tongue the extent thereof in ancient time, 95. The extent thereof in vulgar use, 96. The decay of the old Greeke where, & whence, and how corrupted, 97. The difference of the old and moderne Greeke,	98
Greeke Church the opinions and Characters thereof. 128. Their Liturgie,	146
Greekes their condition of life, their rites of Fasts, Feasts, and other Observations, gathered out of the Booke of Christopher Angelos, a Greekish Monke and Priest,	154. 155. seq.
Greeke letters. 177. Greeke Inscriptions in Ionike letters,	178
Greeke Alphabet,	100
Grizons,	172
Gryphans,	32. 33

Gulfe called Normerca for the Southern,	78
---	----

Habassia, the bounds and compass of that Kingdome, their Religion, not all Christiani, but a great part Gentiles,	113
Habassinnes, or midland, Ethiopians their Religion, opinions, & rites, 137. In what Language they read the Scriptures, and celebrate their Liturgie,	143. 144
Halitiuea, an Ile,	87
Hanno and Himilco their Discoverie of the South and North parts,	77
Hanno his Voyage, Acts, and Discoveries on the African-Atlantick Coast,	78
Hauila,	31
Hawkins, how long in his Voyage ere he arrived to the Indies,	42
Hebrew tongue, 29. Divers Jewes ignorant thereof, 51. 111. Not vulgarly understood after the Captivitie,	111
Hebrew letters he Inuenter thereof,	177
Hebrew Alphabet,	180. 181
Heraclites a travelling Philosopher,	76
Hercules his travels, twelve labours, Pillars, helping Atlas, with other Wonders,	69
Heresies their spreading, 141. The succession of Easterne Heresies,	142
Hesperides,	79
Hieroglyphicall Obeliske,	181
Hils their height,	124
Hiram,	62
Histaspis his travels into India, where hee learned Magicke and Philosophy,	76
Historians, their travels,	76
Houses made of Whales bones,	87
Hungaria, the Vniuersities, Bishops, priests, and Iesuits therein,	173
Hubandry a remarkable Pillar of Royall magnificence,	37
Hydaspes a River which runneth into Indus,	86
Hyrcania subdued,	84

I

Iacobean tree,	14
Iacobites whence so called, their opinions

THE TABLE.

opinions and rites, 134. 139. Their Liturgy, 145. Their numbers, Bishops, Monasteries, and Char-ches, 150
Iacobus de Voragine translated the Scriptures into the Italian language, 145
Iambulus his Navigation to Aro-bia, and Ethiopia, and thence to a strange Island, &c. 79. 80. 81
James the brother of Iohn his death, preaching, &c. 93
James called Alphaei, and the brother of our Lord, &c. 53. 54
Saint James Order in Spaine, 170
Iaponian Characters, 185
Iberians converted, 90 Ichthyophagi, or Fish-eaters; they make bread of the scale of rosted fishes, 87
Idanthryfus, 73
Idolatrous Nation in Europe, Asia, Africa, and America, 118. 119 How great a part of the Earth is possessed by Idolaters, 126
Idumæa, 22
Ierusalem, 54
Iesuites their number and Colledges in Italy, 168
Iesuits in Spaine, 171. In Fraunce dem, in the Low Countreies, 172
In Germany, 172. In Hungaria, Poland, and Prussia, 173. In India, 173. 174
Iewels, 37. 38
Iewes divided into three sorts, 51.
121. Dispersed in severall parts of the World, 119. Some ignorant of the Hebrew, 51. & 111. Some vfing the Greeke, Syriake, & Chaldee tongue, 111. Their travels & dispersions, 67. 119. Their publike Service or Liturgy, 143.
Iewish Church and Romish compared, 64. Hope of the Iewes Conversion, 67
Iewes destructions, 67
Iewes for what cause often termed in the Acts of the Apostles Balaui-sai, 111
Iewes when expelled and banished out of England, France, Spaine, Portugall, Naples, & Sicily, 119 Iewish Fables of inclosed Iewes, and of the Sea, 123
Iewish Chaldee is of two sorts, 145 Islands not yet inhabited, 58. 117. A goodly Island found out by the Phœnicians, 77
Island of Iambulus, the people, rites, creatures, 80
Island sacred to Neptune, inaccessible, 88
Island where Pearles are found, 88

Iles of Adaledonia above fouen thousand of them in all, 117 Iles lying dispersed in the Ocean on the East and South-east parts of Asia are in number two or three and thirty thousand, 119 Images invented by the Ethiopians, 147
Image of God, 15
Imaua a mountain more then halfe
the length of Asia, 117. 118 India received the name from the River Indus, 28. 46. It yields store of the things brought from Ophir, 39. 40
Indian Voyage examined, 42. Do.
Dees calculation and others, 43
Indian Embassie sent to Constantine, 89
Infidels, what proprietie they have in their lands and goods, 14 Inscription on the Greekes Encha-rist, 156
Iobson his travell up the River
Gambro, 28
Ioektans posteritie in India, 31
Iohn his banishment, preaching,
&c, 53
Iohn Archbishop of Siuill his translation of the Scripture into the Arabike Tongue. The vulgar speech of that part of Spaine, 145 Jonathan Ben Vziel his translating the Prophets and Pentateuch into the Chaldee tongue; as also his Paraphrase upon the Prophets, 111
Ionike letters, 177. 178
Ionike Alphabet, 180
Ireland the Bishopricks therein, 173
Ishmaelites & Midianites the first Spice-merchants, 42
Ismaelites and Saracens the same Nation, 121
Israelites their multiplication in Egypt, 60
Israels peregrination in the Desert, 24. 66
Italy the Princes potent there, 166
Italian free States, 169
Italian language the beginning ther-of, 102. The diuersitie ther-
of, 106
Iudaisme in what Regions professed, 119
Iupiter, Sacrifices to him by Alexander, 88
Iust men, their use of this world, 14

K

Kine so multiplying in America, that one man had above sixteen thousand, and another of one Kay the increase of eight hundred, they grew wild and were killed onely for their hides, 60 Kings their rights, 10. Heroicall Kings, 12. how good a good and wise King, 12. Good Kings stirred up in the declining age of the Church, 62.

King IAMES his wisdom, learning, government, &c. 13. 14. 48.
King of Georgia his Letter to the Pope, 152
King Red, who gave name to the red Sea, 88
Knighthood Orders, 174
Kniwet his Iowrall and Frier-like report of Saint Thomas preaching in Brasill, 60

L

Acides the Philosopher, 75 Land not level, where the highest, 125
Languages, a discourse of the confusion thereof, 25. The Languages of severall Nations, 95. 96.
Et seq. Foxetaene Languages or Mother tongues in Europe, besides Latine, which remaine not onely not abolished, but little or nothing altered by the Romans, 100
Latine tongue, the Antiquitie, dignitie and extent thereof, 98. 99
Latine abolished not the vulgar languages in the forreine Prouinces of the Roman Empire, 100 Latine not vulgarly spoken in all places of the Roman Empire, 102 Latine degenerating into other languages, 103. Threefold corruption thereof, 104. Objections concerning the extent of the Latine tongue with their solutions, 105
Latine Alphabet, 180
Learning received by Printing, 63
Lebanon a cragged and steep Mountain covered continually with Snow, 140
Legends burthensome to the Church, 55
Lents observed amongst the Greekes
154. Four Lents every yeere,
155. Et seq.
Leonard Bishop of Sidon his Relations of the Iacobites, 150 Letters the diuersitie thereof used by the diuerse Nations in the world, the Antiquitie, manifold use and varietie thereof, with Exemplary

THEATRE.

emplary descriptions of above three severall Alphabets, with other strange writings, 176.
Ecclsq.
Letters 28. used by the Inhabitants of the Island of Iambulus, but fe-ner Characters, 80
Librarie at Cairo very famous, 151 Licé leane men and die when they arrive at the Indies, 20 Liturgies of Christians in the seve-rall parts of the world, in what language celebrated, 142, 143.
Ecclsq.
Loadstone, 26. 38. whether Salomon knew the use thereof. 27
Lorraine, 171
Lord of all God, 7. The poorest Slave
Lord, 7
Low-Countrys, 172

M

MAceta a Rock, whence Cina-mon and Spices are carried to the Assirians, 88
Magicke Alphabet, 182
Mahumetan professors in the world
116. Their multiplying in A-fricke, and Asia, and the cause thereof, 117. How great a part of the Earth they possesse, 126.
Their Liturgie or publike service, 143
Malabar writing, 185
Malana the utmost border of the Orile, 78
Mans threefold tenure, Microcosmi-call, Cosmopoliticall, Spirituall, 6.
His Creation, Fall, Recoverie by invaluable price, 49. His Pilgrimage, 50
Mantua, 169

Mappes.

Map of the Desarts, 24
Map of Saint Pauls peregrinati-
on, 57
Map of the Christian world, 65. 115
Map of the Navigation of Aene-
as, 71
Map of the Roman Empire, 74
Mappe of Alexanders Expedition, 85
Maronites, their Religion, Patriarch, Opinions, and Rites, 140, 141. Their Liturgie, 146. their errors collected out of their owne Bookes by a Iesuite, 152, 153
Massilians spake three Languages, 106

Masterdome over our selves the greatest possession, 17 Mathew the Apostle, his Preaching, 35
Maurice Prince of Orange admired of all Europe, 172
Megasthenes his testimony of olde
Expeditions, 73
Melchites, whence so called, 129.
They are subiect to the Jurisdiction of the Patriarch of Antiochia, ibid. They are for Religion weer-ly of the Gracians opinion, 129
Menelaus Travels, 71
Mengrelians their rites and opinions, 130
Menippus the Philosopher, 75 Men dwelling in Canes, and running faster then Horses, 78 Merchants, the first mention of them and the divers Marts for Spices, 42
Merchandising, proued by Gods law, Nature, Nations, 105 Meroe an Ile inhabited by Mahu-metans, 113
Meropius a Philosopher his sayling
to India, 90
Melambria a Peninsula very fertile, 88
Metha, 32
Metals their excellence, 35
Methodius his translating of the Scriptures into the Slavonike tongue, 145
Meum & Tuum, 16
Mexicans writings in forme of a wheele, read from the Center upwards to the Circumference, 179
Microcosmicall state of Man, 7
Militarie Orders in Spaine, 171
Militarie Orders in France, 171
Mullaine the number of Bishops
there, 169
Miracles ceasing, 62
Mithridates spake twentie two languages without an Interpre-tor, 95
Moenhemage a great Kingdome in Africke, 113
Monkes Eremiticall, and Asceti-
call, 160
Monkes of the Exercised Order, 161
Monkes of Saint Anthonies Order, 137
Monks fasts, 155. Greekish Monks 159. Their life, hand-labour, habit, diuinitie, fasts, penacne, night-prayers, probation, forgie-nesse, Easter, conceits of the Crosse, &c. 160, 161, 162. 163
Monothelites their heresie, 141
Morduites a people in Europe, possessing the middle Confiner betweene the Preopile Tartars, and the Muscovites, 119

Morontobaris, 87 Mountaines their height, 124. The highest passe not in perpendicular erectnesse ten furlongs, ibid.
Mountaine full of Trees, the wood whereof is odoriferous, and of di-uers colours, 78
Mountaine called the Chariot of the Gods, 78
Multiplication by diuine prouisidence, 60
Muscovites their Religion, Rites, and opinions, 130. Their Litergie, 144
Muzius Bishop of Dolens his Indian
Voyage, 89
Mutuall Necessitie, the Mother of mutuall Commerce, 5 Muzal Patriarchall See of the Ne-storians, 132

N

NAbuchodonosor, 73 Nations now small, which formerly were very barbarous, 59
Natures inheritance greater riches then the greatest Kings beneficence, 10
Navigation, the lawfulness thereof proued from Salomon, 4. The ne-cessitie, commoditie, dignitie there-
of, 17, 18, 19. 62, 63
Nearchus his Voyage, and Fleet set forth by Alexander the Great, from the Riuer Indus to the bot-tome of the Persian Gulfe, 86, 87. Et seq. His Voyage from Indus to Tygris, honoured by Alexander, 88
Negroes Countrey, 78. Merry Negroes, 79
Nestorians scattered farre and wide in the East, their Patriarch, Religion, and heresie, 131. Their opinions and rites, 132, 133. They celebrate their Liturgie in the Chaldee or Syriake tongue, 145.
Difference betwixt them and the Greekes, 165
Niniue builded by Ninus; the statelinesse of the building, &c. 72
Ninus his Marches, Travels, and Conquests, 72
No new thing vnder the Sunne, how to bee understood, 26
Normans seeking to destroy the English tongue, 100
North parts discovered, 77
Nol

THE TABLE

Nofa an Ile sacred to the Sun, of which it was reported that if any went on shore, he should never be seen after, but Nearchus found it false by experiment 88. Another tale was that a Nymph dwelt there which lay with Men and after turned them into Fishes, 88 Nubia a large Region in Africk, having from the Apostles time professed the Christian Faith, it hath againe above an 100. yeeres since forsaken it, 112. Want of Ministers the cause thereof; the Nubians their petition for supply, 113 The Nubians that are yet Christian their Religion, and obedience to the Patriarch of Alexandria, 137.

O

Oraeta an Island abounding with Vines, Palmer, and Frutes, 88 Obryzum the purest Gold, 35 Olympia her Dreame, 81 Ophir, where situate, 25. Et seq. Her derivatines, 31. The bounds thereof, 45 Comiectures of the course taken in the Ophirian voyage, 39. 40. Et seq. Orange, 171 Orders tearmed religious, the severall sorts, and originals thereof, 175 Oritæ, 87 Ottaman Sultans their severall Seates, 110 Oyle a fountaine thereof found, 84

P

Palestina, the Citie thereby signified, 4 Palladius his swiftnesse & travels, 90 Palm-tree the ensigne of Phœnicia, 108 Panonian tongue, 101 Papall religious Orders, the numbers, kindes, and beginnings thereof, 175 Parrots, 39. Paruaim, the name of the Ophirian gold, 25 Patriarch travels, 66 Patriarchs in the Roman Empire, 166 Patriarch of Constantinople his Jurisdiction, 167. 127. 162. The reason why his Authority so great, 128. His tribute, familie, 163 Patriarch of Antiochia his Jurisdiction, 129, 167. Patriarchs titular obeying Rome, 151 Patriarch of the Nestorians, 131 Patriarch of Mozall or Seleucia, 133 Patriarch of Ierusalem a Iacobite, 134 167 Patriarch of Alexandria his Jurisdiction, 163, 167 Patriarch of the Maronites, 141 Patriarch of Babilon, 163. The beginning and alteration of the number and power of Christian Patriarchs, 166 Patriarchship of the West, 166. Of the East, 167 Patriarch of Seleucia, 167

Patriarch of Ethiopia, 167 Patriarch of Aquileia, 167 Paul the Apostle his Preaching, life, death, &c. 56. The Mapps of his Peregrination, 57. Peacocks, 39 Pegu, infested with wilde Beasts, 33. Famous for riches and Jewels, 33. 34 Pelagi first brought letters into Italy, 178 People, the world peopled by degrees, 30. People speaking at the same time perfectly with two men, both answering and discoursing; and having eleven tongues, 80 Peregrinations of Christ, 49. 50. A world of Peregrinations have hapned in the world, 68 Peru, why and whence so named, 25 Peru is not Ophir, 27 Persians discomfited by Alexand. 83. 84. Persian Golfe, 87, 88 Perian Kings Palaces, 88 Peter his Preaching peregrination, &c. 51. Not Bishop of Rome, 52 Peter Stroza, Secretarie to Pope Paul the 5. his Treatise of the Opinions of the Chaldeans, touching the Patriarch of Babylon, and the Nestorians in Asia, 163 Philosophy two kinds, 74. Is formerly flourished in Asia, but now suppressed, 117. Phylatophers held themselves of themselves compleat, 7. Their estate 8. Compared to Horses, 8 Philosophers & Christians compared, 10 Philosophers Travels, 75, 76 Philotas slaine by the command of Alexander, 84 Philip his Preaching, &c. 54 Philip the Father of Alexander his dreame, and Aristander the Diviner his exposition thereof, 81 Philippinas, certaine Iles in Asia called by that name, the number whereof is eleven thousand, 114 Phineas blinded by Iupiter for revealing the Gods secrets, 70 Phœnician Voyages, 77. A goodly Island found out by them neere the Libyan shore, 77 Phœnician Antiquities, 48. Phœnician Alphabet, 180. Phœnicians the same with the Cananites, 108 Phœnix, true in Misterie, not in Historie, 23 Pilgrimages, or Peregrinations, 49, 50 Pillar of Stone inscribed, I Alexander came hither unto, 89 Pillar in the Capital at Rome, dedicated to the memory of Duillius with the Latine inscription, 106 Pinator Lake, neere it much Gold, and a rocke of Diamonds, 34 Plato his travels, 75. His disciples, ib. Poeticall fictions, 69. 70. 71 Poyson dranke by a Patriarch of Alexandria without hurt, 159 Poland the Provinces, Universities, Bishopricks, and Jesuites therein, 173 Polanders of the Greeke Religion, 131 Pomerland a Dukedome, the Cities, and Bishopricks therein, 172 Pope denier his Baptismall name, 7. His usurpation, 12. 166. No such power as he pretends 16. He is despised by the Greeke Church, 128. The title of Pope was anciently given to severall Bishops, 166 Pope Innocent the 3. charged that in Cities where was concourse of divers Nations that differed in language, divine Service should bee celebrated according to that difference, 144 Popish rites in ginning Orders, 149 Pope Clement the 8. his Messengers and gifts to the Maronites, 152 Port of Smr, the place of the Citie of Tyreso called, 129 Portugals their Sea-greatnesse, 16 Porus King of a great part of India, 84 Praying standing, 157 Preaching of old to the Americans, 59 Presbyter Iohn, King of Tenduc, his rule in the North-east parts of Asia, his Religion, Scaligers error touching him, 114 Priests linings in the Greeke Church, 163 Princes, no impeachment to them but true advancement of honour to use all frugall husbandry and meanes of thriving at home, 27 Printing, the Art of Arts, 62. Learning thereby renewed, 63 Proprietic the Subjects state, 10 Prussia Regalis & Ducalis, the Bishopricks and government thereof, 173 Ptolomeis degr. false or uncertaine, 79 Punicke Tongue, little differing from the Hebrew, 109. 29. The Chananistish or old Hebrew language, 108 Purgatorie 148 Pyrrho the Philosopher his travels, 76 Pythagoras the Philosopher most famous both for Travels & Science, 76

Q

Qveda plentifull for Gold, 33 Queene Elizabeth, her wisdom, vertue, government, &c. 12. 13. 48 Quinsay, the greatest City in the world in it but one Christian Church, 114 Quire in the Grecks Temples, 158

R

Rabbi Benjamin a Jew, his Travels, 123 Redemption of Man, 49 Red-Sea, whence so named. 22 Reedes, bread made thereof, 80 Reedes increasing and decreasing according to the Moore, 81 Religion

THE TABLE

Religion renewing, 62
 Religions professed in the world by Christians, Mahometans, Jews, and Idolaters, 112, 113. Et seq.
 Renovation weeks, 157
 Riches, their contempt, 9. Greater riches in Nature's inheritance, then in the greatest Kings beneficence, 110 River of S. Mary, and Rio Grando, 79 River-Horses, 78, 79
 Rivers fierce, 78, 79 Rivers slide from the higher ground to the lower till they come to the sea, 125
 Rome the seat of the Romish Religion, 106. Five Patriarchall Churches in Rome, 168
 Roman Bishops, 52
 Roman Navigations to the Indies, 49
 Romish & Jewish Church compared, 64 Rome Cite, 98. The compass and number of Inhabitants when it was first founded, 98
 Roman Emperours travels, 73
 Roman Empires bounds, 98
 Roman Empire, when and by whom it fell, 104
 Roman tongue, The antiquitie, dignity, and extent thereof, 98, 99.
 Threefold corruption thereof, 104
 Rubies, where the most and best, 38
 Russia, some parts thereof Idolatrous, 113. They were converted to Christianitie by the Gracians; and remain of their Religion, 130, 133

S

Sacalis, 87
 Salomons Navy sent from Ezion-Geber to Ophir, 1. The historie thereof borrowed from Scripture, 2. The Allegoricall and Analogical sense or application thereof, 3. Salomon signifying Christ, 3. His right to spoyle the Egyptians and Ophirians, 4. The combination of wisdom and royaltie in his person, 10. His Excellencie, fame, and renowne, 18, 19. The end of his Navigation, 18. His revenue audited, 36. His servants who, 42. Our Salomon, 12, 13, 14
 Salonichi or Thessalonica, a Cite in the Turkish Empire bath about thirty Christian Churches, 112
 Samaritan Letters, whether ancienter then the present Hebrew, 177
 Sapphires, where the most and best, 38
 Saracens, whence they had their name, of all other Nations most addicted to rapine, 121 Saracens of Arabia their scourge amended the posteritie of the Easterne Church, 142
 Saranga a Region, 87
 Savage people clothed in beasts skins, 78
 Sauoy the Duke thereof chiefe of two Military Orders, 171. Sixon Alphabet, 186
 Scorpions a cubit long, 89
 Scotland the Bishopricks therein, 173
 Scriptures in vulgar tongues, 143, 144
 Scripture-translators, 145
 Scripture misapplied by the Greekes, 154
 Scythia termed Hominum Officina; it contended with Egypt for antiquity of habitation and preyed, 123
 Scythians chased by Alexander, 84
 Seas manifold serviceablenesse, 17. It addes true greatnesse to greatest Kings, 19. It teacheth temperance, 20. It is a Temple of Theologicall vertues, 20. It is deeper then the highest Hills, 124. The face thereof is in all parts naturally level, or equally distant from the center of the water, whence called Aequor, 126. Saylor in equall distance from the land, observe an equall deepnesse of the Sea, in both South and North latitude, 127

 Selfe-knowledge, 6
 Seleucia, the Metropolis of Assyria, 132. Divers opinions of that City, ibid. It was inhabited by the Citizens of Babylon, 133 Semiramis her exploits, her building Babylon, invading India, &c. 72 Seminary of Maronites, 152
 Senacherib invaded Iudab, 73
 Senses external the Cinque-port-Intelligencers
 Internall reasons Hand-maids, 176
 Sensuall liberty amongst the Turkes, 117
 Sephar, 32
 Serica, a Region where are Trees which bring forth very fine wooll, of which they make garments called Serica, 89
 Sestostris, his Army, and Pillars, 73
 Sheba, 31, 73
 Ship of Noah a figure of Baptisme, 21. Every Christian man is a Ship, 3
 Shipwracke of Faith, ibid.
 Sicilia the Bishops and number of Jesuites
 there, 169
 Simon called Cananite, and Zelotes, his preaching peregrinations, 54 Simon Sulara a Papall Easterne Patriarch amongst the Chaldeans, 151
 Sinnes mortall, 148
 Slaunions, they exercise their publike diuine
 Service in their owne Language, 144
 Slaunith Tongue, 109
 Socrates, 75. Soffia is not Ophir, 28
 Soloente a Promontory of Africa, 78, 79
 Solon, 75. Somatra famous for Gold, 33
 South Continent, 58, 127
 South parts discovered, 77. Spaine, 107
 Spanish Kings Titles, 94. Spanish Antiquities, 48. Spaine fitted against Rome, 64 Spanish Tongue, 101. The beginning thereof, 102. The Composition thereof, 107
 Spanish Bishopricks and their revenues, 170
 Spices, whence fetched, the severall Ports, 43 Succession of Ports and Staples for the Spice-trade, 44. Spinel a precious Stone, 38
 Stand-Mountaine, 159
 Stars which appeare to us not seene to some, 81
 Stura a great River, 86
 Subjects truly obedient to their King, 12
 Sues a Desert place where no Herbe groweth, the Armada for India made there, 23
 Sumatra stored with Gold, 34
 Sufians, 88. Switzers, 172. Sweden, 173
 Synods in Egypt, 112. Synod held in Goa, 133
 Syriake Language, 110.
 Syriake Testament, 133, 134
 Syrians or Melchites, for number the greatest sect of Christians in the Orient, 128. Their Order of diuine Service, 146

T
 Tabernacle, what, 62 Talent how much it containeth, 35. Salomon and Davids Talents, 36 Taprobane, an Island iudged by the Ancients another world, 40. Governed by foure Princes one of which is chiefe, to him are subiect a thousand Islands, 89
 Tartars subdued Asia, and banished thence Christianitie, 114. Whence their name and sig-nification thereof, 120. They are not Israelites, 120, 121, 122. Are Idolaters, violaters of the Law, Sabbath-breakers, &c. 122
 Thais a Strumpet, she fired Xerxes palace, 83
 Thales his Epistle to Pherecides a Syrian, 74 Tharlis, or Tharlish, 44, 46. Whither the same with Ophir, 45
 Tarsellus not Tharlish, 47

Therapsus his Indian voyage, 85
 Theophrastus his Travels, and Acts, 69 Thomas the Apostle, called Dydimus, his preaching, life, death, &c. 55
 Thomeros, a River, 87. Ships there anoueltie; the Inhabitants have long and sharpe nailes wherewith they kill Fish, & cut wood;
 their garments, Beasts or Fishes skinned, 87
 Tearcon, 73
 Tecla Maria an Abyssine, his Answers to questions touching the Religion of the Abyssines and Cophti, 147, 148. Et seq.
 Temple and mysteries thereof unvailled, 4. A figure of Heaven, 21. Paralel of Tabernacle and Temple, 62
 Testament in the Syriake tongue, corrupted by the Nestorians, the imperfections thereof, 133
 Tholomon plentiful for Gold, 33
 Thymiatierum a Cite without Hercules pillars built by Hanno, 78
 Tlesuira cocha, 59
 Tiglah Pileser K. of Assyria his Expedition, 73
 Timber much growing and brought to Afion-Geber, 23. Timpanizus, 158. Tihahah, 73
 Tighting of Children, 154
 Topaz, where found, 38
 Trauell commended for antiquitie, God himselfe was a mysticall Traveller in the Tabernacle, &c. 66. Christian Church atwayes travelling, 68. Trauels Nationall, 68. Trauels fabulous, 68, 69. Et seq.
 Trees bringing forth very fine wooll, 89
 Trees for Salomons building, 39
 Trees producing at the same time blossoms and fruites, 89
 Tribute which the Christians in Europe pay the Turke, 112. Greekes Tributes diuers, 154
 Truth occasion of Fables, 68
 Turkes Dominion in Europe, 112 Turkish Language, 110. Their Letters, and points, 185. Tygres, 33. Tyrrus treasure, 9 Tyrus a Cite anciently called Sarra, it gaue name to the Syrians, 129

V

Valesius, 172
 Venice 169. In it two Patriarchs, and foure Arch-bishops, 169 Vexores the Egyptian bis Conquests, and being conquered, 72, 73
 Vitriacus Bishop of Acon, and the Popes Legat in the East, 113. Vlisses Travels, 71 Vniuersall possessours of the Vniuers, 8
 Voyages. The first Voyage of Mankind, 66 Vulphilas Bishop of the Gothes, Inuenter of the Gothicke Alphabet, and translator of the Scriptures into the Gothicke tongue, 144

W

Walsh Language of the Celts, 107
 Water the nature thereof, 124, 126
 Whales, 87, 123. A whale fiftie cubites long, with Oysters growing on his skin, 88. Other strange hyperbolicall Whales, 124
 Wiseman most free, 11
 Wolves, how England was cleared thereof, 27
 Women common, 80. Womens Port, 87
 World how peopled, 30. Worlds Center, 127 Writing the Excellency and Antiquitie thereof, 176. Writing strange kindes, 80

X

Xenophon, both in Arts and Armes, and Travels famous, 75 Xerxes his invasion, 73. His Pallace fired by Thais the Strumpet, 83

Z

Zengitana a Prouince wherein Carthage stood, in it were 164. Bishops under one Metropolitan, 112. Zeno his Travels, 76 Zerah the Ethiopian with a million of men o-uerthrowne by King Asa, 73
 Zocotora an Island of 60. miles in length, and 27. in bredth, 146. The Religion of the Jahabitants, ibid.

I
A DESCRIPTION OF ALL
THE CIRCVM-NAVIGATIONS
OF THE GLOBE.
THE SECOND BOOKE.

CHAP. I.

Of the improuement of Navigation in later Times, and the meanes whereby the World in her old Age hath beene more then euer discovered.

¶ I.

Of Magneticall and Astronomicall Instruments, first applied to Navigation.

10 GOD, the giuer of euery good Gift, hauing first made the World, made Man, as it were a visible God of this visible World; infusing in his super-admirable Creation, the knowledge of it, of himselfe, of GOD. This Trinitie of Knowledge was defaced by Mans voluntarie Rebellion, which enforced against him the Sentence of Curse from the euerblessed TRINITIE: Which yet in Iudgement remembring Mercie, did not at once dissolue the World, or Man, but altered his Tenure, suffering him as a Customarie Tenant for terme of life (to be holden at the Will of the Lord) to occupy and husband it for the necessitie of his Body; leauing also some sparkes of that Heauenly Fire in his Soule (maugre those darke flames of Hell) whereby he might by laborious Art (being robbed of his white and pure Robes, wherewith Nature had adorned him) patch together Leaues or Skins for a time, to couer some part of his nakednesse. Neyther is * it any more, or of more worth, that here we labour for, and get as Seruants, then some light Plumes and broken Feathers of that goodly Fowle, which wholly without labour God had first giuen vs as Children.

20 Thus in regard of this temporall state; which yet he (out of a Curse producing Blessing) made the Seed-time of a better Haruest, a richer Possession (rayed out of this Rubbish of our Ruine) by farre then that which we had lost: for Time, which we had forfeited, giuing vs Eternitie, which cannot die; for Paradise, Heauen; and GOD himselfe for the World; an earnest whereof wee haue already, his SONNE giuen for vs, his SPIRIT to vs, and the promise of HIMSELF in ineffable fruition.

A a

Yes,

* In the sweat of thy Browes
thou shalt eat,
&c.

* Os homini
subl me dedit,
Caelumq; vide. c.
Ec.

* Faith is the evidence of things vnseene.
Heb. 11. 1.
Deut. 34.

Pf. 104.

* -- Nil nisi pontus & ether.
-- Caelum undiq;
& undiq; pontus.

Two later helpes of Nauigation vn-knowne to Antiquitie.

Gilbertus de Magna.

* Prima ratem uentis credere dofsa Tyrus.

Vid. §. 7.

1503. Vert. c. 14.

Yea, meane-while, to solace this our wearie Pilgrimage, he hath giuen an erected <sup>1</sup> Countenance to the Body, still to be viewing the vtter Court of our promised Palace, the faire Walls of our fairer Inheritance, and to the Soule the Eye of Art, whereby not leaving the greater, or her little, Earth, it can in a moment mount and surmount Heauen, and compasse all this spacious extension (that I speake not of that spirituall Eye of * Faith, which sees things vnseene, the priuiledge of his Saints.) Yea, she hath found out meanes, by the Giuers bountie, to carry her beloued Body (not from some high Mountaine to ouer-looke the lowly Plaines, or as Moses into Mount Nebo, in Vision, to see that, which to see with ioyfull en-ioying, was denyed; but) really and actually to possesse and vse the remotest Seas and Lands.
She emboldeneth the Body to forsake her Earthly Nest, and (like young Eaglets on the 10 Eagles Wings) carryeth her to take a Naturall and Vniuersall Possession of the Vniuerse, where the Heauens alone * are spread about her as a Curtaine, where the Beames of her Chambers are (in properest sense) layd in the Waters; where the Clouds are her Chariot (the Wheels at least) whereby shee walketh on the wings of the Wind, and those swelling Spirits are made her Driuers; the angriest Element being tamed by industrious Art, which vseth all their Natures to her best purposes.

To compasse this in former times, was impossible, and how many Seas to our fore-fathers impassable, for want of the Compasse: The Starres and Coasts were then the Guides, and without those Stilts, and Stayes, Nauigation durst not adventure, in that her impotencie and 20 infancie, to goe into the Maine. And if any disastrous Stormes had made sudden surprize of Ship and Men, the Master found himselfe and his Art at a losse in the midst of his Ship and Mariners; and if the frowning Heauens long refused with wonted Eyes to looke on him, and the absented Earth forgot to extend her Lap and Armes, lost hee must bee for euer. No great Discouerie was otherwise by the Art of the Ancients performed; nor durst any repeat that Lesson by Art, which Tempest had occasionally taught him, farre from the Coast, against his will. Chance is a forgetfull Mistresse, vnlesse Art be the Vsher of her Schoole, teaching and emboldening to repetition of her casuall Lectures.

God Almighty pittying this Frailtie, intending better things to the last and worst Ages of the World (as in this fulnesse of time he sent his Sonne and the Spirit of his Sonne to 30 prepare Men for Heauen, so since, I hope to further the former) hath giuen the Science of the Loadstone and Astronomicall Rules and Instruments, applyed by Art to Nauigation, that hee might giue more ample Possession of the Sea and the Earth to the sonnes of Men. Let others applaud, admire, adore, the Stones called Precious: this shall bee to mee Pearle and Ruby, and Saphire, and Diamant, and more then all those multiplyed Names of Gemmes, which all are also made ours by helpe of the Loadstone. This Magneticall vertue was hidden to the Golden and Siluer Ages, her Iron sympathie hath long beene knowne to the Iron World; but her constant Polar ramishments, and her no lesse constant inconstancie by Variation, were Mysteries reserued to later Posterities. The former of these Qualities yeelds the Compasse, the Needle by Magneticall touch directing the way in waylesse Wildernesses by Land, and thorow the vastest Waterie Plaines.

This vertue of the Loadstone, to be the Lead-stone and Way-directing Mercurie thorow 40
the World, Plato, Aristotle, Theophrastus, Dioscorides, Galen, Lucretius, Plinie his Solinus, and Ptolomee, Scholers of the highest Formes in Natures Schoole, knew not, though the Magneticall attraction of Iron be mentioned in their Workes. Some haue also added some Physicall Vertues, and some the Fables of the Adamant and Garlike preuenting that attraction, which later Authors haue receiued by authoritie, without due examination. But if any list to see Armies of Authors mustered, and their Writings also of this Subiect examined, Dr Gilbert in his learned Worke of the Magnete, hath done it in sixe whole Bookes; the causes also enquired both of that attraction, and this (whereof we now speake) Polar motion.
This inuention some ascribe to Salomon: which I would beleue, if he had written of Stones, 50 as he did of Plants; or if the Tyrians, which were almost the engrossers of * Nauigation in that Age, and were the Sea-men which Salomon vsed in his Ophyrian Discoueries (which we haue laboured in fitter place to discouer) had left any Tradition or Monument thereof to Posteritie: which could no more haue been lost then sayling it selfe, which the Greekes, Carthaginians, and other Nations successiue deriued from them. Others therefore looke further into the East, whence the Light of the Sunne and Arts haue seemed first to arise to our World; and will haue Marco Polo the Venetian aboue three hundred yeeres since to haue brought it out of Mangi (which wee now call China) into Italy. True it is, that the most magnified Arts haue there first beene borne, Printing, Gunnes, and perhaps this also of the Compasse, which the Portugals at their first entry of the Indian Seas (whereof you shall pre- 60 sently heare) found amongst the Moors, together with Cards and Quadrants to obserue both the Heauens and the Earth. And Vertomannus about the same time trauelled with them ouer

ouer the Arabian Desarts to Mecca and Medina, directing their course by the Compasse, and there also obserued that Tale of Mahumets Body hanging in the Roofe of the Temple by the attractive power of Loadstones (which Chinocrates is reported to haue intended to himselfe at Alexandria, in the Temple of Arsinoe, making the Roofe of these Stones, so to attract his Iron Image, preuented by death) to be but a Tale and Fable. But as neyther Printing nor Ordnance were brought from thence to vs, but (casuall Acts opening a passage to industrious Arts) were inuented by European heads, and brought to riper perfections then in the East, which had knowne them before, so I also conceiue of these Marine Instruments. Nor will I enuie to Iohn Goia of Malta, that whatsoeuer glory of the first Inuention, which

- 10 Blondus and others, (some <sup>b</sup> naming him Flaminius) haue ascribed to him. Italy indeed hath best deserued in Discoueries, for her Polo and Goia, and Vertoman, now mentioned, and for her Colombo and Cabota, of which is question, whether first found out the Variation of the Needle, or whether discovered more of the New World; though another Italian, Americus Vesputius, carried the <sup>c</sup> Name away from them both.

This Variation is, when the Magneticall Needle points not out the true Pole, but is distracted somewhat eyther with an Easterly or Westerly deflexion. This Variation of the Compasse is the best remedie yet found out against the Mariners Variation from their Compasse, and Deuiation from their scope and intended course. And although the Variation cannot without Starre or Sunne be obserued, as the direction of the Compasse may (which giues

- 20 Light in the darkest Night, pointing still toward the Pole) neyther can hereby the true longitude of Places be discovered (this Light shines most out of Darkenesse, and from Eccipses, which I haue therefore in this Historie taken all occasions to obserue, is most illustrious and plaine) yet for ordinarie and generall vse in Discoueries and Navigations in vnknowne Seas, this yeelds best supply of that knowledge of Longitudes, by reason of the constant inconstancie (as I said) of this Variation. For howsoeuer it varies from the true Pole, yet it neuer varies from it selfe, but in the same place eternally holds the same Variation, if it be exactly obserued; which sometimes, by want in the Instrument or Workman, and almost alway by Sea, through the vnsteadinesse thereof, falls out, and therefore is better farre, being taken in calme Weather, and best, if opportunitie serue, on Land.

- 30 Now for the Causes <sup>d</sup> eyther of Direction or Variation, Philosophers haue rather busied their owne, then established others Conceits from variation by their Directions, and pointing out the causes hereof in nature: some, telling vs of Hyperboreall Magneticall Mountaines; some, deriuing the cause from the Pole of the Heauen; some, from a Starre in the tayle of the greater Beare; some, from the Heauens neere to the Pole; some goe also beyond the Poles and Heauens, to I know not what Magneticall Power, placed out of place; some lead vs into a Magneticall Iland (Ly-land) euery man will say somewhat, and so doe they that flye to hidden Miracles in Nature. But that somewhat is nothing: And we indeed are lesse then Nothing and Vanitie; which, whiles we call all our Arguments Demonstrations, and all our Arts Sciences, neyther know God, nor the World, or Nature, nor our selues, how euer vainly
- 40 puffed vp with the Conceits and Deceits of Knowledge. Ego vero quid? (sayth <sup>e</sup> Scaliger of this Subtletie, who yet hath a Reason too, though as reasonlesse (perhaps) as those of others; so fortunately doth our Wit find it selfe vnfortunate, and knowes but one thing, that it knowes nothing) quid aliud nisi unum verum? nos in luce rerum tenui caligare, in mediocri cecutire, in maiori cacos esse, in maxima insanire. Quid aliud quam me nescire? Solus omnium ego nihil afferendo veritatem attuli.

Most laborious haue beene the paines, most probable (perhaps) the reasons of our Countreyman Doctor Gilbert, by many yeeres experiments in this subiect, who hath obserued the whole Earth to bee as a great Loadstone, the Loadstone and the Iron (which naturally also with exact tryall hee hath obserued, euen without <sup>f</sup> touch, to hold

- 50 like Direction and Variation, in respect of the Pole) to containe the principall Qualities of the Earth; that the Direction and Variation are both, not from Contraction or Coition, or other hidden cause, but from the disposing power of the Earth, and the conuertible nature of the Magnete, the Earth it selfe being Mother and originall Fountaine of the Magneticall vertues and operations. Hee deriueeth the Direction from the Polar conformitie of the Earth; the Variation, from the inequality of the same, in the Superficies thereof; partly by Seas, partly by Mountaines, which haue diffomed though not deformed the Globolitie of this Globe, in paying to other places by excessiue height whatsoeuer was taken from the Deepes, to make Channels for the Waters. Hence the greater Continents of Earth haue greater force and power, and where the Earth is most depressed or weakened, there hath it
- 60 lesser; yet so, as these Magneticall Motions being from the constant Magneticall nature of the whole Earth, a small Iland cannot preiudice or preuent the clayme of the greater Continent. Thus in the Azores the Needle hath no apparant Variation, which on the Coast of a A Towne in the Kingdome of Naples: of which is this Verie, Prima dedit nautis usum Magnetis Amalphus.

b Lop. de Gouara, cap. 9. Bellon. Ous. l. 2. c. 16.

c America. Vide Epist. Ed. Wright. ante Gilb. op. de Mag.
d How vaine a thing is Man? who can by reason manifest the number of the Spheres of the Elements? or that there are Spheres? their substance, operation, motion? yea, whether the Earth or the Heauens moue, or both, is yet vndecided. How many opinions of the Ancients are now proued false by experience? And had not God giuen vs his Word for the ground of our faith (which the Deuill enuying, hath here also obtruded Tradition) what certaintie had remained, but knowledge of euill vnto his Posteritie, who for knowledge lost Paradise?
e Scalig. Exerc. 131.

f By helpe of the Loadstone, rich veins of Iron and other Metals are discovered. In Militarie Affaires, both in Mining, leuelling of Peeces in the darke, also in Building, conueying of Water-works, and a thousand other Deuices, is vse of the Loadstone.

g Hauing doubled the Cape of Good Hope, the Variation doubles and lookes to the West from the Pole, as the Land doth.
 h All Compasses are not fit for all Navigations, as appears by the differences of those in the Straits, and here, &c. the variation least neere the Line in 60, 70, or 80. very great, &c.
 Portugals prayse.

Guinee inclines Eastward to the African & Continent, and neere the American bends Westward; in these Islands as indifferent betwixt two equall Continents, aims at the Pole of the Earth, and therefore Magneticall. His many Rules, Experiments, and Observations are worthy a learned and leysurely Reader: My selfe hauing haste to trauell ouer the World, and that with so many Trauellers, cannot stand in this Muze, or Maze rather of Philosophers. Let vs now consider not the naturall Causes, which are hard, but take easier view of the sensible effects thereof in the furtherance of Nauigation, wherein the touched Needle is the Soule as it were of the Compasse, by which euery skilfull Mariner is emboldened to compasse the whole Body of the Vniuerse. Let the Italians haue their prayse for Inuention: the prayse of Application thereof to these remote Discoueries is due to the Portugals, who first began to open the Windowes of the World, to let it see it selfe. These first also of all Europeans, applyed by the direction of King John (as followeth in this storie) Astronomical Instruments to this Magneticall, and occasioned those Spanish Discoueries in the New World, by Colombo's Industry.

The Load-stone was the Lead-stone, the very Seed and ingendring Stone of Discouerie, whose soeuer Iouiall Braine first conceiued that Minerva. But the Iuno Lucina, that helped Nature in this happy Conception and educated Discouerie to that strength, that it durst ordinarily aduenture beyond the knowne World, and made way to that Maturitie, whereby it opened soone after another World, was Prince Henry of Portugall.

Thus doth the Great God rayse vp the least things to Greatnesse: and this, one of the last and least of European Kingdomes, was dignified with the first search and Science of Discoueries. Spaine and Portugall, after a long seruitude, fattened their Soyle with the blood of the Moores, and thence haue growne by Diuine Blessing not onely to free themselues of that Yoke, but with farre-spreading Boughes to ouer-look and ouer-awe the remotest East and furthest West; paying themselues with the Drugges and Gemmes of Asia, the Gold and Slaues of Africa, the Siluer and Possessions of America, as Wages for that European slavery vnder the Mahumetans, many Ages continued, which now shall follow to be declared.

§. II.

Of HENRY, third sonne to JOHN the first King of Portugall by an English Woman, the Prince of later Discoueries: and of the helpes both against the Moores, and in their Discoueries which the Portugals haue receiued of our Nation.

a P. Pilg. 13.
 c. 2. §. 2.

* Some say

714.

b See Spanish

Hist. Turquet.

li. 1. Bar. Dec. 1.

li. 1.

H He Saracens (as we haue related <sup>a</sup> elsewhere) about the yeere * 712. brought by Iulianus Earle of Cepta (to reuenge the deflowring of his Daughter Caba by Rodericus, the last of the Gottish Kings) into Spaine, vnder the conduct of Muses, conquered and subiected the same to Ulit the Chalipha. Pelagius <sup>b</sup> began first to make head against these Barbarians, whose successors had succeeded in the same Quarrell with prosperous successe about three hundred yeeres space, when Alphonfus the sixt tooke Toledo from the Moores. He, in recompence of good seruices in the Warres, gaue vnto Henry of Lorraine, whom some call Earle of Limbourg, his Daughter Teresa, with the Countrey of Portugall in Dowrie, and whatsoever he could further conquer from the Moores, by Title of an Earle: whose sonne Don Alphonso was the first King of that Realme, newly erected on the blood and desolation of the Moores in those parts, whom by degrees they chased quite out of that Kingdome, from that time till that of John the first. He pursuing that Hereditarie Quarrell, passed ouer Sea into Africa, and there tooke Cepta, and brake the Ice to his Posteritie, which made valiant and successfull progresse in those Designes of Africa, till their Navigations into Asia with greater hopes and happinesse, made them neglect that neerer and dearer Purchase.

c T. Wals. Hist.
Ang. An. 1415.

This Conquest of Cepta, or Seut, is mentioned by Thomas c Walsingham, which then liued, in these words: This yeere the King of Portugall relying on the helpe of the Merchants of England most of all, and of the Almans, overcame the Agarens in the Land of the King of the Betinarines, many thousands of them being sent to Hell; and tooke their Citie, seated on the Sea, called Sunt, very large, compassed with a Wall, as they say, of twentie miles. Some reason the English had to this Assistance: for the Wife of Don John was Philip, Daughter of John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, and Sister to Henry the fourth, whose sonne Henry the fifth then reigned in England. They did imitate also their English Ancestors, who long before, in the time of Henry the second, had ioyned themselues with other Northerne <sup>d</sup> Pilgrimes for the Expedition to the Holy-Land, and sayling together

d A.D. 1188.
vid. Mat. Paris. in fine Hen. 2.

gether from Dartmouth, about 37. ships well manned touched at Lisbon, where the Portugall King besought their aid against the Mores in the Citie Syluia, or Syluis, profering to them the spoyle in recompence. Which they attempted, and on the third day of the Siege, brake into the Suburbs, and forced Alchad the Prince to yeeld the Citie, wherein were of all sorts about 60000. Mores, whereof 47000. were slaine, and the Mahumetan Temple consecrated to the Mother of God.

Thus both at home and abroad were the Portugals indebted to the English; as also in the example of some Englishmen, and namely one Macham, which had beene by tempest driuen on shore in Madera: but in nothing more, then that English Lady before mentioned, whose 10 third sonne Don Henry was the true foundation of the Greatnesse, not of Portugall alone, but of the whole Christian World, in Marine Affaires, and especially of these Heroike endeavours of the English (whose flesh and blood hee was) which this ensuing Historie shall present vnto you.

This illustrious Henry hauing giuen prooffe of his valour against the Infidels at Cepta, deuis'd with himselfe, how he (being Gouvernor of the Militarie Order of IESVS CHRIST, formerly instituted, and endowed to maintaine Warres against the Mores, already expelled out of Portugall) might aduance the honor of his Name and Order, in Conquests which others had not yet attempted, and therefore in Discoueries of Countries yet vnknowne. To 20 this end he spent his life in single estate, and in the studies of the Mathematickes: for which purpose, he chose the clearer Ayre of Cape S. Vincent, that there he might better intend his Mathematicall Theorie, the practise thereof in Instruments, and the vse, in sending out Ships at his owne charge to discouer remoter parts, whereof he had both heard by enquire of Captiues taken at Cepta, and conceiued by his owne studie and reason (for besides that of Macham, ancient Histories giue some light to the studious, in the reports of Menelaus, Hanno, Endoxus, and others) that the Atlantike and Indian Seas had concour'd, the one yeelding passage to the other, or rather being one continued Ocean. He also from Maiorca caused one Master Iames, a man skilfull in Nauigation, and in Cards and Sea Instruments, to be brought into Portugall, there at his charge, as it were, to erect a Schoole of Marinership, and to instruct his Countrey men in that Mysterie.

30 The first Ships which he sent, discouered no further then Cape Bogiador, 180. miles beyond Cape Non (the Non ultra before, of the Spanish Nauigations) beyond which they durst not passe, because of the loftie breaking of the Surge, caused by the Capes extension farre into the Sea: not daring (such was then the infancie of Nauigation) to auoid the same, to put further off into the Sea, lest they might hap to lose themselves, if they lost the sight of Land. That which Art durst not, Tempest compelled in the next Barke sent for Discouerie, which with distresse of Weather driuen into Seas out of the Mariners knowledge, happily encountred that Iland, which they hereupon named Porto Santo, and without further coasting the shore of Africke, returned home with the newes, and desire of licence to people it; so well did they like of the Ayre, Soyle, and gentle Condition of the Natiues. The Prince 40 accordingly sent three Ships, two of which hee committed to Iohn Consaluo Zarco, and Tristan Vaz, the former Discouerers; the third to Bartholomew Perestrelo, who with Seeds and Plants carried thither a Conie great with young; which lighting her burthen by the way, and together with them put forth, so multiplyed in two yeeres, that they grew wearie of all their Labours, destroyed by those Conies. Whereupon Perestrelo returning, the other two, Consaluo and Vaz would needs discouer whether it were Land or no, which appeared vnto them like Clouds or Vapours, and found it indeed the Iland Madera, or Wood, so called of the abundance of Wood which then ouer-shadowed it, and with the moist Vapours had seemed to bury it in a Cloud. They returning with this newes to the Prince, receiued by the Kings consent the same Iland, diuided betwixt them; the one part, called 50 Funciale, to Consaluo and his heires; the other, called Machico, to Vaz. This was so named of an Englishman, called Macham, which had before arriued there by Tempest, and buried therein a Woman, whom he loued, with a memoriall thereof ingrauen on the Stone of her Tombe; after which, with a Boat made of one Tree, he passed to the Coast of Barbary without Sayle or Oare, and being presented to the King for a Wonder, was by him sent to the King of Castile.

In the yeere 1420. began that Plantation, and the thicke Trees being by Consaluo set on fire, continued burning seuen yeeres: which destruction of Wood hath caused since as great want. The Prince caused Sugar Canes to be carried from Sicilia thither, and men skilfull of that Art, whereof the increase hath beene such, that in some yeeres the fifth 60 part (which the Prince referu'd to his Militarie Order) hath amounted to about three score thousand Arrobes (euery Arrobe is five and twentie pounds) growing onely in one place, little more then nine miles compasse. To Perestrelo hee gaue Porto Santo, on condition to c See Dam. a Goas de Aethiop.

Mor.
Barrius, Dec. 2.
l. 1.
Ofur. de Reb.
Eman. l. 1.
Massieu Hist.
Ind. l. 1.

f Vide P. Pilg.
l. 7. c. 12. §. 2.

g Of which their Prouerbe was, He which shall passe the Cape of Non, shall turne againe, or else
be gone.
h Porto, for that it was their Hauens:
and Santo, for that it was found on the day of All Saints.
i Conies strangely multiplied.
k The Iland of Madera or Wood discouered.
l Macham an Englishman.
m Ant. Galuano,
An. Do. 1344.

m Bar. Dec. 1.
l. 1. c. 3.

n Madera
Sugar.

o Porto Santo peopled.

people it, which hardly hee could doe for the Conies, whereof in one little Ilet at one time were killed three thousand.

p Difficulties pretended, to stay the Prince from discouering further.

Twelve yeeres had passed, since the Prince had begun this Enterprize; before Cape Baiadore could be passed; such was the p conceit of tempestuous Seas, strong Currents, Whirlpooles which would swallow Ships, beyond that Cape: yea they added, that the Land was not fit for habitation, but like the sandie Desarts of Libya. Much did they murmure, that the Natiues of the Land were exhaust in Discoueries, which before, wise and prouident Kings would haue vndertaken, had there beene likelyhood of successe; who yet contented themselves with the knowne World, and sought not a torrid Zone, vnfit for humane dwelling. These costs might with lesse danger haue beene bestowed in the barrenner parts of the Kingdome at home, without Sea-perils. 10

These murmurings I recite, as alwayes attending and preoccupating great Actions, and to shew the poore Trentiship which Nauigation then serued, that it might attaine that Freedom which the next Age brought forth. The patient Prince endured these Exceptions, with quarrellings at the Victuals, Money, and Men spent in a Seruice so vnseruiceable and needlesse, so dangerous, so hurtfull, and so! what euery barking Tongue could alledge; nor could the apparant profits of Madera and Porto Santo stop their mouthes. His men also, which he sent forth, preyed on the Coasts of Barbary, and tooke Slaues, which helpe bare charges.

q Baiadore first passed.

But one of his seruants, named q Gilianes, seeing the Prince discontent that they went no further, aduentured that Herculean Labour (as it then seemed) and passed that Turne- 20 againe or Baiadore Cape, with some prooue of the Plants, report of the Seas passable, and commendations of the Ayre and Soyle in those parts. This happened An. 1433.

r Cape Blanco.
f Popes Donation, as security against Forei-ners, and an incentiue to the vulgar, according to the conceit of those times,
r 1443.
u 1444.

The next yeere Anton. Consaluo pierced fortie miles further, and found the Countrey inhabited. Nor could much more be effected, till the yeere 1441. when Nugno Trifan discouered r Cape Blanco, and tooke some Prisoners. After which, Prince Henry obtained f of Pope Martin the fifth a perpetuall Donation to the Crowne of Portugall, of whatsoever should be discovered from Cape Baiadore to the East Indies inclusiuely, and Indulgence plenarie for the Soules of all such as should perish in that Conquest: which the succeeding Popes, Eugenius, Nicholas, and Sixtus confirmed, at the instance of King Alphonfus and his sonne Iohn. 30

At the next t returne they traded with the Negros for exchange of their Men, for which they had Gold and other Slaues, whereupon they called the place the Golden Riuer, and passed further to the Isles of Argin and Garze. Gold made a recantation of former Murmurings, and now the Prince was extolled; yea, u now the inhabitants of Lagos capitulated with the Prince to set forth Carueiles at their owne charges, which tooke many Captiues.

x Sanaga and Cape Verde.

The yeere 1445. Denis Fernandez passed the Riuer x Sanaga, which diuideth the Azenegui from those of Guinea, called Gialof, and discovered also Cape Verde. Other Discoueries successiue followed; in which, some hauing made slaues of friends, the Prince made the Authors apparrell and send them backe at their owne charges, to the Canaries, whence they had stolne them. 40

y Canaries.
Ant. Galuans.
Macham first discoverer of Madera and the Canaries.
z Prince Henry his death.

These y Canaries, by relations of Macham the Englishman afore said, became knowne to the French and Spaniards; and Betancor, which held three of them in possession, compounded for them with Prince Henry: but the Spaniard challenged them, as conquered by that Frenchman through the aid of Castile; vnder which Crowne they now are, after many choppings and changings. But the Prince neuer gaue ouer his endeours of Discouerie, till he discovered the Celestiall Ierusalem, which z happened the thirteenth of Nouember, 1463.
three and fortie yeeres after Madera had beene descryed: in all which time, his Trauell succeeded no further then from Baiadore to Sierra Liona, one thousand one hundred and tenne miles space, in neere fiftie yeeres continued Cares and Costs. So hard a thing is it to discouer. An argument of patience to our Moderne Discouersers, which are readie to murmure, and 50 almost to mutinie, if new Worlds drop not into their mouthes at the first Voyage.

* Islands of Cape Verde
discovered.
Botero d. 1560.

A little before his death, the Islands of * Cape Verde were discovered by Antonio di Nolle, a Genuois, licensed by the Prince. On May Euen was Maio found, and on the next day two others, called also of the Time, one Philip, and the other Iacob, or Iago, which was first peopled. In his time * also were discovered the Terceras, by certaine Flemmings sayling to Lisbone; which first began to be peopled An. 1449.

* Terceras discovered, or Alores, or Flemmish Islands.

King Alphonfus hauing little leysure for further Discoueries, farmed the same to Fernand Gomez, a Citizen of Lisbon, for five yeeres space, with condition euery yeere to discover three hundred miles, to begin from Sierra Liona, and so to proceed along the Coast. He discovered * Mina by Santaren and Sconare his Captaines; and after that, to Cape S. Catarine, 60 on the South side of the Line. In that time was also discovered the Island of Fernand Po, the Islands also of S. Thomas, S. Matthew, Annobon, & del Principe; the Names of the Discouersers are vnknowne. S. III.

* Mina.

§. III.

Of King Iohn the second his Discoveries, and advancement of the Art of Navigation.

King Iohn the second having some experiment of the Profits of Guinea, which King Alphonsa had bestowed on him for his Princely maintenance, could not now by the Objections of the length of the Way, vnholesomenesse of the Countrey, expence of Victuall, and the like, be detained by his Counsellors; but in the yeere 1481. he sent a Fleet of ten * Carauels, vnder the command of Diego Dazambua, to build the Castle of S. George della Mina, which in the yeere 1486. he dignified with the Priuiledges of a Citie. In the Church thereof was ordayned a perpetuall Soule-Priest for Prince Henry aforesaid: and three yeeres after that Castle was builded, he added to his Regall Title, Lord of Guinea. Caramansa the Lord of the Countrey would haue hindered that Building, and the people (which worshipped the Stones and Rockes) mutined; but the Popes Gift, with their Strength, Gifts, Cunning, and some Reuenge, preuayled: The King commanded, that Stone Crosses or Pillars, with the Portugall Armes, should be set vp in conuenient places, expressing the time and Authors of such Discoveries. So did Diego Can 1484. on the Bankes of the Riuer Zaire, in the first Discouerie of the Kingdome of * Congo (the King whereof, as also the King of Benin, desired Priests, and Baptisme) and in his next returne two others, hauing discovered fixe hundred miles, and in both his Voyages 1125. miles from Cape Catarine, further on the Coast.

* One of the Captaines was an Englishman called Diego or James Ruiz.

Stone Crosses or Pillars erected in places discovered. a Zaire & Congo.

By the Embassador of the King of Benin (which is not farre from Mina) the King of Portugall vnderstood of the <sup>b</sup> Abassine, commonly called Prefter Iohn, by them Ogane, whose Vassall the King of Benin then was, none being <sup>c</sup> acknowledged lawfull Prince, till he had sent his Embassadour to the said Ogane, and had receiued from him a Crosse to weare about his necke, in token of his admission. Hereupon King Iohn sent both <sup>d</sup> by Sea and Land to inquire both of the Indies, and of this great Negus, or Ogane: by Sea, two Pinnaces, of fiftie Tunnes apiece, vnder the conduct of Bartholomew Diaz, with a little Victualling Barke, in August, 1486. Hee set certaine Negroes on shore in diuers places, which had beene before carried into Portugall, and well vsed, that among those Sauages they might relate the Portugall Ciuitie and Greatnesse; carrying also with them some shewes thereof in Apparrell, and other things giuen them; and to make knowne, if it were possible, his desire, to find by his Discoveries meanes of acquaintance with Prefter Iohn. He gaue Names to places discovered, and erected Pillars or Crosses of Stone (as is said) the last in the Ile called hereof, the Crosse; where his people with much disquiet vrged his returne, alledging their Victuals spent, and the losse of their Victualling Barke. Yet after consultation, hee proceeded so farre, that hee first discovered the famous Cape, which for his manifold troubles he termed Cabo Tormentoso, or the tempestuous Cape: but King Iohn hoping thence to discover the Indies, named it at his returne the <sup>e</sup> Cape of Good Hope; where hee placed another Pillar of Stone, called S. Philip; as the other were termed S. George in the Riuer of Zaire, S. Augustine in the Cape thereof so termed, and likewise the rest. He returned in December, 1487. sixteene moneths and seuentene dayes after his setting out, hauing discovered a thousand and fiftie miles of Coast. He found by the way his Victualler, wherein he had left nine men, of which, three onely were left aliue; <sup>f</sup> one of which, Fernand Colazzo, died with sudden ioy of this sight nine moneths after the losse of each other.

<sup>b</sup> Newes from Benin of Presbyter Iohn.
<sup>c</sup> King of Benin tributarie to him.
<sup>d</sup> Enquire for him by Sea and Land.

<sup>e</sup> Cabo Tormentoso, or of good Hope, first discovered.

<sup>f</sup> Death caused by sudden ioy. The like happened to an Englishman, left 14. moneths in S. Helena.

By Land, the King had sent some by the way of Ierusalem to passe with the Abassine Pilgrims; which yet, for want of the Arabick Tongue, returned. Whereupon he sent Peter Conilian, well skilled therein, and with him Alphonso Paina, in May, 1487. which went to Alexandria, thence to Cairo, and thence with certaine Mores to Aden: from whence Paina went to seeke a passage to Prefter Iohn, but died at Cairo. Conilian from Aden, neere the straits of the red Sea, imbarcked himselfe for Cananor, and thence to Calicut and Goa in the East Indies: from whence he returned vnto Africa, neere the Mines of Sofala, and after that to Cairo, with purpose of returne into Portugall. But the King had sent by two Spanish Iewes, Rabbi Abraham and R. Ioseph, the later of which had beene at Bagdad, and had acquainted the King with the Trade at Ormus, and from thence had passed to Aleppo and Damasco, and was now sent backe to Conilian, that by the one an answer might be brought what he had done, with charge not to desist, till he had beene with the Abassine, to whom he employed him in Embassage: the other, to goe to Ormus, and informe himselfe of the Affaires of those parts. By Ioseph Conilian wrote to the King, and to encourage his Navigations, sent him a Mappe of his Discoveries in India, and on the African Coast. Hee pierced after after this, to the Court of Alexander the Abassine, who kindly entertained him, but soone after died; neyther would his successors permit that Vlysses to returne, a man of many Languages, and much vsefull for his experience in the World: but to Francis Aluares, which accompanied Roderike de Lima in an Embassage thither almost thirtie yeeres after, hee related the summe of his Trauels.

<sup>g</sup> Peter Conilian first discoverer of Prefter Iohn, and of the Indies, & Sofala.

Rules of Astronomie first applied to Nauigation.

Astrolabe, and Tables of Declinations.

Many other worthy Acts were performed by King Iohn, in seeking to reduce some of these wild people both in Guinea and Congo, to holy Baptisme and Christian Religion, not so pertinent to this our purpose: but this was the furthest of his Discoueries. He had omitted an oportunitie offered by Columbus, whom in his first returne from the Indies with his new Indians, he saw in March, 1493. But Occasions Head in the hinder parts was bald, the Spaniard hauing before fastned on her fore-locks. Yet doth Nauigation owe as much to this Prince as to any, who had imployed Roderigo and Ioseph, his Iewish Physicians, cunning Mathematicians of that time, with Martin Bohemus the Scholler of Iohn Mome Regius, to deuise what helps they could for the Mariners in their saylings thorow vnknowne Seas, where neyther Starres (as vnknowne) nor Land (being out of kenne) could guide them. These first, after long study, applied the Astrolabe, before vsed onely by Astronomers, to Marine vse, and deuised the Tables of Declinations, to find out the Latitude of Places, and how to direct their course (which was afterwards by the knowledge of the Variation, exceedingly furthered) whereby the Mariners Art first began to free it selfe from the rudenesse of former times, and in these Nauigations of Camus and Dias, as those also of Columbus, to prepare a Way to open our Eyes in these parts, to see a new World, and there in those, to see a new Heauen by Euangelicall Light, whereof a little mislead glimpe they haue alreadie; an Earnest (as wee hope) of more, and more perfect, by Gods grace in due time to be reuealed.

§. IIII.

Of the Coniectures touching a New World by CHRISTOPHER COLON or COLUMBUS, and his manifold Difficulties therein.

And vnto Portugall was Spaine beholden for Columbus, and Columbus also for his skill, whereby the Columbian (so fitlier named, then American) World was discovered. This Columbus or Colombo (by the Spaniards for easier pronounciation termed Colon) was borne, some say, at Sarona, some at Nerui, others in Cicurco, in the territorie of Genua, of an ancient House, of great reputation in the Empire of Otho the second (whose Charters to the Family of the Columbi are yet extant) but now almost antiquated, rotten and ruined with antiquitie. He began to embrace the Sea, and vse Nauigation in his Childhood, and traded many yeeres into Syria and other parts of the East; and became also a maker of Cards for the Sea. The fame of the Portugall Nauigations brought him thither, to learne the Coasts of Africa, and with their skill to amend his Cards, and withall, his fortunes. There he married a Wife, Philippa Munniz de Pereirello (by whom he had his sonne James) and traded the Coast of Guinea. Some skill, it is manifest, hee had in the Latine Tongue, and was very studious of the Mathematikes, being also in his Religion (according to that knowledge he had) very deuout, frequent in Prayer, obseruant of Fasts, temperate in Diet, modest in Attire, grauely courteous in Behaviour, abstinent of Oathes, and abhorning Blaphemies. Such an one did God make him, before he would make him a Discouerer. And as the Psalmist singeth of Heauenly, it is true also in Earthly Mysteries, The secret of the Lord is with them that feare him, and the meeke he will guide in iudgement: Which easily sheweth the cause why no better successe hath followed some mens endeouours, who going forth with high-swolne Sayles, filled with pusses of Pride, and blasts of Arrogance, addicting themselves to Swearing, Cursing, and other resolute Dissolutenesse (as if they sought Discoueries in the infernall Regions, and acquaintance with those Legions of Hell, rather then to discover Lands, and recouer Infidels to internall peace by the eternall Gospell) eyther perish at Sea, or returne with the gaine of losse, and shame, in stead of glory. Our Christopher Columbus was such in Deed as in Name, carrying Christ in his heart, and Doue-like louely carriage in conuersation.

He is reported by Gomara, Mariana, and others, to haue beene first moued to this Discouerie by a Pilot, which had beene before by distresse of Weather driuen vpon the Islands of America, which the most iudicious Spaniards either omit or deny; Benzo and Ramusio thinke it a trick of Spanish enuy, derogating from the worth of an Italian. But the reasons more

Herera Dec. 1.
l. 1. c. 7.
Gomara Hist.
Gen. c. 14.
See Edens Preface to Pet.
Mart. Dec.

Botero Rel. vn.
parte 4. l. 2.

Pf. 25.

Herera Dec. 1.
l. 1. Ouiedo l. 2.

pro-

probable, are his piercing Wit, iudicious obseruation of Occurrents, learning in the Mathematices, and the speciall instinct of Diuine Prouidence, without which no humane patience could haue sustained such magnanimous Indeuours, so long conterned, so much, so variously condemned. Experience of the Portugals, amongst whom he dwelt, had taught him the vanitie of Antiquitie touching the Antipodes, the Torrid Zone not habitable, and that the Sea was euery way Nauigable. Art instructed him of the roundnesse of this inferior Globe (which in the Moones Eclipse is visible) and the proportionablenesse of the Earth to the Water, that as much dry Land might be as well on that, as on this side the Line: neyther was it likely, that so huge a quantitie of the Globe should be couered with Waters, which was made principally for the vse and habitation of Man; or that this Globe was not equally poyzed on both sides that Centre, which is one to it and the Water; or that there should be such huge Lands (if they were Lands) in this old Age of the World, not inhabited by Man, whose Blessing from the Creator was to fill or replenish the Earth, renewed againe after the Floud; or that the Indies in the East might not in the Earths Globositie be as readily found out by the West, following the Sunne in his dayly Iourney, which with all his Night-watch of Starres was as vnlike to be there appointed a continuall course and circular Race for the Seas or Desart Lands. Experiments had also taught him, both by relation of the Portugals in their longer Voyages, and in his owne on the West of Spaine, that the Westerne Winds holding a constant course yeerely, and that also farre off at Sea, could not but arise from some Lands further Westward, then any yet knowne: And Martin Vincent, a Mariner which vsed the Azores or Terceras, had told him, that he was once carried foure hundred and fiftie leagues to the West of Cape S. Vincent, and there tooke vp a piece of Wood or Timber, wrought by mans hand, and that, as farre as he could iudge, without Iron, which he imagined had come from some Westerne Iland. Pedro Correa, which had married his Wiues sister, had likewise signified to him, that at Puerto Santo he had seene the like Peece driuen thither by the Westerne Winds, wrought in the same fashion: and besides, he had seene great Canes, which in each knot might containe aboue two gallons of Water, which he also sent to him to see; which being vnlikely to grow in the knowne parts of the West, and hauing read of such growing in India, he supposed, that some long and violent Westerne Winds had brought them thither from thence. The inhabitants also of the Azores had told him, that strong West and Northwest Winds had brought by Sea vpon Graciosa and Fayal certaine Pine trees, two dead men also on the Coast of Flores, with larger faces then are vsuall in these parts, and of other fauor, and two Canoas another time driuen also by the Wind. Antonio Leme of Madera had related, that being carried in his Caruile farre Westward, he had seemed to see three Ilands: And another of that Iland had sued to the King of Portugall in the yeere 1484. for licence to discouer certaine Land which he sware he had seene euery yeere ouer-against the Azores. Diego Velazques had fortie yeeres before beene carried farre into the West, and there obserued the Seas and Winds such, as if the Land were not farre off, as he affirmed to Columbus: and another Mariner told him of Land hee had seene farre West from Ireland, which is supposed to be New-found-Land. Petro de Velasco had signified the like, in his going for Ireland; and Vincent Diaz, a Portugall Pilot, had seemed to himselfe, in his returne from Guinea, to see an Iland in the height of Madera, for which also search was after made, but no discouerie.

Columbo's grounds for discouerie of the new World

Gen. 1. 28. & 9. 1.

*Her. Dec. 1. l. 16
c. 2.*

These things argue his laborious industrie and diligent enquirie: his readings of Marco Polo and other Iournals (that I mention not the Ancients) did not a little animate him, as may appeare in his enquirie for Zipango, mentioned by Polo, supposed now to be Iapan; and naming Hispaniola Ophir, thinking, or seeming to thinke, that he had found out the East Indies. And for that cause was this New World called the Indies also, with distinction of West: and this was his maine argument to such Princes as he sought to patronize this his discouerie, the riches of the East Indies, promised by a Westerne Nauigation. And herein his resolution was admirable, that howsoever some derided as folly, others reiected as impossible, his suit, yet he neuer desisted.

Why America called India.

Hee first propounded it to his Countreyemen the Genuois, and found, that a Prophet found no profit at home; he seconded it in Portugall where he dwelt, and was married at Lisbon, and had learned most of his Art and Intelligence, confirmed therein also by Martin Bohemus the Mathematician; but Iohn the second did not second his desires, as adiudged vaine by Roderigo and Ioseph the Iewes, before mentioned, with other Committees; which yet moued with his reasons, counsell'd the King secretly to send a Caruell, vnder colour of a Voyage, to Cape Verde, to make this Discouerie; wherein crossed with foule Weather, they effected nothing. This made him out of loue with Portugall, and to send his brother Bartholomew to King Henry the seventh of England with the same suit: who falling into the hands of Pyrats, was forced to sustaine himselfe with making Sea-Cards, and so long deferred for want of suitable suites, to make his suit and petition to the King, that when it was granted, and his brother sent for, hee had sped before in Spaine. Thither had hee himselfe repaired in the yeere 1484. secretly, and by Sea, for feare of the Portugals, which had before deluded him: Ferdinand and Isabel the Catholike

I. di Barros in his Dec. 1. lib. 3.
cap. 11. saith,
that he was not beleued at all, and licenced by the King to goe for Castile.
But we haue followed He-vera in the most part of this relation.

Catholike Princes being then busied in Warre against the Moors of Granada. But hauing spent fve yeeres in pursuing his suit, his answer from the Court was, That the Kings Treasure was so exhaust in the Conquest of Granada, that they could not entertaine new expences: but those being ended, they would better examine his intent, and giue him dispatch.

Much was Columbus aggrieved at this answer, yet failed not his constancie. Hee, caused his desires to be made knowne to the Dukes of Medina Cœli, and of Medina Sidonia, but with effect like the former. Twice hee purposed (as his sonne Fernand Columbus writeth) to leaue Spaine, and goe himsele into France or England, whence hee had not heard of his brother Bartholomew: but Diuine Prouidence otherwise disposed. And hee which hitherto had not found credit to aduance (nay, scarcely meanes, but in great part, by the bountie of Alphonso di Quintaniglia the Kings chiefe Auditor, to sustaine) him, obtained the Letters of Frier Iuan Perez de Marchena to Frier Fernando di Talavera the Queenes Confessor, and at last, by the mediation of the Cardinall Mendoza, Archbishop of Toledo, procured audience and graunt of the Catholike Kings, Queene Isabel taking order with Lewis of S. Angelo to empayne some of her Iewels, to the value of two thousand Duckats for his Expedition, which yet he lent out of his purse: so low was the Treasure of Spaine, when God offered them the Westerne Treasure.

Magnanimous Columbus, not broken with Pouertie at home, with Affronts and Discountenances abroad, with imputations of impotent, almost impudent, at least as imprudent as importunate fancies of impossible, impassable Navigations by vnknowne Seas to vnknowne Lands! not amated so farre, as to abate his Conditions of no small nature to him and his heires, as if he had already effected his designs: not desiring any reward, except he found somewhat answerable to his promise, nor lesse then, than the Office and Title of Admirall by Sea, and Vice-Roy on Land, with the Tenth of the Profits throw all the Seas, Ilands, or firme Lands (to himsele during his life, and after, to his heires and successors) whatsoever he should discover: which (saith Oniedo) he enjoyed while he liued, his sonne Admirall, James or Don Diego Colombo, after him, and his nephew Don Lewis Colombo the Admirall at this day. This composition was made betwixt him and the Catholike Kings in the Field before Granada, then besieged, in the middest of the Armie, the seuenteenth of April, 1492. as if God would reward their endeouours and expences, in rooting out the Moors, which had possessed those parts of Spaine aboue seuen hundred yeeres, with this New Discouerie, so profitable to the Spanish Crowne.

Oniedo, Hist. del Ind. l. 2. c. 5.
Herera Dec. 1. l. 1. c. 10.

§. V.

COLUMBUS his first Voyage, and improuement therein of the Mariners Art.

* Oniedo hath Gallega.

Mart. Dec. & Oniedo.

* When he had runne aboue 700. he reckoned lesse then 600. nor their Pilots much more deceiued by the wind alway large.
* This Grasse they call Sal-gazzi, or Sara-gasso, floating in diuers places this and that way, which at first terrified them, as if they had encountred sunken Lands,

ON Friday, the third of August, the same yeere, hee set forth with his three Carauels from Palos; himsele in the Admirall, called * Santa Maria; the second Pinta, in which, was Captaine Martin Alonso Pinçon, and his brother Francisco Martinez Pinçon, Master; the third Ninna, whose Captaine and Master was Vincent Tannez Pinçon, which found halfe that eighth part of the expence which Colombo had couenanted to contribute. There were in all (some say) an hundred and twenty men; Herera hath but ninety. On the fourth of August, the Rudder of the Pinta proued loose, which they fastened as well as they could with Cords, but soone after with force of Wind brake, and they were all compelled to strike sayle; which, in such a Voyage as this (they knew not whither) could not but be troublesome, and seeme also ominous. On the eleuenth of August they had sight of the Canaries; where hauing refreshed themselves in the Ile Gomera, they hasted thence the sixt of September, for feare of the Portugals, who had set forth three Caruells to take them. The seuenth they lost sight of Land, with sighes and teares, many of them fearing neuer to see it againe; whom Don Christopher comforted as well as he could, with promises of rich Discoueries: and sayling that day *eightene leagues, he reckoned no more then fiftene, diminishing his accompt, to make them seeme neerer home. On the foureteenth of September he first obserued the Variation of the Compas, which no man till then had considered, which euery day appeared more euident. On Sunday, the sixteenth, they saw pieces of * Grasse, or Herbes, on the Water, of a pale Greene colour, and on one of them a Grasse-hopper aliue, and some signes of Land approaching, made some beleue they had seene it. On the nineteenth they saw an Alcatraz (a kind of Sea-Fowle) and the next day two, which with other Grasse euery day encreasing, encreased their hopes of Land, saue that the Grasse sometimes hindered their sayling.

All this while he had the Wind in poupe, which on the two and twentieth of September came crosse at South-west; and the Spaniards murmured, that the former Winds, which had been large to bring them hither, would neuer permit their returne to Spaine, and now began to blame the King and Queene, which had listned to that bold Italian, resolving to pursue the Voyage no further (the Admirall vsing all his Wits to the contrarie in vaine, mixing with Promises and Prayers, Prayers, Threats and Menaces) alledging, That he thought to make himselfe a great Lord with the price of their liues; and that they had alreadie done their dutie, sayling further from Land then euer any had: nor ought they to be guiltie of their owne deaths; proceeding they knew not whither, till Victuals fayled them, which alreadie would scarcely hold out their returne, nor yet the Caruels, being alreadie spent, and faultie, with other like quarrels: threatning to throw him into the Sea, if he would not returne; and if hee were so desperate to perish, they would saue themselves. Colombo sweetly calmed those tempests with gentle words and rich promises, &c. (as is thought, before agreed vpon) talking with Vincent Pinçon, suddenly cryed, Land, Land, on the five and twentieth of September, which filled them with cheare and hope, which yet proued but Clouds: and therefore howsoeuer the mutinous tempest was for a time stilled, yet on the second of October that storme reuiued with such force, that hee hauing prolonged as faire as hee might, with likelier signes dayly of Land, at last he indented with them for three dayes. This they promised to trie, but not one houre longer, saying, all were Lyes which he had promised. The first of these dayes he perceiued by the Sunne-set, that Land was neere, and commanded, that they should abate their Sayles in the Night; in which Night hee spied Light.

Two houres after Midnight, Rodrigo de Triana descryed Land on the eleuenth of October, 1492. which when it was day, they saw to be an Iland of fifteene leagues compasse, plaine and woodie, with a great Poole of fresh Water, the naked people wondring on the shore, thinking their Shippes were liuing Creatures. They went on Land, and termed it San Salvador, by the Inhabitants called Guanahani, one of the Iles Lucayos, nine hundred and fiftie leagues from the Canaries, and hauing said a Te Deum on his knees, with teares in his eyes, Colombo tooke possession in name of the Catholike Kings, Ferdinand and Isabella, in presence of Rodrigo de Escobedo, Notarie; the Spaniards also acknowledging him for Vice-Roy. The people wondred at the Beards, Whitenesse, Clothing of the Spaniards, who gaue them coloured Caps, Glasse-beads, and other Toyes. And when they departed, the naked Natiues followed, some in Canoas, others swimming after them. They were all naked, their haire bound vp, their stature meane, bodies well formed, colour like those of the Canaries, Oliue, painted some blacke, others of other colours, in part, or all ouer the body, as each best fancied. They knew not the vse of Iron, or Weapons, but layd their hands on the edge of the Sword. They saw no liuing Creatures but Parrats among them. They trucked for Cotton Yarne, and had Rings of Gold in their Nostrils, which they said that it came from the South, where they had a King rich therein. They tooke the Spaniards to be men come from Heauen.

On the fifteenth of October he went seuen leagues thence to another Iland (which he called Santa Maria de la Concecion) the seuenteenth, to Fernandina, where the Women, with Cotton short Coates, from the Nauill to the mid Thigh, couered their nakednesse. The fourth Iland he called Isabella, and thereof (as of all the former) tooke solempne possession. He would not suffer any of his companie to take ought from the Natiues in any place. Thence he passed to Cuba, and went on Land, thinking it to be Zipango; and some Indians which he carried with him, signified, that there was Gold and Pearles. He sent two Spaniards with two Indians to search the Countrey, which found a Towne of fiftie houses of about a thousand persons (for a whole Kindred or Linage dwelt together in one house) where the people kissed their hands and feet, thinking them heavenly Wights, gaue them Bread of a Root, and perfumed them with certaine Herbes burned. They saw store of Cotton growing of it selfe, and strange kinds of Birds and Trees. The Spaniards had most mind to the Gold which they saw in their Notes, of which they questioned these Indians, who answered Cubanacan, that is in the midst of Cuba, which the Spaniards vnderstood of the Can of Cathay, mentioned by Marco Polo. In hope of singular successe, Martin Alonso Pinçon left the Admirall, who also left Cuba, which he called Iuana, in honour of the Prince of Castile, to seeke that Iland which he named Hispaniola, before Haiti. For hauing demanded of Zipango in Cuba, the Indians thinking hee had meant Cibao, which is one of the richest Mines of Hispaniola, directed him thither. Here giuing a Woman which they tooke, Meat, Drinke, and Clothes, he sent with her some of his Indians, which reported much good of the Spaniards, whence grew much acquaintance betwixt them, and after, with their King Guacanagari, which entreated Colombo to come aland. Here he lost his principall Ship, and erected a Fort called the Natiuitie, and vnderstood of the Golden Prouinces of this Iland: and hauing good remonstrance of his Golden Hopes and Haps also, in exchange for Trifles, with some Indians taken with him, leauing eight and thirtie Spaniards in his new Fort, after reconciliation with Pinçon (the Indians, which carried the Admirals Letter to him, attributed their mutuall vnderstanding to some Deitie therein) he prepared for his returne.

Before this, he charged them to behaue themselves with all due respects to Guacanagari, and to his Indians, without wrong to any: and on Friday, the fourth of Ianuary, in the yeere 1493. (after their account) sayled from the Port of Natiuitie. He saw three Mermaids leaping a good height out of the Sea, Creatures (as hee affirmed) not so faire as they are painted, somewhat resembling first saw Land.

Rod. de Triana

Guanahani, or San Salvador.

A Conoa is a Boat made of one tree, which they wrought into that forme with sharpe stones, & helpe of fire: some carried but one, & some aboue
40. or 50. men
in them.

S. Maria de la
Concepcion.
Fernandina.
Isabella.
Cuba.

A Fort

Three Mermaids.

resembling Men in the face, of which at other times he said he had seene on the Coast of Guinea. In his returne, he discovered a great part of the Coast of Hispaniola, and gaue Names to Capes and Harbours. In this Voyage, Colombo is said first to haue taught the Spaniards, in their sayling, to obserue the Sunne and Pole in their Navigations, which they before knew not. Obseruing by his skill in Astronomie, that the Moone being in coniunction with Mercury, and opposition with Iupiter, and the Sunne also in like opposition, to produce great Windes, hee made some stay, and had new commerce with other Indians, where accidentally happened the first quartell and skirmish betwixt the Spaniards and Natiues. But soone after the King sent them his Crowne of Gold, and much Victuall, and gaue them further intelligence. From this Gulfe de las Flechas, or of Arrowes, on Wednesday the seuenteenth of Ianuarie, hee departed, and made homewards: in which it is obserued, that as in their way to the Indies, hauing the Wind large, they reckoned farre fewer leagues then they sayled, so in their returne they accounted more, the Admirals reckoning being a hundred and fiftie lesse then theirs.

Pilgrimages vowed.

A tedious Tempest befell them in Februarie: wherein other remedies seeming to fayle, they vowed Pilgrimages to our Lady by Lot; the first fell on the Admirall himselfe, to Guadalupe; the second to Loretto, on Pedro de Villa; and a third Vow was common to all, that they should at the first Church of our Lady they came to, make Procession in their shirts, with other like deuoted Deuotions.

Pf. 107. 24, 25,
26, 27, 28, 29,
30, 31.

How vnlike was this to that of the Psalmist, in like stormes happening to them that see the Wonders of the Lord in the Deepe. For the Lord commandeth and rayseth the stormie Wind, which lifteth up the Waues thereof. They mount up to the Heauen, they goe downe againe to the Depths, their Soule is melted because of trouble. They reele too and fro, and stagger like a drunken man, and are at their wits end. Then they cry vnto the Lord in their trouble, and he bringeth them out of their distresses. He maketh the Storme a Calme, so that the Waues thereof are still. Then are they glad, because they be quiet. So he bringeth them vnto their desired Haue. O that men would prayse the Lord (not goe on Pilgrimage to our Lady) for his goodnesse and for his wonderfull workes to the children of men, &c.

Providence,
lest the Voyage should miscarry.

The Psalmist in like case is to distressed Mariners a better Admirall then Colombo, whose deuotion herein fayled in the Obiect. Yet his diligence and wisdome in this is to be commended, that fearing shipwracke, lest this famous Discouerie might also be lost, he writ the whole Discourse in Parchment, and folding it in a Seare-cloth, he put it in a Barrell or Hogs-head, which he threw into the Sea.

Bar. Dec. 1. 13.
6. 11.

But on the fifteenth of February they saw Land, being S. Maries Iland, one of the Azores; where going on shore to fulfill their vowed Pilgrimage, the Gouverneur came vpon them, and after many words told them, that hee had order from the King of Portugall to take them. But making an escape, another Storme tooke them, and caused another Pilgrimage to be vowed to our Lady of Cinta, the Lot falling on the Admirall: And thus was he forced to Lisbon; where, after much contesting with the Portugals, the King sent for him, being now much grieved for omitting such an opportunitie; yet vsed him kindly, although there were that offered to kill Colombo, before hee should carry newes of this Discouerie to Spaine; the rather, for his boldnesse, obiecting to the King his neglect. But the gentle King reproved these cruell Gentlemen, and after kind vsage, licenced him to depart.

Enuy.

True it is, that the Portugall Nation haue in their Bookes and Writings sought to obscure this Exploit of Columbus, attributing it rather to a Dreame of Zipango out of Marco Polo, and his confident glorious nature, seconded by successe vnlooked for (for which, as idle imaginations, their King had refused his offer) then any such excellencie as the Castilian Writers ascribe to him. But Enuy is the darke shadow, that alwayes followes him at the heeles, which walkes in the bright Sunne-light of Vertue and high Attempts. Euen the Spaniards themselues, not only by the tale of the Pilot before mentioned, but by light esteeme of his worth haue shewed a contemptible contempt of him: some of whom obiecting to himselfe the easinesse of this Discouerie, as he sate at Table, he prayed to make an Egge, which then he gaue them, to stand on end; which when they could not, hee bruising the shell, and making the end flat, made it to stand thereon: thereby insinuating, how easie it was for them to doe that which they had seene and learned of him.

Yea, the Pinçons, his chiefe Associates, by like spirit of proud Enuy, maligned him; one of which had, after the Islands discovered, forsaken him, as yee haue heard: which hee was forced to dissemble, and be reconciled, the most of his companie being of kinne to the Pinçons, or at lest inhabitants of Palos with them. They also entred suit with Colombo, and arrogated to their owne valour this Discouerie, which Columbus would (after so many dayes not finding Land) haue forsaken, but was proceeded in by their resolution. And in his third Voyage 1499. Rodanus Ximenius raysed a Rebellion in those parts, and effected, that Bonadilla was sent Gouverneur into Hispaniola, who sent the Admirall, with his Brother, Prisoners all the way, of his long Discouerie into Spaine, for which he had so aduentured. These Iron Chaynes could cold Enuy, for so much Gold, for such a World, render vnto that Worthy of Men. But the Catholike Kings of higher Spirits (for Envy, the first sinne we read of in the Deuill, and which made him a Deuill, as Tertullian and Cyprian in their Tractates of Patience haue obserued, the first also in the first-borne Man, which made him an incarnate Deuill and Murtherer, is but the sinke and settled Dregs of Balenesse, which wanting proper worth, malignes it to others) these much honoured Columbus, as well they might, and confirmed his Priuiledges anew, besides many speciall graces done him, as did also the Cardinall of Spaine, and still is done by their ingenuous Writers, Oniedo, Herera, and others.

This Storie at large I haue set downe, that Discoverers may by this example learne to digest greater Stormes at home, then the boysterous Elements in their tempestuous Conspiracie yeeld them; and to know, that Pusillanimitie and Impatience are the vnfittest Attempters in the World. The Spaniards other Discoveries in the American parts (for so were they called of Americus Vesputius, a Florentine, who accompanied Colombo in his first Voyage, and after discovered a greater part of the Continent then the Admirall had, as Cabota in that did more then they both) I list not to pursue; easie it is to know, that Gold bartered for Glasse, Beads, Needles, and other Toyes, would be strongly actiue, and strangely attractiue to new Discoveries. Dimidium facti qui bene capit, habet. Cortes his Conquest of Mexico, and Pizarro his Peru were not comparable to their Masters Master-Peece, who found the New-World, to find them worke. Before Colombo went his second Voyage, he left a Card, containyng the description of the whole Nauigation and Discoverie, in Spaine with the Kings, and his sonnes, Pages to the Prince.

Impatientie natales ab ipso Diab. deprehendo. Diabolus iam tum cura Deus uniuersa opera homini subiucisset, impatienter tulit. Nec enim doluisset si sustinisset, nec inuiderisset si non doluisset. Tert. de patientia. Cyp. de bene pat. Diabolus hominem ad imaginem Dei factum impatienter tulit, inde & per primus & perdidit.

§. VI.

Of the Popes Bull made to Castile, touching the New World.

He Catholike Kings, presently after that first Discoverie, gaue accompt thereof to the Pope, which then was Alexander the sixt (before named Borgia, a Spaniard of Valentia) by his Embassadour, and desired his fauour for the Crowne of Castile and Lions, in the Grant of those New Discoveries, made or to be made: For long since had the Pope challenged Christs right ouer the Christian World. Adrian the fourth, in his Letters of Ireland to King Henry the second affirmeth, That all Ilands vnder the Sunne, of righteoussesse belong to Papall disposition. This second Alexander, in Gods right, claymes all the World: & in ordine ad Deum, for the conuersion (ferfooth) to the Faith, the temporall Estates of the whole World are by his Parasites vsually put vnder that triple Diademe. So they thought, or so would seeme to thinke, in regard of Papall Grants before to the Crowne of Portugall (whence was like to arise some griuance and impediment to their Affaires, as pretending a Monopoly, by former Dispensation in Indian Discoveries) and therefore sought this fauour of that Monster of Men, then sitting in that Chayre. This Bull, because it is not common, I haue here transcribed.

EXEMPLAR BVLLÆ SEV DONATIONIS,

Autoritate cuius, Episcopus Romanus ALEXANDER

eius nominis sextus, concessit & donauit Castellæ Regi-bus & suis successoribus, Regiones &

Insulas Noui Orbis.

ALEXANDER Episcopus, seruus seruorum Dei, Charissimo in Christo filio FERDINANDO Regi, & Charissimæ in Christo filia ELIZABETH Regina Castellæ, Legionis, Arragonum, Siciliæ, & Granatæ, illustribus, salutem & Apostolicam Benedictionem.

Hanc Bullam habet Lopez de Gomara, in hist. gen. parte 2. c. 19. & R. Eden.

Inter cetera Diuina Maiestati beneplacita opera & cordis nostri desiderabilia, illud profecto potissimum existit ut fides Catholica & Christiana Religio nostris presertim temporibus exaltetur ac ubilibet ampliatur ac dilatetur, animarumque salus procuretur, ac barbare Nationes deprimantur & ad fidem ipsam reducantur. Vnde cum ad hanc sacram PETRI Sedem Diuina fauente clementia (meritis licet imparibus) euocati fuanimum vestrum, omnesque conatus ad hoc iam dudum dedicasse, quemadmodum recuperatio Regni Granatæ à Tyrannide Saracenorum hodiernis temporibus per vos, cum tanta Diuini nominis gloria facta, testatur. Digne ducimur non immerito, & debemus illa vobis etiam sponte, ac fauorabiliter concedere per quæ huiusmodi sanctum ac laudabile ab immortalis Dco acceptum propositum, indies feruentiori animo ad ipsius Dei honorem & Imperij Christiani propagationem, prosequi valeatis. Sane accepimus quod vos qui dudum animum proposueratis aliquas Insulas & Terras firmas remotas & incognitas, ac per alios hætenus non repertas, querere & inuenire, ut illarum incolas & habitatores ad colendum redemptorem nostrum & fidem Catholicam profitendum reduceretis, 10 hætenus in expugnatione & recuperatione ipsius Regni Granatæ plurimum occupati, huiusmodi sanctum & laudabile propositum vestrum ad optatum finem perducere nequiuistis. Sed tandem, sicut Domino placuit, Regno prædicto recuperato, volentes desiderium vestrum adimplere, dilectum filium CHRISTOPHORVM COLONVM, virum utique dignum, & plurimum commendatum, ac tanto negotio aptum, cum Nauigijs & hominibus ad similia instructis, non sine maximis laboribus, ac periculis, & expensis destinastis ut Terras firmas & Insulas remotas & incognitas, huiusmodi per Mare ubi hætenus Nauigatum non fuerat, diligenter inquireret. Qui tandem (Diuino auxilio facta extrema diligentia in Mari Oceano Nauigantes) certas Insulas remotissi- 20 mas, & etiam Terras firmas, quæ per alios hætenus reperta non fuerant, inuenerunt. In quibus plurimæ gentes pacifice viuentes, & (ut asseritur) nudi incedentes, nec carnibus vescentes, inhabitant: Et ut præfati Nuncij vestri possunt opinari, gentes ipsæ in Insulis, & terris prædictis habitantes, credunt unum Deum Creatorem in Cælis esse, ac ad fidem Catholicam amplexandum & bonis moribus imbuendum, satis apti videntur: Spesque habetur, quod si erudirentur, nomen saluatoris Domini nostri Iesu Christi in Terris & Insulis prædictis facile induceretur. Ac præfatus CHRISTOPHORVS in una ex principalibus Insulis prædictis, iam vnā turrē satis munitā, in qua certos 30 Christianos qui secum inerant in custodiam, & ut alias Insulas ac Terras firmas remotas & incognitas inquirerent posuit, construi & edificari fecit. In quibus quidem Insulis & terris iam repertis, Aurum, Aromata, & aliæ quam plurimæ res præciosæ diuersi generis & diuersæ qualitatis reperiuntur. Vnde omnibus diligenter, & præsertim fidei Catholicæ exaltatione & dilatione (prout decet Catholicos Reges & Principes) consideratis, more progenitorum vestrorum clara memoriæ Regum, Terras firmas & Insulas prædictas, illarumque Incolas & Habitatores, vobis Diuina fauente clementia subijcere, & ad fidem Catholicam reducere proposuistis. Nos itaque huiusmodi vestrum sanctum & laudabile propositum plurimum in Domino commendantes, ac cupientes ut illud ad 40 debitum finem perducatur, & ipsum nomen saluatoris nostri in partibus illis inducatur, hortamur vos quamplurimum in Domino, & per sacri lauacri susceptionem, qua mandatis Apostolicis obligati estis, ut per viscera misericordiæ Domini nostri Iesu Christi attente requirimus, ut cum expeditionem huiusmodi omnino prosequi & assumere prona mente Orthodoxæ fidei zelo intendatis, populos in huiusmodi Insulis & Terris degentes, ad Christianam Religionem suscipiendum inducere velitis & debeatis, nec pericula nec labores ullo vnquam tempore vos deterreant, firma spe fiduciaque conceptis, quod Deus omnipotens conatus vestros feliciter prosequetur. Et ut tanti Negotij Prouinciā Apostolicæ gratiæ largitate donati, liberius & audacius assumatis, motu proprio non ad 50 vestram vel alterius, pro vobis super hoc nobis oblata petitionis instantiam, sed de nostra mera liberalitate, & ex certa scientia, ac de Apostolicæ potestatis plenitudine, omnes Insulas & Terras firmas inuentas & inueniendas, detectas & detegendas versus Occidentem & Meridiem, fabricando & construendo vnā lineam à Polo Arctico, scilicet Septentrione, ad Polum Antarcticum, scilicet Meridiem, siue Terra firma & Insula inuenta, & inueniende sint, versus Indiam, aut versus aliam quamcunque partem, quæ linea distet à qualibet Insularum, quæ vulgariter nuncupantur de los Azores, & Cabo Verde centum leucis, versus Occidentem & Meridiem. Itaque omnes Insule & Terra firma reperta & reperienda, detecta & detegenda à præfata linea versus Occidentem 60 & Meridiem, quæ per alium Regem aut Principem Christianum non fuerint actualiter possesse vsque ad diem Natiuitatis Domini nostri Iesu Christi proxime præteritum, à quo incipit Annus præsens Milleſimus quadringentesimus nonagesimus tertius, quando fuerunt

10 fuerant per Nuncios & Capitaneos vestros inuenta aliqua predictarum Insularum, Au-toritate Omnipotentis Dei nobis in beato PETRO concessa, ac Vicariatus Iesu Christi, qua fungimur in Terris, cum omnibus illarum Dominijs, Ciuitatibus, Castris, Locis, & Villis, iuribusque & iurisdictionibus ac pertinentijs vniuersis vobis, heredibusque, & successoribus vestris (Castella & Legionis Regibus) in perpetuum tenore presentium donamus, concedimus, & assignamus: Vosque, & heredes, ac successores prefatos illarum Dominos, cum plena, libera, & omnimoda potestate, autoritate, & iurisdictione, facimus, constituimus, & deputamus. Decernentes nihilo minus, per huiusmodi donationem, con-cessionem, & assignationem nostram, nulli Christiano Principi, qui actualiter prefatas Insulas & Terras firmas possederit vsque ad predictum diem Natiuitatis Domini nostri Iesu Christi ius quassitum, sublatum intelligi posse, aut auferri debere.

20 Et insuper mandamus vobis in virtute sancte obedientie (ut sicut pollicemini & non dubitamus pro vestra maxima deuotione & Regia magnanimitate vos esse facturos) ad Terras firmas & Insulas predictas, viros probos & Deum timentes, doctos, peritos, & expertes ad instruendum Incolas & habitatores prefatos in fide Catholica, & bonis moribus imbuendum, destinare debeatis, omnem debitam diligentiam in premisis adhiben-tes. Ac quibuscunque personis, cuiuscunque dignitatis, etiam Imperialis & Regalis status, 30 gradus, ordinis vel conditionis, sub excommunicationis late sententie pena quam eo ipso, si contra fecerint incurrant, districtius inhibemus ne ad Insulas & Terras firmas inuentas & inueniendas, detectas & detegendas versus Occidentem & Meridiem, fabricando & construendo lineam a Polo Arctico ad Polum Antarcticum, siue Terra firme & Insule inuenta & inuenienda sint versus Indiam aut versus aliam quamcunque partem, qua linea distet a qualibet Insularum, que vulgariter nuncupantur de los Azores, & Cabo Verde centum leucis versus Occidentem & Meridiem ut prefertur, pro mercibus habendis, vel quavis alia causa accedere presumat, absque vestra ac heredum & successo-rum vestrorum predictorum licentia speciali: Non obstantibus constitutionibus & or-40 dinationibus Apostolicis, caterisque quibuscunque: in illo in quo Imperia & Dominationes & bona cuncta procedunt, Confidentes quod dirigente Domino actus vestros, si huiusmodi sanctum ac laudabile propositum prosequamini, breui tempore cum felicitate & gloria totius populi Christiani, vestri labores & conatus exitum felicissimum consequen-
tur. Verum quia difficile foret presentes literas ad singula queque loca in quibus expedi-ens fuerit deferri, volumus ac motu & scientia similibus decernimus, quod illarum transsumptis manu publici Notarij inde rogati subscriptis, & sigillo alicuius persone in Eccle-siastica dignitate constituta, seu Curie Ecclesiastica munitis, ea prorsus fides in iudicio 40 & extra, ac alias ubilibet adhibeatur, que presentibus adhiberetur si essent adhibita vel ostensa.

Nulli ergo omnino hominum liceat hanc Paginam nostre commendationis, hortationis, requisitionis, donationis, concessionis, assignationis, constitutionis, deputacionis, decreti, mandati, inhibitionis, & voluntatis, infringere, vel ei ausu temerario contraire. Si quis autem hoc attentare presumpserit, indignationem Omnipotentis Dei, ac beatorum PE-TRI & PAULI Apostolorum eius, se noverit incursum.

50 Datum Romæ apud Sanctum PETRUM, Anno Incarnationis Dominicæ 1493. quarto nonas Maij, Pontificatus nostri, anno primo.

THE SAME ENGLISHED.

60 ALEXANDER Bishop, the Seruant of the Seruants of GOD, to our most deare beloued Sonne in CHRIST, King Ferdinando, and to our deare be-loued Daughter in CHRIST, Elizabeth, Queene of Castile, Legion, Arragon, Sicilie, and Granata, most Noble Princes, greeting, and Apostolicall Benediction.

Among other Workes acceptable to the Diuine Maiestie, and according to our hearts desire, this certainly is the chiefe, that the Catholike Faith and Christian Religion, specially in this our time, may in all places be exalted, amplified, and enlarged, whereby the health of Soules may bee procured, and the barbarous Nations subdued and brought to the Faith. And therefore, whereas by the fauour of Gods Clemencie (although not without equall deserts) we are called to this holy Seat of PETER, and vnderstanding you to be true Catholike Princes, as wee haue euer knowne you, and as your noble and worthy Facts haue declared in manner to the whole World, in that with all your studie, diligence, and industry, you haue spared no Trauailes, Charges, or Perils, aduenturing euen the shedding of your owne Bloud, with applying your whole Mindes and Endeouours herunto, as your Noble Expeditions atchieued in recouering the Kingdome of Granata from the Tyrannie of the Sarracens in these our dayes, doe plainly declare your Facts, with so great Glory of the Diuine Name. For the which, as wee thinke you worthy, so ought wee of our owne free will fauourably to graunt you all things, whereby you may dayly, with more feruent mindes, to the honour of God, and enlarging the Christian Empire, prosecute your deuout and laudable Purpose, most acceptable to the Immortall God. Wee are credibly informed, that whereas of late you were determined to seeke and finde certaine Ilands and firme Lands, farre remote and vknowne (and not heretofore found by any other) to the intent to bring the Inhabitants of the same to honour our Redeemer, and to professe the Catholike Faith, you haue hitherto beene much occupied in the expugnation and recouerie of the Kingdome of Granata, by reason whereof you could not bring your said laudable Purpose to the end desired. Neuerthelesse, as it hath pleased Almighty God, the foresaid Kingdome being recouered, willing to accomplish your said Desire, you haue, not without great Labour, Perils, and Charges, appointed our welbeloued Sonne Christopher Colonus (a man certes well commended, as most worthy and apt for so great a Matter) well furnished with Men and Ships, and other Necessaries, to seeke (by the Sea, where hitherto no man hath sayled) such firme Lands and Ilands farre remote, and hitherto vknowne, who (by Gods helpe) making diligent search in the Ocean Sea, haue found certaine remote Ilands and firme Lands, which were not heretofore found by any other: in the which (as is said) many Nations inhabit, liuing peaceably, and going naked, not accustomed to eate Flesh; and as farre as your Messengers can coniecture, the Nations inhabiting the foresaid Lands and Ilands, beleue that there is one God, Creator in Heauen, and seeme apt to bee brought to the imbracing of the Catholike Faith, and to be endued with good Manners: by reason whereof, wee may hope, that if they be well instructed, they may easily be induced to receiue the Name of our Sauour IESVS CHRIST. Wee are further aduertised, that the fore-named Christopher hath now builded and erected a Fortresse, with good Munition, in one of the foresaid principall Ilands, in the which he hath placed a Garrison of certaine of the Christian men that went thither with him, as well to the intent to defend the same, as also to search other Ilands and firme Lands farre remote, and yet vknowne. Wee also vnderstand, that in these Lands and Ilands lately found, is great plentie of Gold and Spices, with diuers and many other precious things, of sundry kinds and qualities. Therefore all things diligently considered (especially the amplifying and enlarging of the Catholike Faith, as it behoueth Catholike Princes, following the examples of your Noble Progenitors, of famous Memorie) you haue determined, by the fauour of Almighty God, to subiect vnto you the firme Lands and Ilands aforesaid, and the Dwellers and Inhabitants thereof, and to bring them to the Catholike Faith.

Wee greatly commending this your godly and laudable purpose in our Lord, and desirous to haue the same brought to a due end, and the Name of our Sauour to be knowne in those parts, doe exhort you in our Lord, and by the receiuing of your holy Baptisme, whereby you are bound to Apostolicall Obedience, and earnestly require you by the Bowels of Mercie of our Lord IESVS CHRIST, that when you intend, for the zeale of the Catholike Faith, to prosecute the said Expedition, to reduce the People of the foresaid Lands and Ilands to the Christian Religion, you shall spare no Labours at any time, or be deterred with any Perils, concerning ceiuing firme hope and confidence, that the Omnipotent God will giue good successe to your godly Attempts. And that being authorised by the Priuiledge of the Apostolicall Grace, you may the more freely and boldly take vpon you the Enterprise of so great a Matter, wee of our owne motion, and not eyther at your request, or at the instant petition of any other person, but of our owne meere liberalitie and certaine science, and by the fulnesse of Apostolicall power, doe giue, grant, and assigne to you, your heires and successors, all the firme Lands and Ilands found or to be found, discovered or to be discovered, toward the West and South, drawing a Line from the Pole Artike to the Pole Antartike (that is) from the North to the South: Contayning in this Donation, whatsoeuer firme Lands or Ilands are found, or to be found toward India, or toward any other part whatsoeuer it be, being distant from, or without the foresaid Line, drawne a hundred Leagues toward the West, and South, from any of the Ilands which are commonly called De los Azores and Capo Verde. All the Ilands therefore, and firme Lands, found and to be found, discovered and to be discovered, from the said Line toward the West and South, such as haue not actually beene heretofore possessed by any other Christian King or Prince, vntill the day of the Natiuitie of our Lord IESV CHRIST last past, from the which beginneth this present yeere, being the yeere of our Lord a thousand foure hundred ninetie three, when soeuer any such shall bee found by your Messengers and Captaines, wee by the Authoritie of Almighty GOD, graunted vnto vs in Saint PETER, and by the Vicarship of IESVS CHRIST which wee beare on the Earth, doe for euer, by the tenour of these presents, giue, grant, assigne, vnto you, your heires and successors (the Kings of Castile and Legion) all those Lands and Ilands, with their Dominions, Territories, Cities, Castles, Towers, Places, and Villages, with all the Rights and Iurisdictions thereunto pertaining; constituting, assigning, and deputing you, your heires and successors, the Lords thereof, with full and free Power, Authoritie, and Iurisdiction: Decreeing neuerthelesse by this our Donation, Grant, and Assignment, that from no Christian Prince, which actually hath possessed the foresaid Ilands and firme Lands, vnto the day of the Natiuitie of our Lord before said, their Right obtained, to be vnderstood hereby to be taken away, or that it ought to be taken away. Furthermore, wee command you in the vertue of holy Obedience (as you haue promised, and as wee doubt not you will doe, vpon meere Deuotion and Princely Magnimitie) to send to the said firme Lands and Ilands, honest, vertuous, and learned men, such as feare God, and are able to instruct the Inhabitants in the Catholike Faith and good Manners, applying all their possible diligence in the premisses. Wee furthermore straitly inhibite all manner of persons, of what state, degree, order, or condition soeuer they be, although of Imperiall and Regall Dignitie, vnder the paine of the Sentence of Excommunication, which they shall incur, if they doe to the contrary, That they in no case presume, without speciall Licence of you, your heires, and successors, to trauaile for Marchandizes, or for any other cause, to the said Lands or Ilands, found or to be found, discovered or to be discovered, toward the West and South, drawing a Line from the Pole Artike to the Pole Antartike, whether the firme Lands and Ilands, found and to be found, be situate toward India, or toward any other part, being distant from the Line drawne a hundred Leagues toward the West, from any of the Ilands commonly called De los Azores and Capo Verde: Notwithstanding Constitutions, Decrees, and Apostolicall Ordinances whatsoeuer they are to the contrary. In him from whom Empires, Dominions, and all good things doe proceede: Trusting, that Almighty GOD, directing your Enterprises, if you follow your godly and laudable Attempts, your Labours and Trauailes herein, shall in short time obtaine a happie end, with felicitie and glorie of all Christian People. But forasmuch as it should be a thing of great difficultie, these Letters to be carried to all such places as should be expedient; wee will, and of like motion and knowledge doe decree, That whither soeuer the same shall be sent, or wheresoeuer they shall be receiued, with the subscription of a common Notarie thereunto required, with the Seale of any person constitute in Ecclesiasticall Dignitie, or such as are authorized by the Ecclesiasticall Court, the same faith and credite to be giuen thereunto in Iudgement, or elsewhere, as should be exhibited to these Presents.

Let no man therefore whatsoeuer infringe or dare rashly to contrary this Letter of our Commendation, Exhortation, Request, Donation, Grant, Affignation, Constitution, Deputation, Decree, Commandement, Inhibition, and Determination. And if any shall presume to attempt the same, let him know, that hee shall thereby incurre the Indignation of Almighty God, and his holy Apostles, Peter and Paul.

10

Giuen at Rome at Saint PETERS, In the yeere of the Incarnation of our Lord 1493. The fourth day of the Nones of May, the first yeere of our Popedome.

ANIMADVERSIONS ON THE SAID

Bull of Pope ALEXANDER.

20

a Seneca.
b Ciceo.
c He was be-
to. e called Ro-dericus Borgia, a Spaniard of Valencia.
d Lucan.
e Aug. de Civ.
D. 1. 4. c. 4.
Quid tibi ut
Quem terra-rum? sed quia
id ego ex quo
facio nauigio,
latro vocor, quia
tum magna classe,
imperator.
f Ben. Cord. Bal.
G. c. vid. script.
vit. Pontif. de hoc & seq. P. P. g This History hath many Testimonies of their owne
Authors: see it maintained against Baron.
by Morn. Myst.
Inq. pag. 323.
in Fol.
V. d. m. Schard
ex vi. a. Germ.
ser. 12.
h He maintained the Popes pove against the King and the Clergies immunitie (which had committed about a hundred Murthers, as Newbrig. l. 2.
then living, testifieth) from the King and justly therefore by Diuine Providence (though with humane Iniustice) was murdered himselfe. i King Henry the second held the Bridle to the Popes Legate twice, and suffered many stripes on his naked flesh with Roddes. k Est illa curia fideles Christi multoties excruciat, nunquam tamen tam letaliter sauciatur, &c. Mat. Par. 1255.

Although some deny libertie of Examination and Censure to Historians, but will haue them leaue all to the Iudgement of the Readers, to conclude what their owne Iudgements shall gather out of Historicall Premisses: Yet because wee write a vita non Schola, and Historie is not b onely vita Memoria, but Magistra vita, is the Schoole of Diuine Prouidence, wherein by Example is alway read that Rule, Discite iustitiam moniti; let me haue like leaue as almost all Historians, Diuine, Ecclesiasticall, and Humane, haue with thanks also obtained: And let the seuerer Criticke call it a Digression, or Parentthesis, or what he pleaseth, so it may profit the feebler feet of such as may stumble hereat, and confirme the firmer and more resolu'd: Difficile est Satyram non scribere. It is almost necessarie in this Treatise of Nauigations (most of which are, or seeme thereby inhibited) not to suffer this Bull (as Butcherly in sequele, as those the Statute includeth) to passe vnbaited.

30

It was now the time that the Antichristian Kingdome was growne to the height, and began to sinke vnder the weight of it selfe, and the Prophecies of the Churches Restauration and Reformation began to ripen and hasten to the Birth, when this c Borgia ascended the Papall Throne, stiling himselfe Alexander, a Name ominous to the World, to the Church, and to themselves; in some, to some of them; in this (the totall summe of Mischiefe) to all. This appeared in that Great Macedonian, who was called d Felix terrarum prado; and to whom a e Pyrate, charged with Sea-rouings, objected his greater World-rouings and robbings, this onely differing, that the one did little with his little Ship, and therefore was called a Theefe, the other doing great harme with his great Army, was surnamed Great: who after his great Conquests, and greater ambition of Deitie, with a little Poyson was confined to his little Earth, a few Feet, a few handfuls of Dust; leauing the Ptolemys and Seleucida, which succeeded in part of his State, to exceed in crueltie to the Church.

40

To the Christian Church, such haue beene the Popes that haue named themselves Alexanders. Thus Alexander the second (the first that assumed that Name reiecting Anselmus, which in his Baptisme hee had receiued) brought forth a Schisme with his Papacie, proceeded like an Alexander in Warres, and died in Prison (as some thinke of Poyson) to giue place to f Hildebrand, the true Scanderbeg of the Papacie. The next Alexander was procreated in g Schisme, betrayed Frederike the Emperour to the Soldan, sending him his Picture to that end, and after degenerating from the Macedonian Alexanders Humanitie, trode on his Necke in the Temple of S. Marke at Venice, and prophaned Scripture, super aspidem &c. to that Diabolicall Deligne; first made the Law of Canonization, and then with deuout Bernard canonized T. Becket h (an Angell of Light, and of Darkenesse yoked together, this being murdered or martyred in the Deuils Quarrell) had at once (beyond all Alexanders Pompe) the Kings of England i and France attending on foot, and holding his Bridle. The next Alexander began with Excommunications, Persecutions, Warres against Manfred King of Sicilia, which to maintaine, hee vsed Extortions and Exactions, such as had neuer beene heard of; k the Cry wh-reof ascended to God, the Lord of Renenge, that the Bishop of London protested he would rather loose his head, the Bishop of Torke writ to him, to feede, not to shere, to flay, to enscerate, to deuoure the Sheepe like a hungry Wolfe, as Matthew Paris, who then liued, recordeth. The Tenth

50

60

which

which was granted for the Holy Land, and the prizes of Absolution for Homicide, Treason, Sodomie, Witchcraft, Periurie, and all Crimes, he thus employed; and after that publike Pestilence of the Decretales published, he died of Thought, Euent not seconding his Alexander-like Designs. The fifth Alexander <sup>1</sup> was produced in the greatest Schisme that euer befell the Papacie; he depofed Ladislaus King of Naples, and gaue that Scepter to Lewis the Duke of Aniou; as also the Kingdome of the Romans, from Rupertus to Wenceslaus; guided in all things by Balthasar, full of fiercenesse and ſecularitie; hee died of Poyſon, giuen him by his Phyſician, at the procurement of Balthasar his ſucceſſor, leauing a yeere of Peſtilence and Famine to infeſt the World.

- 10 But this ſixt Alexander was Heire of all their Vices: who hauing procreated many Baſtards, procured the Papacie <sup>m</sup> by Simonie (ſome adde, Diabolicall * Contracts) to aduance them and himſelfe, with vniuſt Iuſtice miſerably plaguing thoſe Simoniacall <sup>n</sup> Cardinals, which for Price and Promise had exalted this Plague-ſore into that Chayre of Peſtilence, where hee acted the Monſter of Men, or was indeed rather an incarrate Deuill. Bellarmino <sup>o</sup> himſelfe (a man not of the tenderſt Forhead) bluſheth at his Name, though aſhamed of that ſhame, hee returnes with greater impudence, and from the immanitie of this and ſome other Popes, would haue vs more admire the ſtedfaſtneſſe of that Romiſh Rocke, which hath ſuſtained ſuch portentuous Beaſts, as an argument of Diuine Providence, that the Gates of Hell ſhall neuer preuaile (and what elſe but Vices, are the Gates of Hell!) againſt it. In vaine doe we Heretikes labour
- 20 to ſet forth the Vices of ſome Popes, which themſelues confeſſe, but ſo, that the glory of that See is thereby exceedingly amplified. Egregiam vero laudem! An exceeding amplification of Bellarmino his Wit! <sup>p</sup> Onuphrins, Ionins, Guicciardine, Volaterrane, and others of their owne ſeeme amazed at this mans Monſtroſitie, though Vices be no rarities in Popes, and of the ordinarie ones, one <sup>q</sup> ſayth, that he is accounted a good Pope (not whoſe Vertues equall his Vices, and hold ſome counterpoyſe, as Comminaus of a Prince, but) whoſe Wickedneſſe doth not exceed that of other men. To omit the Deluges of Waters, of Famine, Plague, Warres, which ouerflowed the Citie and all Italy in his times, Rome was by the impunitie of Aſſaſſinates made a very * Butcherie; within it, no going by Night; nor without, by Day. And for his perſonall Vertues, Theologicall and Cardinall, his Loue was vnaturall Luſt, to his Daughter,
- 30 and for his Sonnes; his Faith, perfidie to all which truſted him: Genes the Turkiſh Emperors Brother, for Turkiſh * Gold hee betrayed, and with a white ſweet lingring Poyſon, mixed with his Wine, murdered; his reconciled Enemies he fraudulently betrayed to maſſacre; to his Gueſts invited to his Table, hee gaue poyſoned Potions, in exchange of their great Riches (in one of which Banquets, himſelfe at vnawares, by a miſtaken Cup, was payd in his owne Coyne, the Sonne alſo pledging the Father; but to the Worlds greater ſcourge, by the benefit of Youth and Phyſicke, recouering.) His Hope was to make his Sonne Cesar Borgia (which had ſlaine his Brother, and is ſaid to communicate with his Father in his * Siſters Bed) the Cesar of the Churches State or Patrimonie. His Fortitude was daring to any Miſchiefe; in Prudence, he was not wiſe as a Serpent, to preuent, but a wiſe Serpent to inuent Euill. With his
- 40 Temperance I will not further diſtemper your patience; but conſider his Iuſtice in this Donation, of he knew not whom, to he knew not what Miſerie.

And if it ſeeme impertinent to haue ſaid ſo much of the Perſon, let ſuch know, that I haue done it to ſhew, that here was Dignum olla operculum, Lips ſutable to the Lettuce, and amongſt all the Popes of later times, the Deuill (which is a Murderer from the beginning) could not haue found a fitter Vicar, whether wee regard the bloudie Executions and Depopulations that enſued, wherein both Alexander the Macedon, and Alexanders Popes, and if there be any Alexander Deuils, are by the euent of this Bull ſurmounted all; or whether that the Deuill, foreſeeing by the Prophecies of Babylons Fall (confirmed alſo with the <sup>t</sup> Fall of the Angell in this Popes time from the top of S. Angelo) that his Kingdome would ſoone decline, rayſed vp this

- 50 Alexander to be another Alexander, a Conqueror of another World, by his Spirituall Weapons, vnder a ſeeming Conuerſion to Chriſtianitie, to make a * Conuerſion (of another Ciceronian Etimologie) a ſweeping of a World of Men out of the World together, and wiping * them as a man wipeth a Diſh, wiping it and turning it upſide downe; this firſt, and in the remainders a Conuerſion to ſuch a Chriſtianitie, as ſhould make them * two-fold more the Children of Hell, which is by themſelues <sup>y</sup> testified of the Indians: Or whether the Pope, his Vicar, as honeſt as that <sup>z</sup> Steward in the Goſpell, fearing to be caſt out of this Europæan Stewardſhip, bethought him, by giuing ſo great a part of the World, whereof his Maſter is called * the God, to procure entertainment ſomewhere elſe, and thereupon was ſo liberall of the Deuils peculiar, this Ethnike World: Or that in the decay of the Spirituall Power, that Genius of the Papacie ſought to
- 60 ſupply it with Temporall (whereof the Chriſtian Kings are more iealous) and therefore hath

Popes daughter, Hoc iacet in tumulto Lucretia nomine, ſed re Thais, Alexandri filia, ſponſa, nurus. <sup>f</sup> Volater. & Bal. <sup>t</sup> Conuerſo à conuerſendo. Cic. in Ver. ac. 4. <sup>o</sup> verrea præclara. Etenim quam tu Domum, quam Urbem adiſti, quod ſanum deniq; quod non curſus atq; exterſum reliqueris? <sup>u</sup> 2. Reg. 21. 13. <sup>x</sup> Mat. 23. <sup>y</sup> See the laſt Chapter of my Pilgrimage, lib. 9. <sup>z</sup> Lu. 16. <sup>a</sup> 1. Cor. 4. 4.

<sup>1</sup> See Theod. de Nicm. which liued with him, his three laſt Chapters of the third book. <sup>m</sup> Whence thoſe Verſes, Vendit Alexander Cruces, Altaria, Chriſtum, Vendere iure poteſt, emerat ille prius.

* Bal. ex H. Mar. Euseb. Cap.

<sup>n</sup> See Onuph. in vit. Al. 6.

<sup>o</sup> Bel. de R. Pont. in præfat.

<sup>p</sup> Onuph. in vit. Al. 6. Pontifex

in cam totus incubuit curam ut

ingentes filio ojes

vel summa cum

omnium iniuria

pararet. And,

Inopie, metu rapax atq; ingenio

immani ſeuus.

opulentiff quemi

in Aula Sacerdotem & in his Cardinales Aiquot ceteris diſi-

ores veneno tol-

landos conſtituit.

—Homo ad Italiae exitium na- tus &c. So

Guic. l. 1. non ſincerita, non

fede, non religi-

one auaritia in-

ſatiabile crudelta

pinche barbara

& ardentiff. cupidita diſſal- tare in qualunq; modo ei ſigiloli

iquali erano

molti. Vid. Ion.

Volat &c.

<sup>q</sup> Guic. l. 16.

Ne noſtri cor-

rotti coſtumi è

laudata la bonta

del Pontefice

quando non tra-

paſſa la malignità de gli altri huomini.

* Volat. Roma

Nobilis iam car-

nific na ſalla.

<sup>z</sup> 200000 Ducats, & Chriſts

ſeame-leſſe

Coar. Jon. Hiſt.

l. 12.

* Pontanus of Lucretia, the

Conuerſo

new forged the Keyes into a Sword, that what his Keyes could not vnlocke (nay, had nothing to doe with, as being no part of the House, like the first Alexander in the Gordian Knot) his Sword might chop in funer, and giue the one halfe to one, and the other halfe to another. Once, the Sword hath made way to the Keyes in those parts, and made the Farme of the Popes Pardons a good Reuenue.

I question not the Right of the Spanish Crowne in those parts: Quis me constituit iudicem? It is the fault I find in this great Ardelio. The Castilian Industry I honour (as appeares in the former Relations) their Right may, for that which is actually in their Possession, without this Bull, plead Discouerie euen before this was written, the Sword, Prescription, subiection of the Inhabitants, long and quiet Possession; which, howsoever the b Case was at first (wherewith I meddle not) must now, after so long Succession, be acknowledged Iust. I quarrell the Pope onely, and the Clayme of that See, herein truly Catholike, or Vniuersall, challenging euen in the Deuils stile, Omnia Regna Orbis Terra, and, Potestatem hanc uniuersam & gloriam illorum, quia mihi tradita sunt, & cui volo, do illa. Hee as the Deuils Vicar (cui tradita sunt, who by Tradition challengeth a Right to them, and by Tradition, that is, Treason, disturbs Right and Rites in them) doth Tradere, betray the Rights of them, by Sentences, Censures, and I know not what Bulls. True it is, that the Catholike Kings had other reasons to aske this furtherance from the Pope, in regard of the Portugall, which had obtained former Bulls (as is before related; as d Neptune with the Ethnikes, so Naugation with these, is propitiated with Bulls) and challenged a Monopoly of Discouerie; in regard of other Princes, to whom the Popes Censures (as Thunder in a darke Night) were in those times terrible, especially in a Case otherwise iust, where they had made Discouerie, and taken and continued Possession before all others; and in regard of the People, and (those blind Leaders of the blind) the Friers and Priests, who (si dolosi spes refulserit nummi) could with this Bull, as a Bagge full of Wind, make Musike to the Vulgar, and cause them dance ouer the Seas in this Attempt, as no lesse holy (approved by that Holy Father) then e DAVIDS dancing before the Arke. The Bulls bellowing, Auctoritate Omnipotentis Dei nobis in beato PETRO concessa, ac Vicariatus IESU CHRISTI, qua fungimur in terris, where Gold and Glory were really proposed, with Conceits of Heauen and Merit annexed, could not but to Minds credulous, couetous, and therefore willing, adde Wind in Poupe, and become another generall Wind, to carry them to this New World. Besides, in Mindes scrupulous touching the lawfulness of that Designe, but acknowledging that fulnesse of Apostolicall power without examination or scruple, it was almost necessarie to obtaine that, which had it beene necessary to themselves, and in their owne Consciencies had begun the lawfulness of that Action, they would not first haue discouered and possessed (as the Bull it selfe intimates) and afterwards haue demanded the Popes Grant; they would not haue denoued that was sanctified and set apart from their use, and after the Vowes haue enquired.

Reason of State is eident (abundans cautela non nocet) Religion of Episcopall power to be reason of giuing iust Title of Inheritance, and that to a World, to an Ethnike World, Religio est dicere, is not onely (as the Mysteries of Religion are) beyond and aboue, but vtterly against and contrary to reason. But from these Reasons of State, haue the Romists (whose Religion at Rome is little elsie but Reason of State, as appeared in their late erected Pillar and ground of Truth, which pilled and cast the Truth to the ground, their c Council of Trent) gathered a Soueraigntie ouer Kings and Kingdomes; and therefore whatsoever was done in this kind, whiles their Houre and the Power of Darkenesse lasted, is set vpon the Last, and stretched, to make it a fit Slipper for the Popes pride-swolne Foot to tread vpon the Neckes of Kings and Emperors, as super Aspidem & Basilicum, with conculcabis Leonem & Draconem. Thus Alexander serued Frederike, and thus of the second Frederike, said Innocentius, then angry with the Kings of England and France, *Expediit ut componamus cum Principe F. ut hos Regulos contemamus recalcitrantes: Contrito enim vel * pacificato Dracone cito Serpentuli conculcabuntur*. These things he spake voce susurra, oculos obliquando & naves corrugando. Yea, now Bellarmino is much i amused and amazed, that his Maiestie should presume to compare himselfe with the Pope, being a King of two Ilands in a Corner of the North, forgetting that Great Constantine, the Sunne of the Empire, arose from this Northerne Corner, which first filled the Hornes of the Popes Miter with secular Light, and by removing the Imperiall Seat, made way for that Starre to become a full Moone: which though a long time (as the Moone whiles the Sunne shineth) made no great shew, the Imperiall Greatnesse continuing; yet in the Eclipse of the Empire, or that irrecoverable Night rather by Barbarian Deluges (these also God rayfed out of the contemned North, to tread vnder foot the Roman Pride) seemed to become, in that Night of Darkenesse, Lady of the Light, indeed a light Lady; which dazzled with selfe-reflecting her borrowed Beames, challenged to be the Sunne, and glories to haue procreated this later Moone, in translating and erecting the Westerne Empire; which, and all other Christian Kingdomes must no longer shine, then they admit the light of the Papall Sunne: otherwise their Opposition must be a Coniunction, and thence Thunder-stricken, like young Phaetons, they must loose their Light, and Life, and Empire together, becoming as opacous Earth (so some conceit the Moone) yea, b Bar. Ius Regis, l. 1. c. 3. at possessio male fidei non procedit? berde non in primo possessore nec in herede proximo aut necessario, sed legitime in posteris & valide &c. licite suff. ad continuat. dominij non ad inchoationem.

c Πίστις τῆς βασιλείας τῆς οὐρανίας. Lu. 17. 21. hoc ille titulo & iure Occumenicus Papa.
d Taurum Neptuno taurum tibi pulcher Apollo. Virg.
e 2. Sam. 6.

f Ter. beaut. g See the Hist. of that Council published in English, translated out of Italian by M. Brent, which discouers the particular workings of that Mysterie.
h Mat. Paris in Hen. 3. An. 1245.
* Yet Michael the Archangel, when he stroue against the Deuill, durst not blame him with cursed speaking. Iude 9.
i Mirum est quod is qui in angulo Septentrionis duas Insulas subiectas habet, ita de se presumat, ut dicat, nulla ex parte me Pontifice esse inferiore a credo. Apolog. p. 26. Vid. resp. E. El. pag. 78.

yea, as darke Hells of Heresies, for not acknowledging the Pope. Let this contemner of the North remember, that this Northerne Corner was once their Paradise and Garden of Pleasure, where the Pope himselfe would haue personally for a time resided, and was reiected, euen in his Sonnes dayes, who (Bellarmino sayth vnruly) de consensu Barinum, resigned his Crowne to the Pope. And let him remember, that of the ten Hornes which shall hate the Whore, and make her desolate and naked, and eat her flesh, and burne her with fire, some may come out of some corner of the North. The ancient Almes of a Peter-pence he calls Tribute, and alledgeth Ireland to be the Popes Gift. Sure we are, that the Popes haue done their best and worst against the English Right in Ireland, Paul the fourth itomacking the Title of King, without

- 10 Papall Licence, Pius the fifth impiouly deposing Queene Elizabeth by his Bull, and Gregorie the thirteenth intending it also to his Sonne, sending Forces with Stukley to that purpose, which (the Popes Blessing notwithstanding) perished before they came there. Neyther need we here or there feare Balaam or Balaam (their Curses are Blessings, though Sanders also play the Shemei. But for that of Ireland, one of his owne Religion hath answered the Cardinall (whom hee applaude in Diuinitie, but in forensibus aut rebus seculi esteemes hand mediocriter peritum) That if the Pope or his predecessors euer had right, yet by his Bull, Possession taken by the English, and Prescription, they are vtterly excluded. He alledgeth also, besides the succession of diuers Ages, that the Roman Court knowes well enough, that a Ius socialis Belli, and that voluntarie submission, yea supplication of the Irish to King Henry for that purpose, which hee accepted and performed, their Letters (as hee saith) still remayning in the Vatican. Baronius hath testified, Hiberniam sponte deditam sibi consensu omnium vendicauit, and mentions the transcript of those Letters to Pope Alexander. Adrian indeed writ to King Henry, who had before consulted with him, being an Englishman, about those Irish Affaires, asking his aduice and assistance (Consilium exigit & fauorem Sedis Apost. are Adrians words, and the whole Epistle is of aduice) but by that Epistle nothing was attempted. Fifteene yeeres after, King Henry offered aide to King Dermotus at his humble solicitation, and by his Sword, not the Popes Keyes (as the most learned Bishop hath answered the Cardinall) together with the submission of the Irish, obtayned that Soueraigntie.

- 30 The same challenge may they make to France, for consultation with Pope Zacharie, when Hilderike or Childerike was deposed by the French. Yea, what Kingdome doe they not finde some Window or Posterne to creepe into, and though these unjust Stewards cannot digge, and so begge are ashamed; yet herein, where they haue begged for a Peter-pence (as Adrian in that Letter of King Henry) euen of such Begging will make an Intrument to digge thorow and steale; as some Rogues, which by Begging obtayning an Almes, haue seized on the whole Purse, and robbed their Benefactor.

Thus he, which at first was a holy Bishop, after, by beneficence of Princes, became a Princely Prelate in the Church: next, by a Murtherer and Traytor was made Head and Prince of the Church, in Church-Affaires a Occumenicall Pope: after which, by Princes bountie made a Prince, but tributarie; by Treason against his Prince, made himselfe his Princes Peere, and exalting himselfe aboue all that is called God, from the time of Gregorie the seuenth hath bestirred him to make himselfe the Prince of all Princes a Christian, and now in this Alexander, a God of the World, the Stile (as is said) of the Deuill. For whereas Adrian had challenged a omnes Insulas quibus Sol iustitia Christus illuxit & que documenta fidei Christiane susceperunt, ad ius B. Petri & SS. Rom. Ecclesie pertinere, he doth it but of Christians, and for his a Peter-pence, as an argument to receiue Almes, not to giue Scepters: but this Bull hath a lower bellow, and opens his mouth wider, Omnes Insulas & Terras firmas, inuentas & inueniendas, detectas & detegendas—versus Indiam aut aliam quamcunq. partem—and that with an imagined Line from the Arctike to the Antartike Pole, by the imaginarie authoritie of Almighty God; with all their Cities, Castles, Dominions, Rights, Iurisdictions: inhibiting all others, under paine of Excommunication, to presume thither for Merchandise, or any other cause, &c. Doe they not challenge the

- 50 Kingdomes of Hungarie, of Arragon, of Spaine it selfe, of Denmarke, of Dalmatia and Croatia, of Portugall, of Naples, Sicilia, Ierusalem, Sardinia, Bohemia, Swethen, Norway, Poland, Scotland, and all the Kingdomes of Europe; as a Stapleton, a Stenchus, Marta, and others haue written. Wee read of a mad man at Athens, which esteemed euery Ship that came into the Hauen his owne, and therefore tooke Inuentories of the Goods. Such is the sobrietie of Rome, as if the World had bene created for the Papacie; whatsoever Promises are made to the Church in Scripture, is their Inheritance; the Pope is the Church, and Peter, and Bishop, and Apostle, and Prince: yea, Christ, and God, and Caesar, and all, and more then all; his Centre at Rome, his Circumference euery where and no where. Accordingly he giues, as if he had all things; he takes, scrapes, rakes, as if he had nothing. Wittily did a Sanctius, Brother of the King of Arragon, shew himselfe gratefull to his Holinesse for like bountie, whom when the Pope by Card

a Stap. de Mag. R. E. l. 2. c. 1. cui tit. R. E. potestas in orbis Principes eum creatos, and hauing named very many, hee concludes, Et igitur huius S. Sedis eximia potestas in Princes Chilianis sua ubi ritate Reges instituit, creare, inaugurare, &c. 2. Ex Reg. Greg. 7. ap. Stench. l. 2. cont. Vallan pro Dom. Const. Bodin. de Repub. l. 1. c. 9. vid. & Fort. Tort. p. 113. a Ep. Ebrissus ad pel. Apol. p. 2.

Ad An. 1245. k Matth. Paris. verè hortus noster deliciarum, est Anglia, verè iuteus inebriatus est, & ubi multa abundant, multa possunt extorqueri de multis.

l Idem A. 1245. m Vid. Resp. ad Apol. R. P. Epist. El. pag. 82. vid. & Tort. T. pag. 217.

n Constat ab Ad. Pont. datum fuisse Hib. Hen. 2. A. 1156. pag. 29.

o Hist. Con. Trent.

p Balaamis counsellor for Peor, his idolatrous Priests are more to be feared then his Bulls.

q G. Barret I. C. li. 3. c. 3. ad Lud. 13. Gal. R.

q Primus titulus ius est. socialis belli & c. tit. 2. deus profecto & Germanus est inuitatio ordinum regni & totius Cleri, 4. Archiep. 25. E. pif. & c. r Baron. 10. 11. A. 1171.

s Vid. Ep. El. ad Card. Bel. Apol. resp. pag. 86. t Lu. 16.

u Matth. Paris ad A. 1155.

x Onuph. in vita Bonifac. 3. Nonne Rex Anglorum noster est vasallus & ut plus dicam mancipium, said the Pope, angred with a Letter of Rob.

y Grosted. A. 1253. ap. Mat. Par. toruo aspicit & supe. bo & c. y Mat. Paris A. 1155.

z The very words before are B. Pet. in 16 denary de f. n. l. d. d. h. u. f. a. u. Sane omnes Insulas &c.

z Ex Reg. Greg. 7.

z Ex Reg. Greg. 7.

z Ex Reg. Greg. 7.

z Ex Reg. Greg. 7.

z Ex Reg. Greg. 7.

So that of Cardinall Bellarmine, Pasce Oves, and of Baronius, Occide & manduca, and before them, of our Countreyman Cardinall & Poole, for the Popes Temporall Power, Hac omnia adijciuntur vobis, Mat. 6. & Filij eorum qui te humiliaverunt curui ad te venient ut adorent vestigia pedum tuorum, Ef. 60. for Princes submitting their Scepters to the Pope; and the Divine Providence, in giuing some Temporall peculiar for S. Peters Patrimonie, In qua administranda exemplo suo Imperatores & Reges proprium eorum hoc est Regiam aitem & veram regendi populos rationem docerent. And yet how many of them liued in France, and neuer saw S. Peters Patrimonie? And well had it beene, if this Alexander had liued in this new World, or quite out of the World: yea, in the rest, their owne Historians shew no man more transported either by g Reg. Poli. de sum. P. c. 47.

- 10 faction or affection to their kindred, whom they seeke with publike losse to aduance: such examples they haue beene at home. And what good examples they haue beene abroad, appears in that <sup>h</sup> King, which denyed his owne and his progenitors Grants, pretending the example of the Pope his playing fast and loose with his Non obstante; and the Popes practise of dispensing with Oathes both of Princes and subiects, can testifie; yea, most Corruptions, which Histories obserue in secular Gouvernement, thence may deriue easie Originals. Hence did that Iustices complaint arise, Hec, hec, hos ut quid dies expectauimus? Ecce iam civilis Curia exemplo Ecclesiastica coinquinatur & a sulfureo fonte riuulus intoxicatur. The same Historian tels of Oathes that multoties iurauerat obseruare, idem Rex contraire non formidauit, credens pro munere absolui, which is now deuolued to the people, both prohibited and absolved from Oathes by the Pope,
- 20 now that Kings begin to discouer and to hate the Whore, and are not as hee then saith, PP. & Rex in grauamen Ecclesie confederati. And much lesse needs it, that the Pope should giue that which is out of the Church, and none of Christs Flocke: For what power haue the Keyes of the <sup>i</sup> Kingdome of Heauen to shut the Doores of Earthly, of meere Earthly Kingdomes? Or to shut out such as were neuer let into the Church? Yea, when Christ sayth, <sup>k</sup> Let him be as an Ethnike unto thee, expressing the vtmost extent of the Keyes, how can Ethnikes be included, who are not sicut, but mere & verè Ethnici, already? S. Paul sayth, <sup>l</sup> Quid mihi de ijs qui foris sunt indicare? Nonne de ijs qui intus sunt, vos indicatis? Nam eos qui foris sunt Deus indicabit. This is cited by <sup>m</sup> Victoria, a Spanish Diuine, to proue, that the Pope non habet dominium in Terris Infidelium quia non habet potestatem nisi intra Ecclesiam; adding, that Infidels are verè Domini, seeing the Apostle commands <sup>n</sup> Tribute to be payd them, and that the contrarie is merum commentum in adulationem & assentationem Pontificum: largely prouing these Propositions, That the Pope is not Lord of the World, That the Temporall Power depends not of him, That it is not subiect to his Temporall Power, and that he hath nothing to doe ordinarily to iudge of Princes Cases, Titles, Iuridictions, nor hath any Power meere Temporal; That the Temporall Power doth not at all depend of the Spirituall. And in his Relections of the <sup>o</sup> Indians he sayth, That it doth not appeare to him, that the Christian Faith hath so beene preached to them, that they are bound sub nouo peccato to beleue it, hauing had no probable perswasion, as Miracles and examples of Religious life, but the contrarie: yea, had the Faith beene neuer so probably propounded, and they reiected it, yet might they not therefore
- 40 be spoyled of their Goods, or pursued by Warre. And what right then had the Pope to propound that Method in his Bull, Vobis subicere & ad fidem Catholicam reducere? Is any thing more free, then to beleue? Else if <sup>p</sup> Ethnikes had beene to be compelled to enter into the Church (for it is otherwise with the Children of the Kingdome) hee would haue sent Captaines, Conquerors, Alexanders (as the Saracens did, and this Alexander imitates) not Fishermen, Tent-makers, Publicans, as Sheepe amongst Wolves, not Wolves amongst Sheepe. On whom did Dauid, or Moses, or any of the ancient Kings make Warre onely for Infidelitie? Vnde grauissimè peccaremus (sayth Cardinall <sup>q</sup> Caietan) si fidem Christi Iesu per hanc viam ampliari contenderemus; nec essemus legitimi Domini illorum, sed magna latrocinia committeremus, & teneremur ad restitutionem, utpote iniusti debellatores aut occupatores. Good men (sayth he) should be sent, by their Preaching and liuing to conuert them to God; and not such as shall oppresse, spoyle, scandalize, subiect, and make them twice more the Children of Hell, like the Pharises.

h Mat. Par. in H. 3. An. 1252. nonne dom. Papa multoties factum suum reuocat? Nonne opposito hoc repago? Non Obstante chartis. cassat pre-concessas? Sic & ego &c.

i Idem A. 1251. 1254. & 1256. &c. k Mat. 18.
l 1. Cor. 5. 12, 13.

m Fr. à Viñ. Relec. de Pot. Eccles. n Rom. 13.

o Relec. de Ind. n. 38.

p Caiet. ad sum. 22. q. 66. ar. 8. Domini quamuis Infidels legitimi Domini sunt, nec sunt propter infid. a Domino suorum privati, cum Dominum sit ex iure iustitiae & i. fidelitas ex Domino iure &c.

q Caiet. ubi sup.

And this may be the cause of all those Misorders which happened in the Indies: the most by a blind zeale, thinking they did God seruice in punishing the Idolatries, Man-eating, and Sodomies, and other Vices of the Ethnikes, with Inuasion and Warre, especially where Terror might bring them, or, they being slaine, others by their example, to admit the Gospell; that had not the pietie and pittie of some eye-witnesses excited the Royall Prouision of the Catholike Kings in this case (which ouer so wide Seas and spacious Lands they could not discern) euen Hell it selfe had beene loosed on Earth, vnder the pretext of Heauen, and the Prince of Darkenesse had effected his blackest and cruellest Designes, in habite of an Angell of Light. Tantum Religio poterat suadere malorum, may we say of this Religious irreligious Bull. Thus Nunho di <sup>r</sup> Gusman, a Spanish Commander, relates in an Epistle to the Emperour, his manner of inuading: first, after his Martiall Prologue, preaching to the Indians, God, the Pope, and the King of Spaine, Minister of God on Earth, whom all men in the World ought to obey;

r Ad. T. 1. 1. 1. 1.

f Part. Cas. of the Spanish Cruelties.
* See P. Pilg.
lib. 2. cap. 20.
Of Egypt, their Mnevis, Apis,
Bair, Onuphis,
etc. l. 6. c. 4.
t Cort. Narvaz.
ad Imp. car.
u Benzo l. 3. c. 3.
See the whole
Oration grounded on this Bull, the Pope thereby giving Terra incognitas, idq. vi co-
astum &c.
See Lop. Vaz,
I. Gomera, G. re.
de la Vega, &c.
x Inter arma silat Leges.
Non ex iure manu confectum,
sed magis ferro
Rem repetent.
I. Acosta de procuranda Indo-rum salute, l. 1.
c. 13, 14. l. 2. c. 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 13, 14,
15. l. 3. c. 3, 4, 5.
l. 4. c. 4, 5, &c.
He also shewes
how naturall Merchandise is, and how vniust it is to prohibite it:
producing the example of the Chinois; he might, of this Bull.
* In the last Chapter of my Pilgrimage.

the silly Indians for feare acknowledging themselves ready to worship the King, till his better instruction. He also perswades the Emperour not to giue libertie to the Christian Indians, and to allow nothing but necessities, that by much subiection they might be made good Christians. Hee quarrels those Quarrellers, that hold this Warre vniust, and seeke to disturbe it, being the most holy and meritorious Worke that can be done in the seruice of God, for which himselfe hoped the diminution of his sinnes. And if I should shew out of Casus, a Spanish Bishop in those parts, the executions of this Bull, you would say, that the Brazen Bull of Phalaris, the Monster-Bull of Minos, the fire-breathing Bull subdued by Hercules, the Iewes * Behemoth, and those of Egypt, were but Calues to this of Pope Alexander: Hinc illa lachryma. They had beene Heretikes, if they had not obeyed the Pope, Subiyciendo & ad fidem Catholicam re- 10
ducendo. All that wee haue talked of Kings all this while, see effected in * Mutezuma (no meane, though an Ethnike Prince) out of Cortez his owne Relations to the Emperour, and in Atabaliba or Atahualpa, the mightie Inga, related by * Benzo, the Dominican Vincentius de valle viridi preaching the Popes Gift, to which if he did not willingly yeeld, he should be forced; which that Heathen disclaymed as vniust, saying, That the Pope was foolish and impudent, to giue so liberally another mans goods. Whereupon the Frier cruelly cryed to the Spaniards, to execute that which was in that manner easie to effect, saying, agite Christiani, trucidate istos canes &c. What should I speake of Millions perishing without the Faith by this new Article of Faith, Subiycere & ad fidem Catholicam reducere? Of Shambles of Mans flesh, and other Cruelties? I delight not in such Tragædies, I onely shew the Choragus, the 20 Westerne Alexander his Bull, or Bucephalus, the very Cerberus which produced those Dogges which hunted and deuoured the Indians, and yet as Casus hath, were more milde then their Masters, Masters indeed of * immanitie and inhumanitie, but proceeding in this Schoole, and writing Comments and a world of Glosses on this Bull-Text with the blood of a world of men in that New World. How doth Acosta and others deplore these bloudie and therefore slipperie foundations of the Faith? That from these forced beginnings, Nihil pium & salutare nisi per vim agant? That they haue receiued but a shew of Christianitie, closely embracing their old Superstitions? As a Plant (sayth hee) growing crooked at first, must eyther be broken, or still suffered so to grow, Ita prorsus cum indorum natio bellici apparatus potius autoritate quam ger- 30 mana predicatione magna ex parte Christum acceperit &c. So amongst these Indians, as the feare of Warre, not true Preaching, made way to Christianitie, so doe they still retaine feare and a seruite condition, not freely translated to be the Children of God by Regeneration. For nothing is so contrarie to Faith, as is all force and violence. But of their Christianitie I haue spoken * elsewhere out of their owne Authors; I here shew the root of it, this Apostolike Bull. The Poets tell of Europa deflowred by Iupiter, hauing conueyed her thorow the Sea in forme of a Bull. The Roman Iupiter of the Vatican Capitoll, or S. Angelo Veionis, hath conueyed ouer this greater part of the World, this New World, America, to be both deflowred and deuoured by Catholike Souldiers, by his Catholike Bull, in faire shew of reducing to Faith, but first mentioning Fortis, and Subiection. That Bull by the Poets was exalted to a Constellation in Heauen: This Bull hauing made such hauocke on Earth, rather deserues Hell, except some Poets 40 which can make their Gods (as the Pope in Canonization, the Priest in Consecration) can deuise also to make new Antartike Heauens to place this Bull in: Our Artike is now too full of Constellations, to admit any such Monsters, lest hee should make terrible Tragedies there also, being since growne so huge, that he incompasseth the two Hemispheres with his hornie Hemi-circles.

And for his prohibition of all Christians else to attempt those parts for Merchandise or other cause; what is it, but with his two Hornes to push at, and out, both Nature and Grace? That in so large a Tract of the World it may neyther be lawfull to carrie Spirituall, nor recarrie Tem-porall Commodities, without leaue obtained, vnder paine of Excommunication? And is it not 50
Bulla, a bubble and froth, the babbling or babelling of Babel, That a Bishop should countermand Merchandise, and the Seruant of Gods Seruants should make himselfe a Lord of Heathen Lords, to giue the Crownes of Kings by Apostolicall Salutem & benedictionem? What more Apostat-ticall or Apotactticall? What could Alexanders Malediction haue done more, or worse? Is sub-iycere the way to bring to the Catholike Faith? Proh fidem istam Catholicam! Proh Deum atq; hominum fidem! Rara fides pietasq; viris qui castra sequuntur.

And yet one clause of Baptisme is more Bullish or Hellish then the rest (per sacri lauacri sus-ceptionem qua Mandatis Apostolicis obligati estis) That Christians, that Kings are obliged, by their very Baptisme obliged to the Apostolicall, that is, in their sense, the Popes Commandements. * Dimisus est Christus? Nunquid PAVLVS crucifixus est pro vobis, aut in nomine 60 PAVLI baptisati estis? said that glorious Apostle of the Gentiles: but this gentle glorying Apostle will needs in a new Catholike Faith be eyther crucified for vs with Christ, or make a fourth Person in the Trinitie, vnto whose Mandates alone wee are baptized. But Boniface had answered this, * Vnum caput, non duo capita quasi monstrum, Christus & ipsi Vicarius. This also fauours Alexander, which would needs be a God, the sonne of Iupiter, and was so by his Paralites

a 1. Co. 1. 13.

b Bon. 3. Extr. de maior. & ob.

Parasites acknowledged. And right so the Pope by his flatterers, who affirme, c Reges cum hac conditione admitti ad Ecclesiam ut Christo Sceptra subijciant, and consequently, to his Vicar the Pope. We poore men had thought, that in the Sacraments God had vouchsafed vs a great dignitie, that we are therein equall with Kings; that in one Spirit we had been all baptized into one Body, whether Iewes or Gentiles, whether bond or free; that c whosoever were baptized in Christ, had put on Christ, and that there was neither Iew nor Greeke, neither bond nor free, neither male nor female: omnes enim vos unum estis in Christo Iesu. But see how this horned Beast, with his Scepter-pushing Bull blesteth and makes vs more happy then baptized Kings: for we may enioy our Possessions, our Professions as more free, at least not impaired by Baptisme; but Kings are admitted into the Church, with subiection of their Persons and Crownes to the Pope; their subiects also may disclaime, not sweare, forswear Allegiance; yea, it shall be tolerable, nay lawfull, nay commendable, yea, and meritorious for Heauen, to kill the Kings of the Earth, which shall be immorigerous to his Holinesse. Protestants are generally beholden to his Catholike Keyes, which open Rome, the Catholike Mother Citie, to Strumpets, to Iewes, but locke out our Generation to the consuming flames: but Protestant, yea, Catholike Kings, are lesse in fauour then other Catholikes, and in condition like the Iewes: for as they must, in conuerting to Christianitie, renounce their former Wealth (as f Victor de Carben, a Christened Iew, complaynes) together with the World and the Deuill, embracing beggerie with their Christianitie, which makes so few Conuerts; so Kings (which euen amongst Heathens knew no Superior but God) must in their Baptisme make a tacite renuntiation of their Kingdomes, when their holy Lord the Pope (in ordine ad Deum) shall so adiudge. And if he obey not, he loseth his Baptisme, becomes now an Heretike, and his subiects, by vertue of that his Baptisme also, which obliged him to the Pope, are at the Popes Bulls first lowing to depose him. Iam sumus ergo pares, Kings and Iewes may say: it is better (in secular respects) not to professe Christ, not to be baptized. The reason out of Tortus his new Kabala (as that learned & Bishop calls it) ortus cuius duplex, in our naturall birth we are borne subiects to our Prince, in our supernaturall (by Baptismall Regeneration) congenitum aliud & tacitum iuramentum ad obediendum Principi spirituali, Christi Vicario, Papa, we are therein sworne forsooth to the Pope. It is no maruell that this Bull hath begotten such brutish Christians in America, as the h Iesuites complayne; I hope in the East they teach otherwise.

That the Pope renounceth his Baptismall Name, I neuer knew the reason before, nor doe I now maruell; for then our Roderigo Borgia was sworne in Baptisme to Christ, and tacitely to the Pope: but now he is made Pope himselfe, a Name in opposition to all obedience, free from both, i δ ἀντιθετός, exlex ille; no more Roderigo the Christian, subiect (it is a terme of all others most odious to Popes) to Christ and the Pope, but Alexander the Great, the very Pope, emulous to Christ; his Vicar, which doth and receiueth all things, as one and the same Head with Christ (giuing a World, receiuing Kings in Baptisme, as here) and therefore very Antichrist, both as ἀντιχριστός, opposing, and as ἐξουσιόλυτος in the Name of Christs Vicar, with his two Hornes like the Lambe, extolling himselfe \ above all that is called God, or that is worshipped*, ita ut in Templo Dei sedeat ostendens se tanquam sit Deus. And so I leaue him, and his Apis, his Egyptian Babylonicall Bull: In bayting whereof, if I haue playd the fierce English Mastiffe, no man that hath read the storie of the Spanish Dogges in the West Indies (which came out of this Kennell) can be iustly offended. And (besides that the place where I writ this, hath beene a place of argument to moue me to enter these Lists) the argument of this great Worke, Navigations, English Indian Navigations exacted some Apologie, to shrowd themselves from this Bulls pushing and lowd bellowing Thunders, Nulli omnino hominum liceat hanc Paginam infringere, vel ei ausu temerario contraire: si quis autem hoc attentare presumpserit, indignationem Omnipotentis DEI ac beatorum PETRI & PAULI Apostolorum eius se noverit incursurum. The Curse that is causelesse, shall not come: God will doe good to Dauid for Shimeis cursing.

The Catholike Princes of those dayes did not beleue him, nor haue they since. The Portugals (as you shall presently heare) regarded it not; and not the Bull, but other compromise, stayed them from open Hostilitie. The peaceable and wise King of England, Henry the seventh, sent presently after, Cabota to discover: The French, in their France Antaretike, and new France, and other East and West Navigations, haue contradicted. These beleueed not, that the Sunne shined onely in one Kingdome, whatsoever Combustions this portentuous Comet diffused. And long, long may his Maiestie of Great Brittain spread his long and iust Armes to the furthest East and remotest West, in the gainefull Traffiques, in the painefull Discoueries, in the Glorious and Christian Plantations of his Subiects (maugre such Bug-beare, Bull-beare bellowings) Salomon and Hiram, Israelites and Tyrians, all Arts and Religions concurring into one Art of Arts, the Truth of Religion, and aduancing of the Faith, together with the glory of his Name, the splendour of his State, the loue of his People, the hopes of his Royall Posteritie to the last of Ages. Amen. Amen.

c Bellar. in his
Mat. Tort. vid.
Torturam T.

pag. 32.
d 1. Cor. 12. 13.
c Gal. 3. 27. 28.

f Viss. de carb.
l. 1. c. 4. 5.

g Tort. Tert.
pag. 201.

h Acofl. se. i. in
lib. de proc. ind.
fil.

i 2. Th. 2. vid.
Down. de Antich. l. 5. c. 6.

k 2. Th. 2. vid.
Down l. 4. c. 2.

Ch. col.

§. VII.

Of the Portugals discontent and compromise with the Spaniard, and their first Discoverie of the East Indies.

HHe King of Portugall was much discontent, and sent his Embassadour to the King and Queene, who also sent vnto him in Embassage Garcia de Herera; and after that, seeing that the Portugall intended by force to defend his supposed Right to the Ocean, and by a strong Fleet to dispossesse the Castilians of their late Discoverie, sent Don Pedro de Ayala, and Lopez de Caruaial; the substance of whose Embassage, was to congratulate with King Iohn his desire of Peace to be conserued betwixt them, which was also the care of their Catholike Maiesties: And as for that difference touching Discoveries, which the King by Apostolicall Grant and by Possession and Prescription challenged, they would yeeld vnto any honest course, which might maintaine brotherly loue and amitie; themselues being perswaded, that their late Discoverie no way concerned him, nor disturbed their mutuall League, as not neere Guinea, or any of the Portugall Discoveries: That they were content to name fit persons, by way of Iustice to determine the Controuersie, or to put it to his Holinesse, to be heard in the Court at Rome. But secretly they gaue order, that the Businesse should at least be protracted, and continued on foot, till they might heare how their second Fleet succeeded: which the Embassadors performed cunningly, but not vnperceiued of King Iohn; who sayd, that Embassage of the Castilians had neyther Head nor Feet: smartly insinuating the lame Leg of the one, and the light and vain-glorious Braine of the other Embassador. The Portugall Embassadour had made ouerture of all the North Discoveries thorow the World, to belong to Castile, from the Canaries, and thence Southward to the Portugall. But this was not accepted. Afterwards, three Counsellors of State, on the behalfe of each Kingdome, were employed in this Discoverie of the right and iust Titles and Bounds of the Discoverers: which on the seuenth of Iune, 1493. agreed, That the Line of Partition, contained in the Bull of the Pope, should be extended 270. Leagues further to the West, all from thence Westward to remayne to the Castilian, and Eastward to the Portugall Nauigation and Conquest: That there should be free sayling on both parts, but neyther should send to trade without these Limits. This was put in Writing, and confirmed on the second of Iuly by the Castilian, on the seuen and twentieth of February by the Portugall, Kings; and Cosmographers also employed, which should designe the said Limitation. And now each partie intended to prosecute new Discoveries, King Iohn preparing a Fleet for search beyond the Cape of Good Hope, on the Coast of Africa, whereof Conilian had given him intelligence. But amidst these preparations, God calls him to the fatall and finall peregrination of all Flesh.

Bar. in quo sup.
Muff. hist. ind. l. 1.
Herera, Dec. 1.
l. 2. c. 8, 9, 10.

The Popes authoritie infringed by a latter accord.

Emanuel King of Portugall.
\ Bar. Dec. 1. l. 4.* c. 1.

Osor. de reb.
Bras. l. 1.
Bay of Saint Helena.

The folly of a cowardly fellow.

Mutine the fore-runner of greatest Exploits.

Don Emanuel succeeded him in that Crowne the twentieth of October, 1495. And the yeere 1497. employed Vasco di Gama with three * Ships, one Victualler with 160. men. This Voyage had beene the rather thus long deferred, because the Portugals in the former Discoverie hauing met with such stormes and tempests neere the Cape which therefore they called Tormentoso, a new Conceit possessed most of the Mariners, as had done before touching Cape Bogiadore, that there was no sayling any further. But Gama feared no such phantasies, and receiuing Conilians Map and Instruction, with Letters to the Indian Kings, hoysed sayle on the ninth of Iuly (a season vnfitting, as Experience after shewed) and passing by the Ile of Saint Iames, directed his course Eastwards. The first Land he saw, was that which he tearmed the Bay of S. Helena (for this was their Customes, to name Lands at their first discoverie, of that Saint on whose day they discovered the same) where, after three moneths ill weather, they went on Land. They tooke some Negros of curled haire, whose Language none of theirs could vnderstand; which receiuing Glasse-Beads, and Bells, with other trifling kindneses, procured their Countreymens familiaritie and traffique by signes for such Victuals as they had. But one Portugall desiring to goe with them to their houses, not liking their diet, and returning with much companie, when he came in sight of his owne, more for feare then any iust cause, cryed out for their helpe. This caused the Portugals to come in to succour, and the Negros to flye, which with their Poles sharpened at the end with Hornes, as with sharpe Darts, wounded the Christians, and amongst many others, Gama himselfe. By this fooles occasion they hastened thence, towards the Cape of Good Hope, and encountred such Winterly stormes in the way (the time of the yeere being then vnseasonable) that they were forced to strike sayle, and commit themselues to the Windes boysterous tuition; and the companie importuned Gama not to permit them to so terrible a death, but to hast his returne. Which when he constantly refused, they conspired his death: but by his brother Pauls relation fore-warned, he fore-armed himselfe with vigilant circumspection, and laying the Masters in the Bolts, became Master himselfe.

On the twentieth of Nouember hee doubled the Cape, and sayled continually neere the Land, which they saw full of Cattell, and People like those at S. Helena, naked, inclosing their priuities privities in a receptacle of Wood, uttering their speech out of the Throat, as it were sobbing. Having refreshed themselves not farre from the Cape, they proceeded, and the eight of December a storme draue them out of sight of Land, whereto with faire Weather they presently returned: and hauing passed two hundred and thirtie miles from their last Watering place, seeing a pleasant Countrey, and the Sea deepe hard by the shore, and much people, on the tenth of Ianuarie he sent one on shore with a Present, who was kindly vsed, and with their Countrey Presents returned. Here Gama set two condemned persons on shore (ten of which he had with him, hauing pardon of their liues, with condition to be set on shore where the Gouvernour saw meet) there to obserue the Countrey and People. And proceeding, he came to a goodly Countrey, where the people coloured as the former, were more bold and familiar; and one with ill Arabike signified, that in a Countrey not farre thence, Ships like theirs vsed to come: whence he termed that the Riuer of good signes, hoping thence to find out India quickly; erecting also a Stone-Crosse, and naming the Countrey S. Raphael, leauing there likewise two other condemned persons.

Benefit of condemned persons.

After refreshing his sicke companie, he departed, and on the first of March they espyed seuen small Sayles, which made toward the Admirall, and comming neere, with a lowd crie saluted them in Arabike, and made them much Musike. The men had Garments of Silke, with Linnen Turbants wrought with Gold, and Falchions girded to their sides. They came aboard, were well entertained, and tell, that the name of the Iland was Mozambique, the people Ethnike, but a great part inhabited by Mores or Mahumetans. For some knowledge of Diuine Scripture hath in vsuall appellation caused a distinction of these from others which haue no knowledge of God but meere naturall, whom therefore Authors vsuallly call Idolaters, or Gentiles and Ethnikes. It was subiect to the King of Quiloa, and thence was ordinarie Trade into Arabia, India, and other parts of the World. They learned, that they had passed Zophala, where is much Gold.

Mozambique
discouer. d.

* The Compas, and Sea-Cards and Quadrants in vse with Mores in the Indian Seas, before the Por-tugals discouered them.

It is remarkable, that these Mores vsed both * Compasse, and Sea-Cards or Plats; Quadrants also, wherewith they obserued the height of places, the Sunnes declinations and distance from the Line; and were furnished with diuers Maritime Mysteries, not much short of the Portugalls. They mistooke the Christians for Mahumetans of Barbary, and therefore vsed them so kindly. Zacoeia, the Gouvernour of the place, to whom they had sent Presents, visited them in great pompe, and was feasted on shipboord (the sicke being remoued out of sight, and the rest well armed, for feare of Trecherie) neyther did their superstition forbid them to drinke Wine, if it were not ignorance rather of that Liquor. He inquired of them (not doubting of their Mahumetisme) whether they were * Mores or Turkes (vsuallly all Mahumetans of Africa, Arabia, and the Indian Coasts are called Mores, from which name, the Greatnesse of the Turke, Tartars, Persian, and Mogull, with I know not what differences of Sect, haue in ordinary appellation exempted them) he asked also of their Weapons and Mahumetan Bookes. Gama answered, That they came out of the remotest West; that they vsed such Armour as he saw, with such Ordinance able to ruine Castles; and for his Bookes, he would shew them when he had finished his Iourney: for hee was now in his way to India, and desired his helpe for Pilots to Calicut. This Zacoeia promised; and the next day brought him two, with whom hee agreed how much Gold he should giue to conduct him thither. But in the midst of all this kindnesse it being perceiued that they were Christians, they deuised all mischiefe against them, which was by one of those Pilots reuealed to Gama. They set vpon the Christians also as they were filling Water.

* Mores, who are vsuallly called: I thinke that they were first so called, because out of Mauritania,
they passed first into Spain: and therefore all of that Religion, which the Spanish Nation found in their Discoueries of Africa and India, they called Mores. But the other Nations Mahumetan, of which, the knowledge hath come to vs ouer land, & not by the Castilian or Portugall, retayne their own titles,
as Turkes, &c.

His question is,
whether they came out of Barbary, which before called Mauritania,
gaue them this name of Mores, or out of Turkie?

a Quiloa.

b Mombaza.

c Morish tre-cherie.

d Melinde.

e Christians of India.

Hereupon Gama with his three ships (for the fourth was set on fire before) went to * Quiloa, but eyther by necessitie, or their Pilots trecherie, were hindered from shore: This Pilot perswaded them to goe to <sup>b</sup> Mombaza, dissembling, that a great part of that Citie were Christians, and that it was a fit place to refresh his sicke men, many of his companie being dead, and the rest feeble. The Land is there fertile, the Ayre wholesome, the People hee found trecherous. For the King sent a ship with a hundred men, armed <sup>c</sup> Turk-fashion, which would all haue entred; but Gama onely suffered foure of the principall, who related their Kings desire of his acquaintance, and proffered all kindnesse, if hee would bring his ships neerer the Citie. The King also by two condemned persons whom he put on shore, sent him Spices, and so wrought, that Gama intended to fulfill his mind: but in the way fearing a shelve, suddenly commanded to cast anchor. Whereupon his More-Pilots, by selfe-guiltinesse accused, leaped into the Sea, suspecting that their trecherie was reuealed, hauing before couenanted with the King of Mombaza, to set the ships eyther on ground, or in easie possibilitie of taking. The trecherous Pilots escaped in Boats: and in the Night the King sent others closely to cut their Cables, which by vigilant care they auoided.

They departed thence for <sup>d</sup> Melinde, and there arriued on Easter day. The Houses he found of hewen Stone, stately and vsfully built, the Countrey fruitfull, the People Idolaters, blacke, with curled haire, from the Nauell vpwards naked, thence clothed with Silkes to the middle Legge. Here he found <sup>e</sup> Christians of India, which much reioyced at the sight of the Portugals, and admonished them of many things fitting to their Voyage. Hee was kindly vsed of the Prince (the King himselfe was decrepit) who gaue him a Matter, an Indian for his Nauigation. Hence they departed the two and twentieth of Aprill, and hauing passed the Line, with ioy re- couered sight of the Starres, which so long they had not seene.

§. VIII.

Of GAMA'S Acts at Calicut, and his returne.

He nineteenth of May they had sight of Land, being the high Mountaines neere to Calicut, and came within two miles of the Citie the same day. He gaue thanks to God, and set one of his condemned persons on shore, who was almost oppressed with multitudes pressing to see a man of so vncouth habite, till at last two Merchants of Tunis easily knew him to be a Spaniard: and Monzaida, one of them, asked him in Spanish of what parts of Spaine he was; and being answered, of Portugall, invited him home: and hauing made him eat and drinke, went on boord with him to Gama, and profered him all kinde- nesse; telling him, that the King of Calecut (whose Customes were his chiefe Reuenues) would be glad of their comming. To him Gama sent two of his companie with Monzaida, which declared to him, that their King moued by his worthy fame, had sent one of his Cap- taines thither, to establish mutuall loue and amitie. The King gladly heard them, and willed them to bring their Fleet to Pandarane (where hee then was) because the road of Calecut was dangerous in that season of the yeere, and sent a Pilot to effect it. Soone after, the King sent an Officer or Magistrate, called Catual, honourably to conduct Gama vnto him: who ap- pointing Paul Gama his brother ouer the Fleet, bad him, if ought amisse happened to him, that hee should returne home, without further care of him. For neyther could hee effect his Kings desires otherwise, nor they resist that Kings power to relieue him.

Nairos are the Guard and Souldiours. Images at the first sight, &c.

* How neere a consanguini- tie is in all kinds of Idolatry? How easie a passage from ye worship ye know not what, to the worship of the Deuill himselfe? Of these Deuori- ons, see my Pilgrimage, l. 5. The like hap- pened to the Iupon Christi- ans, which see- ing the Picture of Venus and Adonis in Cap- taine Saris his Ship, worship- ped the same, mistaking it for the Picture of the Virgin, &c.

They were no sooner landed, then a Litter receiued each of them (many Nairos attending on foot) and after that another, and were brought into a sumptuous Temple, esteemed of great sanctitie, which Gama supposed by the structure, and other signes, and because he had heard of many Christians in those parts, to be Christian. At the Temple doore foure men met them naked to the nauill, thence clothed with silke to the knees, hauing three threds from the right shoulder crossed to the left side (the habit of Bramenes) which sprinkled holy water on them, and gaue them sweet poulders. The walls of the Temples had many Images painted on them. In the midst was a round high Chappell, with a brazen narrow doore, hauing many steps to it, and within, an Image which the darkenesse would not suffer them to discern, neyther might any enter but the Priests, who approaching to the Image with their finger pointing to it, twice called * Maria, whereat the Catual and his companie falling flat on the Earth, presently arose and sayd their prayers. The Portugals thinking it to be some Seruice of the Blessed Virgin, worshipped her after their wonted manner. Thence they passed to another Temple of like magnificence, and after that, to the Kings Palace, Trumpets and Pipes sounding all the while: and the people so thronged, that had not the Nairos made way with their Swords, they could not haue passed. At the Gate they were met by certaine Nobles, called Caimaes, and approaching to the roome where the King was, an aged man clothed in silke from the shoul- ders to the ankles, comming forth, embraced Gama. This was the chiefe of the Bramenes. The others being first permitted entrance, he last of all holding Gama by the hand, followed. It was a large Hall, with many Benches artificially wrought one aboue another, in forme of a Theatre. The Floore was couered with Silke, the Walls hanged with Curtaines of Silke, embroydered with Gold. The King lay in a rich Bed, with a Tyre on his head set with Stones and wrought with Gold, clothed with Silke, hauing many golden Claspes on the Brest. On his Eares hung Jewels of great value: his Toes and Fingers, with Rings and Gemmes made a glorious splendour: His personage was comely, tall, maiestically. Gama saluted him as the vse here is to the King, and was then placed in a Seat next him; the other Portugals also sat downe. Water was brought to wash and coole their hands, and diuers Fruits to refresh them. After this, he questioned Gama of his Embassage: who answered, that it was not the Portu- gall custome to declare Embassages in promiscuous and publike Assemblies, but to communicate the same onely with the King and his Councell, or Committees. Hereupon the King remooueth into a fairer Roome, and there heard Gama relating the worth of his Master King Ema- nuel; who in a magnanimous spirit, hauing heard of the renowned greatnesse of the King of Calicut, and of the rarities of India, had in desire of league and friendship, sent him thither, to begin it in his Name, whence might both Honor also and Profit arise to both parts; and signi- fied, that he had Letters of Credence vnto him. The King courteously receiued his words, and promised to acknowledge the King of Portugall as his Brother: giuing order to the Catual to conduct him to the House appointed for his Lodging. The Citie was large, the Houses not being continued, but with Orchards and Gardens distinguished, meanly built, the Law so providing, onely the Kings House of Stone. This King at that time was chiefe of all the Princes adioyning both in wealth and power. Of the L.

After three dayes, Gama conducted by the Catual, deliuered the King his Letter, and withall a Present, which the King seemed to contemne, but was excused by the vncertaintie of the Nauigation: neyther was any Present so good, as the friendship of such a Prince; from whom also if he expected profit, it should be effected by ships of Merchandize yerely trading thither. He desired, that his Kings Letters might not be interpreted by Saracens, forasmuch as he perceived by Monzaida, that they sought him a mischief. Monzaida interpreted the Letter, and the King admonished him to be vigilant against Saracenicall fraudes: for which hee thanked him, and departed. These Mores consulted their ruine, and bribed the Courtiers to that end, traducing Gama also for a Pyrate and a Spie in shew of a Merchant, a sparke (if not timely quenched) likely soone to bring that whole State in combustion. This they did partly in hatred of the Christian Name, and partly in feare of decaying their Trade, communicated thus to Portugalls. The King wearied with their importunities, fearing to lose their Customes, and feared by the examples of the Mores and Negros in Africa, with some exploits in the way, whose beggerie also he saw in their Kings contemptible Present, and their poore Merchandize, as if he had sent to some wilde Negro Prince; threatned with their departure to some other Prince, and to remove their Staple thither with his manifest losse, perhaps their owne gayne; yeelded to them, and sent the Catual to perswade Gama, with promise of all kindnesse, if hee would bring his ships neerer, and for securitie deliuer vp his sayles. But he writ to his brother, That if he saw him long detayned, to set sayle homewards: and after much contention, agrees to send on shore his Merchandize, with men to sell them, whereupon he is dismissed to his ship. He complayned to the King of the Catual, who gaue him faire promises, but caused his Merchandize to be carryed to Calicut, where he said was better sale. Malice of Mores.

Gama was content, and euery day sent two or three together, to obserue the Citie, which yet receiued no offence. He desired of the King to leaue a Factor there: whereto the King making angry answer, made no reply, which caused further anger, and two of his men on thore to be committed to custodie, with their Wares. Which when he could not re-obtaine by intreatie, hee set vpon the next ship which came thither, and tooke thence six principall men, and then put off further into the Sea. The King sent to him, saying, hee wondered much hee would apprehend his seruants, seeing hee detayned the two Portugals only, till hee had written to King Emanuel, whom also the next day hee sent with Letters: but withheld the Wares for their Factor, if hee would send any, to dispose thereof. But Gama sayd hee would now leaue none, and would keepe the men till hee had his goods. The day after, Monzaida came to them, and told them, that hee had beene in danger of his life for their sakes, which hauing very hardly escaped, hee prayed to carry him with them to Portugall; which they did, and there hee became Christian. The King sent his Wares in seuen Boats; but Gama refused, and sayd hee would carry those Malabars into Portugall, to testifie how iniuriouly the King of Calicut had vsed him: and presently discharging his Ordenance, chased them away. 40 The King was enraged, but his Nauie was at that season vnrigged, and in harbour. Yet he sent out threescore Merchants against them, which were by sudden tempest disperied.

Gama from the next Port where hee could arriue, sent a Letter with good words to the King, by one of his Captiues seruants. There hee was assaulted by Timoia, a Pyrat, with eight ships, whereof hee tooke one well furnished, the rest fled. Hee went to Anchedita, to amend his ships, and there was saluted by a seruant of Zabaius, Lord of Goa, an Italian, who in the name of his Master offered him all kindnesse, if hee would goe thither. This man professed himselfe an Italian, captiued by Pyrates, and so brought to serue a Mahumetan in these parts. Gama perceiuing him wittie, but curious and busie, suspected and apprehended him, who being tortured, confessed himselfe a Tartarian Iew, sent by Zabaius for a Spie, whom he carryed with him into Portugall, where hee was baptized, and proued seruiceable in many things to the King. Timoia a Pyrate. Anchedita. Goa, and their necherie.

Thence hee now hasted his departure, and the time being vnseasonable, came slowly to Magadoxo, on the African shore: and because they were Mahumetans, funke and spoyled their ships, and ruined a great part of their Walls. At Melinde hee was kindly entertained, and his men well refreshed: and within fve dayes, for feare of Winter at the Cape, set sayle, with an Embassadour from Melinde to Portugall. Hee burnt, as vnfit for the Voyage, the ship of Paul Gama, hauing need of the Mariners to supply the other two. Magadoxo. Melinde.

On the seuen and twentieth of February hee came to an Island called Zanzibar, foure and twentie miles from the Continent, where hee was well entertayned and refreshed of the Prince, though a More. Hee refreshed himselfe againe at Saint Blases watering, and on the fve and twentieth of Aprill doubled the Cape. Thence to Saint Iago, where by tempest they were parted; Celius the other Captaine next way to Lisbone, Gama to the Tercera, where his brother Paul died; and soone after, to Lisbone, in the yeere 1499. Zanzibar. Watering of S. Blas.

where Calus had related all to the King before. Of an hundred fortie eight, or as others report, an hundred and threescore, there returned onely five and fiftie, and those very feeble.

§. IX.

The second Fleet sent to the East Indies: Their discoverie of Brasill, and other Acts.

King Emmanuel set forth a second Fleet of thirteene ships, well furnished, with fiftene hundred souldiors and munition, vnder Peter Alvarez Capralis, whom he commanded to hold peace and confirme amitie, if it might be, with the King of Calicut, and if it were possible, to get leaue of him to build a Fort neere the Citie, where they might be secure from Saracenicall Hostilitie. Hee sent also five Franciscans for holy Offices, both to the Portugals, and if meanes were offered, for conuersion of the Infidels. Hee departed from Lisbon the eight of March, in the secular yeere: and holding his course to S. Iago, there met with a storme which scattered the Fleet, and forced one ship to returne home. 10

1500. The rest of the Fleet hauing two dayes after the Tempest stayed in vaine for it, let sayle Westward, and on the three and twentieth of Aprill had sight of Land, with no lesse maruell 20

Land of Brasil first discovered then ioy. Capralis commanded the Master to goe neere, and take view of the shore, which returned newes of a fertile and well watered Soyle, the Natiues naked, with long hayre, and Bowes and Arrowes. But that night a storme tooke them, which much tormented them, till Puerto Seguro at last he light into a safe Harbour, which thereupon he called Puerto Seguro. They tooke two Fishermen, which by no signes could or would vnderstand them, whom with Bells, Bracelets, and Glasses they restored on shore; which brought the rest with store of Meale and Fruits for like Traffique. Hee named this Land of the holy Crosse, since of store of that Wood, called Brasill; and hauing erected a Stone Pillar, sent one of his ships backe to Portugall with that newes. Hee had Masse and a Sermon on shore, to the great astonishment of the Sauages.

Difficulties in all great Attempts. On the fift of May hee departed, and on the three and twentieth a sudden violent storme 30 sunke foure of their ships, not one man escaping; and soone after, the remayning seuen with another tempest were leuered: and on the five and twentieth of Iuly six of them held their course together, one being separated, which pierced into the Arabian Gulfe, or Red Sea; and thence returned home with onely six men, the rest perishing by famine and diseases. The other six hauing doubled the Cape of good Hope, found Land pleasant and fertile, but the people would not trade with them, then destitute of prouision. At last they espyed two ships at anchor, which hauing sight of the Portugals, fled, but were pursued and taken: but learning that they belonged to Forteima, a Prince in amitie with the King of Melinde, he let them passe with great store of Gold which they had brought from Zofala, with other rich commodities. At Mozambique he watered without impediment, and bought Victuals, and hired a Pilot to Quiloa. 40

Zofala. The King of Quiloa's Dominion extended nine hundred miles in length, his subjects being some blacke, some coloured, speake Arabike, besides other Languages, Merchants of diuers Countries trading amongst them. It is separate from Land with a narrow Sea, foure hundred miles from Mozambique, full of Springs, Trees, Cattell wilde and tame, rich in Soyle and Fishing. The Citie great and populous, with magnificent Houses, with store of furniture: Their ships, for want of Pitch, trimmed with a bastard Frankincense. Capralis sent to Abraham the King, who kindly entertayned the Messengers, and promised next day to come aboard: which hee did in Barges gallantly decked, his companie attyred in Gold, Purple, or Silke, with Swords and Daggers, hauing in the Hilts gemmes of great splendour; the Ayre filled with Trumpets and Pipes, confused with the Trumpets and Ordinance of the Portugals, who in 50 their best attyre went into their Boats to meet him. The King heard his Letters and Embassage with ioy, and promised to hold his Master for his brother, and the next day was designed for confirmation of the League. The Mores with wily arts interuert this amitie, vpbrayding to the King his simplicitie, that would giue such credit to Pyrats.

Mores trecherie. Capralis hearing this, holdeth on his way to Melinde, where with incredible gladnesse hee was welcommed, and the Embassador now returned to his Master with the King of Portugals Presents, namely, a faire Horse sumptuously trapped, with other gifts. Here Capralis would not stay, but left two exiles or condemned persons there, to enquire if any way were open to Prester Iohn, and to learne the Customes of the Countrey. On the two and twentieth of Melinde. August he came to Anchedia, and there a while refreshed his companie; which hauing done, 60

Anchediua. he sayled to Calicut. The King sent two Nairos with a Guzarate Merchant to salute Capralis, who sent with them backe his Christened Iew, and foure of those Nairos, or Courtiers, which Gama had taken the yeere before. (two hee detayned as Pledges) with Iohn Sa'a a Portugall, all in Portugall habite, whereat the King reioyced. In a Palace neere the shore, the King entertayned tertaind Capralis, who had left Sancius Thoaxe with command of the Fleet, and after much complement, promised him more then he asked: Gave them free libertie of Trade, and Houses fitting thereto, the Patent or Charter being a Table of Gold, with Letters engraved, for perpetuall memorie. He gaue them leaue to erect the Banner of King Emanuel on their Houle top, as a Monument of his loue to their Master. Hearing of a strong and well manned ship coming from Cochin to Cambaia, with a mightie and warly Elephant therein, he sent to entreat Capralis to take it, whereto he employed one of his smallest Vessels: whereat the King marvelled, hauing before set certaine Saracens or Mores of purpose to obserue their behavior in that Enterprise, especially seeing the great ship chased to Cananor, about fortie miles North from Cananor.

10 Calicut, into which they compelled her the next day as Captiue to returne.

This did but kindle the enuy of the Mores, who to their wonted Arts added the fore-stalling the Market, and giuing greater prices: so, that whereas they had beene promised lading in twentie dayes, they had expected three moneths, when meane time the Saracenicall ships were laden and gone, contrarie to their late League, which concluded them the first to be serued. He sent notice to the King, who seemed to be offended with the Mores, giuing them leaue to lade themselves out of their ships, paying them their money layd out. Capralis fearing to execute this, by Correa the Cape Merchant was importuned; and one ship now setting sayle, was brought backe by them into the Hauen, whereupon grew great broyles, the King seeming contented they should try it out betwixt them. They therefore with a companie of Nairos,

Warre began twixt Mores and Portugals.

20 on the seuenteenth of December rush into the Portugall House, which Correa by a signe erected signifieth to the Fleet. He had with him seuentie men against foure thousand, so that he with fiftie others were slaine: the rest were by the assistance of their fellows in Boats conueyed aboard. Capralis then sick of a Quartane, and more of this disaster, perceiuing the King concious (a Fautor, if not Author) of this designe, assayed the next day ten great ships of the Mores, and slew six hundred of them, distributed the rest as slaues in their ships, and laded themselves with the goods, being forced for want of prouision to kill three Elephants, and salt them for food. Which done, hee set the ships on fire, and that in the night, for greater terror. The morrow next he assaulted the Towne with Ordenance from his ships, and slew many, one of which a Courtier, at the Kings feet.

30 After this, Capralis went to Cochin, a hundred and seuentie miles Southward, being a sure Hauen. The King was then poore, and tributarie to Calicut. To him he sent an Indian Iogue, a begging Frier of that Bramene Religion, which by the Portugall Friars had beene conuerted and baptized by the Name of Michael. The King promised all that they requested, and entertained them in a House fit for Trade. The Kings of Cananor and Coulam sent thither to them offer of League and Traffique. But Capralis fixed here his Staple: where two Christians of Cranganor, twentie miles distant, desired and obtayned of him to carry them into Portugall, that they might haue a sight of Rome and Ierusalem.

Cochin.

Coulam.

Staple erected at Cochin.

Not long after, hee had newes of the King of Calicuts Fleet, of twentie great ships, and many small, with fiftene hundred men therein, sent to be reuenged of the Portugals, which 40 he went forth to assaile, but was scant of Winde which they had, and willingly wanted, for feare of the Ordenance. So leauing two Factors at Cochin, and hauing taken in the rest of his freight at Cananor, he departed the sixteenth of Ianuary, and neere to Melinde tooke a ship, which perceiuing it belonged to a More of Cambaia, hee dismissed, professing no quarrell in India, but to Calicut alone, and the Mores of Mecca. One of their ships was here wracked, the remainders whereof he burned, to preuent the enemies spoyle. He employed one of his ships in the search of Zophala, and returned with the rest to Lisbone, where he arriued the last of Iuly, and was welcommed of the King, who had before sent three other ships on the same Voyage. And in the yeere following, 1502. hee sent Vascul Gama againe with ten ships, and Soderius with another Fleet, giuing him commission to make himselfe * Lord of the Sea, and to doe his

The third, and fourth, and fift Voyages to India.* Commission to make themselves LL. of the Sea.

50 ytmost against the Mores. This consisted of fiftene ships. Fiue others he sent vnder Stephen Gama, and so proceeded in his fortunes, that in a few yeeres he made himselfe Lord of the Indian Trade and Nauigation, and subdued the Kingdomes of Ormus, Goa, and Malacca, with other parts of the East, to the Portugall Scepter, to the great enriching of that State, and the Indian partakers; whereof Cochin hath from a poore citate arisen to greatnesse, and Calicut beene eclipsed.

But as those Spanish Westerne Discoveries and Acts, so these Easterne of the Portugals I leaue to their owne Authors: such as for the former, are P. Martyr, Cieça, Viega, Onedo, Herera, Gomara, Benzo, and the rest; and for the later, Barrins, Orosius, Maffaus, Castaneda, and others. I intend in this place onely to shew the beginning of Trade, and Naui-60 gation in both parts: and the occasion hence arising, of the first sayling round about the Globe.

d. X.

ALBUQUERQUES Exploits, and the first knowledge of the Molucca's.

Molucca's.

E haue heard of the Quarrell twixt Siuill and Lisbon, or the Castilian and Portugall compounded, each sharing a moitie of the World. Some question grew of the Molucca's, after the discouerie of them by the Portugals, whether they appertayned to the Castilian or Lusitanian share. It is to be considered, that ten yeeres after Gama's discouerie, and ill vsage at Calecut, the Portugalls sought all this time reuenge, and in great part effected it, notwithstanding the Indian Potentates, the Egyptian Sultans assistance (as long after the Turkes succeeding in that State and Quarrell) maintaining their Trade, and propagating their Sea and Land-Soueraigntie in those parts, although with some vicissitude of fortune, and with losse euen this Summer of some of their principall Commanders: Almeida the late Viceroy basely perishing neere the Cape of Good Hope, by the hands of wilde Negros; Cotinus, whiles hee enuyed any partner in the glory of taking the Kings Palace at Calecut, whiles Albuquerque set the Citie on fire, and permitting his souldiors to ouer-hastie pillage, losing his late-gotten purchase, and himselfe; and Albuquerque himselfe carryed away neere dead, with diuers wounds.

Maff. l. 4.
Malacca.
Cape Cory.
G. of Bengala.
Samotra.

Chryse, or Aurea Chersonesus.

Whiles these things were done at Calecut, Didacus Lupius Sequeria was sent out of Portugall, to begin amitie with Malacca: who was the first that hauing passed the Promontorie Cory, and sayling thorow the Bengalan or Gangetike Bay, touched on Sumatra, diuided by a narrow and dangerous Strait from the Continent of Malacca, eyther being or supposed to bee in old times a Chersonesus or Pen-Insula (euey where encompassed with Waues, but by one Neck of Land fastned to the Maine) and called as some will haue (though others ascribe it to Malacca and the Siam Kingdome) Aurea, or the Golden, being indeed rich in Gold, and other Metals, as this ensuing Historie will shew.

Mores treche-rie at Malacca.

Cheffe-play in India.

Sequeria hauing here made League with the Kings of Pedir and Achen, and erected such Stone Pillars as before are mentioned, in both places, as Monuments thereof, passed to Malacca, where hee receiued great kindnesse of Mamudius a Mahumetan, which had vsurped that State by force from the Siamite, who yet as the Samorin, or King of Calecut, by the Mores was altered, and sought by Treason to murder the Portugals, and seize on their ships. For pretending, after League confirmed, to entertayne him in a Feast, Sequeria hauing intelligence, excused himselfe by sicknesse: whereupon hee offered extraordinarie fauour to lade his ships (contrarie to the custome of that Port) before all those which had beene there before them, which must bee carried closely, for feare of disgust and mutinie of other Merchants, which Sequeria accepted thankfully, and sent his men to diuers places assigned. Patiacus, the sonne of Vtimutis, the next man in Malacca after the King, was sent aboard to complement with him, till a signe giuen by smoake from a certaine place, should at once arme the rest in other places, and him on ship-board to sudden and vnexpected slaughter. It happened, that Sequeria, at Patiacus his coming, was at Chesse; which hee dissemblingly willed him to continue, that he might obserue our difference from them in that Play. But whiles hee waited the smoake, others of Malacca had not that patience, but disorderly began their furie, which was espyed from the ship tops by a Mariner, who cryed Treason: whereupon they running to their Armes, the Malaccans leaped ouer board, and they sent some to helpe their fellowes, whiles the rest cut their Cables, to haue Sea-roome for their Ship-fights, and by terror of their Ordenance easily chaled the Nauie, set purposely to assaile them. But of those on shore, fortie were slaine, and more captiued, which ministred iust cause of quarrell to their Countreymen, whom Sequeria had sent notice hereof, himselfe passing directly to the Cape, and so to Lisbon.

Ormuz tribu-tarie to Portu-gall.

Bar. Dec. 2. l. 10.
Maff. l. 4. in fine.
See Bar. Dec. 2.
l. 5, 6 & 7.
Ofor. de reb.
Em. 7, 8, 9, 10.

Goa wonne and lost, and recouered againe.

Albuquerque had now recouered of his wounds, and minded to recouer Ormuz, the King whereof had before acknowledged Vassallage to King Emanuel, with fiftene thousand Serafines of Gold yeerely tribute, and leaue to the Portugals to erect there a Fort; which the slacknesse first, and after that, open mutinie of his owne men, had frustrated; Zeisadin the King hauing intelligence thereof, and thereby taking occasion to shake off the Portugall yoake. Hee pretended feare of Ismael the Persian Xa, or Sophi, whose tributarie he was, but was regayned afterwards (it was the last Act of Albuquerque's Life) and the Persian also not discontented, yea, sending an Embassadour to treat of Peace, as hauing their Actions in admiration. But at this time hauing collected a Fleet of one and twentie sayle, in his way thither was intercepted by the opportunitie of Goa, whose Prince Zabains, in the midst of his preparations against the Portugals, was lately dead, leauing his young sonne Idalcan as full of troubles, as empty of experience. Timoia, a famous Pyrate, and Lord of an Iland not farre off, gaue this intelligence, with proffer of his best assistance therein: Whereupon a suddaine Siege, and surprize thereof, was made, vpon Conditions; the Portugals wondering to see themselves so easily Lords of such Wealth. But Idalcan with force and famine soone expelled them; which which yet, not long after, they recovered, to the great honour of that Nation in these parts.

Intending next to enter the Red Sea, the Northwest Windes repelled this victorious General or Vice-roy from that attempt, but offered faire oportunitie for Malacca, which he readily apprehended: and first demanded his Prisoners of Mamudius, which hee sayd were fled; but seeing his Towne on fire, was forced to present vnto him. And when his Conditions demanded seemed great, namely, the charges of both Fleets, and restitution of things lost; Mamudius was animated by some, rather to defend himselfe by Warre: the effect whereof, was the losse of that petty Kingdome, and of himselfe with griefe.

Red Sea.

Malacca won.

- 10 In the way thither, Albuquerque had met with some ships lately come from thence, which he assaulted and tooke: in which prelude of a greater Warre, this happened remarkable, That Naodabegua, one of those which had before conspired against Sequeria, receiued diuers wounds, by which at last hee fell, but neyther Bloud nor Soule issued, which both, as from a broken Vessell, suddenly fled, after a gold Chayne was taken from his arme. The cause, they learned to be a Bone of a Beast called Cabis, in the Countrey of Siam, which being included in that Chayne, included the bloud also, those open passages notwithstanding. This Jewell was sent into Portugall for a raritie, but perished by shipwracke in the way.

A Chayne of strange vertue. Cabis, a strange Beast.

- 20 The victorie at Malacca spread the Portugall fame, caused Leagues and Legates of diuers Nations; and occasioned their search and discouerie of the Ilands of Amboino, Banda, and the Molucca's. Yea, the Samorin of Calcut, and Idalcan himselfe sought their amitie, and the Negus of Abassia or Prester Iohn sent an Embassador into Portugall. The King of Maldiva became Vassall to King Emanuel. Antonius Abreus was employed for the Molucca's: which first came to Iava, then to Amboino, setting his Stone Pillars in both places: next to Banda, the name of diuers Ilands, where Nutmegs and Mace onely, for ought then knowne, in all the World, did grow. The fame of Malacca had pierced hither, and prepared eae Conditions to a League; as also to the Molucca's: where the two emulous Kings of Ternate and Tidore were ambitious which should first winne them to their side; their mutuall Quarrels opening a ready aduantage to the Portugals, by taking part with one to make his best of both.

Amboino, Banda, Molucca's.

Maldiva.

- 30 These Quarrels they haue transmitted to their Posteritie; and euen at this day the Hollander taking part with the one, and the Spaniard (who hath here succeeded the Portugall) with the other, out of their euils gather benefit to themselves. So foolish, and not impious alone, is Strife, that besides mutuall mischiefs to and by each other, they expose themselves to foraine both scorne and gayne.

CHAP. II.

- 40 of FERNANDVS MAGALIANES: The occasion of his Voyage, and the particulars of the same, with the compassing of the World by the Ship called San Victoria; gathered out of * ANTONIO PIGAFETTA, an Italian of Vicenza, who was one in the said Circum-Navigation, as also from diuers other Authors.

* Pigafetta's Booke is extant in Ramusio's first Tome; and a great part thereof Englished by R. Eden, to which here is added other necessary parts thereof, out of Ramusio's Copy.

- 50 NE which serued vnder Albuquerque in these victorious Warres, was Fernandus Magalians, a Portugall, a Gentleman of great spirit: who hauing made good and manyfold prooffe of his valour and value both in Africa and India, and being reiected in a suit to the King, for augmenting his stipend halfe a Duckat a moneth; conceiuing deepe indignation hereat, he renounced his allegiance to his Master King Emanuel, and betooke himselfe to the Court of Castile, with Ruy Falero, a professed Astrologer (the Portugals say, a Coniurer) and acquainted the Emperour, that the Ilands of Banda and of the Molucca's (the one the onely Store-house of Nature for Nutmegs and Mace, the other for Cloues) appertained to him, by that Diuision which King Iohn the second and King Ferdinand and Isabel of Castile had agreed on, that is, to the Westerne moitie of the World, from the prescribed Limits before mentioned. And with a bold and admirable attempt, offered also by the West to discouer these rich Ilands of 60 Spicerie.

Of. l. 11. Mag. l. 8. Magal Voyage translated out of Portug. Ma. Transiluanus Epist. ad Ramus. Herrera Dec. 2. l. 3. c. 10. Lop. Vaz. &c.

The Portugall Authors speake here nothing but Treason, and cry out vpon him as a Traitor, for sowing Seeds likely to produce Warre twixt Castile and Portugall: Nor doe I, in those things, vndertake to iustifie him. But out of his whatsoeuer euill, God produced this good to the World, that it was first by his meanes sayled round: Nor was his neglect of his Countrey neglected, neglected, or reuengefull mind vnreuenged, as the sequele manifesteth, by his vntimely and violent death.

Five ships were furnished at the Emperors command: the Trinitie Admirall, Stephen Gomes a Portugall, Pilot; of San Victoria, was Luys de Mendoza Captaine; John de Cartagena of the ship S. Antonio; John Serran of the ship S. Iago; and Gaspar de Quesada of the ship Conception: Magalanes himselfe being made Generall. The whole companie was two hundred thirtie seuen, or (as some say) two hundred and fiftie; of which, thirtie were Portugals. On the tenth of August, 1519. they departed from Siuill; the six and twentieth of September they arriued at Tenarife; the third of October they sayled betwixt the Ilands and Cape Verde. They sayled many dayes in the sight of the Coast of Guinea, and had a great calme seuentie 10 dayes, which they spent in attaining the Line.

They lost the sight of the North starre.
The Iland of Brasile.
The South Pole.
Sugar.

When they had sayled past the Equinoctiall Line, they lost the sight of the North starre, and sayled by the South-west, vntill they came to a Land named Brasilia, being two and twentie degrees and a halfe toward the South Pole or Pole Antartike. This Land is continuate, and one firme Land with the Cape of Saint Augustine, which is eight degrees from the Equinoctiall. In this Land they were refreshed with many good Fruits of innumerable kindes, and found here also very good Sugar Canes, and diuers kindes of Beasts and other things, which I omit for breuitie.

Canibals.
Giants.

Insule Gemma-rum.
Cap. S. Marie.

They departed from this Land, and sayled to the foure and twentieth degree and a halfe, toward the Pole Antartike, where they found a great Riuer of fresh Water, and certaine Ca- 20 nibals. Of these, they saw one out of their ships, of stature as big as a Giant, hauing a voyce like a Bull. Our men pursued them, but they were so swift of foot, that they could not ouertake them. About the mouth of this Riuer are seuen Ilands, in the biggest whereof they found certaine precious Stones, and called it the Cape of Saint Mary. The Spaniards thought, that by this Riuer they might haue passed into the South Sea: But they were deceiued in their opinion; for there was none other passage then by the Riuer, which is seuentene Leagues large in the mouth.

The Pole An-
tartike.
Pengwins and Seales.

Thus following this Coast by the tract of the Land toward the Pole Antartike, they came to a place where were two Ilands replenished with Pengwins and Seales. These were in such number, that in an houre all the five ships might haue beene laden with Pengwins, being all 30 of blacke colour, and such as cannot flye. They liue of Fish, and are so fat, that they could scarcely slay them. They haue no Feathers, but a certaine Downe, and their bylls like Rauens bylls. Here were they in great danger by Tempest: But as soone as the three Fires, called Saint Helen, Saint Nicholas, and Saint Clare, appeared vpon the Cables of the ships, suddenly the tempest and furie of the Windes ceased.

The 49. degree of the South Pole.

Giants.

The bignesse of the Giants.

Departing from hence, they sayled to the nine and fortieth degree and a halfe, vnder the Pole Antartike: where being Wintered, they were inforced to remayne there for the space of two moneths, all which time they saw no man, except that one day by chance they espyed a man of the stature of a Giant, who came to the Hauen dancing and singing, and shortly after seemed to cast dust ouer his head. The Captaine sent one of his men to the shore with the ship Boat, who made the like signe of peace. The which thing the Giant seeing, was out of 40 feare, and came with the Captaines seruant to his presence into a little Iland. When hee saw the Captaine with certaine of his companie about him, hee was greatly amazed, and made signes, holding vp his hand to Heauen, signifying thereby, that our men came from thence. This Giant was so big, that the head of one of our men, of a meane stature, came but to his Waste. He was of good corporature, and well made in all parts of his body, with a large Vi- sage, painted with diuers colours, but for the most part yellow. Vpon his Cheekes were painted two Harts, and red Circles about his Eyes. The Hayre of his Head was coloured white, and his Apparrell was the Skinne of a Beast sowed together. This Beast (as seemed vnto vs) had a large head, and great eares like vnto a Mule, with the body of a Cammell, and tayle of a 50 Horse. The feet of the Giant were foulded in the said Skinne, after the manner of shooes. He had in his hand a big and short Bowe, the String whereof was made of a sinew of that Beast. He had also a Bundell of long Arrowes, made of Reedes, feathered after the manner of ours, typt with sharpe stones in the stead of Iron heads. The Captaine caused him to eat and drinke, and gaue him many things, and among other, a great Looking-Glasse: In the which, as soone as he saw his owne likenesse, hee was suddenly afraid, and started backe with such violence, that he ouerthrew two that stood neerest about him. When the Captaine had thus giuen him certaine Hawkes Bells, and other great Bells, with a Looking-Glasse, a Combe, and a payre of Beads of Glasse, he sent him to land with foure of his owne men well armed.

Another Giant.

Shortly after, they saw another Giant, of somewhat greater stature, with his Bowe and Ar- 60 rowes in his hand. As hee drew neere vnto our men, he layd his hand on his head, and pointed vp toward Heauen, and our men did the like. The Captaine sent his ship Boat, to bring him to a little Iland, being in the Hauen. This Giant was very tractable, and pleasant. Hee sung and danced, and in his dancing, left the print of his feet on the ground. Hee remayned long with with our men, who named him Iohn. Hee could well speake, and plainly pronounce these words, Iesus, Au: Maria, Iohannes, euen as wee doe, but with a bigger voyce. The Captaine gaue him a Shirt of Linnen Cloth, and a Coat of white Woollen Cloth; also a Cap, a Combe, a Looking-Glasse, with diuers such other things, and so sent him to his companie. The day following hee resorted againe to the shippes, and brought with him one of those great Beasts, which hee gaue the Captaine. But after that day they neuer saw him more, supposing him to be slaine of his owne company, for the conuersation he had with our men.

After other fifteene dayes were past, there came foure other Giants without any Weapons, but had hid their Bowes and Arrowes in certaine Bushes. The Captaine retayned two of these, which were youngest and best made. Hee tooke them by a deceit; giuing them Knyues, Sheeres, Looking-Glasses, Bells, Beades of Crystall, and such other Trifles, hee so filled their hands, that they could hold no more: then caused two payre of shackles of Iron to be put on their legges, making signes, that hee would also giue them those Chaynes; which they liked very well, because they were made of bright and shining metall. And whereas they could not carry them, because their hands were full, the other Giants would haue carryed them: but the Captaine would not suffer them. When they felt the shackles fast about their legges, they began to doubt: but the Captaine did put them in comfort, and bad them stand still. In fine, when they saw how they were deceiued, they roared like Bulls, and cryed vpon their great Deuill Setebos, to helpe them. Being thus taken, they were immediately seperate and put in sundry shippes. They could neuer binde the hands of the other two: yet was one of them with much difficultie ouerthrowne by nine of our men, and his hands bound; but he suddenly loosed himselfe, and fled, as did also the other that came with them. In their flying, they shot off their Arrowes, and slew one of our men. They say, that when any of them die, there appeare ten or twelue Deuils, leaping and dancing about the bodie of the dead, and seeme to haue their bodies painted with diuers colours, and that among other, there is one seene bigger then the residue, who maketh great mirth and reioycing. This great Deuill they call Setebos, and call the lesse Chelente. One of these Giants which they tooke, declared by signes, that hee had seene Deuils with two hornes about their heads, with long hayre downe to their feet; and that they cast forth fire at their throats both before and behind. The Captaine named these people Patagoni. The most part of them weare the Skinnies of such Beasts whereof I haue spoken before: and haue no Houses of continuance, but make certaine Cottages, which they couer with the said Skinnies, and carry them from place to place. They liue of raw Flesh, and a certaine sweet Root, which they call Capar. They are very iealous of their Women. When they are sicke at the stomacke, they put an Arrow halfe a yard or more downe the Throat, which makes them vomit greene choler and blood. For head-ach, they make a cut ouer the forehead, and let themselves blood. The like they doe on the arme, or legge, in any Aches. They cut their hayre like Friers, but a little longer, and binde it with a Cotton hayre-lace. By reason of Cold in thote parts, they trusse vp themselves so, as the genitall member is hidden within the body. One of these which they had in their shippes, did eate at one meale a Basket of Bisket, and drunke a Bowle of Water at a draught.

They remayned fve moneths in this Port of Saint Iulian; where certaine of the vnder Captaines conspiring the death of their Generall, were hanged and quartered: among whom, the Treasurer Luigo of Mendoza was one. Certaine of the other Conspirators he left in the said Land of Patagoni; namely, Iohn de Cartagena, and a Priest. They erected there a Crosse, in token of possession.

Departing from hence to the two and fiftieth degree, toward the Pole Antartike, lacking a third part, they found a Riuer of fresh Water and good Fish. Their shippes were here in great danger. They remayned two moneths in this Port, where they made new prouision of fresh Water, Fuell, and Fish. Here the Captaine caused all his men to be confessed. Approching to the two and fiftie degrees, they found the Strait now called the Strait of Magellanus, being in some place a hundred and ten Leagues in length, and in bredth somewhere very large, and in other places little more then halfe a League in bredth. On both the sides of this Strait, are great and high Mountaines couered with Snow, beyond the which, is the entrance into the Sea of Sur. This entrance the Captaine named Mare Pacificum. Here one of the ships, Saint Antonio, stole away priuily, and returned into Spaine: In this was one of the Giants, who died as soone as he felt the heat that is about the Equinoctiall Line.

When the Captaine Magallanes was past the Strait, and saw the way open to the other maine Sea, hee was so glad thereof, that for ioy the teares fell from his eyes, and named the point of the Land from whence hee first saw that Sea, Capo Desiderato. Supposing that the ship which stole away, had beene lost, they erected a Crosse vpon the top of a high Hill, to direct their course in the Strait, if it were their chance to come that way.

They found, that in this Strait, in the moneth of October, the Night was not past foure houres long. They found in this Strait, at euery three miles, a safe Hauen, and excellent Water to drinke; Wood also, and Fish, and great plentie of good Herbes. They thinke,

Foure other Giants.

Two Giants are taken by a policy.

The Deuill
Setebos.

Deuils appeare to the Giants
when they die.

Patagoni.

The Giants
feeding.

They conspire against their Captaine.

Confession.

The Strait of Magellanus.

The South
Sea.
Mare Pacificum.

The Giants
died for heat.

Capo Desiderato.

Short nights in the moneth of October.

- Flying Fishes. think, that there is not a fairer Strait in the World. Here also they saw certaine flying Fishes.
- The Giants Language. The other Giant which remayned with them in the ship, named Bread, Capar; Water, Oli; red Cloth, Cherecui; red Colour, Cheiche; blacke colour, Amel: And spoke all his words in the throat. On a time, as one made a Crosse before him, and kissed it, shewing it, vnto him, hee suddenly cryed Setebos, and declared by signes, that if they made any more Crosses, Setebos would enter into his body, and make him burst. But when in fine hee saw no hurt come thereof, hee tooke the Crosse, and embraced and kissed it oftentimes, desiring, that hee might bee a Christian before his death. Hee was therefore baptized, and named Paul.
- The Giant is baptized. Departing out of this Strait into the Sea called Mare Pacificum, the eight and twentieth day of November, in the yeere 1520. they sayled three moneths and twentie dayes before they saw any Land: and hauing in this time consumed all their Bisket and other Victuals, they fell into such necessitie, that they were enforced to eate the powder that remayned thereof, being now full of Wormes, and stinking like Pisse, by reason of the salt Water. Their fresh Water was also putrified, and become yellow. They did eate Skinnes and pieces of Leather, which were fouled about certaine great Ropes of the shippes: but these Skinnes being made very hard, by reason of the Sunne, Raine, and Winde, they hung them by a Cord in the Sea, for the space of foure or five dayes, to mollifie them, and sod them, and ate them. By reason of this
- Three moneths sayling without the sight of Land. Extreme Famine. Disease of Famine. Famine, and vndeane feeding, some of their gummes grew so ouer their teeth, that they died miserably for hunger. And by this occasion died nineteene men, and also the Giant, with an Indian of the Land of Erassle, otherwise called Terra de Papagalli, that is, the Land of Popin-gays. Beside these that died, five and twentie or thirtie were so sick, that they were not able to doe any seruice with their hands or armes for feebleness: so that there was in manner none without some Disease.
- Unfortunate Islands. In these three moneths and twentie dayes, they sayled foure thousand Leagues in one Gulfe, by the said Sea called Pacificum, that is, peaceable: which may well be so called, forasmuch as in all this time hauing no sight of any Land, they had no misfortune of Winde, or any other Tempest. During this time also, they discovered onely two little Ilands vnhabited, where they saw nothing but Birds and Trees, and therefore named them unfortunate Ilands, being one from the other about two hundred Leagues distant. The first of these Ilands, is from the Equinoctiall toward the Pole Antartike fifteene degrees, and the other five. Their sayling was
- What they sayled dayly. in such sort, that they sayled dayly betweene fiftie, threescore, to seuentie Leagues. So that in fine, if God of his mercie had not giuen them good Weather, it was necessarie, that in this so great a Sea they should all haue died for hunger.
- The starres about the South Pole. They considered in this Nauigation, that the Pole Antartike hath no notable starre, after the sort of the Pole Artike. But they saw many starres gathered together, which are like two Clouds, one separate a little from another, and somewhat darke in the midst. Betweene these, are two starres, not very big, nor much shining, which moue a little: and these two are the Pole Antartike.
- The Needle of the Compas. The Needle of their Compas varied somewhat, and turned euer toward the Pole Artike; neuertheless, had no such force, as when it is in these parts of the Pole Artike: Insomuch, that it was necessarie to helpe the Needle with the Lead-stone, before they could sayle there-with, because it moued not, as it doth when it is in these our parts. When they were in the midst of the Gulfe, they saw a Crosse of five cleare starres, directly toward the West, and of equall distance the one from the other.
- The Lead-stone. In these dayes they sayled betweene the West and South so farre, that they approached to the Equinoctiall Line, and were in longitude from the place from whence they first departed, a hundred and twentie degrees. In this course they sayled by two Ilands of exceeding height, whereof the one named Cipanghu, is twentie degrees from the Pole Antartike; and the other named Sumbdit, fifteene degrees. When they were past the Equinoctiall Line, they sayled betweene the West and Southwest, at the quarter of the West, toward the Southwest more then a hundred Leagues, changing their sayles to the quarter of the Southwest, vntill they came to the thirteene degrees about the Equinoctiall, toward the Pole Artike, intending as much as were possible, to approach to the Cape called of the old Writers Cattigara: the which is not found as the old Cosmographers haue described it, but it is toward the North about twelue degrees, as they afterward vnderstood.
- The Equinoctiall Line. When they had thus sayled seuentie Leagues of this Voyage, in the twelfth degree about the Equinoctiall, and a hundred fortie six degrees of Longitude (as I haue said) the sixt day of March they discovered a little Iland toward the Northwest, and two other toward the Southwest; but the one was higher and bigger then the other. In the biggest of these, the Generall would haue rested himselfe a while, but he could not, by reason the people of these Ilands resorted continually to the ships with their Canoas, and stole now one thing, and now another, in such sort, that our men could take no rest; and therefore demanded of the Captaine, that they might strike their sayles, to bring the shippes to Land. But the Generall being prouoked to anger, went aland with fortie armed men, and burnt about fiftie of their Houses, with many of their Canoas, and slew also about seven men, and recovered a shippe-boat which the Barbarians had stolne; and so departed, following his Voyage. Hee named these Ilands, Insule Latronum, that is, the Ilands of Theeves. When our men had so wounded some of them with Arrowes, that they were stricken through both sides, they pulled forth the Arrowes, not ceasing to maruell at them, till they fell downe dead: And yet could not the other so depart, but still followed the shippes with more then two hundred of their Boats, approaching as neere to the shippes as they could, and proffering our men certaine Fishes. As the shippes passed with full sayle in the midst of their Boats, they saw in some of them certaine Women, lamenting

Insule Latronum.

- 10 and tearing their hayre, which our men thought they did for the death of their Husbands. As farre as they could perceiue, these people liue at their owne libertie, without any Ruler or Gouvernour. They goe naked, and some of them haue blacke Beards, and blacke hayre on their heads, which they weare long, downe to their Waistes. They are of the same stature that wee are, and well made, of colour like vnto an Oliue. Their Women are well-fauoured, with black and thicke hayre on their heads, reaching to the ground. They weare also, for a couering before their priuities, the inner barke of the Palme-tree; are whiter then the men, and seldome goe out of doores, but at home make Mats and Nets of the Palme-tree, and other House-hold necessities. Some of the men weare Bonnets on their heads of Palme-tree. They colour their teeth red and blacke, which they esteeme a comely thing. Their food, is Cocos and Bastatas, Birds, Figges a handfull long, Sugar-Canes, flying Fishes, and other things. They anoynt their bodies and head with the Oyle of Cocus. Their Boats are some all blacke, some white, and some red, and haue Sayles made of the broad Leaues of Date-trees, sowed together. In the stead of a Rudder, they vse a certaine broad Boord, with a staffe in the top, and may when they will, make the Sterne the Fore-Castle, or the Fore-Castle the Sterne. They sayle so swiftly, that they seeme a farre off like Dolphins swimming about the Water. Their Houses are made of Timber, couered with Boords, and Leaues of Figge-tree, a yard long: They haue a Hall, Windowes, and Chambers. They haue Palme-Mats for Bed-furniture, and sleepe on Palme Leaues, which are soft. Their Weapons are Clubs or Poles, with a Horne head.

People with long hayre.

- 20 The tenth day of March, in the yeere 1521. they went aland vpon a little Iland, named Zamal, thirtie Leagues distant from the Iland of Theeves. The next day hee went on shore on another Iland, not inhabited: they rested here a while, where the Captaine caused a Pavillion to be pitched for the sicke and crazed men, and a Hogge to be killed. The Iland was called Humum, and hath two cleare Springs, and Gold and white Corall, and many Fruit-trees. They gaue it the name of Good Signes.

The Iland of Zamal.

The eighteenth day of March, they saw a Boat with nine men comming toward them, shewing themselves ioyfull, and reioycing of their comming. They brought many presents with them, and seemed to be people of much humanitie. They gaue the Captaine a great Fish, and a great Vessell of the Wine of those Date-trees, which beare the Fruit Cocus. They made also signes, that within the space of foure dayes they would bring Rice, and diuers Fowles and Wine of Date-trees.

- 40 Beasts, as they did indeed.

This Cocus is a Fruit of certaine Date-trees, whereof they make Bread, Wine, Oyle, and Vineger. They make Wine in this manner: They cut a bigge branch of the Tree, and hang thereat a Reede as bigge as a mans Legge, into the which droppeth a sweet Liquor from the Tree, like vnto white Wine, somewhat tart, and let the Reed continue there from Morning till Euening, and from Euening to Morning. The fruit of this Tree, called Cocus, is as bigge as the head of a man, or more. The first Rynde of this, is Greene, and of the thickeesse of two fingers, hauing in it certaine Threds, whereof they make Cords, with the which they tye their Boats. Vnder this Rynde there is a thicke shell, which they burne and make powder thereof, and vse it as a remedie for certaine Diseases. Vnder this shell, is a white substance, like the kernell of a Nut, being a finger in thickeesse, which they eate with Flesh and Fish, as wee doe Bread. It hath the taste of an Almond, and is vsed in the stead of Bread, when it is dried. In the midst of this kernell, is a cleare and sweet Water, being very holefome and cordiall. This Water sometime congealeth, and lyeth within the shell like an Egge. When they intend to make Oyle hereof, they lay it to putrifie in Water, and boyle it vntill it be like Oyle or liquid Butter. When they intend to make Vineger, they suffer onely the Water to putrifie, and then set it to the Sunne, where it becommeth Vineger, like vnto that which is made of white Wine. And when they mingle the kernell with the Water which is in the midst of the Fruit, and strayne it through a Cloth, they make a Milke thereof, like vnto Goates Milke. These Date-trees are like vnto them that beare Dates, but are not so full of knots.

The maruelous Fruit Cocus.

- 60 With the iuice of two of these Date-trees, a whole family of tenne persons may be maintayned with Wine, vsing one eight dayes, and the other, other eight dayes; for they should elie be dried and wythered. These Trees continue for the space of an hundred yeeres. This Iland, where they found this humane and gentle people, is called Zuluan, and is not very bigge.

The Iland of Zuluan.

They invited the Generall to their Boats, in which were their Merchandize, viz. Cloues, Cinnamon, Ginger, Pepper, Nutmegs, Mace, Gold made in diuers things, which they carry to and fro with their Barkes. Hee had them also aboard the ship, and caused a peece of Ordnance to be shot off; which terrified them so, that they were ready to leape ouer-board: but he appeased them, and gaue them gifts. The two and twentieth of March they brought Oranges, and a Cocke, and Cocos, with Palme-Wine, in two Barkes. The men were naked, had two Gold Rings at their eares, and many Jewels fastened with Gold to their armes. With these Cocos they refreshed their sicke men. They told of people in neere Ilands, with eares downe to their armes. They had Daggers, Kniues, and Lances garnished with Gold.

The Sea called Archipelago di
San Lazaro: this name Archipela- go, is giuen to Seas full of Ilands.

Gentiles.

Four Ilands.

The Iland of Buthuan.

About this Iland they found many other Ilands, and therefore named this Sea Archipelago di San Lazaro, that is, the great Sea of Saint Lazarus, being tenne degrees about the Equinoctiall toward our Pole, and a hundred threescore and one from the place from whence they departed. The people of this Iland are Gentiles. They goe naked, sauing that they couer their priuie parts with a Cloth made of the rynde of a certaine Tree. The chiefeft men haue about their heads a silken Cloth of Needle-worke. They are grosse and broad set, and of the colour of an Oliue. They annoynt their bodies with the Oyle of Cocus, to defend them against the heat of the Sunne, and drynesse of the Winde. The five and twentieth day of March they departed from hence, and directed their course betweene the West and South-west, and sayled betweene foure Ilands, named Cenalo, Huinanghan, Hibussion, and Abarien, &c.

The eight and twentieth day of March they came to the Iland of Buthuan, where they were honourably entertayned of the King and the Prince his sonne, who gaue them much Gold and Spices. The Captaine gaue the King a Vesture of red Cloth, and another of yellow, made after the Turkish fasnion, and also a red Cap: and gaue likewise to other that came with him, certaine Knyues, Glasses, and Beades of Crystall. After that the Captaine had shewed the King the secrets of his ship, and such Merchandize as hee had therein, hee caused a peece of Ordnance suddenly to be shot off, whereat the King was greatly amazed, vntill the Captaine comforted him. Then the Captaine commanded one of his men to be armed from the head to the foot, and caused three other to strike him with their Swords: whereat the King maruelled greatly, and said to the Interpreter (who was a slaue borne in Malacca) that one of those armed men was able to encounter with a hundred of his men. But hee maruelled much more, when the Captaine told him by the Interpreter, how he found the Strait by the Compas and Load-stone, and how many dayes they were without sight of any Land. Then asking licence to depart, the Captaine sent two of his men with him, of the which, Antonie Pigafetta was one. When they came on Land, the King lifted his hands to the Skie, and after that, towards the two Christians: these did the like, and all the companie after them. The like ceremonie they vsed in drinking one to another. The Kings Pallace was like a Hay-house, couered with Palme and Fig-leaues, built on high Timbers aloft, that they mounted thereunto on Ladders. They sit at meat crosse-legged, like Taylors. They make Light in the Night with a gumme of a Tree, wrapped in leaues of Palme-tree. When the King saw Antonie Pigafetta write the names of many things, and afterward rehearsed them againe, he maruelled yet more, making signes, that such men descended from Heauen. The King brought them first to his Pallace, where he entertayned them honorably, and gaue them many gifts, as did also the Prince in his Pallace, being in another Iland named Caleghan.

The Iland of Caleghan.

Plentie of Gold.

The King of Buthuan.

As they sifted a certaine Myne of Earth in the Kings Iland, they found pieces of Gold, some as bigge as Nuts, and other as bigge as Egges. All the Kings Vessels were of Gold, and his Houle well furnished. In all the whole Nation there was no man of comelyer personage then the King: Hee had his hayre long, downe to his shoulders, and very blacke, with a vaine of Silke rouled about his head, and two great Rings of Gold hanging at his eares. He had about his middle a Cloth wrought of Cotton and Silke, impaled with Gold, and reaching downe to his knees. On his one side, hee had a long Dagger with a Haft of Gold, and the sheathe of a faire kinde of carued Wood. Hee had on euery finger three Rings of Gold, and had his body annoynted with Oyle of Storax and Benjamin. The naturall colour of his face was like vnto the colour of an Oliue; and all his body beside painted with diuers colours. The Kings name was Rasa Colambu, and the Prince was called Raia Siaou. They easily vnderstood each other, by meanes of a slaue which they carryed with them, taken before at Sumatra. One man offered for six threds of Crystall Beades a Crowne of masse Gold, with a Collar: but the Generall would not permit such bartering, that they should not perceiue more account to be made of their Gold by the one, then by the other of the Spanish Wares. The people are nimble, naked, painted. The Women goe clothed from the Waste downewards, with their long blacke hayre hanging to the ground. They weare eare-rings of Gold in diuers formes. They alway are chewing Arecca, a certaine Fruit like a Peare, cut in quarters, and rolled vp in leaues of a Tree called Bestre (or Vetele) like Bay leaues; which hauing chewed, they spit forth. It makes the mouth red. They say they doe it to comfort the heart, nor could liue without it.

The

The Captaine or Generall caused a Crosse to be brought forth, with Nayles, and a Crowne of Thornes, giuing commandement to all his men to giue reuerence thereunto, and signifying to the Kings, by the Interpreter, that that Banner was giuen him by the Emperour, his Lord and Master, with commandement to leaue the same in all places where hee came, to the great commoditie and profit of all such as would reuerendly receiue it, as an assured token of friendship: and that hee would therefore leaue it there, as well to accomplish his Lords commandement, as also, that if at any time any ships of Christians should chance to come that way, they might, by seeing that Crosse, perceiue that our men had bene well entertayned there, and would therefore not onely abstayne from doing them any hurt or displeasure, but also helpe to 10 ayde them against their enemies: And that therefore it should be requisite to erect that Crosse vpon the top of the highest Mountaine that might be seene from the Sea on euery side; also to pray vnto it reuerently: and that in so doing, they should not be hurt with Thunder, Lightning, and Tempests. When the Kings heard these words, they gaue the Captaine great thanks, promising gladly to obserue and fulfill all such things as he required. Then the Captaine demanded, whether they were Mores or Gentiles? They answered, that they had none
 20 other kind of Religion, but that lifting vp their hands ioyned together, and their faces toward Heauen, they called vpon their God Abba. Which answer liked the Captaine very well, because the Gentiles are sooner perswaded to our Faith then the Mores. Mores and Gentiles.

Departing from hence, they came to the Ilands of Zeilon, Zubut, Messana, and Calaghan, Many Ilands.
 20 by the conduct of certaine Pilots of the said Kings. Of these, Zubut is the best, and hath the Trade of best Traffique. In the Iland of Messana they found Dogges, Cats, Hogges, Hennes, Goates, Rysse, Gynger, Cocus, Myll, Panicke, Barly, Figges, Oranges, Waxe, and Gold, in The Iland of Messana.
 great quantitie. This Iland is aboue the Equinoctiall toward our Pole nine degrees, and two third parts, and a hundred threescore and two degrees from the place from whence they departed. They remayned in this Iland for the space of eight dayes, and then directed their Voyage toward the Northwest, and passed betweene these five Ilands, Zeilon, Bohol, Canghu, Barbai, and Catighan. In this Iland of Catighan are certaine great Bats, as bigge as Eagles, of the Bats as big as Eagles.
 30 which they tooke one: they are good to be eaten, and of taste much like a Henne. There are also Stock-doues, Turtle-doues, Poppingayes, and certaine Fowles as bigge as Hennes: these Fowles haue little hornes, and lay great egges, which they couer a cubit depth in the Sand, by Fowles with hornes. Egges hatched in Sand.
 the heat whereof, and vertue of the Sunne, they are hatched, and the young Birds creepe out of the Sand by themselves. From the Iland of Messana to Catighan, are twentie Leagues, sayling toward the West. And because the King of Messana could not follow the ships, they tarried for him about the Ilands of Polo, Ticobon, and Fozon, where the Captaine tooke him into his ship, with certaine of his principall men, and so followed their Voyage toward the Iland of Zubut, which is about fiftie Leagues distant from Catighan.

The seuenth day of Aprill, about Noone, they entred into the Port of Zubut: and passing The Iland of Zubut.
 40 by many Villages and Habitations in Trees, they came to the Citie, where the Captaine gaue commandement to the Mariners to strike their sayles, and to set themselves in order, in manner of Battell-ray, causing all the Ordenance to be shot off, wherewith all the people were put in great feare. After this, the Captaine sent an Embassadour with the Interpreter to the King of Zubut.

When they approched neere to the Citie, they found the King with a great companie of men sore astonyed at the noyse of the Gunnes. But the Interpreter aduertised them, that it was the custome of our men, in all such places where they come, to discharge their Ordenance in token of friendship, and to honour the Lord of the Citie. With which words the King and his companie were well quieted. After this, the Interpreter declared, that his Master was the Captaine of the shippes of the greatest Prince in the World, and that they went to discover the Ilands of Molucca: And further, that hearing of his good name and fame, by the report 50 of the King of Messana, they determined to visite him, and to haue Victuals for exchange of their Merchandize. The King answered, that he was well content therewith, and that they were heartily welcome: Neuerthelesse, that it was a custome in that place, that all such ships as entred into that Hauen, should pay tribute: And that there were not many dayes past, since a ship laden with Gold and Slaues, did so pay. In token whereof, hee caused to come before him certaine Merchants of that companie, which yet remayned with him. To this the Interpreter answered, That for as much as his Lord was the Captaine of so mightie a Prince, he neuer payd tribute to any King in the World, and would not now begin: Willing him to take this for a resolute answer, That if hee would accept the Peace that was proffered him, hee should enioy it; and if hee rather desired Warre, hee should haue his hands full. When the 60 Interpreter had said these words, one of the said Merchants (who was a More) spake to the King in this manner, Catacaia Chita; that is, Take heede Sir: For these men are they that haue conquered Calecut, Malacha, and all the greater India, and are of such power, that if you entreat them otherwise then well, you may too late know what they are able to doe, more then they haue done at Calecut and Malacca. When the Interpreter heard these words, hee said, A Shippe laden with Gold and Slaues.
Calecut. Malacha.

That the King his Lord was of much greater puissance, and more Dominions, and Lord of more shippes then was the King of Portugall: declaring further, that hee was King of Spaine, and Emperour of all Christendome. Adding hereunto, that if hee would not be his friend, hee would hereafter send thither such a power of armed men as should destroy his Countrey. The More conferred all these words with the King, who said, That hee would further deliberate with his Councell, and giue them a full answer the day following. In the meane time he sent them certaine Victuals and Wine.

When all these things were declared to the King of Messana, who was the chiefeest thereabout next vnto him, and Lord of many Ilands, hee went a Land, and repayed to the King of Zubut, and declared vnto him the great humanitie and courtesie of the generall Captaine. Shortly after, the Captaine sent certaine of his men with the Interpreter, to the King of Zubut, to know his pleasure, and what answer hee would make them. As they went toward the Court, they met the King comming in the street, accompanied with many of his chiefe men. Hee caused our men to sit downe by him, and demanded of them, if there were any more then one Captaine in their companie; and whether it were their request, that hee should pay tribute to the Emperour. They answered, that they desired none other thing, but that they might exercise Merchandize with them, and to barter Ware for Ware. The King made answer, that he was well content therewith: willing the Captaine, in token of friendship, to lend him a little bloud of his right arme; affirming, that he would doe the like.

Shedding of blood is a token of friendship.

After this, the King of Messana, with the King of Zubut his Nephew (who was the Prince) and certaine other of his Gentlemen, came to the ships, and brought the Captaine many goodly presents. They entred into great amitie, and had large communication of many things. The Captaine perswaded them to the Christian Faith: which they gladly embraced, and tooke such pleasure in hearing the Articles of our Beleefe, that the teares fell from their eyes for ioy. They were baptized: and shortly after, all the people of the Iland. They esteeme nothing more precious, then drinking Glasses of Venice worke.

The King of Zubut is baptized.

The King of Zubut his Apparrell.

When they came to the Citie, they found the King in his Pallace, sitting vpon a Floore or Storie made of the Leaues of Date trees, wrought after a curious Deuice, like a certaine kinde of Mats. Hee had vpon his body none other Apparrell, but onely a Cloth of Bombasine Cotton, hanging before his priuie parts. On his head hee had a Veyle of Needle-worke, and about his necke a Chayne of great price. At his eares hung two Rings of Gold, wherein were inclosed many precious Stones. Hee was but of small stature, but somewhat grosse, and had the residue of his body painted with diuers colours, whereof some were like vnto flaming fire. Before him, hee had two Vessels made of the fine Earth called Porcellana, with sodden Egges. Also foure Vessels of Porcellana, full of Wine made of Date trees, and couered with many odoriferous Herbes. The Prince brought them to his Houſe, where hee had foure Daughters, very well fauoured and white, like ours. Hee caused them to dance all naked, and therewith to sing, and play on certaine Tymbrels made of Metall. At this time it so chanced, that one of the Spaniards died in one of the shippes: and when certaine of their companie desired the King to giue them leaue to burie him on the Land; hee answered, That for as much as hee and all his were at the commandement of their King and Master, how much more ought the ground so to bee? They greatly maruelled at the Ceremonies pertayning to the manner of our Funerals, and honoured the Crosses which were set at both the ends of the Graue. They liue with Iustice, and vse Weights and Measures. Their Houses are made of Timber and sawne Boords, and are so builded about the ground vpon Props and Pyles, that they ascend to the same by certaine stayres. Vnder their Houses, they keepe their Hogges, and Goats, and Hennes. They told of certaine goodly Water-Fowle as bigge as Crowes, called Laghan, which the Whales of those parts sometimes swallow downe, but so are themselves deuoured, the Fowle gnawing the heart of the Whale, and killing him; by the people found in the dead body, floating to Land, still liuing in the same. The flesh of this Fowle is delicate, but the skin is blacke.

Well fauoured
Women.

Bartering.

Pesos what it is.

They breake their Idols, and erect the Crosse.

Five hundred men baptized.

When they came to bartering, they gaue Gold, Ryce, Hogges, Hennes, and diuers other things, for some of our trifles of small value. They gaue tenne Pesos of Gold for foureteene pounds weight of Iron. One Peso is in value a Duckat and a halfe.

The Sunday following, the King was baptized with great solemnitie: at which time, the Captaine admonished him before, not to be afraid at the shooting off of the Ordenance, because it was their custome so to doe at such solempne Feasts. After this, the Captaine caused them to breake all their Idols, and to set vp the Crosse in diuers places, praying to the same both Morning and Euening, kneeling on their knees, and holding vp their hands ioyned together. The King in his Baptisme was named Charles, after the Emperours name, and the Prince Ferdinando, after the name of his Maiesties Brother. The King of Messana was named John, and the More Christopher. To all other they gaue such names as are commonly vsed in Christendome. And thus before Masse was begun, were five hundred men baptized. When Masse was finished, the Captaine inuited the King to dyne with him in his shippe, and at his com-comming, caused the Ordenance to be discharged. The Queene was also baptized, with fortie of her Gentlewomen, and her Daughter the Princes Wife. The Queene was very young and faire, hauing her body couered with a white Cloth. Her Lippes were red, and shee had on her head a Hat, on the top whereof was a triple Crowne, much like the Popes: this Crowne and the Hat were made of the Leaues of Date trees. The Queene of Zubut.

Within the space of eight dayes, the Inhabitants of the Iland were baptized, except one Village of Idolaters, who would not herein obey the Kings commandement. Whereupon the Captaine sent certaine of his men thither, who burnt the Towne, and erected a Crosse in that place, because the people of the Village were Gentiles (that is) Idolaters. But if they had been 10 Mores (that is, Machumetists) they would haue erected a Pillar of Stone, because the Mores are more stubborne and harder to be conuerted then are the Gentiles.

When the Queene came to the place where shee should heare Masse, shee came forth with great pompe and solemnitie, hauing going before her three young Damosels, and three men with their Cappes in their hands, whom shee followed apparrelled in white and blacke, with a great Veyle of Silke vpon her head, fringed about with Gold, which couered her Hat, and hung downe to her shoulders: shee had also a great trayne of Women following her, being all bare-footed and naked, except that vpon their heads and priuie parts, they wore certaine Veyles of Silke, and had their hayre spred. The Queenes Apparrell.

Before the King of Zubut was baptized, hee was named Raia Humabron. When the Cap-
20 taine demanded of him, Why all the Idols in the Iland were not burnt, according to his promise? hee answered, That they esteemed them no more as Gods, but onely made sacrifice to them for the Princes Brother, who was very sicke, and as noble and wittie a man as was in the Iland. The Captaine answered, That if hee would burne all his Idols, and beleue faithfully in Christ, and be baptized, hee should be immediately restored to health, and that he would elsie giue them leaue to strike off his head. By these words and perswasions of the Captaine, he conceived such hope of health, that after he was baptized, he felt no more grieve of his disease. And this was a manifest Miracle wrought in our time, whereby diuers Infidels were conuerted to our Faith, and their Idols destroyed, and also their Altars ouerthrowne, on the which they were accustomed to eate the sacrificed flesh. The people of the Iland pay the King a portion of Vic-30 tuals for their tribute, by all their Cities and Villages.

Not farre from this Iland of Zubut, is the Iland of Mathan, whose Inhabitants vse maruelous Ceremonies in their sacrifices to the Sunne, and in burying the dead. Before their Swine-sacrifice, they ring certaine Bells: then bring three Platters; in two of which, are Vyands of Rice and Honey boyled, rouled vp in Leaues, and roasted Fishes; in the other, is a Linnen Cloth, with two Fillets or strings, which is spred on the Earth. Then come two old Women, each with a Reed-Trumpet in hand. These mount vpon the Cloth, and hauing worshipped the Sunne, couer themselues with the Cloth. One of them applyes one of the strings or Fillets with two hornes, to her for-head, holding the other in her hand, and thus sounding and dan-40 cing, calleth on the Sunne. The other followeth: both praying, sounding, and dancing round about the Hogge, tyed in the midst. The horned Beldame mumbleth to the Sunne, the other answering: Then a Cup of Wine is brought, and making semblance to drinke, after diuers mutuall mumblings, shee powreth it on the Hogge. After which, this horned Mother hath a Lance brought her: with which, after a deale of masking and mumming Ceremonie, shee kills him. All this while a Light is burning, and now is put into the mouth of the Swine. The other Beldam washeth the Head of the Trumpe in the bloud, and with her finger imbrued with bloud, first signeth her Husbands for-head, and after, other mens. Which done, they both dis-robe themselues, and eate the Vyands in the other Dishes, onely Women communicating with them. They finde the Hogge: the flesh they may not eate, till it be thus consecrated by those 50 Witches. They goe naked, except a little Cloth before their priuities. The Males, great and small, make a hole thorow the skin, neere the head of the Yard, and therein a Gold Ring is put, as bigge as a Goose-quill. They take as many Wiues as they will, but one is principall. When a man of fert dyes, the principall Women goe to his House, and let Boughes in Cords, fastned about the Corps, in euery Bough a piece of Cotton, so that the place is like a Tent. Herein they sit, arrayed in white Cotton, each hauing a Girdle, with a Fanne of Palme tree, to cause winde. One comes after with a Knife, which cuts off by little and little the hayre of the deceased. After which, his principall Wife lyeth vpon him, applying her Lippes to his, her Hands to his Hands, and her Feet to his. When the one cutteth, this other laments; when shee ceaseth to cut, this sings. About the Chamber, are Porcellane Dishes with fire, on which they burne Myrrhe, Storax, and other Sweets. This Ceremonie lasts five dayes. All which time, at Mid-
60 night (they say) there comes as it were a Rauens crying, a lacke Sanctus for five houres each Night. After all this, they enclose the Corps in a House closed round with Wood.

The Iland is gouerned by two Princes, whereof the one is named Zula, and the other Cilapulapu. And whereas this Cilapulapu refused to pay tribute to the King of Spaine, the

The Captaine Magellanus is slaine.

Captaine went against him in his owne person with threecore of his men, armed with Coats of Mayle and Helmets. Cilapulapu diuided his Army into three Battels, hauing in euery Battell two thousand and fiftie men, with armed Bowes, Arrowes, Darts, and Iauelins, hardened at the points with fire. This continued long, and sharpe. But the Captaine being a valiant man, and preasing himselfe in the brunt of the Battell, was sore wounded with a venomed Arrow, and after, with a Lance of Cane thrust in his face, slaine, for as much as the most of the Barbarians directed all their force against him. Beside the Captaine, were slaine of our men about eight or nine: Of the Barbarians, were fiftene slaine, and many sore wounded. After the death of the Captaine, they chose two other in his place; of the which, one was Odoardo Barbosa, a Portugall, and the other, John Serrano, who was shortly after betrayed by the Interpreter, and taken prisoner with diuers other. The Enemies would not permit Magalians Body to be ransomed at any price. 10

The Iland of Bohol.
They burnt one of their ships.
Black men.

Certaine dayes before the Captaines death, they had knowledge of the Ilands of Molucca, which they chiefly sought. Departing therefore from the Iland of Mathan, they sayled farre, and came to the Cape of another Iland, named Bohol. In the midst of this maine Sea (which they named Archipelagus) they consulted to burne the ship named Conception, because they were now few in number, and to furnish the other two ships with the Artillerie thereof. Thus directing their course toward Southwest, they came to another Iland named Pauloghon, where they found blacke men.

The Iland of Chippit.

Shortly after, they arriued at another great Iland, whose King, named Raia Calanar, entertained them very friendly in all things, as did the King of Mellana. This Iland is rich in Gold, and hath plentie of Rice, Ginger, Hogges, Goats, Hennes, and diuers other things. It is named Chippit, and is eight degrees aboue the Equinoctiall Line toward our Pole, and in longitude from the place from whence they first departed, an hundred and seuentie degrees, and about fiftie Leagues from Zubut. 20

The King, in token of peace, drew bloud of his left hand, and therewith anoynted his body, face, and the top of his tongue. The like was done by the Spaniards. Pigafetta was entertayned by the King and his two Wiues with deepe Carowles; which hee refused to pledge, excusing, that hee had supped. Here hee saw much Gold, but small prouision of Victuall. 30

The Iland of Caghian.

Departing from hence, they came to another Iland, named Caghian, being fortie Leagues from Chippit, as they sayled betweene the West and Southwest. This Iland is very great, and in manner vnhabited. The people are Mores, and were banished out of the Iland of Burnei, which some call Porne. They vse poysoned Arrowes, and haue store of Gold.

The Iland of Pulaoan.

From this Iland, about fise and twentie Leagues betweene the West and Northwest, they found a maruellous fruitfull Iland, named Pulaoan, being toward our Pole aboue the Equinoctiall nine degrees, and a third part, and an hundred seuentie and nine degrees, and a third part, in longitude from the place of their departing. In it is store of Rice, Ginger, Hogges and Goats, Hennes, Figges halfe a yard long, as bigge as a mans arme, very good, and others of lesser kindes; Cocos, Battatos, Sugar Canes, and a kind of pleasant Rootes. The King in token of friendship wounded his Brest with a Knife, touching with the bloud his Tongue and Forehead; and the Spaniards did likewise. The people goe naked, vse poysoned Arrowes, haue great Cocks, which they vse in Cock-fightings, but not for food, by reason of a reasonlesse superstition. They haue Wine of Rice, better then that of the Palme-tree, easily causing Drunkenesse. 40

The Iland of Burnei, or Porne.

From this Iland, ten Leagues toward the Southwest, they saw another Iland, which seemed to them sometimes to mount, as they sayled by the Coasts thereof. As they were entring into the Port, there arose a boystrous and darke Tempest, which ceased as soone as the Fires of the three Saints (whereof we haue spoken before) appeared vpon the Cables. From the beginning of this Iland to the Port, are fise Leagues. This Iland is great and rich, and the chiefe 50

A great Citie.
Elephants.

Citie thereof contayneth fise and twentie thousand Houses. The King entertayned our men very friendly, and sent them, beside many other presents, two Elephants, trapped with Silke, to bring them to his Pallace, that brought the presents which the Captaines sent him. Hee hath a magnificent Court, and a great Guard; also, a multitude of Concubines. Hee is a More, and is named Raia Siripada. Hee is a King of great power, and hath vnder him many other Kings, Ilands, and Cities. This Iland of Burnei is aboue the Equinoctiall, toward our Pole, fise degrees and a quarter, and in longitude from the place of their departing, an hundred seuentie six degrees, and two third parts. They vse here Betele and Arecca, and Rice-Wine, called Arach. Their reuerence to the King, is three times to hold the hands closed ouer the head, then to lift vp the feet one after the other, and lastly, to kisse their hands. The King hath ten 60 Scribes, or Secretaries, which write his affaires in Barks of Trees. His household was all ordered by Women, and the chiefe mens Daughters.

On the nine and twentieth of Iuly they were assaulted by an hundred Prawes and Iunkes, of which, they tooke foure; in one of which, was the sonne of the King of Lozon, Captaine generall generall to the King of Borneo, who now was returned from the sacke of Lao, a great Citie in the Iland towards Iava : For the Ethnikes, or Natiues, and the Mores of this Iland are in fierce Warres against each other. And had not the Pilot for a bribe let this man escape closely, hee had bene worth much to them in ransome. This King of Borneo had two Pearles, as it were Henne Egges, and so round, that on a plaine Table they would not stand firmly. In this Iland growes Camphir, which is the gumme of the Tree Capar, and Cinnamon, Ginger, Mirabolans, Oranges, Limons, Sugar, Cucumers, Melons, Swine, Goates, Hennes, Deere, Elephants, Horfe, &c.

Departing from Burnei, they came to an Iland called Cimbubon, being eight degrees seven 10 minutes about the Equinoctiall Line. Here they remayned fortie dayes, to calke their shippes, and furnish them with fresh Water and Fuell, which was to them great paine and trauell, because they were in manner all bare-footed, their shooes (and in manner their other Apparrell) being worne, by reason of the long Voyage. In the Woods of this Iland they found a Tree, whole Leaues as soone as they fall on the ground, doe stirre and remoue from place to place, as though they were aliue : they are much like the Leaues of a Mulberry Tree, and haue on euery side as it were two short and blunt feet. When they are cut or broken, there is no blood seene come forth of them : Yet when any of them are touched, they suddenly moue, and start away. Antonie Pigafetta kept one of them in a Platter for the space of eight dayes, and euer when he touched it, it ranne round about the Platter. Hee supposeth, that they liue onely by 20 ayre. Here were Crocodiles, and wild Hogges, and Ostriches. They tooke also a Fish, headed like a Swine, with two hornes, the rest of the body all of one bone, and as it were a saddle on the backe.

The Iland of Cimbubon.

Leaues of trees which seeme to liue.

Departing from hence, they directed their course by the West quarter toward the South-east, to find the Ilands of Molucca, and sayled not farre from certaine Mountaines, where they found the Sea full of great Weedes and Herbes.

A Sea full of Weedes, Pearles.

From hence, they came to the Ilands of Zolo and Taghima, in the which are found Pearles of exceeding bignesse. The King of Borneo had his two Pearles from hence, captiuing the King his father in Law, and making him pay them for ransome.

Following their course toward the North-east, they came to a great Citie named Mangdando, lying about the Ilands of Buthuan and Calaghan, where they tooke a Canoa of certaine 30 of the Inhabitants : by whom being informed of the Ilands of Molucca, they left their course toward the North-east, and followed the South-east, neere vnto a Cape of the Iland of Buthuan. They were aduertised for certaintie, that on the bankes of a certaine Riuer, there dwelt men, called Benaian, ouer-growne with hayre, which killed men, and did eat their hearts raw, with the iuice of Oranges and Limons. They are tall and strong, vse Bowes and Swords of Wood. In these Ilands growes the best Cinnamon, whereof they had seven and twentie pound in exchange for two Kniues. Here is the great Citie Mangdando. Being in six degrees, seven minutes, they made their way South-east, and encountred foure Ilands, Ciboco, Biramboia, Sarangani, Candingar.

Men ouer-growne with hayre.

40 A great Tempest here assailed them the foure and twentieth of October : but after their prayers, the three Lights appeared on their shrowds, whereupon the darknesse ceased, if a worke did not remayne. For they hereupon vowed to set free a slaue in honour of the three Saints, S. Helena, S. Nicholas, and S. Clare. How much more tolerable is that Ethnike adoration of the Sunne and Starres, then this of inferior Meteors, if it may any way be tolerable to giue the glory of God to a Creature ?

After the Tempest, they came to harbour in the Ile Sarangani, where they heard was Gold and Pearles. Here they tooke by force two Pilots for the Molucca's. They passed eight Ilands, some inhabited, some not ; their names were Ceana, Canida, Cabiaio, Camuca, Cabalu, Chiai, Lipan, Nuzza ; and then came to a faire Iland, called Sanghir, in three degrees and a halfe, 50 where were foure Gentile Kings. They passed fise other Ilands, and then espyed foure others, which their Pilot said were the Molucca's. This was the sixt day of Nouember, and the seven and twentieth moneth after their departure out of Spaine. Being therefore ioyfull, and giuing thanks vnto God, they discharged all their Ordenance. In the Coast of all these Ilands, euen vnto the Ilands of Molucca, sounding with their Plummet, they found the depth of the Sea to be no lesse then a hundred and two yards, which is contrary to the saying of the Portugals ; who affirme, That no ship can passe that way without great danger, by reason of the shallownesse, and Rockes or Shelues, and for the darkenesse which the Clouds cause in the Heauen. All which things they fayned, to the intent that none other should haue knowledge of their Voyages.

The Ilands of Molucca. The Portugals are reproved.

60 The eight day of Nouember, in the yeere 1521. before the rising of the Sunne, they entred into the Port of the Iland of Tidore, being one of the chiefe Ilands of Molucca, where they were honourably entertayned of the King : who declared, that hee had long before dreamed, that certaine ships should come from a faire Countrey, to the Ilands of Molucca : And that whereas, for the better certificate thereof, hee considered the stations of the Moone, hee saw therein

Tidore one of the Ilands of Molucca.

A Vision in the Planets.

therein the comming of our ships, and that wee were the men whom hee seemed to see in the same. Whereupon hee proffered himselfe to enter into league of friendship with the King of Spaine, and to accept our men as his Brethren and Children, willing them to come aland, as into their owne Houses. Also, that for their comming, that Iland should no more be called Tidore, but Castile, for the great loue which he bore to their King, whom he reputed as his Lord and Master. This King is a More, and is named Raia Sultan Manzor. He sware vpon the Alcoran (laying it three or foure times on his head, and saying certaine words) to be friend to the King of Spaine.

The five Ilands of Molucca.
Tarenate.

The Ilands of Molucca are five in number, and are thus named: Tarenate, Tidore, Mutir, Macchian, and Bacchian. Of these, Tarenate is the chiefe; and the King thereof, was sometime Lord of them all. Mutir and Macchian were now gouerned of the people. Bacchian had a King. The Cloue-trees are as bigge as a man about, tall; the Boughes large in the midst, and pointed at the top; the Leaues, as of Bay-trees; the Barke, of Oliue colour. The Cloues grow ten and twentie together, in the tops of the Boughes; first white, red at ripenesse, black by the drying. They gather them twice a yeere, in Iune and December. The Leafe, Barke, and Wood being greene, is as strong as the Cloue. If they take them not in their time, they grow great and hard. Euery man hath his owne Trees, and bestowes little Husbandry on them. The Women are brutish, and goe naked, saue that before their priuities they haue a couering made of a Tree, which being steeped in water, is beaten into as large a forme as they will, euen to the thinnesse of Silke.

The Iland of Gilolo.
Mores and Gentiles.

Directly against the Iland of Tidore, there is another great Iland, named Gilolo, inhabited of Mores and Gentiles. The Mores haue two Kings; of the which, one hath six hundred children, and the other six hundred and fiftie. The Gentiles keepe not so many Women as doe the Mores, nor yet liue in such superstitions. They pray to the first thing that they meete in the Morning, when they goe forth of their Houses, and honour that as their God for that day. The King of the Gentiles is very rich in Gold. In the said Iland of Gilolo are Reedes as bigge as a mans legge, and full of cleare water, hole some to be drunke.

Gold.
Water in Reedes.

Their manner of bartering.

The twelfth day of Nouember, the King of Tidore appointed our men a Ware-house in the Citie, where they might sell their Marchandise. Their manner of exchange was in this sort: For ten yards of good red Cloth, they had one Babar of Cloues, which amounteth to foure Cantari, and six pound weight; and one Cantar is a hundred pound weight. For fiftene yards of Cloth, somewhat worse then the other, they receiued in Cambie, one Babar. For five and thirtie drinking Cuppes of Glasse, they had one Babar. For seuentene Cathyls of Quick-siluer, one Babar. They came dayly to the shippes, with many of their Barkes full of Goats, Hennes, Figges of a span long, also the Fruit called Cocus, with diuers other kindes of Victuals, in such quantitie, that it was a marvellous thing to behold. They furnished also their ships with fresh Water, which is hot as it issueth out of the Spring, but is very cold when it hath stood a while in another place. It springeth from the Mountaines, on the which the Cloue-trees grow. They saw a Cloud rise in manner daily, which compasseth about the said Mountaines of Cloue-trees. There were some Nutmeg-trees also.

Water of a strange quality.

Birds of a strange forme.

The King of the Iland of Bacchian sent the King of Spaine two dead Birds, of strange forme: They were of the bignesse of Turtle-Doues, with little heads and long bylls; also long and small legges, and no wings, but in the stead thereof, certaine long feathers of diuers colours, and tayles like Turtle-Doues; all the other feathers are of one colour, much like vnto Tawny, except those of the wings: they flye not, but when the winde bloweth. These Mores are of opinion, that these Birds come from the heauenly Paradise, and therefore call them Manucco-diata, that is, the Birds of God.

When they were determined to depart from the Ilands of Molucca, certaine Kings of the Ilands accompanied them with their Canoas, and conducted them to an Iland called Mare, where they refreshed their shippes with fresh Water and Fuell. The Kings sent the Emperors Maiestie many presents; and embracing our men, departed with the teares in their eyes: and our men, for their last farewell, shot off all their Ordenance.

They leaue
one of their shippes behind them.

In the Iland of Mare they perceiued, that one of their shippes leaked and tooke water very sore, whereby they were enforced to tarry there three dayes: but seeing that they could finde no remedie for the same, but in long time, they determined to leaue it; giuing order, that if afterward it could bee repayred, they should returne into Spaine as well as they could.

The Ilands of Molucca.

Hony of Flyes.

Popingayes.

In all the Ilands of Molucca, is found Cloues, Ginger, Bread of the branches or inner parts of Sagu, Rice, Goats, Sheepe, Hennes, Figges, Almonds, sweet Pomegranats and sowre, Oranges, Limons, and Honey, which is made of certaine Flyes lesse then Ants: Also Canes of Sugar, Oyle of Cocus, Melons, Gourds, and a marvellous cold Fruit, which they name Camulicai, and diuers other Fruits. Furthermore, white and red Popingayes, and other of variable colours. It is not past fiftie yeeres since the Mores first inhabited any of these Ilands, which were before inhabited onely with Gentiles.

The

The Iland of Tidore is about the Equinoctiall Line toward our Pole, about seven and twenty minutes, and in longitude from the place from whence they departed, a hundred seventie one degrees, and from the Archipelagus, in the which is the Iland of Zamal, which our men named the Iland of Theeues, nine degrees and a halfe, and runneth to the quarter of South South-west, and North North-east. Terenate is vnder the Equinoctiall Line foure minutes, vnder the Pole Antartike. Mutir is directly vnder the Equinoctiall Line. Macchian is fifteen minutes toward the Pole Antartike: and Bacchian, one degree. These Ilands are like foure sharpe Mountaines, except Macchian, which is not sharpe. The biggest of all these, is Bacchian.

The Iland of Tidore.

Terenate:
Mutir.
Macchian.
Bacchian.

- 10 Departing from the Iland of Mare, and directing their course toward the South-west, with onely six and fortie men in their ship, and thirteene Indians, they passed by the Ilands of Chacouan, Lagoma, Sico, Gioghi, Caphi, Sulacho, Lumatola, Tenetum, Buru, Ambon, Budia, Celaruri, Benaia, Ambalao, Bandon, Zorobua, Zolot, Noceumamor, Galian, and Mallua, with diuers other Ilands both great and small, of Mores, Gentiles, and Canibals. Our men remayned fifteen dayes in the Iland of Mallua, to repayre their shippe in certaine places where it tooke water. All the fields of this Iland are full of long and round Pepper, and is situate toward the Pole Antartike, vnder the Equinoctiall Line, eight degrees and a halfe, and is in the longitude of a hundred sixtie nine degrees, and fortie minutes. The people are Men-eaters. The Women vse Bowes and Arrowes. The Men weare their Hayre and Beards in Canes. There growes much Pepper, both long and round, with Leaues like Mulberry, and climbing, like to Iuie.
- 20

Many Ilands.

The Iland of Mallua.

Pepper.

The Pilot which our men brought out of the Ilands of Molucca, told them, That not farre from thence was an Iland named Arucetto, in the which are Men and Women not past a Cubit in height, hauing eares of such bignesse, that they lye vpon one, and couer them with the other. But our men would not sayle thither, both because the Winde and course of the Sea was against them, and also for that they gaue no credit to his report.

Little men with long eares; a fabulous report.
Such hath bin
the ground of fabulous Monsters in Pliny,
&c.
The Iland of Timor.
White Saunders and Ginger.
The Deuill ap-peareth.
Saint Iob his disease.

- The five and twentieth day of Ianuary, in the yeere 1522. they departed from Mallua, and the day following arriued at a great Iland named Timor, being five Leagues distant from Mallua, betweene the South and South-west. In this Iland is found the Wood of white Saunders, and Ginger, and diuers kindes of Fruits. Also sundry kindes of Beasts, and plentie of Viſtuall and Gold. They of the Ilands of Giaua, Molucca, and Lozon, resort to this Iland for Saunders. The Inhabitants are Gentiles. They say, that when they goe to cut the Wood of Saunders, the Deuill appeareth to them in diuers formes, and asketh them what they haue neede of: And that after this Vision, many of them are long sicke. In all the Ilands of this Archipelagus, reigneth the Disease of Saint Iob (which we call the French Poxe) more then in any other place in the World. This Iland stands in ten degrees Antartike, and a hundred seventie foure in longitude.
- 30

Farre from this Iland, betweene the West and North-west, they came to an Iland named Ende, in the which groweth great plentie of Cinnamome. In this Tract are found many Ilands, lying in order (as it were) one directly behinde another, euen vnto the Iland of the greater Giaua, named Giaua maior, and vnto the Cape of Malacha, being in East India. Giaua the lesse is as bigge as the Iland of Madera, and is but halfe a League distant from Giaua maior.

Cinnamome.
The Ilands of Giaua.
Malacha.

The eleuenth day of February, in the yeere 1522. they departed from the Iland of Timor, and were ingulſed by chance in the great Sea called Lantchidol, and tooke their course betweene the West and South-west, leauing the North Coasts on their right hand, fearing lest if they should sayle toward the firme Land, they might be seene of the Portugals, who are of great power in Malacha: and therefore directed their course without the Iland of Sumatra, called in old time Taprobana. And more safely to passe the Cape of Buona Speranza, being about Africke, they sayled about two and fortie degrees toward the Pole Antartike, and remayned seven weekes about that Cape, with many fetches compassing the Winde, with their sayles continually aloft, because they had a West and North-west Winde in the prow of their shippe, which would not suffer them to passe. The Cape of Buona Speranza is toward the Pole Antartike, beneath the Equinoctiall Line, foure and thirtie degrees and a halfe, and a thousand six hundred Leagues from the Cape of Malacha, and is the greatest and most dangerous Cape that is found at this day in all the World.

50

The Sea of Lantchidol.

Malacha.
The Iland of Sumatra.
Cap. de Buona Speranza.

- When they had by these perils ouer-passed this Cape, certaine of them, as well for lacke of Viſtuall, as also by reason of Sicknesse, were minded to sayle to a Hauen of the Portugals, named Mozambique, about Africke: But the other answered, That they would rather die, then goe to any other place then directly to Spaine. They followed their course therefore, sayling toward the South-west two moneths continually, without touching at any Port, in which time there died about one and twentie of their companie, whom they cast into the Sea. And surely, if God of his infinite mercie had not preferred the residue in time, they had all died of famine.
- 60

The Port of Mozambique.

The Port of
S. Lucas, neere vnto Siuile.

What became of the other shippe.
Darien.

* This Voyage is in Ramusio his first Tome.

In fine, being enforced of necessitie, and halfe of their companie dead, they sayled to one of the Ilands of Capo Verde, called Insula Sancti Iacobi, that is, Saint James Iland, pertayning to the King of Portugall. Where, as soone as they arriued, they sent certaine a-land in the ship-boat for Victuals, declaring to the Portugals with all loue and fauour, what necessitie they were driuen to, and what miseries and trauailes they had sustayned: informing them furthermore of their maruellous Voyage, and such things as they had seene in both the East and West India, with such other gentle words, whereby they obtayned certaine Measures of Rice. But when afterward thirteene of them returned for more Rice, they were detayned. Whereupon the rest which remayned in the shippe, fearing the like chance, departed with full sayles, and the seuenth day of September, with the helpe of God, entred into the Hauen of San Lucas, 10
neere vnto Siuile: where discharging all their Ordenance for ioy, they went immediately to the great Church, in their shirts, and bare-footed, with a Torch before them, to giue thanks to Almighty God, who had brought them safe to their owne Countrey, and restored them to their Wiues and Children.

Of this shippe San Victoria, which returned, and had first discovered the Straits, they were called the Straits of Victoria, which name passed after to Magalanes himselfe.

The other shippe, which they left behind them to be repayred, returned afterward by the Archipelagus aforesaid, and by the great Sea, to the Coasts of the firme of the West India, and arriued at a Region of the same, being against Dariena, where the South Sea of Sur is separate but by a little space of Land from the West Ocean, in the which are the Ilands of Hispaniola 20 and Cuba, and other Ilands of the Spaniards.

The Portugals tooke the Trinitie, and the Castilians in Tidore, and ouerthrew their Factorie. They built also, by leaue, a Fort in Ternate, and established a Factorie for themselves, indenting, that they alone should haue the Cloues sold to them. John Sebastian Cano, which brought home the shippe Victoria into Spaine, was well rewarded by the Emperour. But much strife hereby grew betwixt Spaine and Portugall, each challenging the Molucca's to his owne diuision. Cosmographers were in fine appointed to define the Controuersie, with Pilots and Iudges on both sides deputed: and after much menaces, and brabbles, and delays, the Portugals Trade being great, and loth to lose such a merzell, tooke the aduantage of the Emperours marriage to the Lady Isabel, sister to King John of Portugall: which hauing vie of money, 30 empawned the Ilands and Trade of Spicerie (going then into Italy to be crowned, Anno 1529.) to the said King for three hundred and fiftie thousand Duckats, without terme limited. In the yeere 1548. Cortes offered to repay that money for six yeeres profits of that Trade, and to leaue the same after that to the Crowne: But the Emperour would not admit it. And so it continued, till the Crowne of Portugall it selfe was annexed to the Castilian.

Before also, some had attempted this discouerie out of New Spaine by the South Sea: but unluckily, as by the relation of Iuan Gaetan, a Castilian Pilot, * appeareth: Who set sayle from the Port of Natiuitie, in twentie degrees, 1542. and came to the Molucca's, where the King of Tidore gaue them kinde entertainment, but their weake shippe forced them to agree with the Spaniards. This Sea is yeerely navigated by the Spaniards to the Philippina's, which 40 now also concur with the Molucca's.

CHAP. III.

The second Circum-Navigation of the Earth: Or the renowned Voyage of Sir FRANCIS DRAKE, the first Generall which euer sayled about the whole Globe, begun in the yeere of our Lord, 1577.

heretofore published by M. R. HACKLVT, and now reuiued and corrected.

THE fifteenth day of Nouember, in the yeere of our Lord 1577. M. Francis Drake with a Fleet of five Ships and Barkes, and to the number of a hundred sixtie foure men, Gentlemen and Saylers, departed from Plimmouth, giuing out his pretended Voyage for Alexandria: but the Wind falling contrary, hee was forced the next morning to put into Falmouth Hauen in Cornewall, where such and so terrible a Tempest tooke vs, as few men haue seene the like, and was indeed so vehement, that all our ships were like to haue gone to wracke: but it pleased God to preserue vs from that extremitie, and to afflict vs onely for that present with these two particulars; The Mast of our Admirall, which was the Pellican, was cut ouer-board, for the safegard of the ship, 60 and the Marigold was driuen ashore, and somewhat bruised. For the repaying of which damages, wee returned againe to Plimmouth: and hauing recouered those harmes, and brought the ships againe to good state, wee set forth the second time from Plimmouth, and set sayle the thirteenth day of December following.

The

The five and twentieth day of the same moneth, wee fell with the Cape Cantin, vpon the Coast of Barbarie: and coasting along, the seven and twentieth day wee found an Iland called Mogador, lying one mile distant from the maine; betweene which Iland and the maine, wee found a very good and safe harbour for our shippes to ride in, as also very good entrance, and void of any danger. On this Iland our Generall erected a Pinnace, whereof he brought out of England with him foure ready framed.

The Isle of Mogador on the Coast of Barbarie.

While these things were in doing, there came to the Waters side some of the inhabitants of the Countrey, shewing forth their Flags of Truce: which being seene of our Generall, hee sent his shippe-boat to the shore, to know what they would. They being willing to come aboard, 10 our men left there one man of our companie for a pledge, and brought two of theirs aboard our shippe, which by signes shewed our Generall, that the next day they would bring some prouision, as Sheepe, Capons, and Hennes, and such like: whereupon our Generall bestowed amongst them some Linnen Cloth, and Shooes, and a Iauelin, which they very ioyfully receiued, and departed for that time. The next morning they fayled not to come againe to the Waters side, and our Generall againe setting out our Boat, one of our men leaping ouer-rashly ashore, and offering friendly to embrace them, they layd violent hands on him, offering a Dagger to his Throat, if he had made any resistance, and so laying him on a Horse, carryed him away: So that a man cannot be too circumspect and warie of himselfe, amongst such Miscreants.

Our Pinnace being finished, wee departed from this place the thirtieth and last day of December: and coasting along the shore, wee did descrie, not contrary to our expectation, certaine 20 Canters, which were Spanish Fisher-men; to whom wee gaue chase, and tooke three of them: and proceeding further, we met with three Carauels, and tooke them also.

The seuenteenth day of Ianuary we arrived at Cape Blanco, where we found a shippe riding at anchor, within the Cape, and but two simple Mariners in her: which shippe we tooke, and carryed her further into the Harbour, where we remayned foure dayes; and in that space our Generall mustered, and trayned his men on Land, in warlike manner, to make them fit for all occasions. In this place we tooke of the Fisher-men such necessities as we wanted, and they could yeeld vs; and leauing here one of our little Barkes, called the Benedict, wee tooke with vs one of theirs, which they called Canters, being of the Burthen of fortie Tunnes, or there- 30 abouts.

All these things being finished, wee departed this Harbour the two and twentieth of Ianuary, carrying along with vs one of the Portugall Carauels, which was bound to the Ilands of Cape Verde for Salt, whereof good store is made in one of those Ilands.

The Master or Pilot of that Carauell did aduertise our Generall, That vpon one of those Ilands, called Mayo, there was great store of dried Cabritos, which a few Inhabitants, there dwelling, did yeerely make ready for such of the Kings ships as did there touch, being bound for his Countrey of Brasile, or elsewhere. Wee fell with this Iland the seven and twentieth of Ianuary: but the Inhabitants would in no case traffique with vs, being thereof forbidden by the Kings Edict. Yet the next day our Generall sent to view the Iland, and the likelyhoods 40 that might be there of prouision of Victuals, about threescore and two men, vnder the conduct and gouernment of Master Winter and Master Doughtie: and marching towards the chiefe place of habitation in this Iland (as by the Portugall wee were informed) hauing trauelled to the Mountaines the space of three miles, and arriuing there somewhat before the day breake, we rested our selues, to see day before vs; which appearing, wee found the Inhabitants to be fied: but the place, by reason that it was manured, we found to be more fruitfull then the other part, especially the Valleys among the Hills.

The Isle of Mayo.

Here we gaue our selues a little refreshing, as by very ripe and sweet Grapes, which the fruitfulness of the Earth at that season of the yeere yeelded vs: and that season being with vs the depth of Winter, it may seeme strange that those Fruits were then there growing: but the 50 reason thereof is this, because they being betweene the Tropique and the Equinoctiall, the Sunne passeth twice in the yeere through their Zenith, ouer their heads, by meanes whereof, they haue two Summers; and being so neere the heat of the Line, they neuer lose the heat of the Sunne so much, but the Fruits haue their encrease and continuance in the midst of Winter. The Iland is wonderfully stored with Goats and wild Hennes, and it hath Salt also without labour, saue onely that the people gather it into heapes, which continually in great quantitie is encreased vpon the Sands, by the flowing of the Sea, and the heat of the Sunne kerning the same; so that of the encrease thereof, they keepe a continuall Traffique with their Neighbours.

Ripe Grapes
in Winter.

Amongst other things, we found here a kind of Fruit called Cocos; which, because it is not commonly knowne with vs in England, I thought good to make some description of it. The 60 Tree beareth no Leaues nor Branches, but at the very top the Fruit groweth in clusters, hard at the top of the stemme of the Tree, as big euery leuerall Fruit as a mans head: but hauing taken off the vttermost Barke, which you shall find to be very full of strings or sinewes, as I may terme them, you shall come to a hard shell, which may hold of quantitie in Liquor a Pint commonly,

The description of the Tree that beareth Cocos.

monly, or some a Quart, and some lesse : within that shell, of the thicknesse of halfe an ynch good, you shall haue a kind of hard substance, and very white, no lesse good and sweet then Almonds ; within that againe a certaine cleare Liquor, which being drunke, you shall not onely find it very delicate and sweet, but most comfortable and cordiall.

After wee had satisfied our selues with some of these Fruits, wee marched further into the Island, and saw great store of Cabritos aliue, which were so chased by the inhabitants, that wee could doe no good towards our prouision : but they had layd out (as it were) to stop our mouthes withall, certaine old dryed Cabritos, which being but ill, and small, and few, wee made no account of.

The Isle of
S. Iago.

Being returned to our shippes, our Generall departed hence the one and thirtieth of this moneth, and sayled by the Island of Saint Iago, but farre enough from the danger of the inhabitants, who shot and discharged at vs three Peeeces, but they all fell short of vs, and did vs no harme. The Island is faire and large, and as it seemeth, rich and fruitfull, and inhabited by the Portugals : but the Mountaines and high places of the Island are said to bee possessed by the Meres ; who hauing beene slaues to the Portugals, to ease themselves, made escape to the desert places of the Island, where they abide with great strength.

A Prize, and Nuno da Silva, a Portugall Pilot, taken.

Being before this Island, wee espyed two shippes vnder sayle, to the one of which wee gaue chase, and in the end boarded her with a ship-boat without resistance, which we found to be a good Prize, and she yeelded vnto vs good store of Wine : which Prize our Generall committed to the custodie of Master Doughtie ; and retayning the Pilot, sent the rest away with his Pinace, giuing them a But of Wine, and some Victuals, and their wearing Clothes, and so they departed.

The Isle of Fogo.

The same Night wee came with the Island called by the Portugals, Ilha del fogo, that is, the burning Island : in the North side whereof is a consuming fire, the matter is said to be of Sulphure, but notwithstanding it is like to be a commodious Island, because the Portugals haue built, and doe inhabite there. Vpon the South side thereof lyeth a most pleasant and sweet Island, the Trees whereof are alwayes greene and faire to looke vpon, in respect whereof, they call it Ilha Braua, that is, the braue Island. From the bankes thereof, into the Sea, doe runne in many places reasonable streames of fresh Waters, ealie to be come by, but there was no conuenient Roade for our shippes : for such was the depth, that no ground could bee had for anchoring ; and it is reported, that Ground was neuer found in that place : so that the tops of Fogo burne not so high in the Ayre, but the rootes of Braua are drenched as low in the Sea.

Being departed from these Islands, wee drew towards the Line, where wee were becalmed the space of three weekes, but yet subiect to diuers great Stormes, terrible Lightnings, and much Thunder : but with this miserie, wee had the commoditie of great store of Fish, as Dolphins, Bonitos, and flying Fishes, whereof some fell into our shippes, where-hence they could not rise againe, for want of moysture ; for when their Wings are drie, they cannot flye.

Aprill.
33. Degrees.

From the first day of our departure from the Islands of Cape Verde, wee sayled foure and fiftie dayes without sight of Land, and the first Land that wee fell wirth, was the Coast of Brasil, which wee saw the fift of April, in the height of three and thirtie degrees towards the Pole Antartike : and being discouraged at Sea by the inhabitants of the Countrey, they made vpon the Coast great fires for a Sacrifice (as wee learned) to the Devils ; about which, they vse Coniurations, making heapes of Sand, and other Ceremonies, that when any shippe shall goe about to stay vpon their Coast, not onely Sands may be gathered together in Shoalds in euery place, but also that Stormes and Tempests may arise, to the casting away of shippes and men, whereof (as it is reported) there haue beene diuers experiments.

The Cape of Ioy.

The seuenth day, in a mightie great Storme both of Lightning, Raine, and Thunder, wee lost the Canter, which wee called the Christopher : but the eleuenth day after, by our Generalls great care in dispersing his shippes, wee found her againe ; and the place where wee met, our Generall called the Cape of Ioy, where euery shippe tooke in some Water. Here wee found a good Temperature, and sweet Ayre, a very faire and pleasant Countrey, with an exceeding fruitfull Soyle, where were great store of large and mightie Deere, but wee came not to the sight of any people : but traueilling further into the Countrey, wee perceiued the footing of people in the Clay-ground, shewing that they were men of great stature. Being returned to our shippes, wee weighed anchor, and ranne somewhat further, and harboured our selues betweene a Rocke and the Main, where, by meanes of the Rocke that brake the force of the Sea, wee rid very safe : and vpon this Rocke wee killed, for our prouision, certaine Sea-Wolues, commonly called with vs Seales.

The Entrance into the Riuer of Plate.

From hence wee went our course to six and thirtie degrees, and entred the great Riuer of Plate, and ranne into foure and fiftie and three and fiftie fadomes and a halfe of fresh Water, where wee filled our Water by the shippes side : but our Generall finding here no good Harbough, as hee thought hee should, bare out againe to Sea the seuen and twentieth of Aprill, and in bearing out, wee lost sight of our Flie-boat wherein Master Doughtie was : but wee sayling along, found a faire and reasonable good Bay, wherein were many, and the same profitable Ilands, one whereof had so many Seales, as would at the least haue laden all our shippes ; and the rest of the Ilands are as it were laden with Fowles, which is wonderfull to see, and they of diuers sorts. It is a place very plentifull of Victuals, and hath in it no want of fresh Water. Our Generall after certaine dayes of his abode in this place, being on shore in an Iland, the people of the Countrey shewed themselves vnto him, leaping and dancing, and entred into traffique with him, but they would not receiue any thing at any mans hands, but the same must be cast vpon the ground. They are of cleane, comely, and strong bodies, swift on foot, and seeme to be very actiue.

Abundance of Seales.

10 The eighteenth day of May our Generall thought it needfull to haue a care of such ships as were absent, and therefore indeuouring to seeke the Flie-boat wherein Master Doughtie was, wee espyed her againe the next day : and whereas certaine of our ships were sent to discouer the Coast, and to search an Harbour, the Marygold and the Canter being employed in that businesse, came vnto vs, and gaue vs vnderstanding of a safe Harbour that they had found, where-with all our ships bare, and entred it, where wee watred, and made new prouision of Victuals, as by Seales, whereof wee slew to the number of two hundred or three hundred in the space of an houre.

The Flie-boat cast off and burnt.

20 Here our Generall in the Admirall rid close aboard the Flie-boat, and tooke out of her all the prouision of Victuals and what else was in her, and haling her to the Land, set fire to her, and so burnt her, to saue the Iron worke : Which being a doing, there came downe of the Countrey certaine of the people naked, sauing onely about their Waite the Skinne of some Beast, with the furre or hayre on, and something also wreathed on their heads : their faces were painted with diuers colours, and some of them had on their heads the similitude of hornes, euery man his Bow, which was an Ell in length, and a couple of Arrowes. They were very agill people, and quicke to deliuer, and seemed not to be ignorant in the feates of Warres, as by their order of ranging a few men, might appeare. These people would not of a long time receiue any thing at our hands : yet at length our Generall being ashore, and they dancing after their accustomed manner about him, and hee once turning his backe towards them, one leapt suddenly to him, and tooke his Cap with his Gold Band off his head, and ranne a little distance from him, and shared it with his fellow, the Cap to the one, and the Band to the other. Hauing dispatched all our businesse in this place, wee departed and set sayle, and immediately vpon our setting forth, wee lost our Canter, which was absent three or foure dayes : but when our Generall had her againe, hee tooke out the necessaries, and so gaue her ouer, neere to the Cape of Good Hope.

The people of the Countrey.

The Cape of Good Hope.

30 The next day after, being the twentieth of Iune, wee harboured our selues againe in a very good Harborough, called by Magellan, Port S. Iulian, where wee found a Gibbet standing vpon the Maine, which wee supposed to be the place where Magellan did execution vpon some of his disobedient and rebellious company. And here M. Thomas Doughty was tried, and re-40 ceiued sentence of death, which was also here executed. Here also some of our men going ashore, were by the Sauages forced to retire.

Iune.

Port S. Iulian.

M. Thomas
Doughty executed.

The seuenteenth day of August wee departed the Port of S. Iulian, and the twentieth day wee fell with the Strait or Freat of Magellan, going into the South Sea, at the Cape or Head-land whereof, wee found the bodie of a dead Man, whose flesh was cleane consumed.

August.

The Strait of Magellan.

The one and twentieth day wee entred the Strait, which wee found to haue many turnings, and as it were shuttings vp, as if there were no passage at all, by meanes whereof, wee had the Winde often against vs, so that some of the Fleet recouering a Cape or Point of Land, others should be forced to turne backe againe, and to come to an Anchor where they could. In this Strait there be many faire Harbours, with store of fresh Water, but yet they lacke their best commoditie : for the Water is there of such depth, that no man shall find ground to anchor in, except it be in some narrow Riuer or Corner, or betweene some Rockes ; so that if any extreme Blasts or contrary Winds doe come (whereunto the place is much subiect) it carrieth with it no small danger.

50 The Land on both sides is very huge and mountainous ; the lower Mountaines whereof, although they be monstrous and wonderfull to looke vpon, for their height, yet there are others which in height exceede them in a strange manner, reaching themselves about their fellowes so high, that betweene them did appeare three Regions of Clouds : These Mountaines are couered with Snow : At both the Southerly and Easterly parts of the Strait 60 there are Ilands, among which the Sea hath his indraught into the Straits, euen as it hath in the maine entrance of the Freat. This Strait is extreme cold, with Frost and Snow continually : The Trees seeme to stoope with the burthen of the Weather, and yet are Greene continually ; and many good and sweet Herbes doe very plentifully grow and increafe vnder them.

The bredth of the Straits of Magellan.

Abundance of Penguins in the Strait.

September.

The bredth of the Strait is in some place a League, in some other places two Leagues, and three Leagues, and in some other, foure Leagues: but the narrowest place hath a League ouer.

The foure and twentieth of August wee arriued at an Iland in the Straits, where wee found great store of Fowle which could not flye, of the bignesse of Geese, whereof wee killed in lesse then one day three thousand, and victualled our felues throughly therewith.

The sixt day of September wee entred the South Sea at the Cape or Head shore.

The seuenth day wee were driuen by a great storme from the entring into the South Sea, two hundred Leagues and odde in longitude, and one degree to the Southward of the Strait: in which height, and so many Leagues to the Westward, the fifteenth day of September fell out the Eclipse of the Moone, at the houre of sixe of the Clocke at Night: but neyther did the Eclipticall conflict of the Moone impayre our state, nor her clearing againe amend vs a whit, but the accustomed Eclipse of the Sea continued in his force, wee being darkened more then the Moone seuen-fold.

57. Degrees
and a terce of Southerly latitude.

Botero writeth, that another hath found this place all Ilands.

M. Winter separated and returned.

From the Bay (which wee called, The Bay of seuering of Friends) wee were driuen backe to the Southward of the Straits, in seuen and fiftie degrees and a terce: in which height, wee came to an anchor among the Ilands, hauing there fresh and very good Water, with Herbes of singular vertue. Not farre from hence, wee entred another Bay, where wee found people, both Men and Women, in their Canoas, naked, and ranging from one Iland to another, to seeke their Meat; who entred traffique with vs, for such things as they had.

Wee returning hence Northward againe, found the third of October three Ilands, in one of which was such plentie of Birds, as is scant credible to report.

The eight day of October wee lost sight of one of our Consorts, wherein M. Winter was, who, as then wee supposed, was put by a storme into the Straits againe: which, at our returne home, wee found to be true, and he not perished, as some of our companie feared.

[He still (I think) is alieue. I conferred with him of this Voyage at Batbe, in Septemb. 1618. He told me, and desired that it should be published, That formall Possession was then and there taken of the said Straits and Territories, with Turfe and Twigge, after the English manner; Captaine Drake deliuering him the said Possession, in the name and to the vse of Queene Elizabeth, and her Successors.]

The trending of the Coast of Chili.

The Ile la
Mocha, in 38. degrees and
30. minutes.

Thus being come into the height of the Straits againe, wee ranne, supposing the Coast of Chili to lye as the generall Maps haue described it, namely, North-west, which wee found to lye and trend to the North-east, and Eastwards: whereby it appeareth, that this part of Chili hath not bene truely hitherto discouered, or at the least not truely reported, for the space of twelue degrees at the least, being set downe eyther of purpose to deceiue, or of ignorant coniecture.

Wee continuing our course, fell the nine and twentieth of Nouember with an Iland called la Mocha, where wee cast anchor, and our Generall hoysing out our Boat, went with tenne of our companie to shore, where wee found people, whom the cruell and extreme dealings of the Spaniards haue forced, for their owne safetie and libertie, to flye from the Mainie, and to fortifie themselves in this Iland. Wee being on land, the people came downe to vs to the Water side, with shew of great courtesie, bringing to vs Potatoes, Rootes, and two very fat Sheepe, which our Generall receiued, and gaue them other things for them, and had promise to haue Water there: But the next day repaying againe to the shore, and sending two men aland with Barrells to fill Water, the people taking them for Spaniards (to whom they vse to shew no fauour, if they take them) layd violent hands on them, and as we thinke, slew them.

Our Generall seeing this, stayed here no longer, but weighed anchor, and set sayle towards the Coast of Chili, and drawing towards it, wee met neere to the shore an Indian in a Canoa, who thinking vs to haue bene Spaniards, came to vs and told vs, That at a place called S. Iago, there was a great Spanish shippe laden from the Kingdome of Pern: for which good newes, our Generall gaue him diuers Trifles, whereof he was glad, and went along with vs, and brought vs to the place, which is called the Port of Valparizo.

The Port of Valparizo, in 33. degrees,
40. minutes.

Wine of Chili.

When wee came thither, wee found indeede the shippe riding at anchor, hauing in her eight Spaniards and three Negros, who thinking vs to haue bene Spaniards, and their friends, welcommed vs with a Drumme, and made ready a Bottija, of Wine of Chili, to drinke to vs: but as soone as wee were entred, one of our company, called Thomas Moone, began to lay about him, and stricke one of the Spaniards, and said vnto him, Abaxo Perro, that is in English, Goe downe Dogge. One of these Spaniards seeing persons of that qualitie in those Seas, all to crossed and blessed himselfe: but to be short, wee stowed them vnder Hatches, all saue one Spaniard, who suddenly and desperately leapt ouer-board into the Sea, and swam ashore to the

The Towne of
S. Iago taken.

Towne of S. Iago, to giue them warning of our arriuall. They of the Towne being not aboue nine Households, presently fled away, and abandoned the Towne. Our Generall manned his Boat, and the Spanish shippes Boat, and went to the Towne: and being come to it, wee rifled it, and came to a small Chappell, which wee entred, and found therein a Siluer Challice, two Cruets, Cruets, and one Altar-Cloth, the spoyle whereof our Generall gaue to M. Fletcher, his Minister. Wee found also in this Towne a Ware-house, stored with Wine of Chili, and many boords of Cedar-Wood; all which Wine wee brought away with vs, and certaine of the boords, to burne for fire-wood: and so being come aboard, wee departed the Hauen, hauing first set all the Spaniards on land, sauing one Iohn Griego, a Greeke borne, whom our Generall carryed with him for his Pilot, to bring him into the Hauen of Lima.

Wine of Chili.Iohn Griego, a Pilot, taken.

When wee were at Sea, our Generall rifled the shippe, and found in her good store of the Wine of Chili, and fve and twentie thousand Pezoes of very pure and fine Gold of Baldinia, amounting in value to seuen and thirtie thousand Duckats of Spanish Money, and aboue. So 10 going on our course, wee arriued next at a place called Coquimbo, where our Generall sent foure-teene of his men on land to fetch Water: but they were espyed by the Spaniards, who came with three hundred horsemen and two hundred footmen, and slew one of our men with a Peece; the rest came aboard in safetie, and the Spaniards departed: wee went on shore againe, and buried our man, and the Spaniards came downe againe with a Flag of Truce; but wee set sayle, and would not trust them.

Gold of Baldinia.Coquimbo in 29. degrees, 30. minutes.

From hence wee went to a certaine Port, called Tarapaca: where being landed, wee found by the Sea side a Spaniard lying asleepe, who had lying by him thirteene Barres of Siluer, which weighed foure thousand Duckats Spanish; wee tooke the Siluer, and left the man.

Tarapaca.

Not farre from hence, going on land for fresh Water, wee met with a Spaniard and an Indian 20 Boy driuing eight Llamas or Sheepe of Pern, which are as bigge as Asles; euery of which Sheepe had on his backe two Bagges of Leather, each Bagge containing fiftie pound weight of fine Siluer: so that bringing both the Sheepe and their Burthen to the shippes, wee found in all the Bagges eight hundred weight of Siluer.

Hence wee sayled to a place called Arica: and being entred the Port, wee found there three small Barks, which wee rifled, and found in one of them seuen and fiftie Wedges of Siluer, each of them weighing about twentie pound weight, and euery of these Wedges were of the fashion and bignesse of a Brick-bat. In all these three Barks wee found not one person: for they mistrusting no strangers, were all gone aland to the Towne, which consisteth of about 30 twentie Houses, which we would haue ransacked, if our companie had beene better, and more in number. But our Generall contented with the spoyle of the shippes, left the Towne, and put off againe to Sea, and set sayle for Lima, and by the way met with a small Barke, which hee boarded, and found in her good store of Linnen Cloth, whereof taking some quantitie, hee let her goe.

Arica in 18. degrees, 30. minutes.

To Lima wee came the thirteenth day of February: and being entred the Hauen, wee found there about twelue sayle of shippes, lying fast moored at an anchor, hauing all their sayles carryed on shore: for the Masters and Marchants were here most secure, hauing neuer beene assaulted by enemies, and at this time feared the approach of none such as wee were. Our Generall rifled these shippes, and found in one of them a Chest full of Ryals of Plate, and good store of Silkes and Linnen Cloth, and tooke the Chest into his owne shippe, and good store of 40 the Silkes and Linnen. In which shippe hee had newes of another shippe, called the Cacafuego, which was gone towards Paita, and that the same shippe was laden with Treasure: whereupon wee stayed no longer here, but cutting all the Cables of the shippes in the Hauen, wee let them driue whither they would, eyther to Sea, or to the shore, and with all speede wee followed the Cacafuego toward Paita, thinking there to haue found her; but before wee arriued there, shee was gone from thence towards Panama: whom our Generall still pursued, and by the way met with a Barke laden with Ropes and Tackle for shippes, which hee boarded and searched, and found in her fourescore pound weight of Gold, and a Crucifixe of Gold, with goodly great Emeraulds set in it, which hee tooke, and some of the Cordage also for his owne shippe.

Lima in 11. degrees, 50. minutes.

From hence wee departed, still following the Cacafuego, and our Generall promised our companie, that whosoeuer could first descry her, should haue his Chayne of Gold for his good newes. It fortunied, that Iohn Drake going vp into the top, descryed her about three of the clocke, and about fixe of the clocke wee came to her and boarded her, and shot at her three 50 Peeces of Ordenance, and stricke downe her Milne: and being entred, wee found in her great Riches, as Jewels and precious Stones, thirteene Chests full of Ryals of Plate, fourescore pound weight of Gold, and six and twentie Tunne of Siluer. The place where wee tooke this Prize, was called Cape de San Francisco, about an hundred and fiftie Leagues from Panama.

The rich ship called the Cacafuego, taken.

The Pilots name of this shippe, was Francisco: and amongst other Plate that our Generall 60 found in this shippe, hee found two very faire gilt Bolles of Siluer, which were the Pilots: to whom our Generall said: Senior Pilot, you haue here two Siluer Cups, but I must needes haue one of them; which the Pilot, because hee could not otherwile chuse, yeelded vnto, and gaue the other to the Steward of our Generals shippes.

Cape de San Francisco, in 1. degree to the North.

When this Pilot departed from vs, his Boy said thus vnto our Generall: Captaine, our E c 2 shippe

shippe shall be called no more the Cacafuego, but the Cacaplata, and your shippe shall be called the Cacafuego: Which prettie speech of the Pilots Boy ministred matter of Laughter to vs, both then and long after.

China silkes, and Porcellan.

When our Generall had done what hee would with this Cacafuego, hee cast her off, and wee went on our curle still towards the West: and not long after, met with a shippe laden with Linnen Cloth, and fine China Dishes, of white Earth, and great store of China Silkes; of all which things, wee tooke as wee listed. The Owner himselfe of this shippe was in her, who was a Spanish Gentleman: from whom, our Generall tooke a Fawlcen of Gold, with a great Emerauld in the brest thereof; and the Pilot of the shippe hee tooke also with him, and so cast the shippe off.

Guatulco.

This Pilot brought vs to the Hauen of Guatulco: the Towne whereof, as hee told vs, had but seuentene Spaniards in it. As soone as wee were entred this Hauen, wee landed, and went presently to the Towne, and to the Towne-house, where wee found a Iudge sitting in Iudgement, being associate with three other Officers, vpon three Negros that had conspired the burning of the Towne: both which Iudges and Prisoners wee tooke, and brought them a ship-board, and caused the chiefe Iudge to write his Letter to the Towne, to command all the Townes-men to auoid, that wee might safely water there. Which being done, and they departed, wee ransacked the Towne, and in one house wee found a Pot, of the quantitie of a Bushell, full of Ryals of Plate, which wee brought to our shippe. And here one Thomas Moone, one of our companie, tooke a Spanish Gentleman, as hee was flying out of the Towne; and searching him, hee found a Chayne of Gold about him, and other Iewels, which hee tooke, and so let him goe.

The Portugall Pilot set on land: his name was Nunoda Sylla.
The Iland of Canno.
A ship with a Gouernour for the Ilands of
Philippina's.

At this place our Generall, among other Spaniards, set ashore his Portugall Pilot, which hee tooke at the Ilands of Cape Verde, out of a shippe of S. Mary Port of Portugall: And hauing set them ashore, wee departed hence, and sayled to the Iland of Canno; where our Generall landed, and brought to shore his owne shippe, and discharged her, mended, and graued her, and furnished our shippe with Water and Wood sufficiently. And while wee were here, wee espyed a shippe, and set sayle after her, and tooke her, and found in her two Pilots and a Spanish Gouernour, going for the Ilands of the Philippina's: Wee searched the shippe, and tooke some of her Merchandizes, and so let her goe.

It was the more stormie at his being there, because it was then the Winter sea on in those parts.

Our Generall at this place and time, thinking himselfe, both in respect of his priuate iniuries receiued from the Spaniards, as also of their contempts and indignities offered to our Countrey and Prince in generall, sufficiently satisfied, and reuenged: and supposing, that her Maiestie at his returne would rest contented with this seruice, purposed to continue no longer vpon the Spanish Coasts, but began to consider and to consult of the best way for his Countrey. Hee thought it not good to returne by the Straits, for two speciall causes: The one, lest the Spaniards should there wait and attend for him in great number and strength; whose hands, he being left but one shippe, could not possibly escape: The other cause, was the dangerous situation of the Mouth of the Straits in the South Sea, where continuall stormes reigning and blustering, as hee found by experience, besides the Shoalds and Sands vpon the Coast, hee thought it not a good course to aduenture that way. Hee resolved therefore, to auoid these hazards, to goe forward to the Ilands of the Molucca's; and thence, to sayle the course of the Portugals, by the Cape of Buena Esperança.

Vpon this resolution, hee began to thinke of his best way to the Molucca's; and finding himselfe where hee now was becalmed, hee saw that of necessitie hee must be forced to take a Spanish course, namely, to sayle somewhat Northerly, to get a Winde. Wee therefore set sayle, and sayled six hundred Leagues at the least for a good Winde; and thus much wee sayled from the sixteenth of Aprill, till the third of Iune.

Iune.
Sir Francis Drake sayled on the backside of America to 43. degrees of Northerly latitude,
38. degrees.

The fift day of Iune, being in three and fortie degrees towards the Pole Artike, wee found the Ayre so cold, that our men being grievously pinched with the same, complayned of the extremitie thereof; and the further wee went, the more the Cold encreased vpon vs. Whereupon wee thought it best for that time to seeke the Land, and did so, finding it not Mountaynous, but lowe plaine Land, till wee came within eight and thirtie degrees towards the Line. In which height, it pleased God to send vs into a faire and good Bay, with a good Winde to enter the same.

A description of the People and Countrey of Nova Albion.

In this Bay wee anchored, and the people of the Countrey hauing their Houses close by the Waters side, shewed themselves vnto vs, and sent a present to our Generall. When they came vnto vs, they greatly wondered at the things that wee brought: but our Generall (according to his naturall and accustomed humanitie) courteously intreated them, and liberally bestowed on them necessarie things to couer their nakednesse; whereupon they supposed vs to be Gods, and would not be perswaded to the contrarie. The Presents which they sent to our Generall, were Feathers, and Kawles of Net-worke. Their Houses are digged round about with Earth, and haue from the vttermost brimmes of the Circle, Clifts of Wood set vpon them, ioyning close together at the top like a Spire-Steeple, which by reason of that closenesse, are very warme.

warme. Their Bed is the Ground, with Rushes strowed on it: and lying about the Houle, haue the fire in the midst. The Men goe naked: the Women take Bull-rushes, and kembe them after the manner of Hempe, and thereof make their loose Garments, which being knit about their middles, hang downe about their hippes, hauing also about their shoulders a Skinne of Deere, with the hayre vpon it. These Women are very obedient and seruiceable to their Husbands.

After they were departed from vs, they came and visited vs the second time, and brought with them Feathers and Bagges of Tabacco for Presents: And when they came to the top of the Hill (at the bottome whereof wee had pitched our Tents) they stayed themselves; where 10 one appointed for Speaker, wearyed himselfe with making a long Oration: which done, they left their Bowes vpon the Hill, and came downe with their Presents. In the meane time, the Women remayning on the Hill, tormented themselves lamentably, tearing their flesh from their cheekes; whereby wee perceiued, that they were about a Sacrifice. In the meane time, our Generall, with his companie, went to Prayer, and to reading of the Scriptures; at which Exercise they were attentiu, and seemed greatly to be affected with it: but when they were come vnto vs, they restored againe vnto vs those things which before wee bestowed vpon them.

A long Oration.

The newes of our being there, being spred through the Countrey, the people that inhabited round about came downe, and amongst them, the King himselfe, a man of a goodly stature, and 20 comely personage, with many other tall and warlike men: before whose comming, were sent two Embassadors to our Generall, to signifie that their King was comming; in doing of which message, their speech was continued about halfe an houre. This ended, they by signes requested our Generall to send some thing by their hand to their King, as a token, that his comming might be in peace: Wherein our Generall hauing satisfied them, they returned with glad tidings to their King; who marched to vs with a Princely Maiestie, the people crying continually after their manner: and as they drew neere vnto vs, so did they strue to behaue themselves in their actions with comelineesse. In the fore-front was a man of a goodly personage, who bare the Scepter or Mace before the King, whereupon hanged two Crownes, a lesse and a bigger, with 30 three Chaynes of a maruellous length: the Crownes were made of knit worke, wrought artificially, with Feathers of diuers colours; the Chaynes were made of a bonie substance, and few be the persons among them that are admitted to weare them; and of that number also, the persons are stinted, as some tenne, some twelue, &c. Next vnto him which bare the Scepter, was the King himselfe, with his Guard about his person, clad with Cony-skins, and other Skins: after them, followed the naked common sort of people, euery one hauing his face painted, some with white, some with blacke, and other colours, and hauing in their hands one thing or another for a Present; not so much as their children, but they also brought their Presents.

Chaynes like those of Canada

In the meane time our Generall gathered his men together, and marched within his fenced place, making against their approaching, a very Warlike shew. They being trouped together 40 in their order, and a generall salutation being made, there was presently a generall silence. Then he that bare the Scepter before the King, being informed by another, (whom they assigned to that Office, with a manly and loftie voyce proclaymed that which the other spake to him in secret, continuing halfe an houre: and a generall Amen as it were giuen, the King with the whole number of men and women (the Children excepted) came downe without any Weapon, who descending to the foot of the Hill, set themselves in order. In comming towards our Bulwarkes and Tents, the Scepter-bearer began a Song, obseruing his Measures in a Dance, and that with a stately countenance, whom the King with his Guard, and euery degree of persons following, did in like manner sing and dance, sauing onely the women, which danced and kept silence. The Generall permitted them to enter within our Bulwarke, where they continued
 50 their Song and Dance a reasonable time. When they had satisfied themselves, they made signes to our Generall to sit downe, to whom the King, and diuers others made seuerall Orations, or rather Supplications, that he would take their Prouince and Kingdome into his hand, and become their King, making signes that they would resigne vnto him their right and title of the whole Land, and become his Subiects. In which, to perswade vs the better, the King and the rest, with one consent, and with great reuerence, ioyfully singing a Song, did set the Crowne vpon his head, enriched his necke with all their Chaynes, and offered vnto him many other things, honouring him by the name of Hiob, adding thereunto as it seemed, a signe of Triumph: which thing our Generall thought not meete to reiect, because hee knew not what honour and profit it might be to oure Countrey. Wherefore in the name, and to the vse of her 60 Maiestie, he tooke the Scepter, Crowne, and Dignitie of the said Countrey into his hands, wishing that the Riches and Treasure thereof might so conueniently be transported, to the enriching of her Kingdome at home, as it aboundeth in the same.

The King resignes his Crowne and Kingdome to Sir Francis Drake.

The common sort of people leauing the King and his Guard with our Generall, scattered themselves together with their Sacrifices among our people, taking a diligent view of euery person.

- person : and such as pleased their fancie, (which were the yongest) they inclosing them about, offered their Sacrifices vnto them with lamentable weeping, scratching, and tearing the flesh from their faces with their nayles, whereof issued abundance of blood. But wee vsed signes to them of disliking this, and stayed their hands from force, and directed them vpwards to the liuing God, whom onely they ought to worship. They shewed vnto vs their wounds, and craued helpe of them at our hands, whereupon we gaue them Lotions, Playsters, and Oyntments, agreeing to the state of their griefes, beseeching God to cure their Diseases. Euery third day they brought their Sacrifices vnto vs, vntill they vnderstood our meaning, that we had no pleasure in them : yet they could not being absent from vs, but daily frequented our Companie to the houre of our departure, which departure seemed so grievous vnto them, that their ioy was turned into sorrow. They intreated vs, that Being absent we would remember them, and by stealth prouided a Sacrifice, which we milliked. 10
- Our necessarie businesse being ended, our Generall with his Companie traualled vp into the Country to their Villages, where wee found Herdes of Deere by a thousand in a companie, being most large, and fat of bodie. Wee found the whole Country to be a Warren of a strange kind of Conies, their bodies in bignesse as be the Barbary Conies, their heads as the heads of ours, the feet of a Want, and the tayle of a Rat being of great length : vnder her chinne is on eyther side a bag, into the which shee gathereth her meate, when shee hath filled her belly abroad. The people eate their bodies, and make great account of their Skinnies, for their Kings Coat was made of them. Our Generall called this Country Noua Albion, and that for two 20 causes : the one in respect of the white Bankes and Cliffes, which lye towards the Sea : and the other, because it might haue some affinitie with our Country in name, which sometime was so called. There is no part of Earth here to be taken vp, wherein there is not some probable shew of Gold or Siluer.
- At our departure hence, our Generall set vp a Monument of our being there, as also of her Maiesties Right and Title to the same, namely, a Plate, nayled vpon a faire great Poste, wherevpon was engrauen her Maiesties Name, the day and yeere of our arrivall there, with the free giuing vp of the Prouince and People into her Maiesties hands, together with her Highnesse Picture and Armes, in a piece of six pence of currant English Money, vnder the Plate, wherevnder was also written the Name of our Generall. It seemeth, that the Spaniards hitherto 30 had neuer bene in this part of the Country ; neyther did euer discover the Land, by many degrees, to the Southwards of this place.
- After wee had set sayle from hence, wee continued without sight of Land till the thirteenth day of October following ; which day in the morning wee fell with certaine Ilands, eight degrees to the Northward of the Line : from which, came a great number of Canoas, hauing in some of them foure, in some six, and in some also foureteene men, bringing with them Cocos, and other Fruits. Their Canoas were hollow within, and cut with great art and cunning, being very smooth within and without, and bearing a glosse, as if it were a Horne daintily burnished, hauing a Prowe and a Sterne of one sort, yeelding inward Circle-wise, being of a great height, and full of certaine white shells, for a brauerie, and on each side of them lye out two 40 pieces of Timber, about a yard and a halfe long, more or lesse, according to the smalnesse or bignesse of the Boat. This people haue the nether part of their Eares cut into a round Circle, hanging downe very lowe vpon their cheekes, whereon they hang things of a reasonable weight. The Nayles of their Hands are an ynce long, their Teeth are as blacke as Pitch, and they renew them often, by eating of an Herbe with a kind of powder, which they alwayes carry about them in a Cane for the same purpose.
- Leauing this Iland the Night after wee fell with it, the eighteenth of October wee lighted vpon diuers others, some whereof made a great shew of Inhabitants. Wee continued our course by the Ilands of Tagulada, Zelon, and Zewarra, being friends to the Portugals, the first whereof hath growing in it great store of Cinnamome. 50
- The foureteenth of Nouember wee fell with the Ilands of Molucca : Which day at night (hauing directed our course to runne with Tydore) in coasting along the Iland of Mintyr, belonging to the King of Ternate, his Deputie or Vice-King seeing vs at Sea, came with his Canoa to vs, without all feare, and came aboard, and after some conference with our Generall, willed him in any wise to runne in with Ternate, and not with Tydore, assuring him, that the King would be glad of his comming, and would be readie to doe what hee would require ; for which purpose, he himselfe would that night be with the King, and tell him the newes : with whom if hee once dealt, hee should find, that as hee was a King, so his word should stand. Adding further, that if hee went to Tydore before hee came to Ternate, the King would haue nothing to doe with vs, because hee held the Portugall as hisemie. Whereupon our Generall 60 resolved to runne with Ternate, where the next morning early wee came to anchor ; at which time our Generall sent a Messenger to the King with a Veluet Cloke for a present, and token of his comming to be in peace, and that hee required nothing but Traffique and exchange of Marchandize, whereof hee had good store, in such things as hee wanted.

In the meane time, the Vice-King had beene with the King, according to his promise, signifying vnto him what good things hee might receiue from vs by Traffique: Whereby the King was moued with great liking towards vs, and sent to our Generall with speciall message, that hee should haue what things hee needed, and would require with peace and friendship: and moreouer, that hee would yeeld himselfe, and the right of his Iland, to be at the pleasure and commandement of so famous a Prince as wee serued. In token whereof, hee sent to our Generall a Signet, and within short time after, came in his owne person, with Boats and Canoas, to our shippe, to bring her into a better and safer Road then shee was in at that present. Our Generals Messenger being come to the Court, was met by certaine Noble Personages with great solemnitie, and brought to the King, at whose hands hee was most friendly and graciously entertained.

The King of Ternate offereth himselfe and his Kingdom to the service of the Queene of England.

The King purposing to come to our shippe, sent before foure great and large Canoas, in euery one whereof, were certaine of his greatest States that were about him, attyred in white Lawne, of Cloth of Calicut, hauing ouer their heads, from the one end of the Canoa to the other, a Couering of thinne perfumed Mats, borne vp with a Frame made of Reedes for the same vse, vnder which, euery one did sit in his order, according to his dignitie, to keepe him from the heat of the Sunne, diuers of whom being of good age and grauitie, did make an ancient and fatherly shew. There were also diuers young and comely men, attyred in white, as were the others: the rest were Souldiers, which stood in comely order, round about on both sides; without whom, sate the Rowers in certaine Galleries, which being three on a side, all along the Canoas, did lye off from the side thereof three or foure yards, one being orderly builded lower then another, in euery of which Galleries were the number of fourescore Rowers. These Canoas were furnished with warlike Munition, euery man for the most part hauing his Sword and Targuet, with his Dagger, beside other Weapons, as Launces, Caluers, Darts, Bowes and Arrowes: also, euery Canoa had a small cast Base, mounted at the least one full Yard vpon a stocke set vp-right. Thus comming neere our ship, in order they rowed about vs, one after another, and passing by, did their homage with great solemnitie, the great Personages beginning with great grauitie and fatherly countenances, signifying, that the King had sent them to conduct our shippe into a better Roade.

The great and strange Canoas of the King of Ternate.

Soone after, the King himselfe repayred, accompanied with six graue and ancient persons, who did their obeyfance with maruelous humilitie. The King was a man of tall stature, and seemed to be much delighted with the sound of our Musike; to whom, as also to his Nobilitie, our Generall gaue presents, wherewith they were passing well contented.

The King of Ternate came to visite Sir Francis Drake.

At length, the King craued leaue of our Generall to depart, promising the next day to come aboard, and in the meane time to send vs such Victuals as were necessarie for our prouision: So that the same Night wee receiued of them Meale, which they call Sagu, made of the tops of certaine Trees, taltling in the mouth like sowre Curds, but melteth like Sugar, whereof they make certaine Cakes, which may be kept the space of tenne yeeres, and yet then good to be eaten. Wee had of them store of Rice, Hennes, vnperfect and liquid Sugar, Sugar Canes, and a Sagu, a kind of Meale.

Fruit which they call Figo, with store of Cloues.

The King hauing promised to come aboard, brake his promise, but sent his brother to make his excuse, and to entreat our Generall to come on shore, offering himselfe pawne aboard for his safe returne. Whereunto our Generall consented not, vpon millike conceiued of the breach of his promise, the whole company also vtterly refusing it. But to satisfie him, our Generall sent certaine of his Gentlemen to the Court, to accompany the Kings brother, reseruing the Vice-King for their safe returne. They were receiued of another brother of the Kings, and other States, and were conducted with great honour to the Castle. The place that they were brought vnto, was a large and faire House, where were at the least a thousand persons assembled.

A Castle in Ternate.

The King being yet absent, there sate in their places threescore graue Personages, all which were said to be of the Kings Councell. There were besides foure graue persons, apparrelled all in Red, downe to the ground, and attyred on their heads like the Turkes, and these were said to be Romans, and Liegers there, to keepe continuall Traffique with the people of Ternate. There were also two Turkes Liegers in this place, and one Italian.

* The Turkes sent from Constantinople, which is called New Rome.

The King at last came in, guarded with twelue Launces, couered ouer with a rich Canopie, embossed with Gold. Our men, accompanied with one of their Captaines, called Moro, rising to meet him, hee graciously did welcome, and entertaine them. Hee was attyred after the manner of the Countrey, but more sumptuously then the rest. From his Wasse downe to the ground, was all Cloth of Gold, and the same very rich: his legges were bare, but on his feet were a payre of shooes, made of Cordouant skinne. In the attyre of his head were finely wreathed hooped Rings of Gold, and about his necke hee had a Chayne of perfect Gold, the Links whereof were great, and one-fold double. On his fingers hee had six very faire Iewels: and sitting in his Chayre of Estate, at his right hand stood a Page with a Fanne in his hand, breathing and gathering the ayre to the King. The Fanne was in length two foot, and in bredth one foot,

The Maiestie of the King.

foot, set with eight Saphyres, richly embroydered, and knit to a staffe three foot in length, by the which the Page did hold, and mooue it. Our Gentlemen hauing deliuered their Message, and receiued order accordingly, were licenced to depart, being safely conducted backe againe by one of the Kings Councell.

Ternate the chiefest of the Moluccalles.

This Iland is the chiefest of all the Ilands of Molucca, and the King hereof is King of seuentie Ilands besides. The King with his people are Mores in Religion, obseruing certaine new Moones, with fastings; during which Fasts, they neyther eat nor drinke in the day, but in the night.

A little Iland to the Southward of Celebes.

Fierie Worms.

*Bats.
Cray-fishes.*

After that our Gentlemen were returned, and that wee had here, by the fauour of the King, receiued all necessarie things that the place could yeeld vs: our Generall considering the great distance, and how farre hee was yet off from his Countrey, thought it not best here to linger the time any longer; but weighing his anchors, set out of the Iland, and sayled to a certaine little Iland, to the Southwards of Celebes, where wee graued our shippe, and continued there, in that and other businesse, six and twentie dayes. This Iland is throughly growne with Wood, of a large and high growth, very straight, and without Boughes, saue onely in the head or top, whose Leaues are not much differing from our Broome in England. Amongst these Trees, night by night, through the whole Land, did shew themselues an infinite swarme of fierie Wormes flying in the Ayre, whose bodies being no bigger then our common English Flyes, make such a shew and light, as if euery Twigge or Tree had beene a burning Candle. In this place breedeth also wonderfull store of Bats, as bigge as large Hennes. Of Cray-fishes also here wanted no plentie, and they of exceeding bignesse, one whereof was sufficient for foure hungry stomackes at a Dinner, being also very good, and restoring meat, whereof wee had experience: and they digge themselues holes in the Earth like Conies.

Ianuarie, in Anno 1579.

Their danger vpon a Rocke.

Cloues.

The helpe of a Current in the deliuerie.

*February.
Baratene Iland.*

When wee had ended our businesse here, wee weighed, and set sayle to runne for the Moluccas: but hauing at that time a bad Winde, and being amongst the Ilands, with much difficultie wee recovered to the Northward of the Iland of Celebes; where, by reason of contrarie Windes, not able to continue our course, to runne Westwards, wee were inferced to alter the same to the Southward againe, finding that course also to be very hard and dangerous for vs, by reason of infinite shoalds, which lye off and among the Ilands: whereof wee had too much tryall, to the hazard and danger of our shippe and liues. For vpon the ninth of Ianuary, in the yeere 1579. wee ranne suddenly vpon a Rocke, where wee sticke fast from eight of the clocke at night, till foure of the clocke in the afternoone the next day, being indeed out of all hope to escape the danger. But our Generall, as hee had alwayes hitherto shewed himselfe couragious, and of a good confidence in the mercie and protection of God; so now hee continued in the same: and lest hee should seeme to perish wilfully, both hee and wee did our best endeouour to saue our selues, which it pleased God so to blesse, that in the end wee cleared our selues most happily of the danger. Wee lighted our shippe vpon the Rockes, of three Tunne of Cloues, eight Peeces of Ordenance, and certaine Meale and Beanes: And then the Winde (as it were in a moment, by the speciall grace of God) changing from the Starboord to the Larboord of the shippe, wee hoyled our sayles, and the happie gale droue our shippe off the Rocke into the Sea againe, to the no little comfort of all our hearts: for which wee gaue God such prayse and thanks, as so great a benefit required.

The eight of February following, wee fell with the fruitfull Iland of Baratene, hauing in the meane time suffered many dangers by Windes and Shoalds. The people of this Iland are comely in body and stature, and of a ciuill behauiour, iust in dealing, and courteous to strangers, whereof wee had the experience sundry wayes; they being most glad of our presence, and very ready to relieue our wants, in those things which their Countrey did yeeld. The Men goe naked, sauing their heads and priuities, euery man hauing something or other hanging at their eares. Their Women are couered from the middle downe to the foot, wearing a great number of Bracelets vpon their armes, for some had eight vpon each arme, being made some of Bone, some of Horne, and some of Brasle, the lightest whereof, by our estimation, weighed two ounces apeece.

Linnen Cloth good Marchandize.

Nutmegs and long Pepper growing in Baratene.

Commendation of the Iland of Baratene.

With this people, Linnen Cloth is good Marchandize, and of good request, whereof they make Rolls for their heads, and Girdles to weare about them. Their Iland is both rich, and fruitfull: rich in Gold, Siluer, Copper, and Sulphur; wherein they seeme skilfull and expert, not onely to trie the same, but in working it also artificially into any forme and fashion that pleaseth them. Their Fruits be diuers, and plentifull, as Nutmegs, Ginger, long Pepper, Limons, Cucumbers, Cocos, Figu, Sagu, with diuers other sorts: and among all the rest, wee had one Fruit, in bignesse, forme, and huske, like a Bay-berry, hard of substance, and pleasant of taste, which being sodden, becommeth soft, and is a most good and holesome Victuall, whereof wee tooke reasonable store, as wee did also of the other Fruits and Spices. So that to confesse a truth, since the time that wee first set out of our owne Countrey of England, wee happened vpon no place (Ternate onely excepted) wherein wee found more comforts and better meanes of refreshing.

At our departure from Baratene, we set our course for Iana maior, where arriving, wee found great courtesie, and honourable entertainment. This Island is gouerned by five Kings, whom they call Raiab: as Raiab Donaw, and Raiab Mang Bange, and Raiab Cabuocapello, which liue as hauing one Spirit, and one Minde. Of these five we had foure a ship-boord at once, and two or three often. They are wonderfully delighted in coloured clothes, as Red and Greene: the ypper parts of their bodies are naked, saue their heads, whereupon they weare a Turkish roll, as doe the Maluccians: from the middle downward they weare a Pintado of silke, trailing vpon the ground, in colour as they best like. The Maluccians hate that their Women should bee seene of Strangers: but these offer them of high courtesie, yea the Kings themselues. The people are of goodly stature, and warlike, well prouided of Swords and Targets, with Daggers, all being of their owne worke, and most artificially done, both in tempering their metall, as also in the forme, whereof we bought reasonable store. They haue an house in euery Village for their common assembly: euery day they meete twise, Men, Women, and Children, bringing with them such victuals as they thinke good, some Fruits, some Rice boiled, some Hens roasted, some Sagu, hauing a Table made three foote from the ground, whereon they set their meate, that euery person sitting at the Table may eate, one reioycing in the company of another. They boile their Rice in an earthen pot, made in forme of a Sugar loafe, being full of holes, as our pots which we water our gardens withall, and it is open at the great end, wherein they put their Rice drie, without any moisture. In the meane time they haue readie another great earthen pot, set fast in a furnace, boiling full of water, whereinto they put their pot with Rice, by such measure, that they swelling become soft at the first, and by their swelling stopping the holes of the pot, admit no more water to enter, but the more they are boiled, the harder and more firme substance they become, so that in the end they are a firme and good bread, of the which with Oyle, Butter, Sugar, and other Spices, they make diuers sorts of meates very pleasant of taste, and nourishing to nature. The French pocks is here very common to all, and they helpe themselves, sitting naked from ten to two in the Sunne, whereby the venemous humour is drawne out. Not long before our departure, they told vs, that not farre off there were such great Ships as ours, wishing vs to beware: vpon this our Captaine would stay no longer.

Iana Maior.

Red &amp; Greene clothes much esteemed.

The manners of the people of Iana.

A strange fashion of boiling Rice.

The French pocks.

This rather is to be imputed to varietie of weather.

Sierra Leona.

Oyster-trees.

From Iana Maior we sailed for the Cape of Good Hope, which was the first Land wee fell withall: neither did we touch with it, or any other Land, vntill we came to Sierra Leona, vpon the coast of Guinea: notwithstanding wee ran hard aboard the Cape, finding the report of the Portugals to be most false, who affirme, that it is the most dangerous Cape of the World, neuer without intolerable stormes and present danger to Trauailers, which come neere the same. This Cape is a most stately thing, and the fairest Cape wee saw in the whole Circumference of the Earth, and we passed by it the 18. of Iune. From thence we continued our course to Sierra Leona, on the coast of Guinea, where we arrived the 22. of Iuly, and found necessarie prouisions, great store of Elephants, Oysters vpon trees of one kinde, spawning and increasing infinitely, the Oyster suffering no bud to grow. We departed thence the 24. day.

Wee arrived in England the third of Nouember 1580. being the third yeere of our departure.

CHAP. IIII.

The third Circum-Navigation of the Globe: Or the admirable and prosperous voyage of Master THOMAS CANDISH of Trimley in the Countie of Suffolke Esquire, into the South Sea, and from thence round about the circumference of the whole Earth, begun in the yeere of our Lord 1586. and finished 1588.

Written by Master FRANCIS PRETTY lately of Ey in Suffolke, a Gentleman employed in the same action, published by Master HAKLVYT, and now corrected and abbreviated.

We departed out of Plimmouth on Thursday the 21. of Iuly 1586. with three saile, to wit, The Desire, a ship of one hundred and twentie Tunnes, The Content of threescore Tunnes, and the Hugh Gallant, a Barke of fortie Tunnes: in which small Fleete were one hundred and twentie three persons of all sorts, with all kinde of furniture and victuals sufficient, for the space of two yeeres, at the charges of the worshipfull Master Thomas Candish of Trimley in the Countie of Suffolke Esquire, being our Generall.

The three and twentieth of August, we put roome for Sierra Leona, and the five and twentieth day we fell with the Point on the South side of Sierra Leona, which Master Brexer knew very well, and went in before with the Content, which was Vice-admirall: and we had no lesse then then five fathoms water when wee had least, and had for forteene leagues in Southwest all the way running into the Harbour of Sierra Leona, sixteene, fourteene, twelue, ten, and eight fathoms of water. We spoiled here a Towne of the Negro's, which killed one of our men with a poysoned Arrow.

Sierra Leona.

Two Buffes.
Their departure from Sierra Leona.

The Iles of Madrabumba inhabited by Negroes.

A Towne.

Fresh water.

October.
Cape Frio in Brasil.

November.
S. Sebastian's Iland.

December.

48. Degrees.

Port Desire.

Scales and Pengwins.

They graue and trim their Ships.

A kinde of Giants.

Their departure from Port Desire.

Ianuary 1587.

The third day of September, diuers of our Fleete went vp foure miles within the Harbour with our Boate, and caught great store of fish, and went on shore and tooke Limmons from the Trees, and comming aboard againe, saw two Buffes. The sixt day wee departed from Sierra Leona, and went out of the Harbour, and stayed one Tyde three leagues from the Point of the mouth of the Harbour in sixe fathoms, and it floweth South Southwest. On Wednesday, being the seuenth of the same moneth, we departed from one of the Iles of Cape Verde, alias, the Iles of Madrabumba, which is ten leagues distant from the Point of Sierra Leona: and about five of the clocke the same night we anchored two miles off the Iland in sixe fathoms water, and landed the same night, and found Plantans onely vpon the Iland.

The eight day one of our Boats went out and sounded round about the Iland, and they passed through a sound at the West end of the Iland, where they found five fathoms round about the Iland, vntill they came vnto the very gut of the sound, and then for a cast or two they had but two fathoms, and presently after sixe fathoms, and so deeper and deeper. And at the East end of the Iland there was a Towne, where Negro's doe vse at sometimes, as we perceiued by their prouision.

There is no fresh water on all the South side, as we could perceiue, but on the North side three or foure very good places of fresh water: and all the whole Iland is a Wood, saue certaine little places where their houses stand, which are inuironed round about with Plantan-trees, whereof the fruit is excellent meate. This place is subiect maruailous much to Thunder, Raine, and Lightning in this moneth. I thinke the reason is, because the Sunne is so neere the line Equinoctiall. On Saturday the tenth, we departed from the said Iland about three of the clocke in the afternoone, the winde being at the Southwest. The last of October running West Southwest about foure and twentie leagues from Cape Frio in Brasil, wee fell with a great Mountayne which had an high round knop on the top of it, standing from it like a Towne, with two little Ilands from it.

The first of Nouember we went in betweene the Iland of Saint Sebastian and the mayne Land, and had our things on shore, and set vp a Forge, and had our Caske on shore: our Coopers made Hoopes, and so wee remayned there vntill the three and twentieth day of the same moneth: in which time we fitted our things, built our Pinnace, and filled our fresh water.

The sixteenth day of December we fell with the Coast of America in 47. degrees  $\frac{1}{2}$ . the Land bearing West from vs about sixe leagues off: from which place wee ranne along the shore, vntill we came into fortie and eight degrees. It is a steepe beach all along. The seuenteenth in the afternoone we entred into an Harbour, where our Admirall went in first: wherefore our Generall named the said Harbour, Port Desire: in which Harbour is an Iland or two, where there is wonderfull great store of Seales, and another Iland of Birds which are gray Guls. This Harbour is a very good place to trim ships in, and to bring them on ground, and graue them in: for there ebbeth and floweth much water: therefore wee graued and trimmed all our ships there. Here a Man and a Boy in washing their clothes at a Pit, were hurt by the Sauages arrowes, which are made of Canes, headed with flints. They are very wilde. We tooke the measure of one of their feete, and it was eightene inches long. Their vse is vwhen any of them die, to bring him or them to the Clifles by the Sea-side, and vpon the top of them they burie them, and in their graues are buried with them their Bowes and Arrowes, and all their Iewels which they haue in their life time, which are fine shells vvhich they finde by the Sea side, which they cut and square after an artificiall manner; and all is laid vnder their heads. The graue is made all with great stones of great length and bignesse, being set all along full of the dead mans Darts which he vsed when he was liuing. And they colour both their Darts and their Graues with a red colour vvhich they vse in colouring of themselues. The eight and twentieth of December vve departed out of the Port of Desire, and went to an Iland vvhich lyeth three leagues to the Southward of it; vvhether vve trimmed our saued Pengwins vwith salt for victuall all that and the next day, and departed along the Coast Southwest and by South.

The thirtieth day vvee fell vwith a Rocke vvhich lyeth about five leagues from the Land, much like vnto Ediestone, which lyeth off the sound of Plimouth, and vve sounded, and had eight fathoms rockie ground, within a mile thereof: the Rocke bearing West Southwest. Wee vvent coasting along South Southwest, and found great store of Seales all along the Coast. This Rocke standeth in 48. degrees  $\frac{1}{2}$ . to the Southward of the Line. The second day of Ianuarie we fell vwith a very faire vvhite Cape, vvhich standeth in 52. degrees, and had seven fathoms vwater a league of the Land. The third day of the foresaid moneth vvee fell vwith another great vvhite Cape, vvhich standeth in 52. degrees and 45. minutes: from vvhich Cape there runneth a low beach about a league to the Southward, and this beach reacheth to the opening of the dangerous Streight of Magellan, vvhich is in diuers places five or sixe leagues vvide, and in two feuerall seuerall places more narrow. Vnder this Cape wee anchored, and lost an anchor, for it was a great storme of foule Weather, and lasted three dayes very dangerous.

The sixt day wee put in for the Straits. The seuenth day, betweene the mouth of the Straits and the narrowest place thereof, wee tooke a Spaniard whose name was Hernando, who was there with three and twentie Spaniards more, which were all that remained of foure hundred, which were left there three yeeres before in these Straits of Magellan, all the rest being dead with famine. And the same day wee passed through the narrowest of the Straits, where the afore said Spaniard shewed vs the Hull of a small Barke, which wee iudged to be a Barke called The John Thomas. It is from the mouth of the Straits vnto the narrowest of the Straits, 10 foureteene leagues, and the course lyeth West and by North. The mouth of the Straits standeth in two and fiftie degrees. From the narrowest of the Straits vnto Penguin Iland, is tenne leagues, and lyeth West Southwest somewhat to the Southward, where wee anchored the eight day, and killed and salted great store of Penguins for Victuals.

The ninth day wee departed from Penguin Iland, and ranne South Southwest to King Philips Citie, which the Spaniards had built: which Towne or Citie had foure Forts, and euery Fort had in it one cast Peece, which Peeces were buryed in the ground; the Carriages were standing in their places vnburyed: wee digged for them, and had them all. They had contriued their Citie very well, and seated it in the best place of the Straits for Wood and Water: They had builded vp their Churches by themselves: They had Lawes very seuer among themselves, for they had erected a Gibbet, whereon they had done execution vpon some of their companie. It seemed vnto vs, that their whole liuing for a great space was altogether vpon Muskles and Lympts; for there was not any thing else to be had, except some Deere which came out of the Mountaines downe to the fresh Riuer to drinke. These Spaniards which were there, were onely come to fortifie the Straits, to the end that no other Nation should haue passage through into the South Sea, sauing onely their owne: but as it appeared, it was not Gods will so to haue it. For during the time that they were there, which was two yeeres at the least, they could neuer haue any thing to growe, or in any wise prosper. And on the other side, the Indians oftentimes preyed vpon them, vntill their Victuals grew so short, (their store being spent which they had brought with them out of Spaine, and hauing no meanes to renew the same) that they died like Dogges in their Houses, and in their Clothes, wherein we found them still at our comming, vntill that in the end the Towne being wonderfully taynted with the smell and the fauour of the dead people, the rest which remayned aliue were driuen to burie such things as they had there in their Towne either for prouision or for furniture, and so to forsake the Towne, and to goe along the Sea-side, and seeke their Victuals, to preserue them from steruing, taking nothing with them, but euery man his Harquebuze and his furniture that was able to carry it (for some were not able to carry them for weakenesse) and so liued for the space of a yeere and more, with Rootes, Leaues, and sometimes a Fowle, which they might kill with their Peece. To conclude, they were determined to haue trauelled towards the Riuer of Plate, onely three and twentie persons being left aliue, whereof two were Women, which 40 were the remainder of foure hundred. In this place wee watred and wooded well and quietly. Our Generall named this Towne, Port Famine: It standeth in 53. degrees by obseruation to the Southward.

The foureteenth day wee departed from this place, and ranne South Southwest, and from thence Southwest vnto Cape Froward, fise Leagues West Southwest: Which Cape is the Southermost part of all the Straits, and standeth in the latitude of 54. degrees. From which Cape wee ranne West and by North fise Leagues, and put into a Bay or Coue on the South side, which wee called Muske-Coue, because there were great store of them: wee ridde therein fixe dayes, the Wind being still Westerly.

The one and twentieth day wee departed from Muske-Coue, and went Northwest and by 50 West tenne Leagues, to a very faire sandie Bay on the North side, which our Generall called Elizabeth Bay.

The two and twentieth wee departed from Elizabeth Bay in the afternoone, and went about two Leagues from that place, where there was a fresh Water Riuer, where our Generall went vp with the shippe-boat about three miles: Which Riuer hath very good and pleafant ground about it, and it is lowe and champion Soyle, and so wee saw none other ground else in all the Straits, but that was craggie Rockes and monstrous high Hills and Mountaines. In this Riuer are great store of Sauages, which wee saw, and had conference with them: They were Men-eaters, and fedde altogether vpon rawe flesh, and other filthie foode: Which people had preyed vpon some of the Spaniards before spoken of; for they had gotten Kniues and pieces of Rapiers to make Darts of. They vsed all the meanes they could possibly to haue allured vs vp farther into the Riuer, of purpoe to haue betrayed vs: Which being espyed by our Generall, hee caused vs to shoote at them with our Harquebuzes, whereby wee killed many of them. So wee sayled from this Riuer to the Channell of Saint Ierome, which is two Leagues off.

They enter the Straits the 6. of Ianuary. A Spaniard taken in the Straits of Magellan.

The Barke John Thomas, one of Sir Francis Drakes Consorts.

King Philips Citie left desolate in the Straits of Magellan, which our Generall called, Port Famine.

God enemy to the Spaniards Auarice, which would entayle the wide world in the East and West, to Spain.

Port Famine in 53. degrees.

Cape Froward in 54. degrees.

Muske-Coue.

Elizabeth Bay.

The most brutish Sauages that euer were seene.

The Channell of Saint Ierome.

From

February,
1587.

The Straits of Magellan are about 90. leagues long.

The Westerne mouth of the Straits is in 52.
degrees and 2.
terces.

Their entrance into the South Sea the 24. of February.

Ilands in the South Sea, called Las Angadas.

March 1.
Extreme danger of the Hugh Gallant, by a great Leake.

The Ile of Ma-chi in 38. degrees, not subiect to the Spaniards.

Arauco is the richest place in the South Sea for Gold, and is not subdued by the Spaniards as yet.

S. Mary Iland
in 37. degrees
and 1. terce, which is subdued to the Spaniards.

A Church, with Crosses and Altars.

The Indians of S. Mary Iland made all Christians.

Arauco rich in Gold.

From the Riuer of Saint Jerome about three or foure Leagues, wee ranne West vnto a Cape which is on the North side: and from that Cape vnto the mouth of the Straits the course lyeth Northwest and by West, and Northwest. Betweene which place and the mouth of the Straits to the Southward, wee lay in Harbrough vntill the three and twentieth of February, by reason of contrary Windes and most vile and filthie foule Weather, with such Raine and vehement stormie Windes which came downe from the Mountaines and high Hills, that they hazarded the best Cables and Anchors that wee had for to hold, which if they had fayled, wee had beene in great danger to haue beene cast away, or at the least famished. For during this time, which was a full moneth, wee fedde almost altogether vpon Muskles, and Limpits, and Birds, or such as wee could get on shore, seeking euery day for them, as the Fowles of the ayre doe, where they can finde foode, in continuall raynie Weather. There is at euery mile or two miles end an Harbrough on both sides of the Land. And there are betweene the Riuer of Saint Jerome and the mouth of the Straits, going into the South Sea, about foure and thirtie Leagues by estimation. So that the length of the whole Straits is about ninetie Leagues. And the laid mouth of the Straits standeth in the same height that the entrance standeth in when wee passe out of the North Sea, which is about two and fiftie degrees and two terces to the Southward of the Line.

The foure and twentieth day of February wee entred into the South Sea: and on the South side of the going out of the Straits, is a faire high Cape, with a lowe Point adioyning vnto it. And on the North side are foure or fve Ilands, which lye sixe Leagues off the Mayne, and much broken and sunken ground about them: by Noone the same day, wee had brought these Ilands East of vs, fve Leagues off; the Winde being then Southerly.

The first of March a storme tooke vs at North: which Night the shippes lost the companie of the Hugh Gallant, being in nine and fortie degrees, and one second, and fve and fortie Leagues from the Land. This storme continued three or foure dayes: and for that time wee in the Hugh Gallant being separated from the other two shippes, looked euery houre to sinke, our Barke was so leake, and our selues so diluered and weakened with freeing it of Water, that wee slept not in three Dayes and three Nights.

The fifteenth day, in the Morning, the Hugh Gallant came in betweene the Iland of Saint Mary and the Mayne, where shee met with the Admirall and the Content, which had rid at the Iland called La Mucha two dayes, which standeth in the Southerly latitude of eight and thirtie degrees: At which place, some of our men went on shore with the Vice-Admirals Boat, where the Indians fought with them with their Bowes and Arrowes, and were marueilous warie of their Caliuers. These Indians were enemies to the Spaniards, and belonged to a great place called Arauco, and tooke vs for Spaniards, as afterward wee learned. This place which is called Arauco, is wonderfull rich, and full of Gold Mynes: and yet could it not be subdued at any time by the Spaniards, but they alwayes returned with the greatest losse of men. For these Indians are desperate and carelesse of their liues, to liue at their owne libertie and freedome.

In the after-noon we weighed anchor, and ranne vnder the West side of Saint Mary Iland, where wee ridde very well in sixe fathomes Water, and very faire ground all that Night.

The sixteenth day our Generall went on shore himselfe with seuentie or eightie men, euery one with his furniture: There came downe to vs certaine Indians, with two which were the Principals of the Iland, to welcome vs on shore, thinking wee had beene Spaniards, for it is subdued by them; who brought vs vp to a place where the Spaniards had erected a Church, with Crosses and Altars in it. And there were about this Church two or three Store-houses, which were full of Wheat and Barley, ready threshed and made vp in Cades of Strawe, to the quantitie of a Bushell of Corne in euery Cade. The Wheat and Barley was as faire, as cleane, and euery way as good as any wee haue in England. There were also the like Cades full of Potato Rootes, which were very good to eate, ready made vp in the Store-houses for the Spaniards, against they should come for their tribute. This Iland also yeeldeth many sorts of Fruits, Hogges, and Hennes. These Indians are held in such slauerie by them, that they dare not eate a Henne or an Hogge themselves. But the Spaniards haue made them all in that Iland Christians. Thus wee fitted our selues here with Corne as much as wee would haue, and as many Hogges as wee had Salt to powder them withall, and great store of Hennes, with a number of Bagges of Potato Rootes, and about fve hundred dryed Dogge-fishes, and Guinie Wheat, which is called Maiz. And having taken as much as wee would haue, yet wee left great store behind vs. Our Generall had the two Principals of the Iland aboard our shippe, and prouided great cheare for them, and made them merry with Wine: and they in the end perceiuing vs to be no Spaniards, made signes, as neere as our Generall could perceiue, that if wee would goe ouer vnto the maine Land, vnto Arauco, that there was much Gold, making vs signes, that wee should haue great store of Riches. But because wee could not vnderunderstand them, our Generall made some haste, and within two or three dayes wee furnished our selues.

The eighteenth day in the morning we departed from this place, and ran all that day North-northeast, about tenne leagues, and at night lay with a short sayle off and on the coast. The nineteenth we ranne in East Northeast with the land, and bare in with a place called The Conception, where we anchored vnder an Iland, and departed the next morning without going on land. The twentieth, wee departed from The Conception, and went into a little Baye which was sandie, where we saw fresh water and cattell, but we stayed not there. The thirtieth day, we came into the Baye of Quintero, which standeth in thirty three degrees, and fiftie minutes. Here Fernando the Spaniard, contrary to his oath, forsooke vs.

The Conception.

Quintero standeth in 33. degrees 50. minutes.

Our men marche 7. or 8. miles into their enemies land.

The last of March, Captaine Hawes went vp into the Country, with fiftie or sixtie men with their shot and furniture with them, and we trauelled seuen or eight miles into the land: and as we were marching along, we espied a number of herds of cattell, of kine and bullockes, which were wonderfull wilde: we saw great store of horses, mares, and coltes which were very wilde and vnhandled: there is also great store of hares and conies, and plenty of partridges and other wild-fowles. The countrey is very fruitfull with faire fresh riuers, all along full of wild-fowle of all sorts. Hauing traualled so farre that we could go no further for the monstrous high mountaines, we rested our selues at a very faire fresh Riuer, running in and alongst faire low medowes at the foote of the mountaines, where euery man drunke of the Riuer, and refreshed themselves. Hauing so done, we returned to our Ships the likest way that we thought their Towne should be: so we traualled all the day long, not seeing any man, but we mette with many wilde dogges: yet there were two hundred horsemen abroad that same day, by meanes of the Spaniard which they had taken the day before from vs, who had told them that our force was but small, and that we were wonderfull weake: who though they did espie vs that day, yet durst they not giue the on-set vpon vs. For we marched along in array, and obserued good order, whereby we seemed a great number more then we were, vntill we came vnto our ships that night againe.

The next day being the first of April, 1587. our men went on shoare to fill water at a pit which was a quarter of a mile from the water side: and being early hard at their businesse, were in no readinesse. In which meane while, there came powring downe from the hilles almost two hundred horsemen, and before our people could returne to the rockes from the watering place, twelue of them were cut off, part killed, and part taken prisoners, the rest were rescued by our souldiers which came from the rockes to meete with them, who being but fifteen of vs that had any weapons on shoare, yet we made the enemy retire in the ende with losse of some foure and twentie of their men, after we had skirmished with them an houre. After the losse of these men, we rid in the roade, and watered in despite of them, with good watch and ward, vntill the fift of the said moneth.

24. Spaniards slaine.

The fift day we departed out of this bay of Quintero: and off from the bay there lieth a little Iland about a league distant, whereon there are great store of Penguins, and other fowles; whereof we tooke to serue our turnes, and sayled away North, and North and by West: for so lieth the coast along in this place.

A little Iland full of Penguins.

The fifteenth we came thwart of a place which is called Morro moreno, which standeth in 23. degrees  $\frac{1}{2}$ , and is an excellent good harborough: and there is an Iland which maketh it an harborough: and a ship may goe in at either end of the Iland: here we went with our Generall on shore to the number of thirty men: and at our going on shore vpon our landing, the Indians of the place came downe from the rockes to meete with vs, with fresh water and wood on their backs. They are in marvellous awe of the Spaniards, and very simple people, and liue sauagely: For they brought vs to their bidings about two miles from the harborough, where we saw their women and lodging, which is nothing but the skinne of some beast laid vpon the ground: and ouer them in stead of houses, is nothing but fue or sixe sticks laid acrosse, which stand vpon two forkes with stikes on the ground, and a fewe boughes laid on it. Their diet is raw fish, which stinketh most vilely. And when any of them die, they burie their bowes and arrowes with them, with their Canoes, and all that they haue: for we opened one of their graues, and saw the order of them. Their Canoes or boates are marvellous artificially made of two skinnies like vnto bladders, and are blowne full at one ende with quilles: they haue two of these bladders blowne full, which are sown together, and made fast with the sinew of some wild beast; which when they are in the water, swell, so that they are as tight as may be. They goe to sea in these boates, and catch very much fish with them, and pay much of it for tribute vnto the Spaniards: but they vse it beastly.

Morro moreno in 23. degrees and a halfe.

Most artificiall boates.

Tribute payd in fish.

The three and twentieth in the morning we tooke a small barke which came out of Arica road, which we kept and called The George: the men forsooke it, and went away with their boate. Our Admirals pinnesse followed the boate, and the Hugh Gallants boate tooke the barke: our Admirals pinnesse could not recouer the boat before it got on shoare, but went along into the road of Arica, and laid aboard a great ship of an hundred tunnes riding in the road right afore the towne, but all the men and goods were gone out of it, onely the bare shippe was left alone.

A barke taken, which they called The George. Arica standeth in 18. degrees 31. minutes. A ship taken.

- The first barke of aduise taken
- The bay of Pisco in 13. degr.
- An Island of Seales.
- A ship of 300. tunnes taken after halfe an houres fight. Seuen degrees of Southerly latitude.
- They met their fleet againe.
- Two rich ships taken.
- One shippe worth 20000. pounds.
- The bay of Paia in 5. degrees 4. min.
- A new fort in building.
- The towne of Paia taken and burnt.
25. pounds weight in siluer
- The towne of Paia had 200. houses in it. A barke set on fire.
- The Island of Puna within 1. degree the Equinoctiall to the South.
- A great Ship burnt.
- Great store of cables made in Puna.
- A little Island neere vnto Puna.
- The twentieth day, after two other Barkes taken, wee departed. The twentieth day wee tooke a small Barke, which came from Saint Iago, neere vnto Quintero, where we lost our men first. In this Barke was one George a Greeke, a reasonable pilot for all the coast of Chili.
- The third of May we came into a bay where are three little townes, which are called Paracca, Chincha, and Pisca, where some of vs landed and tooke certain houses, wherein was bread, wine, figs, and hennies: but the sea went so high, that we could not land at the best of the townes without sinking of our boats, and great hazard of vs all. This place standeth in thirteene degrees and  $\frac{1}{2}$ , to the Southward of the line.
- The fifth of May we departed from this harbour, leauing the Content our Vice-admirall with- in at an Island of Seales, by which meanes at that time we lost her companie.
- The sixteenth we tooke with the Hugh Gallant, beeing but sixteene men of vs in it, a great shippe which came from Guaianil, which was called The Lewis, and was of the burthen of three hundred tunnes, hauing fowre and twentieth men in it, wherein was pilot one Gonsaluo de Ribas, whom we carried along with vs, and a Negro called Emmanuel. The shippe was laden with nothing but timber and victualls: wherefore we left her seauen leagues from the land, very leake, and ready to sinke in seuen degrees to the Southward of the line: we sunke her boate and tooke away her forefaile and certaine victualls.
- The seuenteenth, we met with our Admirall againe, and all the rest of our fleet. They had taken two ships, the one laden with sugar, Molasses, Maiz, Cordonan-skinnes, Montego de Porco, many packes of Pintados, many Indian coates, and some marmalade, and a thousand hennies: and the other shippe was laden with wheat-meale, and boxes of marmalade. One of these shippes which had the cheife marchandize in it, was worth twenty thousand pounds, if it had beene in England, or in any other place of Christendome, where we might haue sold it. We filled all our ships with as much as we could bestow of these goods: the rest we burnt, and the ships also; and set the men and women that were not killed on shoare.
- The twentieth day in the morning, we came into the road of Paia, and beeing at an anchor, our Generall landed with sixtie or seuentie men, skirmished with them of the towne, and draue them all to flight to the top of the hill which is ouer the towne, except a few slaues and some other which were of the meaner sort, who were commanded by the gouernours to stay belowe in the towne, at a place which is in building for a fort, hauing with them a bloody ensigne, beeing in number about one hundred men. Now as we were rouing betweene the ships and the shore, our gunner shot off a great peice out of one of the barkes, and the shot fell among them, and draue them to flie from the fort as fast as they might runne, vvhich got them vp vpon an hill, and from thence shot among vs vwith their small shot. After vve were landed, and had taken the towne, vve ran vpon them, and chased them so fiercely vp the hilles for the space of an houre, that vve draue them in the ende avay perforce, and beeing got vp the hilles, vve found vvhich they had laid all their stuffe vvhich they had brought out of the towne, and had hidden it there vpon the mountaines. We also found the quantitie of fise and twenty pounds vweight in siluer, in peices of eight ryals, and abundance of household-stuffe, and store-houses full of all kind of wares: but our Generall vwould not suffer any man to carry much cloth or apparell avay, because they should not cloy themselves vwith burthens: for he knew not vvhether our enemies were prouided vwith furniture according to the number of their men: for they were fise men to one of vs: and vve had an English mile and an halfe to our ships. Thus we came dovvne in safetie to the towne, vvhich was very vwell builded, and marvellous cleane kept in euery streete, vwith a towne-house or Guild-hall in the midst, and had to the number of two hundred houses at the least in it. We set it on fire to the ground, and goods to the value of fise or sixe thousand pounds: there was also a Barke riding in the roade, which we set on fire, and departed, directing our course to the Island of Puna.
- The twentieth five day of May, we arriued at the Island of Puna, where is a very good harbour, where we found a great ship of the burthen of two hundred and fifty tunnes, riding at an anchor with all her furniture, which was readie to bee haled on ground: for there is a speciall good place for that purpose. We sunke it, and went on shore where the Lord of the Island dwelt, which was by the waters side, who had a sumptuous house wel contriued, with many very singular good roomes and chambers in it: and out of euery chamber was framed a gallerie, with a stately prospect into the sea on the one side, and into the Island on the other side, with a great hall belowe, and a very great storehouse at the one ende of the hal, which was filled with Botyas of pitch and balt to make cables withall: for the most part of the cables in the South-sea, are made vpon that Island. This great Casique doth make all the Indians vpon the Island to worke and to drudge for him: and he himselfe is an Indian borne, but is married to a faire woman a Spaniard, by reason of his pleasant habitation, and great wealth.
- The twentieth ninth day of May, our Generall went in the ship-boate into a little Island thereby, whereas the said Casique which was the Lord of Puna, had caused all the hangings of his chambers, which were of Cordonan leather all gilded ouer, and painted very faire and rich, with with all his household-stuffe, and all the ships tackling which was riding in the road at our coming in, with great store of nailes, spikes of yron, and very many other things to be conveyed: all which wee found, and brought away what our Generall thought requisite for the shippes businesse.

This Iland is very pleasant for all things requisite, and fruitfull: but there are no mines of gold nor silver in it. There are at the least two hundred houses in the towne about the Casiques palace, and as many in one or two townes more vpon the Iland, which is almost as bigge as the Ile of Wight, in England. There is planted on the one side of the Casiques house, a faire garden, with all herbes growing in it, and at the lower ende a Well of fresh water, and round about it are trees set, whereon bombasin cotton groweth after this manner: The tops of the trees growe full of cods, out of which the cotton groweth, and in the cotton is a seede of the bignesse of a pease, and in euery codde there are seuen or eight of these seedes: and if the cotton be not gathered when it is ripe, then these seedes fall from it, and spring againe. There are also in this garden fig-trees which beare continually, also pompions, melons, cucumbers, radishes, rosemarie and thyme, with many other herbes and fruits. At the other end of the house there is also another Orchard, where grow oranges swete and sower, limmons, pomegranates and lymes, with diuerse other fruits. There is very good pasture ground in this Iland; and withall many horses, oxen, bullocks, sheepe very fat and faire, great store of goates which be very tame, and are vsed continually to be milked. They haue moreouer abundance of pigeons, turkeys, and ducks of a maruellous bignesse.

There was also a very large and great Church hard by the Casiques house, whither hee caused all the Indians in the Iland to come and heare masse: for he himselfe was made a Christian when he was married to the Spanish woman before spoken of, and vpon his conuersion, hee caused the rest of his subiects to be Christened. In this Church was an high Altar with a Crucifixe, and five belles hanging in the nether ende thereof. We burnt the Church, and brought the bells away. By this time we had haled on ground our Admirall, and had made her cleane, burnt her keele, pitched and tarred her, and had haled her on flote againe. And in the meane while continually kept watch and ward in the great house both night and day.

The second of Iune, an hundred Spaniards assailed vs, whereby of our men were slaine, drowned, and taken twelue, of theirs wee slewe fortie sixe. The selfe same day we went on shore againe with seuentie men, and had a fresh skirmish with the enemies, and draue them to retyre, being an hundred Spaniards seruing with muskets, and two hundred Indians with bowes, arrowes, and darts. This done, we set fire on the Towne, and burnt it to the ground, hauing in it to the number of three hundred houses: and shortly after made hauocke of their fields, orchards, and gardens, and burnt foure great shippes more which were in building on the stocks. The third, the Content which was our Vice-admirall was haled on ground, to graue at the same place in despite of the Spaniards: and also our Pinnesse which the Spaniards had burned, was newe trimmed.

The fift day of Iune we departed out of the roade of Puna, where wee had remained eleuen dayes, and turned vp for a place which is called Rio dulce, where we watered: at which place also we sunke our Rere-admirall, called The Hugh Gallant for want of men, being a barke of fortie tonnes. The tenth day of the same moneth, we set the Indians on shore, which wee had taken before in a Balsa, as we were comming into the road of Puna. The eleuenth day we departed from the said Rio dulce. The twelfth we doubled the Equinoctiall line, and continued our course Northward all that moneth.

The first of Iuly we had sight of the coast of Nuena Espanna, being foure leagues distant from land, in the latitude of tenne degrees to the Northward of the line. The ninth, vve tooke a new ship of the burthen of an hundred and twentie tonnes, vvhetherin vvas one Michael Sancius, vvhom our Generall tooke to serue his turne to vvater along the coast: for he vvas one of the best coasters in the South Sea. This Michael Sancius vvas a Prouensall, borne in Marseils, and vvas the first man that told vs newes of the great shippe called The Santa Anna, vvhich vve aftervvard tooke comming from the Philippinas.

There were six men more in this nevv shippe: vve tooke her sailes, her ropes, and fire-vvood to serue our turnes, set her on fire and kept the men.

The tenth vve tooke another barke vvhich vvas going vvith aduise of vs, and our ships all along the coast, as Michael Sancius told vs: but all the company that vv ere in the barke vv ere fled on shore. The sixe and twentieth day of Iuly, vve came to an anchor at tenne fathomes in the riuer of Copolita, vvhere vve made account to vvater. And the same night vve departed vvith thirty men in the Pinnesse, and roved to Aguatulco, vv which is but two leagues from the afore-said riuer; and standeth in fiftene degrees fortie minutes to the Northward of the Equinoctiall line. The seuen and twentieth in the morning by the breake of day, vve came into the roade of Aguatulco, vv where vve found a barke of fiftie tonnes, vv which vvas come from Sonsonate, laden vvith Cacaos and Anile, vv which they had there landed: and the men vv ere all fled on shoare. Wee landed there, and burnt their tovvne, vvith the Church and Custome-house, vv which vvas very faire and large: in vv which house vv ere sixe hundred bags of Anile to die cloth; euery bagge vv where-

The Ile of Puna is almost as big as the Ile of Wight. Cotton trees.

An excellent Orchard.

The second grauing of their ships.

The second skirmish with the Spaniards. The chiefe towne in Puna burnt.

They arrived at Puna the 25. of May. The Hugh Gallant a Barke of 40. tons sunke. Rio dulce.

Michael Sancius a Marfillian.

A great newe shippe burnt. The second Barke of aduise taken. The riuer of Copolita. Aguatulco in 15 degrees and 40. minutes Northward. A barke burnt. Anile. Ca. 200. Aguatulco a towne of 100. houses burnt.

Cacaos goe for money in Nue-ua España.

Our Generall entred two miles into the maine land with 30. men.

Puerto de Nati-uidad in 19 degrees.

The third pōle of aduise taken Puerto de Nati-uidad burnt.
Two new ships
burnt.
The riuer of Sant Iago.
Pearles taken.

The bay of Malacca.

The towne of Acatlan burnt.

The road of Chaccalla.

The Isle of *S.
Andrew*.

Iguanos good meate.

Massatlan in 23. degrees and an halfe.

An Island a league Northwards of Maf-satlan.
The escape of one Domingo, a Spaniard.
Chiametla.

of was worth fortie Crownes, and foure hundred bagges of Cacaos; euery bag whereof is worth ten Crownes. These Cacaos goe among them for meate and money. For an hundred and fiftie of them are in value one Ryal of plate in readie payment. They are very like vnto an Almond, but are nothing so pleasant in taste: they eat them, and make drinke of them.

The eight and twentieth day, we set sayle from Copalita, because the sea was so great there, that we could not fill water, and ranne the same night into the roade of Aguatulco. The nine and twentieth, our Generall landed and went on shore with thirtie men, two miles into the woods, where we tooke a Mestizo, whose name was Michael de Truxillo, who was customer of that towne, and we found with him two chambers full of his stuffe: wee brought him and his stuffe aboard. And whereas I say he was a Mestizo, it is to be vnderstood, that a Mestizo, is one 10 which hath a Spaniard to his father, and an Indian to his mother.

The foure and twentieth day of August, our Generall with thirty of vs went with the Pin- nesse vnto an haven called Puerto de Natiuidad, where we had intelligence by Michael Sancius, that there should be a Pinnesse, but before we could get thither, the said Pinnesse was gone to fill for pearles twelue leagues farther, as we were informed by certaine Indians which we found there. We tooke a Mullato in this place in his bed, which was sent with letters of aduise concer- ning vs along the coast of Nueva Galicia, whose horse we killed, tooke his letters, left him be- hind, set fire on the houses, and burnt two new shippes of two hundred tunnes the piece, which were in building there on the stockes, and came aboard of our shippes againe. The sixe and twentieth day, we came into the bay of S. Iago, where we watered at a fresh Riuer, along which 20 riuer many plantans are growing: here is great abundance of fresh fish. Here also certaine of our company dragged for pearles, and caught some quantitie.

The second of September, we departed from Sant Iago. This bay of Sant Iago standeth in nineteene degrees and eightene minutes to the Northward of the line. The third of Septem- ber, we arriued in a little Bay a league to the Westward off Port de Natiuidad, called Malacca, which is a very good place to ride in: and the same day about twelue of the clocke, our Generall landed with thirty men or there about, and went vp to a towne of Indians, which was two leagues from the road, which towne is called Acatlan: there were in it about twentie or thirty houses and a Church, which we defaced and came aboard againe the same night. All the people were fled out of the towne at the sight of vs. The fourth, we departed from the road of Malac- 30 ca, and sayled along the coast. The eight, wee came to the roade of Chaccalla, in which Bay there are two little houses by the waters side. This Bay is eightene leagues from the Cape de los Corrientes. The ninth in the morning our Generall sent vp Captaine Hauers, with forty men of vs before day, and Michael Sancius being our guide, we vvent vnto a place about two leagues vp into the countrey, in a desert path through the vwoods and vvildernesse; and in the ende vvee came to a place vwhere vve tooke three householders vvith their vvives and children, and some In- dians, one Carpenter vvich vvas a Spaniard, and a Portugall, vve bound them all, and made them to come to the sea side vvith vs. Our Generall made their vvives to fetch vs Plantans, Lymmons, and Oranges, Pine-aples, and other fruits vvhereof they had abundance, and so let their husbands depart, except Sembrano the Spanish Carpenter, and Diego the Portugall; and the 40 tenth day vve departed the roade.

The twelfth day vve arriued at a little Island called the Isle of Sant Andrew, on vvich there is great store of fovvle and vvood: vvhere vve dried and salted as many of the fovvles as vvee thought good: vve also killed there abundance of Seales, and Iguanos vvich are a kind of Ser- pents, vvith foure feete, and a long sharpe tayle, strange to them vvich haue not seene them; but they are very good meate. We ridde here vntill the seuenteenth day, at vvich time vvee de- parted.

The foure and twentieth day we arriued in the road of Massatlan, which standeth in twenty three degrees  $\frac{1}{2}$ , iust vnder the Tropicke of Cancer: It is a very great riuer within, but is barred at the mouth: & vpon the North side of the barre without, is good fresh water: but there is very euil 50 filling of it: because at a low water it is shoald halfe a mile off the shoare. There is great store of fresh fish in that bay: and good fruites vp into the countrey, whereof wee had some, though not without danger.

The seuen and twentieth day of September, we departed from the roade of Massatlan, and ran to an Island which is a league to the Northward of the said Massatlan; where wee trimmed our ships, and new built our Pinnesse: and there is a little Island a quarter of a league from it, on which are Seales; where a Spanish prisoner, whose name was Domingo, beeing sent to wash shirts with one of our men to keep him, made a scape, and swam to the maine, which was an English mile distant: at which place we had seene thirty or fortie Spaniards and Indians, which were horsemen, and kept watch there, which came from a towne called Chiametla, which was eleuen 60 leagues vp into the countrey, as Michael Sancius told vs. We found vpon the Island where we trimmed our Pinnesse, fresh water by the assistance of God in that our great neede by digging two or three foote deepe in the sand, where no water, nor signe of water was before to bee per- ceued. Othervise vve had gone backe twenty or thirty leagues to vvater: vvich might haue beene beene occasion that vve might haue missed our prey vve had long vwayted for. But God rayled one Flores a Spaniard, vvhich vvas also a prisoner vwith vs, to make a motion to digge in the sands. Novv our Generall hauing had experience once before of the like, commanded to put his motion in practise, and in digging three foot deepe vve found very good and fresh vvater. So vve vvatered our shippes, and might haue filled a thousand tunnes more, if vve had vvould.

Fresh water at two or three foote deepe in the sand.

We stayed in this Island vntill the ninth day of October, at vvhich time vve departed at night for the Cape of S. Lucar, vvhich is on the West side of the point of California: vwith vvhich vve fell on the foureteenth of October, it is very like the Needles at the Isle of Wight: and vwithin the said Cape is a great Bay, called by the Spaniards Aguada Segura: into vvhich falleth 10 a faire fresh riuer, about vvhich many Indians vse to keepe: vve vvatered in the riuer, and lay off and on from the said Cape of S. Lucar vntill the fourth of Nouember, and had the vvinds hanging still Westerly.

The Cape of S. Lucar on the point of Cal- ifornia.
Aguada Segura.

The fourth of Nouember, the Desire and the Content, beating vp and downe vpon the head-land of California, which standeth in twenty three degrees, and  $\frac{1}{2}$  to the Northward, betweene 20 seuen and eight of the clocke in the morning, one of the company of our Admirall which was the trumpeter of the ship going vp into the toppe, espied a sayle, bearing in from the sea with the Cape; whereupon he cryed out with no small ioy to himselfe and the whole companie, A sayle, A sayle: with which cheerefull word the master of the ship, and diuers others of the company went also vp into the maine top, who perceiuing the speech to be very true, gaue information vnto our Generall of these happy newes, who was no lesse glad then the cause required: wherupon he gaue in charge presently vnto the whole companie to put all things in readinesse, which beeing performed we gaue them chase some three or foure houres, standing with our best aduantage, and working for the winde.

California in 23. degrees &
two thirds.

In the afternoone we gat vp vnto them, giuing them the broad side with our great ordnance, and a vollee of small shot, and presently laid the ship aboard, whereof the King of Spaine was owner, which was Admirall of the South-sea, called the S. Anna, and thought to be seuen hundred tunnes in burthen. Now as we were readie on their ships side to enter her, beeing not past 30 fiftie or sixty men at the vttermost in our ship, we perceiued that the Captain of the said ship had made fights fore and after, and laid their sailes close on their poope, their mid-ship, with their fore-castle, and hauing not one man to be seene, stood close vnder their fights, with Lances, lauelings, Rapiers and Targets, and an innumerable sort of great stones, which they threw ouer boord vpon our heads, and into our ship so fast, and beeing so many of them, that they put vs off the shippe againe, with the losse of two of our men which were slaine, and with the hurting of foure or fve. But for all this we new trimmed our sailes, and fitted euery man his furniture, and gaue 40 them a fresh incounter with our great Ordnance, and also with our small shot, raking them thorough and thorough, to the killing and maiming of many of their men. Their Captaine still like a valiant man with his companie, stood very stoutely vnto his close fights, not yeelding as yet. Our Generall encouraging his men afresh with the whole noyse of trumpets, gaue them the third encounter with our great Ordnance, and all our small shot to the great discomforting of our enemies, raking them through in diuerse places, killing and spoiling many. They beeing thus discomforted, and their shippe beeing in hazard of sinking by reason of the great shot which were made, whereof some were vnder water, within fve or sixe houres fight, set out a flagge of truce, and parled for mercie, desiring our Generall to saue their liues, and to take their goods, and that they would presently yeeld. Our Generall promised them mercy, and willed them to strike their sayles, and to hoysse out their boat, & to come aboard: which newes they were full glad to heare, and presently stroke their sailes, hoysed their boat out, and one of their chiefe marchants came aboard vnto our Generall: and falling downe vpon his knees, offered to haue kissed his feete, and craued mercie: the Captaine and their Pilote, at their comming vsed the like duetie and reuerence as the former did. The Generall promised their liues and good vsage. They de-50 clared what goods they had within boord, to wit, an hundreth and two and twenty thousand pezos of gold: and the rest of the riches that the ship was laden with, was in Silkes, Sattens, Damasks, with Muske and diuers other marchandize, and great store of all manner of victualls, with the choise of many conserues of all sorts for to eate, and of sundry sorts of very good wines. These things beeing made knowne, they were commanded to stay aboard the Desire, and on the sixt day of Nouember following, we went into an harbour, which is called by the Spaniards, Aguada Segura, or Puerto Seguro.

The fight betweene the great S. Anna and vs.

The second in-counter.

The third encounter.

The great S.
Anna yeeldeth.

One hundred and two and twenty thousand pezos of Gold.
A pezo is 8.
shillings.
The merchandise in the great shippe.
The Spaniards
set on shore to the number of 190.

Here the whole company of the Spaniards, both of men and women to the number of an hundred and ninetie persons were set on shore: where they had a fayre riuer of fresh water, with great store of fresh-fish, fowle, and wood, and also many Hares and Conies vpon the maine land.
60 Our Generall also gaue them great store of victualls, of Garuanfas, Peason, and some Wine. Also they had all the sailes of their shippe to make them tents on shore, with licence to take such store of planks as should be sufficient to make them a barke. Then we fell to hoysing in of our goods, sharing of the treasure, and alotting to euery man his portion. In diuision whereof, the eight of this moneth, many of the company fell into a mutinie against our Generall, especially those Ff 3 which Mutinie against the Generall.

which were in the Content, which nevertheless were after a lort pacified for the time.

On the seuenteenth day of Nouember, which is the day of the happy Coronation of her Maiestie, our Generall commanded all his Ordnance to be shot off, with the small shot both in his owne shippe where himselfe went, and also in the Content, which was our Vice-admirall. This being done, the same night we had many fire-workes, and more Ordnance discharged, to the great admiration of all the Spaniards which were there: for the most part of them had neuer seene the like before. This ended, our Generall discharged the Captaine, gaue him a royall reward, with prouision for his defence against the Indians and his companie, both of Swords, Targets, Pieces, Shot and Powder to his great contentment: but before his departure, hee tooke out of this great shippe two yong lads borne in Iapon, which could both write and reade their owne language, the eldest being about twenty yeeres olde, was named Christopher, the other was called Cosmus, about seuentene yeeres of age, both of very good capacitie. He tooke also with him out of their shippe, three boyes borne in the Isles of Manilla, the one about fifteene, the other about thirteene, and the yongest about nine yeeres old. The name of the eldest was Alphonso, the second Anthony de Dasi, the thirt remaineth with the right Honourable the Countesse of Essex. He also tooke from them one Nicholas Roderigo, a Portugall, who hath been in Canton, and other parts of China, in the Islands of Iapon, being a countrey most rich in siluer mines, and in the Philippinas.

Two boyes of Iapon.

Three boyes of Manilla.

Nicholas Roderigo, a Portugall.

A Spanish Pilote.

Acapulco is the haven whence they set forth to the Philippinas.

Good watering at the Ladrones.

The winde at East northeast.

The Content whereof Steuens Hare was master, left behind in the road.

The Island of Guana one of the Ladrones in 13. degrees & two thirds. Commodities of the Isles of Ladrones.

The colour & stature of the people of the Isles of Ladrones.

Their images. Artificiall Canoas.

Canoas sayling right against the winde.

The nimbleness of the people of the Ladrones.

Cabo del Spirito Santo one of the Isles of the Philippinas in 13. degrees.

Hee tooke also from them a Spaniard, whose name was Thomas de Ersola, which was a very good Pilote from Acapulco, and the coast of Nueva Espanna vnto the Islands of Ladrones, where the Spaniards doe put in to water, sayling betweene Acapulco and the Philippinas: in which Isles of Ladrones, they finde fresh water, Plantans, and Potato-rootes: howbeit the people be verie rude and heathens.

The nineteenth day of Nouember aforesaid, about three of the clocke in the afternoone, our Generall caused the Kings Shippe to be set on fire, which hauing to the quantitie of five hundred turnes of goods in her, we saw burnt vnto the water, and then gaue them a piece of Ordnance, and set sayle ioyfully homewards towards England with a faire wind, which by this time was come about to East Northeast: and night growing neere, we left the Content a sterne of vs, which was not as yet come out of the roade. And here thinking she would haue ouertaken vs, we lost her companie, and neuer saw her after. We were sayling from this haven of Agueda Segura in California, vnto the Isles of Ladrones the rest of Nouember, and all December, and so forth vntill the third of Ianuarie, 1588. with a faire winde for the space of five and fortie dayes: and we esteemed it to be betweene seuentene and eightene hundred leagues.

The third day of Ianuarie by sixe of the clocke in the morning, we had sight of one of the Islands of Ladrones, called the Island of Guana, standing in thirteene degrees  $\frac{1}{2}$  toward the North, and sayling with a gentle gale before the winde, by one or two of the clocke in the afternoone, we were come vp within two leagues of the Island, where wee met with sixtie or seuentie sayles of Canoas full of Sauages, who came off to sea vnto vs, and brought with them in their Boates, Plantans, Cocos, Potato-rootes, and fresh-fish, which they had caught at Sea, and held them vp vnto vs for to trucke or exchange with vs; which when we perceiued, we made fast little pieces of old yron vpon small cords, and fishing lines, and so vered the yron vnto their Canoas, and they caught hold of them, and tooke off the yron, and in exchange of it, they would make fast vnto the same line, either a Potato-roote, or a bundle of Plantans, which we haled in: and thus our companie exchanged with them, vntill they had satisfied themselues with as much as did content them: yet we could not be ridde of them. For afterward they were so thicke about the ship, that it stemmed, and brake one or two of their Canoas; but the men saued themselves, being in euery Canoa, foure, sixe, or eight persons, all naked and excellent swimmers and diuers. They are of a tawny colour, and maruellous fat, and bigger ordinarily of stature then the most part of our men in England, wearing their haire maruellous long: yet some of them haue it made vp, and tyed with a knot on the Crowne, and some with two knots, much like vnto their Images which we saw carued in wood, and standing in the head of their boats, like vnto the Images of the deuill. Their Canoas were as artificially made, as any that euer we had seene: considering they were made and contriued without any edge-toole. They are not oboue halfe a yard in breadth, and in length some seuen or eight yardes, and their Heads and Sternes are both alike: they are made out with raftes of Canes and Reeds on the Starre-bord-side, with Mast and Saile: their Saile is made of matters of Sedges, square or trianglewise: and they saile as well right against the winde, as before the winde. These Sauages followed vs so long, that we could not be ridde of them: vntill in the ende our Generall commanded some halfe dozen Harquebuzes to be made ready; and himselfe strooke one of them, and the rest shot at them: but they were so yare and nimble, that we could not discerne whether they were killed or no, because they could fall backward into the sea, and preuent vs by diuing.

The fouteeteenth day of Ianuarie lying at hull with our Ship all the middle watch, from twelue at night, vntill foure in the morning, by the breake of day, we fell with an head-land of the Isles of the Philippinas, which is called Cabo del Spirito Santo, which is of very great bignesse and length, length, high land in the midst of it, and very low land as the Cape lieth East and West, tending farre into the Sea to the Westward. This Cape or Island is distant from the Ile of Guana, one of the Ladrones, three hundred and ten leagues. We were in sayling of this course eleven dayes, with scant winds, and some foule weather, bearing no sayle two or three nights. This Island standeth in thirteene degrees, and is a place much peopled with heathen people, and all woodie through the whole Land: and it is short of the chiefe Island of the Philippinas called Manilla, about sixtie leagues. Manilla is well planted and inhabited with Spaniards, to the number of fixe or seven hundred persons: which dwell in a towne unvalled, which hath three or foure Block-houses, part made of wood, and part of stone, being indeed of no great strength: they haue one or two small Gallies belong to the Towne. It is a very rich place of Gold, and many other commodities; and they haue yeerely traffique from Acapulco in Nueva España, and also twenty or thirtie shippes from China, and from the Sanguelos, which bring them many sorts of marchandize. They bring great store of gold with them, which they traffique and exchange for siluer, and giue weight for weight. These Sanguelos are men of marvellous capacity, in deuising and making all manner of things, especially in all handie crafts and sciences: and euery one is so expert, perfect, and skilfull in his facultie, as few or no Christians are able to go beyond them in that which they take in hand. For drawing and imbroidering vpon Satten, Silke, or Lavvne, either beast, fowle, fish, or vvorme, for liuelinesse and perfectnesse, both in Silke, Siluer, Gold, and Pearle, they excell. Also the fourteenth day at night we entred the Straits between the Island of Luçon, and the Island of Camlaia.

The fifteenth of Ianuary we fell with an Island called Capul, and had betwixt the said Island and another Island but a narrowe passage, and a rippling of a very great tide, with a ledge of Rockes lying off the point of the Island of Capul: and no danger, but water enough a faire breadth off: and within the point a faire Bay, and a very good harborough in foure fathomes water hard aboard the shore within a Cables length. About tenne of the clocke in the morning we came to an anchor. Our Shippe was no sooner come to an anchor, but presently there came a Canoe rowing aboard vs; wherein was one of the cheife Casiques of the Island, whereof there be seven, who supposing that we were Spaniards, brought vs Potato-rootes, which they call Comotas, and greene Cocos, in exchange whereof we gaue his companie pieces of linnen, to the quantitie of a yard for foure Cocos, and as much linnen for a basket of Potato-rootes of a quart in quantitie; which rootes are very good meate, and excellent sweete, either roasted or boyled. This Casiques skinne was carued and cut with sundry and many strakes and deuises all ouer his bodie. We kept him still aboard, and caused him to send those men which brought him aboard backe to the Island, to cause the rest of the Principals to come aboard: who were no sooner gone on shore, but presently the people of the Island came downe with their Cocos, and Potato-rootes, and the rest of the Principals likewise came aboard, and brought with them hennes, and hogges: and they vsed the same order with vs which they doe with the Spaniards. For they tooke for euery hogge (which they call Balboye) eight Ryals of plate, and for euery henne or cocke one ryall of plate. Thus we rode at anchor all that day, doing nothing but buying rootes, Cocos, hennes, hogges, and such things as they brought, refreshing our selues. Here Thomas Ersola, the Spanish Pilot, seeking to betray vs to the Spaniards, was hanged.

We roade for the space of nine dayes, about this Island of Capul, where we had diuerse kinds of fresh victualls, with excellent fresh water in euery bay, and great store of wood. The people of this Island go almost all naked, and are tawny of colour. The men weare onely a stroope about their waistes, of some kind of linnen of their owne weauing, which is made of Plantan-leaves, and another stroope comming from their backe vnder their twistes, which couereth their priuy parts, and is made fast to their girdles at their nauels; which is this. Euery man and man-child among them, hath a nayle of Tynne thrust quite through the head of his priue part, being split in the lower ende, and riuetted, and on the head of the nayle is as it were a Crowne: which is driuen through their priuities when they be yong, and the place groweth vp agtine, without any great paine to the child: and they take this nayle out and in as occasion serueth; and for the truth thereof, we our selues haue taken one of these nayles from a Sonne of one of the Kings, which was of the age of tenne yeeres, who did weare the same in his priuy member. This custome was granted at the request of the women of the Countrey, who finding their men to be giuen to the fowle sinne of Sodomie, desired some remedie against that mischiefe, and obtained this before named of the Magistrates. Moreouer, all the males are circumcised, hauing the foreskinne of their flesh cut avay. These people wholly worshippe the Deuill, and oftentimes haue conference with him, which appeareth vnto them in most vgly and monstrous shape.

On the three and twentieth, our Generall M. Thomas Candish caused all the Principals of this Island, and of an hundred Islands more, which hee had made to pay Tribute vnto him (which Tribute was in Hogges, Hennes, Potatoes, and Cocos) to appeare before him, and made himselfe and his Company knowne vnto them, that they were Englishmen, and enemies to the Spaniards; and thereupon spred his Ensigne, and sounded vp the Drummes, which they much marvelled

From Guana an Ile of the Ladrones to Camlaia is 310 leagues.

The description of the towne of Manilla. Trade from Acapulco to Manilla. Merchants of China Merchants called Sanguelos. Siluer exchanged weight for weight for Gold.

The Island of Capul at which our men stayed 9. dayes.

One of the cheife Gouernours of the Island came aboard vs.

Hennes and hogges.

The manner of the people of Capul.

A strange nail in the yards of men to prevent Sodomie, for which purpose in Pegu they weare in the same part balls.

Circumcision.

The inhabitants of Capul, with all the Islands adiey-ning, promise to ayde the English against the Spaniards.
Our departure from the Island of Capul.
The Isle of Malbat.

The Island of Panama.

Mines of very fine Gold, in the Island of Panama.
The Island of Negros, in nine degrees.

Their departure from the Philippina's.

Batochina.

11. or 12. small Islands, in 3. degrees, 10. minutes to the Southward.

March, 1588.
Our arriual at Iana maior.

The Morisco or Arabian Tongue common in Iana.

Nine or ten of the Kings Canoas.

Raia Bolamboam.

led at. To conclude, they promised both themselves and all the Islands thereabout, to ayde him, whensoever hee should come againe to overcome the Spaniards. Also our Generall gave them, in token that wee were enemies to the Spaniards, Money back againe for all their Tribute which they had payed: which they tooke marvellous friendly, and rowed about our shippe, to shew vs pleasure, marvellous swiftly. At the last, our Generall caused a Saker to be shot off; whereat they wondered, and with great contentment tooke their leaves of vs.

The next day, being the foure and twentieth of Ianuary, wee set sayle about six of the clocke in the morning, and ran along the Coast of the Island of Manilla, shaping our course Northwest, betweene the Isle of Manilla, and the Isle of Malbat.

The eight and twentieth day, in the morning about seuen of the clocke, riding at an anchor 10 betwixt two Islands, wee espyed a Frigat vnder her two Coarces, comming out betweene two other Islands, which (as wee imagined) came from Manilla, sayling close aboord the shore, along the maine Island of Panama. Here wee rode at anchor all that night, and perceiued that certaine Spaniards (which came from Manilla to Ragann, to fetch a new shippe of the Kings, there builded) had dispersed their Band into two or three parts, and kept great Watch in seuerall steedes, with Fires, and shooting off their Pieces. This Island hath much plaine Ground in it, in many places, and many faire and straight Trees doe grow vpon it, fit for to make excellent good Masts for all sorts of shippes. There are also Mynes of very fine Gold in it, which are in the custodie of the Indians. And to the South-ward of this place, there is another very great Island, which is not subdued by the Spaniards, nor any other Nation. The people which inhabite it, are all 20
Negros, and the Island is called the Island of Negros; and is almost as bigge as England, standing in nine degrees: The most part of it seemeth to be very lowe Land, and by all likelihood is very fruitfull.

The nine and twentieth day of Ianuary, about six of the clocke in the morning wee set sayle, sending our Boat before, vntill it was two of the clocke in the afternoone, passing all this time as it were through a Strait, betwixt the said two Islands of Panama, and the Island of Negros; and about sixteene Leagues off, wee espyed a faire opening, trending South-west and by South: at which time our Boat came aboard, and our Generall sent commendations to the Spanish Captaine, which wee came from the Euening before, by a Spaniard which wee had taken, and wil- 30 led him to prouide good store of Gold; for hee meant for to see him with his company at Manilla within few yeeres; and that hee did but want a bigger Boat to haue landed his men, or else hee would haue seene him then; and so caused him to be set on shore.

The eight day of February, by eight of the clocke in the morning, wee espyed an Island neere Gilolo, called Batochina, which standeth in one degree from the Equinoctiall Line, Northward.

The foureteenth day of February, wee fell with eleuen or twelue very small Islands, lying very low and flat, full of Trees, and passed by some Islands which bee sunke, and haue the drie Sands lying in the maine Sea. These Islands neere the Malucco's, stand in three degrees and ten minutes, to the Southward of the Line.

The first day of March hauing passed through the Straits of Iana minor and Iana maior, wee 40 came to an anchor vnder the Southwest parts of Iana maior; where wee espyed certaine of the people, which were fishing by the Sea side, in a Bay which was vnder the Island. Then our Generall taking into the ship-boat certaine of his company, and a Negro which could speake the Morisco Tongue, which hee had taken out of the great S. Anna, made toward those Fishers; which hauing espyed our Boat, ranne on shore into the Wood, for feare of our men: But our Generall caused his Negro to call vnto them; who no sooner heard him call, but presently one of them came out to the shore side, and made answere. Our Generall by the Negro enquired of him for fresh Water, which they found, and caused the Fisher to goe to the King, and to eertifie him of a shippe that was come, to haue Traffique for Victuals, and for Diamants, Pearles, or any 50 other rich Iewels that hee had.

And on the twelfth of March, there came nine or ten of the Kings Canoas so deeply laden with Victuals as they could swimme, with two great liue Oxen, halfe a score of wonderfull great and fat Hogges, a number of Hennes, Drakes, Geese, Egges, Plantans, Sugar Canes, Sugar in Plates, Cocos, sweet Oranges and sowre, Lymes, great store of Wine and Aqua-vita, Salt to season Victuals withall, and almost all manner of Victuals else, with diuers of the Kings Officers, which were there.

There came two Portugals to vs, which enquired of Don Antonio their King, then in England, and told vs of the Iauanes, as followeth. The name of the King of that part of the Island was Raia Bolamboam, who was a man had in great maiestie and feare among them. The common people may not bargaine, sell, or exchange any thing with any other Nation, without spe- 60 ciall licence from their King; and if any so doe, it is present death for him. The King himselfe is a man of great yeeres, and hath an hundred Wiues, his sonne hath fiftie. The custome of the Countrey is, that whensoever the King doth die, they take the body so dead, and burne it, and preserue the ashes of him, and within fve dayes next after, the Wiues of the said King fo

so dead, according to the custome and vse of their Countrey, euery one of them goe together to a place appointed, and the chiefe of the Women, which was neereſt vnto him in accompt, hath a Ball in her hand, and throweth it from her, and to the place where the Ball resteth, thither they goe all, and turne their faces to the East-ward, and euery one with a Dagger in their hand, (which Dagger they call a Criſe, and is as sharpe as a Raſor) ſtab themſelues to the heart, and with their hands all to be-bath themſelues in their owne blood, and falling groueling on their faces, ſo ende their dayes. This thing is as true as it ſeemeth to any hearer to be ſtrange. The men of themſelues be very politique and ſubtile, and ſingularly valiant, being naked men, in any action they vndertake, and wonderfully at commandement and feare of their King. For example: If their King command them to vndertake any exploit, be it neuer ſo dangerous or deſperate, they dare not reſuſe it, though they die euery man in the execution of the ſame. For he will cut off the heads of euery one of them which return aliue without bringing of their purpoſe to paſſe: which is ſuch a thing among them, as it maketh them the moſt valiant people in all the Southeaſt-parts of the world: for they neuer feare any death. For beeing in fight with any Nation, if any of them feeleth himſelfe hurt with Launce or ſword, he will willingly runne himſelfe vpon the weapon quite through his body, to procure his death the more ſpeedily, and in this deſperate fort ende his dayes, or ouercome his enimie. Moreouer, although the men bee tawnie of colour, and goe continually naked, yet their women be faire of complexion, and goe more apparelled. They told vs further, that if their King Don Antonio, would come vnto them, they would warrant him to haue all the Malucos at commandement, beſides China, Sangles, and the Iſles of the Philippinds, and that he might be aſſured to haue all the Indians on his ſide that are in the countrey. After we had fully contented theſe Portugals, and the people of Iana which brought vs victualls in their Canoas, they tooke their leaues of vs, with promiſe of all good entertainment at our returnes, and our Generall gaue them three great pieces of Ordnance at their departing.

The wiues kill themſelues after their husbands deaths. A ſtrange order.

Faire women in Iana. Don Antonio might be receiued as King in the Eaſt Indies.

Thus the next day, being the ſixteenth of March, we ſet ſayle towards the Cape of good Hope, called by the Portugals, Cabo de buena Eſperança, on the Southermoſt coaſt of Africa. The reſt of March, and all the moneth of Aprill, we ſpent in traueſing that mightie and vaſte Sea, betweene the Iſle of Iana, and the maine of Africa, obſeruing the heauens, the Croſiers or South-pole, the other ſtarres, the fowles, which are markes vnto the Sea-men of faire weather, foule weather, approching of Lands, or Iſlands, the winds, the tempeſts, the raines and thunders, with the alterations of tides and currents.

They depart from Iana the 16. of March, 1588.

The eleuenth of May in the morning one of the company went into the toppe, and eſpyed Land bearing North, and North and by Weſt off vs, and about noone we eſpyed land to beare Weſt off vs, which as we did imagine was the Cape of Buena Eſperança, whereof indeede wee were ſhort ſome fortie or fiftie leagues: and by reaſon of the ſkantneſſe of the winde, we ſtood along to the Southeaſt vntill midnight; at which time the winde came faire, and we haled along Weſtward. The twelfth and thirteenth dayes we were becalmed, and the ſkie was very hazy, and thicke, vntill the foureteenth day at three of the clocke in the afternoone, at which time the ſkie cleared, and we eſpied the Land againe, which was the Cape called Cabo Faſſo, which is ſhort of the Cape de buena Eſperança forty or fiftie leagues. This Cape is very eaſie to be known. For there are right ouer it three very high hills, ſtanding but a ſmall way one off another, and the higheſt ſtandeth in the middeſt, and the ground is much lower by the Sea ſide. The Cape of Good Hope, beareth Weſt and by South from the ſaid Cabo Faſſo.

Cabo Faſſo.

The ſixteenth day of May, about foure of the clocke in the afternoone the Wind came vp at Eaſt a very ſtiſſe gale, which held vntill it was Saturday with as much wind as euer the Shippe could goe before: at which time by fixe of the clocke in the morning we eſpied the Promontorie or Head-land, called the Cape de Buena Eſperança, which is a reaſonable high land, and at the Weſtermoſt point a little off the maine do ſhew two Hammocks, the one vpon the other, and three other Hammocks lying further off into the Sea, yet low land betweene and adioyning vnto the Sea. This cape of Buena Eſperança is ſet downe and accompted for two thouſand leagues from the Iſland of Iana in the Portugall Sea-carts: but it is not ſo much almoſt by an hundred and fiftie leagues, as we found by the running of our Ship. We were in running of theſe eightene hundred and fiftie leagues, iuſt nine weekes.

They double the Cape de Bona Speranza.

From Iana to the Cape of Bona Speranza is but 1850. leagues. Iune 1588.

The eight day of Iune, by breake of day we fell in ſight of the Iſland of S. Helena, ſeauen or eight leagues ſhort of it, hauing but a ſmall gale of winde, or almoſt none at all: inſomuch as wee could not get vnto it that day, but ſtood off and on all that night. The next day hauing a pretty eaſie gale of winde, we ſtood in with the ſhore, our Boat beeing ſent away before to make the harborough; and about one of the clocke in the afternoone, we came to an anchor in twelve fathomes water, two or three Cables length from the ſhore, in a very faire and ſmooth Bay, vnder the Northwest-ſide of the Iſland. This Iſland is very high land, and lieth in the maine Sea, ſtanding as it were in the middeſt of the Sea, betweene the maine land of Africa, and the maine of Braſilia, and the coaſt of Guinea: and is in fifteene degrees and fortie eight minutes to the Southward of the Equinoctiall line, and is diſtant from the Cape of Buena Eſperança betweene ſiue and fixe

They anchor at the Iſland of S. Helena the 9. of Iune.

S. Helena is in the latitude of 15. degrees 48. min. to the Southward.

The great store of diuerse excellent fruits in S. Helena.

sixe hundred leagues. Here we went on shore, and entred the Church, which was hanged with painted clothes, hauing an Altar with a picture of the Crucifixe and Blessed Virgine in a Table. There is a causey to the Church, two houses also adioyning, a frame with two Bells, and a Crosse of free-stone. The valley where it stands is pleasant, and planted in euery place either with fruit trees, or with herbes. There are fig-trees, which beare fruit continually, and marvellous plentiful: for, on euery tree you shall haue blossomes, greene figs, and ripe figs, all at once: and it is so all the yeere long: the reason is, that the Island standeth so neere the Sunne. There be also great store of Lymmon-trees, Orange-trees, Pomegranate-trees, Pomecitron-trees, Date-trees, which beare fruit as the Figge-trees doe, and are planted carefully and very artificially, with very pleasant walkes vnder and betweene them, and the said walkes bee ouer-shadowed with the leaues 10 of the trees: and in euery voide place is planted Parsly, Sorell, Basill, Fenell, Annis-seed, Mustard-seed, Raddishes, and many speciall good herbes: and the fresh water brooke runneth thorough diuerse places of this Orchyard, and may with very small paines be made to water any one tree in the valley.

Abundance of partridges in
S. Helena.

There is also vpon this Island great store of Partridges, which are very tame, not making any great haste to flie away though one come very neere them, but onely to runne away, and get vp into the steepe cliffes; we killed some of them with a fowling Piece. They be within a little as bigge as a henne, and are of an ash-colour, and liue in Couies twelue, sixteene, and twenty together: you cannot goe tenne or twelue score, but you shall see or spring one or two Couies at the least. There are likewise no lesse store of Fesants in the Island, which are surpassing those which 20 are in our Countrey in bignesse, and in numbers of a companie. We found moreouer in this place great store of Guinie-cocks, which we call Turkies, of colour blacke and white, with red heads: they are much about the same bignesse which ours be of in England: their egges be white, and as bigge as a Turkies egge.

Exceeding numbers of goats.

There are in this Island thousands of Goates, which the Spaniards call Cabritos, which are very wild: you shall see one or two hundred of them together, and sometimes you may behold them going in a flocke almost a mile long. Some of them are as big as an Asse, with a mayne like an Horse, and a beard hanging downe to the very ground. We tooke and killed many of them for all their swiftnes: for there be thousands of them vpon the mountaines. Here are in like manner great store of swine which be very wilde, fat, and large; they keepe altogether vpon the 30 mountaines, and will very fieldome abide any man to come neere them, except it bee by meere chance when they are found asleepe, or otherwise according to their kind, bee taken laid in the mire.

Plentie of swine.

Our departure from S. Helena.

We found in the houses at our comming three slaues, which were Negros, and one which was borne in the Island of Iaua: For the Portugals vse to touch and refresh here at their returne from the Indies, and leaue their sicke persons to be taken in by the next Fleet.

The twentieth day of Iune hauing taken in wood and water, and refreshed our selues with such things as we found there, and made cleane our ship, we set sayle about eight of the clocke in the night toward England. At our setting saile, we had the winde at Southeast, and wee haled away Northwest and by West. The winde is commonly off the shore at this Island of S. Helena. 40

Coruo and Flores, two Islands of the Azores.

On Friday in the morning beeing the three and twentieth day of August, at foure of the clocke we haled East, and East and by South for the Northermost Islands of the Azores.

On Saturday the foure and twentieth day of the said moneth, by fise of the clocke in the morning we fell in sight of the two Islands of Flores and Coruo, standing in thirtie nine degrees and  $\frac{1}{2}$ , and sailed away Northeast.

The third of September we met with a Flemish hulke which came from Lisbone, and declared vnto vs the ouerthrowing of the Spanish Fleete, to the singular reioycing and comfort of vs all.

The ninth of September, after a terrible tempest which carried away most part of our sailes, by the mercifull fauour of the Almightye, we recouered our long wished Port of Plimmonsb in 50 England, from whence we set forth at the beginning of our Voyage.

A Letter of Master THOMAS CANDISH to the Right Honourable the Lord HUNSDON, Lord Chamberlaine, one of her Maiesties most Honourable Priuy Counsell, touching the successe of his Voyage about the World.

Right Honourable, as your fauour heretofore hath beene most greatly extended towards me, so I humbly desire a continuance thereof: and though there bee no meanes in me to deserue the same, yet the vttermost of my seruices shall not be wanting, whensoever it 60 shall please your Honour to dispose thereof. I am humbly to desire your Honour to make knowne vnto her Maiestie, the desire I haue had to doe her Maiestie seruice in the performance of this Voyage. And as it hath pleased God to giue her the victory ouer part of her enemies, so I trust yer long to see her ouerthrow them all. For the places of their wealth, whereby they haue main-maintained and made their warres, are now perfectly discovered; and if it please her Maiestie, with a very small power she may take the spoyle of themall. It hath pleased the Almighty to suffer me to circompasse the whole Globe of the World, entring in at the Streight of Magellan, and returning by the Cape de Buena Esperança. In which Voyage I haue either discovered, or brought certaine intelligence of all the rich places of the world that euer were knowne or discovered by any Christian. I nauigated alongst the Coast of Chili, Peru, and Nueva España, where I made great spoyles: I burnt and sunke nineteene sayles of Ships small and great. All the Villages and Townes that euer I landed at, I burnt and spoyled: and had I not beene discovered vpon the Coast, I had taken great quantitie of Treasure. The matter of most profit vnto me, was a 10 great ship of the Kings vvhich I tooke at California, vvhich ship came from the Philippinas, beeing one of the richest of merchandize that euer passed those Seas, as the Kings Register and merchants accounts did shevv: for it did amount in value to * in Mexico to be sold. Which goods (for that my Ships vv ere not able to containe the least part of them) I vv as inforced to set on fire. From the Cape of California, being the vttermost part of all Nueva España, I nauigated to the Islands of the Philippinas, hard vpon the Coast of China; of which Countrey I haue brought such intelligence as hath not been heard of in these parts. The statelinesse and riches of vvhich Countrey I feare to make report of, least I should not be credited: for if I had not knowvn sufficiently the incomparable vvealth of that Countrey, I should haue beene as incredulous thereof, as others vv ill be that haue not had the like experience. I sayled along the Islands of the 20 Malucos, vv here among some of the Heathen people I vv as vv ell intreated, vv here our Countrey-men may haue trade as freely as the Portugals, if they vv ill themselves. From thence I passed by the Cape of Buena Esperança, and found out by the vv ay homeward the Island of S. Helena, vv here the Portugals vse to relieue themselves: and from that Island God hath suffered me to returne into England. All vv hich seruices vv ith my selfe, I humbly prostrate at her Maiesties feete, desiring the Almighty long to continue her Reigne among vs: for at this day shee is the most famous and victorious Prince that liueth in the World.

Thus humbly desiring pardon of your Honour for my tediousnesse, I leaue your Lordship to the tuition of the Almighty. Plimmoth this ninth of September, 1588.

30

Your Honours most humble to command,

THOMAS CANDISH.

CHAP. V.

40

The Voyage of OLIVER NOORT round about the Globe, beeing the fourth Circum-Navigation of the same, extracted out of the Latine Diarie.

IN the yeere 1598. on the second day of Iuly, the Maurice and the Concord set forth from Roterdam: and on the thirteenth of September, the Henry Frederike, and the Hope came vp to them, where they stayed for them on the Coast of England. Their chiefe Pilot was Captaine * Melis, an Englishman, which had encompassed the Circumference with M. Thomas Candish. On the nineteenth they came before Plimmoth, where the Vice-admiralls boat with sixe men for-50ooke them. On the seuen and twentieth they tooke two ships of Biscay, and after some view of them let them depart.

October the fourth, they met foure shippes, one of Amsterdam, another of England, and two French comming out of Barbarie, which related of the terrible pestilence in that countrey, of which two hundred and fiftie thousand men in short space had died in Morocco. On the sixt, they were betwixt the Great Canarie and Teneriffe. On the eight, the Vice-admirall lost her Boat, with one man, the night and winde seuering them. On the ninth, they had almost runne on shore on the Coast of Barbary, by mis-vnderstanding the English Pilot, who had bidden them steere Southwest, and they held their course South, till they vv ere within halfe a mile of Land. On the third of Nouember, they had sight of the Coast of Guinea. On December the fourth, 60they were hard by Cape Palma, in 3.  $\frac{1}{2}$ . On the tenth, they had sight of the Princes Ile, and made to it with no little comfort, after they had beene so long weather-beaten at sea. It standeth in one degree,  $\frac{1}{2}$ . They sent their Boats first for Discouerie, and hauing entred with a flagge of truce, a Negro comming with a like flagge to know what they would haue. They demanding prouision were kindly vsed, and Gerrits which knew the place, and could speake the Portu-
 gall

* Captaine Melis an English man in this Voyage, M. Adams in the next, Guides and Pilots to the Hollanders in their Circum-navigations; as M. Davies, and others afterwards in their first Indian Voyages. Their exploits are honours to the English.
Ila del Principe.

Treachery of the Islanders.

gall tongue, with Captaine Melis, and one John Breme, were suddenly and treacherously slaine; Captaine Peter Esias escaped by flight to the Boats, which were furiously assailed by the Portugalls, and the Generalls brother slaine, the rest hardly returning aboard. The Generall calling a Councell of warre, they agreed to assault the Castle, which having attempted with losse, they burned all their Sugar houles, and with force provided themselves with fresh water. On the se-Cape Consalvo. uenteenth they departed, but the South wind hindred them. On the five and twentieth they reached Cape Consalvo, where the wind usually in the night bloweth from Land; in the day from Sea. Heere they went on shore and found two Dutch Ships, and learned that Peter Verhagens had stayed a moneth in this place, and buried eight and thirtie of his companie, many other being sicke. He entred the Riuer of Congo, and was forced to retire hither, and a fortnight 10 before was departed for Anobon. He learned also that Captaine Cleerhagen, with a great part of his company were slaine in the Princes Island, the rest hardly escaping to and in their Ships. On the sixe and twentieth, they set sayle from the Cape towards Brasil.

1599.

Cape Saint
 Thomas.
 Faire Cape.
 Cape Frio.
 Rio Iauero.
 S. Sebastian.

On the first day of Ianuarie, 1599. they passed the Isle Anobon, and found two degrees Southerly. On the eight and twentieth they had the Sunne in their Zenith. On the third of Februarie, they espied by night certaine low ground, on which the Concord had like to haue made a fatall discord. On the fift, they reached the Land of Brasil, at Cape Saint Thomas in two and twentie. On the sixt, they passed the Faire Cape, and in the Euening Cape Frio. On the ninth, they came to Rio Iauero. After some losse of time, and their company by Portugal-wiles they departed to Saint Sebastian, where they had Fresh-water, Wood, and safe Har- 20 bour, but found no fruits. On the fourteenth of March, a cruell Storme assailed them, and seuered the Vice-Admirall and the Hope, which yet on the seuateenth were restored againe to the Fleet. The Concord also leaked so much, that they agreed to emptie the goods, and forsooke her. But the Scorbute increasing, and the Winter approaching, made them resolute to seeke the Isle of Saint Helena, which they did, but missed it, and therefore thought to releue themselves in the Ascension, or some other Island. In 20th. they came to the Island, but barren and in-hospitall, saue that with Clubbes they knocked downe many Fowles called Malle Mowen. But the Rockes without, and barrenesse within forced their departure, and when on the first of Iune, they had thought to haue encountered the Isle Ascension, they found it the Continent of Brasil: which they imagined to haue beene fourescore miles distant. The Portugalls prohibiting their 30 landing, they came at last to the Isle of Saint Clara, and there erected Tents for their sicke people, some of which presently died. Heere they found little but Herbes, and two Trees of sower Plumbes, which cured the sicke in fifteene dayes. The Island is a * Mile in Compasse, and as farre from the Continent. Here they burned the Concord, hauing before taken out what they pleased: they also exposed two Malefactors to their forlorne fortunes. This Isle is in one and twentie degrees, fifteene minutes Southwards from the Line. On the sixteenth of Iuly they determined to seeke Port Desire, which after many tempests they came to, on the twentieth of September in fortie seuen degrees fortie minutes. In an Island three miles from thence Southwards, they furnished themselves with store of Penguins & fishes. Of those Fowles they took fifty thousand, being as bigge as Geese, with Egges innumerable, which prooued very refreshing to the diseased. 40 Here they careened their Ships and set vp a Smiths Forge. They went vp the Riuer the fift of October, and going on Land, found Beasts like Stagges and Buffals, and multitudes of Ostreches; in one Nest they tooke nineteene Egges, which the Damme had forsaken. The Captaine of the Hope dying of the Scorbute, the Captaine of the Concord was chosen his successour, and the Ship also was termed the Concord.

S. Clara.

* By Miles vn-derstand Dutch Miles.

Port Desire.

Cape Virgins.

On the twentieth day, the Generall went on Land, to descrie the Country, giuing strait charge to looke well to the Boats, and not to stirre from them, which they transgressing, were out of ambushes set on by thirtie Sauages, and three slaine, besides the fourth wounded. These Sauages were of admirable stature, painted vnto terroure, their Bowes short, their Arrowes headed with Stone. On the nine and twentieth they prepared to depart. On the fourth of Nouember, they 50 were neere Cape Virgins; the Land is low and plaine, by the whitenesse resembling England. Often they hence attempted to enter the Straights, but often entred straights with that attempt, repelled by tempestuous Windes, Raine, Hailes, Snowes, Sicknesse and Contention adding their subsidiarie assistance. These sensible crosses were accompanied with losses of Anchors, Cables, and (that which is most irrecoverable) time, little lesse then fifteene moneths being spent before they could fasten any good entrance into the Straights; although they iustly seemed engulphed in the straights all this time, and all their way hither, hauing paid the liues of almost a hundred of their company for Sea-custome. From the said Cape the Land trends South-Westward: the Straights mouth is hence fourteene miles, and halfe a mile in breadth. On the South side thereof they espied a man, with a kind of cloke, supposed therefore but fallily, to 60 be a Christian, his face painted, and stature ordinarie, whom in vaine they inuited to their company. They saw many others, and on the five & twentieth they espied many men, in two Islands neere the Cape, which they called Nassau, who forbad the Hollanders landing, with their Darts and other weapons, but were chased to an obscure Caue, where they were all slaine, before the Dutch Cape Nassau.

Dutch could winne entrance. There they found the amazed and affrighted mothers, lying prostrate on their Infants to protect them from that fatall Thunder, from whom they tooke foure Boyes and two Girles, and with them returned aboard. Of one of these hauing learned to speake Dutch, they receiued this intelligence; the Lands name was Casterme, this People or Tribe called Enoo. The name of the lesser Island Talcke, both stored with Penguins, whose Flesh yeelded them food, their Skinnies clothing. They dwelt in Caues vnder the Earth. In the Continent are many Ostriches whereon they feed: these they call Talcke, and another kind of wild beasts Cassoni. They dwell in seuerall Tribes or Families apart, whereof one is called Kemenetes dwelling in Karay, another Kennekas in Karamay, a third Karaike in Morine, all of stature like ours, except their broader and higher breasts, painted, the men tying their priue member with a string, the women hiding theirs with a Penguins skinne. The men weare long haire, the women are shauen. They goe naked, onely weare a cloke of Penguin skinnies to the waist. The like couering they make of other birds called Oripeggre; the Pengwins they call Conppogre. These skinnies they compact together with no lesse industrie and Art then Skinners doe with vs. There is a fourth Family or Tribe, named Tirimenen, and the place of their habitation Coin, of giantly stature tenne or twelue foote high, which haue often warres with the other Lords or Tribes, whom they call Pengwine-eaters, whereby it seemes they vse other meat, haply Mans-flesh.

Casterme.
Talcke.
Manners of the Inhabitants.

Giants: see the next storie an-nexed of Seb.
de Weert.

On the sixe and twentieth, they tooke three hundred Pengwines on the Isles bearing that name. Before they come at these Pengwine Isles twixt two straits are shoalds, and an Island called Pantagoms. On the eight and twentieth day they passed to the Continent, and saw Whales. They encountered a pleasant Riuer, but saw not the mouth of it; there were many Parrots and faire Trees, whereupon they called it Summer-bay. On the nine and twentieth, they set sayle for wood and water to Port Famine. Heere the Land trends so farre to the South, that Pantagoms, and Terra Fuego seeme as farre off to ioyne. Heere they found no foot prints of the late Philip-Citie, now liker a heape of stones. The Magellane strait is distant thence about foure Dutch miles. The hills on both sides are steep and high all the yeere-long couered with store of Snow. Here they cut downe wood to make them another Boat. The Barkes of the Trees in these parts bite like Pepper. But finding no good watering, and doubting also whether it were Philip-Citie, or Port Famine indeed, they departed, and after two miles found a good Riuer, whence they had easie prouision, on the first of December. The next day they passed to Cape Froward, which hauing doubled with great danger, by reason of vn safe anchorage and contrary wind, they anchored at eightene fadomes, foure miles from thence in a great Bay. Heere was good watering, and an Herb like Neefwort, profitable against the Scorbute. Some Souldiers tasting of another Herb there growing, were well-nigh distracted for a time. A mile off they found a fit place to build their Boat, in which they spent twelue dayes. Here they had sight of Sebalt de Weert his Ship, one of Peter Verhagens company, which with another of the same Fleet, had beene driuen backe out of the South sea. Hee reported that he had spent aboue five moneths in the Strait, and lost by diseases, and otherwise, so many of his men, that of an hundred and ten, there were left but eight and thirtie, whence hee was not able to indure the stormes which assaulted him in the South sea, but was forced hither, when the rest of the Fleet better manned held on their course. Thus hard newes, stormes, and mutinies finished this moneth and yeare.

Summer Bay
Port Famine.
Pantagoms.
Terra Fuego
is the Land on the South of the Straights,
since found
to bee but Islands.
Philip-Citie.
Cape Froward.

* Sir Jaques
Mahu (or as Adams calls him, Mahay) went out Generall of this Fleet: who died in the Isle of Braua, and Simon de Coor-
des succeeded.
It is here called Peter Ver-
hagens company, because he was then chief of the Indian company which let them forth.

* 1600.
Maurice Bay.
Ice all the yeere long in the Straights.
The same report hath Seb.
de Weert.
Meniste Bay.
Goose Bay.
Loish Bay.
Cape Desire.

On the second of Ianuarie * they made search of Maurice Bay, which they obserued to extend farre to the East, and to receiue store of Riuers flowing into it, at the mouthes whereof they found great store of Ice in their iudgement neuer melted. For sounding ten fathomes they could not reach the bottome thereof, this their Mid-summer season notwithstanding. They coniectured the Land also to be broken Islands, which the height of the mountaines made to seeme continued and firme. They indured continuall raines, nor could get ought there but Muskles, which on the eighth they going to gather, the lesser Boat out-sailing her fellowes, two of her men were slaine and wounded by the Sauages. Their weapons were heauie Clubbes, with Ropes tied to them, and long Darts of Wood. At the landing of the greater Boat they all fled. Hauing indured diuers stormes, which indangered them on the Rocks in Meniste Bay, and some encounter of the Sauages which had left three Canoas vnder a high hill, and with stones defended them from the Hollanders, they departed on the seuenteenth day, and by a storme were driuen into Goose Bay, three miles distant, so called of the store of that Fowle their found fit for swimming and long diuing, but vn able to flie. Here the Vice-Admirall for diuers misdemeanours, was by a Councell of Warre adiudged to be set on land, which was accordingly executed, where Famine, or wilde beasts, or wilder men must needs make an end of his mutinous vnquiet life. On the first of Februarie they entred a new Bay, which they called Popish Bay, where the Admirall was like to haue perished on a sunken Rocke. Heere they had store of stormes, thunders, lightnings; and Muskles in a broad Riuer which runnes into it. On the seuen and twentieth they had view of a huge mountain of Ice in Goose Bay. On the last of February they passed Cape Desire into the South sea, with thanks to the Almighty for that happy successe. This sea was not so peaceable, but that it entertained them with diuers daies stormes, in which they lost their Boat. Their

- gall tongue, with Captaine Melis, and one John Breme, were suddenly and treacherously slaine; Captaine Peter Esias escaped by flight to the Boats, which were furiously assailed by the Portugalls, and the Generalls brother slaine, the rest hardly returning aboard. The Generall calling a Councell of warre, they agreed to assault the Castle, which having attempted with losse, they burned all their Sugar houles, and with force provided themselves with fresh water. On the seuenteenth they departed, but the South wind hindred them. On the five and twentieth they reached Cape Consaluo, where the wind usually in the night bloweth from Land; in the day from Sea. Heere they went on shore and found two Dutch Ships, and learned that Peter Ver- hagens had stayed a moneth in this place, and buried eight and thirtie of his companie, many other being sicke. He entred the Riuer of Congo, and was forced to retire hither, and a fortnight before was departed for Anobon. He learned also that Captaine Cleerhagen, with a great part of his company were slaine in the Princes Island, the rest hardly escaping to and in their Ships.
 On the fixe and twentieth, they set sayle from the Cape towards Brasil.
1599. On the first day of Ianuarie, 1599. they passed the Isle Anobon, and found two degrees Southerly. On the eight and twentieth they had the Sunne in their Zenith. On the thurd of Februarie, they espied by night certaine low ground, on which the Concord had like to haue made a fatall discord. On the fift, they reached the Land of Brasil, at Cape Saint Thomas in two and twentie. On the sixt, they passed the Faire Cape, and in the Euening Cape Frio.
 On the ninth, they came to Rio Ianero. After some losse of time, and their company by Portu- gal-wiles they departed to Saint Sebastian, where they had Fresh-water, Wood, and safe Harbour, but found no fruits. On the fourteenth of March, a cruell Storme assailed them, and seuered the Vice-Admirall and the Hope, which yet on the seuateenth were restored againe to the Fleet. The Concord also leaked so much, that they agreed to emptie the goods, and forsooke her.
 But the Scorbute increasing, and the Winter approaching, made them resolute to seeke the Isle of Saint Helena, which they did, but missed it, and therefore thought to releue themselves in the Ascension, or some other Island. In 20th. they came to the Island, but barren and in-hospitall, saue that with Clubbes they knocked downe many Fowles called Malle Mowen. But the Rockes without, and barrenesse within forced their departure, and when on the first of Iune, they had thought to haue encountred the Isle Ascension, they found it the Continent of Brasil:
 which they imagined to haue beene fourescore miles distant. The Portugalls prohibiting their landing, they came at last to the Isle of Saint Clara, and there erected Tents for their sicke people, some of which presently died. Heere they found little but Herbes, and two Trees of sower Plumbes, which cured the sicke in fifteene dayes. The Island is a <sup>1</sup> Mile in Compasse, and as farre from the Continent. Here they burned the Concord, hauing before taken out what they pleased: they also exposed two Malefactors to their forlorne fortunes. This Isle is in one and twen-tie degrees, fifteene minutes Southwards from the Line. On the sixteenth of Iuly they determined to seeke Port Desire, which after many tempests they came to, on the twentieth of September in fortie seuen degrees fortie minutes. In an Island three miles from thence Southwards, they furnished themselves with store of Penguins & fishes. Of those Fowles they took fifty thousand, being as bigge as Geese, with Egges innumerable, which prooued very refreshing to the diseased.
 Here they careened their Ships and set vp a Smiths Forge. They went vp the Riuer the fift of October, and going on Land, found Beasts like Stagges and Buffals, and multitudes of Ostreches; in one Nest they tooke nineteene Egges, which the Damme had forsaken. The Captaine of the Hope dying of the Scorbute, the Captaine of the Concord was chosen his successour, and the Ship also was termed the Concord.
- On the twentieth day, the Generall went on Land, to descric the Country, giuing strait charge to looke well to the Boats, and not to stirre from them, which they transgressing, were out of ambushes set on by thirtie Sauages, and three slaine, besides the fourth wounded. These Sauages were of admirable stature, painted vnto terrour, their Bowes short, their Arrowes headed with Stone. On the nine and twentieth they prepared to depart. On the fourth of Nouember, they were neere Cape Virgines; the Land is low and plaine, by the whitenesse resembling England.
 Often they hence attempted to enter the Straights, but often entred straights with that attempt, repelled by tempestuous Windes, Raine, Hailes, Snowes, Sicknesse and Contention adding their subsidarie assistance. These sensible crosses were accompanied with losses of Anchors, Cables, and (that which is most irrecoverable) time, little lesse then fifteene moneths being spent before they could fasten any good entrance into the Straights; although they intly seemed engulphed in the straights all this time, and all their way hither, hauing paid the liues of almost a hundred of their company for Sea-custome. From the said Cape the Land trends South-Westward: the Straights mouth is hence fourteene miles, and halfe a mile in breadth. On the South side thereof they espied a man, with a kind of cloke, supposed therefore but fallily, to be a Christian, his face painted, and stature ordinarie, whom in vaine they inuited to their company. They saw many others, and on the five & twentieth they espied many men, in two Islands neere the Cape, which they called Nassau, who forbad the Hollanders landing, with their Darts and other weapons, but were chased to an obscure Caue, where they were all slaine, before the Dutch

Dutch could winne entrance. There they found the amazed and affrighted mothers, lying prostrate on their Infants to protect them from that fatall Thunder, from whom they tooke foure Boyes and two Girles, and with them returned aboard. Of one of these hauing learned to speake Dutch, they receiued this intelligence; the Lands name was Castemme, this People or Tribe called Enoo. The name of the lesser Island Talcke, both stored with Penguins, whose Flesh yeelded them food, their Skinnies clothing. They dwelt in Caues vnder the Earth. In the Continent are many Ostriches whereon they feed: these they call Talcke, and another kind of wild beasts Cassoni. They dwell in seuerall Tribes or Families apart, whereof one is called Kemenetes dwelling in Karay, another Kennekas in Karamay, a third Karaike in Morine, all of stature like ours, except their broader and higher breasts, painted, the men tying their priue member with a string, the women hiding theirs with a Penguins skinne. The men weare long haire, the women are shauen. They goe naked, onely weare a cloke of Penguin skinnies to the waist. The like couering they make of other birds called Oripeggre; the Pengwins they call Con ppogre. These skinnies they compact together with no lesse industrie and Art then Skinners doe with vs. There is a fourth Family or Tribe, named Tirimenen, and the place of their habitation Coin, of giarly stature tenne or twelue foote high, which haue often warres with the other Lords or Tribes, whom they call Pengwine-eaters, whereby it seemes they vse other meat, haply Mans-flesh.

On the sixe and twentieth, they tooke three hundred Pengwines on the Isles bearing that name. Before they come at these Pengwine Isles twixt two straits are shoalds, and an Island called Pantagoms. On the eight and twentieth day they passed to the Continent, and saw Whales. They encountered a pleasant Riuer, but saw not the mouth of it; there were many Parrots and faire Trees, whereupon they called it Summer-bay. On the nine and twentieth, they set sayle for wood and water to Port Famine. Heere the Land trends so farre to the South, that Pantagoms, and Terra Fuego seeme as farre off to ioyne. Heere they found no foot prints of the late Philip-Citie, now liker a heape of stones. The Magellane strait is distant thence about foure Dutch miles. The hills on both sides are steep and high all the yeere-long covered with store of Snow. Here they cut downe wood to make them another Boat. The Barkes of the Trees in these parts bite like Pepper. But finding no good watering, and doubting also whether it were Philip-Citie, or Port Famine indeed, they departed, and after two miles found a good Riuer, whence they had easie prouision, on the first of December. The next day they passed to Cape Froward, which hauing doubled with great danger, by reason of vn safe anchorage and contrary wind, they anchored at eightene fadomes, foure miles from thence in a great Bay. Heere was good watering, and an Herb like Neeswort, profitable against the Scorbute. Some Sculdiers tasting of another Herb there growing, were well-nigh distracted for a time. A mile off they found a fit place to build their Boat, in which they spent twelue dayes. Here they had sight of Sebalt de Weert his Ship, one of Peter Verhagens company, which with another of the same Fleet, had beene driuen hacke out of the South sea. Hee reported that he had spent aboue five moneths in the Strait, and lost by diseases, and otherwise, so many of his men, that of an hundred and ten, there were left but eight and thirtie, whence hee was not able to indure the stormes which assaulted him in the South sea, but was forced hither, when the rest of the Fleet better manned held on their course. Thus hard newes, stormes, and mutinies finished this moneth and yeare.

On the second of Ianuarie they made search of Maurice Bay, which they obserued to extend farre to the East, and to receiue store of Riuers flowing into it, at the mouthes whereof they found great store of Ice in their iudgement neuer melted. For sounding ten fathomes they could not reach the bottome thereof, this their Mid-summer season notwithstanding. They coniectured the Land also to be broken Islands, which the height of the mountaines made to seeme continued and firme. They indured continuall raines, nor could get ought there but Muskles, which on the eighth they going to gather, the lesser Boat out-sailing her fellowes, two of her men were slaine and wounded by the Sauages. Their weapons were heauie Clubbes, with Ropes tied to them, and long Darts of Wood. At the landing of the greater Boat they all fled. Hauing indured diuers stormes, which indangered them on the Rocks in Meniste Bay, and some encounter of the Sauages which had left three Canoes vnder a high hill, and with stones defended them from the Hollanders, they departed on the seuenteenth day, and by a storme were driuen into Goose Bay, three miles distant, so called of the store of that Fowle their found fit for swimming and long diuing, but vnable to flie. Here the Vice-Admirall for diuers misdemeanours, was by a Councell of Warre adiudged to be set on land, which was accordingly executed, where Famine, or wilde beasts, or wilder men must needs make an end of his mutinous vnquiet life. On the first of Februarie they entred a new Bay, which they called Popish Bay, where the Admirall was like to haue perished on a sunken Rocke. Heere they had store of stormes, thunders, lightnings, and Muskles in a broad Riuer which runnes into it. On the seuen and twentieth they had view of a huge mountain of Ice in Goose Bay. On the last of February they passed Cape Desire into the South sea, with thanks to the Almighty for that happy successe. This sea was not so peaceable, but that it entertained them with diuers daies stormes, in which they lost their Boat. Their

Castemme.
Talcke.
Manners of the Inhabitants.

Giants: see the next storie an-nexed of *Seb-
de Weert*.

Summer Bay
Port Famine.
Pantagoms.
Terra Fuego
is the Land on the South of the Straights,
since found
to bee but Islands.
Philip Citie.
Cape Froward.

* Sir Iaques
Mahu (or as Adams calls him, Mahoy) went out Generall of this Fleet: who died in the Isle of Brava, and Simon de Coor-
des succeeded.
It is here called Peter Ver-
hagens company, because he was then chief of the Indian company which set them forth.

* 1600.
Maurice Bay.
Ice all the
yeere long in the Straights.
The same report hath *Seb-
de Weert*.
Meniste Bay.
Goose Bay.
Popish Bay.
Cape Desire.

La Mocha.

Cici drinke.

S. Maries an Island rich in Gold.

Val Paraiso.

Note the helpe which the Dutch had by English-mens notes.
W. Adams makes mention of this fight, who in the same ship came to Japan.

S. Iago.

Sheep plenty.

Warres betwixt the Spaniards & Chili.
Baldinia.
Imperial.

Fertility of Chili.

company was now an hundred fortie seuen. On the twelfth of March they lost sight of the Vice. admirall, whom hauing in vaine expected, they went to the Iland La Mocha, in thirtie eight degrees, in the midst whereof is an high mountaine, cleauing it selfe in the toppe to yeeld waters to the subiect valley. Here they bartered Hatchets and Kniues for Sheep, Hennes, Maiz, Battalas, and other fruits. They went to the towne which hath some fiftie houses of strawe, long, with one doore, into which they might not be admitted. They gaue them drinke called Cici, somewhat sowerish, made of Mays, which the toothlesse old women chew (supposing that the elder the Women are, the better shall their drinke be) and steepe it in water, referuing it for necessary vse, and for their drunken feasts, drinking in a misordered order at the sound which one makes with his mouth, according to their Bacchanall mysteries, measuring to each his proportioned measure with vnmeasurable disproportion. They haue many vviues which they buy of their Parents, so that the Father of many daughters is the richest man. Their life is loose, scarcely subiect to any law. If any kill another, the kinred of the slain reuenge it, vnlesse some intercessors preuaile to procure a yeerely Cici-festiuall in recompence. The Inhabitants of Chili obserue like customes. They are clothed aboue and belowe with garments made of the wooll of large Sheepe with long necks, which they vse also to burthens, of which kind they would sell none to the Dutch, but of another fat kind not much vnlike ours. This Island is about sixe miles from the Continent. From it eightene miles lieth another, called S. Maries, in thirty seuen degrees, and fiftene minutes of Southerly latitude. Here they had sight of a Spanish shippe, which they chased and tooke. This ship they said was the Kings, sent with Lard and Meale to Aranco and Conception, where they haue warre with the Indians. The Pilot certified them, that it was impossible for them to recouer S. Maries, from whence they had chased this shippe to thirtie five degrees, by reason of the Southerly winds. They told them of two shippes of warre waiting for intelligence of their comming in Arica. They hereupon presently determined for Val Paraiso, and so lost their Vice-admirall altogether: whom they supposed to haue lost that Isle of S. Maries, by the wrong placing thereof in Plancius his Mappe, in thirty eight degrees, whereas it is in thirty seuen degrees and fiftene minutes. They themselues had also beene deceiued, but for notes of Captaine Melis, the Englishman which they had and followed. They heard also of Simon de Cordes his arriuall there, who by a Spaniard dissembling amity, was invited to land, and so betrayed to the Indians butchery, with twenty three men, beeing mistaken for Spaniards, their heads set vpon poles, and in a glorious ostentation shewed to the Spaniards in Conception. The Spaniards made faire semblance of kindnesse, so to haue possessed themselues of their two shippes, of which they sent notice to Lima, but the Hollanders mistrusting departed they knew not whither. The Spaniards in Lyma had receiued intelligence a yeere before their comming of the Hollanders, and of the names of their chiefe men, and provided themselues accordingly.

In Val Paraiso or S. Iago they tooke two shippes, and slew many Indians, but the Spaniards were fled. This Val Paraiso is in three and thirtie degrees of the South latitude, and S. Iago is from it eightene miles within land, a Towne fertile of Wine much like Claret in tast and colour. There are plenty of Sheepe which they kill onely for their sewet, wherewith they lade whole shippes. The whole Countrey is fruitfull. Here they receiued letters from Derick Gerwitz, Captaine of the Flying Hart, one of Verhagens companie, who thinking to trade with the Spaniards there, hauing but nine sound men in his shippe, was suddenly assaulted, wounded, and imprisoned, where he wrote these miserable lines. His famine proceeded from the missing of S. Maries Island, vpon that wrong placing in the Mappe aforesaid, so that meere famine brought him to these Straits.

In S. Iago they had intercepted Letters, which related the occurrents of the warres of Chili, the Indians rebelling against the Spaniards, and forcing Baldinia, the foure and twentieth of Nouember, 1599. slaying and carrying away captiue the Inhabitants. Two hundred Spaniards sent from Lyma did againe there fortifie. The Indians likewise besieged the Citie Imperial, and had now almost famished the Spaniards. These Indians are good and expert souldiers, of which five thousand were in this expedition: three thousand of them Horsemen, skilfull at their Launces, and an hundred Shot, seuentie Costlets. All which furniture they had taken from the Spaniards in many victories. They so hate the Spaniards, that of whomsoever they kil, they plucke out his heart and bite it, and make drinking vessels of their skuls. They vse Orations to encourage them to the maintenance of their pristine libertie against the Spanish tyrannie. They haue one chiefe Captaine onely in time of Warre. The first choise of him in their first Spanish warre was in this sort: A heauy piece of timber was by all the Competitors carried on their shoulers, which while it wearied the most to beare five or sixe houres, one was found strong enough to endure it foure and twenty together, and thereby attained this Ducall honour. The Region of Chili, from S. Iago to Baldinia, is the most fertile in the world, and of most wholesome ayre, in somuch that few are there sicke; yea, a sword put vp into the scabbard all wet with the dewe, doth not therewith rust. Fruits, Mays, Hogges, Horses, Kine, Sheepe, Goats, are plentifull and wander in great herds, besides Gold-mines. In the sacke of Baldinia they burned Houses, Temples, ples, Monasteries, and striking off the heads of their Images, cried, Downe goe the gods of the Spaniards. They thrust Gold into their mouthes, and bid them satiate themselues vvith that for vvwhich they had raised such persecutions, and of vvwhich they made such vnfatiable prosecution.

- On the first of Aprill they entred the Bay La Guasco, and thence on the seuenth departed. La Guasco.
 On the eleuenth they came into a great nooke called Morre Gorch, tenne miles from vvwhich is Morre Gorch, & M. Morrene.
Morre Morrene, from vvwhich the shore is extended to Aricca, all vvwhich tract to S. Francis hill is vsually subiect to Southvvinds, and farre in the Sea the Winde variable. On the tvventieth, the aire vvas darke, that a man could not see aboue a stones cast. The cause vvas a cloud of dust Cloud of dust.
 10 like meale, vvwhich vvhlited their clothes in like manner. The Spanish Pilot told them it vvas vsfall in those parts, by them called Arenales. It lasted all day, and caused the Generall to loose his tvvo other comforts till tvvo dayes after. On the five and tvventieth, they sawe Lyma bea- Lyma.
 ring East from them. Here the Negroes confessed, that in one of the shippes vvwhich they had taken, the Captaine enuying the Hollanders such vvealth, vvhen he sawe hee could not escape, had throwne into the Sea three Boats loading of Gold. The Pilot being examined, confessed that there were two and fiftie Chests of Gold, whereof each had foure Aroben, and five hundred Pots, in each of which, was eight, tenne, or twelue pounds of Gold. He caused also euerie man to bring foorth whatsoever hee had and throw it into the Sea. This Gold came from Saint Maries Island, which three or foure Spaniards possessed imploying two thousand 20 Indians in the Mine.

On the nine and twentie, they espied two sayles, and gaue them chase in vaine, those Ships built for that Sea (where from Panama to Lyma they sayle most-what against the wind which is vsually constant) out stripping the Hollanders exceedingly. The twentieth of May, after that they had laboured in vaine to attaine the Isle of Coquos in five degrees of Notherly latitude, they I. Coquos.
 purposed to auoid the danger of the Spanish men of warre, whereof they had intelligence, to set sayle to the Ladiques, and thence to the Philippinas. Much raine they had in the way, not without this benefit to supply their want of water. The thirtieth of Iune, the Spanish Pilot was for ill demeanures, by publike sentence cast ouer-board. A prosperous wind happily succeeded.

- 30 On the fifteenth of September, they had sight of the Ladrones. On the sixteenth, the Indians came in their Canoas, with Fish, Coquos, Bonnanas, Rootes, Sugar-canes, to barter for old pieces of yron: sometimes they might number two hundred of these Canoas, with two, three, or five men in each, all crying, Hiero, Hiero, that is, Yron, Yron, with greedinesse ouerturning their Canoas against the shippes side, which they regarded not, beeing expert swimmers, and could easily recouer their Boats, goods, and selues. They were subtle deceiuers, couering a Basket of Coquo shiels, with a little Rice in the toppe, as if they had been full of Rice; and vpon fit opportunitie snatching a Sword out of the scabbard, and leaping into the Sea, where with deepe and long diuing, they secured themselues from shot. The Women are herein equall to the men. They will fetch a piece of yron from the bottome of the Sea. Their Boats are neatly compact, of fifteene 40 or twenty foot long, and 1  $\frac{1}{2}$ . broad, wherewith they saile against the wind, and if they must turne, they neuer alter their sayle, but with the Poop cut the waues. Their Women couer their priuitie with a leafe, otherwise naked both men and women, like the pictures of Adam and Eue. They are libidinous, and haue thereof many pockie testimonies. This Island was called Guana, neither saw they any other. It was twentie miles large. These fruits were very comfortable to their sicke men of the Scorbute.

- On the seuenteenth, they set sayle for the Philippinas. On the twentieth, they had Ice, being then in three degrees. Sixe weekes together they dranke only raine water. On the fourteenth of October, they espied land, and thought, but falsly, that it had beene the Cape of the Holy Ghost. On the sixteenth day, there came a Balsy or Canon, and in the same a Spaniard, which Philippine.
 50 fearing to come aboard, they displayed a Spanish flagge, and attired one like a Friar to allure him. Which taking effect, the Generall saluted him, and told him they were Frenchmen, with the Kings commission bound for Manilla, but wanting necessaries, and not knowing where they now were, hauing lost their Pilot. The Spaniard answered, this place was called Bay la Bay, bay a bay.
 tenen or eight miles to the North, from the straight of Manilla. The Land was fertile, and hee commanded the Indians to bring Rice, Hogges, and Hennes: which was presently effected, and sold for readie money. His name was Henry Nunes. The next day Francisco Rodrigo, the Gouernour came to the Ship and did likewise. The Indians go most naked, their skinnies drawne out with indelible lines and figures. They pay for their heads to the Spaniard, tenne single Ryalls for euery one aboute twentie yeeres old. There are few Spaniards, and but one Priest which is 60 of great esteeme: and had they Priests enough, all the neighbour Nations would bee subiect to the Spaniard. Being furnished with necessarie prouision, and now also discouered, they departed for the Straight of Manilla, and were in no small danger of a Rocke the same night. This whole Tract is wast, barren, and full of Rockes. A storme of wind had almost robbed them the next day of their Masts and Sayles, which with such sudden violence assailed them from the South-East, that in their stormie and tedious voyage, they had not encountered a more terrible. On the three and twentieth, some went on Land, and eat Palmis, and drank water, after which followed the bloudie Fluxe, whether of this cause, or the landing after so long a being at Sea, vncertaine. The foure and twentieth, they entred the straight and sayled by the Island in the midst, and in the Euening passed by the Isle Capul, seuen miles within the straight, neere which they found many Whirle-Pooles, which at first seemed Shoalds but they could find no bottome. The people were all fled. Heere they lost a Londoner, *John * Caldwey*, an excellent Musician surprized, as was suspected, by some insidiarie Indians; whereupon they burned their Villages. Manilla is eightie miles from Capul, which now they left to attaine the other, but in a calme winde, with violent working of the waues, were much tossed without much danger, by reason of the depth. They wanted a Pilot, and their Maps were vncertaine.
Straight of Manilla.

Mexican trade yeerely at Manilla.

The seuenth of Nouember, they tooke a China lunke, laden with prouision for Manilla. The owner was of Canton, the Master and Mariners of Chincheo. This Master was expert in the Portugall tongue, and their Indian affaires, which happened verie luckily to the Hollanders ignorant of their course. These told them that in Manilla were two great Shippes, which from new Spaine yeerely sayle thither; that there was also a Dutch Shippe bought at Malana: These ride before Manilla, and there are two Castles or Forts to secure them; the Citie also walled about, and without it aboue fiftene thousand Chinois Inhabitants, occupied in marchandize and handy-crafts: And that foure hundred China Shippes come thither yeerely from Chincheo, with Silke and other precious marchandise, betwixt December and Easter. They added that two were shortly expected from Iapon with Iron, other mettalls and victualls. On the fiftenth, they tooke two Barkes laden with Hennes and Hogges, which were to bee paid for tribute to the Spaniards, for which they gaue them some linnen bolts in recompence. They passed by the Isle Bankingle, and another called Mindore, right against which is the Isle Lon-bou, two miles distant, and betwixt them both, is another lesser Island, neere which is safe passage for Ships.

Bankingle.
Mindore.
Lon-bou.

Lusson.

They agreed vpon consultation to stay in expectation of the Iaponian Ships, at an Anchor (for the East wind hath the Monarchy of that season in those parts) in fiftene degrees of North Latitude. The Isle Lusson is bigger then England and Scotland, to which many Islands adioyne. The riches arise more out of trafficke, then fertilitie. On the third of December they tooke one of the Iapon Ships of fiftie tunnes, which had spent fise and twentie dayes in the voyage. The forme was strange, the forepart like a Chimney, the sayles of Reed, or Matt twisted, the Anchors of Wood, the Cables of Straw. The Iapanders make themselves bald, except a tuft left in the hinder part of the head. The Iesuites haue the managing of the Portugall trafficke in Iapon, hauing made way thereto by their preaching, and are in reputation with their conuerts, as Demi-gods: neither admit they any other order of Religion to helpe them. The Generall obtained at easie rate one of these wooden Anchors for his vse, and some quantitie of prouision. On the ninth, they tooke a Barke laden with Coquo Wine, like Aqua-vite, the people all fled; and another with Rice and Hennes.

Iaponian ships and men.

There are some Franciscans
also.

Fight with Spaniards
and Indians.

Dutch victory.

On the fourteenth, the Ships came from Manilla, and there passed betwixt them a Sea-fight. The Spanish Admirall came so neere, and was stored with men, that they entred the Dutch Admirall, and thought themselves Masters thereof, fixe or seuen still laying at one Hollander: the Vice-Admirall also set vpon the smaller Ship. All day the two Admiralls were fast together, and the Dutch ouer-wearied with multitudes, were now vpon point to yeeld, when the Admirall rated their cowardise, and threatned to blow them vp with Gun-powder presently. This feare expelled the other, and the dread of fire, added reall fire to their courages, insomuch that they renewed the fight, and cleared the Ship of her new Masters, which had no lesse labour to cleare their owne Shippe from the Dutch, which was no sooner done, but the Sea challenged her for his owne, and deuoured her in one fatall morsell, into his vnlatiable paunch. The people swamme about, crying, Misericordia, Misericordia, which a little before had cried in another dialect, Maina peros, Maina peros. Of these miserable wretches were two hundred, besides such as were before drowned or slaine. But the fire was almost as dangerous to the Dutch, as the water to the Spanish; by often shooting, the Timbers being ouer-heat, threatned by light flames to make the Dutch accompanie the Spaniards into Neptunes entrailes. But feare awaked diligence, and diligence cast this feare also into a dead sleep, the blessed Trinitie in almost an vnitie of time, diuerting a trinitie of deaths, by yeelding, sinking, fring. But in this diuine mercie, they forgate not their inhumane feritie to the swimming remainders of the enemy, entertaining them with Pikes, Shot, yea (especially a Priest in his habite) with derision. In the Shippe were fise Spaniards found dead with siluer Boxes about them, containing little consecrated Schedules, testimonies of great and bootlesse superstition, in which they exceed the European Papists in the midst of Spaine and Rome. Five
Hollanders

Hollanders were slaine and twentie six wounded in the fight, the whole company in the Ship being but five and thirtie. The Pinnasse had but five and twentie, and could not withstand the violence of five hundred armed men in the enemies Vice-Admirall, some Spaniards, some Indians, which after long fight tooke her. These two were the Mexican Shippes, which yeerely trade in the Philippinas for Silke, Gold, and Muske, with other commodities of China.

Dutch Pinnasse taken.

Hence they departed for Borneo, to repaire the torne Ship, distant from Manilla one hundred and eightie miles, this being in five degrees, Manilla in fourteene degrees forty five minutes, (Miles you must in all this storie vnderstand in the Dutch account.) They sayled by Bolutan, a great Island, one hundred and eightie miles long. On the fixe and twentieth they arriued at Borneo in a great Bay, containing some three miles in compasse, the water still, the ground good for ancorage, the neighbour Riuer well stored with Fish, which the Fisher-men there dwelling changed plentifully for linnen clothes. The Generall sent to the King for license to trade. The people were very desirous of China peeces of linnen, which they had taken before Manilla, but little respected that which they brought out of Holland. On the eight and twentieth, the Pilot which hee had sent to the King returned, and a Prow of the Kings with him, in which were two brasse Peeces, and the Kings Banner. The Gunner was of Patana, in much repute with the King. He misdoubted that they were Spaniards, vntill his officers had searched, and found the contrary. Here they traded for Pepper, with the Patanees, which seeme to bee of Chinese originall and obserue their customes, inhabiting in a Region of their owne. Meane while they had learned that the Borneans intended treason toward them, and to begin the new year, Ianuarie first, 1601. saw an hundred Prowes assembled, and vnder colour of presents from the King, they sought to enter the Ship, till the Dutch vigilance and threats made them giue ouer their designe, with colourable excuses. A Patane was the author of this treacherie, which had slaine the Portugalls not long before, and taken their shippe, with like wile in vnlike securitie.

Bolutan.

Borneo.

1601.

This Island Borneo, is one of the greatest in East India. The Citie of the same name, is situate in a mirie soyle, and in their Prow they may passe from one house to another. It containeth three thousand houses, besides many further vp-land. It is very populous, the Inhabitants tall, subtle; goe armed all of them be they poore Husband-men, or Fisher-men. Their armes are Bowes, lauelins pointed with Iron, Forkes, Quiuers with venomd Darts, which poyson to death where they draw blood. They are all Mahumetans, and will die sooner then taste of lard, neither keepe they any swine. They haue many wiues, those wittie, warie in trading, bold and couragious: one of them rudelier handled by a Hollander, with a lauelin had dispatched him, if her force had not beene intercepted. They are clothed with linnen, from the wast downwards: the baser sort goe all naked: they weare on their heads a cotten Turbant. The King a child, was vnder a Protector. The Nobles are proud, graue, and much obserued. In the midst of their Prowes stood a table with siluer vessels, for their Bettele and Arecea, which they vsually are chewing. Seeing little hope of trade, they determined to set sayle for Bantam. The third of Ianuarie, in the darke night foure Borneans came to the Ship, with purpose to cut the Cable, so to bring the Ship on ground: neither had they any more anchors but one left them on boord, and that one by which they roade. But being perceiued and shot at, they left their Prow, which the Hollanders tooke with them, hauing lost their Boat at Manilla. The next morning they set saile, and espying a Iunke of Japan, learned of them that they were bound for Manilla, and forced for succour to Borneo, had spent foure moneths waiting for their voyage. The Captaine was Emanuel Powis a Portugall, then dwelling at Langnasacke in Japan, the Pilot a Chinese, the company Iapanders. These told them of a great Holland Ship by tempests shaken, to haue put in at Japan, the company by famine and sicknesse all but fourteene dead. They came first to Bongo in thirtie foure degrees, fortie minutes, and by the Kings direction remooued to Atonza, in 36  $\frac{1}{2}$ . They roade there in safe harbour, with foure anchors, and had freedome of their persons and trade, and to make a new Ship to goe whether they would. They coniectured hereby that it was Verbagens his Admirall Ship of two hundred and fiftie Tunnes: being as this Captaine told them, well furnished with Ordnance, Ryalls of eight, and commodities. The Generall desired this Captaine at his returne, to remember his kindest greeting to his Countrey-men, and after other kindnesse departed, hauing giuen him a Passe at his request, in the name of Grane Maurice. On the thirteenth they passed the line the third time. They sayled at this time in much feare and danger for want of a Pilot, and good Cards. On the sixteenth they tooke a Iunke of Ior, and furnished themselues with a skilfull Pilot out of hers, without whom he had small likelihood in those dangerous Seas to haue escaped shipwracke. The Islands were many, Banta, Crimati (which yeelds Diamonds, which they sell at Malacca) and others, besides sholds. They had now but one Anchor left, and the Cable thereof worne and weake. On the twentieth eight they came to Iortan, and heard of Holland Ships at Bantam. Heere they bought Mace and prouision. Iortan hath a thousand houses all of Timber. The King was absent at Passarnan, five yeres before he had besieged Balamboa, & destroyed the King with all his kindred.

Borneo Cape.

William Adams an Englishman, went chiefe Pilot in this Ship, and liued aboue twentie yeres in Japan. Of him you may read more hereafter. He lately died, as I heare, at Fizanda a Iaponian Island.

Crimati.

Iortan.

Passarnan. Balamboa.

He

Sorba.

He is also called King of Sorhay, a Citie not far distant, all which foure Cities are Mahumetan, and very rigid in that swinish superstition. The Pagodes and Idols argue permission of Eatinke, & ancienter Indian Rites. The chiefe Priest resides in a place without the Citie of Iersan, a man of an hundred and twentie yeres, which hath many wiues to keepe him warme, & with their milke to nourish him, eating no other meat. Departing hence, they saw a great Portugall Ship of fixe hundred Tunnes set fast on the shoalds, which was going to Amboyna, to fortifie there against the Inhabitants, and to prohibite all other Nations trade. The first of Februarie, they passed the straight betwixt Belambha and Bala. And leaving Lava North East from them, on the eleventh day they found themselves in thirteene degrees, & directed their course to Cape Bona Esperanza. On the eighteenth, the Sunne was right over them at noone, in the eleventh degree, twentie minutes, and a calme continued tenne dayes. The nineteenth of March, the height was twenty foure degrees, fortie five minutes, and on the foure and twentieth, twentie eight degrees, tenne minutes. On the first of April, thirtie degrees, fiftie minutes. On the nineteenth, the calmes and grosse windes caused a set allowance of water to be proportioned. On the twentieth fourth at night they saw a light like fire about foure miles to the North-West, whereby they were by Gods grace preserved from hazard. Forthby their reckoning they held themselves two hundred miles distant from the Cape, whereas this fire gaue notice of land neere. The next day their height was thirtie foure degrees, and thirtie five minutes. The calmes gaue them license to mend their Sayles. At night they saw another fire, and the next morning land, bearing North Easterly. On the twentie seven they were in thirtie foure degrees and fortie minutes; within fixe or seven miles of the said land.

Amboyna.

May the second they were in thirtie five deg. & fifteen minutes, & the next morning betwixt East and North, had sight of a low land like the end of some Island about fixe miles off in eightie fathome, whereby they thought themselves neere the Cape. The Winde being at East they made Westward, and shaped their course for Saint Helena in fifteen degrees fiftie eight minutes, where on the fixe and twentieth they arrived and refreshed themselves with fresh water, store of fish, and some flesh, for the Goates and Fowles are wilde and hardly taken. They found no Oranges. On the thirtieth day they departed, and June the fourteenth, they passed the Line the fourth time. On the sixteene day they encountred sixe Dutch Ships, the Generall whereof was James Heemeskerk, bound for the East Indies. They had spent two monethes on the way, and lost their Vice-Admirall and Pinnace, having fought with thirteene Spanish Ships neere the Salt Islands. The Pinnace was taken, the other (they hoped) escaped. Iuly the eight, they were in twentie seven degrees, and had store of Weedes in the Sea called Saragossa. On the thirteenth were in thirtie two degrees, thirtie minutes, and then had fifteen dayes calme, and the Sea all full of Weed. On the twentie two they were driven to allowance of their Worme-eaten Bread.

Note.

Saint Helena.

Weedie Sea.

Flores and Cornues.

August the first they were in fortie degrees, and left Flores and Cornues to the West some forty five miles. On the eleventh they saw a Ship, and making toward it in vaine, they shot off a Peece, and strooke their maine saile: whereupon the Ship stayed, and signified the same by a shot, which when these would answere, the Peece broke and cut off the Guns foote, killed his Boy and brake the maine Mast in three pieces, whereupon they were forced to make a new. The other Ship passed from them. Three Ships of Emden encountred them on the eighteenth, and gaue them bread and flesh for Pepper and Rice: and told them they were not yet attayned so neere England as their Master supposed, which had promised the Lysart the day before. On the nineteenth they had sight of the Sorlings. On the twentie five they had like to runne on ground by the Brill, and the next day anchored at Amsterdam.

Of SEBALD DE WERT his Voyage to the South Sea, and miserie in the Straights nine Moneths, wherein WILLIAM * ADAMS Englishman was chiefe Pilot.

* Of W. Addams his coming to Iapon followeth after in the next Book.

BEcause mention is made of Verhagens Fleete, which passed the Straights a little before Noort I have thought good to adde somewhat touching that Voyage, Anno 1598. five Ships of Amsterdam The Hope Admirall of two hundred and fiftie Tunnes with one hundred & thirtie persons. The Charitie Vice-Admirall of one hundred and sixtie Tunne, with an hundred and ten men. The Faith, of one hundred and sixtie Tun, with one hundred and nine men. The Fidelitie, of one hundred Tun with fourescore and sixe men. The Good Newes, of threescore and fifteene Tun with fiftie six men furnished with all necessarie prouision, (Sir Iaques Mahu being Generall, Simon de Cordes Vice-Admirall, Benninghen, Bockholt and Sebalt de Wert, the three Captains of the three other Ships set saile Iune the seven and twentieth. And after much a-do & little helpe at the Islands of Cape Vord where they lost their Generall, to whom Cordes succeeded and receiued Oath a-new of his Companie (as did each other Captaine of his owne Ship, being remoued in successiue order) they were forced by their owne wants and the Portugall wiles, the Scorbute or Scuruie also infecting and infecting euery Ship, to depart with intent to refresh their

- the ir men and make better prouision of water and other necessaries at the Isle Anno Bueno, or Anobon. But espying land vnexpected a hundred and twentie miles or more sooner then their reckoning about three degrees of South Latitude, they determined to goe to Cape Lopo Consalues. The people of Guinnee as they passed along the Coast yeelded a pedling Trade. The sicke men were set on shore the tenth of November. On the three twentieth a French Sayler came aboard, which promised to doe them all fauour with the Negro King. To him was sent Captaine Weert, who found him on a Throne scarcely one foot high with a Lambes skinne vnder his feet, his Garment of violet coloured cloth with gilded lace, attyred like a Rower, without shirt, shooes, or stockings, hauing a particoloured cloth on his head and many glasse Beades about his necke; attended with his Courtiers adorned with Cockes Feathers. The Palace was not comparable to a Stable. His prouision was brought him by women, a few roasted Plantans, and smoke dried Fish in Wooden Vessels, with Wine of Palme in such sparing measure, that Masieffa and the renowned Examples of Temperance might hane bene this Negro's Disciples. Once the Dutch Captaine was faine (vnder colour of courtesie to shew the King his manner of Dyet) to call for some of his Holland prouision to satisfie his barking, and thus more prouoked entrailles. But in the Spanish Wine the Guinean forgot his Temperance and was carryed to his rest. Little refreshing was here to be had. A Bore and two Buffals they killed in the Woods: a little they bought, a few Birds they tooke, and (which worke was) as the Scorbuto forsooke the sicke, Feuers possessed the stronger. On the eight of December they departed, and on the sixteenth arriued at Anobon. Some prouision they got there by force, and that scurue exchange of the Scuruie and Feuer, and lost by sicknesse thirtie men, amongst which Thomas Spring an English yong man of great towardnesse. In the beginning of the yeare 1599. they departed for the Magellane Straits. In the tenth of March in fortie two degrees, the Sea was all red as if it had bene mixed with bloud, being full of red Wormes, which taken vp leaped like Fleas. On Aprill the sixt they entered the straights. At Pinguine Islands they stored themselues with thirteene or fourteene hundred. On the eighteenth they anchored in the Greene Bay in fiftie foure degrees, where they had fresh Water and large Muscles. Here they stayed till the three and twentieth of August in a perpetuall stormie Winter, and lost a hundred of their Companie. Alway the storme found them worke, and miserable was their toyle without any furtherance to their intended Voyage. Raine, Winde, Snow, Hayle, Hunger, losse of Anchors, spoyle of Ship and Tackling, Sicknesse, Death, Sauages; want of store, and store of wants, conspired a fulnesse of miseries. But specially colde increased their appetite; and this decreased their Prouision and made them seek out for supply. On the seuenth of May, they went to take Gudgeons towards the South ouer against the Greene Bay, and their descryed seuen Canoes of wilde men, of ten or eleuen foot as they coniectured in stature with red bodies and long haire, which amazed the Dutch, and terrified them with stones and cries, and after got into their Boates againe to assaile them, but seeing foure or five fall downe dead with Dutch Thunder, they fledde to Land and plucking vp bigge Trees, barricadoed themselues, and threw stones at the Hollanders, which their left them in their sudden erected Fort. But afterwards three of their Companie were slaine, who in seeking food for life, found death at the hand of naked Sauages, whose weapons were Saw-toothed Darts, which if they entred, must be cut out of the flesh. This Greene Bay they called the Bay of Cordes, for their long stay. In another Bay called the Horse Bay, they erected a new Guild or Fraternitie, which Societie bound themselues by Oath to certaine Articles, which was done with more solemnitie of Ceremonie then prosperous effect. They stiled it the Fraternitie of the freed Lion. The Generall added fixe choice men to himselfe in this Societie and caused their names to bee carued in a Table fastened on high Pillers, to be seene of all Passengers, which was defaced, neuertheless by the Sauages who also plucked out the CorpSES from the Graues and dismembred them, and carried one away. On the third of September, they passed out of the straight and continued till the seuenth, when Captaine Weert was forced by a storme to stay, and the Faith and Fidelitie were left behind in much Miserie, Tempest, Hunger Leaks, &c. the death of their Master also attending the losse of their Company, & thus in the end of the Moneth entred the straights againe. Straights againe, indeed, for in two Moneths they had not one faire day to dry their Sayles. The Faith lost the foureteenth of October two Anchors. Their troubles left Name of Perillous Bay, to one place of their miserie, and to another, Vnfortunate, which yet followed them to euerie place not without Diuine assistance and deliuerance. The Deuill added also Mutinie in this miserable Companie, and Theeuerie. They tooke a Sauage woman with two children one halfe yeare old, yet able to goe readily and hauing all the teeth. Their lothsome feeding with the bloud running out of their mouthes, I loath to rehearse. Here they met with Generall Noort, his men lustie, but not able to spare them any reliefe. After a world of straights in the Straights too long to recite, they depart thence the two & twentieth of January 1600. & arriued in the Maes, the fourteenth of Iuly, without the straights homeward in fiftie degrees and fortie minutes, they saw three Ilands threescore miles from land stored with Penguins, called * Sebaldine of the Indies.

This land was in Congo.

Thomas Spring Englishman in this Voyage.

Giants.

* Sebaldine 3.
Ilands not mentioned in Maps.

CHAP. VI.

The Voyage of GEORGE SPILBERGEN, General of a Dutch Fleet of sixe Shippes, which passed by the Magellane Straits, and South Sea, unto the East Indies, and thence (having encompassed the whole Circumference of the Earth) home: gathered out of the Latine Iournall, beeing the fift Circum-Navigation.

Brave and Fogo.

Abrolhos dangerous sands.

IN the eight of August, 1614. they set forth from the Tessell. After much tempestuous weather, on the third of October they attained the height of Madera. On the tenth they lost sight of the Canaries. On the twentieth third, they had sight of the Islands Brave and Fogo. From the thirtieth of October, to the seuenteenth of Nouember, was a continuall calme, with many showres. And they were forced to stint euery man his Water. December the ninth, they gaue thanks to the Almighty, because they had passed the dangerous sands of Abrolhos. On the thirteenth, we saw Brasil, and by reason of sholds the Great Sunne shot off, to giue warning to the rest not to come very neere the shore. On the twentieth, they came to the Islands Grandes, where they anchored, and went on shore. They tooke much fish, and amongst them small Cro- 20 codiles, of the bignesse of a man. On the thirtieth, whilest they stayed to refresh their sicke men on shore, hearing the Huntsman (one of their ships) to discharge so often, they sent to see, and found that five Barks of Portugals and Indians had set vpon three boats, and slaine the men; whereupon they assailed them, but others came in to their succour, and frustrated the attempt.

Anno 1615. Ianuary the first, a conspiracie of certaine mutinous persons was found out, for which two were executed, beeing hanged vp at yard arme, shotte through with sixe Muskets, and buried on shore, the Preacher hauing all the night before laboured to fit them for a more happy life: others were put in irons, and distributed to diuerse shippes. Before their departure, they called a Councell, and ordained, that if any ship lost the rest, they should set vp a marke in Cordes 30 Hauen, or some other vsuall landing place, and how long they should stay for each other, and after should hasten to La Mocha. They agreed to remooue thence for want of meet prouision for their sicke, to the Isle of S. Vincent. There the Portugals delayed, and dallied with them trifling away time. On the twenty sixth, they tooke a Barke with eightene Portugals, whom they denied to exchange for fewer Hollanders, although they offered also many fayre Manuscripts, Pictures, Plate, and other things taken in the prize, pertaining to the Iesuites. They found also that intelligence of them had been giuen by some traitors of their owne Country-men out of Holland. And thus in the beginning of February they departed, freeing foure of their Captiue Portugals, detaining the rest, for one of which also, another Portugall had offered himselfe, 40 with diuers petty presents, pretending himselfe a Batchelour, and the other his kinsman to haue wife and children; but was not accepted. They burned the Prize, and some buildings pertaining to the Portugals, and had well furnished themselues with Oranges and Pome-citrons.

Magellane Strait.

Sholds in the Straits.

\ A Giant.*

May.

March the seuenth, a cruell storme encountred them, in 52. degrees, and sixe minutes, which continued diuerse dayes, and separated them. And on the one and twentieth, a worse storme happened amongst some mutinous persons, and some of them (to still that tempest) were cast into the Sea, by the better part getting the better. It was the eight and twentieth before they entered the strait, whence the winde and tide forced vs out. Some by contrariety of windes, desired to winter in Port Desire, others to hold their course to the Cape of Good Hope.

Aprill the second, they reentred and anchored, because of sholds, one of which they sounded next day a quarter of a league ouer, and found but siue Cubits water. They saw here a man of Gi- 50 antly stature, climbing the hils to take view of them. This was in the land of Fogo, or Fire, which is the South of the strait. On the seuenth, they went on shore, found no men, but two Ostriges, and a great Riuer of fresh water, with store of shrubs with sweet blacke berries. On the South-side they found pleasant woods full of Parrots, in fiftie foure degrees, the mountaines full of snow. They called one place Pepper-hauen, of the barke of a tree there, biting like Pepper. On the sixteenth, they conferred with the Sauages, and gaue them Sacke, and certaine Kniues, for Pearles ioyned together in fashion of hornes. But some of the company going on May day on shore, to take certaine goodly Birds, were surprized by some of the Sauages, and two slaine. On the sixt, they passed into the South sea, not without terror both from the depth in the way the day before, scorning the law of anchorage, and after that the dangerous sholds and Islands, be- 60 twixt the Northern and Southern iawes of the not straight Mouth of the Straits, opening into the wide Sea. They were welcomed into this Peaceable Sea, with a terrible storme, which they feared would haue split them on the Sorlings (so for likenesse to ours they called the Islands in that sea a little without the straits.) These straits are dangerous for high Islands, sholds, and want of of ancorage. Also tedious stormes attended their ingresse and egress. On the one and twentieth, they had sight of Chili and La Mocha. This Island is low and broad to the North, full of rockes to the South. On the twentieth sixth they sent out boats to traffique with the people; the Gouvernour and his sonne dined with the Admirall, and seemed glad to see such munition against the Spaniards, as likewise did all the Chilefians at sight of their training and mustering their Souldiers. They exchanged Hatchets, Corall, and the like, for great plenty of Sheep, of which they had two for one Hatchet, with great curtesie. But they brought all to the Boat, nor would suffer any to goe to their Houses, iealous, it seemes, of their wiues. One of these sheep was of legs, and necke very long, hare-mouthed, and bunch-backed, which they vse for carriage and culture as asses. They had many Hennes and other Fowles. On the twenty seuenth we set sayle, and 10 twentieth eighth came neere the shore, hard by the Island of S. Mary, broken and rockie. On the twentieth ninth, we came to harbour therein. A Spaniard came aboard them, hauing a pledge left for him. But inuiting them to a dinner on shore, one of the boats espied a conuoy of Souldiers, tending to that place where they should dine: wherupon they returned aboard, with the Spaniard prisoner. The next morning they went on shore with three Ensignes. The Spaniards set their Church on fire, and fled. In the skirmish two Hollanders were wounded, and foure Spaniards slaine. Their houses built of Reed, yeelded a goodly flame. They found store of Hennes, tooke

 20 five hundred sheepe, with other spoile. Here they vnderstood of three Ships which had departed thence in Aprill to seeke these Dutch Ships, furnished with a thousand Spaniards, the Admirall hauing fortie Brasse Pieces, the rest proportionable. Hereupon the Dutch determined now to seeke them, in the Ile of Conception, and after that in Valparisa, and then on the shore of Arica. The Spaniard also reported of the like preparation in Lima, hauing Dutch Gunners. They enacted certaine orders of Militarie discipline, how each Ship, and each person should carry himselfe in the fight, if they encountred the enemy, and to die rather then yeeld.

June the first, they set sayle, and passed not farre from Anroca, a Towne with five hundred Spaniards in Garrison, continually assaulted by the Chilefians. On the third, they approached the Ile Quiriquenam, neere the Continent, and behind it came vp to the Towne of Conception, wherein besides many Indians, were two hundred Spaniards. On the twelfth, they entred the safe rode of Valparisa. There was a Spanish ship, on which the Mariners set fire, and fled. On the 30 thirteenth, they had at none thirty two degrees, fiftene minutes, and in the afternoone came to the faire and secure Harbour of Quintero. They went on shore, and sawe many wilde Horses which fled. Here they watered, and tooke many fish, and for wood and other things found the place very commodious. Euery where Fame had beene their ouer-hasty Harbenger, which caused Spanish preparation for an vnwelcome intertainment, so that no matter of weight was effected.

July the second, they came to Aracca, in twelue degrees, and fortie minutes. Whether the silver is brought from Potosi, and carried thence to Panama. But finding no ships there, they departed. On the tenth, they had a calme and raine, not without wonder, because the Prisoner had reported a perpetual serenity or fairenesse of weather in those parts. On the sixteenth, they 40 tooke a small shippe, with some store of Treasure, most of which was embezelled by the Mariners. They tooke out the commodities, and sunke her. They had sight of eight saile, which the Spanish Master of the former Shippe said, was the Fleet-Royall, come forth to seeke the Hollanders, against the minde of the Counsell of Peru, which would rather haue had them stay. But Roderigode Mendoza, the Vice-Royes kinsman and Admirall, conceited of himselfe, sayd that two of his shippes would take all England, how much more those Hennes of Holland, after so long a iourney which had spent and wasted them: yea, he was sure they would yeeld to him at the very first. Whereupon the Vice-Roy bid him, Goe and bring them bound vnto him, and Mendoza sware he would neuer returne till they were taken or slaine. Thus he departed out of the road of Callion, on the eleuenth of July. The Iesu Maria Admirall, had twentieth foure brasse 50 Pieces, foure hundred and sixtie men of all sorts, and had cost the King, 158000. Ducats. The Vice-admirall S. Anne, had three hundred men, the Captaine Aluarez de Piger, which had taken an English ship in the South sea before; this ship had stood the King in 150000. Ducats, and was the fairest that euer was seene in the Indies. The Carmen had eight brasse Pieces, two hundred Souldiers and Mariners, besides the Commanders and their retinew. To it was the next not next but equall, the S. James. The Rosary had one hundred and fiftie men, and foure brasse Ordnance. The S. Francis had no Ordnance, but seuentie Muskietiers, and twentieth Mariners. Saint Andrew had eightie Muskietiers, and twentieth five Mariners. The eight was sent after the rest, vncertaine with what furniture.

July the seuenteenth they came neere each other in the Euening, and the Dutch Admirall sent 60 word to the Spanish, if he pleased to forbear fight that night. But Roderigo could not be so patient, but about ten of the clocke set vpon the great Sunne, in which the Admirall himselfe was, and exchanged mutuall Thunders on both sides. The Saint Francis being next raked thorow by the Sunne, by the Hunter (another Holland ship) was sent into a waterie Mansion and perpetual Night. She was presently assaulted by the Spanish Admirall, and had soone followed to triumph

June.

Conception Island in 36, degrees, 40. min.

July.

The Fleet Royall of Peru.

Sir Richard Hawkins, in which fight he was a Captaine but not General.

A Sea fight by night.

umph over the Francis, her new Conquest in the Channels bottome, had not her Admirall succoured her with a Boate full of men, and caused the Vice-Admirall to do the like. The Admirals Boat mistaken was by a Peeces from the Huntsman drowned, one man alone escaping. The next morning five ships sent word to the Admirall, that they would do their best to escape: but the Dutch Admirall and Vice-Admirall set upon the Spanish Admirall and Vice-Admirall, and entred a bloudie fight: the Eolus another Hollandship came in also. The two Spanish ships were fastened together and gave greater advantage. At last they forsooke the Vice-Admirall, and leapt into the Admirall, not finding therein above fiftie persons alive, as by their Confessions after appeared. Meane while they hung out a white flag of Peace, which was diuers times plucked in by the Gentlemen, chusing rather to dye then yeeld. The Dutch pressing them, the Vice-Admirals men returned againe and renewed the fight, and the Dutch Vice-Admirall was in great perill, the Spaniards leaping into her out of their Admirall, but repelled or slaine. And the Spanish Admirall not further enduring, fled, and by benefit of night escaped the pursuit of the Dutch Admirall, and out of the fire into the water be an escape. For such was the fame that she went to visit the Saint Francis, as also was said of another of them called the Saint Mary. The Vice-Admirall and Eolus bestirred them so with ferie Rhetorikes and yron Disputes, that the Spanish Vice-Admirall past hope of escaping, set up a flag of Truce. The Dutch Vice-Admirall sent two Boats to bring the Commander aboard. But he refused, saying, he would stay that night except the Vice-Admirall himselfe would fetch him: or send some Captaine to remaine in pledge, and rather desired death then disgrace. One of the Eolus men in this while had taken away their flag, and the Boats departed, ten or twelve staying aboard contrarie to command that they might bee first in the spoile. They did together with the Dutch what they could doe in the night to preserue the ship from sinking, but seeing their labour vaine, they lighted many lights and with horrible clamours for helpe, were of the relentlesse Sea swallowed vp in the Hollanders sight. The next morning they sent out foure Boates which found thirtie swimming on the bords, crying for mercie, which to some of the chiefe they shewed leauing the rest to the Seas crueltie, or preuenting it by humane inhumanitie, some of the Dutch against command, slaying some Spaniards. The Commander, or Vice-Admirall had perished before of his wounds. Some fortie Dutchmen were wounded and sixteene slaine in those three ships. In the rest eigh-teene wounded, and foure and twentie slaine. The same day they went for Caliou de Lima, but the Calme suffered them not. The twentieth they passed by the land and saw in the Hauen fourteene ships going to and fro neere the shore, but could not come neere for the shold: and therefore went to the Road of Caliou de Lima to seeke for the Spanish Admirall, whom afterwards they learned in Guarme and Peyta to haue beene sunke. From the shore the Spaniards shot off their great Ordnance, one of which carried a Bullet of thirtie sixe pound, and had almost sunke the Huntsman. They saw also on shore a great Armie in which the Vice-roy himselfe was present with eight Troupes of Horfe, and foure thousand foot: they agreed to goe backe out of the reach of their shot and cast anchor at the mouth of the Hauen, where they stayed to the five and twentieth with intent to take some of their ships, but in vaine, they being lighter of saile. On the sixe and twentieth they tooke a little Barke laden with Salt, and eightie Vessels of Sirrup, the men all fled. They ordered that if they met with the fleet of Panama, in regard they were in the enemies Countrey, where they could not repayre their losses, & were also bound to the Manillas, that they would not giue audacious on-sets, and should take heed of being separated, which had much endangered them in the last fight: and if any hostile ship should yeeld, the Masters & chiefe Officers should not forsake their owne ships, but cause the enemy to come in Boats aboard them, lest confusion, as lately through greedinesse of spoyle, should happen. The seuen and twentieth they set sayle: the eight and twentieth, they came to the Roade of Guarme, in ten degrees, beyond the Line, a pleasant place with a large Hauen. Neere vnto it is a Lake of standing water. They went on shore but found the people all fled who had left little pillage. Some Hennes, Oranges, Hogges and Meale they tooke.

The Admirall and Vice-Ad-mirall of the Spaniards
both sunke.

August.

It consisted of many Timbers fastened strangely together, as in the Picture of the Latine Booke is seene.

August the third they dismissed some of their Spanish Prisoners. They passed betwixt the Ile Loubes (so called of certaine fishes) and the continent. The eight they cast Anchor neere to Peyta. The ninth they set three hundred men on shore, which after a few skirmishes returned aboard, the Citie being too strongly defended. They tooke an Indian ship of strange sayles, with sixe lustie Indians which had beene two moneths a fishing, and had many delicate fishes dried which they distributed thorow the Fleet. The tenth the Eolus, Lucifer, and Huntsman battered the Towne with their Ordnance, and sent a greater number of men on shore, which found the Citie forsaken and the people with their goods fled to the Mountaines. They sent five of their Indians on shore to get fruits and to learne more certaintie of the Spanish Admirall, which brought word of her buriall in the waues, only sixe escaping. The Indians also brought the Letters of Captaine Gaspard Caldron to Paula the Commandators Wife of Peyta, who had fled to the Towne of Saint Michael twelve leagues from shore. Shee sent the Hollanders in commiseration of the Captiues, many Citrons and Oranges with other prouision. This Woman both for Beautie, Wisdome, and Vertue, is of singular reputation in all those parts.

Peyta

Peyta to the Sea-ward is strong and impregnable. There were in it two Churches, one Monastery and many goodly Buildings, an excellent Haven to which all the ships of Panama resorted, and then they passed by Land to Calion de Lima, because of the perpetuall rage of both Elements, the Windes and Waters in that place. They tooke in the Ile Loubes, two fowles of admirable greatnesse, in the beake, wings and talons not vnlike the Eagle, necked somewhat like a Sheepe, their heads combed as a Cocke: they were two elles in height, and three in breadth when their wings were displayed.

They learned of Pedro de Madriga of Lima, that Peru, Chili, and Terra firma, are commanded by Iohn de Mendoza Marquess Des Montes Claros, the Vice-Roy: which Office the King conferreth for fixe or eight yeares with yeerely allowance of fortie thousand Duckets, adding further a thousand Pesos for extraordinary expenses in the Feast of Christmas, Epiphany, S. Spirit and Easter, each of twelue Rials and halfe, because at those times he is to entertaine all the Counsellors of the Audience: two thousand Pesos also yeerely when hee furnisheth the Siluer Fleete. The Vice-Roy is serued with great Pompe in his Palace, goeth not forth without his Guard or Pensioners, and if he goeth into the Countrey, hath a hundred Lances, (which haue eight hundred Pesos stipend) and fiftie Muskets (which haue foure hundred Pesos yeerely) attending. There are foure Courts or Audiences, in Panama, Quito, Charlas, Lima: one also in Chili. In them are the Kings Counsellors, to whom both Ciuill & Criminall Causes are committed; but with appellation in Ciuill Cases to the Oydors, (certaine Commissioners) and in Criminall to the Alcalds. These all goe in one Habit, and are allowed three thousand Pesos annuall Pension.

The Vice-Roy resideth in the Citie of Kings or Los Reyes, called also Lima, situate in a pleasant Valley, extended a mile and halfe in length, in breadth three quarters, hauing about a hundred thousand Inhabitants, besides Merchants of other places. It hath foure Market places. There are two thousand Indian Artificers dwelling in the Cercado. Here resides the Archbishop Bartolomeu Lobo Guorero, which hath sixtie thousand Pesos of Reuenue. The chiefe Temple hath foure and twentie Prebends, one Archdeacon, besides Schoolemasters and other Priests. There are foure principall Pastors, to each of which are assigned fiftene thousand Pesos. Besides this Temple of Saint Iohn Euangelist are foure other, one of Saint Marcellus, with two Pastors and a thousand Pesos reuenue: the second of Saint Sebastian, the third of Saint Anne, with like stipend; the fourth is an Hospitall of Orphans, with five hundred Pesos. Monasteries here are of Saint Francis, of Saint Dominicke, and of Saint Augustine, and of our Ladie de las Mercedes, each of which hath two Cloysters of their owne Order, that of Saint Francis three, to wit, one of bare-foot Friars of our Ladie of Guadalupe. They haue there two Colledges of Iesuites which the Spaniards call Teatines,* both there and in Europe.

In each chiefe Monasterie are two hundred and fiftie Religious. There are five Monasteries of Nuns, called of the Incarnation, Conception, Trinitie, Saint Ioseph, and Saint Clare. Our Ladie also hath her Temple by the title of Monferrat, & del Prado & de Loretto. They haue foure Hospitals for the poore of Saint Andrew, in which are foure hundred sicke, of Saint Anna for the Indians, of Saint Peter for the Ecclesiasticks, of Charitie for women: another of Saint Spirito for Saylers, and one of Saint Lazaro for inueterate diseales. There are sixe hundred Priests, and a thousand Students.

Allowance is giuen to twentie foure in the Kings Colledge by the King, to as many in Saint Torines by the Archbishop. There are further reported to be two hundred Doctors in the Vniuersitie of all faculties. The professors receiue of the King a thousand Pesos pension. The two professors of Ciuill Law, haue each sixe hundred Pesos. There are foure hundred Masters of Art. Euerie yeare they chuse a new Rector or Chancellor. In this Citie and the Suburbs are about twentie thousand slaues. There are seene more women then men. The Indians* are free as well as the Spaniards, sauing that they pay euerie fixe moneths, two Pesos, a Henne, a Fenege of eight Royalls, and a piece of cloth of cotten or wollen. They are bound to serue the King* yearely in the Mines or Husbandrie diuers dayes, beginning in May, and continuing their times and courtes til Nouember. Those of Arrica bring to Potosi, Beasts, Wheat, Meale, Mays, Axicoca, an hearb which they perpetually chew; they vie for carriages a certaine Camel-fashioned-sheep. By this Citie the Riuer runneth close to the walls, which by showers sometimes so swells, that it hath carried away the stone Bridge, of nine Arches. Here is the Kings Contractation house, and his Treasurie; the Court also of Inquisition, with two Inquisitors (each of which hath three thousand Pesos pension) and a prison peculiar. The two Notaries haue foure thousand Pesos a piece. Here is the Court, or office of the Crusada, or the Popes Bulls, with officers and like stipends. This Citie is two leagues from the Sea, hath eight bands of foot, and as many of horse in Garrison. The next Port is called Callao, in which are some eight hundred Inhabitants. From the Citie to Potosi are all Spanish merchandise conueyed. Potosi is called La Valla Imperial, comprehending a great mountaine in which are Siluer Mines. Into them is an horrible descent of foure hundred steps, nor may the Sunne be admitted spectator of those Acts in perpetu-

Relations of the Govern-ment of Peru, and of the Citie of Kings, or Lima.

See M. Ellis Narration hereof in the Tractate proper to America

Foure Monasteries.

*Iesuites called Teatines: of which name a merry Wit in Spain, earnestly iested in an Embleme or Picture, in which was painted a Purse full of Money, and one of euerie Order pictured in his Habit reaching but short, and his Motto according, To no te atino, the Iesuite laying fast hold on it, saying, To te atino, the words bearing a double sense, I am a Teatine, or, I attayne thee the Conceit almost lost in the Translation. This was related to mee by a Spaniard.

M. Ellis saith they are Negroes.

* This seemes spoken of Citizens.

* These the Caciques bring in by courtes, some at one time, and some at another.

Ellis. Lincolnen saith, this publication of the Popes Indulgences is worth to the King of Spain yeerely 147058. pounds.

all

248 hath 100000.

tuall night, which exercise aboue twenty thousand Indians in digging, and an hundred more in carrying, grinding, and other their mettall workes.

This place is so cold that nothing growes in foure leagues space, but an herbe called Ycho. Their prouision is all brought from Arica: a pound of bread is there worth two Ryals. The hauen of Arica is an hundred and eighty Spanish leagues from thence; but many Villages are well inhabited by the way. Not farre hence is Chuquisaca, the Bishop whereof hath 30000. Ducats reuenue: there are the like Monasteries to those at Lima, but not so full of Monkes. At Potosi liue fifteen hundred shifting Card-players, and nimming companions which liue by their wits. Seuentie miles from thence is another Siluer Mine, called Erucio. Neerer Pima is Chocla Choca another Mine, cold as Potosi, where dwell fve thousand Spaniards. Cusco is like to Lima, hath sixe thousand Spanish inhabitants, a Bishop, and Monkes, and two Colledges, with some sixe hundred Students. Arequipa hath also a Bishop, two thousand Spaniards, and a Corrigidor. But it were tedious to relate the full Story.

Chil.

Of Chili, the Mother-City is S. Iago, where is a Gold Mine. Coquimbo hath store of brasse. Baldinia is rich in Gold. In the yeare 1599. the Inabitants or Natiues of the Countrey killed the Spaniards, and captiued their Wiues, eight hundred in number, which they offered to exchange, giuing for each, a paire of Shooes, a Bridle, a Sword, and a paire of Stirrups. But the King forbad Armour to be carried to them. They powred molten Gold into the Gouvernours mouth, made a Cup of his skull, and made Pipes of his shank-bones, in memory of their victory. Auroca hath neere it a Fort with a Spanish garrison, but very poore. Of Conception is spoken before. It hath 20 fowre hundred souldiers to keepe it, with some Ordnance. But you haue listened too long to this Dutch Intelligence from the Spanish Captiue. Let vs now with our Hollanders to Sea: so did they the one and twentieth of August, but easily perceiued the next day, the strength of the Current to be such, that without a faire and stiffe gale, they preuailed nothing. On the twentieth third, they anchored before Rio de Tumba, for the barre and tide forbad them entrance. They agreed to turne backe to the Ile Cogues in fve degrees Southerly, to refresh themselves. But stormes, raines, thunders, so haunted them to the thirteenth of September, that they could not finde the Island, and manifold diseases easily found them. On the twentieth they had sight of land in Noua Hispania: they had thirteene degrees, and thirty minutes. And the weather became againe very tempestuous. October the first, after much sea-trouble, they had sight of pleasant land, but the sea wrought so, that they could not haue safe landing, and so beat off and on, till the eleuenth, that they entred the hauen of Aguapolque, within shot of the Castle. And hanging out a flagge of peace, two Spaniards came aboard, and they agreed to exchange Prisoners for Sheep, Fruits, and Prouision, which was accordingly performed. On the fifteenth, Melchior Hernandez came aboard, to take view of the fleete, which had vanquished the Kings. He was Nephew to the Vice-Roy of New Spaine, and was kindly entertained of the Admirall, his men well appointed in their Armes. The Catle had seuentie Brasse Pieces, hauing intelligence eight moneths before of their comming. On the eighteenth they departed. The Calme kept them from doing any thing of moment, saue that they tooke a shippe which was bound for Pearle-fishing, and in her cleuer men, two of them Friars, twelue others escaping before by sight. They 40 manned it with two and twenty Dutch to followe the Fleet.

November.

November the tenth, they cast anchor before the Port Selagues in nineteene degrees. Vnderstanding by the Prisoners of a River neere this place full of fish, and set with Citrons, and other Fruits, and Meadows not farre off full of Cattell. they sent out their Boates, which espying sheo-prints, were afraid of Spaniards, and returned. After a hot skirmish, on the eleuenth they departed, and came to Port Natiuidad, where they watered and furnished themselves with other necessaries. On the twentieth they departed. On the twentieth sixth, they had twenty degrees and twentieth sixe minutes. They determined the next way to the Ladrones. On December the third, not without great maruell, they beheld two Islands farre in the Sea. On the fourth, they saw a Rocke, and had thought it a Shippe which they expected. It was in nineteene degrees, 50 fiftie three leagues from the Continent. In the sixt, they had sight of a newe Island with fve hills seeming as so many Islands.

December.

New Islands.

A dangerous

Ro. ke.

January. 1616.

Anno 1616. in January many died of diseases. On the three and twentieth the Ladrones appeared. The Land was low, and therefore kept aloofe that night. The next day the Sauages came about them with their Boates, and they went on land. On the fve and twentieth, Sibrand Cornelison, a Marchant, was taken with a sudden giddinesse at dinner, and presently died: at his buriall the Ordnance and Shot so dismayed the Indians which brought them prouision, that they durst come no more. They set sayle the twentieth sixth for the Maniles. They perceiued these Ladrones to be witty, strong, and to obserue some kind of Idolatrie. There is store of Fowle and fish.

February.

On February the ninth, they had sight of Cape Spirito Santo, and the same night anchored at the Maniles. In the tenth they had speech with the Indians, which refused all trade, because (they said) they came to warre with the Spaniard. They did not so in Capul, whither they came on the eleuenth, but brought them Hogges and Hennes with other things for trifles. They stayed

ed till the nineteenth, and then by the helpe of two Indian Pilots, passed the Straights to the Manilian Port or Bay. The fruits much releued and recouered the sicke. The people weare long garments like shirts, haue Friars in such reuerence, that to one of our Prisoners they prostrated themselues, and kissed his hands with incredible honour. On the nineteenth, they anchored before the Ile Luçon, the greatest of them in which is the City Manilla. Here they saw an house artificially framed on the tops of diuers trees, and seemed farre off as a Palace. Finding no people, they proceeded. On the eight and twentieth, they saw as they passed an exceeding high hill vomiting flames, named Albaca. On the foure and twentieth they had sight of the other strait in the egress, and sent their Boats to sound the way. The calme kept them prisoners 10 that they could not passe. On the twenty eighth, they anchored before the Ile Mirabelles, whose two Rockes seeme to threaten the skie, behind which is the city Manilla. Here they perpetually watch the comming of Ships, from China, to Pilote them to the City, the way beeing dangerous. Neither could the Hollanders make this strait, to passe through it all the time of their staying with all their labour, hindred by Calmes.

On March the first, they saw two sayles, and sent out their Boats to take them, but they were too swift. On the the third they tooke one laden with prouision of Rice, Oyle, Hens, Fruits, and on the fifth two more, with a Spaniard in them with like prouision, and after that three others. These were going to gather in the Tribute, which the places adioyning pay to the City Manilla. Here they had intelligence of a Fleet of tenne great Ships, built here, and sent forth vnder the Command of Iohn de Silues to the Moluccas, to fight with the Hollanders; together with 20 foure Gallies, and two other Ships; in them two thousand Spaniards, besides Chineses, Iapanders, and Indians. Their purpose was to reduce all the Moluccas vnder the Spaniard. Whereupon they freed all their Prisoners, except one Spaniard and an Indian, and hastened after them. On the eleuenth, they encountred so many Islands that they doubted of egress, and by the Spanish Marriners aduise, anchored all night: and by his helpe next day recouered the wide Sea. On the foureteenth, they rode at Anchor all night before the Ile Paney by reason of shoals. On the 30 eighteenth, they sayled close by Mendanao, but hearing of dangerous shelues, they in the Evening set further off into the Sea. On the nineteenth, they sayled againe close to the shore, and had prouision of the Islanders very cheape. On the twentieth, they reached Cape de Cadera, where the Spaniards as they passe to the Moluccas, vse to take in water. Till the three and twentieth, the calme permitted no further saile then the tide forced: betwixt Mendanao and Tagimo, a contrary tide stayed them. These Islanders shewed themselues enemies to the Spaniards, and offered fiftie of their ships in aide. On the twenty seuenth, they passed the Ile Sanguin, and many others. On the twentieth, they came to Ternata, in which is Maleia a Towne subiect to the Hollanders, where of their Countrey-men they were gladly entertained. These at Maleia reckoned this the eight and twentieth of March, which we reckoned the nine and twentieth, so that with following the Sunne in his course, they had one day lesse.

The Strait of Bouton is full of shoals: without them is deepe water. On the East is fresh water. To the West two leagues is a rockie shold.

40 Aprill the eighth, Cornelius de Vianen went for Banda. The Gouvernour shewed his Charter for the Moluccas, Banda, and Amboina, without preiudice to the Admiralls authoritie. And the souldiers went on land after so long a Nauigation.

May the second, they sent sixe ships for Macian, that theemie should not haue any Cloues, and there anchored before Maurice Fort. The English here told them of the taking of Coteway by the Dutch on the tenth of Aprill, rich in Nutmegs. And the Indians moued with this successe, made a new league with the Hollanders. On the eighteenth, they exchanged Prisoners, Spaniards for Dutch. The rest of this moneth, and Iune and Iuly following, they spent the time in these parts as occasion was offered, not so necessary to our purpose.

September the fifteenth, they came to Iacatra, and repaired there their Ships, not without 50 feare of Iohn de Silues with his Spanish Fleete. But on the thirtieth, wee heard of his sudden death at Malacca as was thought by poison, and the returne of the Armada to the Maniles, with great shame to the Spaniard after foure yeares preparation, doing little or nothing. Whiles they were at Iacatra foure ships of huge burthen came out of Holland, with exceeding store of Spanish Ryalls, and an other out of Iapon laden with Spanish Ryalls, and Siluer vnwrought, with Brasie, Yron, and other Commodities, the most of which they had taken from a Portugall shippe bound for Marico.

October the twentieth, the Concord a shippe of Horne which had departed out of Holland, 60 Iune, 1615. came to Iacatra (of which you shall haue a peculiar Relation) and because it was not of the Companie of the Indies, it was by the Generall annexed to the Fleet, the men beeing distributed into other Ships.

Nouember the tenth came the Nassau to Bantam from Mocha in the red Sea, well prouided thence of Spanish Ryalls, and Turkish Ducats. December the twelfth came thither the Amsterdam, and the Middleborough from the straits of Mallaoca; the one of seuen hundred, the other of fixe hundred tunnes, in which the Admirall Spilberg prepared for returne. On the seuen-

January 1617. tenth of January, 1617. they came to the Isle Mauritius. The thirtieth of March to Saint Helena, where they found the Middleburgh, which they had not seen in three moneths. Hence they departed the seventh of Aprill, and came into Zeland in July following.

A discourse of the present state of the Moluccos, annexed to the former Iournall, extracted out of APOLLONIVS SCHOT of Middleborough.

Orange in Ternate.

Maleia or Gramia.
Molucco or Hollandia.
Tacome or Willemstat.
Motir.

Machian, with three Forts.
Cayoe.

Bachian.

Laboua.

Guamnequorre in Gilolo, which is a great Island before which lye the smaller Islands of the Moluccas.

Spaniards in Moluccas.
Nuestra Señora del Rosario.

S.S. Pedro & Paulo.

Tidore.
Taroula.

THE Portugalls having, to the griefe of the Venetians, and their owne enriching, made themselves Masters of almost all the trade of Spicerie, by their possession of the Moluccas: their grew some distasts, first, betwixt them and the Spaniards (as in Magellanes voyage is expressed.) After the English, by the conduct of Sir Francis Drake, and since in their East Indian trade have had traffique there. Lastly, the Hollanders have dispossessed the Portugalls: and the Spaniards or Castilians, by meanes of the Tidorians have their fortified. The King of Ternate being taken with some chiefe men, the rest fled, and by Mateliese his ayd were reduced, and there erected the Fort Orange, and entred league with the Hollanders, and so wrought that Motir, Machian and Bachian yeelded to the Dutch, the Spaniards holding Tidor, and the chiefe Citie of Ternate, and some places in Gilolo, as shall after follow more particularly.

In the Isle of Ternate, the Dutch have three Forts, Maleia otherwise Gramia, the seat of the King and Nobilitie, taken by Matelief: Molucco, which they call Holland distant from Maleia halfe a mile North-wards, seated on a Hill, and built with lime and stone for the safetie of the Hauens of Maleia: Tacome, called also Willemstat, in the North-west Coast of Ternate, commodious for the places betwixt Malacca and Tacome.

The Isle Motir, was by the warres of Ternate and Tidore for a time desolate, till Admirall Wiert, by intreatie of the Ternateis erected a Fort in the North part thereof, and brought thither a Colonie of the Inhabitants out of Gilolo, whither they had fled. The Spaniards had thought to have brought those Motirians thither, which had fled to Tidore. The Inhabitants are about two thousand. Admirall Van Caerden tooke Machian, and raised therein three Forts, Tafason to the West, Noffagnia to the North, and Tabelole East-ward, all which places are populous. This Island numbred about nine thousand. From Cayoe a neighbour Island, for feare they remooued to Tabelole. It is the most fertile of all the Moluccas, and nourisheth with her fruits Ternate and Tidore, which are so addicted to warre, that they neglect culture of their grounds. Bachian is a great Kingdome and fruitfull, but not populous. The Inhabitants are idle and voluptuous, and have brought vpon themselves the present miserie. In Laboua the Spaniards had a Fort, and there are yet some seuentene Portugalls, and eightie Families of the Natiues become Christians. The Vice-Admirall 1600. tooke and fortified it with a strong Garrison. In the Continent they have Guamnequorre, to whom the Sabougians have added themselves, forsaking the Spaniard. In it is a Garrison of thirtie Souldiers. The Natiues calling the Dutch to their ayd were franke in promises, as the Dutch also to them, further then either partie doth, or well can performe, being too grieuous; as that the Dutch should have all the customes of the Natiues and Forreiners, should be free from all payments: yea they now deny such composition, & are alienated from the Dutch for not keeping word with them. The people are perfidious, ambitious, inconsistent, hardned in the insolencies and mischiefs, which alwayes attend warres. The Kings in time past had absolute rule, now are contemned, vpon occasion the people seeking new patronage. The Spaniards by bountie and liberalitie wonne their hearts, and made them auerse to the Hollander. These have the chiefe Citie in Ternate, and call it now Our Lady of the Rosario, strong, and fortified with all munition from the Moluccas. Heere are two hundred Spaniards, ninetie Papoos (Inhabitants of the Philippinas) besides thirtie Portugall householders, eightie Chineses, sixtie Moluccans, with their Families. Betwixt this and Maleia, they have a Fort called Saint Peter and Saint Paul, strongly seated on a Hill, with fixe and twentie Spaniards, twentie Papoos and some Manilians.

Tidore they have wholly, and therein three Forts, one in the chiefe Citie where the King resides, called Taroula, in which are ordinarily fiftie Spaniards, tenne Papoos, eight Natiues, with five brasse Pieces very large. The second hath thirteene Spaniards, besides the Natiues, and two Pieces. The third called Marico, within sight of Our Lady Citie, is a Towne well inhabited, walled, and hath a Garrison like the former. The Island scarcely yeelds a thousand armed men.

In Gilolo (which comparatiuely to those Moluccas seemes a Continent, as our Britaine to the Hebrides) the Spaniards have, first Sabongo, which Iohn de Silva tooke from the Dutch, 1611. against the truce (as they say) and fortified strongly, imposing a Garrison of sixtie Spaniards, and fortie Papoos: secondly, Pilolo craftily taken from the Dutch also, and well provided with sixtie Spaniards, and some Manilians. The third, at the West side of Gilolo ouer against Machian, called Aquilamo, with few Spaniards, and fortie Tidorians. To the Moren or Easterne Coast of Gilolo they have three other Iolo, Isian and Iassongo, with them fortie five Spaniards, with the Natiues. They have a Gally or two at Sea besides, some Lari (a kind of smaller smaller Gally) and are alwayes well provided of Armes, often destitute of victualls, which causeth diuers of them to flie away. Halfe the Cloues belong to the King, and the marchandise of them is in the Portugalls hands. The Kings costs for fixe yeeres were very great, with little profit. Jerônimo de Sylva, is now Commander in those parts, an old warie Souldier, with other officers vnder him.

A briefe description of the Forts, Souldiers, and Militarie prouision, as also of their Trade and Shipping in the East Indies, vnder the seruice of the Generall States of the vniued Prouinces, and his Excellencie, as it was in Iuly 1616.
extracted out of the Author of the Iournall.

JO

IN the Isle of Ternate, at Maleia are these Captaines; Captaine Fridericke Hamel, William Ertvelt, Peter Barker, Rowland Philips, Goswine a Mammerent, with their seuerall bands, each of ninetie, or a hundred men, the Citie walled and strongly fortified. Tabucke is a Fort neere, kept by the Inhabitants, as Tacome and Tabou, two others in Gilolo. In Tidore is the Fort Marrico, vnder Captaine William ab Amfing, very strong. In Motir, Captaine Henry Maier hath an able Garrison and Fortresse. Macian is gouerned by Gilbert Vianen, and hath three Forts as before. Bartholmen Spilbergen is chiefe in Bacian, where is the Fort Barne-velt built of stone, and well furnished with armes and men.

20 In Ambaina is a royall Fort or Castle, commanded by Henry Steur, with one hundred and fiftie Souldiers: besides other Fortresses, as Conbellam, Hutson, and Low; This last is kept by the Ternatois. Adrian Blockhousen is Gouverneur of the Island. In Banda are two Forts, Nassau, with a Garrison of an hundred and twentie Hollanders besides a very great number of Iapaners, Chineses and others; and the Belgique, furnished as well. Captaine Henry Benerlincke commands both. In the Island Poleway, they haue the Reuenge, with an hundred fixtie Souldiers vnder two Captaines, Dussen, and Verhoeren.

In the Coast of Coromandel, in Palataque, is a strong and goodly Castle, with a Garrison of an hundred and twentie Souldiers: the Cities Negapatan, and Massepatan, shew them great fauour. Iohn de Hase a Counsellor of the Indies, is Commander in these parts. In Iana the greater, at Iacatra a dayes iourney from Bantam, is built a Magnificent store-house or Arsenale, for Artificers, and prouision for the warre, and for the Nauie, furnished therewith brasse Ordnance. In all these are Souldiers three thousand; Brasse Peeces, an hundred ninetie three, of Iron Ordnance three hundred and twentie, of Stone three hundred.

30 Places forsaken vpon better consideration, are Gemmalanor, a Fort in the Isle of Boutton; another in Salor and Timor; a Magazine, or Store-house in Gresel and Achin, and Macassar in Selibes. The King of Ior is their great friend, but admits no Fort. They haue their most profitable trade at Iambi, in one of the Islands of Sumatra, at the straight of Malacca. In Fieos, Priaman, and Silbe, on the West of Sumatra they haue trading. In Borneo they trade for Diamants, and Bezoar stones. In Iapon, James Spex hath erected a great store-house. At Bantam is their chiefe Factorie, where all Shippes are laden vnder the command of Sir Iohn Peters Coenen Generall president of the Indies, which heere keepes an exact register and accounts of all the Indian affa es.

40 Their shipping in Iuly, 1616. was as followeth; In the Moluccas, The Old Sun, the Old Moone, the New Sun, the New Moone, the Flushing, the Angel of Delph, the Hope, the Lucifer, and the Larus. In Iapatra, the Holland. At Bantam, the Faith, the Nassau, the Horne, the Larus of Iapon, the Blacke Lion. In Timor and Salor, the Eagle, and the Starre. In Achin, the Falcon and the Huntsman. In Coromandel, the Neptune, the Golden Lion. At Iambi, the Bargen Boat, the Halfe Moone. The Concord, and Little Holland, were sent to the Isle Ingane, to receiue those which had beene shipwrecked in the Aolus. At Iacatra, the Enchusen. At Bantam were also the New Horne, the Amsterdam, the Middleborough. The Tergoes expected from Coromandel. The Blacke Beare lately departed, and the Amsterdam, and the New Zeland. Then at Sea towards the Indies, the Concord of Amsterdam, and the Aolus of Zeland. They haue moreouer in Banda two small Gallies, and in Iacatra, and Bantam many smaller Sayle.

CHAP. VII.

The Sixth Circum-Navigation, by WILLIAM CORNELISON SCHOUTEN of Horne : Who South-wards from the Straights of Magelan in Terra-Del-fuogo, found and discovered a new passage through the great South-Sea, and that way sayled round about the World : Describing what Islands, Countries, People, and strange Adventures hee found in his said Passage.

BEcause the Generall States of the vnited Nether-land Prouinces, had granted Pattents of trade to the East Indian Company, with prohibition to all others to passe the Cape of Good Hope East-ward, or thorough the Magelen straights West-ward: Isaak le Maire a Marchant of Amsterdam, and William Cornelison Schouten of Horne (a man which had beene thrice in the East Indies) deuised and consulted of some new way, without impeachment of the said Pattents, which they confidently supposed might bee done by some passage South-wards from the Magelan straights. And to that end agreed, betweene them to enterprise such a Voyage, taking order that Isaac le Maire should prouide the one halfe of the money, and William Cornelison Schouten the other halfe to furnish the said Voyage, by the helpe and furtherance of their friends, the care thereof, and to make prouision for the said Voyage, being referred to William Cornelison Schouten.

And to finish the said Voyage, the Marchants aforesaid prepared and rigged a great and a small Ship of Horne, the great Ship called the Unitie, of three hundred sixtie Tunnes, whereof William Cornelison Schouten was Master and chiefe Pilot, and Iacob le Maire Marchant and principall Factor, in it hauing sixtie fve men, and nineteene great Pieces, and twelue Slings, with Muskets and other munition for warre proportionably, with a Pinasse to sayle, another to row, a Boat, and a Scute, Anckors, Cabels, Ropes, Sayles, and all other necessaries belonging thereunto. The lesser Ship called the Horne, of an hundred and tenne Tunnes, whereof John Cornelison Schouten was Master, and Aris Clawson Marchant, in it twentie two men, eight great Pieces, foure Slings, and other furniture, as need required, and was necessarie for such a Voyage. And for that they would not make knowne to any man, as I said before whether they meant to goe, they hyred all their men, both common Saylers and Officers, to sayle vnto euery place whether the Masters and the Marchants would go, which made the common Saylers and people to speake and ghesse of that Voyage diuersly, and at the last gaue them the name of the Gold-Finders, but the Marchants named them the South Company. The Ships being readie, vpon the sixteenth of May 1615. the men were mustred by the Scout and Schepen of Horne, and the twentie fve of the same moneth the Unitie set sayle, and arriued at the Tessell vpon the twentie seuen.

Ann. 1615. The third of Iune the lesser departed from Horne, and the next day came to the Tessell. Vpon the fourteenth of Iune 1615. we sayled out of the Tessell, and the sixteenth of the same moneth, being in the sight of Dunkerke, past betweene Douer and Callis: the seuenteenth anko-ring in the Downs, William Cornelison Schouten went on shoare at Douer, to get men to bring vs Fresh-water; and the same day set sayle from thence.

The fourth of Iuly, it was ordered that euery man should haue a Can of Beere a day, foure pound of Bisket, and halfe a pound of Butter (besides sweet Suet) a weeke, and fve Cheeses for the whole Voyage.

The thirteenth in the morning wee saw the Islands of Tenerifa, and great Canaria, and the same day about noone we sayled betweene them both, with a stiffe North North-east wind, and a swift streame.

Betweene the fourteenth and the fifteenth, with the same wind and streame we passed Tropicus Caneri.

The twentieth on the morning, we fell on the North side of Cape Verde, and had eight fathome deepe when we first saw the Land, sayling along by the Coast, and at Sunne-rising the Cape lay West and by South from vs, so that with a North North-east wind wee could not get beyond it, and were forced to Ankor at thirtie two fathome deepe: that night it blew hard, with a great storme of raine and thunder. We had ill weather diuers dayes.

The fve and twentieth the Alkaide, or gouernour came aboard our ship, with whom wee agreed for eight States of Iron; that we should peaceably fetch Fresh-water from the shoare. The first of August wee set sayle from the Cape.

Sierra Liona.

The one and twentieth of August in the morning, by Sunne rising we set sayle, and saw the high Land of Sierra Liona, about fixe Leagues from vs North-east and by North: wee likewise saw the Islands of Madrabomba, which lye on the South point, or corner of the high land of Sierra Liona, North from the Baixos, or shallows of Saint Annas Island. Sierra Liona is a very high high land, there is no land so high as it, betweene Capo Verde, and the Coast of Guinea, where- by the point is most easie to be knowne : that day we laboured as wee could to get to land, for the most part hauing stormie weather, running to the point, and ouer the Baixos, or shallows of Saint Anna, at tenne, nine, eight, seuen and fve fathome water, and as wee sayled North-ward, the water waxed deeper, but East-ward shallower, so that about euening wee anchored with a high water, at foure fathome and a halfe soft ground, and in the night time wee had but three fathome and a halfe, but it was fine cleare weather.

10 The two and twentieth in the morning at Sun-rising, William Schouten went aboard the Horne, and sayled in it before vs, the great ship following, holding our course North North-east, with a North-west wind, and an ebbe vnder the bough, and so got off from the Baixos, to eigh-teene fathome water, and from thence to the Illands of Mabrabomba, which are very high, and lye all three on a row, South-west and North-east, halfe a league from Sierra Liona to sea-ward, there wee had shallow water, at fve and foure fathome, soft muddie ground, we anchored about a league from the land, and going on shoare found no man dwelling therein, but perceiued the footsteps of many great beasts, but all the land lay wast like a wildernesse, with low marshes or bogges, and high hills.

Baixos, or shal-lows of Saint Anna Mabrabomba.

20 The three and twentieth in the morning, Iacoble Maire went aboard the Horne, and from it with both the boates on shoare, where hee found a Riuer, at the mouth thereof hauing many Cliffes, Sands, and Rockes, whereby no Shippe could goe into it, but within it was very deepe and broad enough for ships to turne and wind, there they could perceiue no people to dwell, but saw three wild Oxen, and a great many Monkees, and some Birds that barked like Dogs. They rowed at least three leagues vp into it with the floud. After long search they found eight or nine Limon trees which they ihook, and got about seuen hundred and fifty Limons, most ripe, ready to dry. There also they saw great store of Tortoyes & some Crocodiles, but no people.
We determined to trie if we could get into the fresh riuer with both our ships, therein to make pouision of fresh water and Limonds, and to that end set sayle, but found the water so shallow, that we were forced to anchor at fixe fathome. The Horne anchored before the riuer, on the lower land, but there found shallow water. They found vp the riuer no signes of men, onely a Buffe and a Calfe, and here and there got some Limons.

30 The nine and twentieth, perceiuing that we were not in the riuer of Sierra Liona, wee determined early in the morning to set sayle, and to goe North-ward of the high land, and about noone vvee got about the Illands of Mabrabomba, West-ward, along tovvards the North part of the high land, till wee had twelue and fittene fathome vvater, and in the euening got about the point, vvhere vve anchored at fittene fathome deepe.

The thirtie in the morning, vvee hoysed Anchor, and draue vvith the streame, and a South vvind before the Village, in the right roade of Sierra Liona, * vvhere vve anchored at eight fathome, sandie ground, about a Musket shot from the land, there vvwe savv eight or nine houles couered vvith Stravv. The *Moore*s called vnto vs in their language, to fetch them aboard our ship, and because they had no Canoes vvwe sent our boat on land, vvwhich presently came backe againe vvith fve *Moore*s in it. vvwhereof one vvwas their Interpreter : but before they came, they 40 desired that vve vvould leaue some of our men, to stay vvith them as pledges, for that not long before there had beene a French ship there, vvwhich had taken and carryed avvay vvvo of their *Moore*s. Aris Clawson the Marchant, that vvvent a shoare vvith the boat, stayed there vvith them, and hauing certaine Beades, he there bartered them for Limons, and Bananas. The Interpreter spake all kind of languages, one vvith another. In the meane time, our men hauing faire weather, laded fresh water, which is there easie to bee had, by reason it fals downe out of the hill into the road, so that wee held the Barrels vnder the shoare, or fall of the water, and filling them, put them straight into the Scute, the water was very good. For a few Beades, and some slight Norremburgh Kniues, wee might haue had an hundred thousand Limons there at the least, if we would, for there they grew by vvhole * Woods full : the same night we bartered 50 with the Negroes for a shoale of Fish.

* The road of
Sierra Liona.

* Store of Limons.

The first of September vve hoysed Anchor, and draue before the streame, and that Euening anchored at the mouth of the Sea, before a Small Riuer. The second, vve set the Horne vpon the Strand to make her cleane, hauing a good place to doe it, for there the vvater fals seuen foote vp and dovvne : in the euening our men came on boord againe, and brought a little beaft named an Antelop, vvwhich they found in a Wood, in a net or snare set there by the Negroes, and some Limons, and after that the Boat vvvent out to fish, and got a great number, and some Palmitas which they had not cut dovvne in the vvood.

60 The third in the afternoone, the Horne being made cleane vvwas lancht into the vvater againe, and our Master vvvent out to fish, in the euening bringing a great shole of fish vvith him in fashion like to a Shoormakers cutting knife, and euery man an hundred and fittie Limons for his part.

The fourth early in the morning vve hoysed anchor, and set sayle out of Sierra Liona.

The fift of October, we were vnder foure degrees, seuen and twentie minutes, the same day about noone, there was such a noyse in the Bough of our Shippe, that the Matter being behind in the Gallerie, thought that one of the men had fallen out of the Fore-ship, for from the Boe-spric into the Sea, but as hee looked out ouer the side of the Ship, hee saw the Sea all red, as if great store of bloud had beene powred into it, whereat hee wondred, knowing not what it meant, but afterward hee found, that a great Fish, or a Sea monster hauing a horne, had therewith stricken * against the Ship, with most great strength. For when wee were in Porto Desire, where we set the Ship on the Strand to make it cleane, about seuen foot vnder water before in the Ship, wee found a Horne sticking in the Ship, much like for thickeesse and fashion to a common Elephants tooth, not hollow, but full, very strong hard Bone, which had entred into three Plankes of the Ship, that is two thicke Plankes of greene, and one of Oken wood, and so into a Rib, where it turned vpward, to our great good fortune: for if it had entred betweene the Ribbes into the Ship, it would happily haue made a greater hole, and haue brought both Ship and men in danger to be lost, it stucke at least halfe a foote deepe into the Ship, and about halfe a foote without, where with great force it was broken off, by reason whereof the great monster bled so much.

* Strange accident of a Fish striking against the Ship.

The five and twentieth, the wind continuing, we held on the same course. Vntill that time we had sayled, and no man in our Ship, (vnlesse it were the Master, William Cornelison Schouten, and Jacob le Maire our Marchant) knew whether we should goe, and then they told vs what voyage they intended, which was, to seeke by another way then the straights of Magelan, to enter into the South Sea, there to discouer new countries in the South parts, where they thought to find great riches, and that if it fell not as they desired and pretended, then that they would saile along through the great South Sea, South-ward to the East Indies. This being knowne, our men were very glad and reioyced, hoping euery man for his part, to benefit by that voyage, to their aduancement.

The sixe and twentieth, we were vnder sixe degrees, five and twentieth Minutes, with faire weather, and a good gale, and all the rest of that moneth for the most part sayling South-ward, with an East, and a North-East wind, we were vnder tenne degrees, and thirtie minutes.

The first of Nouember we past the Sunne, whereby at noone time, it was North from vs.

The third we were vnder nineteene degrees, twentie minutes, then we saw some Black-birds, and two or three fowles called Sea-mewes, and after noone, wee had a sight of Martin vads Islands called Ascension, which lay South-East, and by East from vs, vnder twentie degrees, there wee found our Compasse to varie North-East-ward twelue degrees: The wind being North North-East, as the day before, and held our course South: That day our men had double allowance of Wine, because we had past the dangerous Sands, called Abrolhos.

The one and twentieth, wee were vnder eight and thirtie degrees, five and twentie minutes, and had alteration of water, there wee cast our Lead, but found no ground, the Compasse then varied seuentene degrees North-East-ward, that morning wee saw the new Moone, being one and twentie howers old.

The sixt of December, we saw Land not very high, but white and somewhat flat, we fell (according to our desire) on the North side of Porto Desire, and at night anchored at tenne fathom deepe, about a league and a halfe from the shoare, with an ebbe that ran South-ward, as strongly as the Sea runnes betweene Flushing heads.

The seuenth in the morning wee hoysed Anchor, and sayled South vntill noone, then wee were before the Hauen of Porto Desire, lying vnder seuen and fortie degrees, fortie minutes, and made towards the entrie thereof, where we had very high water, so that the Clifles (whereof Oliuer van Noort writeth, which sailing into that Hauen must be left North-ward from vs) were cleane vnder water, but on the South point there lay certaine Clifles open, which we tooke to be those, and therefore went South-ward on, but sayled South-ward of the right channell into a crooked Bay, and there at high water anchored at foure fathom and a halfe, and when the water was low, we had but foureteene foot-water, whereby the Unitie lay with her Sterne fast on ground, it being full of Clifles, the wind was West from the Land, and smooth water to our great fortune, for if we had had an East wind, with any gale, for certaine, we had lost our Ship: vpon the Clifles we found many Egges, and tooke great Muscles and other Fish, and among the rest, Smelts of sixteene inches long, and for that cause we called that place the Smelt Bay. Our Shallop went to the Penguins Island, lying East South-East two leagues from Porto Desire, and came aboard againe late in the euening, bringing two Sea Lyons, and an hundred and fiftie Penguins, which we ate the next day.

Penguins.

Seals.

Smelt Bay.

The eight in the morning, with the Land-wind we sayled out of the Smelt Bay, and anchored right before the Hauen of Porto Desire, and sent our Shallop out to sound the depth of the channell, and found twelue and thirteene fathom, entering in after noone, with a high water, and a North-East wind, we set sayle, the Horne first, and so entred into the Hauen. When wee had sayled about a league and a halfe into the riuer, the wind turned, and we anchored at twentie fathoms: there the ground was slippery stones, for about halfe an houre after, the winde blowing hard North-West, both our Ships lying with two Anchors a Peece out: presently draue vpon the South shoare, for there five and twentie anchors could not haue holden them, so that wee verily thought both our Ships would there bee cast away. The great Ship fate with her side vpon vpon the Clifles, and shoke with the falling vvater somevvhat lovver, and still kept stanch, but the Horne fell vpon the Clifles, so that the vvater vvent cleane from it, vvhereby at a lov vvater a man might haue gone dry foote vnder the Keele, right against the maine Mast: the Keele vvvas aboue a fathome out of vvater, fearefull to behold, but as the vvinde bleve hard Northvvest it kept it from falling ouer, vvwhich appeared to be so, for that vvhen the vvinde ceased, it fell from the land against the vvinde vpon the side, at least three foote lovver then the Keele, whereat vve vvvere all abasht, thinking vve had surely lost her, but vvhen the Flood came vvith still vvweather, it rose vp againe, vvhereat vve all reioycd. In the morning vvith calme vvweather vve vvound off from the vvall, and the same night the Horne came to vs.

- 10 The ninth in the morning, we set saile againe, and went further into the Riuer, and came to Kings Island, so called by Oliuer van Noort, the Horne went behind it, and there anchored, but we could not get in with the Unitie, because the wind was contrary. Our men went on shore into the Island, which was almost couered ouer with egges; for a man standing still on his feete, with his hands might reach to fiftie foure neasts, each hauing three or foure egges a piece, much like (but somewhat greater) then Sea-Mues egges, the birds were blackish Sea-Mues, we carried thousands of them aboard, and ate them.

Kings Island
almost coue-red with eggs.

- The eleuenth, the boat went lower into the Riuer on the South side, to seeke for men and water, and found nothing but brackish water: there they saw some Estriges, and beasts like Harts, with very long neckes, which were afraid of vs. Vpon the highest part of the hilles wee found 20 some burying places, which were heapes of stones, and we not knowing what that meant, pulled the stones off from one of them, and vnder them found mens bones of tenne and eleuen foot long: they buried the dead vpon the top of the hils, flat on the ground, and couer them also with stones, which keepes them from beeing deuoured by beasts or birds.

Estriges.

Gyants: see the Voyage of Magelan.

The twelfth, thirteenth, foureteenth, fifteenth, and sixteenth, our men went continually on land to seeke for water, but found none, euery day bringing good store of birds and fishes on boord.

The seuenteenth, we laid our shippe within Kings Island on the wall, with an high water, to make it cleane, where it was drie, that we might goe round about it dry foot.

- The eighteenth, the Horne was also laid on shore about two Musket shot from our Shippe to 30 make it cleane. The nineteenth, as we were busie about both the ships to make them cleane, and burnt reeds vnder the Horne, the flame of the fire sodainly got into the Ship, and presently tooke such hold thereof, that in the twinckling of an eye it was so great, that we could by no meanes quench it, by reason it lay fiftie foote drie from the water side, and by that meanes wee were constrained to stand still, and see it burne before our eyes, not able to doe any thing to saue it.

The twentieth, at a high water we lancht the Unitie into the water againe, and went to the Horne and quencht the fire, but the ship was burnt cleane downe to the water. The next day when we had cast the water out of that part of it that was left, we saued all the wood, Ironworke, Anchors, Ordnance, and what else that was to be gotten, and put it into our shippe.

- The twenty fifth our men found certaine holes full of fresh water, which was white and very 40 thicke, from whence some of them daily fetch water in little rondlets on their shoulders: some went armed with Muskets to defend them, others fetcht birds, and egges, and yong sea Lyons which we ate, and are of a reasonable good tast.

Seales.

The thirteenth about noone, we sailed out of Porto Desire, but the sea beeing calme, wee anchored before the hauen, and when the winde began to rise, hoysed anchor and put to Sea.

The eighteenth we saw Sebalds Islands South-east from vs about three leagues, they lie, as Sebald Dewert writes, distant from the Strait, East Northeast, and West Southwest, about fiftie leagues, then we were vnder fiftie one degrees.

Sebalds Islands.

- The twentieth, we saw Steencrosse driue, and perceiued that we had a great streame that went Southwest, then we were vnder fiftie three degrees, and ghest that we were about twentie 50 leagues Southward from the Straits of Magelan. The eleuenth we were vnder three and fiftie degrees.

The three and twentieth in the morning, we had a South winde, and about noone it waxt calme, then the wind blew West, and we had ground at fiftie fathome blacke sandy, with small stones, after that the winde turned North, with smooth water and faire weather. The water shewed as white, as if we had beene within the land, we held our course South and by West, about three of the clocke afternoone we saw land West, and West Southwest from vs, and not long after that we saw it also in the South, then hauing a North winde, we went East Southeast, to get aboue the land, it blew so hard in the hollow water, that we were forced to take in our Toppe-sayles.

- 60 The foure and twentieth in the morning, wee sawe land on starre-boord, not aboue a great league distant from vs, there wee had ground at fortie fathome, and a West-winde, the land stretcht East and South, with very high hills, that were all couered ouer with Ice. We sayled along by that land, and about noone past it, and saw other land East from it, which also was very high and ragged.

These

These lands as we ghest lay about eight leagues one from the other, and seemed as if there were a good passage betweene them, which we were the better perswaded vnto, for that there ranne a hard streame Southward betweene both those lands.

Store of Whales.

Then about noone we were vnder fiftie foure degrees and fortie fixe minutes, and after noone wee had a North wind, and made towards this opening, but about euening it calmed, and that night wee draue forwards with a hard streame, and little wind. There we saw an innumerable number of Pengwins, and thousands of Whales, so that we were forced to looke well about vs, and to winde and turne to shunne the Whales, leaft we should sayle vpon them.

State land and Maurice-land.

The five and twentieth in the morning, we were close by the East land, which was very high and craggie, which on the North side reacheth East South-east, as farre as we could see, that land 10 we called State land, but the land that lay West from vs, we named Maurice-land. We perceiued that on both sides thereof, there were good roades, and sandy Bayes, for on either side it had sandy strands, and very faire sandie ground. There are great store of fish, Pengwins and Porpoises, as also birdes and water enough, but we could see no Trees: we had a North-wind in the entrie, and went South South-west, with a stiffe course, at noone we were vnder fiftie five degrees, thirty fixe minutes, and then held our course South-west, with a good sharpe wind and raine, and a stiffe gale: we saw the land on the South side of the passage vpon the West ende of Maurice van Nassawes land, reach West South-west and South-west, as farre as we could see it, all very high and craggie-land. In the Euening the wind was South-west, and that night wee went South with great waues or billowes out of the South-west, and very blew water, whereby 20 we iudged and held for certaine that we had great deepe water to loefward from vs, nothing doubting but that it was the great South-sea, whereat we were exceeding glad, to think that we had discovered a way, which vntill that time was vnknowne to men, as afterward we found it to be true.

Great fowles very tame.

There we saw extreame great Sea-mewes, bigger of body then Swannes, their wings beeing spread abroad, each of them about a fathome long. These birds being vnaccustomed to see men, came to our ship, and sat thereon, and let our men take and kill them.

The fixe and twentieth, we were vnder seuen and fiftie degrees, with a flying storme out of the West and South-west, the whole quarter, with very high and blevv vwater, vve held our course South-vvard, and in the North-vvest saw very high land, in the night vve turned North- 30 West-vvard.

The seuen and twentieth, vve vvere vnder fixe and fiftie degrees, and one and fiftie minutes, the vweather very cold, vvith haile, and raine, the vvind West and West and by South, and vve vvent South-vvard, and then crost North-vvard vvith our maine Sailes.

The eight and twentieth vve hoysed our top-sayles, then vve had great billowes out of the West, vvith a West vvind and then a North-east, and therevvith held our course South, and then West and West and by South, and vvere vnder fiftie fixe degrees and fortie eight minutes.

Barnueles I-lands.

The nine and twentieth, we had a Northeast wind, and held our course South-west, and saw two Islands before vs, lying West South-west from vs: about noone we got to them, but could not saile about them, so that we held our course North: about them they had dry gray Cliffes, and some low Cliffes about them, they lay vnder fiftie seuen degrees, South-ward of the Equinoctiall line, we named them Barnueles Islands. From them we sayled West North-west: about Euening we saw land againe, lying North West and North North-west from vs, which was the land that lay South from the straits of Magellan which reacheth South-ward, all high hilly land, couered ouer with snow, ending with a sharpe point, which we called Cape Horne, it lieth vnder fiftie seuen degrees and fortie eight minutes.

Cape Horne.

Then wee had faire weather, and a North wind, with great Billowes out of the West, we held on course West, and found a strong streame that ranne West-ward.

The thirtieth, we still had great Billowes out of the West, with hollow water and a strong streame that went West-ward, which assured vs that we had an open way into the South sea, then 50 we were vnder fiftie seuen degrees, thirty foure minutes.

The one and thirtieth, wee had a North wind, and sayled West, and were vnder fiftie eight degrees: then the wind turning West, and West South-west, somewhat variable, wee passed by Cape Van Horne, and could see no more land, and had great billowes out of the West, and verie blew water, which then fully assured vs that we had the broad South sea before vs, and no land: the wind was very variable, with great store of haile and raine, which forced vs oftentimes to winde to and fro.

The first of February, we had cold weather, with a storme out of the South-west, and sayled with our maine sayles, lying North-west, and West North-west. The second, the wind West, we sayled South-ward, and were vnder fiftie seuen degrees, fiftie eight minutes, and found twelue 60 degrees North-ward variation of the Compasse. That day we saw many great Sea-mewes and other Birds.

The third, we were vnder fiftie nine degrees twentie five minutes, with indifferent weather, and a hard West wind, and guesfed that wee were that day vnder fiftie nine degrees and a halfe, but but saw no land, nor any signe thereof in the South. The fourth, we were vnder fiftie fixe degrees fortie three minutes, with variable windes, most Southweſt, and wound to and fro as the wind blew, with eleuen degrees Northeastward variation of Compaſſe.

The fift wee had a ſtrong ſtreame out of the Weſt, with hollow vvater, vvhereby vve could beare no ſayle, but vvere forced to driue vvith the vvinde.

The tvvelvth, our men had each of them three cups of vvine in ſigne of ioy for our good hap, for then the Straits of Magellan lay Eaſt from vs: the ſame day by aduice of all our Counſell, at the requeſt of our chiefe Marchant, the nev vvaſſage ( by vs diſcouered betvvene Mauritius land, and the Stateſland,) vvvas named the Straights of le Maire, although by good right it 10 ſhould rather haue beene called William Schoutens Strait, after our Maſters Name, by vvhoſe vvife conduction and ſkill in ſayling, the ſame vvvas found.

During the time that vve paſſed through that Nevv Strait, and ſayling Southward about that New-found land, till vve got to the Weſt ſide of the Straits of Magellan, for the moſt part vve had a very ſtrong ſtreame, hollow vvater, continuall raine, miſts, moiſt and thicke vvether, with much haile and ſnovv: vvhereby vvee endured much trouble, miſerie and diſeaſe. But in regard that vve had ſo luckily diſcouered that Paſſage, and hoping that the places vvhiſh vve vvere yet to diſcouer, vvould likvvviſe fall out vvell, vve vvere encouraged; and not once thinking vpon our former hard paſſage, vvith aſſured mindes determined to goe forvvard on our Voyage.

The foure and tvventieth, vve hoyle our vvpper Ordnance out of the hold, and placed it aboue 20 vpon our Decke. The ſiue and tvventieth of Ianuary, vve hoyle all our ſayles, becauſe vve entered into a peaceable Sea, and had paſt all ſtormes and hard vvether.

The ſeuē and tvventieth, vve hoyle vp our ſecond tyre of Ordnance, and placed it in our ſecond Orlope, for in Porto Deſire vve had laid it dovvne in the hold, and all things that might hinder the vvind, and then vvere vnder fortie degrees vvith faire vvether, a South, and South Southeaſt vvind, and a good gale, as the day before, and held our courſe Northvvard.

The eight and tvventieth, our Counſell, and the foure Maſters determined to ſayle to the Iſles of John Fernando, there to reſreſh vs, becauſe ſome of our men by meanes of the great paines and labour taken by them vvere extreame vvary, and ſome had the fluxe: that day vve vvere vnder thirtie ſiue degrees, fiftie three minutes. In the euening vve bare but ſmall ſayle, fearing to fall 30 vpon the land by night, and becauſe vve vvould not paſſe beyond it in the night, vvee ſayled Northeaſt.

The firſt of March in the morning wee ſaw the Iſlands of John Fernando, right before vs, Iſlands of John Fernando. North North-eaſt, with a South wind, faire vvether, and a good gale. About noone wee got to them, vnder thirtie three degrees and fortie eight minutes.

Theſe are two Iſlands, both of them very high land: the ſmalleſt lying moſt Weſt-ward, is a very dry bare Iſland with nothing in it, but bare Hills and Cliffeſ, the greateſt (lying Eaſt-ward) is alſo full of very high Hills, but hath many Trees, and very fruitfull. Therein are many Beaſts, as Hogs, and Goates, vpon the Coaſt admirable numbers of good fiſh; which makes the Spaniards oftentimes come thither to fiſh, and in ſhort time fill their ſhips and carrie them
40 to Peru. Wee went on the Weſt ſide of thoſe Iſlands, which was not well for vs, for there wee muſt haue gone about Eaſt-ward to get into the Road, which lyeth on the Eaſt point of the greateſt Iſland, for going about on the Weſt ſide behind the land, wee ſhould haue gotten vnder the land in the calme vvater, becauſe the land there is high and calme, ſo that wee could not get to the land to anchor with our ſhip, and therefore ſent our Boat out to ſound the depth, which came aboard againe in the Euening, and told vs, that cloſe by the land we had fortie and thirtie fathome ſandy ground which ſtill leſſeneth till it come to three fathome good to anchor in, beſides a faire Greene Valley, full of Greene Trees, pleaſant to behold, but becauſe of the ſhortneſſe of the time they went not on ſhore, and in diuers places ſaw freſh vvater in great ſtreames run downe off the Hills, they likvvviſe ſaw many Goats and other Beaſts,
50 vpon the Hills, which they could not well know, being ſo farre off: they had alſo in ſhort time taken a great number of good fiſh, for the Hooke was no ſooner in the vvater, but preſently they tooke fiſh, ſo that continually without ceaſing, they did nothing but draw vp fiſh, moſt of them being Corcobados, and Steen-braſſes, and ſaw many Sea-Wolues: theſe newes cheared vp our men, ſpecially thoſe that were troubled with looſeneſſe hoping there to reſreſh themſelues: that night it was calme vvether, ſo that the ſtreame draue vs ſomewhat back-ward.

The ſecond day we were with our ſhip cloſe vnder the land againe, but could not get ſo neere (what meanes ſoever wee vſed) to finde ground, wee once againe ſent our men on land, ſome to fiſh, and ſome to ſeeke for Cattell, they ſaw many Hogs, Goats, and other Beaſts, but by reaſon that the Woods were thicke they could not get them: and the while that ſome of them fetch 60 vvater, they that were in the Boat had taken almoſt two Tunnes of fiſh, all with Hookes, and ſo we were forced to leaue that faire Iſland, and could get nothing elſe there.

The third day wee draue at leaſt foure leagues beneath the Iſlands, notwithstanding that all that quarter we did the beſt we could to ſayle neere to it, vvhereof at laſt being wearie, (ſeeing it was vnpoſſible to bee done) wee determined to leaue them, and to hold on our courſe, to per-forme

forme our Voyage, euery day hauing a good fore-wind, to the great grieve of our sicke men, who thereby were cleane out of comfort, but God holpe them.

These Islands are vnder thirtie three degrees, fortie minutes : this resolution taken, we set our course North-west and by West, with a good South gale of wind and faire weather.

The eleuenth day wee past Tropicus Capricorni the second time, with a South-east wind, our course North-west, there we had the generall East and East South-east wind, and held our course North North-west to the fifteenth, till we were vnder eightene degrees, then we changed our course, and went West, and made our rowing Shallop readie, to vse it when we came neere any land.

The third of April being Easter day, we were vnder fifteene degrees twelue minutes, at which time we had no variation of Compasse, for the Needle stood right North and South, then the flux began much to trouble our men, for at times, halfe of them at the least had it.

Dogs Island
in 15. degrees
11. minutes,
92. leagues
from Pernu.

The tenth day we saw three leagues from vs a low Island, not very great, with great numbers of Sea-mewes and fish, and set our course to the Island thinking to haue some refreshing, whereof in regard of the flux we had great need, About noone we got to the Island, and cast out our Lead, but found no ground, and therefore put out our Shalop. About Euening they came aboard againe, and could get nothing, but onely some Greene Herbs, which tasted like vnto Holland Tuinkars, they said, that there they had leene three Dogs, that neither barkt, nor made any noyse, and in it found some places full of raine water, that had fallen that day.

The Island as we perceiued, seemed at high water for the most part to be ouer-flowne, it had nothing about it but a kind of wall like a Ditch, full of Greene Trees, pleasant to behold, and in the middle of them and else-where, much Salt-water. It is vnder fifteene degrees twelue minutes, distant from the Coast of Pernu, by our estimation nine hundred twentie and fve leagues. That quarter the wind was North, and we held our course West, towards the Islands of Salomon, and called that Island Dogs Island.

In the night it blew hard, with a great showre of raine.

Another Island.

The fourteenth the winde East and East South-east, we sayled West, and West and by North, with wind and weather aforesaid, and saw much fish, and many Birds: after noone we saw another low Island North-west from vs being very great, and reached North-east and South-west, whereat we reioyced, hoping to get water and some refreshing there, and made to it, holding our course North-west.

About Euening, being with our ship about a league from the Land, there came a Canoe to meet vs, with foure Indians in it, all naked, of a reddish colour, very blacke long haire: they kept a good way from our ship, first calling to vs, making signes to haue vs come on Land, but we vnderstood them not, nor they vs, notwithstanding that we answered and called to them in Spanish, Moluccu, Iauan, and our owne Netherland speech.

About Euening at Sunne-setting, we got to the land, but found no ground, nor no changing of water, although we were so neere to the shore, that with a Musket we might shoot into it, and therefore put to Sea againe, and the Canoe to land, where a great many Indians stood vpon the shore to watch for them: not long after againe there came another Canoe from the land to our ship, but would not (as the first) come aboard, they called to vs, and we to them, but vnderstood not one the other, at last their Canoe ouerthrew in the water, but they soone turned it vp againe, and leapt quickly into it, they shewed and pointed towards the land, and wee the like to them towards the ship, but they would not come, wherewith we held on our course and left the Island, sayling South and South-west to get about the land: the Island was not broad, but somewhat long, and full of Trees, which as we ghesed were Palmitas and Cocus Trees, it lyes vnder fifteene degrees fifteene minutes, hauing white sand ground: that night we saw fire vpon the land in diuers places.

The fifteene day in the Morning, hauing in the night sayled about ten leagues South South-west, we sayled close along by the land, where we saw many naked men standing on shore, calling and crying (as it seemed) to bid vs come on land, and then againe there came another Canoe, from the land towards our ship, with three Indians in it, which also called to vs, and would not come aboard, but rowed to the Shalop, and went close to it, our men shewing them all the friendship they could, giuing them some Beads and Kniues, but they vnderstood not one another hauing bene a little while by the Shalop, they left it, and came so neere to our ship, that we cast out a small Rope to them, which they tooke, but would not enter into the ship, but went into the Shalop, which came backe from the land without doing any thing, and hauing bene a good while in it, at the last one of them came into the Gallerie, and drew out the nayles of the windowes in the Marchants and Masters Cabines, and taking them away, hid them in his haire, they were desirous of Iron; for they ventured to pull out the bolts with their hands, and to carrie them away, we sought to keepe one of them in the ship, and to send one of ourmen with the other two in their Canoe to land, to make friendship with them but they would not. They were very theeuish people, all naked, only a piece of a Mat hanging before their priue Members. Their skinne was marked with diuers figures, as Snakes, Dragons, and such like things which

Louers of Iron,
as in the Ladrones.

which shewed very blew, as if they had beene burnt thereon with Gun-powder, we gaue them wine, as they sat in the Canoe, but they would not giue vs the Cup againe. Wee sent our Shalop once againe to the land, with eight Muskietiers, and sixe men with Swords. Claus Johnson our vnder Marchant, and Arice Clauson the Marchant of the Horne, went with them, to see what was to be gotten in the Iland, and to make friendship with them. But as soone as they were by the strand and the men went on shore, there came at least thirtie Indians out of the Wood, with great Clubs or Cudgels and would haue taken our mens armes from them and thought to draw the Shalop vpon the land, ventred to take two of our men out of the Shalop, thinking to carrie them into the Wood, but our Muskietiers, hauing their Muskets readie, discharged three of them 10 amongst them, and verily thought that they either killed or sore wounded some of them. They likewise had long staues, with very long sharpe things at the ends thereof, which (as we thought) were finnes of blacke fishes, they also cast stones with Slings, but (God bee thanked) hurt none of our men. Bowes they had not, as farre as we could see. Our men saw some of their women, that cryed and claspt their men about the neckes, but knew not what they meant, and thought they did it to get them from thence. That Iland (by reason we could there find no ground to anchor) we 20 called the Iland without ground. On the out side it was low plaine ground, full of Palme Trees, but within full of salt water. At last when we saw that there was nothing to be gotten, we determined to leaue it, and with an East wind held our course West to Sea-ward. There wee had slight water and no billowes as the day before wee had out of the South, and therefore wee ghest that South-ward there was more land: it is vnder fifteene degrees, about a hundred leagues distant from Dogs Iland.

Iland without ground.

The sixteenth day in the morning betimes, we saw another Iland, North-ward from vs, which we made to, but found it as the other, without anchor ground, within also being all drowned land, yet on the sides it was full of Trees, but no Palme nor Cocos Trees. Wee put out our Shalop to found the depth, but, going to the shore, found no ground, and therefore came aboard againe, without doing any thing, or seeing any men. We sent our Shalop once againe to see if we could get any refreshing or water vpon the land, who returning againe told vs that they had found fresh water not farre from the shore, in a Pit or Keele, which they might bring with Buckets to the strand, but hard to get into the ship, for the Shalop, by reason of the billowes, lay fast at a dreg, by which 30 meanes the men were forced, to draw one another with a Rope on land, and in like sort on boord againe, so that it was very troublesome and dangerous to goe on the land, and therefore fetcht but foure small fats of water. There also we found such herbes as we had in the Dogs Iland, whereof we brought a sackfull aboard, and some Crabs, as also some Shells and Hornes, that had fish in them of very good taste. That euening we held on our course West-ward, with an East-wind, and an indifferent gale, rainie weather and smooth water. The same day wee were vnder fourteene degrees, fortie sixe minutes. That Iland was fifteene leagues distant from the other, wee called it the water Iland, because there we got some water.

Water Iland.

The seuenteenth day we gaue our men six cups of water, and sod a great Kettle with Pottage, made of the greene herbes that we had in water Iland, which did our men some good, and ealed 40 them of their loosenesse.

The eighteenth day in the morning, we saw another low Iland South-west from vs, lying West
 North-west, and East South-East, as farre as we could see, at the least twentie leagues, distant from the other. We made to it, and being hard by it, sent out our Boate to found the depth, they told vs they found ground by a point of land, from whence there came a streame at twentie, fye, and fortie fathome, running softly downe, about a Musket shot from the land, whereupon we sent the Boat with our emptie Caske thither, hoping to find water, when it came to the land, they let the Schut lye fast at a Dreg in the water and drew one another with a Rope through the water, to land as they did before, there they sought a good way within a Wood for fresh water, but because they had no Armes with them, and saw a wild man, who as they thought had a Bow
 50 in his hand, they turned presently backe to the Shalop, and came aboard againe without doing any thing, and lying a good way from the shore, there came fye or sixe wilde men to the strand, who seeing that our men were gone, went backe againe into the Wood. Vpon that Iland there were great store of greene wilde trees, being also full of salt-water within. When our men came into the ship they were couered all ouer with Flyes, in such abundance that wee could not know them, their faces, hands, and Scute, all full, and the Oars also as farre as they were out of the water, were couered ouer with blacke Flyes, wonderfull to behold: those Flyes came with them aboard our ship, and fye so thicke vpon our bodie, and in our faces, that wee knew not how to shunne them, for we could hardly eate or drinke, but all was full of them: wee still wip't our faces and hands, and made flaps to kill as many as we could, this continued two or three dayes 60 with great trouble vnto vs all: at last we had a good gale of winde, whereby, and with continuall killing them, in the end when three or foure dayes were past we were rid of them: wee called that Iland, the Flye Iland, and therewith set forward from it, and had some raine, as also the next day, whereby we gathered so much water, with Clothes and Sailes, that it holpe vs well. In the night

Flye Iland.

night we made no great way, but oftentimes let the shippe driue, that wee might not by night fall vpon such low Islands, and spoyle our shippe.

The three and twentieth, we were vnder fifteene degrees, foure minutes, and then againe had great hollow billowes out of the South, which the next day also continued; the wind was North-east, and most part East, and East and by South. There they said, that Terra Australis which we sought for, lay yet two hundred and fiftie leagues further.

The five and twentieth, we filled foure vessels full of raine water, and still had hollow billowes out of the South, as we commonly haue in the Spanish Seas out of the North-west.

May.

The third of May the wind was still East South-east, and we sayled West, and at noone were vnder fifteene degrees, three minutes. That day we saw many great Dorados which were the first 10 that we had seene in the South Sea.

A strange
sayle.

The ninth, vve were vnder fifteene degrees, twenty minutes, and at that time as vve thought vvere 15 10. leagues distant from the coast of Pern and Chili. About noone vvee sawe a sayle, vvhich as vve guessed vvas a Barke, comming out of the South, and vvent North-vvard tovwards vs, vve presently made tovwards it, and as it came neere to vs, vve shot at it vvith one of our Pieces right ouer her, to make them strike, but they vvould not; then vve shot againe, but yet they vvould not strike, vvith that vve put out our Shalop vvith tenne Musketers in it, to take her, vvhich calling to them vve shot another Piece, yet vvithout any intent to reach or to hurt them, but they vvould not strike, but sought as vvell as they could to get avway from vs, and got to loofe-vvard of vs, but our Shalop beeing too craftie for them rovved to them, and bee- 20 ing about halfe a musket shot from them, shot foure Muskets one after another, as they drevve neere to her, and before they could reach her, some of her men in great feare leapt ouer-boord, vvhereof one of them had a little child, and another vvas hurt, and had three holes in his backe, but not very deepe, for it was haile shot, those we fetcht out of the water againe: they also threw much of their goods ouer-boord, and amongst the rest three Hennes, our men leapt into their ship and carried them into our ship, they not once resisting; for in truth they had no armes, when they were in our ship, we fetcht two men more that were left in theirs, which presently fell downe before vs, and kist our feet and hands, one of them was a very old man, the other a young man, we could not vnderstand them, but vsed them kindly, and presently the Shalop rowed to fetch those that leapt ouer-boord, to saue their liues, but they got but two of them, that droue vpon 30 one of their oares, and pointed to our men with their hands to the ground, as much to say, that the rest were drowned: one of those two that was hurt, whom we drest, had long yeallowish haire. In that shippe there was at least eight women, three young sucking children, and some of nine or tenne yeeres old, so that we made account they were three and twentie in all, cleane naked people, both men and women, onely something hanging before their priuy members. About euening we set the men on boord their ship againe, that were welcome to their wiues, which claspt them about the necks, and kissed them. We gaue them beades, (which they hung about their necks,) and some kniues, and shewed them all the friendship we could, and they the like to vs, giuing vs two fine Matiens, and two Cocos nuts, for they had not many: that was all they had to eate and drinke, and they had drunke out all the water out of the Nuttes, so that they had 40 no more drinke. Wee saw them drinke salt water out of the Sea, and gaue it also to their young children to drinke, which we thought to be against Nature. They had certaine cloathes which they ware before their priuy members, and therewith couered themselves against the heate of the Sunne, of a yeallowish colour. They were reddish people, that anoynted themselves with Oyle: the Women had short haire, like our men in Holland: Mens haire was long, curled, and very blacke: their ship was of a strange fashion. It was made of two long faire Canoas with a good space betweene them, in each Canca about the middle thereof, there lay two whole broad planckes of faire red wood, to keepe out the water, and diuers planckes laid crosse ouer, from the one Canoa to the other, which were made fast together, and hung a good way ouer on both endes, without the Canoas, very close aboue to keepe out the water, before at the ende of one of the Ca- 50 noas, on starre-boord, there stood a Mast, at the ende thereof hauing a Forke, whereon the yard lay. The Sayle was made of Mats, and as the wind blew they sayled, without Compasse, or any Instruments for the Sea, but hookes to fish withall, whereof the vpper part was stone, the other blacke bone, or Tortoyles shells, and some of them were mother of Pearle. Their ropes were very faire, and almost as thicke as a Cable, made of such stufte as the figge-frayles in Spaine are. When they sayled from vs, they held their course South-east.

Drinkers of Sea-water.

The manners and Canoes of the Negroes.

The tenth wee had the wind South South-east, and South-east and by South, and held our course West and South-west. In the morning after breake-fast, wee saw very high land on Lar-board, lying South-east and by South, about eight leagues from vs: wee made to it, and sayled all that day with a good gale, but could not reach it.

The eleuenth in the morning, wee were neere a high Island, and about two leagues South-ward from thence, another long low Island, that day wee sayled ouer a Banke of fourteene fathome deepe, stony ground, lying about two leagues from the land, and as soone as wee were ouer it, 60 wee wee could find no more ground. One of the shippes aforesaid came to vs : they also carrie a Canoe in their shippe, which what time soeuer, they can put out : and are very good Sea-men: Their ships were of the fashion aforesaid, with good sayles, and are so swift of sayle, that few ships in Holland can out sayle them. They steere behind with two Oares, on each Canoe a man, and sometimes row with their Oares before, when they will wind, the ship also windes of it selfe when they pull the Oares out of the water and let it goe, or alone with the wind, wee put out our Shalop to found, which came and told vs that they had found ground at fiftene, fourteene, and twelue fathomes, shelve ground, about a Canon shot from the land, wee presently made to it to Anchor, and tooke in our sayles. The Negroes seeing that, made signes to vs to goe to the other Island, and sayled thither before vs, but wee anchored at the end of the Island, at five and twentie fathome sandie ground, a great Canon shot from the land. That Island is a high hill, almost like one of the Moluccos Island, full of trees, most Cocos trees, therefore wee called it Cocos Island.

Cocos Island.

The other Island is much longer, but lower, lying East and West. As soone as wee were at an Anchor, there came three small ships, that sayled vp and downe about our shippe, and at least nine or tenne Canoes boarded vs, some from the land, and some out of the little shippes, among the which two of them put out little white Flags in signe of peace, and wee did the like. Their Canoes, which had three and foure men a peece in them, were flat before, and sharpe behind, hewed out of a whole peece of reed wood. Wherewith they could row exceeding swift, and when they came neere the ship, they leapt into the water, and swamme to our ship, with their hands full of Cocos nuts, and Vbes rootes, which they bartred with vs for nayles and beades, whereof they were verie desirous, they gaue foure or five Cocos nuts, for one nayle, or a small string of beades, so that the same day we bartered for an hundred eightie Cocos nuts, and at last there came so many on board, that we scarce knew how to bestirre our selues. Wee sent our Shalop towards the other Island, to see if there we could not lie better, for there we lay in the open Sea, but the Shalop was no sooner off from the ship, rowing along by the land, but it was inclosed round about by twelue or thirteene Canoes of the other Island, and still more came to them, the people within them shewing as if they were mad, hauing certaine staues of hard wood in their hands like clubbes, sharpe at the point, and a little burnt. They boarded our Shalop, and thought to haue taken it from vs, but our men being thereby constrained to defend themselves, let see three Muskets among them, wherewith first they laught and mockt, thinking it but a sport, but the third time one of them was shot into the breast cleane through his bodie, which his fellowes seeing went presently to helpe him, & finding him to be so sore hurt, all of them kept off from the Shalop, and went to one of their small ships with sayles, and calling to it, would haue had them to ouer row the Shalop, as we ghest, but they would not, for their Canoes had been aboard our ship, where they had bene well vsed, and friendly dealt withall. Those people were very theeuish. They were lustie men, well proportioned, and of great stature, and went all naked and vnarmed onely their priue members couered. Their haire was drest after diuers fashions, some short, and some finely curled, some had long haire bound vp in pleits in seuerall manner, they were notable swimmers. That Cocos Island lies vnder sixteene degrees, tenne minutes. The twelfth in the morning after breake-fast-time, there came more Canoes aboard our shippe, with Cocos nuttes, Bananas, Vbas rootes, and some little Hogges, and some vessels full of fresh water; that day wee bartered with them for one thousand two hundred Cocos nuts, wee were eightie five men aboard, and euery one had twelue nuts. They stroue who should get first aboard, and those that could not get to the ship, leapt out of their Canoes, and diued vnder the other Canoes, to get to the shippe to sell their ware, holding Vbas rootes, and bunches of Cocos nuts in their mouthes, and climed so many, and so fast vp to the shippe, that wee were forced to keepe them downe with staues. When they had sold their wares, they leapt out of the ship and swamme to their Canoes againe. They wondered at the greatnesse and strength of the shippe, and some of them crept downe behind at the rother, vnder the ship, and knockt with stones vpon the bottome thereof, to prooue how strong it was. There came a Canoe from the other Island, that brought vs a young blacke wilde hogge, which the King sent vs for a present, wee would haue giuen the messenger somewhat for it, but he would not take it, making signes that the King had charged him not to take any thing. At noone the King himselfe came in a great shippe with a sayle, of the fashion aforesaid, like an Ice Slead, with at least thirtie five Canoes to accompany him. This King was by his men called Laton, wee receiued him with Drummes and Trumpets, wherewith they wondred, because they neuer had seene nor heard the like before. They shewed vs great honour and much friendship outwardly, with bowing their heads, clapping their fists together ouer their heads, and other strange Ceremonies. When he was a little way from vs, hee began to call and to crie out aloud, as if hee had prayed after his manner, all the rest of his men did the like, wee not knowing what it meant, but ghest that it was in stead of a welcome.

Theeuish people.

Presently thereupon the King sent vs a Matien by three of his men, to whom wee gaue an old hatchet, a few beades, some old nayles, and a peece of linnen cloth, which hee willingly receiued, laying it three times vpon his head, and bowing it, in token of reuerence or thankes and curtelie. Those that came into our ship, fell on their knees, and kist our feet, and wondred much at our shippe. We could not know the King from the other Indians, for he was likewise cleane naked, but onely that they shewed him reuerencee, and he commanded ouer his men. We made signes that the King should come aboard of our Shippe: his sonne came aboard, and we entertained him well, but he himselfe durst not or would not come, but they altogether made signes to haue vs come to the further Island, with our Shippe, where there was enough of all things to be had. Among other things, we bartered with them for angles of haire, that were made of reede, as in Holland, but somewhat thicker, with hookes of mother of Pearle. The Kings sonne went to land againe, and the Canoa wherein he went had a great piece of wood on lar-boord, where- with it kept vpnight, vpon that piece of wood their angle lay, readie to take fish. 10

The thirteenth in the morning, there came at least fortie fise Canoas aboard, to traffique with vs, with an Armado of three and twenty small shippes, made like Ice-leads, each of them one with an other, hauing fise and twentie men a piece in them, and euery small Canoa foure or fise, we not knowing what their intent was. The Canoas dealt with vs, bartering Cocos nuttes for nayles, and made show, as if they were our great friends, but afterward we found it otherwise: all of them made signes to vs to sayle to the other Island: the King who the day before had been at our Shippe, came likewise in his ship with a saile to our shippe, and all of them made a great noyse. We would gladly haue had him aboard, but he would not; wherewith wee suspected treason, fearing some mischiefe, and the rather, because all the Shippes and Canoas kept close round about our ship, and that the King went out of his ship into a Canoa, and his sonne into an other, and presently they stroke vpon a kind of drumme that was in his shippe, whereat all the Indians began to crie out aloud, which we esteemed to be a warning giuen vnto them, altogether to fall vpon vs, to take our shippe from vs, and then the ship wherein the King sayled before he went out of it, boorded vs, comming so hard vpon vs, as if it would haue sunke vs: but it stricke against our shippe with such a force, that the two heads of the Canoas before brake in pieces; wherewith the men that were in it, (among them hauing some women) leapt into the water, and swam to windward; the rest beganne to sling great number of stones at vs, thinking therewith to feare vs, but we shot at them with Muskets, and three great pieces (laden with Musket shot, and old nayles) wherewith all they that were in the shippe and Canoas that lay about our ship, leapt into the water. We made reckoning that some of them had forgotten the way to goe home againe, and that diuers of them also were sore wounded, and therewith they went backe: they knew not what such manner of shooting meant, but yet when they saw how we had handled them with our shot, they kept aloofe out of the reach of our Pieces, and we hoy- sing anchor, set forward againe on our Voyage, holding our course West, and West and by South. We were of opinion, that the King at that time had assembled all his forces, for he had at the least a thousand men, or rather more: among them we saw one that was cleane white. 20

When we were about foure leagues off from the Islands, many of our men would haue had vs goe backe againe to the Islands by force, to goe on land, to refresh our selues, in regard that we had but little water, but the Master and the Marchant would not. The first Island that was so high, we named Cocos Island; and the other that lay a league distant from it, we called Traitors Island, because the most part of the Indians that sought to betray vs, came from that Island. 40

Traitors Island.

Hope Island.

The foureteenth in the morning, we saw another Island right before vs, about seuen leagues distant from vs, which seemed to be round, and as we ghesst was thirty leagues distant from the Islands aforesaid. That Island we called the Hope, and made towards it, hoping there to get water, and better refreshing; but comming to it, could find no ground, and therefore put out our Shalop to sound a long the shore, which about a Musket shot from the land, found ground at forty fathome, small blacke and soft stony ground, sometimes also they had twenty and thirty fathomes, but as soone as they were a Shalops length or two from it, they had no ground againe. Then tenne or twelue Canoas came to our Shippe, but we would not let them come aboard, but shewed them friendly countenance, and bartered with them for foure flying fishes, for the which we gaue them some beades, which we let downe by a rope at the sterne of the Shippe, and they taking them, tyed the fishes to the rope, and we puld them vp: in the meane time our Shalop sounded along by the Land, which they in the Canoas seeing, presently made towards it, and beeing close by it, at first spake vnto the men, but withall compassed them about with foureteene Canoas; and therewith some of them leapt ouer-boord, thinking to fall vpon the Shalop, or to draw it away with them; which our men perceiuing, shot with their muskets among them (there beeing fixe Muskets, and other armes, Courtelasses and Pikes in the Shalop) and therewith killed two of the Indians as they sate in their Canoas, where of one presently fell dead ouer-boord, the other sate still with his hand wiping off the blood vpon his breast, but at last fell likewise ouer-boord: the rest in the Canoas, were thereat in so great feare, that in all haste they made away, at which time we saw many men standing vpon the shore, that cryed and made a great noyse. But for that we there could finde no fit anchoring ground, we tooke our Shalop in againe, and went forward on our Voyage, holding our course South-west, the better to get to the South, hoping there to finde firme land. And it was so rough neere to the Island, that it was a very badde place 60 place for a Boat to goe on shore. The Iland was all full of blacke Clifles, greene on the top, and blacke earth, and was full of Cocos Trees, and greene herbes. Wee also saw many houles along by the Sea-side, and close by the strand there was a great Village, the land was hilly, but not very high.

The eighteenth, being vnder sixteene degrees, five minutes, wee had variable West windes, that day we cald our Councell together, to whom William Cornelison Schouten our Master shewed, that then we were at the least one thousand six hundred leagues East-ward from the Coast of Peru, and Chili, and had not discovered any part of Terra Australis, as our intent was; that there was not any appearance to discover any thing to our contentments; that we also had sayled further West-ward, then we intended; that sayling forward in that manner, without all doubt we should fall South-ward vpon Nova Guinea, and that if there we should find no passage or way to get through (it being very dangerous, vncertaine and not knowne) that then both ship and goods would be lost, and we our selues likewise should perish, it being vnpossible to come East-ward backe againe from thence, by reason of the stedfast East-winds, that in the West parts continually blow; that we also had but small store of victuals, and saw no meanes as yet to increase them; and therefore asked their counsell, whether it was not their best way to alter their course, and to saile North-ward, thereby to get North-ward to Nova Guinea, and so to the Molucces, which they considering of, and well weighing, found his reasons to be true, and thought it necessarie to be done, and therefore all with one consent agreed to saile North-ward, not to fall South-ward vpon Nova Guinea, being an vncertaine way, but rather North-ward, to hold a certaine course: which was presently put in effect, and we set our course North North-west.

The nineteenth, the wind South, and our course North, at noone wee saw two Ilands, North-East and by East, about eight leagues from vs, which seemed to lye about a Canon shot distant one from the other. Then we went North-East, to saile about the land, with faire weather, but no great gale.

The twentieth, the wind was North-East, and wee did the best by labouring to get to the land.

The one and twentieth, the wind was East, with a small gale: and when wee were about a league from the land, there came twentie Canoes to our ship, to whom wee shewed all signes of friendship, but one of them with a wooden Affagay (sharpe at the point) in his hand, threatened to shoot at one of our men, and cryed aloud, as they did in the other Iland, which we thought was a signe among them, to fall vpon vs, whereupon we discharged two of our great Peeeces, and therewithall some of our Muskets, whereby two of them were hurt, and the rest presently made away, as they fled throwing a shirt over-board, which they had stolne out of our Gallerie.

The two and twentieth day there came diuers Canoes to our ship, bringing some Cocos Nuts, and Vbas Roots; others brought a liue Hog, and two rosted Hogs, for the which we bartered, and gaue them slight Kniues, Beades, and Nailes. Those people also were theeuish, and would swim and dwe exceeding well, as those in the other Ilands could doe, their houses stood along the strand, which were round and made of leaues sharpe on the top and close like a paint-house, to let the water fall downe, about five and twentie foot in Compasse, and ten or twelue foot high, with a low hole to go in stooping: in them there was nothing to be seene, but some dried herbs, like hay, to sleepe vpon, and an Angling Rod or two, and in some a wooden club or staffe, that was all their house-hold stuffe, the both best and worser sort, for the King himselfe had no more. Here wee found a conuenient watering place.

The foure and twentieth day, Aris Clauson, Reymie Simonson Snocke, and Cornelison Schouten went on land to be Hostages, to make friendship with the Indians, and for them wee had fixe of their principall men in our ship, whom wee vsed friendly, giuing them meate and drinke, and some presents, as they did to our men, giuing them Cocos, and Vbas Rootes to eate, and water to drinke. The King shewed our men great reuerence, and gaue them foure little Hogs: that day our men fetcht five fatts full of water peaceably without quarrelling, for when any of the Indians came neere our Boat, the King himselfe came thither and draue them thence, or sent one of his men to doe it. His men were very obedient vnto him: for as it chanced that one of our Courtelasses was stolne away from vs, and we told one of the King's Gentlemen thereof, hee gaue some of the Indians charge to fetch it againe, and presently hee that had taken it, was fought for, and although he was gone a good way of, they brought him backe; who being come, the Courtelasse was laid downe at our feet, and hee was beaten with staues, they making signes vnto vs with their fingers vpon their throats, that if the Herico (that is the King) knew of it, his head should be cut off: and after that, we had nothing stolne from vs, neither on the shore, nor in the ship, nor else-where: neither durst they take a fish that we angled for. Those people were very fearefull of our shooting, for when we shot off a Musket, they all ranne quaking and shiuering away, and we put them in more feare, when we shewed them that we could shoot with the great Peeeces, which the King desired vs once to do; which being done, they were all so fearefull and abasht thereat, that all of them, as also the King, (sitting vnder his Belay, or Canopie, notwithstanding all that we could say or doe to perswade thew,) fore amazed ranne into the Woods, and left our men sitting there alone. But not long after they came againe, scarce halfe well assured.

The five and twentieth day, Aris Clawson, Claus Johnson, and Daniel le Maire, went on land againe, to barter for hogs, but they would not barter. But after the King had said his Prayers, (which he vsed to doe every time that we went on shore,) shewed vs great friendship, and we the like to him.

The six and twentieth day, Jacob le Maire our Marchant and Aris Clawson went on shore but could get no Hogs of the Indians, because they themselves had great need of them, hauing little else to eate but Vbas Roots, Cocos Nuts, a few Hogs, and some Bananas: our men were very welcome vnto them, and had great reuerence shewed them, for they trod vpon Mats, and the King and his Lieutenant gaue them their Crownes, which they tooke off from their owne heads, and set them on their heads, in recompence whereof, Jacob le Maire gaue them some presents of little worth, wherewith they were very well pleased.

Crowns made of Feathers.

The Crownes were made of long small white Feathers and vnderneath and aboue mixt with some red, and greene Feathers, for they haue many Parrots, and some Doues, whereof they make great account: for every one of the Kings Councill had a Doue by him sitting vpon a sticke, those Doues are white on their backes, and all the rest blacke sauing their brefts, which are reddish: all that day we fetcht water, and bartered for good store of Cocos Nuts, and Vbas Roots.

The seuen and twentieth, and eight and twentieth dayes, we got all our water into the ship, then William Cornelison Schouten our Master, and Aris Clawson went on land with the Trumpets, which the Kings tooke great pleasure to heare, and with much adoe got two Hogs.

The Kings Lieutenant putting a string about his feet, or his hands, climed quickly vp a smooth high Tree, and in a trice fetched down ten Cocos Nuts, which at one crush with a stick or a piece of wood, he so soone opened, that our men wondred to see it. They told vs that they alwayes had warre with the men of the other Iland, and shewed vs many Holes and Caues in the Hill, and Bushes and Groues in the way, from whence they issued out, and spoiled and killed each other: and would gladly haue had vs goe with our ship, to the other Iland to helpe them there, to fight against those Indians with our Peeces, but it being no profit vnto vs, we refused it.

They were in great feare of vs, (although we shewed them all the friendship we could,) and doubted that wee would take their Countrey from them. The King promised vs that if wee would goe thence in two dayes, he would giue vs ten Hogs, and a great number of Cocos Nuts, which they called Ali.

When he entred into the ship, he fell downe vpon his face, and prayed, then we led him into the hold, and there againe he prayed, he wondred much at that hee saw, as wee also did at his behauiour: his men kist our feet, and tooke them in their hands, and laid them on their heads and their neckes, in signe of submission.

In the Euening by Moone-shine, Aris Clawson went out to fish, and hauing taken a great shole of fish, went to the King; there he found a number of yong Wenches dancing before him, one played on a hollow piece of wood like a Pumpe, which made a noyse, whereat the yong Wenches danced after their manner, very finely, and with a good grace, according to the measure of the noyse of the Instrument.

The thirtieth day in the morning, the King sent vs two little Hogs for a Present: the same day, the King of the other Iland came to see the King of that Iland, and with him brought sixteene Hogs, and three hundred men in his Companie, all of them hauing certaine greene herbes hanging about their midles, whereof they make their drinke. When the King was neere vnto the other King, he began as farre off with strange Ceremonies and Reuerence to bow downe his bodie, falling with his face vpon the ground, and praying with a great noyse, and much zeale, as we thought. The other King went to meet him, and likewise with a great noyse and strange gestures, vsed him very reuerently, and after much adoe, they both rose vp on their feet, and went and late together vnder the Kings Belay, and there were assembled together at least nine hundred men. When they went to sit downe they prayed againe, according to their manner, hanging downe their heads, and bowing downe to the ground, holding their hands one in another, which we admired. After noone, Aris Clawson being on shore, Jacob le Maire, Claus Johnson Ban, were sent for, who went a shore, with foure Trumpets and a Drumme, to the two Kings, there the Trumpets blew, and the Drumme played before them, wherein they tooke great pleasure: after that came a companie of Pefants, bringing with them a quantitie of greene herbes, which they called Cana, such as the three hundred men aforesaid had about their middles, and all together at once began to chaw the herbes in their mouthes, which being chawd they tooke it out of their mouthes, and laid it all in a wooden vessell, like a Tray, or Trough, and when they had chawd a great deale, they powred water into it, and so stirred and prest it together, and gaue the liquor thereof to the Kings to drinke, who dranke thereof with their Gentlemen: they also presented that notable Drinke (as a speciall and a goodly Present) to our men, but they had enough, and more then enough of the sight thereof. They also brought a great number of Vbas Rootes, which they had roasted, and sixteene Hogs that were onely ript, and the guts taken out, but Homely drink.

but all bloody, and not washt, and hauing certaine hot stones put into their bellies, and outwardly their haire singed off by the fire, were wel roasted after their manner, and they eat them as sauourly and with as good an appetite, as we could do when they are well sodden or roasted after our manner. Those people yeeld great reuerence and respect vnto their Kings, for all the meate which they brought before their King, (who in their Language they call Herico) they laid it vpon their heads, and kneeling on their knees, set it downe before the King. Of those sixteene Hogs aforesaid, each King gaue vs one, presenting vs therewith in this sort, first they laid them vpon their heads, and kneeling laid them with great humilitie at our feet, and with them gaue vs eleuen little liue Hogs, and some indifferent great. And wee gaue them three Copper Beakers, foure

10 Knives, twelue old Nayles and some Beades, wherewith they were well pleased.

Those people were men of good vnderstanding, and of great stature, for the least man of them was as big as the tallest of vs, and the tallest of them was farre higher then any of vs, they were strong men, and well proportioned of bodie and limbes, they went very fast, and swamme and dined vnder the water excellent well, their colour was altogether browne yellow, they were very curious in the dressing and trimming of their haire, some had it curled, some frizled, some wore it bound vp in long folds, foure, fve, or six, together, as our women doe in Haire-laces, and some (which was strange to see) had their haire standing vpright vpon their heads, about a quarter of an elle long like Hogs bristles. The King had a long Locke of haire on the left side of his head, that hung downe beneath his hips, bound vp with a knot or two. His Gentlemen had two such

20 Lockes, on each side of their heads one, they went naked all alike both men and women, onely some little thing handsomely tyed before their priuie members. The women were very vnslightly both in face and bodie, of small stature, Their haire cut close to their heads, as our mens in Holland, their breasts long hanging downe to their bellies like lether Satchels. They are very lecherous, for they suffer themselues to be vsed by their men openly in all mens sight, and in the Kings owne presence, only vnder a Mat. We could not perceiue that they worshipped God, or any Gods, or vsed any deuotion, neither the one nor the other, but liued without care, like Birds in the Wood. They had no skill of buying or selling, but with flags they deliuered vs some-what, and we in like sort to them againe. They neither sowe, nor reape, nor doe any

30 worke, There the Earth of it selfe yeelds all that they need to sustaine their liues: as Cocos, Vbas, Bananas, and such like fruit. When the water falls, The women looke vpon the shore on the Sea side for fishes, and when they will, they take them with their Hooke, and eate them raw, so that there men may plainly behold and see the golden World, whereof the Poets write. When we left that Island, we called it Horne Island, after the name of the Towne from whence we came, and the Bay wherein we anchored, the Unities Bay, after our ships name: that day for the most part, we were busie to get out, and to hoys vp our Anchors, one of our Cables was fretted in peeces with the sharpnesse of the ground where it lay, so we lost that Anchor, and the Cable fretting vpon a Cliffe, brake as we wound it vp and lost that Anchor also. This Bay lyes on the South side of the land, in a Docke vnder fourteene degrees fiftie six minutes. We departed the first of Iune; the one and twentieth we made towards land which we saw very low and go-

40 ing neere vnto it, found many sands which stretch North-west of from the land, there were three or foure Islands, all very small but full of Trees. There a Canoe boarded vs, being of the same fashon as afore, but somewhat greater, able to hold fve or sixe men. The men in all respects as the former, and spake the same Language, but somewhat blacker hauing some thing before their priuie members. Their armes were Bowes and Arrowes, which were the first Bowes that we saw among the Indians in the South Sea, we gaue them some Beades and Nayles, but they pointed towards the West to tell vs that there was more land, where their King dwelt, and many things to be had. Therefore we held our course West-ward againe, finding no fit place to anchor in. This Island lay South South-west, and West from vs, vnder foure degrees, fortie seuen minutes.

50 The two and twentieth the wind East South-East, we sayled West, and West and by North, vnder foure degrees, fortie fve minutes, that quarter we had a good gale of wind, and faire weather, and that day saw at least twelue or thirteene Islands, one close by another, West South West from vs, reaching South-East, and North-west about halfe a league, but sayled along by them, leauing them on Lar-boord.

The foure and twentieth the wind South, at noone we saw land on Lar-boord, being three low Islands, that lay South-west from vs, very greene and full of Trees, two of them were two miles long a piece, the third very little: the shore was hard cliffe ground, there likewise wee could find no anchoring: we called them the Greene Islands. We also saw a high Island that had seuen or eight houels forth right, lying West and by North from vs, in the night wee held off and 60 on, staying till day.

The fve and twentieth in the morning, as we were all sailing by the aforesaid Island, we saw otherland before vs, in the South-west, which was exceeding high, which wee thought to bee the point of Noua Guinea, we made towards it, leauing the other high Island that lay Westward, which we called Saint Johns Island, because it was Saint Iohn Baptists day. About noone

It is likely they haue some Religion by the Images, which M. Candish saw in other Islands of the Ladrones, and by the prayers before mentioned. Horne Island.

Iune.

S. Johns Island.

we got to it, and sailed along by it with an East South-East wind, but could find no anchor ground, we sent out our Shalop to sound the depth, and went along by the shore betweene the Ship and it, and being somewhat neere the shoare, there came two or three Canoas to it, with blacke Indians in them all naked, without any thing before their members, which fiercely cast stones at our men with slings, but as soone as our men began to shoote at them they fled away. The Shalop came on board againe, without finding any ground, telling vs that the peoples language was cleane contrary to the former. Wee sayled along by the coast, vvvhich vvvas verie high and greene, pleasant to behold where vve savv much land as it had beene houses; at euening vve got about the point into a Bay, there vvee anchored at fve and fortie fathome, vnfit and vneuen ground. The same euening there came two Canoas to the Ship, and spake to vs, but vvee vnderstood them not all that night they held vvatch against vs, vvwith fire all along their coast: vve lay about a Cannon-shot distant from the shoare, against a running riuier: that night it was very still calme moone-shine vveather, the vvind on the land, there came some Canoas close vnder the Gallery of our Ship, from vvhen vve threw them some beades, shewing them all the friendship wee could, vvwithall making signes vnto them, to bring vs some Cocos nuttes, hogges, oxen or goates, if they had any, but they stayed still most part of the night by vs, crying and hollovving after their manner. They vvvere vvild, blacke, and rude men. This land as vve ghest, lay distant from the coast of Pern, one thousand eight hundred fortie leagues.

The fixe and twentieth in the morning, there came eight Canoas about our Shippe, whereof one had eleuen men in it, the others foure, fve, fixe and seuen men. They rowed close about our shippe, and were well furnished with armes after their manner, as Assagayes or Clubs, wooden Swords and Slings, we shewed them what friendship wee could, and gaue them Beades and other trash, making signes to them to goe on shoare to fetch vs Hogges, Hennes, Cocos nuttes, and other fruit, such as they had, but they had another meaning, and altogether began fiercely to Sling with their Slings and other weapons, thinking to master vs, but wee standing vpon our guard, shot with our Muskets and great shot amongst them, and slew at least tenne or twelue of them. They left the great Canoa, and three other, and leaping into the Sea swamme to land: we put out our Shalop, and rowed it among those that swamme away, and slaying some of them, brought three of them prisoners into our shippe, that were sore wounded, and foure of their Canoas, which we hewed in peeces, to make fire for the Cooke. The hurt men were cured, but one of them died, about noone our men rowed with the two wounded men to the land, along the shore: thre the prisoners cryed to their fellowes to bring vs Hogs, Bananas and Cocos nuttes, where-with one Canoa came aboard, that brought a little Hog, and a bunch of Bananas, wee set one of the men at tenne Hogs ranfome, the other that was sore hurt, wee let goe in the Canoa, because we doubted he would not liue, those men had two holes bored in their noses, on either side one, wherein they ware rings, strange to behold. There wee saw another Island lying North from that great Island.

The seuen and twentieth, wee fild our emptie vessels full of water, and that day wee got a Hog from the land, and there saw diuers red Birds.

The eight and twentieth, there came certaine Canoas aboard our Shippe, but brought nothing with them, neither would they ranfome their man, therefore wee let him goe on shore againe. We thought those people to bee Papoos, for all their haire was short, and they eate Betell and Chalke mingled with it, that night wee hoyfied Anchor, and set sayle, with a small gale of wind.

The nine and twentieth, the wind was variable, and our course was North-west, and North-west and by North, with faire weather till noone, then it calm'd. At euening wee were still in the sight of the Point of the Island, and yet we sayled along by the land, which reached North-west, and North and by West, with many Bayes and Crookes. The same day we saw three high Islands more, that lay North-ward from the great Island, about fve or fixe miles. Then we were vnder three degrees, twentie minutes.

The thirtieth in the morning, driuing in a calme, diuers Canoas, with blacke Indians came aboard our Ship, who in signe of peace, as they entred, brake their Assagayes ouer their heads: they brought vs nothing, but desired something of vs. They seemed to be better and friendlier people then the other, for they couered their priue members with leaues, and had better kind of Canoas, set out before and behind with some carued workes; they are very proud of their beades, which they paint with chalke, and the haire of their heads also. Vpon the three or foure Islands, from whence those Canoas came, there was great store of Cocos trees.

July.

The first of Iuly in the morning, we anchored betweene an Island of two miles long, and the firme land of Guinea: about noone there came twentie fve Canoas toward our Ship, with many men well armed: being the same people, who the day before brake their Assagayes ouer their heads, and made a friendly shew vnto vs, but with intent to abuse vs, as after it appeared, who seeing vs to lie in a calme, thought to take our Ship from vs. We had two Anchors hanging out before at the bough, a little puld vp, whereon they sate, on each Anchor a man, with a Pin-gay or Girdle in their hands, wherewith they vse to hold or draw forth their Canoas, and so thought thought to draw the Ship to shore: the rest hung fast vpon the ship, wee still standing vpon our guard: at last, they began fiercely to throw at vs with stones and other weapons, and thereby hurt one of our men, being the first that was hurt in all our voyage, but wee shot among them with our Muskets, and with our vpper tyre of Ordnance, and kild at least twelue or thirteene of them, and hurt many more: and while they fled away, our men rowed with the Shalop, (well armed) after them, and tooke one prisoner, being a young man about eightene yeeres old, whom we named Moses, after our mans name that was hurt. Those people eate bread made of rootes of trees. After this fight we sayled all along by the land, with a good gale, West North-west, and North-west and by West.

- 10 The second, wee were vnder three degrees, twelue minutes, and that day saw low-land on Lar-boord, and also a great high hill, and right before vs a low Island, wee sayled softly West North-west, with slight water East North-east.

The third, we saw high land againe, West from vs, about fourteene leagues from the other Island, vnder two degrees and fortie minutes.

The fourth, as we were busied to passe by the aforesaid foure Islands, we saw at least twentie two or twentie three others, great and small, high and low, which we left on Star-brood, onely Many Islands, two or three on Lar-boord. They lay close one by the other, some a league, or a league and a halfe, and some more then a Cannon shot, distant one from another, vnder two degrees twentie five or thirtie minutes little more or lesse.

- 20 The sixth, sometimes we had a hard wind, and sometimes calme with raine, lightening and thunder, and before noone saw a very high hill, being South-west from vs which we sayled vnto: our Master was of opinion that it was Banda, by reason it was very like to the hill called Geomenapi in Banda, and very like for height, but going neere vnto it, wee might see two or three hills more like vnto it, that lay on the North side of the first hill, about fixe or seuen leagues distant, whereby we knew that it was not so. Behind that hill, we saw very much land, east and Westward, which was so long, that on either side wee could not see an end thereof, sometimes high, and then low, reaching East South-east, whereby wee ghest it to bee Noua Guinea, and for that night came vpon vs wee held off from it.

- 30 The seventh in the morning, before day we wound againe towards the high hils, which was a burning Island, casting fire and flame from the top thereof, and therefore we called it Vulcans Island, the wind then was South-west with faire weather. This Island was well inhabited, and had many Cocos trees in it, the people came with some Canoas to our Ship, but were very fearefull of vs: they called vnto vs, but wee vnderstood them not, neither could our blacke Moores tell what they said: they were all naked, onely their priue members couered, their haire some short, some long. There we found no ground, and so could not anchor. In the North and North-west we saw more Islands, at which time wee went North-west and by West to a low Island that we saw before vs, which in the euening we got vnto. Then we took in our sayles, and let the Ship driue. There we found diuers colours of water, greene, white and yellow, which wee ghest to be water coming out of riuers, for it was sweeter then the Sea-water. There many trees,

- 40 leaues, and boughs draue in the water, whereon some Birds and Crabs fate.

- The eighth, the wind beeing variable, we held our course West South-west, and West North-west, with faire weather, and a reasonable gale of wind, hauing on Starre-boord a high, and on Lar-boord a low Island, reasonable high, we made toward the land, which about Euening we got vnto, and found good sandy ground at seuentie fathome deepe, about a Cannon shot from the land. There certaine Canoas came to vs, with a kind of ill-fauoured people, all Papoos, their haire short, and curled, hauing Rings in their noses & eares, and strings about their heads or armes, and Hogs teeth hanging about their neckes, for an ornament. They also eate Betel, and were all defectiue persons, some great legs, others swolne armes, and so forth; whereby it is to bee thought, that thereabout it is vnwholesome land, and the rather, because their houses stood vpon

- 50 stakes, about eight or nine foote from the ground, there wee had three degrees fortie three minutes, and found a little shew of Ginger.

The ninth in the Morning, lying at Anchor, our Shalop rowed to looke for a fit place to anchor the shippe in, and returning told vs, that they had found a fit Bay, where vnto wee went, and anchored at twentie fixe fathome good sandy ground mixt with clay. There about stood two small Villages, from whence there came many Canoas aboard our Ship, that brought a few Cocos nuts, but they esteemed them very deare, for foure nuts asking a fathome of linnen cloth, whereof they were very desirous. They also had some Hogges, which they held at a deerer rate, and what neede soeuer we said we had thereof and made signes to them to bring vs some, they would not doe it. That day euery man in our Ship had allowance of five pound of bread, and

- 60 a measure and a halfe of oyle a weeke, a cup and a halfe of Sacke a day, and a Niperkin of Aquavita, all our Pottage, as Pease, Beanes, Gurts, and our Flesh, Bacon, and Fish beeing spent, and we knew not where we were, beeing vncertaine whether we were far or neere to the Indian Islands, as also what place we were in, though we sayled continually by the land, not knowing whether it was Noua Guinea or no: we onely ghest at it, for all the Cardes that we had did not agree,

agree, nor were like to the land that we saw. That land for the most part reacheth North-west and by West, sometimes some what more Westerly, and sometimes againe more Northerly. The twelfth, we sayled still West North-west, along by the Coast with faire weather, and without Sunne-shine, at noone beeing vnder two degrees fiftie eight minutes, with helpe of the streame, that set vs about the West, as it did all along the Coast of Nova Guinea.

The thirteenth and foureteenth, we sayled along by the afore-said Coast, sometime by high and then by low land. The fifteenth, we had the wind, and held our course as afore-said, along by the Coast, with good weather, after noone we came to two low inhabited Islands, about halfe a league from the maine land, which stood full of Cocos trees. We made towards them, and there found good anchor ground, at forty, thirty, twentie five, and twenty, to sixe and five fathome deepe, and there anchored at thirteene fathome good ground. The Master rowed with the Boate and the Shalop well armed, to the land, thinking to get some Cocos nuts, which there were vpon the land in great abundance: but going on shore, the Indians lay in ambush right against the place where we came to land, and watching for vs, shot so fiercely at vs with their Bowes, that they hurt at least sixteene of our men, some in the arme, others in the legge, necke, and hands, and other places. And we shot at them with Muskets and Slings, but at last by reason that the Indians shot so thicke, we were forced to retire, there we were vnder two degrees fiftie foure minutes.

The sixteenth in the morning, we sailed in with our Ship betweene both the Islands, and anchored at nine fathome, where we had good lying, after noone our Boat and Shalop rowed to the lesser Island, to fetch some Cocos, and burnt two or three of the Indians houses: about Euening our men came aboard againe, and brought so many Cocos nuts, that euery one of vs had three nuts for his part. Those people are cleane naked, their priue members and all.

The seuenteenth in the morning, there came two or three Canoas towards our shippe, and threw Cocos nuts into the water, making signes to vs to fetch them, whereby they sought to be friends with vs. We made signes to them to come aboard, at last taking better courage, they came close to the Shippe, and brought vs as many Cocos nuts, and Bananas as we desired, which we drew vp by ropes into the gallery, giuing them old nayles, rustie kniues, and beads in barter; they also brought vs a little greene Ginger, and yellow Rootes, which are vsed in stead of Saffron, bartered also with vs some of their Bowes and Arrowes, so that at last wee were great friends with them.

The eighteenth, wee bartered still for Cocos nuts and Bananas, and some Cassaue and Papede, which is also to be had in East India. There we saw some Iarres or earthen pots, which as we thought came from the Spaniards. Those people were not so inquisitiue to looke into our ship as others were; for they knew what shooting with great Pieces meant, and called the Island wherein they dwelt Moa, which lay most Easterly, the other ouer against it they called Inson, and the vttermost (beeing a very high Island) lying about five or sixe leagues from Nova Guinea, they named Arimoa. We bought as many Cocos nuts and Bananas as we desired, so that euery man had fiftie nuts, and two bunches of Bananas. Those people vse Cassaue for their bread, but it is nothing like to that of the West Indies, they bake it also in round cakes.

The twentieth in the morning we set sayle, after we had againe bartered for more victualls, they made signes to vs to lie still, and they would bring vs more.

The one and twentieth, we sayled along by the land West North-west, and at noone were vnder one degree thirteene minutes. Then we saw a number of Islands, whereunto the streame draue vs, and about noone we got to them, and anchored at thirteene fathome. That euening we had much raine, thunder, and lightning.

The three and twentieth in the morning we set sayle, with good weather and a good gale, and beeing a little from the land, sixe great Canoas followed vs, (and yet wee saw no men on land) bringing dried fish, (which wee tooke to be Steenbrasses,) Cocos nuts, Bananas, Tabacco, and some small fruits like Prunes. There also came some Indians from an other Island that brought vs some Victualls, that also had some China porcelaine, for we bartered for two dishes, whereby we were perswaded that many Christian shippes had been there, for they wondered not, as others did, at our shippe. They were another kind of people then the former, of a yellower colour, and greater of body; some of them had long haire, some short, and also vsed Bowes and Arrowes, whereof wee had some in barter. They were very desirous of beads, and iron-worke, and had greene, blew, and white glasse rings, sticking in their eares: which we ghesst they had from the Spaniards.

The foure and twentieth we were vnder halfe a degree, with a little gale, and sayled North-west, West and South-west, along by a faire great Island, very greene and pleasant to behold, which we called William Schoutens Island, after our Masters name, and the West point thereof, the Cape of Good Hope.

The five and twentieth, we saw much land on Larboord lying South South-west from vs, some very high, and some very low. The seuen and twentieth we saw three Islands more, the Coast reacht North-west and by West.

Moa Island.
Inson
Arimoa.
Cassaue.

Schoutens Island.

The

The seven and twentieth, we were vnder nine and twentie minutes South-ward of the line, and saw much land South-ward from vs, some high, and some very low, and past West North-west along by it.

The eight and twentieth and nine and twentieth the weather was variable, that night wee had an Earthquake, which made our men for feare to runne out of their cabbins, our Shippe seeming as if it stroke against the ground, but we cast out our lead, and found no ground. An Earth-quake.

The thirtieth, we sayled in a great Bay or hollow place, so that we seemed to be round about inclosed with the land; wee did our best to find an opening, but could not, and therefore sayled North-ward againe: that day it thundred and lightened so sore, that our Shippe shooke therewith, and sometime seemed to be on a light fire, wherewith we were in no small feare, and after it ensued so great a shower of raine that we neuer had seene the like before.

The one and thirtieth we perceiued that we were entred into a place where wee had the land round about vs, therefore we held our course North, and that Euening past the Equinoctiall line the second time, and heeing closed by the land, anchored at twelue fathome good ground, about a Cannon shot from an Island, that lay close by the firme land, but there we saw no men nor any thing growing.

The first of August, wee hoysed anchor with great labour, for it lay vnder a Cliffe, but at last we got it vp, we were then fifteene minutes North-ward of the line, in the Euening with the hard streame, we went close to the land, and by reason it was calme, anchored in vneuen ground, and not deepe. August.

The second it was very calme, and we draue with the streame West and West and by North, with rainy weather.

The third, vvee held our course as before, vvith a calme, and found a Banke, so farre in the Sea that vvee could scarce see the Land, in some places being fortie, in an other tvventie, fifteene, and tvvelue fathom sandie ground, vvee anchored at tvvelue fathom, because it vvaxt night, and the Master desired to see hovv the streame vvent, it vvas West South-vvest. The same day vvee vv ere vnder five and thirtie minutes North-vvard of the line, and savv many Whales, and Tortices. Wee ghest by the height, that vvee vv ere at the end of the land of Nova Guinea, having sayled along by the Coast two hundred and eightie leagues, that day we sawe two Islands more West-ward from vs. Raynes and Calmes troubled vs.

The fift, in the morning, as our Shalop rowed to land, wee saw first two, and then three Canoas more come off from the land, and made towards our Shalop, and being hard by it, put out a Flagge of Peace, and our men the like, and then went aboard: the Canoas followed them and also came aboard, they brought vs nothing but a muster, or shew of Indian Bounties and Erties, with some Rice, Tabacco, and two Paradise Birds: wee bartered for one of them that was white and yellow. Wee could vnderstand them reasonable well, for they spake Tarnata words, and one of them spake good Malaian, which language Aris Clawson our Marchant could speake well, some of them spake some Spanish, and among them they had a Spanish Felt. They wore faire clothes, about their middles, and some had Silke Breeches on of diuers colours, some also had Wreathes about their heads, which they say were Turkes or Moores in Religion. They ware Gold and Siluer Rings vpon their fingers, their haire was all coale blacke. They bartered their ware with vs for Beades, but rather desired Linnen: They were very warie and fearefull of vs. Wee askt them what the name of this Countrie was, but they would not tell vs, but by many circumstances vvee iudged and verily beleueed, that vvee vv ere at the East end of Gilolo, on the middle-most Point of the Land, (for Gilolo reacheth out vvith three Points to the East) and that they vv ere men of Tidore, friends to the Spaniards, as vve also found it so to be, vv hich made vs all reioyce, that after so many vvindings and turnings, and troubles endured, vve vv ere come to the place which vvee knevv, and hoped in short time to come among our Country-men, a thing vv hich vvee so long, and so much had hoped for and desired. Beans or Pease.

The sixth day in the Morning we hauing a good gale, South South-east, and bad lying there, hoysed Anchor to goe on our Voyage to the Moluccos, and held our course North, with a good gale to goe North, about the North point of Gilolo. The seventh it rained, and we saw the North-east point of Gilolo, called Moratay, which lay South-east from vs. Moratay.

The eighth about noone, we were vnder foure degrees three minutes North-ward of the line, that night it rained hard with thunder and lightening, there we found the streame to go North-ward. The ninth and tenth the Wind was variable, with rainie weather, and we were vnder the height of three degrees fiftie minutes. The eleuenth in the Morning, we sawe the land of Gilolo called Moratay againe, on the North-east point of Gilolo, we did the best wee could to reach it, but the streame put vs off from the land towards the North, and could not reach it that day. The Current.

The twelfth and thirteenth, we were vnder two degrees fiftie eight minutes, with variable winds, and much raine; and the like the foureteenth, fifteenth, and sixteenth. The seuenteenth with with great labour and much trouble we got vnder the land, late in the Euening, and draue along by the Coast with faire weather: that night we saw many fires vpon the land.

Soppy.

The eighteenth it was still weather, and we draue along by the Land: about noone two Canoes came to vs with a flag of Peace, from the Village called Soppy; they were Tarnataens, with whom we could speake well, and some of them were of Gammacanor: they shewed vs, that a Pinace of Amsterdam had laine there three moneths to lade Rice, and that about a moneth or two before, also an English ship had beene there. How glad we were then when we were so well assured, that wee were come to so good and long desired a place, after so much paine and trouble that we had endured, with eightie fve sound men, when we had spent all our victuals, euery man may iudge that hath proued the like aduventure. There we were vnder two degrees, fortie seuen minutes, and anchored at eight and twentie fathome: some of those men stayed that night with vs, the next day to bring vs to the Road of Soppy.

The nineteenth we sayled into the Bay, and there anchored at ten fathome sandie ground, about a Canon shot from the shore. That day we bartered for some Sagow, some Hennes, two or three Tortoyes, and a little Rice.

September.

The seuenteenth of September we had a good gale, and did our best to get to Tarnata: that morning besides we saw a sayle to loofeward from vs, which also made towards Tarnata, being the Morning Starre of Roterdam, of three hundred Tunnes burthen, hauing in her sixe and twentie great Peeces. At noone our Shalop came from that ship, where she had lyen three nights, they being in the Creeke of Sabon, found there the Admirall Verbaghen there, in one of the Admirall Speilberg his ships, by whose men we vnderstood of Speilberg his Acts and Voyage.

They also told vs, that there were ten ships well furnished at the Manillas, their Generall being John Dirickson Lam of Horne, to set vpon the Spanish fleet, that were comming to Tarnata. We also vnderstood, that Peter Bot sayling home with foure ships, was cast away, vpon Mauricius Island, with three ships, by meanes of a storme that cast him vpon the Clifles, where many of his men and himsele also was drowned, the fourth ship scapt.

October.

The three and twentieth of October we set sayle, and the eight and twentie went by Iacatra, where we anchored without the Island: there we found three ships of Holland; the Horne, the Eagle, and the Trou, and three English ships. The next night one of our men dyed, which was the first man that dyed that voyage, in the Unitie, besides two more that dyed in the Horne: the one John Cornelison Schouten, our Masters brother, in the South Sea, by the Dogs Island, and one about the Coast of Portugall: so that vntill then, there dyed but three men in both the ships, and then we had left eightie foure men liuing, all indifferently well.

The one and thirtieth, the ship called Bantam, with John Peterson Koeuen of Horne, President of Bantam, for the East India Company, came before Iacatra.

The first of Nouember, the President John Peterson Koeuen sent for William Cornelison Schouten our Master, and the Marchants, to come on land, where being come (in the presence of his Councell there assembled) he told them in the name of the East Indian Companie, that they must leaue their ship and goods there, and deliuer it vp into his hands: and although our Master shewed him many reasons, to perswade the contrarie, saying, that they did them great wrong, they were forced to doe as the President appointed them, who told them, that if they thought they did them wrong, that they should right themselves in Holland: and so our ship and goods was stayed and attached there. To receiue the ship and all her furniture, the President appointed two Masters of ships, and two Marchants, which was deliuered by Inuentory vnto them, by our Master & the Marchant. This was done vpon Munday the first day of Nouember, after our reckoning; but vpon a Tuesday the second of Nouember, by our Countreimens reckoning there. The reason of the difference of the time fell out thus: as we sayled Westward from our owne Countrey, and had with the Sunne compassed the Globe of the World, wee had one night, or Sun-setting, lesse then they: and they that come out of the West, and sayle to the East, thereby had one day or Sun-setting more then wee, which make a quarter difference, and so as we made our reckoning of the time then with our selues, and did the like with our Countreimen, that weeke wee lost the Tuesday, leaping from Munday to Wednesday, and so had one weeke of six dayes.

A day difference in computation of time, now caused.

Our ship being in this manner taken from vs, some of our men put themselves into seruice with the East Indian Company. The rest were put into two ships, (that were to goe home into Holland) called the Amsterdam, and the Zeland: their Generall, being George van Speilberghen. The Master William Cornelison Schouten, Iacob le Maire, and ten of our men, went with the Generall in the Amsterdam, the Masters name John Cornelison May, alias Menscheater: and Aris Clawson, and the Pilot Claus Peterson, with ten others, in the Zeland, the Masters name Cornelis Riemlande of Middleburgh, which set sayle from Bantam the fourteenth of December.

The two and thirtieth our Marchant Iacob le Maire dyed.

The first of Ianuary, 1617. we lost the sight of the Zeland.

The foure and twentieth, we were vnder the Island Mauricius at anchor, where wee refreshed our selues; and the thirtieth set sayle from thence.

The

The sixt of March, as we ghest, we past the Cape, but saw it not.

The one and thirtieth, we were vnder the Iland of Saint Helena. Where we found the Zeland, which arriued there certaine dayes before vs.

The sixt of Aprill after we had retreshed our selues, and taken in fresh water, both our ships set sayle, and the fourteenth of Aprill saw the Iland of Ascension.

The three and twentieth we saw two ships to loofe-ward from vs vnder one degree Southward of the Line, but because we could not reach them, wee held on our course. The foure and twentieth in the morning, we were the fift time vnder the Equinoctiall Line, and the eight and twentieth we saw the North-starre, which wee had not seene in twentie moneths before. The first of Iuly we came with the Amsterdam into Zeland, where the day before the Zeland likewise was arriued : And so performed our Voyage in two yeares, and eightene dayes.

F I N I S.

THE [illegible] OF [illegible]

[illegible text block]

1871

[illegible text block]

NAVIGATIONS AND VOYAGES OF ENGLISHMEN, ALONGST THE COASTS OF AFRICA, to the Cape of Good Hope, and from thence to the RED SEA, the ABASSINE, ARABIAN, PERSIAN, INDIAN, Shoares, Continents, and ISLANDS.

THE THIRD BOOKE.

CHAP. I.

Of the first English Voyages to the East-Indies, before the establishment of the East-Indian Societie.

§. I.

Of SIGHELMVS, MAMDEVILE, STEVENS, FITCH, and diuers other English-men, their Indian Voyages.

Having now taken Sea-view of the Vniuerse, and encompassed the whole Circumference of the Globe, in the former six Voyages; the first of Portugalls and Spaniards, the second and third of English, the three last of Hollanders, therein not a little furthered by English Pilots, and their Notes, as is before obserued of Melis, Adams and others: Wee are in the next place, to take more exact suruey of the world in the principall Navigations, to the most famous and remote Regions thereof. Glorious and happy were those six Worthies, which procured themselves true Sonnes of the Sunne and Tethys, a farre more Germane and Genuine issue, then that daring Phaeton, who asked and attempted his Fathers Chariot, but exchanged it and himselfe for this miserable Epitaph.

Quem si non cecidit, magnis tamen excidit ansis.

But these haue attained what they sought, and what hee in his Vulcanian Chariot lost, these in Neptunian Chariots gained, and followed the Sunne round about the world; at once seeming to imitate the heavenly Orbes (as so many Terrestrial Planets) and to rule the Elements, spurring the Ayre, bridling the Ocean, contemning the narrow limits of known Earth, & filling the world with their Fame. But Others also, for their Marine adventures are worthy honour, if not compassing that honour of those First Worthies (worthy to be reputed First, and Worthies) yet in another kind, attempting as great a designe, of as dangerous hazard, long Perigrination, costly expence, and profitable aduantage, as the former. Such were those which haue passed the blacke Guineans, and doubled the * Hopefull Promontory, from thence piercing into

The English Generalls, Drake and Candish, first Compassers of the world, and the most fortunate Magellans ship, nor himselfe effected amore renowned then happy Voyage, whom the Hollanders followed, guided by English instructions, and Marriners not their fortune.

*Cape of Good Hope

the Erythrean and Indian Seas, Lands, Islands, enriching our World, vvith a vvork of rarities for contemplation and vse.

Praise of Queene Elizabeth.

Sighe-lmus his trauells to India.
W. Malm. de gestis Regum Anglorum & de geji. Ep. sc. Aug.

To leaue to other Nations Sua premia laudi, the English exploits in this kind are the subiect of this Booke, especially theirs, vvhich since the establisshing of the East Indian Company, or Societie of Marchants, haue traded those parts; vvhich was begun in the happy and flourishing Reigne of that Glorious ELIZABETH, vvhose Name could not end with her life, but as then it filled the Christian, Turkish, Persian, American, Indian, worlds of Place; so still it seemes to begin, renue, and flourish in glorious verdure, and to promise a perpetuall Spring thorow all Worlds and Ages of Time. Before Her times I confesse diuers of our Nation haue merited honour in this attempt, as Sigheilmus, Bishop of Shire-borne, sent by that famous and religious King Alfred, to Saint Thomas his Sepulchre in India, whence hee brought precious Spices and Jewels, Anno 883. twice recorded by William of Malmesbury: as likewise a certaine English-man mentioned by Matthew Paris, Anno 1243. which trauelled the East part of the world with the Tartars in their famous expeditions: That I say nothing of Sir John Mandenill his many yeeres trauell through all the East, written by himselfe; and by that famous Geographer Ortelius, commended for his Geography (I feare, corrupted by some leaden Legendary spirit in other passages) and many Others, which Histories dignifie in the time of the Holy-land warres, for their Easterne traueells, and many more, no doubt, buried in the ruines of Time, by Obluion and Obscuritie.

In her time wee haue record of diuers Indian Voyages by English-men, before that Societie began.

Thomas Steuens.

First, the Voyage of Thomas Steuens, from Lisbone to Goa, by the Cape of Good Hope, was witten by himselfe from Goa, the tenth of Nouember, 1579. and is extant in Master Hakluis second Tome of Voyages.

Ralph Fitz.

Likewise the Voyage of Master Ralph Fitz, by Syria and Babylonia, to Ormus, and thence into, and through many Countries of the East Indies, begunne 1583. and continued till 1591. is to be read in the said second Tome of Master Hakluis, and in Linschoten.

George Raymond and James Lancaster.

Also a Voyage, 1591. with three tall Ships, the Penelope, Admirall; the Marchant Royall, Vice-Admirall; and the Edward Bonauenture, Rere-Admirall; to diuers Islands and Regions of the East Indies, by Master George Raymond; of which the Marchant Royall, was sent backe from Soldanba, neere the Cape Bona Esperanza, which both the other Ships doubled, and neere the Cape Dos Corientes were seuered by a storme, and the said Voyage was onely accomplished by Master James Lancaster in the Rere-Admirall. For these I referre the desirous Reader to Master Hakluis Printed Booke. This last Voyage I haue by mee, written by Henrie May, Purser of the said Ship; but because his relations are principally touching the accidents in their returne, wherein he was cast away in a French Ship on the Bermudas, I haue refer'd that discourse to a fitter place.

English-men in Dutch Voyages.

In the fourth place, wee may reckon those English-men in diuers of those Dutch voyages about the Globe, Timothy Shotten, Thomas Spring, John Cald-well, and others. Yea the name of English-men were so famous in the East, that the Hollanders in their first trade thither, varnished their obscuritie with English lustre, and gaue out themselves English.

John Newbury.

Moreouer, Master John Newbury, was not onely companion with Master Ralph Fitz in his said Voyage, and prisoner with him at Goa: but before that, in the yeere 1580. had trauelled to Ormus, and thence into the Continent (as by his Iournall, which I haue, in fitter place may appeare) passing through the Countries of Persia, Media, Armenia, Georgia, Natolia, to Constantinople, and thence into Danubius, Valachia, Polonia, Prussia, Denmarke, and so into England.

¶ II.

The Voyage of Master BENIAMIN WOOD, into the East Indies, and the miserable disastrous successe thereof.

IN the yeere 1596. by the charges principally of Sir Robert Dudley, was set forth a Fleete of three Ships, the Beare, the Beares Whelpe, and the Beniamin, committed vnto the command and conduct of Master Beniamin Wood. The Marchants imployed in this Voyage, were, Master Richard Allot, and Master Thomas Bromfield, of the Citie of London. These men for their better furtherance, intending to pierce as farre as China, obtained the gracious Letters of Queene Elizabeth of famous memory, to the King of China in their behalfe, which begin in this manner.

See the whole Letter. Hak.
To. 3. pag. 53.

ELIZABETHA, Dei gratia, Anglia, Francia, & Hibernia Regina, vera & Christiana fidei contra omnes falso Christi nomen profitentes inuictissima Propugnatrix, &c. Altissimo, Serenissimo, Principi, Potentissimo Magni Regni China Dominatori, summo in illis Asia Partibus, Insulifq;

fulisq; adiacentibus Imperatori, & Magno in Orientalibus Mundi Regionibus Monarcha, salutem, multosq; cum omni optimarum rerum copia & affluentia letos & felices annos. Cum honesti & fideles subditi nostri, qui has literas nostras ad Serenitatem vestram perferunt, RICHARDVS ALLOT & THOMAS BROMFIELD, &c. Data in Palatio nostro Grenonici XI. Mens. Iulij Anno Christi 1596. annoq; nostri Regni XXXVIII.

This their honourable expedition, and gracious commendation by her Maiestie to the King of China in their marchandizing affaires, had not answerable successe; but hath suffered a double disaster; first, in the miserable perishing of the Fleet, and next in the losse of the Historie and Relation of that Tragedie. Some broken Plankes, as after a shipwracke, haue yet beene
10 encountered from the West Indies, which giue vs some notice of this East Indian disadventure. Qua Regio in ipsis nostri non plena laboris? This intelligence wee haue by the intercepted Letters of Licentiate Alcasar de Villa Señor, Auditor of the Royall Audience of Saint Domingo, and Iudge of Commission in Puerto Rico, and Captaine Generall of the Prouinces of New Andalusia, written to the King and his Royall Councell of the Indies. An extract whereof, so much as concerneth this businesse, here followeth. Wherein, let not the imputation of Robbery or Piracie trouble the Reader, being the words of a Spaniard, and the deeds of English in the time of warre twixt vs and Spaine.

20 AN other Commission your Royall Audience committed vnto mee, to punish offenders that did vsurpe a great quantitie of goods of your Maiesties, in the Island of Vtias. Of the state that I had in the end of the last yeere, I sent relation to your Maiestie, inserting a declaration of one Thomas an English man, of the goods that in the said Island hee and his companions had, and for this onely I will make a summarie relation of the Case, and the state of the Suite, by the which will appeare, that out of England went three Shippes for the India orientall of Portugall, which tooke three Portugall Shippes, subiects to your Maiestie, whereof one of 30 them came from the Citie of Goa, and from the Captaine they tooke a great rich stone, which he said hee carried for your Maiestie, the proportion whereof went in the said Relation. They had in them also many bagges of Royalls of eight and foure, for the pay of the Souldiers, which your Maiestie hath in Garrison, in a Castle Frontire of the said India; and the said English-men rob'd them of it, and much more goods appertaining to your Maiesties subiects: and by sicknes of the English-men, remained only foure, which in a boat put all the goods they could, which they had robbed from your Maiestie and your subiects, and with it chanced to a River in the Island of Vtias, three leagues from this Island: where they tocke out their goods on land, where their Boat was sunke and lost: so they remained on th' Island, with only one small Boat made of boords, which they had taken from certaine Fisher-men, at the head of Saint John of this Island: with the which they came for water hither, and left one George an English-man, one of the foure that arriued in the said Island of Vtias. Who being found by Don Rodrigo de Fuentes, Iuan Lopez de Aliceda, Iuan Morales, Iuan Martinis, Iuan Ruiz, Pedro Chamacho; He gaue them notice of the things aboue said, and of the Stone, Stones, Gold, Plate, Testones, 40 and other goods that was in the said Island, and the parts and place where the three English-men and their goods they might find. Whereupon they consulted and agreed, to passe to the said Island of Vtias to possesse and benefit themselues with the goods that they should there find, and so they past ouer, and carried with them a Letter of George the English-man, that his companions should deliuer themselues to them, with their weapons and goods. And being come neere to the place where the English-men were, they set vp a white Flagge of Peace, and the English-men seeing this, set vp another, and so came peaceably to speake together, where they promised them their Faith and Friendship: whereupon the English-men yeelded themselues, with their armes and goods to the said Don Rodrigo, and his consorts: who tooke possession of all, and parted among themselues the money, and hid and kept secret the Stone, and Stones, Gold,
50 Plate and other goods, leauing a small quantitie of Plate in barres, and Silkes to make this small part manifest, that the truth might not be knowne what quantitie of Stones, Gold, Plate, and the rest of the goods they vsurped. They consulted and agreed to murder the English-men, with whom they had eaten, drunke, and slept in company of peace: who hauing kil'd Richard and Daniel, and would haue kil'd Thomas, hee escaped into the mountaine from them, and the said Don Rodrigo and his consorts came backe againe to this Island, with intent to kill, as they did kil George the English-man with poyson, & sent backe againe to the said Island of Vtias, to seeke Tomas for to kill him also; who with a piece of Timber passed ouer to this Island with great admiration. They hauing knowledge thereof, sought all the meanes they could to kill him. Here the said Don Rodrigo, and Iuan Lopez, de Aliceda, came to this Citie and before the 60 Gouernour manifested and made denuntiation of a small quantitie of goods that they found in Vtias, and the rest of their complices presented themselues for witnesse, falsly prouing that they had found no more goods; then that little that they there manifested, and that they had kil'd three English-men in fight to get it. And thus they plotted many false informations, before Christo vall de Mercado, a chiefe Officer, which was sent with Commission of your Go-

An extract of a Spanish Letter which I found amongst Master Hak-luits papers.

Three Portugall Shippes taken by the English.

uernour, to fetch the Plate and goods so manifested, and by their perswasion many false witnesses haue deposed, who haue vsed many tricks, inuentions, cauills & false deuises to couer the truth; and they sent by three passages to the Island of Utias, to approue the so killing of the three Englishmen, and that their manifestation was true, intending to remaine with the rest, which they vsurped, who vnderstanding that there were diligences done to approue their delict, some of them haue broken the Prisons and Goales, and fled out of them, especially the sayd Don Rodrigo de Fuentes. Who being in prison with a chaine and bolts, and two Souldiers for guard, hee tyled off his Irons, broke the prisons, and fledde away by night, and carried with him two Blackemoores of his that were attached for your Maiestie, and went to the Riuer of Ton two leagues from the Citie, where hee remained a long time in sight of this Citie, with a Horse, Lance, Pistol and Sword, whom being fauoured of many kinsfolkes and friends of his wife, I cannot apprehend, although I did many diligences, in the meane while I tooke the examination of his complices who haue confest the deed, and that the said Don Rodrigo is Actor of all; by whose counsell and direction they were all gouerned. But they haue not declared all the Stones, Gold, Plate, and Amber, saying that they were in the Island separated and deuided, that the one might hide his things without the priuie of the other. The proouances and likelihoods doe much charge the said Don Rodrigo, and therefore I haue proceeded against him, for Absence and Rebellion, and they discouered in their confessions all their Complices; whom I haue examined for witnesses one against another, being a case wherein Complices may serue for witnesses. This cause being concluded by an extraordinarie diligence, I haue apprehended him, and for that the suite is of two thousand leaues, I haue made a memoriall to take his confession of more then two hundred questions, and he hath confessed almost as much as his Complices, and denieth to haue the great stone and the rest; the said Don Rodrigo hauing taken from Daniel the Englishman two chaines of Gold, the one hanged with an Agnus Dei, and the other with a Crucifixe of Gold, and with it a collar of Gold, which Thomas the Englishman declareth to haue fiftie pieces Ameled, to bee worne for a womans chaine, with certaine Brallets and Rings of Gold with many small Stones: which declareth the said Iuan Martines, one of his Complices, and the said Don Rodrigo onely confesseth two Chaines and three Rings, which he saith were stolne from him, and his said Complices, hauing declared that three bags of Testones, of eight and foure Royalls which fell to the part of him and Iohn Ruiz, they had past to this Island, which the said Iohn Ruiz hath confest, and as witnesse hath declared that hee brought them, and carried them by the order of the said Don Rodrigo vnto his house, which hee will not deliuer, saying, That they were stolne from him in the mountaine where hee did hide them: and his Complices hauing declared that he tooke in the said Island, a great masse of broken Siluer, which Thomas the Englishman declareth to be fiftie pound weight, the said Don Rodrigo denieth the same. And hauing taken more two sackes of Plate in barres, which by witnesse I did prooue to weigh more then two hundred pound weight each of them; hee hath deliuered of all this onely tenne pound and a halfe, and saith that he spent and sold twelue pound, and a pound and a halfe was stolne out of his house, and that hee gaue to Christopher de Mercado twentie and six pound, when he went with Commission from your Gouvernour to fetch the Plate manifested: he denieth all the rest, affirming that he brought from the Island of Utias a Pot full of Plate, which hee saith fell from him into a Riuer. And hauing prooued that he carried tokens from George the Englishman where he should find the great Stone in a Presse, made vp betweene two Boords, hee denieth the same: and hauing prooued that the first time that hee went to the Island, hee brought thence a Purse of Veluet, without telling or shewing to his companions what was in it at the mouth thereof, did appeare certaine Boords of the Volume of two hands together, and it is presumed it was that whereinto Thomas the Englishman declareth the Stone was put, and hee will not deliuer the said Purse, saying, that it was stolne from him: he declareth and manifesteth some little pieces of wood that he brought in it, and two witnesses his Complices declare that those small pieces that he manifesteth he brought out of the same Island many dayes after, being sent thither by order of the said Christopher de Mercado. Many other tokens and presumptions concur that hee hath the said Stone and the rest, and the rest of the Stones. It is likewise prooued, presently after they returned from the said Island, the first time that they passed thither, it was publicly said and famed, that the said Don Rodrigo had found a Stone of great value, and to couer the truth hee was furnished with many Informations, which I haue prooued to bee false, which were past before Christopher de Mercado, when hee went with the said Commission to bring the goods manifested: for the which the said Don Rodrigo gaue him the said twentie six pound of Plate, and hee and his Complices one hundred two and twentie Crownes of Gold, and foure hundred and fiftie Royalls of Foure, and other things of the goods that they vsurped in the said Island. The said Don Rodrigo directed his Complices what they should say and do, and therefore they told not the truth in many examinations that I tooke of them, till such time that the said Don Rodrigo was fled out of the prison: so saying of his counsel, they presently declared and confessed the fact, will serue for witnesses, and it doth appeare by many other witnesses that they before denyed the truth, and after his escape they declared the same, and concealed the same before before at the request and perswasion of the said Don Rodrigo also appeareth, that hee sent three small Caruels to the Iland, to the place where they said they had killed three English men in fight, and he confesseth he did the same, to the end that his first Declaration might seeme to bee true, that he sent them by order of the said John Lopez de Alyceda, Constable of the vale of Coa, mo; which hath no Iurisdiction Ciuill nor Criminall. So I apprehended him and committed him- and hauing brought the said Thomas English man, to this Citie who declaring before your Go- uernour by Interpreter the fact of this Sute, the said Don Rodrigo procured to kill him, and for the same he requested of the Licentiate Antonio de Robles Physician, a proportion of Poyson, which both he and the said John Martine haue declared: and appearing that the said John Lopez did not 10 passe to the said Iland as Constable, nor carryed with him any Scriuener of two that were pre- sent when they embarked themselues, and hauing confest, and as a witnesse declared that he past to the Iland, not as an Officer, but as a companion, and therefore tooke his share of the Te- stones, the said Don Rodrigo holdeth for his principall defence, to haue passed to the Iland with a Constable, and that all was done by his order, and that the said Informations were false. I haue charged the said Don Rodrigo, of these and other offences that by the Processe appeare, and commanded that he might haue a Copie of them that with in the space of fiftene dayes, hee might alleage and proue what was conuenient in his right, with all charge of publication, con- clution and icitation for all the acts and sentences, leauing the Processe in Rebellion made ag ainst him in his force and vigor. He let passe the said Terme, and I granted him other three Termes of 20 fiftene dayes, which likewise he let passe, and in the end of them hee refused me, and generally all the Inhabitants in this Citie, and thirtie leagues about it, excepting only sixe friends of his, and your Royall Officers they refused. So I accompanied my selfe only with one Bailiffe for the time of tryall, reseruing to haue power to accompanie my selfe for the sentence with your Au- ditor which is looked for heere, and commeth to this Port for your Royall Audience of Santo Domingo, and I granted him the fourescore dayes of the Law, and hee hath made no prooffe nor can make none. For all that were in the said Iland of Vtiar haue declared the delicts of the which the said Don Rodrigo is charged, and there will bee found no other by whom to make prooffe of any thing to the contrary: and the cause being concluded, the said Audites past without entring into this Port. And the said Bailiffe and other persons that I pretended to accompany mee refu-

 30 sed me, saying, that if they did Iustice, the Kindred of the Wife of the said Don Rodrigo, which haue taken his part would doe them harme, and in not doing the same, they did charge their con- sciences: and notwithstanding any person with whom I might be accompanied, that might not be without suspect, and the refusall was so generall and auailable, I accompanied my selfe at the last with Batcheler Ioseph Durebolledone, Naturall of the Iland of the Canaries, which chanced to come to this Port. Likewise the said Iuan Ruiz being Prisoner, brake his Prison and Gaole, and withdrew himselfe into the Cathedrall Church of this Citie, and made himselfe strong in the Tower from whence I gate him, and a Sute was followed before the Iudge Ecclesiasticall, where I defended your Maiesties right, and made an Information in the which I alleaged all the said goods to belong to your Maiestie, hee hauing committed Robbery in the vsurpation of it, and o-
 40 ther grievous Delicts, that they ought not to enioy the Immunitie Ecclesiasticall which hee pretended: and with many iudgements and opinions of Theologie, the Iudge Ecclesiasticall gaue sentence that he ought not to be releued of the said Immunitie Ecclesiasticall, for that by the said Information may be better vnderstood. This Sute and Iustice of your Maiestie, which I haue thought good to send; and if to the contrary the said Don Rodrigo doe write, may be vnder- stood the credit that may be giuen to one that hath done such Delicts; and made so many In- uentions and false Informations: to obscure and remayne without punishment with your Roy- all goods.

A conclusion of the Sute was made with them all, and I gaue and pronounced sentence, in the which I condemned the said Iuan Lopez, exaliced Iuan Ruis, Ioan Martines, Pedro Camacho to death, and losse of halfe their goods applyed for your Maiesties Chamber: and more I condem-
 50 ned the afore-said in solidum, and that within fve dayes of the notification of this my sentence, they giue and deliuer the goods that they shared, all that yet remayneth vndeliuered to the accomplishment of that which Thomas the English hath declared, therefore said, and his compa- nions to haue taken in the Iland of Vtiar, of which they afore-said, and Complices were posselt of, hid and kept secret, that it might be put into your Maiesties Chests, whose it is and to whom it doth belong.

The same sentence I gaue with my Companion against the said Don Rodrigo defuentes, and re- maynes pronounced in secret, hauing others to sentence that they may come forth together in the pronuntiation. I command that within the fve dayes they deliuer the said goods: which not ac-60 complishing, I did command a Mandate to be dispatched, that they may bee executed: with the which, I hope, to discouer these goods, and they shall be restored to your Maiestie, for the which I will doe all the diligence possible for my intention is not to execute them. And thus God keep the Catholike person of your Maiestie. From Portorico the second of October, 1601.

p. III.

*The Trauailes of Iohn MILDENHALL into the Indies, and in the Countreyes of Persia, and of the Great Mogor or Mogull (where he is reported afterwards to haue died of * Poyson) written by himselfe in two Letters following.*

* See my Pilgrimage. lib. 3. cap. 7. S. 4.

Aprill 27.
1599.

May. 1600.

Aleppo.

Iuly 7. 1600.

Bir.

Urfa.
Caracmit.
Bitelis.

Van.
A great Lake
off salt water.

Nacshian.
Chiulfal.
Sultania.
Casbin.
Com.
Casban.

Yesd.
Sigistam.
Candabar.

HHe twelfth of February, in the yeere of our Lord God 1599. I, Iohn Mildenhall of London, Merchant, tooke vpon me a Voyage from London towards the East-Indies, in the good Ship called the Hector of London, Richard Parsons being Master, which carried a Present to the Grand Seigneur in the same Voyage. The seuen and twentieth of April, 1599. we arriued at Zante, where I frighted a Satca, and went into the Island of Cio, from thence to Smyrna, and from thence to Constantinople, where I arriued the nine and twentieth of October, 1599. and there I staid about my Merchandize till the first of May, 1600. Sir Henry Lillo beeing then Embassader: vpon which day I passed from Constantinople to Scanderone in Asia, where in company of a Chau, and some fixe other Turkes, I tooke my Voyage for Aleppo our land, and arriued in Aleppo the foure and twentieth day of the said May in safetie, without any trouble or molestation by the way, and there abode two and fortie dayes, finding there Master Richard Conlthrust for Consull. And the seuenth of Iuly, 1600. I departed from Aleppo, in companie with many other Nations, as Armenians, Persians, Turkes, and diuers others, to the number of fixe hundred people in our Carrauan, and onely of English M. Iohn Cartwright, Preacher: from whence we went to Bir, which is within three dayes iourney, and stands vpon the edge of the riuer Euphrates. From thence we went to Urfa, which is five dayes iourney, which we found very hot. From thence we went to Caracmit, which is foure dayes iourney. From thence to Bitelis, a City vnder the gouernment of a Nation called the Courdes, yet vnder the subiection of Constantinople, which is seuen dayes iourney: and from thence to Van, which is three dayes iourney from Bitelis, a City of great strength, and by the side of the Castle is a great Lake of salt water, nauigable, and is in compasse nine dayes iourney about, which I my selfe haue rowed round about. And once a yeere, at the comming down of the snow waters from the Mountaines, there is abundance of Fish, which come of themselves to one end of the Lake, which I may compare to our Herring-time at Termonth, where the Countrey-people doe resort from diuers places, and catch the said Fish in great abundance, which they salt, and dry, and keepe them all the yeare for their food: the Fish are as big as Pilcherds. From thence we went to Nacshian, which is fixe dayes iourney: and from Nacshian to Chiulfal, which is halfe a dayes iourney, and there we stayed eightene dayes. From thence we went to Sultania, and from thence to Casbin in Persia, which is fifteene dayes iourney, and there we abode thirty dayes. From thence to Com, which is three dayes iourney: from thence we went to Casban, which was seuen dayes iourney. From thence M. Cartwright departed from vs, and went to Spauhoan, the chiefe Citie in Persia: from Casban to Yesd, which is tenne dayes iourney. From thence I went to Curman, which is tenne dayes iourney; and from thence to Sigistam, which is foureteene daies iourney: and from thence to Candabar, which is also foureteene dayes iourney.

The second Letter of Iohn MILDENHALL to M. RICHARD STAPER, written from Casbin in Persia, the third day of October, 1606.

Labora.

He arriueth at Agra, 21 dayes iourney from Labora.
His present to the King of Mogor.

VVOrshipfull Sir, my duty remembred: Not hauing any other of more auncient loue then your selfe, I haue thought good to remember the manifold curtesies receiued, and partly to requite them with the first newes of the successe of this my Voyage, vnto the Court of the Great King of Mogor and Cambaia. At my arriuall in Labora the of 1603. I dispatched a Poste for the Kings Court with my Letters to his Maiestie, that I might haue his free leaue to come vnto him, and treat of such businesse as I had to doe with him from my Prince. Who forthwith answered my Letters, and wrote to the Gouernour of Labora, to vse mee with all honour and curtesie, and to send a garde of horse and foote with me to accompanie me to Agra, where his Court was, beeing one and twentie dayes iourney from Labora; and beeing neere arriued, I was very well met; and an house with all things necessarie was appointed for mee by the King: where reposing my selfe two dayes, the third day I had audience, and presented his Maiestie with nine and twentie great Horles, very faire and good, such as were hardly found better in those parts: some of them cost me fiftie or threescore pounds an horse, with diuerse Jewels, Rings, and Earerings, to his great liking. And so I was dismissed with his great fauour and content.

The

The third day after, hauing made before a great man my friend, he called me into his Councell: and comming into his presence, He demanded of me, what I would haue, and what my businesse was. I made him answere, That his greatnesse and renowned kindnesse vnto Christians was so much blased through the World, that it was come into the furthestmost parts of the Westerne Ocean, and arriued in the Court of our Queene of Englands most excellent Maiestie; who desired to haue friendship with him, and as the Portugals and other Christians had trade with his Maiestie, so her Subiects also might haue the same, with the like fauours; and farther, because there haue beene long Warres betweene her Maiestie and the King of Portugall, that if any of their ships or Portes were taken by our Nation, that he would not take it in euill part, but suffer vs to enioy them to the vse of our Queenes Maiestie. All this the King commanded to be written downe by his Secretarie; and said, that in short space he would giue me answere. With that I withdrew my selfe with leaue and went to my house. Within eight or ten dayes after hee sent me home in money to the value of fise hundred pound sterling, the first time with very comfortable speeches. Shortly after, as I was informed, hee sent to certaine Iesuities, which liued there in great honour and credit, two in Agra, and two others in Lahora, and shewed them my demands: whereat the Iesuities were in an exceeding great rage. And whereas before wee were friends, now we grew to be exceeding great Enemies. And the King asking their opinion in this matter, They flatly answered him, That our Nation were all Theeues, and that I was a Spye sent thither for no other purpose to haue friendship with his Maiestie, but that afterward our men might come thither, and get some of his Ports, and so put his Maiestie to much trouble: saying withall, that they had eleuen yeares serued his Maiestie, and were bound by their Bread and Salt that they had eaten to speake the truth, although it were against Christians. With these and many more such speeches, The King and his Councell were all flat against mee, and my demands; but made no shew thereof to me in any respect: but I knew it by friends, which I had in his Court. Afterward they caused fise Commandements to bee drawne and sent them mee, withall things that I had written: sauing, they had left out the taking of the ships, and the Ports of the Portugals. Which when I had read, I presently went to the Court, and made demand of the other Articles. The King answered, that hee would againe speake with his Councell, and make answere. In this manner rested my businesse, and euery day I went to the Court, and in euery eightene or twentie dayes I put vp Ars or Petitions: and still he put mee off with good words, and promised that this day and to morrow I should haue them. In this manner, seeing my selfe delayed, and being at exceeding great expenses of eightene or twentie Seruants, Horsemen and Foot, I withdrew my selfe from going to the Court, in so much that in thurtye dayes I went not. At length the King remembring me, sent to call for me: At my comming he asked the cause why I came not, as I was wont? I answered, that I had come into his Countrey only vpon the great renoume of his Excellencie, and had wasted fise yeares in trauaile, and could not obtaine so much as a Commandement at his hands, which was wholly for his profit, and nothing for his losse: adding, that if I had asked some greater reward of him, hee would much more haue denyed me. With that he presently called for Garments for me of the Christian fashion very rich and good, and willed me not to be sad, because euery thing that I would haue should be accomplished to mine owne content. So with these sweet words I passed fixe monethes more: and then seeing nothing accomplished I was exceeding wearie of my lingring, and could do nothing; and the rather for that I was out of money.

This Voyage was made in Q. Elizabeths Reigne.

The Iesuities calumination of our Nation.

Fise yeares spent in trauel.

Rich garments bestowed by the grand Mogor vpon Master John Mildenhall.

The sundry practices of the Iesuities.
1.

2.

An Armenian serued him foure yeares for Interpreter.

He studied fixe monethes the Perlian tongue in Agra.

Many yeares delay.

I should haue declared before how the Iesuities day and night sought how to work my displeasure. First, they had giuen to the two chiefeest Counsellors that the King had, at the least fise hundred pounds sterling a piece, that they should not in any wise consent to these demands of mine: so that, when I came to present them, they would not accept of any thing at my hands, although I offered them very largely: and where I had any friendship, they would by all meanes seeke to disgrace me. But God euer kept me in good reputation with all men.

Moreouer, whereas I had hired in Aleppo an Armenian named Seffur, to whom I gaue twentie Duckets the moneth, which serued me very well for mine Interpreter foure yeares; now comming neere to the point of my speciall businesse, the Iesuities had soone wrought with him also in such sort, that he quarrelled with me and went his way: whereby I was destitute of a Drugman, and my selfe could speake little or nothing. Now in what case I was in these remote Countreies without Friends, Money, and an Interpreter, wisemen may iudge. Yet afterward I got a Schoolemaster, and in my house day and night I so studied the Perlian Tongue, that in fixe monethes space I could speake it something reasonably. Then I went in great discontentment to the King, and gaue him to vnderstand how the Iesuities had dealt with me in all points, and desired his Maiesties Licence to depart for mine owne Countrey, where I might haue redresse for mine iniuries receiued; and withall told him, how small it would stand with so great a Princes honour, as his Maiestie had report to be, to delay me so many yeares only vpon the reports of two Iesuities, who, I would proue were not his friends, nor cared not for his profit, nor honour; and desired a day of hearing, that now I my selfe might make plaine vnto his Maiestie (which for want of a Drugman before I could not doe,) the great abuses of these Iesuities in this his Court:

Court: beseeching you againe to grant mee licence to depart, and that I might not bee kept any longer with delayes. At these words, the King was moued against the Iesuities; and promised that vpon the Sunday following, I should bee heard, and that the Iesuities should be present. This speech I had with the King vpon the Wednesdai. Comming before the place of Councell the Sunday following, there were met all the great States of the Court to heare the controuersie betweene vs.

The Queenes
Ambassadour Leiger at Constantinople.

At the first the King called me, and demanded what iniuries I had receiued of the Iesuities: I answered, That they had abused my Prince and Countrey, most falsly, calling vs all Theemes; and if they had beene of another sort and calling, I would haue made them eate their words, or I would haue lost my life in the quarrell. Secondly in saying, That vnder colour of marchandise wee would inuade your Countrey, and take some of your Forts, and put your Maiestie to great trouble. Now that your Maiestie may vnderstand, the vnt ruth of these mens false suggestions; know you all, that her Maiestie hath her Ambassadour Leiger in Constantinople, and euerie three yeeres most commonly doth send a new, and call home the old, and at the first coming of euery Ambassadour shee sendeth not them emptie, but with a great and princely present: according whereunto her Highnesse intent is to deale with your Maiestie. This profit of rich presents and honour, like to redound to your Maiestie by hauing league of amitie, and entercourie with Christian Princes, and to haue their Ambassadours Leigers in your Court, these men by their craftie practices would depriue you of. And our Ambassadours being resident, as pledges in your Court, what dare any of our Nation doe against your Highnesse, or any of your subjects. Vpon these and other such like speeches of mine. The King turned to his Nobles and said, That all that I said was reason; and so they all answered. After this I demanded of the Iesuities before the King; In these twelue yeeres space that you haue serued the King, how many Ambassadours, and how many presents haue you procured to the benefit of his Maiestie: With that the Kings eldest sonne stood out, and said vnto them, naming them, That it was most true, that in a eleuen or twelue yeaes, not one came either vpon Ambassage, or vpon any other profit vnto his Maiestie. Hereupon the King was very merrie, and laughed at the Iesuities, not hauing one word to answer. Then I said, If it please your Maiestie, I will not onely procure an Ambassadour, but also a present at my safe returne againe into your Countrey. Diuers other demands and questions were at that time propounded by the King and his Nobles vnto me: and I answered them all in such sort, as the King called his Vice-Roy, (which before was by the Iesuities bribes made my great enemy) and commanding him, that whatsoeuer priuiledges or commandements I would haue, hee should presently write them, seale them, and giue them me without any more delay or question. And so within thirtie dayes after I had them signed to my owne contentment, and, as I hope, to the profit of my Nation. Afterwards I went and presented them vnto the Prince his eldest sonne, and demanded of him the like commandements: which he most willingly granted, and shortly after were deliuered vnto me. And so departing from the Court, I brought them with me into Persia: which are here in Casbin with my selfe, readie to doe you any seruice: and I would haue come my selfe when I wrote this Letter, saue that there were two Italian Marchants in Agra, that knew of all my proceedings: whom I doubted, as I had good cause, least they would doe mee some harme in Bagdet, or some other places; they alwayes being enemies to our Nation, that they should find any new trade this way, as to you it is well knowne: And within foure moneths I meane to depart by the way of Mosconia; where arriving I will not faile but satisfie you at large of all matters.

The great Mogor granted large priuiledges to Master Iohn Mildenhall.
He departeth from Agra.
Iohn Mildenhall returned homeward by Casbin.
The Italians are our enemies for seeking trade in those parts.

Your Worships to command,
JOHN MILDENHALL.

¶. IIII.

The Voyage of Captaine JOHN DAVIS, to the Easterne India, Pilot in a Dutch Ship; Written by himselfe.

TO THE RIGHT HONOVABLE, MY EXCEEDING good Lord and Master, ROBERT Earle of Essex, &c.

Right honourable, and mine exceeding good Lord, my dutie must aduise mee, to present this Iournall of mine East Indian Voyage, to your Lordships most iudiciall view. 60
Wherein I haue vsed my best diligence to discharge my duty, as neere as my slender capacitie could effect the same, according to those directions which your Lordship gaue mee in charge at my departure; when it pleased you to imploy mee in this Voyage, for the discouering of these Easterne parts of the world, to the seruice of her Maiestie, & the good of our Country.

Country. What I have seene, I doe signifie in this Iournall to your Lordship: and that which I have learned by the report of other Nations (when it shall please God to make me happie by your Lordships fauourable presence) I will make farther knowne to your Lordship, aswell of the King of Portugall his places of Trade and strength, as of the enterchangeable trading of those Eastern Nations among themselves: beginning at Cesala, which is his first footing beyond the Cape of Buena Esperanza, and so proceeding to Mosambique, Ormuz, Diu, Goa, Conlam, Onor, Mangalor, Cochin, Columbo, Negapatan, Porto Grande in Bengala, and Malacca: As also to the Citie of Macao, in the Prouince of Canton in the famous Kingdome of China. and to the Ilands of the Moluccos, and Amboyno. Which places are all in the Portugals possession seruing for his securitie and refuge. Moreouer he hath trade in Monomotapa, Melinde, Aden, Arabia, Cambaia, on the Coast of Coromandel, Balaguete, and Orixa. Of all which Nations there bee some dwelling in Achen in the Ile of Sumatra, trading in marchandize, where I have met with Arabians, and a Nation called Rumos, who haue traded many hundred yeares to Achen. These Rumos * come from Constantinople is called New Rome, and thence in the East, the Turkes are called Rumos, of that their chiefe Citie.

10 and refuge. Moreouer he hath trade in Monomotapa, Melinde, Aden, Arabia, Cambaia, on the Coast of Coromandel, Balaguete, and Orixa. Of all which Nations there bee some dwelling in Achen in the Ile of Sumatra, trading in marchandize, where I have met with Arabians, and a Nation called Rumos, who haue traded many hundred yeares to Achen. These Rumos * come from Constantinople is called New Rome, and thence in the East, the Turkes are called Rumos, of that their chiefe Citie.

20 which is in viall payment. That of Gold is named a Mas, and is nine pence halfe penie neere. Those of Lead are called Caxas: whereof a thousand sixe hundred make one Mas. Good my Lord, remember the poore Widowes Mite. For surely, if I could doe more in this seruice; or otherwise, it should not be omitted. From Middleborough this first of August, 1600.

Your Lordships most dutifull Seruant,

JOHN DAVIS.

30

A briefe Relation of Master JOHN DAVIS, chiefe Pilot to the Zelanders in their East-India Voyage, departing from Middleborough the fifteenth of March, Anno 1598.

THE fifteenth hereof we departed from Flushing with two ships in Consort, the Lion, and Lionesse: the Lion being foure hundred tuns, had in her a hundred three and twentie persons: the Lionesse two hundred and fiftie tuns, had a hundred persons. Mulbrom, Clarke, and Monef of Middleborough Owners and only Aduenturers thereof. Cornelius Howteman chiefe Commander of both ships, hauing a Commission from Graue Maurice, by the name Generall. The two and twentieth we anchored in Tor Bay with bad winde.

The seuenth we set saile, the twentieth we had sight of Porto Santo, the three and twentieth we fell with Palma: the last hereof we came with the Ilands of Cape Verde.

The first we anchored at Saint Nicholas, one of the said Ilands in latitude sixteene degrees, sixteene minutes. Here wee watered the seuenth, wee departed the ninth, wee fell with Saint Iago.

The ninth we fell with the Coast of Brasill, in seven degrees of South latitude, not being able to double Cape Saint Augustine: for being about the Line we had very vnconstant weather, and bad windes, being in this desperate case we shaped our course for a small Ile named Fernando Lonronha, in foure degrees of South latitude, the fifteenth we anchored vpon the North-side thereof in eightene fathomes. We found in this Ile twelue Negroes, eight men, foure women. It is a very fruitfull Ile, and hath exceeding good water, it aboundeth with Goates, it hath also Beefes, Hogs, Hens, Mellons, and Ginnie Corne: with plentie of fish and Sea-birds. These Negroes were placed here by the Portugals to manure the Ile. Three yeeres past in which there hath no ships bene with them.

The six and twentieth we departed from this Ile, the wind at East North-East, the last hereof we doubled Cape Saint Augustine.

The tenth we passed the Abrollos, which was the greatest of our feare (the shoals lye from the Coast of Brasill, farre off into the Sea, in one and twentie degrees and are dangerous. Wherevpon our Baase, (for so a Dutch Captaine is called) chose a Master of Mis-rule by the name Kesar. Now the authoritie of Riot lay in this disordered Officer, who after Dinner could neither salute his friends, nor vnderstand the Lawes of Reason. And those that ought to haue bene most respectiue, were both lawlesse and witlesse. In this dissolute manner we wasted three dayes, which being ended, and hauing againe recovered our former discretion, wee shaped our course for Cape

Aprill.

May.

Iune.

Fernando Ls.
ronha.

August.

September.
Abrollos.

Bona

Bona Esperanza, sayling towards the Court of Bacchus, vnto whom this Idolatrous Sacrifice was made, as by the end appeareth.

November.
Bay of Saldania.

The eleuenth we anchored in the Bay of Saldania, in thirtie foure degrees of the South Pole, ten leagues short of Cape Bona Esperanza, where there are three fresh Riuer. The people came to vs with Oxen and Sheep in great plentie, which they sold for pieces of old Iron, and spike Nailes. The best of that we bought, cost not more then the value of one penie in old Iron. Their Cattell are large, and vnder seuerall markes, hauing vpon the backe by the fore shoulders a great lumpe of flesh like a Camels backe. Their Sheepe haue exceeding great tailes only of fat, weighing twelue or fourteene pounds: they haue no wooll but a long shag haire. The people are not circumcised, their colour is Oliue blacke, blacker then the Brasilians, their haire curled and blacke as the Negroes of Angola, their words are for the most part in-articulate, and in speaking they clocke with the Tongue like a brood Hen, which clocking and the word are both pronouced together, verie strangely. 10

They goe all naked, hauing only a short Cloke of Skinnes and Sandals tyed to their feet, they paint their faces with diuers colours, they are a strong actiue people, and runne exceedingly, and are subiect to the King of Monomotapa, who is reported to be a mightie King, their weapons are only hard Darts. The Flemmings offering them some rude wrong, they ablated themselves three dayes, in which time they made great fires vpon the Mountaines in the Countrey. The nineteenth hereof there came great troupes of them to vs, bringing very much cattell with them, and in the time of bartering suddenly, taking their aduantage they set vpon vs, and slue thirteene 20 of our people with hand Darts, which at foure Pikes length could not offend. Notwithstanding the Flemmings fled before them like Mice before Cats, throwing away their weapons most basely. And our Baase, to saue himselfe, stayed aboard, and sent vs Corislets, Two-hand-swords, Pikes, Muskets, and Targets, so we were armed and laden with weapons, but there was neither courage nor discretion. For we stayed by our Tents being beleegred with Canibals and Cowes, we were in Muster, Giants, with great armed bodies, but in action Babes, with Wrens hearts. Hereupon Master Tomkins and my selfe vndertooke to order these Fellowes, from that excellent methode, which we had seene in your Lordships most honourable Actions. Some consented to vs, but the most part vnwilling, and diuers ranne to the Pottage Pot, for they swore it was dinner time. This night we went all aboard, only leauing our great Mastiue Dogge behind vs, who by 30 no meanes would come to vs. For I thinke he was ashamed of our Companie.

M. Tomkins
Englishman,

This land is a good soile, and an wholesome Aire, full of good herbes, as Mints, Calamint, Plantaine, Ribwort, Trifolium, Scabious, and such like. The seuen and twentieth wee set sayle, the last hereof we doubled Cape Bona Esperanza.

December.

The sixt we doubled Cape das Agulios which is the most Southerly Promontorie of Africa, where the Compasse hath no variation. This Cape lyeth in thirtie fve degrees of the South Pole.

January.
1599.

1599.

Madagascar.
February.
Bay of Saint Augustine.

The sixt we feil with the Ile Madagascar, short of Cape Romano: we spent this moneth to 40 double that Cape, not being able wee bore roome with the Bay Saint Augustine, which lyeth vpon the South West part of Madagascar in three and twentie degrees fiftie minutes.

The third wee anchored in the same Bay, where wee saw many people vpon the shore, but when we landed they fled from vs: for the other Voyage our Baase was in this Bay, where hee greatly abused the people, and tooke one of them, bound him to a Post, and shot him to death, with other shamefull disorders. After seuen dayes by much meanes that we made, some of them came to vs, and brought vs Milke and one Cow which wee bought, and after would no more abide vs. They are a strong, well-shaped people, and cole blacke, their Language sweete and pleasing: their weapons halfe-Pikes, headed with Iron as a Harpon, which they keepe very bright, they goe wholly naked.

The Countrey seemeth to be very fruitfull, and hath great store of Tamaryn trees: we found 50 Beanes growing vpon a high tree, the Cods being two foot long, with answerable bignesse, and are very good meate, here are many Camelions. It was no small miserie that wee English indured especially in this Bay. But God the euer-living Commander was our only succour.

March.
Hungry Bay.
Iles Comoro
fue.

The eight wee came aboard Dog hungry and meatlesse, the fourteenth wee set saile from this place, which we named Hungry Bay, shaping our course vpon the North side of the Ile. The nine and twentieth we came with the Ilands Comoro, lying betweene twelue and thirteene degrees, and are fve Ilands, Mayotta, Ausname, Magliaglie, Saint Christophero, Spirito Santo. The thirtieth we anchored at Mayotta close by a Towne, where we found many people that seemed to reioyce at our comming, they came aboard our shippes with presents of Victu- 60 alls. The King sent to haue our Chiefe come ashore, promising him kindnesse. So our Baase went, the King met him with many people, hauing three Drummes beating before him. He was richly apparelled so were his followers, with long filke Garments imbrodred, after the Turkish manner. The King hauing vsed vs with such kindnesse as we required, wrote a Letter in our behalfe to the Queene of Ausname, for there is no King. The

The seuenteenth we departed : the nineteenth we anchored at Ansuame, before a City named Ansuame. Demos: which hath beene a strong place, as by the ruines appeare. Their houses are built with free hewed stone and lime. the walls of the Citie are most ruinated, that which remaineth is as bigge as Pimmoth. This Queene vied vs exceeding friendly; but she would not be seene. In these Islands we had Rice, Oxen, Goats, Cocos, Bonanas, Oranges, Limons, and Citrons. The Inhabitants are Negroes, but smooth haired, in Religion Mahometists, their weapons are Swords, Targets, Bowes and Arrowes. These Islands are pleasing in sight, and fruitful in nature. Here we found Merchants of Arabia and India, but what Commodities the Islands yeeld, I could not learne. They desire Weapons and Yron; they greatly regard Paper. The eight and twentieth, wee departed, passing through the Islands Mascarenhas, by the shooldo Almirante.

Aprill.
Ansuame.

May.
Maldinia.

June.

Achin.

* Englishmen abused by Hollanders.

July.

* England famous.
State,

The three and twentieth, we fell with the Islands of Maldinia, which are very low close by the water, wholly couered with Cocos trees, so that we saw the trees but not the shore. Here we anchored, and refreshed our selues: Many of the Countrey Boats passing by vs, but none would come to vs: whereupon our Baase sent out the ships boats to take one of them. The foure and twentieth, they brought a Boat aboard vs couered with Mats, like a close Barge. In this Boat was a Gentleman and his Wife, he was apparelled in very fine white Linthen, after the Turkish manner. In his rings were rich stones, his behauiour was so sweete and affable, his countenance so modest, and his speech so gracefull, as that it made apparant shewe he could not be lesse then a Noble-man. He was vnwilling to haue his Wife seene: notwithstanding our Baase went with him into his Boat, to see her: he also opened her Casket, wherein were some Jewels and Ambergreese. He reported that she sate with mournfull modestie, not vying one word: what was taken from them I knowe not; but in departing this Gentleman shewed a Princely spirit. His colour was blacke, with smooth haire, a man of middle stature. In these Islands there is great trade by reason of the Cocos: for they make Ropes, Cables, Sayles, Wine, Oyle, and a kind of bread of that tree, and his fruit. They report that there be 11000. of these Islands. The seuen and twentieth wee set sayle: this morning there came an old man aboard vs that spake a little Portugall, he was our Pilot through the Chanell, for by chance we fell with the true passible Chanell named Maldinia, in latitude foure degrees, fiftene minutes of the North-pole, where the Compasse is varied seuentene degrees Westerly. In missing this Chanell it is a dangerous place. The trade of shipping through this Chanell is very great of diuers Nations, from most places of India, as I hope in your Lordships preface at large to enforme your Honour.

The third we fell with the Coast of India, in eight degrees and forty minutes of Northerly latitude, neere about Cochin, and coasting this shore, we shaped our course East for Camorsin, and from thence to the Island Sumatra. The thirteenth, we saw the coast of Sumatra, in five degrees forty minutes of Northerly latitude. The sixteenth, we spake with the people, staying at an Island by the shore to take in water. The one and twentieth we anchored in the Bay of Achin, in twelue fathome. Being here, the King sent his Officers to measure the length and breadth of our ships, to take the number of our Men and Ordnance, which they did. With those Officers, our Baase sent two of his people with Presents to the King, a Looking-glasse, a Drinking-glasse, and a Bracelet of Corall. The one and twentieth, our men came aboard, whome the King had apparelled after his Countrey manner, in white Calicut cloth: they brought newes of Peace, Welcome, and plenty of Spicery. We found foure Barks riding in the Bay, three of Arabia, and one of Pegu, that came to lade Pepper. Here was also a Portugall, named Don Alfonso Vincent, that came with foure Barks from Malacca, to preuent our trade, as the sequell doth shew. The three and twentieth at mid-night, the King sent for our Baase, and sent a Noble man for his Hostage: hee went presently on shore, whom the King vied very kindly, promising him free trade. He apparelled him after the Countrey manner, and gaue him a Cryse of Honour: This Cryse is a kind of Dagger, whose haft and handle (for it hath no crosse nor hilt) is made of a kind of mettall, which the King esteemeth farre beyond Gold, and is set with Rubies. This mettall hath a fine lustre: it is death to wear this Cryse, but from the Kings gift: and hauing it, there is absolute freedom to take Victualls without money, and to command the rest as slaues. The sixe and twentieth, our Baase came aboard with a Boat-load of Pepper; reporting words aboue credit, how the King had vsed him, of his mightie fortune, and of the wonderfull trade that he had procured, with no small Gaudeamus in superbia nostra: he further said, that the King did often demand of him, if he were not of England, which he did strongly denie, vying some vnfit speeches of * our Nation. Further, said he, beeing aboard, I wish I had giuen a thousand pound that we had no English among vs: thus we, poore soules, were thrust into the Corner. The seuen and twentieth, our Merchants went on shore with their Merchandize, hauing an house by the Kings appointment.

The twentieth, our Baase beeing with the King was exceeding well entertained, the King very importunate to know if he were English: Tell me truely, (said the King) for I loue soldiers; and I must further tell you, Alfonso hath been earnest with me to betray you, but it shall not be; for I am your friend: and therewith gaue him a Purse of Gold. He giuing thanks, answered that he was not of England, but of Flanders, and at the Kings seruice. I haue heard of * England, said the King, but not of Flanders: what Land is that? He further enquired of their King,

* Diuerse Englishmen in this Voyage.

State, and Government; whereof our Baase made large report, refusing the Authoritie of a King, relating the gouernment of Aristocratie. He further made sute to the King, to giue commandement that his subiects should not call him English: for it was a bitternes vnto him: which the King granted. Againe, he required to know if there were no Englishmen in the ships: he answered, there be some English in the ships, but they haue been bred vp in Flanders. I vnderstand, said the King, that there be some that differ both in apparell, language, and fashion: what are those? he answered, English; of which my cheife Pilot is one. Well, said the King, I must see those men. As touching your Merchandize it shall be thus: I haue warres with the King of Ior (this Kingdome of Ior is the South-point of Malacca) you shall serue me against him with your ships: your recompence shall be your lading of Pepper; this was agreed. The twenty eighth, our Baase 10 came aboard, accompanied with one of the Sabandars, the Secretary, Merchants of Mecca, Turks, Arabians, and Dan Alfonso, with some Portugalls; all which departed passing drunke.

August

* Danis his entert: inement with the King of Achin.

The King began to shew an altered countenance the twentieth hereof; saying to our Baase, Wherefore doth not that English Pilot come to me? (for he would not suffer me nor M. Tomkins to goe on shore) I thinke when you haue your Pepper, you will runne away without doing me seruice, as you haue promised: whereupon I was presently sent for. The one and twentieth, I came on shore. The two and twentieth, I went to the King early in the morning, who did vse me very friendly. I stayed with him foure houres or better, banqueting and drinking. After an houre, he caused the Sabandar to stand vp, and bad me likewise stand vp. The Sabandar tooke off my Hat, and put a Roll of white linnen about my head; then he put about my middle a white 20 linnen cloth that came twice about me, hanging downe halfe my legges, imbroydered with Gold: then againe he tooke the Roll from my Head, laying it before the King, and put on a white garment vpon me, and vpon that againe one of red. Then putting on the Roll vpon my Head, I fate downe in the Kings presence, who dranke to me in Aquanita, and made me eate of many strange meates. All his seruice is in Gold, and some in fine Porcellane. Hee eateth vpon the ground, without Table, Napkins, and other linnen. Hee enquired much of England, of the Queene, of her Basbas, and how she could hold warres with so great a King as the Spaniard? (for he thinketh that Europe is all Spanish.) In these his demands he was fully satisfied, as it seemed to his great good liking.

The three and twentieth, the Prince sent for me; I rid to his Court vpon an Elephant: hee 30 vsed me exceeding well. Excessiue eating and drinking was our entertainment. During the small time of my beeing on shore, I met with a very sensible Merchant of China, that spake Spanish, of whom I learned some things, which I hope will giue your Lordship good contentment. Here are many of China that vse trade, and haue their particular Towne: so haue the Portugals, the Gufarates, the Arabians, and those of Bengala and Pegu. Our Baase disliking that I so much frequented the Chinaes company, commanded me aboard. The next day hauing some fowre lookes of the King, he came aboard with a dull spirit.

September.

A strange seed, and strange treachery.

The first hereof, the King made shew that we should receiue in Ordnance for the battery of Ior, and take in souldiers to depart for that seruice. There were many Gallies manned, and brought out of the River, riding halfe a mile from our ships; the Sea full of Prawes and Boats all manned: 40 there came aboard vs the Secretary, named Corcoun, & the cheife Sabandar named Abdala, with many souldiers weaponed with Courtelalles, Hand-darts, Cryses and Targets. They brought with the many kinds of meat, & a great Iar of Aquanita: herewith they made shew of friendship with banqueting. We mistrusting some treachery, filled our tops with stones, made fast our gratings, and prepared our weapons: whereat our Baase was exceeding angry, commanding all to be dissolved, but we would not. There is in this Countrey a kind of Seed, whereof a little beeing eaten, maketh a man to turne foole, all things seeming to him to be Metamorphosed; but aboue a certaine rate it is deadly poyson: with this all the meate and drinke which they brought was infected. In banqueting, the Sabandar and Secretarie sent for me, M. Tomkins keeping me company, and vsed some words to one of his company, but what I knowe not; in short time we were 50 foole-frolicke, gaping one vpon an other like Antiques, our Baase beeing prisoner, and knewe it not. Suddenly when a token was giuen from the other Ship (for there the like treachery was vsed by the Secretary, who went from our ship thither to act the same) they set vpon vs, murdered our Baase, and slew diuers others, M. Tomkins, my selfe, and a French-man defended the Poope, which if they had recouered, our ship had been lost: for they had the Cabin, and some were belowe among the Ordnance, by creeping in at the Ports. The Master of our ship which they call Captaine, leapt into the Sea, so did diuers others; but recouered the ship againe, and came aboard when all was done. In the end we put them to flight, (for our tops plagued them fore) which when I saw, I leapt from the Poope to pursue them, M. Tomkins leaping after me, there came a Turke out of the Cabin, and wounded him grieuouly, they lay together tombling 60 each for his life: which seeing, I ranne the Turke in with my Rapier; and our shipper presently with a halfe Pike thrust him downe the throat into the body. In the other ship all the cheifest were murdered, and the shippe taken: we cut our Cables, and draue to her, and with our shot made the Indians flie: so we recouered the ship: the Gallies durst not come neere vs. In this great misery miserie it was some pleasure, to see how the base Indians did flye, how they were killed, and how well they were drowned. The Sea was couered with Indian heads: for they swamme away by hundreds, The Sabandare Abdala, and one of the Kings neere Kinsmen were slaine, with many others; and the Secretarie hurt. The King being by the Sea-side with many people, when the newes came of the Sabandars death and their great ouerthrow, the furious Infidels murthered all our men a shore, only eight excepted, whom the King fettered for Slaues. We lost in this misfortune threescore and eight persons, of which we are not certaine how many are captiued: only of eight wee haue knowledge. Wee lost two fine Pinnasses of twentie tunnes a piece, and our ship Boate.

10 This day we departed and anchored before the Citie Pider, where we had sent a Pinnasse for Rice, hoping to haue newes of her, but had not. The second there came eleuen Gallies with Portugals (as we thought) to take our ships. Wee sunke one and beate the rest: so they fledde. This after-noon came aboard vs the sonne of Lafort a French Marchant dwelling in Seething-Lane, who was one of the eight Prisoners, with this Message from the King. Shame you not to be such drunken beasts, as in drunkenesse to murder my people, whom I sent to you in kindnesse. Therefore he required our best ship for satisfaction, and for the reliefe of our men. Doe this said he to Lafort, and I will make you a great Nobleman, but wee would not, and being distressed of water, departed to the Ilands Pulo Botum vpon the Coast of Quedia in six degrees fifty minutes, where we refreshed and watered.

20 During the time of our abode in Achien, we receiued into both our ships a hundred and fortie tuns of Pepper, what stones or other Marchandize I know not. But at the day of Treason our Marchants lost all the Money and Marchandize a-shore, which they report to bee of great value, and many young Aduenturers were vtterly ruinated: among which I doe most grieue at the losse of poore John Danis, who did not only lose my friendly Factor, but also all my Europe Commodities, with those things which I had prouided to shew my dutie and loue to my best Friends.

So I may conclude, that although India did not receiue mee very rich, yet she hath sent mee away reasonable poore.

30 The Ile Sumatra is a pleasing and fertile Soyle, abounding with many rare and excellent Fruites, of Graine they haue only Rice which is their Bread. They plowe the ground with Buffs, of which there are great plentie, but with small skill and lesse diligence. The Rice groweth in all respects as our Barley. Rice.

40 Of Pepper they haue exceeding plentie, Gardens of a mile square, it groweth like Hops from a planted Root, and windeth about a stake set by it vntill it grow to a great bushie Tree. The Pepper hangeth in small clusters, three inches long, and an inch about, each cluster hauing fortie Pepper Cornes, it yeeldeth increase equall with Mustard Seed. They bee able to lade twentie ships yearly; and more might, if the people were industrious and laboursome. The whole Countrey seemeth to be a Garden of pleasure. The Ayre is temperate and wholsome, hauing euerie morning a fruitfull dew, or small raine. The Hauen that goeth to the Citie of Achien is small, hauing but six foot at the barre. And there standeth a Fort made of stone, round without couering, battlements, or flankers, low walled like a Powne, a worse cannot bee conceiued. Before this Fort is a very pleasant Road for ships, the wind still comming from the shore, a shippe may ride a mile off in eightene fathomes close by, in foure and sixe fathomes. Of Beasts, heere are Elephants, Horses, Buffes, Oxen and Goates, with many wild Hogs. Pepper.

The Land hath plentie of Gold and Copper Mines, diuers kinds of Gummes, Balmes, and many kinds of Drugges, and much Indico. Of Stones there are Rubies, Saphires, and Garnets: but I know not that they grow there. They haue passing good Timber for shipping. Mines of Gold and other commodities.

50 The Citie of Achien, if it may be so called, is very spacious, built in a Wood, so that wee could not see a house till we were vpon it. Neither could wee goe into any place, but wee found houses, and great concourse of people: so that I thinke the Towne spreadeth ouer the whole land. Their houses are built eight foote or better from the ground vpon posts of wood, with free passage vnder, the wals and couering of Mats, the poorest and weakest things in the World. I saw three great Market places, which are euery day frequented as Faires with all kinde of Marchandize to sell. Achien Citie.

60 The King is called Sultan Aladin, and is an hundred yeares old, as they say, yet hee is a lustie man, but exceeding grosse and fat. In the beginning of his life he was a fisher-man: (of which this place hath very many; for they liue most vpon fish:) and going to the Warres with the former King shewed himselfe so valiant and discreet in ordering the Kings Gallies, that gaining the Kings fauour, he was made Admirall of his Sea-forces and by his valour and discretion the King so imbraced him that he gaue him to Wife one of his neere Kinswomen. The King hauing one only Daughter, married her to the King of Ior, by whom shee had a sonne: this Childe was sent to Achien to bee nourished vnder his Grand-father, being Heire to the Kingdome: Sultan Aladin.

the King that now is, was now chiefe Commander both by Land and Sea. The olde King suddenly dyed, this King tooke the protection of the Childe, against which the Nobilitie resisted, but he hauing the Kings force and taking oportunitie, ended the liues of more then a thousand Noblemen and Gentlemen: and of the rascall people made new Lords and new Lawes. In fine, the Childe was murdered, and then he proclaymed himselfe King by the right of his Wife. Hereupon arose great Warre betweene him and the King of Ior, which continueth to this day. These twentie yeares he hath by force held the Kingdome, and now seemeth to bee secure in the same.

His Court is from the Citie halfe a mile vpon the Riuer, hauing three Guards before any can come to him, and a great Greene betweene each Guard, his house is built as the rest are, 10 but much higher, hee sitteth where hee can see all that come to any of his Guards, but none can see him. The wals and covering of his house are Mats, which sometime is hanged with cloth of Gold, sometime with Veluet, and sometime with Damaske. Hee sitteth vpon the ground crosse-legged like a Taylor, and so must all those doe that be in his presence. He alwayes weareth foure Cressis, two before and two behind, exceeding rich with Diamonds and Rubies; and hath a Sword lying vpon his lap. He hath attending vpon him fortie women at the least, some with Fannes to coole him, some with Clothes to dry his sweat, some giue him Aqua vita, others water: the rest sing pleasant Songs. He doth nothing all the day but eate and drinke, from morning to night there is no end of banquetting: and when his belly is readie to breake, then hee eateth Arecca Betula, which is a fruit like a Nutmeg, wrapped in a kind of leafe like Tabacco, with 20 sharpe chalke made of Pearle Oyster-shells: chawing this it maketh the spittle very red, draweth the Rhume exceedingly, and procureth a mightie stomacke: this maketh the teeth very blacke, and they be the brauest that haue the blackest teeth. By this meanes getting againe his stomacke, he goeth with a fresh courage to eating. And for a Change with a Cracking Gorge, hee goeth into the Riuer, where he hath a place made of purpose, there getting a stomacke by being in the water. Hee, his great men and women doe nothing but eate, drinke, and talke of Venerie. If the Poets Fables haue any shew of truth, then vndoubtedly this King is the great Bacchus. For he holdeth all the Ceremonies of Gluttonie.

As in all places of Europe, the Custome is by vncouering the head to shew reuerence, in this place it is wholly contrary. For before any man can come to the Kings presence, he must put of 30 his hose and shooes, and come before him bare-legged, and bare-footed, holding the palmes of the hands together, and heauing them vp about his head, bowing with the bodie must say, Donlat: which done dutie is discharged. And so hee sitteth downe crosse-legged in the Kings presence. Hee doth onely spend the time in eating with women, and Cock-fighting. And such as is the King, such are his Subiects; for the whole Land is giuen to no other contentment.

His State is gouerned by five principall men, with their inferiour Officers, his Secretarie, and foure called Subandars, with these resteth all authoritie. The Kings will is their Law. For it seemeth there is no Free-man in the Land: for the life and goods of all is at the Kings pleasure. Hee will make no Offenders happie by death, but cutteth off their hands and feete, and banisheth them to an Ile named Polo-wey. If he put any to death, the Elephants teare him to pieces, or they driue a stake into his fundament, and so he dyeth. There are Gaoles and many fettered Prisoners that goe about the Towne.

His women are his chiefe Counsellors, hee hath three Wiues, and very many Concubines, which are very closely kept.

Hee hath very many Gallies, I thinke an hundred, some that will carrie foure hundred men, made like a Wherrie, very long and open, without Decke, Fore-castell, Chase, or any vpper building. Their Oares are like Shouels of foure foote long, which they vse only with the hand not resting them vpon the Galley. They beare no Ordnance, with these hee keepeth his Neighbours in obedience. A woman is his Admirall, for hee will trust no men. Their Weapons 50 are Bowes, Arrowes, Iauelings, Swords, Targets, they haue no defensue Armes, but fight naked.

Hee hath great store of Brasse Ordnance, which they vse without Carriages, shooting them as they lye vpon the ground. They be the greatest that I haue euer seene, and the Metall is reported to be rich of Gold. The trust of his land force standeth vpon his Elephants.

These people boast themselves to come of Ismael and Hagar, and can reckon the Genealogie of the Bible perfectly. In Religion they are Mahometists, and pray with Beades as the Papists doe. They bring vp their Children in Learning, and haue many Schooles. They haue an Archbishop and Spirituall Dignities. Here is a Prophet in Achien, whom they greatly honour, they say that hee hath the spirit of Prophecie, as the Ancients haue had. He is disguised from the rest 60 in his Apparell, and greatly imbraced of the King.

The people are generally very cunning Merchants, and wholly dedicated thereunto. Of Mechanicall Artesmen, they haue Gold-smithes, Gun-founders, Ship-wrights, Taylors, Weuers, Hatters, Hatters, Pot-makers, and Aquaui Stillers, which is made of Rice (for they must drinke no Wine) Cutlers, and Smithes.

As touching their Burials, every Generation or Kinred haue their particular place to burie their dead; which is in the Fields. They lay the Corps with the head towards Mecha, ha- uing a free Stone at the head, and another at the feete curiously wrought; thereby signifying the worthinesse of the person.

But in the place of the Kings Burials every graue hath a piece of Gold at the head, and another at the foot, weighing at the least five hundred pound weight, cunningly imbossed and wrought. This King hath two such Peeces in making and almost finished, which wee saw, that are a thou- sand pound weight a piece, and shall bee richly set with stones. I did greatly desire to see the Kings Burials, because of the great wealth therein; but could not. I doe almost beleue it to be true, because this King hath made two such costly monuments.

The people that trade in this place are of China, Bengala, Pegu, Iana, Coromandel, Gusarate, Arabia, and Rumos. Rumos is in the Red Sea, and is the place from whence Salomon sent his ships to Ophir for Gold, which is now called Achien, as by tradition they doe affirme. And the Rumos people from Salomons time to this day haue followed the same trade.

They haue diuers termes of payment, as Casbes, Mas, Compan, Pardaw, Tayell; I only saw two pieces of Coine, the one of Gold, the other of Lead; that Gold is of the bignesse of a penny, it is as common as pence in England And is named Mas, the other is like a little leaden Token: such as the Vintners of London vse called Caxas. A thousand fixe hundred Casbes make one Mas. Foure hundred Casbes make a Compan. Foure *Compan*s are one Mas. Five Masses make foure shil- lings sterling. Foure Masses makes a Perdaw. Foure Perdawes makes a Tayel, so a Mas is nine pence  $\frac{1}{4}$ . of a Pennie.

They sell their Pepper by the Bhar, which is three hundred and threescore of our pounds, for three pound foure shillings their pound they call a Catt, which is one and twentie of our ounces. Their ounce is bigger then ours by so much as sixteene is bigger then ten.

The weight by which they sell Precious Stones is called; Masse, 10.  $\frac{1}{4}$ . whereof make an ounce.

Once every yeare they haue a custome that the King with all his Noblemen and whole pompe of his land must goe to the Church to looke if the Messias bee come, which happened at our being here. There were many Elephants, I thinke foure, very richly couered with Silke, Vel- let, and cloth of Gold: diuers Noblemen riding vpon each Elephant, but one Elephant about the rest was exceeding richly couered, hauing a golden little Castle vpon his backe, this was led spare for the Messias to ride in. The King riding alone likewise in a little Castle, so they pro- ceede with a very solemne procession, some had Targets of pure massie Gold, others great halfe Moones of Gold, with Stremers, Banners, Ensignes, Drummes, and Trumpets with other Musicke, very pleasing to see. Comming to the Church with great Solemnitie, they at length looked in, and not finding the Messias, vied some Ceremonies. Then the King comming from his owne Elephant, roade home vpon the Elephant prepared for the Messias: where they end the day with feasting and all pleasing sports.

The Ile is diuided into foure Kingdomes, Achien, Pider, Manancabo, and Aru. Achien is the chieftest, the rest are tributarie to him. Aru holdeth with the King of Ior, and refuseth subiection. I haue only hard of five principall Citie to be in this Ile. Achien, Pider, Pacem, Daia, Manan- cabo.

Returning to our proceedings after the slaughter of Achien, seeking reliefe, the tenth hereof September.

we anchored at the lands Pulo Lotum, in fixe degrees fiftie minutes, by the Kindome of Queda: where we watred and refreshed. There were in our ship three Letters close sealed, superscribed, A. B. C. Which vpon the death of our Baase were to be opened. By A. one Thomas Quymans was appointed our Chiefe, who was slaine at Achien. Then B. was opened, whereby Guyan Lo- fort who escaped Captiuitie by being the Kings Messenger, was appointed our Chiefe, whom we so receiued. The letter C. was not opened. The last hereof wee set sayle our course againe for Achien, with hope by some meanes to recouer our men.

The sixth we came in sight of Achien, the twelfth wee came into the Bay, where wee found ten Gallies set out against vs. Wee came vp with one of them, and gaue her diuers shot, but in a calme vnder the land she escaped. The rest durst not come neere vs: for they are very Cowards, proud and base.

The eightene hereof wee shaped our course for the Citie Tanassarim, for it is a place of great trade, the five and twentieth we anchored among the Ilands in the Bay in eleuen degrees, twen- tie minutes, of the Pole Articke. Being here we were very much crossed with bad winds, so that wee could not recouer the Citie, for it standeth twentie leagues within the Bay: being in verie great distresse of victuals we departed hence, shaping our course for the Ilands Nicobar, hoping there to find reliefe.

The twelfth we anchored at the Ilands Nicobar in eight degrees of North latitude where the people brought vs great store of Heus, Oranges, Limons, and other Fruit, and some Amber- greece,

The Turkes are called Rumos in the Indies. The reason of that name is their Metropolitan and Imperiall Citie Constantinople called New Rome: of which Rome they call them Rumos. Their tradition of Ophir is rather to be marked then this Ety- mologie and conceit of Ru- mos in the Red Sea.

* The promi- sed returne of Mahomet ex- pected.

October.

November, Nicobar.

greec<sup>e</sup>, which we bought for pieces of linen-cloth, and Table Napkins. These Iles are pleasant and fruitfull, low land, and haue good road for ships. The people are most base, only liuing vpon fruites, and fish, not manuring the ground, and therefore haue no Rice. The sixteenth wee departed shaping our course for the Ile Zeilon: for wee were in great distresse, especially of Rice.

December.

* Matecalon in Zeilan a Citie of great trade.

Prise discharged.

The sixt by Gods great goodnesse we tooke a ship of Negapatan, which is a Citie in the Coast of Coromandell, shee was laden with Rice bound to Achien. There were in her threescore persons; of Achien, of Iana, of Zeilon, of Pegu, Narsinga, and Coromandel. By these people wee learned that in Zeilan there is a Citie named * Matecalon, a place of great Trade, and that there wee might load our ships with Sinamon, Pepper and Cloues. They also said that in Zeilon were great store of precious stones and Pearles: that the Countrey doth abound with all kind of Victuals, and that the King is an exceeding Enemie to the Portugals; they also told vs of a Citie named Trinquanmale, where was the like Trade. So they promised to lade our ships, and royally to victuall vs, for little money. Hereupon we laboured by all possible meanes to recouer the said places, but could not, for the wind was exceeding contrary. Then these Indians told vs that if we would stay vntill Ianuary, we should haue more then a hundred ships come close by that shore laden with Spicerie, Linnen-cloth, and China Commodities; besides stones and other wealth. To stay there as a man of Warre our Gouvernour would not agree: but to stay and in taking any thing to pay for the same he was content, for so was his Commission. to this the Company would not agree. Whereupon the eight and twentieth hereof we shaped our course homeward, hauing beaten sixteene dayes vpon this Coast to recouer Matecalon. We discharged our Prise the eighteenth hereof, hauing taken the best part of her Rice, for which our Chiefe payed them to their content. But the Companie tooke away the Money and Merchandize from the Indians with much disorder: we tooke with vs twelue of the Indians of seuerall places: who after we could a little vnderstand them, told vs that the Marchants had great store of precious stones in the ship, which they had hid vnder the Timbers. Of what truth that report is I know not. They would not suffer Master Tomkins nor me to goe aboard the Prise: for what reasons I know not.

1600.

30

March.
1600.

The fift hereof our meate was poysoned, but God preserued vs, for one tasting the same by chance or greedinesse (for it was fresh fish) was presently infected: before the meate came to vs it was strongly poysoned, for our Surgeon tooke almost a spoonfull of Poyson out of one fish, but this is not the first time, if the griued would complaine. The tenth wee fell with Cape Bona Esperanza, where wee had a great storme: the fixe and twentieth wee doubled the same.

Aprill.
* S. Helena.

* Il. Ascension

The thirteenth we anchored at the Ile Saint* Helena, which is rockie and mountanous, lying in sixteene degrees of South latitude, here wee found good water, figs, and fish in plentie: there be Goats, but hard to get. The fifteenth at Sun-set there came a Carauell into the Road, who anchored a large Musket-shot to wind-ward of vs. She was vtterly vnprouided, not hauing one Peece mounted: we fought with her all this night, and gaue her, as I thinke, better then two hundred shot. In eight houres shee neuer made shot nor shew of regard, by midnight shee had placed fixe Peeces which she vied very well, shot vs often through, and slew two of our men. So the sixteenth in the morning we departed, hauing many sick men shaping our course for the Ile * Ascension, where we hope to haue reliefe. This three and twentieth we had sight of Ascension, in eight degrees of South latitude, this Ile hath neither wood, water, nor any greene thing vpon it, but is a fraitleffe greene Rocke of fve leagues broad. The foure and twentieth at midnight wee agreed to goe for the Ile Fernando Loronio, where wee are acquainted and know that there is reliefe sufficient. For at this Ile wee stayed ten weekes outward bound, when we could not double Cape Saint Augustine.

May.

The sixt we arriued at the Ile Fernando Loronio, where wee stayed fixe dayes to water and refresh our selues. The thirteenth we departed, shaping our course for England.

Iuly.

The nine and twentieth of Iuly we arriued at Middleborough.

p. V.

WILLIAM ADAMS his Voyage by the Magellan Straights to *Iapon, written in two Letters by himselfe, as followeth.

* This Voyage, though not by the Cape of Good Hope, yet because it was to Iapon, I here deliuer. See before, pag. 78.

Having so good occasion, by hearing that certaine English Marchants lye in the Island of Iana, although by name vnkowne, I presumed to write these few liues, desiring the Worshipfull Companie being vnkowne to me, to pardon my boldnes. The reason that I write, is first, for that conscience bindeth me to loue my Country, & my Countrymen. Your Worships therefore shall vnderstand, to whom these presents shall come, that I am a Kentish-man, borne in a Towne called Gillingam, two English miles from Rocheſter, one mile from Chattam, where the Kings ships lye: and that from the age of twelue yeares, I was brought vp in Lime-house neere London, being Prentise twelue yeares to one Master Nicholas Diggines, and haue serued in the place of Master and Pilot in her Maiesties ships, and about eleven or twelue yeares serued the Worshipfull Company of the Barbarie Marchants, vntill the Indian Trafficke from Holland began, in which Indian Trafficke I was desirous to make a little experience of the small knowledge which God had giuen me. So, in the yeare of our Lord God, 1598. I was hired for chiefe Pilot of a Fleete of five sayle, which was made readie by the chiefe of the Indian Company Peter Vanderhag, and Hance Vanderneke: the Generall of this Fleet, was a Marchatt called Iaques Mayhay, in which ship, being Admirall, I was Pilot. So, it being the three and twentieth or foure and twentieth of Iune before we set sayle, * it was somewhat too late ere we came to the Line, to passe it without contrarie winds: for it was about the midst of September, at which time we found much Southerly winds, and many of our men were sick, so that we were forced to goe to the Coast of Gynny to Cape de Lopo Gonſalues, where wee set our sicke men a land, whereof many dyed: and of the sicknesse, few bettered, hauing little or no refreshing, and the place being vnhealchy. Therefore, to fulfill our Voyage, wee set our course for the Coast of Brasill, determining to passe the Straights of Magellan, and by the way came to an Island called Ilha da Nobon, at which Iland we landed, and tooke the Towne, which contained about eightie houses, in which Iland we refreshed our selues, hauing Oxen, Oranges, and diuers other fruits. But the vnwholsomenesse of the Aire was such, that as one bettered, another fell sicke: we spent vpon the Coast of the Cape Gonſalues, and of Annobon about two moneths time till the twelfth or thirteenth of Nouember. At which time, wee set sayle from Annobon, finding the winds still at the South by East, and South South-East, till wee got foure degrees by South the Line: at which time the windes fauoured vs comming to the South-East, and East South-East, and East, so that we were vp betweene the Iland of Annobon, and the Straights of Magellan, about five monethes. One of our five sayle spent her maine Mast, by which we were much hindred; for with much trauell we set a new Mast in the Sea. Then, the nine and twentieth of March, we saw the Land in the latitude of fiftie degrees, hauing the wind two or three daies contrary: so, in the end, hauing the winds good, we came into the Straights of Magellan, the sixt of April, 1599. at which time, the Winter came, so that there was much Snow: and our men, through cold on the one side, and hunger on the other, grew weake: wee had the wind at North-East, some five or six dayes, in which time wee might haue passed through the Straights. But, for refreshing of our men, we waited, watering and taking in of wood, and setting vp of a Pinnace of fiftene or sixteene tunnes in bignesse. At length, wee would haue passed through but could not by reason of the Southerly winds, with wet, and also very cold, with abundance of Snow and Ice. Wherefore, we were forced to winter and stay in the Straights from the sixt of April, vntill the foure and twentieth of September, in which time the most part of our provision was spent, in so much that for lacke of victuals many of our men dyed through hunger. Now, hauing passed through the Straights, and comming into the South Sea, wee found many hard streames, being driuen to the South-wards in fiftie foure degrees, being then very cold. At length we found reasonable winds and weather, with which wee followed our pretended Voyage, towards the Coast of Pernu: but in long trauels we lost our whole Fleet, being separated the one from the other. Yet before the disperling of our Fleet, wee had appointed, if wee lost one another with stormes and foule weather, that in Chili in the latitude of fortie fixe degrees, wee should stay one for another the space of thirtie dayes. In which height according to agreement, I went in fixe and fortie degrees, and stayed eight and twentie dayes where we refreshed our selues, finding the people of the Countrey good of nature: but by reason of the Spaniards, they would not haue dealt with vs at the first. They brought vs Sheepe and Potatoes, for which we gaue them Bels and Kniues, whereof they were very glad: but in the end, the people went vp from their houses into the Countrey, and came no more vnto vs. Wee stayed there eight and twentie dayes, and set vp a Pinnasse which we had in our ship, in foure parts, and in the end departed and came to the mouth of Baldinia, yet by reason it blew much wind we entred not, but directed our course out of the Bay, for the Iland of Mocha, vnto the which wee came the next day, * Adams chiefe Pilot of a fleete of five sayles.

Cape de Lopo Gonſalues.

The Ile of Nobon taken.

April. 6. 1599.

They wintered in the Straights of Magellan.

Many of their men dyed for want of food. They stay in fortie fixe degrees, and refresh themselves. The mouth of Baldinia. The Ile of Mocha.

day, finding none of our Fleet. So not finding them, wee directed our course for the Island of Sancta Maria; and the next day we came by the Cape, which is a league and an halfe from the Island, and seeing many people tossed about the Cape, and finding good ground, anchored in fiftene fathom in a faire sandie Bay.

A faire sandie Bay.

We went with our boats hard by the water side, to parlee with the people of the land, but they would not suffer vs to come a land, shooting great store of Arrowes at our men. Neuerthelesse, hauing no victualls in our Ship, and hoping to find refreshing, wee forcibly landed some seuen and twentie or thirtie of our men, and droue the wild people from the water side, hauing most of our men hurt with their Arrowes. They being on land, we made signes of friendship, and in the end came to parlee with signes and tokens of friendship, which the people vnderstood. So, wee made signes, that our desire was to haue victualls for Iron, Siluer and Cloth, which we shewed them. Wherefore they gaue our folke Wine, with Batatas to eate, and other fruits, and bid our men by signes and tokens to goe aboard, and the next day to come againe, and then they would bring vs victualls: so, being late our men came aboard, the most part of them being hurt more or lesse, and yet we were very glad that we had come to a parlee with them, hoping that we shoud get refreshing.

The ninth of November, 1599.

The next day, being the ninth of November, 1599. our Captaine, with all our Officers prepared to goe a land, hauing taken counsell to goe to the water side, but not to land more then two or three men: for there were people in abundance, and were also vknowne; our men therefore were willed not to trust them. This counsell being concluded, the Captain himselfe went in one of our Boats, with all the force that we had: and being by the shore side, the people of the countie made signes that they should come a land; but that did not like our Captaine well. In the end the people comming not neere vnto our Boats, our Captaine, with the rest resolved to land, against that which was concluded in our Ship, before the going on land. At length three and twentie men landed with Muskets, and marched vp towards foure or five houses, and when they were about a Musket-shot from the Boates, more then a thousand Indians who lay intrenched, immediately fell vpon our men with such weapons as they had, and killed them all to our knowledge. So our Boats waited long to see if any of them would come againe; but seeing no hope to recouer them, our Boates returned with this sorrowfull newes, that all our men that landed were slaine, which was a lamentable thing to heare: for we had scarce so many men left as could winde vp our Anchor. The next day wee waited, and went ouer to the Island Sancta Maria, where we found our Admiral, who had arriued there foure daies before vs, and departed to the Ile from Mucha the day before we came from thence, hauing the Generall, Master, and all his Officers wounded on land: and God had so plagued vs, that all our Officers were slaine, so that the one of vs bemoaned the other. Neuerthelesse being glad that we were come together, my good friend Timothy Shotten was Pilot in that Ship. Being at the Island of Sancta Maria, which lieth in the Latitude of thirtie seuen degrees, twelue minutes by South the Line on the Coast of Chili, wee tooke counsell to take all things out of one Ship, and to burne the other: but the new Captaines could not agree, which of the Ships they should burne, and so could not conclude it. Hauing much cloth in our Ships, it was agreed that wee should leaue the Coast of Pern, and direct our course for Iapan, vnderstanding that cloth was good marchandise there: and also vpon that Coast of Pern, the Kings Ships hauing knowledge of our being there, sought for vs, vnderstanding that wee were weake by reason of the losse of our men, which was all too true: for one of our Fleet, as wee vnderstood afterward, was forced to yeeld themselves into the enemies hand in Saint Iago. For which reason, hauing refreshed our selues in the Island Sancta Maria, more by policie then by force, we departed the twentie seuen of November, from the Road, or Island of Sancta Maria, with our two Ships, and for the rest of our Fleet we heard no newes of them. So we tooke our course directly for Iapan, and passed the Line Equinoctiall together, vntill we came in twentie eight degrees to the Northward of the Line: in which Latitude, the twentie second & twentie third of February 1600. we had a wonderfull storme of wind, as euer I was in, with much raine, in which storme wee lost sight of our greatest ship, whereof we were very sorry being left alone; yet wee hoped in Iapan to find one another. Then according to wind and weather, we followed our former intention for Iapan, and in the height of thirtie degrees, sought the North Cape of the forenamed Island, but found it not, by reason that it lieth false in all Chartes, and Globes, and Maps: for the Cape lyeth in thirtie five degrees  $\frac{1}{2}$ . which is a great difference. In the end wee came in thirtie two degrees  $\frac{1}{2}$ . and then had sight of the Land, being the nineteenth of Aprill, so that betweene the Cape of Sancta Maria and Iapan, we were foure moneths, and twentie two dayes: at which time there were no more then fixe besides my selfe, that could stand vpon their feet. Now being in safetie, we let our Anchor fall about a league from a place, called Bungo. At which time many Boats came vnto vs, and we let them come aboard, being not able to resist them: yet the people did vs no harme, we not vnderstanding each other, but by signes and tokens. After two or three dayes space, a Iesuite came vnto vs from a place called Langasacke, to which place the Carake of Macao is yeerely wont to come, which with other Iaponers, that were Christians, were our Interpreters; which was ill for vs, they being our mortal enemies. Neuerthelesse the King of Bungo, the Twentie three men slaine.

The Isle of Sancta Maria.

Timothy Shotten of London, Pilot of the Admirall.

Cloth good merchandise in Iapan.

One of their Fleet yeilded to the Spaniard, at Saint Iago in thirtie three degrees.

See before in the Voyage of Oliver Noe.

They take their course from Iapan, from the Road of the Isle of Sancta Maria, November 27.

The North part of Iapan, lieth in 35. degrees,

$\frac{1}{2}$ .

They were foure months,

& twentie two dayes between the Isle of Sancta Maria, and Iapan.

Bungo.

30

40

50

60

the place where we arrived, did vs great friendship. For he gave vs an house on shore for our sick men, having all refreshing that was needfull. We had when we came to anchor in Bungo foure and twentie men, sicke and whole, of which number the next day three dyed, the rest for the most part recovered, saving three which lay long time sicke, and in the end also died. The Emperour hearing of vs, sent presently five Gallies or Frigots vnto vs, to bring mee to the Court, where his Maiestie was, which was distant from Bungo, about eightie English leagues. Now, when I came before him, he demanded of me, of what Countrey we were; so I answered him in all points: for there was nothing that he demanded not, both concerning warre, and peace betweene Countrey and Countrey; the particulars whereof were too long to write. After this 10 conference, I was commanded to prison being well vsed, with one of our Mariners, that came with me to serue me.

Sixe of them men died.

This was at the citie of Osaka, which is eighty leagues from Bungo.

He was called the second time.

Some two dayes after, the Emperour called me againe, demanding the reason of our comming so farre: I answered, We were a People that sought all friendship with all Nations. and to haue trade of Merchandize in all Countries, bringing such Merchandizes as our Countrey had, and buying such Merchandizes in strange Countreys, as our Countrey desired; through which our Countreys on both side were enriched. He asked much concerning the warres betweene the Spaniards and Portugals, and vs, and the reasons: the particulars of all which I gave him to vnderstand, who seemed to be very glad to heare it. After this, I was commanded to prison againe, but my lodging was bettered in an other place. So, I continued nine and thirty dayes in prison, hearing no 20 more newes, neither of our ship, nor Captaine, whether he were recovered of his sicknesse, nor of the rest of the company: in which time, I looked euery day to be Crossed, as the custome of Iustice is in Iapan, as hanging is in our Land. Now in this long time of imprisonment, the Iesuites and the Portugals gave many evidences to the Emperour against vs, alleading that wee were theues and robbers of all Nations, and if we were suffered to liue, it should be against the profit of his Maiestie, and the Land: for then no Nation could come there without robbing: but if Iustice were executed on vs, it would terrifie the rest of our Nation from comming there any more. And to this intent they sued to his Maiestie daily to cut vs off, making all the Friends they could to this purpose. But God was mercifull vnto vs, and would not suffer them to haue their wills of

Thus farre goeth his first letter to his wife. Crucifying the v. uall punishment of Malefactors in Iapan. The Iesuites & Portugals accusations.

The Emperours answer.

30 vs. At length, the Emperour gave them this answer, That as yet wee had done no hurt or damage to him, nor to any of his Land; and therefore that it was against reason and Iustice to put vs to death: and if our Countreys and theirs had warres one with the other, that was no cause that he should put vs to death. The Emperour answering them in this manner, they were quite out of heart, that their cruell pretence failed: for the which, God be praised for euer and euer. Now in this time that I was in prison, the ship was commanded to bee brought so neere to the Citie where the Emperour was, as she might, the which was done. So the one and fortieth day of my imprisonment, the Emperour called me before him againe, demanding of mee many questions more, which were too long to write. In conclusion, he asked me whether I were desirous to goe to the ship to see my Countrey-men: I answered, that I would very gladly do it: so he bade me goe. Then I departed, and was freed from imprisonment. And this was the first newes that I 40 had, that the ship and company were come to the Citie. Wherefore, with a reioycing heart I tooke a Boat, and went to our ship, where I found the Captaine and the rest, recovered of their sicknesse. But at our meeting aboard, we saluted one another with mourning and sheadding of teares: for they were informed that I was executed, and long since dead. Thus, God be praised, all we that were left aliue, came together againe. All things were taken out of the ship, together with all my instruments, &c. and I had nothing left me, but my clothes on my backe: likewise whatsoever the rest of the company had, was also taken away, vnkowne to the Emperour: which when he vnderstood, he gave order that they should be restored to vs againe. But being so disperfed abroad, they could not be had: yet fiftie thousand Rials in ready money, were commanded to be given vs, the Emperour himselfe seeing the deliuey thereof to the hands of one that
